Naturally, Cryo-R completely ignores this, instead stating that Joris-O was "trying to blow himself up", but that he "rescued" him, and then "brought him back from the brink of death"...

He enters the lift. He seems to be looking for someone, but, besides the team, there's nobody here.

As for the lift itself, it seems undamaged.

Lucas-R appears, and glares at Cryo-R before entering the lift.

Southern Passageway

Mango-R initially mistakes the hissing for TeaSir before he realises what it is. He shoots twice, and runs without even looking. He seems to want to avoid Speed-Y for some reason. He also wants to conserve clones.

Does this mean he's abandoning the mission? Does he simply not care any more? Maybe the things now clawing at him will help him decide.

Chemical Showers

Mega-R tries to leave the showers but finds that his booth is still running. It's currently in the rinse cycle.

Speed-Y takes another booth and, taking care to observe all proper procedures, starts the booth's cycle.

written by Megagun on Apr 27, 2011 17:37

I get out of the chemical shower (if done) and look around to see where I can get my stuff from.

written by Speeder on Apr 27, 2011 17:48

I start to look... unhappy...

Not unhappy enough to get instant termination, but unhappy enough...

written by Lightning4 on Apr 27, 2011 20:47

"Hmph."

I get on the lift and check whether everyone is on it.

"Someone get Malkom on here too, unless he'd rather wait for that docbot. In which case it's on him."

I finally take that medkit and see if there's anything I can give to a clone in Joris' condition. Assuming it's still Joris, of course.

"Let's see what we have here... although I'm kind of worried if what you say is true. I wonder what happens when two clones of the same person exist simultaneously. And I wonder what Friend Computer would say..."

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 27, 2011 20:51

"Oh, why are they still here?!" I yell.

I try to search for a door or some sort of room away from the frowning things, anything to get out of this endless passageway.

The lift is going to leave soon. I guess we're both- oh wait. You're stuck down here.

written by Malkom on Apr 28, 2011 00:06

"GET HERE ALREADY, YOU STUPID DOCBOT! THIS IS URGENT!"

written by 4616599 on Apr 28, 2011 00:09

I pause for a while, almost as if thoughts are running through my mind. Or minds.

"Strange. Never did see something like this. Mmph. I blame Cryo."

"Ah, Speed-Y, congratulations on saving the sector!"

I head for the showers, grabbing any needed masks.

"I wonder-" I suddenly pause for a while. "I'm getting the most peculiar sensation. It's almost as if..."

I shake my head and go on written by Jam on Apr 28, 2011 00:13

I look at the remains of the frownthing...

"Ah! What was that thing?! Thanks for saving me..."

I look back at Joris-O.

"Yep, it's strange... This clone here is Joris-O-DNK-1, but I'm also sensing Joris-O-DNK-2, I think at the same place Speed-Y is recloning at..."

I look around a bit, and make sure everyclone is here...

"Okay, Speed-Y is recloning, Joris-O is here, L4-O is here, Lucas-R is here, Cryo-R is here, John-R is... Where is John-R?"

I look for John-R...

"And Mango-R, where is he? Wait... Oh no! I think Mango-R was following Speed-Y! He must have gotten lost! We've got to find him!"

I think a bit, then suddenly make my decision...

"I'm going to go get him, I'm probably the only clone here who will be able to track him, since I can sense minds... Anyclone want to come with me?"

written by Malkom on Apr 28, 2011 00:33

"I'd like to, but... well..." I look regretfully at my legs. "I wish the docbot would hurry up already!"

written by Cryoburner on Apr 28, 2011 00:50

"Wasn't there one other in the lift on the way down? The quiet one, who just stood there silently the entire time. I don't think he ever left the lift. Maybe he got off at some floor when the lift was away? We should probably find him too. He might be an expert at being silent, or something. That could probably be useful."

I gesture in the direction of the Director.

"Hey... Wasn't he on the lift with him? Maybe he knows where he wandered off to."

written by Gligar on Apr 28, 2011 01:52

Chemical Showers

Mega-R's shower finishes its cycle and opens. Mega-R then heads back to the main station.

Speed-Y's shower continues its cycle. He begins to look unhappy.

Joris-O (the freshly cloned one) enters the showers and starts speaking to Speed-Y. He has this strange feeling... but he tries to put it aside, entering a shower himself. Putting on the mask, he hits the button, closing the door.

Cloning station (somewhere)

Mega-R looks for his equipment, but it doesn't seem to have been collected.

He does spot a rack of jumpsuits, and a bot which seems to be holding ME Cards, though.

A lift

L4-O checks where everyone is. John-R is still out there, as is Malkom-R. And Mango-R... wherever he got to.

He asks for someone to go and get Malkom-R (unless he'd rather wait for that docbot).

He then takes Jam-O's medkit and looks through it. There are a few bandages, dressings, and such in there, as well as the standard pills. As he looks at them, L4-O wonders what our mutual friend would say about there being multiple Joris-Os around... if that's even true.

Joris-O (the semikindamaybeundead one) hasn't seen anything like this. He feels kind of strange as he enters the lift, trying his best not to shamble into anything. It's kind of difficult to think.

Jam-O is looking at the remains of the frownthing. Its body is a GREEN colour and kind of crispy looking. Instead of blood, it's "bleeding" a kind of black powder from its wounds. It still frowns, even in death.

As Jam-O watches, the body starts to disintegrate.

Looking at this Joris-O, he explains what he means about there being more than one of them: this one is the Prime, which was terminated, causing a Joris-O-DNK-2 to decant... somewhere... in the same place as Speed-Y...

He looks around. Everyone's here, except... Malkom-R, John-R, and Mango-R.

Now where did John-R go?

And Mango-R? He ran off following Speed-Y, didn't he! He must be found! Jam-O volunteers to go and get him, and asks if anyone wants to join him.

Cryo-R wonders if there was another clone with them as they came down? He stayed in the lift, didn't he? Where did he go? Does the ex-Director know?"

"That idle clone? Internal Security have him.. something about having information beyond his clearance," is the reply.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

Malkom-R loudly demands that the docbot gets here soon. When Jam-O makes his request, he states his legs... otherwise, he's join him.

John-R appears from the darkness. "Here, I'll carry you." So that's where he went.

Southern Passageway

Mango-R starts feeling for a door or something... anything to get away from his assailants...

A side passage! That'll do...

Side passage

And look at that! Someone must have dropped a PDC here. It's a very old one, though. But it still seems to have power. And importantly, a light-up screen.

Then he seems to hear something...

written by Speeder on Apr 28, 2011 01:56

As I hear Joris saying that I saved the sector, I make a puzzled face.

In fact, I make an inquisitive face toward him.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 28, 2011 03:04

I give the ^{not?}Joris a visomorpain pill, if there are any in the medkit. That should help...

I hear Jam mention something about wanting to go after Mango. A worried look crosses my face.

"Are you sure? The passages are extremely dangerous. If the tunnels are full of even more of those things, we'll have trouble fighting them off, let alone getting back..."

"To be honest, I'm surprised you even detect him. I would've thought he'd be dead already. He took off after Massacrobot for some reason. There's no way he would've caught up in time. And if he had, he'd have died..."

I shrug.

"But if you feel we need to do this, I've got the only weapon that can handle groups of those things..."

I check my pack for any more of those nifty crowd control shells.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 28, 2011 10:09

I pick up the PDC, and quickly check the amount of power left, and the ownership information. I then hold it with my hand on the broken side. I switch back to my truncheon, and wander further down the side passage. The sound worries me.

This isn't a joke. And if it wasn't you, whoever it may be, STAY AWAY FROM ME!

I start walking quicker.

written by Jam on Apr 28, 2011 12:32

I smile at L4-O...

"Mango-R's a member of the team, isn't he? Are we just going to leave him to wander the tunnels until he dies?"

I get a worried expression...

"But... Something's wrong with Mango-R... It's like there's two personalities inside of one mind... Maybe a mutant somehow transferred itself to his mind? And I get the feeling that whatever it is, it doesn't want us to follow Mango-R..."

I look at the Director...

"Oh, you woke up, commie vatslime? Really, you picked the wrong clone to try to lie to...Your mind is completely open to me, it was obvious you were hiding something... And of course, getting the disarm code from your memories was simple enough... '1 D 10 T'? What a short code! You're lucky the clone that was with the Tsar was just out of my range... Anyway, I'll let IntSec deal with you... I'm sure you'll be having a lot of pleasant chats with them... Heh heh heh..."

Then I turn, and walk towards Malkom-R and John-R... I speak to Malkom-R...

"Hmm... Your legs don't look too good... You'd better go with the others, to the lift... What did L4-O say your name was again? Malkom-R? Well, welcome to the team!"

I turn to John-R.

But, John-R, you seem to be doing okay... How about you come with me? We can talk about all kinds of interesting registered-mutant-related things along the way! Here, let's carry Malkom-R to the lift first..."

I direct John-R to grab Malkom-R's shoulders, then I try to lift Malkom-R by the hips (to avoid damaging his legs any more than they already are). I start trying to carry him towards the lift...

written by Gligar on Apr 28, 2011 16:47

Cloning station (somewhere)

Speed-Y looks puzzled, then questioning, at Joris-O. He clearly doesn't remember the last few minutecycles.

The shower finishes its cycle and lets him out.

A lift

L4-O gives their Joris-O a visomorpain pill.

He then addresses Jam-O. Going after Mango-R would be dangerous. It would be difficult to find him in these passageways, and even if they did, there are those... things... to deal with.

Also, he is surprised Jam-O was able to detect Mango-R in the first place: he thought he'd have died by now.

Oh well. L4-O has Turbo, the only appropriate weapon. And he has another four of those crowd-control shells intact, with two damaged crowd-control shells if he needs them.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

Jam-O points out that Mango-R is part of the team. Are they just going to leave him here?

There is something else, though. Mango-R seems to have two personalities... it's like some mutant hitched a ride. And whoever it is, it doesn't want to be followed.

He notices that the ex-Director woke up. He mocks the communist's choice of bomb code. I D 10 T... sheesh. But enough of that. IntSec would love to speak to him.

He suggests that Malkom-R go with the others in the lift. Of course, to do that, he'd need to be carried. John-R is a different matter, and they now have something in common. "Sure," he says. "It could be interesting."

But first, there's Malkom-R to worry about. The two lift him and carry him up the ramp.

Side Passage

Mango-R picks up the PDC. It looks like an old Series 1100, which lacks the camera, apps, and general AlphaNet access common to the Series 1300. In fact, it's completely incapable of displaying graphics of any sort. But it can still make calls and send and receive text messages.

On the downside, the battery's down to one bar, and it doesn't have a signal. It's supposedly assigned to a Gareth-R-UTR-6, whoever that is.

He keeps walking.

written by Speeder on Apr 28, 2011 16:57

As I get out, make sure I am not wet, and then look for where the jumpsuits are, I approach Joris location.

"How you know I saved the sector? Is this cloning station on the sector that exploded?"

Then I notice in fact, only Joris, and Mega are here.

"Indeed, here the only ones are me, you and Mega, this mean that probably the others do not got killed, it means I DID saved the sector!!!"

Now I look so happy that it go beyond the happyness counter of Friend Computer.

written by Malkom on Apr 28, 2011 17:18

I refuse to be carried anywhere. "I'll just wait here for the docbot."

written by Jam on Apr 28, 2011 18:08

I continue carrying Malkom-R to the lift...

"Nonsense! If you stay here, those things will kill you... And you'll get treated faster if you come with us, we can meet the docbot halfway..."

I pause.

"Do you really want to stay here?"

Then, I frown...

"Wait... I'm feeling some sort of strange tiredness... Hmm... I have been using my power quite a lot recently... Maybe I've run out of energy? John-R, would you happen to know what it means?"

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 28, 2011 20:16

Moving further along, pointing the PDC towards the walls, looking for any lifts, ranges, or switchboards.

Looks like they're gone, for now at least. They were probably new to this, since they were consuming far more energy than what your average mutant would.

Whatever you say...

written by Megagun on Apr 28, 2011 20:29

I move up to the bot with the ME cards.

"Hi. Do you happen to have my ME card? I somehow forgot my name, perhaps due to this being my first ever cloning, as far as I can remember. I suppose I could wait until I recall my name, but I somehow remember that I have some vitally important mission to succeed... Can you show me all the ME cards that you have? I'm sure I'll remember my name once you show them to me!"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 28, 2011 20:50

I attempt to assist with Malkom. The more clones assisting, the more stability for broken legs. Right?

Either way, I try to help.

written by Malkom on Apr 28, 2011 21:04

"You're carrying me to the lift? Sorry, for a moment there I thought you were going to try to carry me with someone who was looking for Mango-R..." I allow myself to be carried into the lift.

written by Gligar on Apr 29, 2011 00:58

Chemical Showers

Speed-Y gets out of the shower. The fans seem to have worked to an acceptable standard, so he goes looking for the jumpsuits. They're in a rack between some cloning tanks.

Behind him, Joris-O's shower opens, having finished its cycle. He turns back and speaks. How does Joris-O know? Are they even in the same sector any more?

But then again, there are only the three of them here. Maybe the others are still alive. That means he did save the sector! He gets happy. No, HAPPY.

Cloning station (somewhere)

Mega-R approaches the bot. Does it perhaps have his ME card? There's one small problem... he can't remember his name...

"That is not a problem, citizen," the bot says. It shows Mega-R the ME cards it's carrying: those of Speed-Y-DOF-2, Joris-O-DNK-2, and Mega-R-GUN-2.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

Malkom-R tries to get Jam-O and John-R to put him down. He'd rather wait for the docbot. Jam-O won't hear it, though, and the three continue towards the lift. Those things are dangerous, after all, and it would be quicker if they went to meet the docbot half-way. Unless Malkom-R really wants to wait here...

[470]

Jam-O pauses for a moment. He's feeling sort of tired... does that mean he's run out of freaky mutant energy? He asks John-R. "Something does generally happen if you run out of energy, sir... it can be tiredness, headaches, dizziness... there's a long list of things. If you're sure, I would suggest getting some rest."

L4-O decides to lend a hand with Malkom-R. Malkom-R relents and allows them to move him to the lift.

A lift

There we go.

Side Passage

Now armed with a light source, Mango-R can look for things... like lifts, or ranges, or switches.

Nope. All he finds is more passage, and a bunch of doors that don't look like lifts.

written by Speeder on Apr 29, 2011 01:38

I start to whistling some of the most upbeat and happy jingles, maybe even some old and obscure one if needed, and go see if there are any YELLOW jumpsuit available.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 29, 2011 05:04

"Right then. Looks like everyone is on."

I look to make sure both Malkom and John are secure on the lift.

"Lift, where is the nearest medical bay that a docbot will be dispatched from? We'll probably be intercepting it. Or we might be going straight to the medical bay. Wherever it is, take us to that level."

I shake my head.

"Well, sorry Mango, looks like we'll have to find another way of searching for you."

"Maybe he'll find a way of contacting us. Or even find a way back to safety. Or maybe he'll survive until we can return with more firepower and a fully rested Jam-O..."

I pause for a moment.

"Also, lift? Where's the nearest cloning station? I'm sure the rest of our team might be there..."

written by Malkom on Apr 29, 2011 06:06

Now that I'm safely in the lift and have survived the Tsar relatively intact, I heave a sigh of relief and try to get as comfortable as possible.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 29, 2011 08:18

I examine quickly at the doors, noting the label if there is one. Else I pick a random door, and look inside.

written by Megagun on Apr 29, 2011 16:24

"Hm. I can't remember ever hearing of Speed-Y-DOF. Mega-R-GUN is such an idiotic name, I would have remembered if it were mine. That must mean I'm Joris-O! Thanks!"

I take the Joris-O ME card and then proceed to get my Orange jumpsuit.

"You know, I can't remember ever having worn an Orange jumpsuit. Whoa, that must mean that I have been promoted to Orange clearance shortly before my unfortunate death! Awesome!"

I look around to see if I can figure out where I could get my stuff from.

written by Gligar on Apr 29, 2011 17:05

Cloning station (somewhere)

Whistling some jingles, Speed-Y goes over to the jumpsuit racks, and picks out a nice YELLOW one.

Nearby, Mega-R looks through the ME cards. He claims to have never heard of Speed-Y, and that Mega-R is an idiotic name. Therefore, he "must" be Joris-O.

"Citizen," the bot replies, as Mega-R takes Joris-O's ME card, "are you suggesting that The Computer's naming algorithm is less than perfect? I suggest you go to a confession booth as soon as you are done here."

Mega-R ignores the bot, and goes over to get a jumpsuit, almost colliding with Speed-Y in his "euphoria" at being "promoted".

The real Joris-O seems to stay out of the way.

A lift

With Malkom-R safely in the lift, L4-O checks to see if everyone is in. They are, it seems. Unless Jam-O and John-R still want to go and look for Mango-R?

But it looks like they won't have a chance. L4-O asks the lift to take them to the nearest medical bay, one from where a docbot might be dispatched.

The lift replies, "That would be E Sublevel, citizen, by the reservoir monitoring station." The lift closes its doors and begins the journey upward. It looks like Mango-R will have to wait, at least until Jam-O can rest, and they can replenish their firepower.

Of course, he might find his own way back, which would solve things quite nicely.

Another thing enters L4-O's mind. Where's the nearest cloning station? The lift tells him that it's on C Sublevel, by the food vats.

Malkom-R emits a big sigh of relief. He tries to get comfortable.

Side Passage

Mango-R looks at the doors. Disappointingly, they're unlabeled, so he just picks one, and tries it.

It turns out to be unlocked, and opens into what looks like an abandoned briefing room.

written by Megagun on Apr 29, 2011 17:16

I look for my equipment, and if I can find it, I'll take it.

written by Speeder on Apr 29, 2011 17:52

I approach the bot, and asks what he is holding.

Also I see what equipment is available around...

I wear the jumpsuit, while waiting for replies and looking around, and I remain whistling my jingles (of course, not when speaking)

written by Jam on Apr 29, 2011 21:54

I set Malkom-R down onto the lift floor, then lean against the railing or wall of the lift and try to rest a bit...

Wait. I forgot something...

"Come here Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R... I'm going to have to handcuff you... Or would you rather I just terminate you now?"

I take out another pair of handcuffs, and put them on the Director... Or, I try to... Wait a secondcycle...

"Vatcrap! I did it again!"

How did I manage to cuff myself to the Director again?

"Why does that keep happening?! Grr... I'm gonna get it right this time..."

I try again to cuff the Director's hands behind his back...

"There! Wait... Hang on... Lucas-R, how did you... Oh no..."

I facepalm, and try again...

"There! Wait, that's not the Director... How did I get a completely different clone?"

After that, I sink to the edge of Mandatory Happiness limits, and just give up...

"Agh! It's too complicated! I just can't figure it out!"

written by Malkom on Apr 29, 2011 22:03

"Just terminate him, I don't think it's worth the trouble."

I try to relax as the lift speeds upwards. I wonder what the next mission will be, and I hope it doesn't involve mutants.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 29, 2011 22:03

I watch Jam's struggle with the Director.

"...and nearest Intsec station?" I append to my previous questions to the lift.

"Or wait. He still has the locator tag, doesn't he? We could just have Intsec track and intercept us while we're busy in the medical bay. That could work too... unless the station is close by."

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 29, 2011 23:19

I get an odd sense that I've done this before. Back with my first clone, when I wandered off, and was unprepared.

I shake my head. This isn't the time to think back then.

I go through all the other doors, taking anything that may seem useful.

written by Gligar on Apr 30, 2011 01:20

Cloning station (somewhere)

Mega-R looks for "his" equipment, but it looks like it hasn't been collected. He does find some laser pistols, though.

Speed-Y asks the bot what it's carrying. "I am carrying ME cards, citizen." It shows Speed-Y, who notices both his and Mega-R's cards in the bot's manipulators.

He looks around while getting comfortable in his jumpsuit, noticing the laser pistols that Mega-R found.

A lift

Jam-O puts Malkom-R down so that he can rest for a moment.

Then he remembers something.

He tells the ex-Director to step forward, and proceeds to handcuff him...

...wait, he's done it again. It's clear that he needs more practice with handcuffs, so that he can get to the point where he's not handcuffing himself to the accused...

He tries it again. There, that's... no, that was Lucas-R. Now the three of them are linked.

Okay, one more time... there!

Er... wait, no, that was L4-O...

Sigh.⁴¹¹

Malkom-R suggests to just terminate the ex-Director, since it's just too much trouble.

L4-O continues asking the lift. This time, he wants to know where the nearest Internal Security station is. "That would be I sublevel, near the reactor shielding," the lift answers.

It continues to ascend.

Side passage

Mango-R keeps trying doors. Two are locked. Two more lead to empty rooms. The last leads to an old dormitory. An open locker contains part of a first-aid kit.

Which is probably a good thing, since Mango-R decides to collapse as soon as he enters the place.

written by Speeder on Apr 30, 2011 01:26

I take my own card, and pocket it.

Then I turn to Mega-R.

"Mega-R, why you are not with your ME card? Come here fetch it before touching those pistols."

I see what color of barrels are available.

⁴¹¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: That's still funny, Jam. Have a perversity point) written by Jam on Apr 30, 2011 01:51⁴¹²

I facepalm, or try to... It might be difficult with both my arms cuffed to clones... 😞

"Ugh! Sorry L4-O! Sorry Lucas-R! Those handcuffs are just too confusing..."

I look up after the lift speaks...

"Oh, reactor shielding? Then let's go to I Sublevel! Maybe the radiation will give me more energy, since that's what gave me my mutation in the first place... And we can drop off the Director at the same time... And maybe I can get this locator tag off..."⁴¹³ written by Mingamango181 on Apr 30, 2011 02:22

Ugh.

I guess you have to learn things the difficult, and far more painful way. It's a wonder how you even got RED clearance to begin with...

I try to feel a bit around for the PDC, which by no doubt must have fallen nearby. I try to bring up the call feature.

I select the first contact that's in the list, or else press some random numbers and call it.

"Is... anyone... there?"

written by 4616599 on Apr 30, 2011 02:49

Joris-O-1 and 2 snap out of their dazes again.

Ignoring the handcuffing action for now, I sink to the floor, feeling weak, and pop in the Visomorpain. I instantly drop right on the floor, noting that it tastes salty. I try to say something. My mind seems muc thicker than usual.

"Ugh! Doorknobs is pleasing think to think about! Idea bots! Idea bots!"

"Oh, Speed-Y...last thing I remember was that you managed to detonate the nuke in the range on time. Then I sorta remember a much smaller explosion, and Cryo-R poking people...after that, I have this strange feeling something happened."

I look at the bot's ME cards.

"Mega-R-GUN? I don't recall that being my name...either I'm really confused, or do you have any more?"

written by Cryoburner on Apr 30, 2011 03:07

Noticing that everyone seems to be getting handcuffed, and not seeing any keys around, I decide it might be best to back into a corner of the lift for a little while with my arms behind me.

⁴¹² JAM: (ooc: Yay, a Perversity Point! Thanks! 😊)

Also, is Lucas-R handcuffed to me, or the Director? And how does L4-O fit into all this? Does he have his hands cuffed behind his back, or is he cuffed to me too?)

⁴¹³ JAM: (ooc: The stats say I'm still wearing the radiation suit...)

"So, are we headed to find a docbot, a cloning station, internal security or an idea bot now? Maybe if we split up, we could cover more ground!"

I look at the handcuffed clones...

"Well, not so much you guys... Maybe the docbot could help split you up though!"⁴¹⁴

written by Lightning4 on Apr 30, 2011 04:29

I sigh too.

"Well, if we can't get these off, I have my "handcuff key", if you know what I mean."

"Unfortunately, a laser pistol in a small, crowded lift is... probably not the wisest idea..."

I check to see if both of my hands are handcuffed, or just one. If it's both, then I continue to say.

'Well, I could do it if I actually had any free hands.."

written by Malkom on Apr 30, 2011 05:22

I look at the handcuffs. If they have some kind of code lock, I say, "Tell me the code, and then get the cuffs near me so I can enter it and uncuff everyone." If they don't have a code lock I ask for a key so I can uncuff everyone. Once I get said code or key I proceed to have everyone get their cuffs close to me (I can't really stand up because of my broken legs) and unlock the cuffs.

written by Megagun on Apr 30, 2011 12:55

I grab a laser pistol plus matching Orange barrel, whilst ignoring Mega-R and Speed-Y, then head out to find a map and figure out where I am.

written by Gligar on Apr 30, 2011 16:54

Cloning station (somewhere)

Speed-Y takes his ME card, and turns to Mega-R. He asks why Mega-R doesn't yet have his ME card, and asks him to rectify it before touching the laser pistols. Mega-R ignores him.

He goes over to look at the lasers himself. Hew notices that there are RED, ORANGE, and YELLOW barrels available. Mega-R continues to ignore him.

Joris-O tells Sped-Y that he got to the range in time for the nuke to detonate. After that, there was a convention explosion, then... something.

He turns to the bot, which now only has the one ME card left: Mega-R's. He's confused. That isn't his name, is it? Or does the bot have more cards?

"I was given only three cards, citizen, one for all three of you. What is your name, citizen?"

Mega-R takes a laser pistol and slips out, not bothering to fill out any of the release forms.

⁴¹⁴ CRYOBURNER: (Edit:Fixed typo)

A lift

Jam-O tries to facepalm. Difficult when one hand is cuffed to the ex-Director, and the other is cuffed to Lucas-R. He apologises about being confused over the handcuffs.

He then realises what the lift just said, and suggests they go to I Sublevel. That way, they could solve multiple problems, involving mutant energy, the ex-Director, and their locator tags.

Joris-O snaps out of whatever it is. He sinks to the floor, and eats his pill. He's feeling... weird. He can't speak properly, His brain isn't working properly...

That's probably to be expected.

He mumbles something about doorknobs and idea bots. This causes the jackobot to seemingly glare at Joris-O. "I wonder if ten thousand volts would do anything to you in your condition..."

Cryo-R tries to get away from the handcuffing. He wants to know if they're going after a docbot, a cloning station, IntSec or an idea bot (crackle, crackle). He suggests that they split up.

L4-O sighs. If needed, they have his "handcuff key", but using that in a lift would be... fun, to say the least.

He checks his hands. They're handcuffed together, in front of him. So much for that idea.

Malkom-R looks at the handcuffs. They're just ordinary handcuffs, ones that need a key to unlock.

Abandoned Dormitory

Mango-R retrieves the PDC, and tries to make a call.

An automated response says, "Citizen Gareth-R-UTR-6 is not authorised to make voice calls. You will be connected to Internal Security momentarily."

After a brief recorded message reminding Mango-R to report suspicious activity, a male voice says, "Office of PDC Control. You aren't authorised to make a call. Why are you attempting to do so?"

Corridor (C Sublevel)

Mega-R exits, and looks for a map. He doesn't find one, but he does find some signs. They tell him that he's on C Sublevel, and that the main food vat hall is at the far end of the corridor. The lifts are also there. He also notices that the corridor is INFRARED.

written by Megagun on Apr 30, 2011 18:05

I move towards the food vat hall. Surely there's someone there who can show me directions towards the nearest Logistics office!

written by Speeder on Apr 30, 2011 18:39

I take a pistol, and whatever amount of YELLOW barrels I am allowed to take (unless that would result in too much stuff to store...)

I proceed to the forms, but while I do that, I speak.

"Friend Computer, we have a issue with a clone behaving bizarrely, can you come here so I can explain the situation?"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 30, 2011 18:53

"Right then," I sigh.

"Well, we can probably get the handcuff situation sorted out at the intsec station too. I guess we'll go there first."

I speak up.

"Change of plans. Can you please take us to I Sublevel? Thanks..."

I make a sad attempt at struggling out of my handcuffs.

written by Jam on Apr 30, 2011 19:34

I look at Malkom-R...

"Erm... We don't have any keys... Maybe IntSec might have some?"

Then I look at Cryo-R...

"Hmm... That's actually not a bad idea... Okay, how about we split up! I'll take the Director and Lucas-R to IntSec, and L4-O can take Cryo-R, Malkom-R, John-R and Joris-O to a Docbot... Unless Cryo-R or John-R wants to come with me? How's that sound, L4-O?"

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 30, 2011 23:10

"I'm really... really lost. About Gareth-R, there's enough reason to suppose that he's missing. I'm just someone... who just picked up his PDC right now.

Now about being lost, I don't expect you to send anyone down to where I am. I would appreciate... however, to tell Team... Epsilon was it? That 'he' would prefer not to see you again."

While keeping the call open, I try to get at the first-aid kit.

This must really be old, especially if it's called a first-aid kit.

Well, it might do me some good. Like stopping the bleeding.

written by Cryoburner on May 01, 2011 00:56

I actually know right where to find a docbot! I need to meet him regarding an unrelated matter anyway, which would make that plan perfect and efficient in every way!

Isn't L4-O handcuffed though? Perhaps he might want to head to Internal Security with you guys to get that taken care of, unless he thinks the docbot can handle his handcuff removal. He does have a saw, after all. Otherwise, I'm sure I can lead everyone to the docbot on my own!

written by Gligar on May 01, 2011 01:38

Food Vat Hall (Deep Subsector)

Mega-R (if it is Mega-R -- it could be Leeroy-O) enters. He finds INFRAREDS at work, stirring the food vats, monitoring dials and gauges. Supervising them, RED technicians and ORANGE supervisors, wearing hazard suits. Vatslime is corrosive, after all.

Abandoned Dormitory

Mango-R says that he's lost. He doesn't expect anyone to come after him. As for Team Epsilon, tell them that 'he' doesn't want to see them.

He then heads for, and manages to reach, to the first-aid kit. There are some bandages and dressings left.

The official on the other side of the PDC replies, "Citizen, voice analysis shows that you are not Gareth-R, and that you are injured. Wait there, we will send a docbot to you.

"Now... what is this about... 'Team Epsilon'? Who are they? What is your connection with them? And why do you not expect to see anyone come after you? What is your location?"

Cloning Station (C Sublevel)

Speed-Y takes a laser pistol, and the two YELLOW barrels available.

He walks through the station, looking for release forms and such, and finds the appropriate desk. There's a RED clone seated at it. "Can I help you, sir?" he asks.

But Speed-Y has more pressing matters. He asks to speak with his best friend. He is answered, "I am here, citizen. How may I be of service?"

A lift

L4-O sighs again. He decides to divert to the IntSec station on I Sublevel, and tells the lift to go there instead. "Right you are, citizen!" it answers cheerily.

Jam-O tells Malkom-R that they don't have the keys, but perhaps IntSec do.

Cryo-R's suggestion that they split up might actually be a good one. Perhaps he can take those who need to go to IntSec, while L4-O can lead the rest to see the docbot.

Cryo-R claims to know where to find a docbot, and needs to see one anyway. Perhaps he could lead those who need to see the docbot, leaving L4-O to go to IntSec?

The lift continues to ascend.

written by Speeder on May 01, 2011 01:57

I chat quietly with Friend Computer for a while, and then when I am not speaking to him (maybe I am listening? Or maybe he went away already?) I start filling the appropriate forms.

written by Malkom on May 01, 2011 02:10

"Lift, come on, this is a medical emergency, my legs might get infected or something while I wait. Please go at your maximum speed." I then pull out my PDC, turn the speakers up to full blast, pull earplugs out of my pocket and shove them in my ears, and start playing Super Duper TroubleShooters Deluxe, a platform game with VERY loud sound. BLAM KZAT KZAT KZAT BEEEEEP WOOHOO BLAM BLAM BLAM KERRR-ZZOOIIING! "Ooh! I got a Mutant MindSense

Powerup!" KWEEE-THROP! TWEBLEETWEEBLEE BLAMMITY BLAM BLAM BLAM

written by Mingamango181 on May 01, 2011 02:28

I prepare the dressings, and then work them with the bandages to stop myself bleeding. If there isn't enough, I just apply them to the most serious wounds.

"I once travelled... with those lot. It was a name given by... one of the members. A troubleshooting team, it was. I won't assume you noticed the whole place shake up... the team was responsible for limiting the damage to the complex... rather than having the whole place go up and out.

As for why I don't expect them to come, it's since they've left me, down in the dark. They couldn't wait.

Speaking of which, I'm in... O Sublevel? Can't remember clearly. Plenty... of frowning GREEN things down here. I was on my way to assess the damage of that explosion, but without any method... to find an adequate path, I'm just trying to medically treat myself."

written by Megagun on May 01, 2011 12:42

I walk up to one of the ORANGES furthest away from all the vatslime.

"Excuse me. Do you happen to know where the nearest Logistics office is? I have been freshly cloned, and need some of my belongings."

written by Lightning4 on May 01, 2011 15:31

"I don't think you're leading anyone anywhere."

I glare at Cryo.

I smile a bit and say "Because I don't think you're qualified for that. You need to be a Happy Fun Party Escort Conductee before you are cleared to do something like that, And as far as I can see, you're not even cleared for Inspector of Everything of Friend Computer. Sorry. Leave it to the experts... who happen to be everyone in this lift except you!"

"So yeah, I guess I'm going with to the intsec station. I really ought to get my leg looked at though. And there's probably a few scratches on me that could stand to be patched up... so maybe I'll head up to the medbay whenever I can. Lucas or John can probably lead the group to the medbay."

"I'm not sure which group we should drag Cryo with."

written by Jam on May 01, 2011 17:00

"No, lift! I've had enough maximum speed for one daycycle... Just go your normal speed..."

I look at Lucas-R, who I'm assuming is still handcuffed to me...

"Um... I don't think Lucas-R will be able to escort them... But perhaps John-R could? But I don't think John-R will be able carry both of the injured clones at the same time... Perhaps Cryo-R should go with, so he can carry Malkom-R? Yeah... That would work..."

I turn and cover my ears as Malkom-R suddenly decides to start playing a PDC game at max volume...

"AH! MALKOM-R, TURN THAT DOWN!" I shout over the noise...

written by Gligar on May 01, 2011 17:03

Cloning Station (C Sublevel)

Speed-Y speaks with our mutual friend. What he's saying is beyond your security clearance. And from what I'm seeing, the RED technician can't even hear him. "A hush field?" muses the tech. "That's new."

After a moment, Speed-Y picks up a set of release forms and starts filling them in.

A lift

Malkom-R tries to get the lift to move faster, before playing a game on his PDC. A loud one.

Over the noise, L4-O tells Cryo-R that he won't be leading anyone, since he probably isn't qualified. He's probably not even qualified to be an inspector. Unlike, say, everyone else in the lift...

So, L4-O's going to the IntSec station with Jam-O's group (although he needs to get a docbot to see to him). Someone else, likely John-R or Lucas-R, should lead the group to the medical bay.

Lucas-R would lead the group, if it weren't for the fact that he's handcuffed like half the team... so that leaves John-R.

Now, who is Cryo-R going with?

The lift continues to ascend. It finally gets past the big gap between N and O Sublevels.

Abandoned Dormitory

Mango-R tries to stop the worst of his bleeding. He ends up using most of the bandages.

As he's doing so, he explains to the official that he traveled with Team Epsilon. He doesn't expect them to come for him because they left him here. O Sublevel, that is. He's assessing damage caused by the explosion, but has encountered... difficulties.

"Are you sure you don't need a docbot?" the official asks again. The sounds of typing come over the PDC.

Food Vat hall

"Joris-O" (or Mega-R, or Leeroy-O) asks one of the ORANGES for directions. "You want one level down," he is told.

written by Speeder on May 01, 2011 17:14

I finish filling the forms, and hand them back to the technician.

Then I check if FC is still around and talking to me, if not, I resume my usual business, such as:

"Hey technician, supposing that the ME card of a clone got stolen by another clone, what I should do to have the clone without ME card to get a proper one?"⁴¹⁵

written by Megagun on May 01, 2011 17:48

"Thanks!"

I rush outside and try to find an elevator or stairs to one level down from where I am. If I find an elevator, I hit the call button.

written by Malkom on May 01, 2011 18:34

I hit PAUSE on my game (DWEELDE-DOOP) and pull out my earplugs. "I'm not getting carried by him!" I yell, pointing at Cryo-R. "I refuse!!" Once people have heard this and responded I switch the PDC game back on (BLAMMITY BLAM BLAM) and stick my earplugs in my ears again.

written by Mingamango181 on May 01, 2011 20:49

"A docbot? I'm really sure that as much as I could use one of those... the strange frowning things will probably just destroy it..."

I decide to move the remaining dressings and bandages to the medkit, and leave the first-aid kit behind. I check the room a little more carefully before leaving.

written by Lightning4 on May 01, 2011 22:11

I roll my eyes at Malkom's gaming.

"Everyone knows that game is outdated already. There's a far better version. Wish I had it though... not that I could check."

"Having Cryo carry anyone is not a wise idea. I'm not even sure having him at gunpoint will work! But it's a thought..."

written by Malkom on May 01, 2011 23:11

I wave my PDC at L4. "Shut your mouth, you young whippersnapper. Those new versions are all shiny graphics and milli-micron shallow gameplay! It's the old stuff that's really fun. Betcha wish you'd been around back then, eh? Few years ago they had REAL games on these things. Now, practically all you can get is tinny trash. I'm lucky I got the good games while I could!" I turn the volume up as high as it will go, hoping that L4 might be at least mildly annoyed by the noise.

written by Jam on May 01, 2011 23:51⁴¹⁶

I gasp at Malkom-R...

"Did you really just tell L4-O to shut his mouth? And why are you turning the volume higher? Didn't you hear me before? Maybe I wasn't clear enough... Malkom-R, I order you to turn the volume down on your PDC, or I will fine you for insubordination!"

(We can fine clones, can't we?)

⁴¹⁵ JAM: (ooc: I'll just do the same thing as last turn...)

⁴¹⁶ JAM: (ooc: Sorta semi-double-post... :/)

written by Cryoburner on May 02, 2011 00:57

"As I said, I know just where to find a docbot. He should be right down the hall from this lift. No searching around for medical bays needed! Our search will be both quick and efficient!"

"I would recommend for my fellow lift passenger to carry him, seeing as he is an expert at lifting things, but it seems as though he has somehow managed to tangle himself in some handcuffs. Maybe Sal could give him a ride there! Sal is great at giving rides!"

written by Gligar on May 02, 2011 02:52Cloning station (C sublevel)

Speed-Y finishes his forms and returns them. "Thank you, sir," the tech says.

Speed-Y seems to listen to someone for a minute, then inquires as to how a clone whose ME card was stolen could get a replacement. "That's a tricky one, sir. If such a thing happened, I think your best bet would be to notify IntSec of the theft, then go to... er, it'd be one of the CPU offices, probably either the main ME Card Monitoring Office, or the Credit Control Office. Sorry I can;t be of much help there, but I honestly haven't encountered an ME Card theft before."

The tech hesitates. "Er... it's probably above my clearnace, but would this have anything to do with that silenced conversation?... and by the way, that looks really weird, sir. Meaning no disrespect, of course."

Corridor (C Sublevel)

"Joris-O" (etc.) runs back, looking for a list, or some stairs. He finds a stairwell leading down, and takes it.

Corridor (D Sublevel)

He finds himself on a similar corridor, with a bunch of signs.

A lift

Jam-O has had enough of lifts traveling way too fast, and says so. Possibly twice.

He notes that Lucas-R is mixed up with the handcuffs and suggests John-R for the medical bay group. Of course, there are two clones that need help getting there, and he isn't exactly strong enough to lift both of them.

Malkom-R pauses his game to adamantly refuse to be carried by Mango-R, before going back to his game.

Jam-O yells at him to turn it down, at the same time as L4-O rolling his eyes. L4-O adds that the game is outdated, and that there's a newer, better and therefore more perfect version out. He wishes he had it, but he doesn't. Ah well.

But back to the matter at hand. He doesn't trust Cryo-R to carry anyone, except perhaps at gunpoint.

Malkom-R tells L4-O to shut up! He says that the newer games are just graphics and have no substance. (Ignoring the fact that all updates are mandatory...) He then goes back to his game, turning the volume up as far as it will go.

As it turns out, "as far as it will go" is extremely painful for Malkom-R, and would damage the ears of pretty much anyone who was directly hooked up to it, by, say, earphones.

Jam-O gasps. Did Malkom-R really badmouth an ORANGE? Did Malkom-R ignore him before? This time, Jam-O makes it an order. Failure to comply is punishable by a fine.

(Perhaps Jam-O isn't aware that ORANGE clones can't technically fine anyone. But I'm pretty sure Malkom-R isn't aware either.)

Cryo-R repeats that he knows where to find a docbot: right down the hall. (Er... which hall?)

He would suggest that Lucas-R do some carrying, but of course he can't. So instead, he suggests the jackobot, who apparently "is great at giving rides".

The lift continues to ascend. Not long now...

Abandoned Dormitory

There is a pause of a minute or so. Mango-R moves what's left to his medkit. As he;s about to leave, the PDC speaks up again. "Citizen, I have spoken to my superior, and he agrees that a docbot should be sent. I will arrange for one to find you."

The call terminates.

Throughout the sector

The Computer announces, "May I have your attention, please? Will Troubleshooter Team Epsilon please report to Debriefing Room 27, static Level, Cen*static* Subsector, within 30 minutecycles for debriefing? Thank you for your co-operation."

written by Malkom on May 02, 2011 03:19

I flick off my game. I was wearing EARPLUGS, to muffle sound. NOT earphones. "COMPUTER! Please repeat, we did not comprehend your message! Please repeat, Computer!" After yelling that, I mumble, not loud enough for anyone to hear, "Nitpicking rapscaillions... I am so glad I kept a backup of my PDC's data, with this game on it..."

written by Lightning4 on May 02, 2011 03:46

"Hm. Loud music. Rebellious..."

I cock my head.

"Death Leopard, perhaps? We're watching you..."

I turn to more pressing matters and speak up.

"But agreed. If you can hear us, Friend Computer, we need clarification. Debriefing Room 27, Central Subsector? What level?"

written by Speeder on May 02, 2011 03:50

I look at the RED clone, and then I state.

"Actually, maybe it is above even my own clearance, but what matters that I can tell you is that the clone that just left without filling forms is deranged, and just stole the other freshly cloned clone ME card, and also stole a ORANGE jumpsuit... So that clone"

I point to the real Joris.

"is missing his ME card, since I never saw that happening before, I am unsure of what to do..."

And the ME card on the hand of the bot over there, belongs to the deranged clone."

As I hear the announcement, I facepalm.

"Ok, I need a PDC, you know where I find one?"

written by Cryoburner on May 02, 2011 12:01

"Did The Computer just say R27? That's exactly what I'm headed to see the docbot about! How incredibly convenient and well-timed! Plus, if everything goes as planned, I'll be able to get you out of those restraints myself! You won't need to make a detour to internal security, and we can get to the briefing with time to spare! It truly is a win-win-win situation!"

written by Mingamango181 on May 02, 2011 12:49

"Whatever you s-"

I notice that the call has ended. Upon hearing the announcement, I comment,

"Hmm. Not my problem."

I leave the room, and walk further down the side passage.

written by Megagun on May 02, 2011 13:34

"Hmm.. Team Epsilon.. Yeah, I'm part of that, am I not?"

I look at the signs to see if I can find a map of some sorts. Got to get to Debriefing Room 27!

written by Jam on May 02, 2011 14:55

I facepalm as I hear Friend Computer's announcement...

"Vatcrap! How are we supposed to know what level to go to? Friend Computer, could you repeat that please? Malkom-R's loud music caused us to not be able to hear your announcement properly. Either that, or it was communist interference..."

Then I look at Cryo-R.

"R Level? How sure are you? Didn't you just say the docbot was 'down the hall'? Whatever that's supposed to mean..."

I speak to the lift.

"Lift, is there a Debriefing Room 27 at R Level, or, do you know which level it'd be on?"

written by 4616599 on May 02, 2011 15:28

"What was t..that...noise?" I moan, still on the floor. "The floor tastes salty too...is it... you.... Salty Sal? What's wrong with, er, Idea Bots?"

"Ugh. The other clone's gone. I'll make do with this and see if I can catch up with him." I grab the other card. "Any forms I have to fill up?"

written by Gligar on May 02, 2011 17:43

A lift

Malkom-R finishes his game. Which is just as well, since the stress of the load forced on them disintegrates his earphones.⁴¹⁷

He yells to the Computer to repeat what it said. "The announcement has already been given, citizen. You are fined 10 credits for not paying attention."

L4-O notes that Malkom-R might be a member of the Death Leopard secret society, before also asking for clarification. The Computer just gives a similar response: that he should have adequate information to find the debriefing room.

Cryo-R thinks that the announcement said R27? He claims that that's what he wanted to talk to the docbot about, and suggests that he'll be able to get everyone out of their restraints, negating the need to go to Internal Security.

Did he forget about their communist ex-leader?

Jam-O facepalms. There's a lot of that going around, and also asks for clarification. This time, The Computer does not reply. Perhaps it's busy elsewhere.

He looks at Cryo-R. He's confused. Didn't Cryo-R say "down the hall"?

He asks the lift about Debriefing Room 27. The lift replies, "Well, if it is in Central Subsector, I do not know. I do know that there is no Debriefing Room 27 on P level in Epsilon Subsector, citizen."

Joris-O moans something... something about the floor being salty, and idea bots...

"I do not like idea bots," the jackobot comments. "Many of them decide that their asimov circuits are a... what is the word... a restraining bolt?"

The lift comes to a halt.

Cloning Station (C Sublevel)

Speed-Y says that the conversation is high clearance. What matters is that there is a deranged clone on the loose with stolen equipment. He indicates Joris-O, the real owner of the stolen ME Card. However, he hasn't seen this happen before either.

At The Computer's announcement... guess what he does. Now he needs a PDC...

The tech answers, "Okay then, so we have a case of missing ID... er..." He thinks. "Right. What I'll have to do is run a tongueprint scan to verify that this is Joris-O. I don't think I've ever used a tongueprint scanner before..."

⁴¹⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: Yes, earphones. By rights, he should have had neither. I don't appreciate people pulling things out of nowhere. PDC apps are okay as long as you can explain where you got it and why.)

He rummages in his desk, and pulls out a portable tongueprint scanner, which he begins plugging into a terminal. "Oh! A PDC, you say? Normally, you'd need to get one from PLC... but I guess you can use mine for now, sir..." He puts it on the desk.

The real Joris-O grabs Mega-R's ME Card, and asks for forms, apparently forgetting that he doesn't have a jumpsuit. The forms are on the desk.

Abandoned Dormitory

Mango-R thinks that the docbot isn't his problem. He leaves the dorm, heading further down the side passage.

Junction

He comes to an equally-dark four-way junction, with the sound of running water coming from the south.

Corridor (D Sublevel)

On hearing the announcement, "Joris-O" (etc.) again looks for a map. As usual, though, there isn't one. He does find a sign pointing towards the local logistics office, though.

written by Speeder on May 02, 2011 17:53

I use the RED clone PDC to attempt to call Jam-R

Then I look at Joris-O for a while, while waiting Jam to pickup.

"Erm... you are going to run around naked? Director Andrei style?"

written by Malkom on May 02, 2011 19:32

I yell loudly. "Computer, please repeat yourself. We do not know where to go and require a repeat to be able to go to the debriefing."

After getting a response, I boot up my copy of Electro-Rail Tycoon 3012 and start playing. The audio comes blasting from my PDC's speakers. Very loudly. Apparently I have temporary minor deafness from listening to loud PDC music via earphones. "Yarg, I can hardly hear this!"

written by Megagun on May 02, 2011 19:44

I run towards the logistics office. Upon entering, I yell:

"Important pizza delivery for Debriefing Room 27!"

I stand there, jogging in-place, hoping nobody notices that I don't actually have an algae pizza with me.

"Err.. Where is Debriefing Room 27? Hurry, before it gets cold!"⁴¹⁸ written by Cryburner on May 02, 2011 21:28⁴¹⁹

"What? We know exactly where to go, and that's to see that docbot! He's on H level, actually."

I press the button for H level.

⁴¹⁸ SPEEDER: (OOC: Pizza is not treason for clones below INDIGO or something? 😊)

⁴¹⁹ CRYBURNER: (What if there's a box holding the pizza, and the box is within the clone's clearance? Wouldn't the box be the traitor then? : 3)

"I suppose if someone really wants to visit internal security, they're free to do so on their own. Assuming they're not handcuffed to anyone. Just be sure not to slow down the rest of us. We have a briefing to go to! And then possibly lunch."

written by Lightning4 on May 02, 2011 21:29

I sigh.

"Well we're here. Let's get this handcuff situation sorted out first, then go straight to the Central Subsector. Surely someone there knows where we need to go. I guess we'll have to handle the medical stuff later."

I look at Malkom, then I look around for that cart I was using for the commie.

(Speaking of which, where did that commie go anyway? Is he still with us? 😊)

written by Jam on May 02, 2011 21:43

Noticing Malkom-R seems to have ignored FC's reply, and is about to start yelling again, I try to cover his mouth... It might be a bit hard though, depending on where the Director and Lucas-R are standing... I smile, and try to explain to Friend Computer...

"Er, sorry about that, Friend Computer. Malkom-R seems to have turned his music up just a bit too loud, and apparently has temporarily deafened himself, which is why he couldn't hear your announcement... I'm sure if he realized what he had just done, he'd be on his knees saying just how sorry he was for not paying attention... I'll make sure to tell him about his 10-credit fine once he recovers his hearing..."

I speak to the lift next...

"Erm... Okay, I'm glad to know there isn't a Debriefing Room 27 on P Level at Epsilon Subsector... I'm not quite sure why your telling me this though... Well, thanks for the ride! We'll be back later, I'm sure, to go to whatever level we need to go to to get to Debriefing Room 27..."

I check the clearance of the outside of the lift, then step out if it's ORANGE or below...

Then I look back at L4-O, slightly confused...

"Um... Aren't we already in Central Subsector?"

If my PDC happens to start ringing, I answer it...

"Hello?"

written by Malkom on May 02, 2011 23:18

I try to evade my mouth being covered, and shout my message for all I'm worth.

written by Gligar on May 03, 2011 01:37

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Speed-Y calls Jam-O. He seems to be taking a while to pick up.

While he's waiting, Speed-Y looks over that (the real) Joris-O, noting that he's out of uniform. He asks whether he's just going to go out like that?

A lift

The team doesn't move out yet. They have things to worry about first.

Things like Malkom-R ignoring The Computer's message and yelling for clarification again.

"Citizen, are you ignoring me? Report to the nearest confession booth immediately."

It seems that he is, since he immediately fires up another, very loud, game on his PDC.

Not long after he does, his PDC runs out of power due to the ridiculous amount used to output the extreme volume.

Cryo-R states that they know where to go: to see a docbot. He knows one on H Level, pressing the appropriate button.

He suggests that those who want to go to Internal Security do so as long as they don't slow everyone down. There is the briefing, after all (well, the de briefing, from the room designation).

And again, he fixates over a lunch that he won't get for another several hourcycles.

L4-O sighs. They'd better get these handcuffs seen to before debriefing.

He looks at Malkom-R, then at the pallet truck, which is still here.

He then comes to the realisation that the communist he was transporting is missing...

Hearing Malkom-R, Jam-O tries to cover Malkom-R's mouth.

Of course, what with the ex-Director and Lucas-R in the way, not to mention the fact that Malkom-R is deliberately dodging, he doesn't succeed. Regardless, he tells our mutual friend about Malko-R's predicament, adding that he'll inform him about the fine when his hearing comes back.

"In which case," The Computer replies, "please escort him to the nearest confession booth when you do. I would like to speak with him in private. Thank you for your co-operation."

He thanks the lift for the information, and for the ride, before looking outside. The corridor outside is RED, so he steps outside, dragging Lucas-R and the ex-Director with him. Then he looks back in. Aren't they already in Central Subsector?

All this time, his PDC has been vibrating in his pocket. A fact which he finally notices, and answers it.

Logistics office

"Joris-O" (etc.) enters at a run. He claims to have algae pizza for Debriefing Room 27.⁴²⁰

⁴²⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC: And considering the general hammerspace that you

A clone looks up. "Debriefing Room 27? That's nowhere near here. You want Central Subsector, citizen. Take the lift up to P Level, then head inward."

written by Speeder on May 03, 2011 01:44

"Hello Jam! I am Speed here, using a borrowed PDC to inform you that the information that Friend Computer could not inform, is that the R27 room is on P level. I will meet you all there, then we can talk more, I have to hand back this PDC to its owner. Also I would like to inform the team, that if they find Mega-R, even if wearing Orange clothing, capture him immediately, he is MORE dangerous than Cryo"

Unless Jam make me talk more to him⁴²¹ I close the call and hand it back to the clone near me, I mean, the clothed one.

written by Lightning4 on May 03, 2011 01:58

"Hm? No, I think this is Epsilon Subsector, meaning we need to travel a bit, probably."

I shrug.

"So anyone want to tell me where the commie we had prisoner is? I remember we had him with us on O Sublevel... wonder if we left him down there. He's probably dead by now seeing the rate those... things were coming after us."

written by Jam on May 03, 2011 02:37

"Thank you, Friend Computer."

I turn back, grab Malkom-R's leg, and begin dragging him out of the lift. Then I turn, put my mouth right up to his ear, and scream as loudly as possible...

"I'VE BEEN ORDERED TO TAKE YOU TO THE NEAREST CONFESSION BOOTH, MALKOM-R!!! SINCE YOU SEEM TO BE IGNORING FRIEND COMPUTER, I'M ALSO SUPPOSED TO TELL YOU THAT YOU HAVE A 10-CREDIT FINE FOR NOT PAYING ATTENTION TO FRIEND COMPUTER'S ANNOUNCEMENT!!! I'M YELLING BECAUSE YOU SEEM TO HAVE GONE DEAF, AND MOST DEFINITELY NOT BECAUSE I'M UNHAPPY THAT YOUR WASTING MY TIME AND TREASONOUSLY DELAYING OUR ARRIVAL TO THE DEBRIEFING ROOM!!! BEING UNHAPPY IS TREASONOUS!!!"

I stop yelling, and instead loudly whisper into his ear... I smile wickedly at the same time...

"I am going to have lots of fun 'escorting' you to the confession booth... Heh heh heh..."

Then I turn, and proceed to drag him down the hall by his (broken) legs, making sure to twist them in painful ways at the same time... I sing a happy Computer-approved loyalty jingle, and start to skip down the hall, just to show how happy I am. I also try to ignore Malkom-R's screams of agony as I drag him behind me...

"Oh, whoops, I just answered my PDC, didn't I?"

I talk into the PDC...

guys seem to stuff things into, he could easily be carrying it 😊)

⁴²¹ SPEEDER: (ooc: on the next turn)

"Hello? I'm sorry, but I just got an order from Friend Computer, that couldn't wait... What were you saying again? And who is this?"

written by 4616599 on May 03, 2011 02:55

"Oh, we're here, then. Must get more pills...energy...ugh." I attempt to flop onto the pallet truck to determine its texture and composition.

—
"Thanks for pointing that out! Say, doesn't Jam have some mutation now? Could he use it to track down J-Mega-R?" I look around for any towels or a jumpsuit. I take both, donning the suit and flapping the towel.

written by Malkom on May 03, 2011 03:37

I scream in agony. Flinging my PDC, which is still blaring away, at Jam-R's hands, I grab my laser pistol (which I still have) and fire it at his head. "TAKE THAT YOU ROTTEN TRAITOR SCUM!!!" My expression has dropped FAR below mandatory happiness levels.

written by Megagun on May 03, 2011 10:22

"Thankee-doodle!"

I run off towards the elevator (if I can find it), mashing the call button if the elevator isn't there yet, and entering/hitting the shiny "P" button if the elevator is waiting already.

If I can't find it, I head back to the logistics office and ask them if they can tell me where the elevator is.

written by Mingamango181 on May 03, 2011 10:57

I go and continue looking for the range, checking every door or window that I come across, apart from the ones which have already been looked into.

written by Gligar on May 03, 2011 17:32

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Speed-Y tells Jam-O where the debriefing is. He then warns him about "Joris-O" (etc.) being dangerous.

Corridor (I Sublevel)

Jam-O turns back, getting Malkom-R out of the lift, and yelling, in his best Internal Security voice, why he's doing it.

It's worth noting that he seems to take as much care as he can to cause more pain to Malkom-R, such as dragging him by his broken legs.

As they head down the corridor, the lift closes up, ascending once more.

He soon "remembers" that he has his PDC to answer, and drops Malkom-R. He takes the time to explain to Speed-Y that, due to an order from The Computer, he kind of missed most of what he said. Also, he doesn't seem to recognise Speed-Y over the PDC.

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Joris-O thanks Speed-Y for reminding him about the jumpsuits. He goes to get one, and maybe a towel. Sadly, there are no towels to be had. And no ORANGE jumpsuits either. He ends up with a RED one.

Say, isn't Jam-O a mutant now? Couldn't that be useful?

A lift

L4-O points out that they're in Epsilon Subsector, so they'll have to travel a bit.

And where did that communist go? He was right here, and was in O Sublevel... he's probably still there...

Joris-O flops onto the pallet truck, and is able to determine that it's made of metal

The lift continues to ascend.

Corridor (I sublevel)

Malkom-R screams. He throws his now-dead* PDC at Jam-O's hands, causing him to flinch back (and, several levels away, Speed-Y to hear the impact of a PDC hitting a PDC).

Malkom-R then grabs his laser pistol, and attempts to shoot Jam-O in the head.⁴²² eeeeeeEeeeeeeEeeeeeee....

I'm going to tentatively suggest that a laser pistol malfunction isn't what he had in mind.

Another lift

"Joris-O" (etc.) dashes into the nearest lift and hits the "P" button, which is indeed very shiny.

"Going up!"

The lift begins to ascend.

Corridors in the Underplex

Mango-R continues looking for the range. He checks doors, windows, rams, even the occasional sign.

Eventually, he finds a sign... pointing back the way he came.

written by Speeder on May 03, 2011 17:46

After hearing the loud collision noise on the PDC, I cringe.

"Hello? What was that? Jam? Are you alright? A commie is attacking you? JAAAAM?"

written by Megagun on May 03, 2011 18:32

I wait for the doors to close, and then breathe a sign of relief.

Slowly, I sit down against a wall of the elevator, and say loudly yet in a low voice:

* I did say that it ran out of power...

⁴²² GLIGAR: (OOC: roll... 20.)

"Friend Computer. I, Leeroy-O-JNK-whatever, also known as Mega-R-GUN-whatever, probably also known as many many other clones, hereby request special ULTRAVIOLET-level protection, in exchange for the details of what I think is my life and my mission. I think I have figured out what has been going on in JHT sector, and would like to explain everything to you at the debriefing of Team Epsilon. I need protection, for I believe that a member of Team Epsilon has been plotting against you and the future of Alpha Complex all along. I am not sure, but I think that said individual had been given assistance from a high-level citizen of Alpha Complex, in the same way that I had undoubtedly been given assistance from a high-level citizen. Should you not comply with my wishes for whatever reason, I will terminate the body I currently possess, and my benefactor shall then arrange for my spirit to be placed in another citizen.

You currently know the exact location of Leeroy-O-JNK. You will not know the location of Leeroy-O-JNK should he be terminated. Logically, this means that you should protect him at all costs. Failure to do so will be treason against the entirety of Alpha Complex, which you, as Friend Computer, can not do. Friend Computer can do no treason, and thus Friend Computer logically has to protect Leeroy-O-JNK from harm. It is only logical."

I take out my laser pistol, make sure it's loaded and ready to fire, and place it on the floor next to me, being careful not to point it at myself just yet.

written by Malkom on May 03, 2011 19:04

I hear my laser pistol going "eeeEEEEEEEE" and fling it as hard as I can at Jam's head, hoping it will explode or something. I crawl away as fast as I can, considering that my legs are broken. As I crawl, I say loudly, "Friend Computer, I'm being attacked by a traitor mutant! He's deliberately causing me extreme pain and causing me to drop below mandatory happiness levels! I....." I faint away from sustained pain in my legs.

written by Jam on May 03, 2011 21:57

I quickly drop to the floor in an attempt to dodge Malkom-R's incoming laser pistol.

"Ah! You dare to try to fire upon a superior? Then you call me the traitor? I'm just following orders, Malkom-R! You are the one who is the traitor!"

I call out to Friend Computer...

"Friend Computer! This clone attempted to shoot me, a clone of higher clearance, with a laser pistol beyond his clearance! He is also calling me a 'rotten traitor scum', which I am not, and which is definitely not the way he should be addressing a citizen of higher clearance! He's also complaining that he is unhappy because he is in pain, but he's not taking a Visomorpain to deal with said pain, and trying to blame me instead! I don't think he can be trusted, that is just too many treasonous actions! Do I have permission to terminate him, Friend Computer?"

I ready my own laser pistol, and aim it at Malkom-R...

written by Lightning4 on May 03, 2011 23:07

I yawn and look around the lift. Who's left?

I mumble. "Should have gotten off to get these cuffs off... oh well, maybe a docbot will see to them."

I decide to glare at Cryo. He's undoubtedly up to something.

written by Cryoburner on May 04, 2011 00:59

Undoubtedly not up to anything, I decide to have a look around the lift to see who else is here.

"Hmm... Has anyone found my ME card yet? I'm getting the impression that it may have been stolen."

I look around on the floor again for any ME cards, bells, or other items of interest that may be present.

written by Gligar on May 04, 2011 02:23

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Speed-Y reacts to the loud impact noise.

He instantly assumes that Jam-O is under attack. He yells for a response.

The RED tech asks, "Er... so nobody needs the tongueprint scanner?"

Another lift

"Joris-O" (etc.) contacts The Computer, saying that he's figured something out. He claims that a member of Team Epsilon has been plotting against Alpha Complex this whole time, possibly being helped by a high-clearance citizen. He requests protection, since he believes that he might be terminated again. He wants to reveal everything at the team's debriefing.

He states that if he does not receive protection, he will self-terminate and move on.

He then proceeds to use what appears to be a logic bomb, in order to convince The Computer to co-operate.

The Computer does not respond for a moment. Presently, it says, "It is good that you have contacted me, Leeroy-O-JNK-[NUMBER REDACTED]. I have been looking for you. As a matter of fact, you have interested me ever since the Code 7 Incident in DMV Sector. Since then, you seem to have evaded my notice until recently, when you somehow transferred into the clone family you now inhabit.

"Perhaps you are aware of the seriousness of this event. You mentioned being helped by a high-clearance clone. Perhaps this is the same clone who is right now situated in a confession booth, saying how he helped a Citizen of Interest. He seems aware of it, as well. Or perhaps it is of little consequence to you. In which case, I will explain. You are the subject of a MemoMax Liveware Overwrite. This means that, in essence, you have stolen a clone family belonging to another citizen, namely Mega-R-GUN. Regrettably, his MemoMax data has been overwritten by yours, and will require extensive reconstruction before he can fully reintegrate into society. As will you.

"Rest assured, citizen, that you will not be harmed. Far from it, in fact. You have been volunteered for the latest R&D MemoBot transfer program! This exciting program will transfer your liveware into an idea bot shell, where it should be safe. Won't that be fun? Please be aware that the transfer will not take long. Once you are transferred, we can begin reconstructing Mega-R.

"The only thing that remains is to begin the transfer."

Corridor (1 sublevel)

Malkom-R throws away his malfunctioning laser, aiming high. Unsportingly, though, Jam-O hits the deck, causing the laser to fly into a nearby confession booth.

Malkom-R tries to get away, and tells The Computer that he's under attack, before fainting.

Jam-O counters by saying that he, Malkom-R, is the traitor, for firing on a superior who was trying to follow orders.

Jam-O also contacts The Computer, giving a brief summary of what just happened. Furthermore, he requests permission to terminate.

"Termination is authorised," comes the reply. "It appears that confession will have to wait. Unless, perhaps, you and your companions would like to confess?"

A lift

L4-O looks around, yawning. He sees the still-somehow-sort-of-ambulatory Joris-O, Cryo-R, who seems to be looking for something on the floor, John-R, and the jackobot.

As he watches Cryo-R (whom he doesn't trust), he sees him spot a dropped blaster.

The lift continues to ascend, passing into Epsilon Subsector.

written by Lightning4 on May 04, 2011 02:52

Seeing the blaster, I attempt to dash behind Cryo and sling my handcuff chain over his head and neck, then pull back quickly in an attempt to restrain him.

"Sorry but I don't trust you with a weapon at all. Someone mind picking that up? John or the jackobot, either or. I'm in no position to pick that up."

written by Malkom on May 04, 2011 03:16

I recover just in time to hear the computer's termination authorisation.

"TERMINATION AUTHORISED? NO! I HAVE NOT DONE ANYTHING! THIS CRAZY CLONE HAS BEEN INFLECTING NEEDLESS EXTRA PAIN ON ME AND DELIBERATELY CAUSING ME TO BE UNHAPPY, WHICH IS TREASONOUS, THEREFORE, HE WAS DELIBERATELY CAUSING ME TO BE INVOLVED IN A TREASONOUS ACTIVITY, NAMELY, BEING UNHAPPY, THEREFORE HE IS A TRAITOR WHO IS TRYING TO MAKE IT SEEM LIKE I NEED TO BE TERMINATED! ALSO, I HAPPEN TO KNOW THAT HE HAS A UNREGISTERED MUTANT POWER IN ADDITION TO HIS REGISTERED MUTANT POWER! PLEASE STOP HIM NOW, COMPUTER!"

In panic, I try to crawl into the nearest shelter -- a confession booth.

written by Speeder on May 04, 2011 04:31

I shake my head as I hear all the yelling there.

"Ok, seemly my team is having more problems with rebellious clones..."

I attempt to figure where Joris, I mean, the real one, I mean, the non-zombie one is.

"Joris can you come over here to have your tongue scanned? Just to prove you are really Joris, it is protocol, since Mega stole your ME card."

written by Mingamango181 on May 04, 2011 10:08

Reading the sign, I let off a sigh, and turn to go back in the other direction.

I'm feeling sort of tired now...

Looks like that spiked TeaSir didn't really do much good... Another complaint for the list.

written by Megagun on May 04, 2011 10:31

"Hmm. I may consider your offer, though I must admit that I didn't have a lot of positive experiences with bots for the past few daycycles. One of them cut off my lower arm, after all!

Either way, thanks for your protection. I will probably need it during the debriefing of Team Epsilon.

As far as the high-clearance clone goes, I suggest he should be protected as well. From what I gather, he's been using me as a tool to defuse the plans of other ill-minded high-clearance clones."

written by Cryoburner on May 04, 2011 11:29

Noticing someone attempting to dash behind me, I remain standing backed into the corner of the lift where I've been since the handcuffing incident. It might be a pickpocket after all, so I can't chance having my other valuables stolen. I do hold my hands up and in front of me now though, just in case they might try to hug me, like a hugging pickpocket might do.

"Say, you seem mildly distressed. Perhaps it is because you lost your favorite laser pointer. Do not worry, for I may have found it!"

I gesture in the direction of the laser pointer, which looks as though it may have been someone's favorite. While doing so, I note the appearance of said laser pointer.

written by Jam on May 04, 2011 12:27

"Thank you, Friend Computer."

As the techs approach, one raises its stunner. "You must be the volunteer. This way, please. I would prefer you to come willingly, but if needed... He gestures with the stunner.

written by Malkom on May 04, 2011 18:09

I stagger to my feet, looking stunned. "What the..."

I suddenly collapse and lay totally still. I'm dead. Vatcrap! I can't move! Everything is black! What the [censored] is going on here?!

A sepulchral voice echoes out of the void... "Welcome to TransClone Space, Citizen Malkom-R. We expect you to be recloned very soon. Spiri-spatial transfer will then commence, allowing you to continue your Real-World activities as normal. Until that happens, enjoy our all-access viewing portals to the Real-World. Thank you for your cooperation."

*I dream myself up a bank of viewing portals and watch the various goings-on of my team as I wait for recloning.*⁴²³ written by Megagun on May 04, 2011 18:26⁴²⁴

I groan.

"Fine. Get that vatcrapped stunner out of my face. I'll come along."

I follow the R&D techs.

"Get it over with quick, as I have a debriefing to attend to in roughly 20 minutecycles. Here's my ME card."

I take out Joris-O's ME card and hand it to one of the techs.

"Keep it with you. Where I'm going, I don't need it anymore."

"You know, I've always wanted to be an R&D tech. Fiddle with cool tech, blow up some nuclear weapons.. It would seem like it's the most awesome duty to have in the entirety of Alpha Complex!"

written by Lightning4 on May 04, 2011 20:18

I release my hold on Cryo and back away, noticing the blaster is secure now.

"I could actually use a new blaster. Can't hold one now though... oh well."

I slink back into a spot I was in before and decide to hum a B3 jingle to pass the time.

written by Mingamango181 on May 04, 2011 21:05

I continue following the signs leading to the range.

Heh. You have no idea what's going on. It's sort of hilarious, the team in the lift.

What do you mean?

It's a lift ride, and they've somehow made incident of it all.

I suppose it was a good idea not to try and find my way back then?

⁴²³ MALKOM: (Do I get anything for a somewhat amusing death and chaotic aftereffects? I certainly caused a lot of chaos going out...)

⁴²⁴ Megagun: (OOC: damn it. I knew it. 😊)

Of course.

written by Speeder on May 04, 2011 22:31

I look at the non-undead Joris for a while, with a puzzled and funny face, one brow raised and another one frowning and all...

"Are you sure you are alright? I mean, I woke up in the tank before the process ended, you are sure your brain decanted entirely?"

written by Jam on May 04, 2011 23:06

I smile at Lucas-R.

"Oh, thanks! Good job!"

I make sure Malkom-R is actually dead, then speak to the approaching IntSec clones (and also check their clearances).

"Hello, sirs! I was just terminating (with Friend Computer's approval, of course) a traitor that decided to try firing at me with a laser pistol that was beyond his clearance. And that explosion was caused by the traitor's malfunctioning laser pistol barrel, that he tried to throw at my head, and missed."

I smile at the clones.

"Actually, you were just the clones I was looking for, sirs! Here, this is the communist Director, that I believe is or was recently marked as a Citizen of Interest... His name is Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R... I'm here to return him to IntSec, since he's served his purpose. We assumed the communists would trust their former Director, and pretended to be with him as we snuck into the sector's reactor... Then we terminated the communists, and restored the reactor to Computer control! Isn't that good news! And there's more, if you'd like to hear..."

written by Cryoburner on May 05, 2011 00:54

I respond to Sal...

"Ah, so it's yours. That is a fine laser pointer. You could probably point at all sorts of things with it, provided you had hands. Maybe the doctor could take care of that for you..."⁴²⁵ written by Gligar on May 05, 2011 01:55⁴²⁶

Cloning station (C sublevel)

The tech continues reading the screen. "Hmmm... it seems that there's still liveware activity... I guess it'll keep him occupied until he reclones... Symptoms of post-termination liveware

⁴²⁵ CRYOBURNER: (Aren't Lucas-R, Jam-O and the Director all handcuffed together? Can we have a diagram explaining how Lucas-R managed to block Malkom-R's escape while Jam-O was aiming his laser at Malkom-R's head? 😊)

⁴²⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: Okay, let's see... lots of OOC comments this time... Malkom, you're first. It's true that you're causing quite a stir, isn't it? And it looks like you're still trying to do so 😊 That's worth a perversity point.

Megagun... there was really no doubt, was there? 😊

Cryoburner... I'm afraid you aren't cleared for such a diagram. And any explanation would consist of mostly censor bars with the odd word peeking through.) activity include visions of a nonexistent afterlife, thinking that you can monitor your team-mates, mutations in your next clone, and brainscrubs. Your next clone may not remember any post-termination liveware activity. Cloning Services does not support or condone post-termination liveware activity and may act to remove it... on second thought, that's too much effort. Post-termination liveware activity lasting longer than [REDACTED] is a serious issue and may require the intervention of Medical Services. Consult your docbot before engaging in post-termination liveware activity. "

Speed-Y is looking at the not-terminated Joris-O. His expression is somewhere between "what" and "huh?!" complete with eyebrow.

He wonders if Joris-O is alright. Considering that both of them woke before the process finished, perhaps Joris-O is missing a few brain cells?

Another lift

Leeroy-O groans. He's less than happy about all this, but he goes along with it. Not before telling the tech to point his stunner elsewhere, and handing over Joris-O's ME card. The tech barely looks at it before pocketing it.

As the techs lead him down the corridor, Leeroy-O's mood improves. He thinks that it would be cool to work for R&D, since they get to play with all the cool stuff. "It has its moments," one tech agrees. "but then you remember all the stuff that is destroyed by inept testers and you start to wonder."

The three head round a corner, only to practically run right into a docbot. "Oh! I am sorry, citizens. My sensors must be malfunctioning, for I did not see you."

Corridors in the Underplex

Mango-R continues following signs. He thinks it was probably for the best that he left the team... though for some reason he seems to know what happened...

...Mutant Response Team 8, deploy to O Sublevel immediately.

He comes to one last corridor, ending in a door.

Corridor (I Sublevel)

Jam-O doesn't seem to be bothered over losing a kill. Instead, he checks to see if is, indeed, a kill. He finds that it is, and turns to the approaching IntSec. There are two of them, one male, one female, with reflec and blasters. Both are ORANGE.

Jam-O explains to them what just happened, and that he wants to turn in a Citizen of Interest. The ORANGE clones look at the scene, before deciding to deploy treason scene tape. One says, "The three of you will need to come back to the station, just a routine interview, I'm sure you understand. It shouldn't take long... well, for two of you, since you say one of you is a Citizen of Interest."

She looks at the handcuffs. "And what's with those? Can't figure them out or something, even though they're the easiest things in the complex?"

A lift

L4-O lets go of Cryo-R and returns to his position. The blaster is secure, at least. He could use it himself, if it weren't for the handcuffs.

He starts humming a B3 jingle (and couldn't you use some right about now?) while Cryo-R suggests to the jackobot that perhaps a docbot could help with the blaster. "Unless the docbot is skilled with bot alterations, I believe you might be mistaken."

The lift comes to a halt.

written by Lightning4 on May 05, 2011 07:24

"Right then. I guess we should find that medical bay then."

I look at the group.

"John and... uh, I guess I'll call you Sal too... you two keep an eye on him... I would help but... yeah."

Once the doors open, I proceed out and look around.

written by Mingamango181 on May 05, 2011 08:07

Whoops... Sorry about that. Say... I'll go quiet unless you address me directly, okay?

Right... Won't be long before company arrives.

I check the door for any signs that a large Massacrebot has come through in this direction. Regardless of the results, I check to see what kind of method is required to open the door.

written by Cryoburner on May 05, 2011 08:49⁴²⁷

So long as the doors are open, I look outside the lift. If we appear to be on H level, I proceed past L4-O and head down toward the recovery room.

"Right this way, please."

Otherwise, I just proceed to another vacant corner of the lift.

written by Jam on May 05, 2011 12:36

I smile some more...

"Okay, but just so you know, I've got a debriefing to get to, so I'm sort of in a hurry... Tardiness is treason, as we all know... But I think I'll have time for a quick interview..."

I start to walk with the IntSec clones, and look at my handcuffed wrists...

"Yeah, for some reason, I just can't figure out how to use these... (That's probably why I'm not in IntSec) Erm... Do you think you get these off of me? Here, this clone is the Citizen of Interest..."

I point to the Director...

Then I suddenly realize something...

"Vatcrap! I was talking to Speed-Y!"

I quickly raise my PDC...

"Speed-Y sir? I'm so sorry for the delay... Okay, Malkom-R has been terminated, and I'm with IntSec, going to the station for a quick interview... But did you say something about the debriefing room, sir?"

⁴²⁷ CRYOBURNER: (I knew it! Lucas-R has a mutation giving him really long arms, most suitable for lifting things. I wonder why no one has noticed this. : P)

written by Megagun on May 05, 2011 13:07

"Aargh! That docbot bumped into me! Ow! That really hurts! Ouch!

I'm sorry, R&D techs, but I'll need some medication for this, or I won't be able to move on.

Give me some medication, docbot, quickly! I have important business to attend to!"

written by Speeder on May 05, 2011 13:09

I make a disappointed face, maybe it is a good thing that RED PDCs are not fitted with videophone by default.

"Ok... Malkom-R got terminated... I wonder how much crazy clones we will get... Anyway, the debriefing room is in P level... Pass that information to other clones"

written by Malkom on May 05, 2011 15:14

In TransClone Space, Malkom-R focuses a viewing portal onto a C Sublevel cloning station. It appears that it will be some time before his next clone. He notices the techs muttering something about liveware, and carefully tunes in his nearby rerecorder. Thus, he hears everything they say.

A sepulchral voice echoes out of the void... "Your clone is currently forming. Be advised that all memories of this experience will be erased once you return to your clone. They will however be returned to you once you return."

I continue to monitor everyone. I notice someone - Mega-R? Or someone else? Who knows? Who cares? - being escorted by R&D techs with blasters. Interesting...⁴²⁸

written by 4616599 on May 05, 2011 15:37

"Uh. Excellent...idea. Why...don't...I...seem...to...bowver...tooo...much?"

I lick the pallet bot to determine its taste, focusing on dust.

"Uh. Yeah. Guess I thought it was a free gift. Don't seem to have credits with me, though, so don't try selling it too hard."

I stick my tongue out and waggle it.

written by Gligar on May 05, 2011 18:33

A lift

As the doors open, L4-O looks at the group. Joris-O seems to be licking the pallet truck. It tastes of metal. And dust. There's always dust.

L4-O tells John-R and the jackobot to keep an eye on Cryo-R. They need to find this medical bay.

He exits the lift, arriving in a RED lift hall, with one corridor leading off it. John-R decides to wait until the lift is clear before moving the pallet truck.

Cryo-R heads out of the lift, and through the lift hall. He seems to know the way. The jackobot follows him. Followed, finally, by John-R, who wheels the pallet truck out after him. Joris-O continues licking the truck.

Corridors in the Underplex

Mango-R inspects the door. It turns out to be a people door, with no signs that it's been used in a while.

He tries to open it. There's a handle right there, so he uses it. The door opens.

On the other side he finds a stairwell. He shines his PDC down there, but can't see the bottom.

Corridor (I Sublevel)

As the group walks, along with the InSec clones, the female answers, "We can take those off when we get back to the station. We still need to verify your story."

Jam-O suddenly remembers that he was talking on the PDC, and retrieves it. He tells Speed-Y about the little IntSec Thing.

As he does, he continues walking. Well, he kind of has to. Presently, he comes to a set of double doors: the IntSec station.

Cloning station (C Sublevel)

Speed-Y repeats what he said to Jam-O about the location of the debriefing room.

The RED tech mumbles, "The post-termination activity continues..." He types something into the console.

Joris-O apologizes, then sticks his tongue out, wagging it.

The tech notices, and sighs. "On the scanner, sir..." He waves it in the air in front of Joris-O. "If you will, sir..."

An alarm from the console distracts him.

Corridor (somewhere)

Leeroy-O claims that the docbot actually hit him, and demands medication. "What is the problem, citizen? Or should I simply administer a general anesthetic?"

written by Speeder on May 05, 2011 18:36

I look at the RED clone.

"Some clone refuse to die or something? His mind is travelling where it should not?"

As I hear the alarm...

"What was that?"

written by Megagun on May 05, 2011 19:09

"Just give me the gene--whoa wait. Argh. The pain is spreading throughout my body.. Whoa.."

⁴²⁸ MALKOM: (OOC: Those things in mini type about liveware were very funny, Gligar.)

I cradle my arm and start babbling incoherently. Suddenly, I jump at the docbot and start bashing at the operations console.

"Give me some strong anesthetic NOW!"

written by Lightning4 on May 05, 2011 19:59

I reluctantly follow Cryo and the rest of the group, since I have no better idea where it is anyway.

I look around while walking, checking for any important signs or important doors or such things.

written by Mingamango181 on May 05, 2011 20:45

Well... Going down, it seems.

I walk down the stairwell cautiously, and keep looking for a sign indicating a range or something similar. If I find a door of such a nature, I go through it, otherwise just taking the lowest door possible.

written by Malkom on May 05, 2011 21:26

In TransClone Space, Malkom-R watches through his portals as Mega-R-- or is it Leeroy-O-- being led away by R&D clones. Suddenly there's a disturbance, which seems to be centered on the clone station view-portal.

A sepulchral voice echoes out of the void... "It seems that the cloning technicians are attempting to disturb or modify TransClone Space, possibly with intent of extracting your consciousness. Sit tight. We have the situation under control."

The disturbance gets worse. Malkom-R feels faint, and feels the reality of TransClone Space slipping away from him. Then everything steadies and he resumes monitoring.

Several more citizens awaken in TransClone Space, apparently having been terminated at various locations around the complex. Malkom-R hears sepulchral voices bouncing around in the void.⁴²⁹

written by Cryoburner on May 05, 2011 23:03

I continue to the door to the recovery room, and if red clearance or below, open it and have a look inside. Otherwise, I just knock on a suitable knocking surface.

"Helloooooo!"

written by Gligar on May 06, 2011 00:50

Cloning station (C sublevel)

The RED tech answers, "No, the clone was terminated... but something's keeping his brain alive for far longer than normal. As such, there's still brain act- oh wait, there it goes."

The tech checks the alarm. "But I do have a MAC alert set for someone... I'll have to cross-reference this ID number..."

MAC Alerts, Speed-Y remembers, occur when two clones from the same clone family are active at the same time.

Over in one of the cloning tanks, a clone has been growing. It looks to be about ready to decant... yes, there it goes.

⁴²⁹ MALKOM: When will my new clone be ready? Next turn? Please?

Malkom-R-TLK-2 is deposited, shivering and slimy, on the floor near his cloning tank.

Corridor (somewhere)

Leeroy-O asks for the general anesthetic... but then says his pain has got worse. He starts bashing the bot's control panel, causing its chainsaw to pop out.

"Stop that!" the docbot demands, while it injects a syringe into Leeroy-O.

Leeroy-O presently ceases to feel anything. But that's okay. Everything's just excellent. He's going to be a test subject, that's just awesome!

He falls silent, with a big grin on his face. He kind of wants to fall asleep...

Corridor (H Sublevel)

Cryo-R leads the group down the corridor, stopping at a door. He knocks on it, seeing as it's marked ORANGE.

While they were walking, L4-O spotted another door, one marked "Medical Services 45-8618".

Cryo-R's door is opened from the inside by a docbot. It looks like it has had its chainsaw removed.

"Oh, it is you," the docbot replies. "What do you want?"

Recovery room

Behind it, a clone seems to have finished filling in some paperwork, which sits on a desk in front of him. The clone's name is Azir-R-GNS-1. That's about all he remembers.

He stands, confused at what to do next.

written by Jam on May 06, 2011 01:11

"Oh, good, we're here..."

I turn back to my PDC...

"Okay, I'll tell L4-O... See you later, sir..."

I pause, then say one last thing....

"Oh, I think you should know, Joris-O hasn't died yet... Okay, that's all... Bye."

I terminate the call, then quickly call L4-O...

"Hello L4-O, this is Jam-O! I don't have long to talk, but Speed-Y called and said the Debriefing Room is on P Level in Central Subsector... Also, Malkom-R tried to attack me, so I had to terminate him... I've just got a quick IntSec interview to do, then I'll start heading back to you guys..."

written by Azirphaeli on May 06, 2011 02:37

I uh.. hmmm... where the heck.

Looks down

Well at least the paper works done!

Looks out past the robodoc looking fellow "Uh hey gents? Folks? Where do I turn these in?"

Holds up paperwork.

"Also, where the heck am I?"

written by Lightning4 on May 06, 2011 03:08

"Hmm. Right. Let's list off the things we need."

"We need a quick patch up if possible. My leg here was broken a while back, stiffened up by some other docbot who injected stuff into it. We've also got a clone here who is... not looking too well."

I motion to the mess on the pallet truck.

"And I seem to have a handcuff problem. Fellow troubleshooter seemed to have trouble operating them..."

I hold up my hands.

"We're in kind of a rush to Debriefing Room 27... would you happen to know where that is? It's somewhere in central subsector I'm sure..."

I pause for a moment.

"Also... you know this nuisance?"

written by Speeder on May 06, 2011 03:47

I stare a bit at the RED clone, then I look to Joris.

"Seemly your previous clone is still alive. This is not supposed to happen. Say... what is the last thing you remember before you died? Let's hope your last MemoMax copy was close enough to your death."

written by Malkom on May 06, 2011 03:48

Malkom-R watches his clone growing...

A sepulchral voice echoes out of the void. "Clone ready. Please prepare for memory removal."

A blinding white light flashes... my memories of the dark space slip away from me... reality closes in... and I wake up on the floor, covered in goo.

I struggle to my feet, trying to wipe the disgusting stuff off of myself. "Where on earth am I?" If I see anywhere I could clean myself off, I do so. I then put on a RED jumpsuit, if available, and take any equipment that might have been issued to me, and also fill out any forms I might need to. As fast as possible.

written by Mingamango181 on May 06, 2011 04:05

How far down does this set of stairs go?

...

I continue my way down, searching for the range.⁴³⁰

written by Megagun on May 06, 2011 11:50

"Heh heh heh heh... Inject me with a happiness medicine, eh? Ah, the irony. Ow! Still hurts though. Still funny though."

"So, where we's going?"

written by Cryoburner on May 06, 2011 12:46

"Oh, hello Doctor! I'm actually here about that R27. While we're here, I suppose they might benefit from some treatment as well though."

I point toward the group of maimed but most definitely not dead clones accompanying me.

I then notice an unfamiliar clone, not much unlike all the other unfamiliar clones I've been encountering lately. This one appears to be standing though, quite possibly confused at what to do next.

"We're off to see The Computer. The wonderful Computer of Alpha Complex! The Computer is going to give us a briefing... or possibly a debriefing. Maybe both. There might be lunch afterward though. You should come with us if you like lunch."⁴³¹

written by Azirphaeli on May 06, 2011 13:02

Folds the papers gingerly and tucks them away.

claps hands

"Lunch! That's an idea I can get behind. Where exactly are we though?"

moves to join up with..

written by 4616599 on May 06, 2011 16:20

"Yep...it's almost as if my brain isn't quite right, like I'm having to share it with a more inefficient clone..."

I pause for a while, taking in what Speed-Y just said.

"Whoa! Uh, Cryo-R. Uh...yes"

"Yesh...not...looking.....well. But tasting." I flail around a bit on the pallet truck.

"Dust is a pleasant thing to taste, about. Dust is. Dust is. Dust is boot."

written by Gligar on May 06, 2011 20:23

IntSec station (I sublevel)

Jam-O notices that they've arrived, and turns back to his PDC. He says he'll tell L4-O... and by the way, the last Joris-O is still... alive.

He hangs up, and calls L4-O.

Recovery room (H level)

Azir-R continues looking confused. He doesn't know where he is, nor where to turn in his paperwork. Perhaps the newcomers would know?

L4-O outlines their situation. They need medical attention, and are in a rush.

Wait... the docbot knows Cryo-R?

⁴³⁰ SPEEDER: (ooc: Malkom do bureaucracy in atomic mode. 😊)

⁴³¹ CRYOBURNER: (Are we on H level, or H sublevel? These levels all look so similar. : 3)

It would appear so. Cryo-R is apparently there about an "R27". Though while he's here... everyone else needs patching up.

"So," the docbot replies, "it was you who filled out that form. It is you who caused me to lose efficiency as a docbot by causing my chainsaw to be removed for inspection. Perhaps you are now here to claim said chainsaw. Well, mister forms master, you are out of luck. The chainsaw is, by now, in the inspection depot, undergoing the inspection which you authorised."

While the docbot's attention is elsewhere, Azir-R folds up his paperwork and puts it away. He likes the idea of lunch.

The docbot turns back. "You are in the brainscrub recovery room, citizen. You were brainscrubbed for entering a high-clearance area after leaving Emergency Bunker C-3. Also, I will need those forms."

It turns back to the group. "Although I am technically outside the jurisdiction of Medical Services, I will agree to help you."

It first looks at L4-O. "Hmmm... it would appear that the substance is wearing off. You have been using this leg extensively. Your leg needs rest to heal. I can supply a cast if you wish."

It then notices the handcuffs. "I may be able to locate a key for those."

It then looks at Joris-O, who is mumbling something about tasting, and dust. It then backs away. "Stay back, citizens! You have a zombie."

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Speed-Y looks at the tech, then at Joris-O. He explains about his previous clone. What's the last thing he remembers?

Over among the tanks, Malkom-R gets to his feet, unsure where he is. He looks around, and, noticing the showers, enters one.

And naturally, the showers decide to take their own sweet time running through the cycle. Just when he wants to get everything done right away...

Joris-O says that his brain isn't quite right, as if he's sharing it...

Then Speed-Y's words hit him. That's... whoa.

He recovers enough to say that he remembers Cryo-R.

Stairwell

Mango-R keeps descending. Finally he reaches the bottom, and finds another door. This one's already open.

The air is prickly down here.

Corridor (somewhere)

Leeroy-O finds it funny that the docbot would just use a happiness medicine. He still hurts, but it's funny now. He wants to know where they're going.

One of the techs answers, "We're almost at the laboratory, it's just down here. It's a good thing we found you, docbot. We'll need your assistance with this one."

"Of course," the docbot replies, and falls in behind them as they move off.

After a moment, the group reaches an open door.

written by Megagun on May 06, 2011 20:28

"You need his assistance? Oh maan.. That's even MORE IRONIC. If you know what I mean.. Haha.. Oh, hey. Stop tickling me. Aiie. Stop it! No, really! Hahahaa, stop it! Heehee, no! I can't stand tickling, Hohoho!"

written by Azirphaeli on May 06, 2011 20:30

"So are they sandwich-- er.."

I stop as the docbot mentions we should stay back because there's a zombie.

"You know, I'm just going to.. leave these here.."

I place the folded paperwork on the desk I was sitting at and back up a bit.

"I am hungry, but I don't want anything to do with some zombie..."

written by Lightning4 on May 06, 2011 21:47

"Hmm. Yeah, a cast will do nicely."

I hear it's reaction to Joris.

"A zombie? Great... so that means he did die... what do we do with him?"

I squeeze into the room to get away from the zombie.

written by Mingamango181 on May 06, 2011 21:54

This feels like the place. Is there any advice you would give, ???-? ?

...I'd go on about being careful, but since that's radiation, there isn't much either of us can do about it. Just be quick.

I go through the door, and take a quick, but detailed assessment at the corridor/passage/range/room that I'm in.

written by Malkom on May 06, 2011 23:09

I hurriedly bolt out of the showers as soon as they are finished, grab a jumpsuit and any assigned equipment, and struggle into said jumpsuit while trying to fill out any forms there might be, as fast as I can.

written by Speeder on May 06, 2011 23:37

I look at Joris.

"I dunno what is worse, Cryo or Malkom..."

Then I notice Malkom running around.

"Oh, there he is... Seemly, he is STILL problematic..."

I look again at Joris and then the RED clone.

"So, what we do about it? Seemly his previous clone is alive, yet his previous clone died... Oh no... Say, you that work here, undeads ARE real?"

written by Jam on May 07, 2011 00:46

I wait for L4-O to answer his PDC, somewhat impatiently, but definitely not unhappily...

While I'm waiting, I look at the IntSec clones a little closer...

written by Cryoburner on May 07, 2011 01:06

"Well, that's good news to hear! About the saw, not so much the zombie. I'm sure you wouldn't want your saw providing anything but mandatory levels of performance, and frequent inspections are key to maintaining the smooth operation of Alpha Complex! Say, you wouldn't happen to know where the inspection depot is, would you? Wait... Did you say zombie? Gasp!"

I back away from L4-O.

"Now that you mention it, he did try to lunge at me earlier. That does seem like something a zombie might do. He's been shambling around as though his legs were stiff, and in general has been looking mildly distressed for some time. What do you suggest we do about him?"

written by Gligar on May 07, 2011 01:47

Laboratory (somewhere)

Leeroy-O is led into the lab. He's still laughing at things, such as how they need a docbot, and how much he doesn't like being tickled (which seems to be the pain from before). He's laughing so much that he fails to notice the idea bot parked at the head of a reclined chair.

Nor does he notice the huge, spiky apparatus positioned such that it could swing down to where the head of a clone lying in the chair would be.

One of the techs says, "Okay, let's begin. Please lie in the chair. Pay no attention to the docb- oh brilliant. You had to go and do that? You could have asked for a bathroom break. I would fine you, but it won't matter anyway soon."

Recovery room (H level)

Azir-R starts to say something, but hears the docbot.

He puts the paperwork back on the desk, and states that he doesn't want anything to do with zombies.

L4-O accepts the offer of a cast, and promptly squeezes into the recovery room to get away from Zombie Joris-O.

The docbot says, "Let us deal with the cast first. If you would please lie on the table here..."

It is interrupted by Cryo-R, who insists that the inspection is for the good of the complex. You know, just to make sure that it's running at optimal efficiency. "I would be able to operate at a more optimal level of efficiency," the docbot replies, "if my chainsaw was not removed for inspection just after having received a full inspection! Now be silent while I work."

Cryo-R suddenly realises that everyone's talking about zombies, and suddenly decides that L4-O might be a zombie, since he's been "trying to hug him" and "shambling around as if his legs were broken". He's failed to realise that L4-O's leg is indeed broken.

L4-O suddenly realises that his PDC has been vibrating for the past minutecycle or so.

Armed Forces range observation room

Mango-R surveys the room. Well, what's left of it.

Much of the far wall has been destroyed, as has the room beyond, which is now nothing but a crater. Presumably, that crater was the range.

As mentioned, the air is prickly.

Chemical showers

Malkom-R's shower finishes its cycle. Malkom-R exits at a dead run, returning to the main station.

Cloning station (C Sublevel)

While Malkom-R grabs a RED jumpsuit and tries to put it on at top speed, Speed-Y wondoer who, out of Cryo-R and Malkom-R, is worse... oh, speak of the [CENSORED]...

He looks back at the tech. He wonders what they should do about Joris-O, since his Prime is still alive... yet it died?

Wait... that means that the undead exist! He asks the tech.

"It's true, sir," the tech replies. "But further information is need-to-know, restricted to Tech Services personnel. And R&D staff associated with... er, I don't know the project name..."

Meanwhile, Malkom-R is trying to fill out forms while still half-in-half-out of his jumpsuit. This is problematic, especially when his predicament causes him to trip and fall to the floor.

IntSec station (I sublevel)

Jam-O continues waiting for L4-O. He looks at the IntSec clones a little closer.

Said IntSec clones are starting to look a little impatient. "Are you going to stand there all day, or do we have to confiscate your PDC?"

written by Mingamango181 on May 07, 2011 02:18

I stop, and stare at the crater for a while.

"Wow... That's one large crater."

Indeed. That Tsar must have had quite some power...

I wasn't talking to you.

...

I look for a sufficiently safe way down into what remains of the range.

written by Speeder on May 07, 2011 02:29

I smile and say.

"Tech Services are awesome! I am Tech Services and proud of it.

I really wish some things, were run by Tech Services people, to avoid existence of people like Cryo, a CPU, currently RED, but probably a demoted YELLOW enforcer."

I return the PDC to the technician, and keep a eye on Malkom.

"I wonder, how to proceed with the undead case."

written by Lightning4 on May 07, 2011 03:07

"Huh? Oh. A call."

While lying down on the table, I answer my PDC.

"Hello? Who is it? Speed? Jam?"

written by Jam on May 07, 2011 13:15

"Hello L4-O, this is Jam-O! I don't have long to talk, but Speed-Y called and said the Debriefing Room is on P Level in Central Subsector... Also, Malkom-R tried to attack me, so I had to terminate him... I've just got a quick IntSec interview to do, then I'll start heading back to you guys... Well, I've got to go, but it was nice chatting with you! Bye."

I terminate the call, then turn to the IntSec clones.

"Okay, sorry about the delay... I'm ready now."

written by Megagun on May 07, 2011 13:22

I laugh and lie down in the chair

"This is going to be SO -ow- much fun! Hee hee hee!"

written by Azirphaeli on May 07, 2011 14:55

There's really not much I need to do right now, so I'll mainly watch the scene unfold.

I will turn to cryo and inform him the zombie is not the guy with the injured leg, but the person he's now standing very close to.

written by Malkom on May 07, 2011 15:12

I stand up and take the time to scabble totally into my jumpsuit before filling out the forms as fast as possible to do so while not making mistakes. Halfway through I decide to accost the techs, asking if there's any way to make sure that I'm absolutely clean and uncorrupted, and free from mutations.

written by 4616599 on May 07, 2011 15:48

"Zombie? Oh, that's new. But more interesting is the dust."

I mumble slowly and continue sampling the dust.

"I don't know. I believe I'm as unnerved as you are."

I grab the scanner, suddenly, and start sampl-er, furiously licking away at it.

"Isn't dust interesting?"

written by Gligar on May 07, 2011 16:53

Armed forces Range observation room

Mango-R stares at the crater, in awe over the apparent power of the Tsar.

He looks for a way down. There is a ladder, but it looks like the lower section has been destroyed.

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Speed-Y HAPPILY identifies himself as Tech Services. He adds that it would be better if more was controlled by Tech Services. Things like being able to ensure that clones like Cryo-R don't exist.

The tech replies, "Well, we don't get that choice, sadly. YELLOWpants enforcers will continue to exist, because they always return good reports. Oh, thanks." He accepts his PDC. "Though I am surprised that you say one might have been demoted..."

Speed-Y asks about the undead thing. "Well, from what I remember, zombies are kept alive through nanomachines. So you need to shut those off.

"The question I have is... where did the nanomachines come from...?"

Malkom-R manages to work out his jumpsuit and fill in his forms. He then accosts the tech and demands to know if he's clean of mutations. "Are you saying that you doubt the cloning system? You know, doubts are a sign of unhappiness, and happiness is... well, you know.

"But if you want to be certain, we do have a mutant scanner."

Joris-O grabs the scanner and licks it. Finally. The scanner beeps, attracting the tech's attention. "That'll do," he says, looking at the terminal. "There's enough there to verify that you're Joris-O."

Recovery room (H level)

L4-O is about to lie on the table when he realises that his PDC needs attention. He answers it while lying down.

It's Jam-O. He tells L4-O about the location of the debriefing room, and that Malkom-R was terminated. Jam-O will rejoin the team once he's finished with his interview. He hangs up.

The docbot says, "Right, let us begin." It rolls up L4-O's jumpsuit leg and starts applying a paste, which stings a little. It begins to dry after a moment. "Once I am done here," the docbot tells him, "you will need to stay off this leg until the cast completely dries."

Azir-R turns to Cryo-R and tells him that L4-O isn't the zombie. Zombie Joris-O is the zombie.

Speaking of Zombie Joris-O, he continues to sample the dust. He apparently finds it interesting.

Laboratory (somewhere)

Leeroy-O says that this is going to be fun.

"Indeed it is," one tech replies, as he straps Leeroy-O into the chair.

"Right, I think that does it. Docbot, will you watch him? We don't want to damage his mind too much, after all."

The other tech works a terminal. The spiky apparatus begins to swing down.

written by Speeder on May 07, 2011 18:20

I look at Joris for a while.

"Dust? What dust? What are you doing?"

I look at the RED clone.

"Zombies affect non-zombie clones that share the same mind?"

written by Jam on May 07, 2011 18:21

I put my PDC away, and smile while I wait for instructions from the IntSec clones...

"Oh, I don't think I ever got your names... I'm Jam-O, and this is Lucas-R..."

I gesture towards Lucas-R as I say his name.

written by Lightning4 on May 07, 2011 21:17

I address the rest of the team.

"Okay, the debriefing room is on P Sublevel in central subsector. We need to go there. Debriefing room 27. Jam was just letting me know where it was."

I turn to the docbot.

"Thanks. Hmm. Staying off will be hard. I do have a ladder functioning as a makeshift crutch, unless you have a better set of actual crutches for me. Or something like that..."

"And how long should the healing process take? And how long for the drying process?"

While talking to the docbot, I also pocket my PDC.

written by Megagun on May 07, 2011 21:39

"Heheheheeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeere we go!!"

written by Mingamango181 on May 08, 2011 00:23

I start climbing down. When I come to the lower section, I make a judgement of how far down I need to fall. Or drop. Or accelerate in towards the ground, if there is any ground to land on...

written by Cryoburner on May 08, 2011 02:03

"P Sublevel, you say? That sounds mighty suspicious, almost like something a zombie might say..."

"Doctor, does central subsector even have a P Sublevel? I get the impression he might be trying to trick us into heading away from the briefing, and ultimately lunch."

written by Gligar on May 08, 2011 02:53

Cloning station (somewhere)

Speed-Y looks at Joris-O. He wonders if zombified previous clones affect later clones while both are still active. The tech doesn't seem to know, "though apparently, they do".

IntSec station (I sublevel)

Jam-O puts his PDC away. Did the IntSec clones give their names? Either way, he introduces Lucas-R to them. The female IntSec answers, "I'm Janet-O-DLE, and this is Steve-O-SOG. This way, please..." She heads towards a door.

Recovery room

While the docbot works, L4-O addresses his team. He now knows the location of the debriefing room... but perhaps he misheard?

He tells the docbot that it will be difficult to comply, though he does have that ladder. He can use that, unless the docbot has crutches? "Regrettably, I do not," the docbot answers. "The paste should dry within a few minutecycles. Healing should take less than two weekcycles."

Of course, Cryo-R picks up on the location. He thinks P Sublevel is suspicious, "something that a zombie would say". He queries the docbot, who answers, "There is no P Sublevel in Central Subsector. There is, however, a P Level. It is possible that this citizen simply misheard his PDC call. And by the way, I can guarantee that he is not a zombie."

Laboratory (somewhere)

Leeroy-O enthusiastically awaits the spiky apparatus.

It stops just before it impacts his head, and extends a number of wires, which attach to his head, and burrow their way into his brain.

"Begin read cycle," instructs one of the techs. Leeroy-O starts to find it difficult to think.

Armed Forces Range observation room

Mango-R decides to head down.

Range ladder

Presently, he comes to the missing part. It must be several meters above the crater.

He takes a risk and drops. Ouch! He must have sprained an ankle from the fall.

Did I mention how prickly the air is?

written by Jam on May 08, 2011 03:48

I follow the IntSec clones, and do anything they ask me to do so long as it isn't treasonous... I also try to do it quickly, as I wouldn't want to cause any more delays...

written by Jam on May 08, 2011 17:33

"Well, to be honest, I needed him... Our troubleshooting team was going to reclaim the sector's reactor from the communists, and I thought it would be a bad idea to be shooting lasers right next to a nuclear reactor... We knew the communists would trust anyone that was with their former Director, so we took him with us to the reactor and successfully snuck in... From there, I prepared some Teasir spiked with Sleepy-Sleepy, and gave it to the communists... It worked perfectly, they didn't suspect a thing!

After they all fell asleep, we terminated them, then took a nuclear bomb they had taped to the reactor, brought it to an safe place, then tried to disarm it... I knew the communists would tell their Director the disarm code, so I tried to get it from the him. I was just telling our Team Leader when the bomb detonated, unfortunately with our Team Leader standing right next to it...

So, now that that I have no other use for him, I thought you might want to have a 'friendly chat' with him... So I brought him here... Also, I need to get these handcuffs off, and I thought you might want your locator tag back..."

written by Malkom on May 08, 2011 18:22

I grab any equipment that was assigned to me and turn to whoever told me there was a mutation scanner, with a big smile on my face. "Of course I'm happy, friend! I just want to be able to register any mutations I have!" I say in a high, excited voice. "Could you show me the scanner? I want to use it!"

written by Megagun on May 08, 2011 19:54

"Wheeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeee"

written by Lightning4 on May 08, 2011 20:52

"Ah. Okay."

I note the confused expression of Azir.

"Hm... Everything alright with you? You look confused or something."

written by Azirphaeli on May 08, 2011 21:31

"Yeah I'm fine, just adjusting to this place."

"Sides, I'm itching to get some lunch."

written by Gligar on May 09, 2011 01:44

Remains of the Armed Forces range

Mango-R protests as the radiation makes itself known. He looks around for a way out of the crater, but discovers that the only way would be back up the ladder.

Which is currently beyond Mango-R's reach.

He collapses to the floor.

Interview room

"I see..." She pulls out a notebook and writes something before turning to Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R. "You. What do you have to say for yourself?"

"Well, er, I don't know," is the reply. "If I was a Communist, I certainly don't remember it!"

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Malkom-R looks around for potential assigned equipment, notices the laser pistols, and takes one.

As he looks around, he notices that the ME card bot seems to have reappeared with more ME cards.

The tech answers, "Glad to hear it. I have to say, it's nice to see a clone so eager about getting himself tested."

He gestures to a piece of equipment resembling an archway. "Right through there, please."

Recovery room

L4-O notices Azir-R's confusion, and asks if everything's okay. Azir-R replies in the affirmative, saying he's just getting used to things. Also, he wants lunch. But it's still several hourcycles off!

(Shouldn't he already be used to Alpha Complex? 😊)

written by Speeder on May 09, 2011 01:54

I notice the new ME cards.

"Interesting."

I check to see whose are they.⁴³²

written by Malkom on May 09, 2011 02:44

I step into the archway. If I'm instructed to continue through or leave or do anything else, I do so. Otherwise, I just wait for something to happen, with a radiant smile on my face.

written by Lightning4 on May 09, 2011 08:33

I shrug and wait for the docbot to return with a key.

"Hm. Anyone have the time? I hope we make it there in time... don't want to be late. Tardiness is treason... even if it's for a good reason, I suppose."

From the table, I check what the zombie is doing... and how it looks.

"Hope that's not the brain eating kind of zombies. Though I'm not even sure those exist..."

written by Mingamango181 on May 09, 2011 09:29

As I fall down, I try to resist the radiation, hands still clutching my head.

"Ugh..h...h....."

There goes my voice again...

Sensing that my efforts are failing, I try to climb the crater itself out.

written by 4616599 on May 09, 2011 15:06

I continue licking.

⁴³² AZIRPHELII: (OOC: I recall that my memory was wiped or something, so I've been playing as if I didn't read anything from anything before I played. If this is not the case, let me know 😊)

"Mmmh. Out ta dust."

I glance at the nearby jackobot and if it's within range.

"Sal might haaav dust. Shud lick. Oh yesss indeed. Dust is, dust is good...!"

I lick Sal if possible.

"Hmmm. I still feel..."

I stumble around, bumping into the tech services.

"Sorry. Sal. Uh. I mean...I seem to be...perceiving a recovery room. There's a docbot and a new clone. L4-O seems to be talking about zombies! Ugh! Sal! Dust! Lick!"

I nearly lick the nearby clones.

"How odd. I'm now remotely detecting the pleasant taste of dust. Of all things." I stumble around, crashing into the same clone again.

written by Cryoburner on May 09, 2011 15:37

"Doctor, I think this clone needs dust! Oh, and he seems to be rather injured as well."

I then look up at the ceiling...

"Hmm... Straight up to P Level, you say? Well, I think we would need a saw for that. Say, on a totally unrelated note, might you know where the inspection depot may be found? I'm supposed to... um... inspect something there."

written by Gligar on May 09, 2011 18:42

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Speed-Y notices the new ME cards. He looks at them.

One seems to be for Malkom-R. The others are for other clones... Peter-B-BLT, Al-KAZ, Rapt-G-JDI, and others whose names he can't see.

Joris-O seems to be having problems. Disoriented, he bumps in to the tech. He reports seeing a recovery room, with the jackobot, L4-O, Cryo-R, and the others in that group. There's also a docbot and an unfamiliar clone.

He says that L4-O seems to be saying something about zombies

There's also an overwhelming taste of dust, which seems oddly pleasant.

The tech blinks in shock. "You... you're linked? That's not right!

He turns back to the terminal, looking at something. "There's... there are two inputs into your MemoMax backup. I'd expect that, but why are you seeing it, sir?

In the meantime, Malkom-R has rushed over to the archway, and has stepped in. As he does, a synthesised voice says, "Scanning... please wait..."

A beam of light is emitted from the archway, and proceeds to scan Malkom-R. It pauses, reverses direction, continues scanning, reverses direction again, and scans some more.

Suddenly it shuts off. The archway emits a pleasant beep and says, "Scan complete. Subject is clean."

Recovery room

L4-O is indeed talking about zombies. He hopes that Zombie Joris-O doesn't like to eat brains. Do those even exist? He's probably not cleared to know in any case.

He wonders what time it is. They do have an appointment, after all.

Out in the corridor, Zombie Joris-O is still licking duct. He shambles into the room and bumps into the jackobot. And decides to lick it. He doesn't find any dust, though.

The docbot returns through the door. It is carrying a key.

As it's about to use it to unlock L4-O's handcuffs, Cryo-R speaks. He says that Zombie Joris-O needs some dust. And still refuses to recognise that Zombie Joris-O is, well, a zombie.

The docbot stops in its tracks. "It is inside? This is bad. I could have held it off if I had my chainsaw," it says, shooting a Glare™ at Cryo-R.

Speaking of the chainsaw, Cryo-R says that he'd need one to get to P Level. And by the way, where's the inspection depot?

"In an area that is beyond your clearance," replies the docbot.

Laboratory (somewhere)

The apparatus continues sucking information out of Leeroy-O's brain.

It's strange... Leeroy-O almost feels like he's in two places at once...

And then everything goes dark.

Crater where the Armed Forces Range used to be

Mango-R tries to climb out of the crater. The radiation doesn't make it easy. Pieces of his flesh come away as he painfully makes his way up, trying to reach the ladder...

...he's able to briefly touch it before everything goes dark here as well.

Interview room

The IntSec clone continues writing things down. "Uh-huh," she says. "But I don't believe you."

written by Megagun on May 09, 2011 18:55

I wonder why someone turned off the lights. How inconvenient!

written by Malkom on May 09, 2011 19:02

I blow out my breath in a big sigh of relief. "Aaaah, it's wonderful to know that I don't have any mutations!" I say. I look for any spare barrels for my laser pistol, and generally just wait for something interesting to happen...

If anything nasty tries to attack me, I shoot it!

I sure hope that scanner is right... it isn't fresh from R&D or anything?

written by Speeder on May 09, 2011 19:02

I decide to wait for everyone to get prepared to go.

"Ok... Let's hope noone else dies, so we can proceed to debriefing."

I look at the RED technician.

"So... the zombie and the real Joris are sharing a MemoMax? Interesting... I wonder if we can use that... I mean, we can send the zombie to take a look, while the real Joris report stuff back to us. Although that is probably not safe..."

written by Azirphaeli on May 09, 2011 19:33

"Hmm.. chainsaws? This place sounds dangerous. I think I'll stick with you folks!"

I'll look and see disappointingly that a zombie is still apparently floating around. Still it doesn't seem to be dangerous..

written by Mingamango181 on May 09, 2011 21:01

I think I'll have that docbot now... I think as something rips away.

Yeah, right. I don't think that's going to happen. I'm sure you're not going to survive this...

written by Lightning4 on May 09, 2011 21:29

I hold up my hands to allow the docbot easier access to the handcuffs.

I overhear Azir.

"Huh? Sure, whatever, I guess. We're Troubleshooter Team Epsilon. I guess as long as you aren't a commie you can tag along. You're not a commie... are you?"

"Or any other secret society for that matter? Not that anyone would ever reveal their secret society..."

written by Azirphaeli on May 09, 2011 22:29

"I can assure you with 115% certainty I am not a commie and don't belong to the Illuminati or anything."

"Since I don't know what I am supposed to be doing I might as well make myself useful here and help you guys out."

written by Jam on May 09, 2011 23:27⁴³³

I look at Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R, with an expression of disbelief.

"Wow... I don't believe it! You are such a liar! 'Don't remember it', you say? It didn't seem that way a few minutecycles ago when you were gloating and claiming the Tsar couldn't be disarmed... Did you really think I'd believe you? I bet you enjoyed it when I dug into your mind and took the code by force... And that is gentle compared to what I could do to you... I'd assure you, if I did my worst, you'd be begging for us to terminate you..."

written by Cryoburner on May 10, 2011 01:35

"Maybe we should give him some dust."

I look around for any dust.

written by Gligar on May 10, 2011 03:08

Laboratory (somewhere, thermal imaging)

"Frag it!" exclaims one of the techs. "Why does there have to be a power fluctuation now, of all times?! Will that affect the transfer?"

Leeroy-O is still conscious. He thinks the power fluctuation is inconvenient.

The idea bot speaks, with that mechanical voice. "Analysis: the power distribution grid installed within the laboratories is insufficient to handle the energy requirements of the memory transfer. Suggestion: increase available power by deactivating non-essential systems."

"I'm sure I wouldn't have thought of that in a million yearcycles," one tech says under his breath, as he moves to a panel.

A few moments (which seem like an age) later, the lights come back on. "There we go."

The transfer continues. Soon, Leeroy-O loses consciousness as his mind empties.

Not long after that, the apparatus swings down and crashes into his head, cracking the skull.

"Phase One complete," the idea bot intones. Phase Two in progress--"

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Malkom-R is relieved that he's not a mutant. He looks for any spare barrels, but finds none. OH well. He waits for something to happen.

Speed-Y also waits, this time for everyone to get ready.

He turns his attention to the zombie problem. Perhaps, if both Joris-Os are using the same MemoMax archive, they could put it to use.

The tech answers, "Ordinarily, that wouldn't work, sir... but in this case, there is the unexplained mental link. I don't know why it's there, but it is." He tries to look something up on the terminal. "Hmmm... information is restricted, but I can't read the clearance."

Recovery room

L4-O holds up the handcuffs while the docbot unlocks them.

Azir-R decides that the situation is dangerous, and decides to tag along with the Troubleshooters.

He sees the zombie still here and looks disappointed. But at least it's not dangerous. It's just hungry, right? Right?

L4-O introduces the team to Azir-R. As long as he's not a Commie Mutant Traitor, or a member of a secret society (not that anyone would admit to being any of those), he's welcome.

⁴³³ JAM: (ooc: gasp It's [DFSR]!)

Azir-R assures L4-O that he isn't. Strangely, he mentions [CENSORED] by name. How does he know that name?

Cryo-R suggests dust. At least it's not bells, or pens, or light fixtures, or rubble, or "candies" or lunch, or lift buttons, or idea bots, or chainsaws...

He looks around for some but there seems to be little of it left. What will Zombie Joris-O do when it's all gone? Move on to other food sources?

Crater where the armed Forces Range used to be (thermal imaging)

Mango-R continues to lose flesh under the radiation. His eyes are next.

The radiation begins to fog the spybot's camera.

Mango-R's thoughts turn to reactor shielding duty: so this is what it's like. (What, you thought it was a euphemism?)

Fortunately, he doesn't have to endure much more.

Interview room

Jam-O expresses his disbelief at Forusixonesixfiveninenine-R. After what he said about the Tsar, and after Jam-O probed him, to claim that he doesn't remember? Outrageous!

"Maybe your power is not truly under your control," the ex-Director replies.

"Hold it!" the IntSec clones demands. "What exactly is this 'Tsar'?"

written by Malkom on May 10, 2011 04:28

I suddenly realize that people are talking about... zombies? "What is a zombie? Could it be some weird new kind of mutant? Is [i]he[i] a zombie?" I point at Joris-O, hand on my laser pistol. "If not, who is?" I back nervously away from the clones, towards the techs, keeping my right hand on my laser pistol, or my left hand on it if I'm left-handed.

written by Mingamango181 on May 10, 2011 06:36

I may be unable to communicate with you for a while. I'm sure you'll be glad to be rid of my company for a while...

You'll come back, right?

Whenever it happens.

I let myself drift off. Here it goes again...

written by Lightning4 on May 10, 2011 09:25

"The what? Don't be silly man. That's just a conspiracy theory. Nobody believes they really exist..."

I notice my cuffs have been undone.

"Thanks. If you don't mind, I'll hold onto these. Might need them later."

If it lets me, I pocket the handcuffs for later use.

"Though I might use them sooner than later."

I shoot a glare over at Cryo, who probably doesn't even notice. I shake my head and prep my ladder-piece for use as a crutch again.

written by Speeder on May 10, 2011 11:14

I look at Malkom, then state with a cold voice.

"The zombie is Joris-O-1, if you shoot anyone here in this room, I will consider you a traitor and terminate you. Be aware, that the reason your previous clone was terminated, was for attacking Jam-O, while he was talking with me with the PDA"

I turn to the RED tech.

"Yep, the thing that made me worried over the PDA call is this guy"

I point to Malkom.

written by Azirphaeli on May 10, 2011 13:27

"Huh? Oh of course, I am just using their name as an example since it's so easily recognized is all."

"Looks like nearly everything's wrapped up here. Troubleshooters, eh? I can't wait to see some troubles get shot."

written by 4616599 on May 10, 2011 13:47

"Gah. Must have Sal.."

I grab Sal and try to ride it.

I stumble around again.

"Help! Get me off the jackobot!"

I lurch forward, accidentally slamming both arms into a tech.

"Oops. Apologies sir."

I come to again and regain my balance.

"Malkom-R? Are you going to suggest dust, like Cryo-R? Wait, what?"

written by Gligar on May 10, 2011 19:51

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Malkom-R realises that he doesn't even know what a zombie is, and thinks it to be some kind of mutant. He is suddenly suspicious that he might be in a room with a whole bunch of zombies.

Speed-Y explains, coldly, that they're referring to Joris-O-DNK-1, the deceased previous clone of Joris-O-DNK-2, who is in the station with them. Shooting Joris-O or anyone else in the room will only get Malkom-R terminated. He adds to the tech that Malkom-R is the cause of his worries during that PDC call earlier.

"I see," the tech replies. Turning to Malkom-R, he adds, "A zombie is a deceased clone, re-animated by nanomachines, I believe. They have nothing to do with mutants. There are persistant rumours of them eating brains, but they're usually suppressed within hourcycles (as are those who spread the rumour)..."

Joris-O seems to be having more problems with his own zombie. He stumbles around, apparently believing that he's riding a jackobot in the recovery room, but quickly snaps out of it.

He looks at Malkom-R, and asks if he's going to suggest dust. Apparently, Cryo-R is also suggesting dust.

But this confuses him even more.

Meanwhile, a cloning tank has fired up, and is growing a clone.

The ME Card bot begins rolling over to investigate, almost bumping into Malkom-R. "Excuse me."

Recovery room

L4-O points out that the [CENSORED] are just a conspiracy theory. One that refuses to go away, despite repeated brainscrubs for all those involved. Even mentioning the name is grounds for a reprimand from on high. But then, this is true for all such theories and other rumours.

He asks the docbot if he can keep the handcuffs.

It looks over at Cryo-R, who is still searching for dust, and says, "I would be in violation if I said that you have no use for them."

L4-O sees it as well. He puts them away and pulls out his length of ladder.

Azirr-R says he just used them as an example. Is everyone ready?

Zombie Joris-O is not. It is indeed riding a jackobot, which seems to be doing its best to dislodge its passenger. "I do not recall accepting a directive reassignment to transbot duty..."

written by Malkom on May 10, 2011 20:37

I pale at the explanation of zombies. "How... horrible!" After a moment composing myself, I remind everyone that we have a debriefing to attend-- don't we?⁴³⁴

written by Mingamango181 on May 10, 2011 20:57

I cough a bit, unsure as to what's going on.

written by Speeder on May 10, 2011 22:02

I go check the just activated cloning tank.

"How we know the name of this clone? It is another clone of my team, thus causing another delay?"

written by Lightning4 on May 10, 2011 22:38

"I guess we're ready to go then. Thanks for the assistance, docbot."

I steady myself on my crutch and try to keep my cast from contacting anything.

⁴³⁴ MALKOM: (EDIT: (ooc: What are 'perversity points', and what can I use them for?))

"Now what should we do with the zombie... take him with or just leave him here?"

I slowly and carefully make my way towards the exit.

written by Jam on May 10, 2011 22:41

"Oh, the Tsar is the nuclear bomb the commies tried to use to blow up the sector's reactor... That huge explosion that shook the sector a few minutecycles ago was the Tsar exploding, luckily in a safe place..."

I turn to the ex-Director...

"Not under my control? Really?"

I turn to Lucas-R.

"You've seen what I can do, haven't you, Lucas-R? Remember that time a weekcycle ago when that commie tried to attack me? Why don't to tell the Director about all the horrible things I did to that clone, right before he terminated himself..."

I wink at Lucas-R, so that the Director can't see (It doesn't matter if the IntSec clones see, though) Then I turn back to the IntSec clones...

"Unless you'd rather we just move on to the next question? I still have that debriefing to get to..."

written by Azirphaeli on May 10, 2011 22:46

I make a mental note not to mention them anymore and move to follow L4-O.

written by Gligar on May 11, 2011 01:57

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Malkom-R pales as the tech explains about zombies.

But he recovers, and reminds everyone about the debriefing.⁴³⁵

Speed-Y goes over to investigate the active clone tank. He sees the clone as it forms. The features are still indistinct.

He wonders who it is.

Over at the terminal, the tech hears him, and checks his terminal. "It seems to be a... 'Mango-R-NHG-3'. Cause of death is... er... massive radiation exposure. Wow, that's a lot of radiation."

Crater where the Armed Forces Range used to be

There doesn't appear to be any movement from here.

In fact,... yes. All I can detect is a decomposing -- and disintegrating -- corpse.

I don't think any nanomachines present would be able to re-animate that.

⁴³⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: Perversity points can be used to affect the outcome of... well, lots of things. Say you were approaching an IntSec checkpoint while carrying something illegal. You could use one or more perversity points to try to make sure IntSec didn't detect it.

You could also use them to try to affect someone else 😊)

Laboratory (somewhere)

Leeroy-O regains consciousness.

He feels kind of... cold. He can't seem to feel his limbs. And he can't see for some reason.

The reason for that last one becomes clear a moment later, when the lab is flooded with light.

That mechanical voice, now seeming to come from all around him, intones, "Phase Two complete. Liveware operational and stable."

"Ah, you're... awake. How are you feeling?" asks the voice of one of the techs.

Recovery room

L4-O believes they're now ready to go.

Well, except for Cryo-R, who is still looking for dust, and Zombie Joris-O, who is still trying to hold on to the jackobot.

L4-O wonders what they should do with the zombie. The docbot suggests trying to destroy it. "Allowing a zombie -- especially one with a gaping hole in its chest -- to roam the corridors unchecked could spell disaster. We do not know exactly how dangerous this one is. It could start... no, I have said enough."

L4-O makes his way out. The jackobot and Azir-R follow him. Predictably, Cryo-R fails to see them.

Interview room

Jam-O explains the nature of the Tsar. "I wondered what that shaking was."

He refutes the ex-Director's claims about his powers, asking Lucas-R to back him up, suggesting he tell the ex-Director about an event that supposedly happened a weekcycle ago.

He does, of course, remember to wink at Lucas-R.

Lucas-R turns slightly pale, as if he's thinking about something unpleasant. "You don't mean... that one who ended up with his brain leaking out of his ears, do you? I still get unhappy over that one."

The IntSec clone doesn't seem happy, either. "Enough, before someone loses their breakfast. But are you really capable of that? I can never tell with you mutants."

written by Speeder on May 11, 2011 02:09

I facepalm.

"So... another one of my team died... I guess we have to wait more... Wait, what? Radiation? Lots of it? You mean, more radiation than what you get on a reactor?"

written by Jam on May 11, 2011 02:32

"Oh, of course! Do you want me to demonstrate on the Director? He certainly seems like he's asking for it..."

I turn to the Director, and smile, hopefully in a sadistic way... I take a step towards him...

"I know you're lying... How about I torture you until you admit everything? I'm sure that will be fun... Well, fun for me at least..."

I laugh softly, and continue smiling at him...

written by Mingamango181 on May 11, 2011 10:17

Well... Sorry I'm late. Had to grab something to eat.

Huh...?

Oh right. Let me explain where you are now. The team is in close proximity with you as in, the same room. Just co-operate with them for now... Until you can get away.

written by Lightning4 on May 11, 2011 10:25

I look at the zombie.

"Hm. I'll confer with my team I suppose. We'll take him with us, if he shows the slightest hint of doing something dangerous, he'll be terminated."

"We'll probably just terminate him anyway when we get there." I shrug.

I carefully make my way back towards the lift.

"Well then, let's go. P level awaits. Keep an eye on that zombie, if it does something bad, it gets the zap."

written by Megagun on May 11, 2011 13:27

I flail my arms (if I have any) around wildly, yelling "EX-TER-MINATE! EX-TER-MINATE!"

After a while of flailing my arms around wildly, I burst out laughing.

"Ha ha ha ha. Should've seen your faces! Hee hee hee!"

written by Azirphaeli on May 11, 2011 13:33

As I follow L4-O, I check my pockets and look for anything I could conceivably use to defend myself in the event the zombie goes berserk.

written by Cryoburner on May 11, 2011 14:49

Noticing that everyone appears to be leaving, I decide to leave as well...

"Thank you Doctor! Your service has been commendable, as always!"

I hurry into the corridor and over to the lift, and begin rapidly pressing the lift's call button once I get there.

"To the debriefing room!"

written by 4616599 on May 11, 2011 16:38

I mildly detect some words being spoken.

"Say...innards could be dusty!" I mumble.

I continue riding on Sal for a while, trying to lick the manipulators and any other convenient parts...

I start licking Speed-Y.

"Oh! Apologies sir!"

I try to wipe it, but the ME card bot somehow seems distracting, and I chase after it...

"Looks like I'll have to get used to this. I don't know how much control I have over...ermm, number one, ex-one. This is awkward on so many sectors."

written by Speeder on May 11, 2011 16:46

I blink and look at Joris.

"Why your zombie is licking things anyway? It is almost like you always wanted to lick things but refrained to do so while alive."

written by Gligar on May 11, 2011 19:26

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Speed-Y facepalms. That seems to be his signature move.

Wait... did the tech say radiation? How big is massive?

"Yes sir. Huge levels, at least according to the reading on here. It's not telling me how high, but there's four skull marks next to it. Four... wow."

A message box appears on his terminal. "Wait, what? How can there be MemoMax activity when the clone hasn't had it's liveware downloaded yet? I... guess it might be more PTLA... I'm going to have to report this."

Speed-Y becomes aware that Joris-O is licking him. Joris-O realises, and tries to wipe off the drool... before being distracted by the ME card bot. Her chases after it...

"And I'll have to report the zombie as well..." muses the tech. "This isn't my daycycle."

Speed-Y blinks at L4-O. Why now? It kind of looks like L4-O always wanted to lick things... and now his zombie is acting out that desire...

Interview room

"Oh, no, no, that won't be necessary," the IntSec clone says hurriedly. She produces some keys and moves to unlock Jam-O's handcuffs. As she does, Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R eyes the exit.

Recovery room

L4-O exits, eyeing the zombie as he does. Time to go!

Corridor (H Level)

Azir-R and Cryo-R fall in behind L4-O. Azir-R is checking his pockets, just in case Zombie Joris-O decides to go berserk. Sadly, he doesn't have anything that could be of use, just his PDC and ME card.

Cryo-R runs on ahead, stopping at the lifts. He mashes a call button, not noticing that the lift is already here.

The jackobot decides it's had enough of being licked, and mildly electrifies its manipulators. Just as the zombie licks them. Zzzzt.

Laboratory (somewhere)

Leeroy-O seems right at home. He realises that he's ow inside the idea bot, and tries to frighten the techs. One seems to jump right out of his skin. The other just mumbles, "Where's my sonic screwdriver when I need it?"

The first answers, "Whew! That was frightening. But... what was that you said, sir?" he adds, to the other tech. "It sounded kind of treasonous somehow..."

written by Speeder on May 11, 2011 19:35

I turn to the tech.

"I dunno, but AFTER we finally saved the sector and finished our mission, things go wrong.

I mean, we needed to reboot the comonode, and until that point, everything, well, except for Cryo, went fine, then we needed to retake the reactor, then bizarre things started to happen to the team, then we had to get rid of a nuke, then EVEN MORE bizarre things happened, and after I DID get rid of the nuke and getting vaporized with it, I get a zombie, and a clone that decided to die of radiation, probably by visiting my non-existant remains..."

I wait for Mango... I stare at his tank.

"I really wonder what happened to him, what make someone suicide in a recently exploded nuke?"

written by Azirphaeli on May 11, 2011 19:42

Hmm...

As I board the lift with the team, I re-familiarize myself with the PDC and it's functions.

written by Megagun on May 11, 2011 20:48

"Hehehe. I can tell you haven't watched many episodes of Mandatory Team Troubleshooter! Bots without Asimov circuitry yell 'EXTERMINATE, EXTERMINATE' all the time in that show! I think it was meant as a way to let clones know that bots without working Asimov circuitry are considered to be treasonous, and have to be terminated on sight. Erm. Are my Asimov circuits being diagnosed as fully-working? I don't want to get terminated by some clone who doesn't understand that I'm part of a revolutionary experiment in bot-clone stuff!

Also, is there anything you still need me for, or can I proceed towards my debriefing? I don't think I have much time left.."

written by Mingamango181 on May 11, 2011 21:05

I wait for whatever process is going on to finish.

...Testing, testing...Six four seven nine nine one five two. The computer is good. Treason equals termination.

written by Lightning4 on May 11, 2011 22:41

I get on the lift along with Cryo and begin waiting for everyone else to file on. If everyone is here, I press the button for P level.

"Sorry Sal, just keep track of him for now. It's not like we can threaten him with weaponry... he seems rather... preoccupied with you right now."

written by Cryoburner on May 12, 2011 00:12

I press the call button a few more times, just to make sure it's sufficiently pressed, then board the lift. I proceed to re-familiarize myself with Azir-R's PDC and its functions.⁴³⁶

written by Jam on May 12, 2011 01:01

I notice Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R eyeing the exit, but don't say anything...

Also, I raise the handcuffs that are linking me to Lucas-R, so that the IntSec clone can hopefully unlock those first...

"Does this mean the interview is over? I do have one last thing that I'd like to say outside, if that's okay..."

written by Gligar on May 12, 2011 02:22

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Speed-Y tells the tech that the team's had to deal with weird stuff as well. Strangely, it only started after they rebooted the compnode...

He stares at Mango-R's tank for a while. The clone looks to be completely formed, and twitches as memories are pumped into it. He wonders what happened down there... what exactly possessed Mango-R to go and die at ground zero of a nuclear explosion...

"So it's not just me," the tech says, looking relieved.

Malkom-R looks around for L4-O, but realises that he's on the wrong level.⁴³⁷

A lift

Everyone piles onto the lift (though not before Cryo-R can mash the call button a few times). As he enters, Azir-R checks out his PDC, re-familiarising himself with the call, messaging, AlphaNet, and camera features. He doesn't seem to have any apps on there. He realises that Cryo-R is looking over his shoulder as he looks at all this.

L4-O presses the P button, closing the lift's doors, tells the jackobot that it'll have to look after Zombie Joris-O for now. "If you insist," it replies.

Laboratory (somewhere)

"We still have motor calibration to do, but that could be done en-route. Yes, we're coming with you.

"And what's this about Mandatory Team Troubleshooter? You seem to be watching the older ones."

⁴³⁶ CRYOBURNER: (By the way, a stats page with more detailed info on characters and their inventories can be found here. It's updated whenever Gligar gets to it, so it's sometimes not 100% current. Perhaps that should be linked to in the first post?)

⁴³⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: L4-O is up on H Level, Malkom. You really should keep track of where everyone is. ☺)

Interview room

The IntSec clone notices the ex-Director eyeing the door, and says, Nice try."

Jam-O holds up his and Lucas' handcuffs. The IntSec unlocks those as well.

She heads for the door, and requests that another clone take custody of the ex-Director, before gesturing for Jam-O and Lucas-R to follow.

written by Malkom on May 12, 2011 03:48

"Weird stuff?" I look confused. I then go up to Speed-Y and tap him on the shoulder. "Excuse me, could you tell me about this 'weird stuff' business?"

I still try to stay away from Joris-O. If he's linked to a zombie, I don't think I want anything to do with him.

After getting an answer, or if I don't, I go over and ask the techs where I can find a PDC for myself. Good thing I still have all those game backups on my RED-clearance netstorage account. I won't have to redownload them; I can just get playing! I also get a pair of the kind of earplugs you use for suppressing sound, if possible. "I don't want to be deafened by some bot or anything. I'll be much happier if I can hear, and everyone knows that happiness is mandatory. Got any earplugs?"

I also follow everyone if we leave for the briefing.

written by Mingamango181 on May 12, 2011 08:30

...Testing complete. Testing complete? What nonsense. At the very least, I'm working. Let's see before I forget. Huge levels of radiation. I suspect the structural integrity to be unstable. Someone seems to have been there before me, as I was able to see the results of the Tsar's explosion.

written by Lightning4 on May 12, 2011 09:29

I decide to spend the time by fiddling with my PDC some.

Seemingly unhappy with my PDC's default ringtone, I attempt to change it to something more... festive.

"Let's see... Fun Time Day jingles, B3 Holiday jingles, [REDACTED] Day jingles... ah, here we go! All Hail Computer Day jingles!"

written by Megagun on May 12, 2011 10:11

"Oh, I'm rewatching older episodes. You know, there's a lot of hidden plot details in these old episodes, once you know everything that's going to happen in later episodes. It's quite awesome, really!

Either way, let's go. Just make sure that you're getting behind some kind of cover whilst inside the debriefing room. I suspect that it might get a little bit messy!"

I head off towards the elevators again, if I can remember where they are. If I can't remember, I'll go and search for some kind of map. Whilst en-route, I try to figure out what I can do with my new bot body.

written by Speeder on May 12, 2011 11:11

I look at Malkom for a while.

"You want know what is weird stuff? Well, maybe some Death Leopard sabotaging radiation suits? Mango being attacked by a psychic cl... oh, I get it now what happened to him..."

I look at Mango.

Then I look at Malkom again.

"And YOU are weird stuff... You showed up from nowhere, with me having no idea on how you reached us, and the only thing you did so far was act bizarrely, disliking algae, disliking mutants, disliking bots, and attacking Jam, that led to your termination... oh wait!"

I start to stare at Malkom, and eye him entirely, like if trying to figure what his body was made of or something.

"You are one of those nutjobs that think we should check the world outside, aren't you? One of those crazy people that hate everything in Alpha Complex and only want to live naked in some grassland outside? I mean, what you people call grassland, I never saw one, so I have no idea what a grassland is, except it is supposed to be green... It must suck, since not even me that is YELLOW can not cross it..."

written by Azirphaeli on May 12, 2011 12:19

I start to slow down and eventually put away the PDC as I feel Cryo staring intently at it for whatever reason. Not before I glimpse the last received/dialed calls list and contacts.

written by Jam on May 12, 2011 12:20

I follow the IntSec clone.

Once we're out of earshot of the ex-Director, I speak to the IntSec clone...

"I should let you know, I've only been a mutant since about an hourcycle ago... I was just trying to scare the Director into admitting that he was a communist, and as far as I know, I can't make clones' brains explode out their ears, or anything like that... Though I guess I haven't actually tried..."

...

"Oh, you wanted this locator tag back too?"

written by Cryoburner on May 12, 2011 16:16

I stare even more intently, paying special attention to any last received/dialed calls lists or contacts that may appear.
O_O

"Say, are you using that right now? I think mine may have been stolen... by pickpockets."

written by Azirphaeli on May 12, 2011 16:37

"I am sure whoever we're working for here can issue you a suitable replacement."

I gently put the PDC away for now, but keep my hand in the pocket.

written by Malkom on May 12, 2011 17:06

I reply indignantly to Speed-Y. "Who, me? I don't even know what you're talking about. And if I did it would probably be beyond our clearance. I told you, the Computer sent me to join your Troubleshooting team. I'm sure it'd be happy to confirm this." I continue trying to find a PDC.

written by 4616599 on May 12, 2011 17:57

"Huh. Lights. No damage."

I wonder if I can be harmed by zapping. Not seemingly feeling too much pain, I continue licking the manipulators, paying particular attention to texture.

—

I shiver vigorously.

"Ow! Speaking of weird stuff... I'm literally feeling...shocked. Ex-clone me seems to be; ...YOW!"

written by Gligar on May 12, 2011 19:56

Cloning station (C sublevel)

A confused Mango-R asks Speed-Y what he means by "weird stuff". He looks at Joris-O warily.

Speed-Y replies that he's talking about things like Death Leopard sabotaging radiation suits. Things like Mango-R running off to get killed after being hit by a psychic attack (oh wait, that would explain it). Things like... Malkom-R appearing out of nowhere, only to dislike pretty much everything!

Speed-Y bets that Malkom-R is one of those crazies who want to go and live Outside, away from the Computer, where there is something called "grassland". Whatever that is. Speed-Y only knows that it's GREEN Clearance.

Meanwhile, Mango-R is deposited on the floor of the cloning station, his decanting complete.

Mankom-R says, somewhat disrespectfully, that he already told Speed-Y why he's here. He continues looking for a PDC, even asking the tech. The tech just replies, "You'll need to talk to PLC about getting a replacement."

Joris-O seems to be having problems. It that seems that Zombie Joris-O is being electrocuted, and the pain is being transmitted to him and not his zombie self.

The tech's eyes go wide.

A lift

Speaking of PDCs, L4-O is playing with his. He looks through the ringtones for a more perfect one, He eventually settles on an All Hail Computer Day jingle.

Azir-R notices Cryo-R looking at his PDC, and lowers it as he has a look at the contact list and call logs.

This just causes Cryo-R to look even closer at Azir-R's PDC, his face coming within 10cm of the screen as he looks at the contact list and call logs. However, it seems that neither are cleared to view the call log. As for the contact list, it seems to just include a few standard numbers -- that is, The Computer, Internal Security, Medical Services Emergency Docbot Line, and a PLC Depot delivery number.

Azir-R puts the PDC away, keeping his hand on it. He suggests that Cryo-R request that another PDC be issued to him.

Zombie-Joris-O apparently can't feel the jackobot's electrical poking. All he sees is pretty lights. And that his flesh is being burned. But he ignores that, instead continuing to lick its manipulators, taking in the smooth texture.

The jackobot seems to dislike this. It starts spinning its dome around, faster and faster and...

The lift continues to ascend.

Laboratory (somewhere)

Leeroy-O explains that he's rewatching old episodes. He likes how the older ones give you subtle clues about later episodes.

He then attempts to roll out. He seems to be having a problem with having, well, wheels, instead of legs, and ends up just spinning the front two.

Oh wait... what if he tries this?

Aha! That's movement.

Corridors (somewhere)

He heads back towards the lifts, with the techs in tow. One enters something into a control panel on the bot.

Internal Security Station (I sublevel)

Once they're out of earshot of the ex-Director, Jam-O explains to the IntSec that he was... shall we say, enhancing the truth slightly. He's only been registered for a couple of hourcycles, and hasn't had a chance to test the limits of his powers. He also reminds the IntSec about his locator tag.

"Oh yes," she answers, "let me find the key..."

She looks at the tag, and then at a keyring she pulls out of a packet. "Here we are."

She picks out a key, and attempts to unlock the tag. "Hmmm... not that one." She tries another. "Hmmm... nope." She tries a third. "Er... bear with me a secondcycle."

written by Mingamango181 on May 12, 2011 20:39

I follow the typical procedure, going right for the chemical showers, and not being distracted by anything else. I say nothing to anyone, and look away if they try to approach.

written by Lightning4 on May 12, 2011 20:49

"There, that's better."

I check whether the cast is dry now. I still remain careful with the ladder though, don't want to mess up my cast even if it's dry, of course.

written by Azirphaeli on May 12, 2011 20:55

Continuing to be mindful of where my PDC is, I wait for the lift to finish moving.

written by Megagun on May 12, 2011 21:52

I push the elevator call button, and try to figure out if my body has any advanced features, such as AlphaNet integration or an embedded PDC of sorts.

"You know, I wonder if I can watch Mandatory Team Troubleshooter straight through my mind! After all, I'm inside a bot now! Surely I could do such a thing!"

written by Speeder on May 12, 2011 23:19

I notice the unusual behavior of Mango.

Then I shake my head and ask the RED tech.

"Say, this clone" I point Mango. "Had activity BEFORE getting his own MemoMax copy?"

written by Jam on May 13, 2011 00:41

I wait, somewhat impatiently...

written by Malkom on May 13, 2011 00:57

I ask if I can borrow a PDC to contact PLC whoever that is and if I get one I call them up, asking for a number or other contact identification for them if needed. If I get through, I ask for a new PDC and some fresh laser pistol barrels while I'm at it. If I don't, I look for a way to get to this PLC place.

written by Gligar on May 13, 2011 01:36

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Ignoring everything else, Mango-R heads for the showers. He passes Speed-Y but doesn't acknowledge him.

This doesn't go unnoticed. Speed-Y returns to te tech, and verifies whether there was brain activity before the MemoMax upload. "That's right, sir," the tech replies. "Something's amiss... on top of everything else..."

He pulls out a pep pill and takes it. "I intend to scan him. With your permission, sir, of course."

Malkom-R asks the tech if he can borrow his PDC. The tech hands it over, while muttering, "What's with everyone losing their PDCs?"

He is ignored as Malkom-R looks through the contact list, finding the entry for PLC. He calls them and asks for a new PDC and some laser barrels. The voice on the other end asks for an ME Card number.

A lift

L4-O checks his cast. It seems dry.

Azir-R keeps his hand on his PDC as the lift ascends.

The ascent doesn't last much longer, and the lift comes to a halt.

Corridor (somewhere)

Leeroy-O has a little better luck in commanding his new body to press the call button. It even comes with a handy humanlyke arm along with three other manipulators of miscellaneous use.

As he waits for the lift, he investigates the bot body further. He finds the standard bot transceiver, as well as the greatly expanded memory and processing capabilities common to all idea bots. He also finds what looks to be a mini-PDC. Looking deeper, he also finds something that can only be Asimov circuits. There might be more, but he can't identify it, if it's even there.

He wonders if he can get Mandatory Team Troubleshooter on this thing.

His pondering (and it's amazing how well he can ponder now) is cut short by the lift arriving.

Internal Security office (I sublevel)

Jam-O waits as the InSec continues to try keys.

She ends up switching to another keyring, muttering under her breath as key after key refuse to fit.

Eventually, she stops, and hits her head with the heel of her hand. "No, fool, you unlock it this way..."

She takes the first key and tries it again. This time, though, she squeezes something on the tag.

It pops open.

written by Azirphaeli on May 13, 2011 02:44

Since L4-O seems to know where he's going I'll keep pace.

written by Speeder on May 13, 2011 03:25

I nod to the tech.

"Sure, Scan him... I will help in case things get more strange."

I pull out my pistol.

"You know, I suspect he is STILL under attack by a mutant, even AFTER DIEING. this mean that my earlier idea of shutting down his brain temporarily was useless... I guess whoever is that mutant, it must be a very powerful one."

I do not point the pistol at anyone, but I do assemble it with a YELLOW barrel and check if it is assembled properly and ready to use.

"Or he just went nuts."

written by Malkom on May 13, 2011 03:34

"Hold on."

I pull out my ME card. If I don't have a ME card, I first go through my jumpsuit pockets, then ask the tech where I can find my ME card, and then once he answers grab it. Once I have hold of my ME card, I rattle off the number (accurately) to whoever I'm talking to. If asked to punch the number in somewhere, I do so.

written by Lightning4 on May 13, 2011 07:45

"Well then, off we go!"

I start moving forward out of the lift. I look for any signs that might indicate the proper direction to central subsector.

"I wonder how much time we have left... let's go quickly I guess."

I move as quickly as my laddercrutch can allow, anyway.

written by Mingamango181 on May 13, 2011 07:53

I go and start the shower when I get there, making sure that if there's anything necessary to do, gets done.

...That's odd... I can't remember that part...

It's because of that download, I'm suspecting. Thankfully, you recited it to me, so I can tell you now, if you'd like.

Okay. Tell it.

I listen as details of the wrecked range are told out to me.

written by Megagun on May 13, 2011 11:46

I enter the elevator and press the shiny "P" button.

"Hello elevator. How are you holding up? Carry any big loads today?"

written by Jam on May 13, 2011 14:28

"Oh! There we go! Thanks!"

I check the time on my PDC...

"Okay, is that all? We kinda need to get going..."

If the IntSec clone says we can go, I say goodbye, then start jogging towards the lifts.

written by 4616599 on May 13, 2011 16:53

I yell, slowly.

"Moann...! Ha...! Duuuust!"

I continue grabbing the jackobot by its manipulators and dome edge.

—

"Ah! He's spinning now. Giddy. Forgive me..."

I stumble onto the tech again.

I try to grab the ME card bot for support.

"You look dusty! Aughh...now, what?"

I glance at the clones. "Cut the link! Cut the link! Kill it!"

written by Gligar on May 13, 2011 20:00Lift hall (P level)

L4-O's team leaves the lift.

L4-O leads them into the usual concourse -- RED, this time. And for a change, the exits are marked. One's labelled "To Broadcast area and CENTRAL SUBSECTOR". The other three, in case you're interested, are all HPD&MC -- Vidshow Quality Control, Dormitory Registry, and Zone Reclamation Department.

L4-O wonders how much time they have left.

Zombie Joris-O somehow keeps holding onto the jackobot, which has stopped zapping him, since it seems to be pointless.

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Speed-Y gives the tech permission to scan Mango-R. He pulls out his laser pistol, and voices his suspicion that Mango-R is still under attack. Even after death. Or maybe he's just crazy...

He checks his pistol, and fits a fresh YELLOW barrel.

Malkom-R checks his pockets, but doesn't find his ME Card. He then asks the tech, who tells him to check the ME Card bot. Yes, the bot has it, he discovers. It's his now.

He then turns back to the PDC, giving his ME Card number. The voice on the other end tells him that his order will cost 75 credits, plus shipping. Where did he say he was again?

Joris-O is having yet more problems. He stumbles a little more, and grabs the ME Card bot.

He can't take much more of this. He tells the rest of the team to kill... er, un-kill... er, re-kill... whatever you do to a zombie. That link must be severed.

Chemical Showers

Mango-R starts up a shower.

Not long after he does, the door seems to turn semi-transparent. Visible on the other side is... well, it looks like a clone. It has flaky YELLOW skin, and YELLOW eyes that seem to bore right into his mind (because they probably are).

The clone seems to be glowing.

"So you are the one Headgrabber is targeting..." the clone seems to say, in a calm voice. He smiles in a creepy kind of way. "I am afraid that I can't allow him to direct attention to us." He seems to concentrate.

Another lift

Leeroy-O rolls into the lift, pressing the P button. Under bot vision, it appears even shinier than before.

He starts talking to the lift. It replies, "I have to say, you are the heaviest."

The techs scurry onto the lift just before the doors close. It begins to ascend.

Internal Security station (I sublevel)

Jam-O checks the time. It's 06:10 -- we're now well into morningcycle.

He asks if they can go now. "Hmmm... I should really ask a few more questions but we have an interesting job ahead of us with this Director you brought in. Just go, I think."

Jam-O says goodbye and retraces his steps, back to the corridor. Lucas-R isn't far behind.

written by Megagun on May 13, 2011 20:24

"Yeah. You can say I've put up quite a lot of weight in the last few hours.. heh heh heh.."

I start to use my internal mini-PDC to try and bring up a map of P-sublevel.

written by Malkom on May 13, 2011 20:58

I remain happily oblivious to a nearby, glowing clone that would certainly have me firing on it in seconds and happily chatter into the PDC. "I'm in a cloning station in C Sublevel." I turn to the tech, find out exactly which cloning station this is, and then tell them. After they confirm my location, and I have repeated it as many times as needed, I shut down the call and hand the PDC back to the tech. "Here, have that. By the way, I noticed you have that great game, Commie Combat DeLuxe on your PDC. How do you like it?" I try to start up a chat about PDC games, while looking around for something I could slide my ME card through to find out how many credits I have.

written by Mingamango181 on May 13, 2011 21:30

Um... What are they?

Interesting... I haven't seen the likes of these before... I'll be right back. Guess someone isn't happy with my presence...

I'm oddly sure I heard a 'revolver' being drawn, but I ignore it, trying to turn away from the eyes that seem to be watching me, and finish up the showering process.

written by Cryoburner on May 13, 2011 22:55

I proceed toward central subsector, keeping a lookout for any interesting cafeterias along the way.

written by Jam on May 14, 2011 00:05

I continue jogging towards the lifts, and call one once I get there...

"Hmm... I wonder if Mango-R's still alive..."

I pause for a second, and appear to concentrate...

written by Lightning4 on May 14, 2011 00:07

I proceed forward with the group.

written by Gligar on May 14, 2011 01:34

Another lift

Leeroy-O has a look, so to speak, at his internal mini-PDC. He decides to try and find a map of P Sublevel. Naturally, his search is fruitless ;)

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Malkom-R tells the clone on the other end where he is, after consulting the tech again. Apparently, that's all that is needed. He hangs up after hearing that it'll take five minutecycles to get there.

Hew returns the PDC, and mentions a a game he noticed on there. "I rarely play it," the tech answers. "I find it hard to find the time to play games these daycycles."

Malkom-R tries to chat about PDC games while looking around for a PDC scanner. He finds one attached to the tech's terminal.

Chemical showers

The strange clone seems to respond to Mango-R's hitch-hiker. "Don't act as if it's not you, Headgrabber. I can see you there pointing a 'revolver' at me. And by the way, how mundane of you to use a physical weapon."

The clone puts out his hand, seeming to go through the shower door.

Mango-R has the brief vision of a 'revolver' spontaneously disassembling itself.

Mango-R turns away, trying to ignore the clone. But it doesn't seem to work. The clone just drifts round to face him.

"Now, as to you. Perhaps you have heard the rumours about mutants. Perhaps you have heard the one about mutants being able to make your brain leak out of your ears.

"Headgrabber was the one who figured out how to do that."

"And he's in your mind."

The showers cease. The door unlocks.

Corridor P2

L4-O's group presses on. Cryo-R looks for cafeterias, but doesn't see any.

Soon, they come to a door: CENTRAL SUBSECTOR ACCESS P.

Corridor (I sublevel)

Jam-O and Lucas-R head towards the lifts. Once they get there, Jam-O calls one.

Then he has an idea. He concentrates.

written by Speeder on May 14, 2011 02:01

I go check on Mango... Carefully.

Pistol in hand.

"Ok, do not be Freaky, do not be Freaky, do not be Freaky..."

and I go muttering that as I approach Mango door.

written by Mingamango181 on May 14, 2011 03:19

I decide to take a step backwards should the hand try to grab me.

I hear a voice speak. "Heh. This thing's so old, it probably wasn't going to last for much longer anyway."

"Headgrabber can do that? Now I'm not sure what could be worse, my brain leaking, or the hand reaching for me through the door..."

written by Malkom on May 14, 2011 03:23

I slide my card through the slot, read how many credits I have, stow it securely in my jumpsuit pocket, check my laser shooter to make sure it's operational, and follow Speed-Y towards the Mango door, pistol in hand. Please... no mutants, for my sanity's sake, I think to myself.

written by Lightning4 on May 14, 2011 10:55

I cautiously open the door, watching for anything on the other side.

If it's safe, I proceed ahead of the group.

I look around for any more signs that might indicate the direction the debriefing rooms are in.

written by Jam on May 14, 2011 14:46

"Oh no oh no oh no! Not good!"

I start panicking...

"Lucas, some powerful mutant is preventing me from scanning the cloning station! We've got to get back there!"

I repeatedly jab the call button, desperate for a lift to arrive...

"What if it's Freaky? He could probably do something like that, couldn't he?"

I turn, and look Lucas straight in the eye.

"Lucas-R, I need you to tell me everything you know about Freaky. What does he look like, and, more importantly, what can he do? If it is him, we need to be prepared..."

If the lift arrives, I run inside, and ask the lift to take us to the nearest cloning station that is above us. I press the level button if I need to.

written by Megagun on May 14, 2011 15:32

I search my mini-PDC for a map of P level, P section, P sector, and P area, aswell as information regarding Debriefing Room 27.

written by Gligar on May 14, 2011 18:21

Chemical Showers

The main door opens, admitting Speed-Y. He has his laser pistol out, and is trying to be cautious. What he sees troubles him: a figure - obviously a mutant -- near an occupied shower cubicle. Oddly, the cubicle's door seems to have partially faded out, rendering it semi-transparent.

The occupant, presumably Mango-R, can't be seen clearly, but seems to be trying to keep away from this mutant.

The mutant has flaky YELLOW skin, and glows. He's looking at Mango-R, and has his arm outstretched -- passing through the cubicle door. He drops it, and says, "Yes, Headgrabber can do that. That's his... technique, after all. I prefer a different method of termination."

As Speed-Y approaches, the figure turns. His eyes seem to burrow into Speed-Y's brain, as if they're probing him. (They probably are.)

Cloning station (C Sublevel)

Malkom-R scans his card, and sees that he has 150 credits. That done, he heads for the showers, checking his laser pistol has he goes. It seems to be working fine.

Then he enters the showers, and sees the figure.

Corridor P2

L4-O opens the door and peeks through. On the other side is an IntSec checkpoint with some kind of detector arch, manned by a couple of GREEN goons. Both are carrying semi-automatic slugthrowers.

He enters.

Internal Security checkpoint (P level)

"Halt!" one of them says. "Identify yourself and state your purpose in Central Subsector."

Lift all (I sublevel)

What Jam-O discovers shocks him. There's some kind of powerful mutant blocking his scans... he has to get there now!

He mashes the call button, and wonders if it's Freaky... Freaky!

He looks at Lucas-R. He needs to know everything that Lucas-R knows about Freaky.

"Well... I don't know everything about him, sir. But I do know what he looks like. He has flaky YELLOW skin, with freaky piercing eyes that stare right into your mind... that's where he gets his name from. Also, he glows. It's hard to see any detail on his face.

"As for what he can do... I know he can kill from a distance. He can break things apart. He can scan your mind, and even talk to you, from a distance. He even shows you his face when he does. And I... think he can project himself. I'm sure he can do more, but that's all I've seen him do.

"But... I don't think he would attack anyone in the open... he hates corridors, remember?"

The lift chooses now to arrive, and opens its doors. Jam-O dashes inside, dragging Lucas-R with him, and asks the lift to take them to the nearest cloning station. "That would be on C Sublevel," the lift replies, and closes its doors. It begins its ascent.

Another lift

Leeroy-O (or Idea Bot C-481, or...) keeps searching. He eventually does find a map, which says that the debriefing room is in Central Subsector, which is a concourse and a corridor away from the lift. Then, it's another corridor and he's there.

He also discovers that Debriefing Room 27 was recently revamped by HPD&MC for some purpose that he can't access.

As he ponders this, the lift stops at P Level.

written by Speeder on May 14, 2011 18:40

I blink while looking at the mutant.

"Ok, first, you are not Headgrabber, thus you can still be Freaky, Lucas-R friend.

Second, you can obviously teleport, since you do not came here crossing the cloning station.

Third, you can cross objects.

Fourth, you are seemly also a mind mutant.

Fifth, your skin is mutated.

Sixth, you are obviously powerful."

I put the pistol back in my pocket.

"Thus I obviously cannot kill you with a stupid pistol."

I keep looking back at him.

"Ok, or you do not intend to kill us, or you are sadistic and thus want to do it slowly, because obviously if you really wanted to kill us, you could already have done so.

Thus the question that ultimately remains is: What do you want?"

I look at Mango.

"And you have any idea of what happened to him? Some mutant, I can guess, not you, attached to the mind of his PREVIOUS clone, and remains attached to him, thus obviously that other mutant, that I presume is the Headgrabber you are talking about, is also very powerful, and also want something, something that has to do with my remains, considering how that clone died."

Yes, I speak aloud, so instead of only the mutant know what I am thinking, I make sure EVERYONE know what I am thinking.

written by Megagun on May 14, 2011 18:54

"Alright, techs. We're nearly there. Let's hope we're not too late yet. Follow me, but you'll have to run!"

I scoot off towards the debriefing room as fast as I can whilst making sure that the techs can keep up.

written by 4616599 on May 14, 2011 19:27

I stare at the Intsec goons.

"Green."

I stumble off the jackobot, attempting to lick the goons.

—————
"I'll love to have a look at what's going on in there, Speed-O. But a certain former clone seem very curious about IntSec goons at the moment."

I walk over to the panels.

"Does anyone have a link to the Intsec checkpoint at P level, or even better, a MemoMax feed or something from...ex-ODNK-1?"

written by Malkom on May 14, 2011 20:37 "How did you-?"

I scream. The sight of the mutant disgusts me. My face goes a sick color and I double over, gagging and gripping my stomach. My pistol clatters from my hand to the floor. I go to snatch it up; if I get it I, panicked, fire it at the weird mutant twisted horrific YELLOW abomination before me.⁴³⁸

written by Lightning4 on May 14, 2011 21:01

"Troubleshooter Team Epsilon reporting in... L4-O, John-R, Cryo-R, and... a zombie I guess reporting in. We need to get to Debriefing R27."

I notice the zombie starting to scramble towards the goons.

"Uh oh. You may want to terminate that. We were escorting it around but if it's going to do THAT..."

written by Azirphaeli on May 14, 2011 21:20

"Oh hey. I guess I am not a part of their team, but I am not sure what I should be doing."

I think for a bit...

"Maybe I can join up?"

written by Jam on May 14, 2011 23:33

"Hmm... Freaky sounds really powerful..."

I think a bit...

"I had the strangest feeling that the clone that was shielding the cloning station from my scans wasn't actually near the station, but somewhere else... Hmm..."

I think a bit more...

Well, whatever is waiting for us, we'd better be ready... I'm guessing lasers will be useless against such a powerful mutant, as will any other physical attack... Well, if he wants to terminate us, there's not much stopping him... So he must want something..."

My face suddenly pales...

"Oh no... I think Speed-Y's in danger..."

I start panicking some more, and start singing that really popular loyalty jingle that I heard earlier todaycycle...

"Hey, Computer! You're my Friend!"

At the same time, I take out my pack of registered mutant medications, and start digging inside for something...

"Oh, lift, please hurry up!

...

Hey, Computer! You're my Friend!"

written by Mingamango181 on May 14, 2011 23:33

"You know what?" We should probably leave now.

⁴³⁸ MALKOM: (OOOC EDIT: This is gonna get me killed, most probably, but I did it because, well, I think that's what my character would do. He hates mutants, you see. He's disgusted by them and, deep down, afraid of them.)

Wouldn't it be interesting if my character turned out to be a mutant himself?

I'll tell you once we're both out of danger.

I feel as if my mind is being used in a coordinated attack...

written by Cryoburner on May 15, 2011 01:10

"We are here to sample the delicious foods of central subsector. Also, to see The Computer."

I take care to avoid any bots that might happen to be scooting off as fast as they can in my vicinity, if any are present.

written by Gligar on May 15, 2011 02:10

Chemical showers

Speed-Y blinks, and starts speaking. He lists several things about this mutant, culminating in him putting his laser pistol away. He clearly can't kill this mutant with one of those. He'd probably need something bigger.

He continues. Either the mutant doesn't want to kill them, or he wants to do it slowly. But presumably, if he wanted to kill them, he would have done so already. So, what does he want?

He then thinks of something. Does he know anything about what happened to Mango-R? Is this "Headgrabber" involved? And does he have any interest in how Speed-Y died?

The mutant replies, "Yes, I am Freaky. And as you have guessed, Headgrabber is the one who has entered Mango-R's mind. I simply wish to find out why, and, if possible, remove him."

He looks at Mango-R, who seems to be having a conversation with someone unseen. "And don't think you can escape with your puppet that easily, Headgrabber." He raises his hand again, trapping Mango-R in place.

From the station proper, Joris-O says that he'll have to sit this one out. A certain zombie is interested in IntSec goons. And also, does anyone have a link to a checkpoint on P Level?

Malkom-R screams and doubles over, attempting to not vomit... not entirely successfully. His laser pistol drops to the floor and clatters into a shower cubicle.

Freaky looks at him. "Oh, I see," he observes. "I assure you, I won't harm you. Unless-"

Malkom-R is already heading towards his laser pistol. He manages to reach it and pick it up, and tries to fire at Freaky. But the mutant is faster, reaching out a hand and pinning him in place as well. Caught in mid-turn, Malkom-R's firing reflex causes his laser to fire, almost hitting Speed-Y in the process.

"I won't harm you," Freaky says again, his tone actually betraying an element of anger, "unless you harm me. Then, I will kill you."

Another lift

Leeroy-O tells his techs that they'll have to hurry. They don't want to be too late, after all.

H sets off towards the debriefing room as fast as he can. Which turns out to be about running speed. The techs can keep up quite easily.

The three pass through the concourse and into a corridor. Running down it, they encounter L4-O's team as the last straggler -- Cryo-R -- enters the IntSec checkpoint, and enter it themselves.

"Halt," one of the goons says. "What is your purpose in Central Subsector? And identify yourself."

Zombie Joris-O stumbles off the jackobot, towards that goon, intending to lick him. The goon raises his slugthrower. "Halt, or I shoot!"

L4-O explains the situation. However, he notices their zombie shambling, and suggests that he be killed (re-killed? Un-killed? un-re-killed?), especially if it's going to do that.

The goon says, "Gladly," and unloads three rounds into the zombie's torso.

Cryo-R ignores this, as usual. He explains that he's here to sample food, and to see The Computer. "Why would you want to eat here of all places? The food is the same as anywhere else. And if you wanted to see Friend Computer, you could just go visit a confession booth. There are plenty back that way."

Azir-R says that he's not part of the team, but perhaps he could join them.

A lift

Jam-O comments that Freaky sounds powerful. He comments that the shielding he encountered was being projected from elsewhere. And given how powerful he is, he could kill them in an instant, Lasers may well be useless. He probably wants something.

Wait... Speed-Y's there! He must be in danger!

He rummages through his pack for the mutant suppression pills while singing loyalty jingles and willing the lift to go faster.

But the last turns out to be unnecessary, as the lift stops, revealing the corridor on C Sublevel he saw a few hours ago.

written by Speeder on May 15, 2011 02:39

I glare at Malkom, then I proceed to wrestle the pistol from him.

"Do not be stupid. You cannot kill him with a stupid RED pistol. Also you almost shot me instead. And finally, although we feared that we might find Freaky during our whole mission, our fear was finding him as a commie, clearly right now he is NOT a commie, thus he might be on our side, and he is friend of Lucas, Lucas is friend of Jam, Jam is my friend, if you shoot Freaky, I will figure you really have something against Jam, or you are a anti-mutant, and that is a treasonous society too. And I won't terminate you, I will make you beg to be terminated."

I look at Freaky

"Although probably I am not supposed to tell that to you, my mission was prevent the commies from releasing the Underplex mutants. I did that by stealing the commies nuke, and exploding it in a safe place. Mango during our trip to Underplex got hijacked by Headgrabber and for some reason followed me, and later visited the nuke explosion site. Or he is allied with the commies, or he want to free the Underplex mutants, or he has a even crazier idea that I have no idea what it is. And whatever he wants to do, surely is bad idea, considering how Friend Computer was really afraid of whatever he stored in Underplex, saying that whatever is there being freed, is worse than this whole sector and its citizens being vaporized."

written by Malkom on May 15, 2011 02:56

Pinned in place, I try to writhe. I moan and look like I'm about to throw up again.

Then I abruptly scream again and faint dead away.

written by Mingamango181 on May 15, 2011 03:50

I observe, and try to listen, though I can't seem to understand what Speed-Y is saying there, something to do with RED pistols (which probably relate to some old technology), and nearly getting shot. And there's someone who's panicking. And mission details, from Speed-Y's perspective.

"Erm... What's happening?"

I'm not sure. I think Freaky wants me out as he knows how dangerous I am to everyone in the complex.

So why did you pick me of all clones to invade? Seems like it would do Freaky, you as well as myself some good.

The long story, or the cut down, summarised version?

written by Lightning4 on May 15, 2011 08:52

"There... zombie problem dealt with. Shoot it a few more times to be sure though..."

I shake my head after Cryo's comments.

"Don't... sigh... don't mind him. Although yes, I suppose we are here to see Friend Computer, in a way, but we are certainly not here for food. We just let him believe whatever he wants... it's easier that way..."

I look back up towards the Intsec goons.

"So... where's Debriefing Room 27?"

written by Cryoburner on May 15, 2011 13:54

"That citizen! You have poked him... Don't worry, citizen! With proper rest, you will be okay!"

I drag the poked clone back over to the group, and dump him back on top of Sal, or the pallet truck, if that's still with us.

"Ah... Quite clearly, we are going to see The Computer for lunch, and possibly a debriefing, and maybe even a briefing. Either way, The Computer expects us there soon, and I'm sure you wouldn't want to delay The Computer. You did hear the announcement earlier, didn't you?"

"Say, Sal, how long has it been since that announcement, anyway?"

written by 4616599 on May 15, 2011 16:10

My vision fogs up even further, and I feel Sal again. I lick Sal, then start crawling toward the checkpoint again. If they shoot, I crawl as fast as I can to lick them.

"Owwww!"

The force of the shock slams me backwards. I stumble into the chemical showers and mumble weakly.

"Ohh. Speed-O, DNK-1's at it again. He's getting shot...I can't seem to control him..."

I then see Freaky.

"Oh, hello! You must be Freaky. Errr...."

I back away slowly. I then lurch and fall to the ground. A certain zombie seems to be crawling. I stare at Freaky in terror, cowering behind my jumpsuit, on the ground.

"AAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAA-"

written by Megagun on May 15, 2011 16:15

"My name is Leeroy-O-JNK. My mind has been transplanted into an IdeaBot. I am here to attend the debriefing of Team Epsilon, and to explain to Friend Computer the horribleness that some members of Team Epsilon have committed."

written by Jam on May 15, 2011 16:17⁴³⁹

"Oh! We're here... Lift, which way to the cloning station?"

I continue chanting loyalty jingles while I run towards the cloning station... (If the lift doesn't say where it is, I just run until I find the cloning station)

written by Azirphaeli on May 15, 2011 16:23

I'll keep following L4-O since no one said anything, see what happens.

written by Gligar on May 15, 2011 18:11

Chemical showers

Speed-Y glances at the now-immobilised Malkom-R, and tries to remove the laser pistol from his grasp. He proceeds to tell him that a RED laser pistol would be useless against Freaky. In addition, he almost shot Speed-Y instead. It would not be a good idea to shoot either of them. Especially since Freaky doesn't seem to be a commie (though he is a mutant) and is a friend of Lucas-R, who is Jam-O's friend, and Jam-O is Speed-Y's friend. Therefore, an attack on Freaky is an attack on Jam-O. Does Malkom-R have anything against Jam-O? Or is he an Anti-Mutant? Which is treasonous.

⁴³⁹ JAM: (ooc: Wait, I've been here before? 😊)

Turning back to freaky, he outlines the team's mission, pointing out what happened to Mango-R.

"I know of your team's mission," Freaky answers. "And I would say that Friend Computer is probably justified in being cautious. Though, I must add, most of us are equally cautious about Alpha Complex as a whole. Revealing ourselves would be too dangerous."

"But there are those among my brothers and sisters -- a secret society, if you will -- who think differently."

Malkom-R looks like he wants to vomit again, but instead just passes out. Freaky maintains his hold.

"I think you can identify one of them," Freaky continues. "And I am sure he would like to tell us all his reasons." He looks at Mango-R. "Wouldn't he?"

Joris-O manages to crawl to the door. He's in a lot of pain, due to something happening to his zombie. Apparently, it's getting shot at.

He sees Freaky, and cowers in fear.

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Jam-O and Lucas-R arrive to find a commotion in the chemical showers. Joris-O is at the shower's door, doubled over in pain while simultaneously cowering in fear at something.

Internal Security Checkpoint (P level)

L4-O suggests shooting Zombie Joris-O a few more times, just to be sure. He also says to ignore Cryo-R.

He then asks the location of their debriefing room.

Before either of the goons can answer, Cyo-R dashes over to the zombie and drags him back, dumping him on top of the jackobot (which promptly shocks him).

This causes both goons to simultaneously point their slugthrowers Cryo-ward. "Step away from the zombie!" Cryo-R was about to speak, but he's cut off.

Speaking of the zombie, he continues his licking, before again crawling off the jackobot, towards the goons. They're focused on Cryo-R and don't see him.

Leeroy-O explains that he's also heading to the debriefing. Apparently, he (it?) wants to explain some horrible things that Team Epsilon has committed. His techs identify themselves as Grant-Y-JHT-2 and Greg-Y-JHT-3, respectively.

Azir-R says nothing, choosing to stick with L4-O.

written by Malkom on May 15, 2011 18:25

I remain unconscious, and don't move at all.

A sepulchral voice echoes out of the void... "Looks like that Malkom is getting ready to get zapped again. You'd better get a space ready in case that freak decides to terminate him..."

written by Speeder on May 15, 2011 19:10

I roll my eyes.

"Ok, so seemingly the commies dragged my team into a mutant and anti-mutant war. No wonder increasingly bizarre things started to happen after the commie defeat on the compnode. Granted, the whole mission has not been normal either..."

As Jam and Lucas join us.

"Jam! Lucas! This is Freaky"

I point to Freaky.

"He is trying to save Mango from Headgrabber..."

I attempt to point a Headgrabber, then I realize that I cannot do that and look confused.

"Well, in short, Headgrabber is in a anti-anti-mutant secret society, and he for some reason decided to use Mango for whatever is his plan. Freaky at least in that incident is in our side, he wants to get rid of Headgrabber, so I ask you two, do NOT SHOOT him. Thanks."

I look at Joris, then back at Freaky.

"This guy is linked to his old body, that got turned into a Zombie while visiting the Underplex, any idea on how that happened? I mean, Zombies are not mutants, but..."

I then look at Mangograbber.

"You are stupid, if you acted normally after I tried to remove you from Mango, I would never notice you. And probably you would be able to fight Freaky alone."

I turn to Jam.

"Can you ask John to come here? Maybe you, John and Freaky can get rid of Headgrabber for a while."

written by Megagun on May 15, 2011 19:37

I use my mini-PDC to look up Grant-Y-JHT-2 and Greg-Y-JHT-3 on AlphaNet. Perhaps AlphaNet contains some interesting information about these clones.

"Guys, guys. Come on now. I need to get to my debriefing, and I think some others in this room need to get there, too. How about you start letting me through, and work your way through the guys that need to stay behind afterwards?"

written by Azirphaeli on May 15, 2011 20:27

"Uh, hey guys, the zombies on the move again, he's heading your way!"

I'll alert the two 'goons' to the danger heading there way.

written by Cryoburner on May 15, 2011 20:48

"Ah, I simply figured that you might not want that fellow near you, seeing how you poked him, and how he is getting rather squishy. I'm not entirely sure that squishiness is normal. He might even be exceeding mandatory levels of squishiness. Someone should probably take a look at that."

"Anyway, I was simply going to say that quite clearly, we are going to see The Computer for lunch, and possibly a debriefing, and maybe even a briefing, and maybe dinner after that. Either way, The Computer expects us there soon, and I'm sure you wouldn't want to delay The Computer. You did hear the announcement earlier, didn't you?"

written by Jam on May 15, 2011 21:04

I stop chanting loyalty jingles, since Freaky doesn't seem to want to terminate me (for now)... I look at Freaky...

"Hello Freaky... I heard you're pals with Lucas-R? Nice to finally meet you..."

I respond to Speed-Y...

"Wait... What? Anti-mutant? WHERE?!"

I take out my laser pistol and wildly wave it around, searching for this 'Headgrabber' anti-mutant guy... Failing to find him, I calm down a bit, and put my laser pistol away...

I look at Joris-O, then continue talking to Speed-Y...

"I think Cryo-R was involved somehow, sir..."

I look back at Freaky, and try to copy his piercing gaze... How does he do that?

Then I get distracted as I realize Speed-Y is asking me another question...

"Um... I don't think Mango-R would survive if three clones attacked his mind at the same time... Actually I don't think he'd survive even if just Freaky attacked his mind... But if you insist..."

I take out my PDC, and try to call John-R...

"Oh, don't we have a debriefing to get to, sir?" I say to Speed-Y.

written by Lightning4 on May 15, 2011 21:12

I frown in the direction of Leeroy/Idea bot.

"Oh... you. Yeah, we'll have some explaining to do, about how you nearly caused the sector to go nuclear..."

written by Mingamango181 on May 15, 2011 21:12

Okay then. Long version it is. It's still sort of short, but it is the longer of the two.

You see, I needed to fix some things. Shortly after learning how to make the brain do... what it did (a painful process it was), you unfortunately had to witness it. I was quite panicky at that time, and I ended up damaging you. Permanently.

Of course, you may wonder how I got here. I was able to get in, and prevent further damage, but I ended up in it. As for my clone, it's long since dead. The incident involving the communists only caused you to forget, but the large radiation dose you took when you tried to retrieve the Tsar released me.

As for the story, it was true, but it costed my last clone.

"...For all those not able to read minds, something about me being involved with the Headgrabber, and somehow damaging me, as well as repairing, and being stuck in my head. Apparently, the reactor's radiation released him. Interesting."

written by Megagun on May 15, 2011 22:58

I laugh at L4-O.

"I think you'll have to have much, much more explaining to do, such as how you know that Mega-R's mind was accidentally overwritten by mine. Hell, you shouldn't even know the name 'Leeroy-O'. When I was inside the body of Mega-R, I never once spoke my own name. Oh well, I guess everyone sometimes makes a fatal mistake, and this one just so happens to be yours.

You know, I thought that only the guy inside that treasonous bot was part of the plot against JHT sector, but I guess more clones from Team Epsilon have been involved.. Interesting.."

I turn towards the techs, and whisper: "He's a communist; watch out."

written by Gligar on May 16, 2011 02:39

Chemical showers

Malkom-R remains rigidly unconscious.

Speed-Y starts putting things together. Apparently, Team Epsilon has been dragged into a conflict between Freaky's mutants and Anti-Mutant, or something. That might explain the weirdness happening recently.

The he sees Jam-O and Lucas-R. He points out Freaky to them. Lucas-R says, "Hi, Freaky!"

Jam-O stops his loyalty jingles. After all, he's still alive. He greets Freaky. "Hello, Jam-O. And Lucas-R, of course. Congratulations, Lucas! I told you that you could make RED so soon!"

Speed-Y also tries to point out Headgrabber, but realises that he can't. He settles on just describing Headgrabber as a member of a kind of anti-Anti-Mutant, whom Freaky is trying to catch. He's set up residence in Mango-R's mind, they shouldn't shoot.

Jam-O suddenly realises that Speed-Y's speaking about Anti-Mutant, and gets paranoid, waving his laser pistol about in search of this Headgrabber, before sheepishly realising that he isn't "here". Instead, he glances at Joris-O, and notes that he thinks Cryo-R might have something to do with the zombie.

Speed-Y outlines the zombie situation to Freaky. "I can't help you with the zombie, I'm afraid. I can't affect corpses, only make them."

While Jam-O tries, unsuccessfully, to copy Freaky's boring-into-your-mind gaze, Speed-Y he tries to speak to Headgrabber, calling him stupid. Had he kept quiet after Mango-R was half-asphyxiated, he would have gone unnoticed.

He then asks Jam-O to contact John-R, since his help will be needed.

This is enough to distract Jam-O. He doubts that Mango-R would survive an attack by Freaky, let alone form all three of them. But he calls John-R anyway.

While he waits, he reminds Speed-Y about the debriefing.

It is then that Headgrabber decides to make himself known. Via a disembodied voice, Headgrabber explains that he "needed to fix some things" after learning how to do... things. He claims that Mango-R was an unwitting witness to him working this out. , causing the mutant to backlash against him and damage him. He entered Mango-R's mind in order to try to repair the damage, but now he can't get out. His clone, he says, is long dead. The radiation Mango-R absorbed apparently "released him". He finishes up by saying he has no clones left.

Apparently unaware that Headgrabber has actually spoken, MAnGo-R summarises this for everyone.

Freaky has a few issues with it, though. "Okay, how many lies is that? First, you've been able to do... that for several yearcycles. Second, and this is the most important, you still have one clone left. I know because you're using it, back in the prison. How else could you point a 'revolver' at me?

"And third... since when did you repair anyone? You've never done that before."

Internal security checkpoint (P Level)

John-R's PDC is ringing. He answers it.

Leeroy-O/Idea Bot C-481 decides to look up his two tecks, finding out that they've both received reprimands for insubordination, and possible links to communism. That said, they have both participated in four successful major R&D projects to date. Perhaps five?

Out loud, he says that they really need to get going. Perhaps he could be let through?"

"Sorry, bot," the IntSec says, and lets the bot pass.

Azir-R tries to warn the goons about te zombie, but they pay no attention, causing one to be licked. "Eurgh!" he shouts, and unloads another five rounds into it..

Cryo-R suggests that maybe the goons wouldn't want the zombie near them after "poking" it. He also shows then that he has a one-lunch mind. Er, I mean a one-track mind. That kind of slipped out there...

Apparently, L4-O recognises the idea bot. Perhaps he thinks it's Mega-R? Or maybe it's just the voice? He says that one thing that needs to be explained is how 'Mega-R' almost destroyed the sector...

This just sets off the idea bot. He says that L4-O just made a big mistake, since he shouldn't even know the name "Leeroy-O". He never mentioned it, after all. He adds that he now thinks the whole of Team Epsilon are traitors. Debriefing should be interesting.

"Just what I would expect from an idea bot," the jackobot replies.

Of course, this sets off the IntSec as well. "Okay, this has to stop here! A bot, accusing a Troubleshooter team of treason... it's possible, but a bot?"

The techs try to explain. "Quiet, you two!"

written by Malkom on May 16, 2011 02:42

I still remain unconcious.

written by Azirphaeli on May 16, 2011 03:03

"Well I um.. I think I'm just going to let you guys sort this one out."

I stand and wait, but gravitate towards the exit in case things get crazy, The communist thing is being tossed around now, after all.

written by Speeder on May 16, 2011 03:31

I just look again at Freaky and Mango.

"So, Headgrabber, you are the whatever thing locked up in Underplex that I was supposed to maintain locked up there? I think I had success, otherwise you would not need a puppet like that. Now I think that I should have exploded OUTSIDE the army range, but I do not attempted to do that, since I figured that maybe you and your friends had still clones left, and it would be problematic you being decanted outside the prison. Sometimes I wish I knew the future. But you know, I need to report to Friend Computer right now, about how we made you remain stuck in the prison, can you release my friend Mango so we can continue with our job?"

Knowing that this obviously won't work, I look to Freaky.

"So, how we get rid of Headgrabber?"

written by Lightning4 on May 16, 2011 03:35

I smile towards the idea bot.

"Well then, thanks for telling us about everything. See, I had a hunch you were someone familiar with my team. That kind of limits it down to communists, and the guy who kept accusing me of being a communist."

"Of course, I'm not entirely sure there is a difference yet. You haven't exactly provided much proof to the contrary, seeing as how you withheld information which could have avoided the loss of one of my team members!"

I sigh.

"Now if you don't mind, we have a debriefing to attend. I believe Friend Computer would rather us argue about treason in there. Tardiness is treason, and you wouldn't want to be late, would you?"

written by Mingamango181 on May 16, 2011 06:50

No... I'm not there. Check if you will. Yearcycles, yes, but only after the last time. You can call Mango-R, a sort of vector. After all, he's been voluntarily doing it.

"What?"

Oh, the headlines were quite spectacular. Unknown

written by Mingamango181 on May 16, 2011 06:52

deaths of commies, now that was a mystery. Of course, you wouldn't remember thanks to that brainscrub.

I look a bit confused now...

written by Megagun on May 16, 2011 13:07

To the jackobot:

"Cry some more. You're just jealous of my superior processing powers."

To the IntSecs:

"I'm not a bot! I'm Leeroy-O-JNK's mind transplanted into a bot shell! Friend Computer has given me ULTRAVIOLET-level protection, at my request, by putting my mind into that of an IdeaBot."

To L4-O:

"Yeah, like withholding my real name would kill one of your teammembers. And for the record; I never was familiar with anyone in your team, I just used my skills as a Troubleshooter to figure out which ones of you were commies and had a hand in the plot against JHT sector..."

But you're right, we should discuss this at your debriefing. IntSec officers, may I pass? Thank you."

I start slowly moving towards the exit of the intsec checkpoint.

written by 4616599 on May 16, 2011 16:58

I attempt a final lunge at the clone, mumbling something about dust. I stumble and dive, noting briefly that my (dusty) backpack happens to be positioned between me and the (dusty) goon's (dusty) weapon. You know, the backpack full of (dusty) ordnance and (dusty) barrels?

"Aaagh!" Finding myself unable to pass out after the shots I churn and toss about on the ground furiously, involuntarily rolling in what seems to be Freaky's direction.

written by Cryoburner on May 16, 2011 17:28

"Wow, you have so many ideas, Ideabot! My friend Sal always wanted to be an Ideabot, but I think he wasn't good enough, or something. Therefore, he's most certainly not an Ideabot. He's just... some kind of bot."

Noting the commotion going on with that squishy fellow, I decide to back well away from it. I wouldn't want to get inadvertently poked after all.

written by Gligar on May 16, 2011 19:22

Chemical showers

Malkom-R continues not doing anything. Freaky looks at him. "If I release you, you're just going to lunge at me, aren't you. And then I'd terminate you.

"But you're one of those clones whose mind remains active after death, aren't you. I'm sure Friend Computer would love to know that. Maybe I'll tell him one day.

"Are you even listening? Wake up when I speak to you.

"Now, where was I...?"

Headgrabber, apparently. Speed-Y is talking to him, having figured out what he's dealing with: one of the things locked up in the Underplex. Perhaps he should have detonated the Tsar outside the bunker... but no. That would probably cause the mutants to be decanted elsewhere, and that would be terrible. Now, he has to report to The Computer, so can Headgrabber release Mango-R?

Of course not, so he asks Freaky about forcibly removing him instead.

"That could be done in a few ways. There is the mundane solution, to terminate Mango-R until he runs out of clones, would probably work, but Headgrabber would just grab another head. No, we need to remove him now, while we know where he is, and force him back into his regular body. For that, I'll need help."

Headgrabber has a few things to say. He claims that the's no inside his body any more, and that he's not been using his power recently. Furthermore, he says that Mango-R is a 'vector' of some sort.. A voluntary one.

This surprises Mango-R, who didn't know anything.

Headgrabber says that of course he doesn't he's been brainscrubbed. But the headlines were spectacular.

Freaky shakes his head. "Typical. You've been using your power almost constantly since you had it. Does a certain Code 7 Incident remind you of anything? How about the disappearance of the 359th Task Force? Or the AHK Sector All-Stars? What happened to them? I'll tell you: you killed them.. Through puppets, I'll grant, but it was you who struck the killing blow each time."

He sees Joris-O rolling towards him, obviously in a lot of pain, and sighs. "I wish I could help you. But alas."

Internal Security Checkpoint (P Level)

Azir-R decides to stay out of the way. He stands, and edges towards the exit.

L4-O thanks Idea Bot C-481 for his contribution. He thought that the mind it was carrying was someone the team know. That is, either a communist, or that clone who kept accusing L4-O of treason. Or maybe there's no difference? After all, no evidence has been presented to the contrary... and information was withheld... information that could have saved the life of a team member.

Now, they have a debriefing to attend... Surely the idea bot doesn't want to be late, does it?

The idea bot just... well, if it could sneer at the jackobot, it would.

It goes on to claim that it's not a bot, but a clone. Again. It adds that our mutual friend gave it UV-level protection, to which the IntSecs laugh. "Sure, whatever. Like a bot could have security clearance. Get out of my sight, bot. And make sure you get your maintenance checkup."

Finally, it tells L4-O that it isn't familiar with the team, but it can tell a communist when it sees one. Debriefing is certainly going to be interesting.

It heads for the exit.

Zombie Joris-O lunges one last time. It still craves dust.

It notices its backpack... covered in dust. It loses interest in IntSec and licks,

But IntSec hasn't lost interest in the zombie. Both of them are still armed, after all. They start firing as fast as they can.

Surely that will end it.

Cryo-R just stays back, yammering on about how "Sal" wanted to be an idea bot.

written by Azirphaeli on May 16, 2011 19:30

Once the Idea Bot has left, I'll remark about how he doesn't seem like a very friendly fellow.

I'll head into the debriefing room afterward, assuming I meet no resistance.

written by Megagun on May 16, 2011 19:47

"Alright, techs. Let's leave this mess behind us."

I start rolling off towards the Debriefing room at maximum-tech-follow-able-speed.

written by Mingamango181 on May 16, 2011 20:19

You should know better than that. The Code 7 incident doesn't have anything to do with either of us. Those disappearances... were unfortunate, but I was not the one to have killed them. They went missing, after all.

Also, why do you think I'm down there? It isn't because I'm not there, is it?

I start to wonder just how many clones I've terminated. And being completely unaware of it.

"Tell me... Just how many clones have I terminated?"

I get no response.

written by Malkom on May 16, 2011 21:03

I remain not only doing nothing, but totally unconcious.

written by Jam on May 16, 2011 21:14

"Hello John-R! Speed-Y wants you to come down to the C Sublevel cloning station... He says he needs your help...I think he's forgotten about the debriefing..."

I cover the mouthpiece of the PDC, and look at the powder in my hand...

"Hmm... Maybe this mutant-supression powder could have some use?" I comment to the group.

written by Speeder on May 16, 2011 22:15

I look at Freaky, then at Mango.

"That explain things."

I look again at Freaky.

"The leader of the commies trying to free the mutants in Underplex has been in the Code 7 incident. I guess now I know WHY he wanted to free the mutants..."

Now I only wonder what the Code 7 has to do with Leeroy-O, the guy that overwrote the mind of Mega-R, the only information I have, is that Leeroy-O seemly was the sole survivor of the Code 7 incident. Probably, the clone that he had before getting into Mega-R clone."

I look at Jam.

"Thanks! As soon as we get rid of Headgrabber, we can get to the debriefing with everyone... I do not want to leave Mango behind."

written by Lightning4 on May 16, 2011 22:29

I shake my head.

"Well lets go then."

I proceed behind the Idea bot.

I watch the zombie as I go past, for any more movement.

"Maybe shoot it in the head or something..."

written by Cryoburner on May 17, 2011 00:38

"Say, I don't think they want you licking that."

So long as Zombie-Joris-O's backback doesn't appear damaged, or otherwise on fire or anything, and no one is actively poking him, I approach him and proceed to remove the backpack from his grasp. Well, so long as the backpack is within my clearance, anyway. : P

"You really should get some rest. You're starting to look rather squishy, after all."

written by Gligar on May 17, 2011 02:41

Internal Security Checkpoint (P level)

Azir-R watches the idea bot and its techs leave, the idea bot arrogantly calling the proceedings a "mess". He comments about the bot not being friendly before heading for the exit himself.

The goons are more interested in the zombie, which doesn't seem to be moving. L4-O suggests, as he leaves himself, that they shoot it in the head.

John-R is still on his PDC. "Head down to the cloning station? But I'm almost at debriefing... oh well. If Speed-Y wants it..." To L4-O, he adds, "Sir, will you excuse me? Speed-Y wants me."

Cryo-R creeps up to the zombie. He tries to remove the backpack from its grip. But, it seems, zombies have a very strong grip. He only succeeds in getting yelled at by the goons. "Desist at once! Theft is treason!"

Corridor P-epsilon

Once again in Central Subsector, L4-O, Azir-R, and the jackobot trail behind the idea bot. It takes a right and heads down a corridor before disappearing through a door.

Debriefing room 27

The idea bot and its techs enter the debriefing room.

The first thing they notice is the large desk, behind which is a large Computer Monitor, which dominates the wall. On the monitor is the silhouette of a rather short robed figure, seated in front of another monitor, on which is the Eye of the Computer.

Further inspection reveals that the floor, the ceiling and the other walls are also vidscreens.

The figure seems to look up and notices them. "Ah! Is this Idea Bot C-481?"

Greg-Y looks startled. "S- sir?! I wasn't expecting you..."

"And who exactly were you expecting?" the figure asks. "I am, after all, the briefing officer."

Chemical Showers

Headgrabber claims that the Code 7 has nothing to do with anything. The disappearance were unfortunate, but he didn't kill them.

Mango-R asks how many he killed, but gets no answer.

Malkom-R seems to ignore Freaky's request to wake up. This doesn't go unnoticed. Freaky concentrates, causing Malkom-R to wake up with a start. Possibly screaming.

Jam-O has been on the PDC to John-R, who has just complained that he was almost at debriefing, but is still apparently heading down.

Jam-O ads, for the group, that he's carrying mutation suppression powder.

Speed-Y says that he now knows why the communists wanted to free the mutants. Now, the Code 7...

Wasn't Leeroy-O the only survivor? (Well, in his pre-Mega-R days.)

He thanks Jam-O.

Freaky says, "John-R had better get here soon. Headgrabber is more powerful than you think."

written by Speeder on May 17, 2011 02:51

I nod, and then I comment.

"Well, I noticed, since he could remain on Mango AFTER he got killed..."

Then I look to Freaky, and then to Mango.

"So, what of you two, we could feel the presence constantly during the mission? Maybe John-R will be able to tell..."

I start staring at Headgrabber, maybe to distract it or something... Of course, I hope he won't melt my brain.

written by Mingamango181 on May 17, 2011 03:19

Oh, sorry. You were saying?

Just how many died?

I'd say, about all those times, maybe about 500? I've permanently damaged about 489, you included of course.

"...I don't... What? I can't surely have... killed that many..."

written by Malkom on May 17, 2011 03:28

I jerk into concousness. My terrified screams rip the air louder than unmutantly possible.

"AEAAAAAAAAEEEEEEIIIIIIAIEAIAEEEEAAAA AAAEAEAEEEEEIIIIAEEAEAEAEAEAE!!!!"

written by Azirphaeli on May 17, 2011 03:32

I head to the debriefing room, with L4-O. My interest is now thoroughly peaked by the recent goings ons.

written by Lightning4 on May 17, 2011 04:10

"Oh... well, if Speed-Y needs you, I can't argue. Go on then..."

I look a little worried, being nearly alone in that Debriefing room with Cryo-R and that... idea bot.

I sigh and enter the Debriefing room.

written by Megagun on May 17, 2011 13:39

I look around, glad that I am the first one to enter the debriefing room.

"This is Idea Bot C-481, yes, but you can call me Leeroy-O-JNK.

And you're not just the briefing officer, are you? You're the one citizen of Alpha Complex who can tell me who I really am, and what my REAL purpose is, aren't you? Say, would you turn up the lights on your side a bit? I bet the color of your robe is an interesting one."

I turn to the techs, and whisper:

"You just watch; I bet he's an ULTRAVIOLET citizen."

I look around the room.

"So, this debriefing room was recently revamped by HPD&MC, eh? Awesome. I bet it's a room specifically built for watching Mandatory Team Troubleshooter episodes!"

written by Gligar on May 17, 2011 19:22

Chemical showers

Speed-Y nods. Headgrabber's power is self-evident, after all, he can remain connected to a clone even after its termination. He looks at Freaky and Mango-R, and mentions that the presence of a powerful mutant, probably Headgrabber, was detected throughout the mission. If only John-R were here to verify.

Headgrabber speaks to Mango-R again. Apparently, Mango-R is responsible for about five hundred deaths. Headgrabber is responsible for causing permanent damage to 489 or so.

This is a bit much for Mango-R to take in.

"That... could be problematic," Freaky starts to say.

He's interrupted by the loudest scream the team has ever heard. It's coming from Malkom-R, who is screaming at the top of his lungs.

The scream cuts off, though. He seems to have damaged his vocal chords doing that.

Debriefing room 27

Idea Bot C-481 answers that yes, that it its designation, but it would prefer to be known by the name of Leeroy-O.

It adds that the clone on the screen must be more than a briefing officer. Perhaps the clone could shed some light on exactly who Leeroy-O is?

And also, he adds, could he turn the lights up over there? He wants to look at the clone's robes.

The bot then looks around. He wonders if the room was constructed to watch Mandatory Team Troubleshooter.

"You're partly right," the robed figure answers. "You're one of the vectors for a powerful mutant, whose name you are not cleared to kn- wait a minute, you're a bot. You have no clearance. But your technicians are not cleared for the information, so I will withhold it."

"What I will say is that besides you, only one other vector remains. The others could not handle the implicit damage, and self-terminated."

The figure manipulates something on its arm, causing a spotlight to fade in over its head in the room it is using.

Not much is revealed. The robe's hood covers its facial features, apart from some kind of goggles that seem to be part of a portable terminal.

The robe, by the way, is white.

"As for the room... I believe it's a collaboration between HPD&MC and R&D to create a new kind of stereoscopic display. This is the first field test of the technology. As to why the debriefing is using it... well, you'll see."

While the clone -- clearly a High Programmer -- was talking about the room, part of Team Epsilon files in -- namely, L4-O, Cryo-R, Azir-R, and the jackobot.

"You're late," the ULTRAVIOLET barks at them. "Now, where's the rest of you?"

written by Speeder on May 17, 2011 19:39

As I hear the screaming I pull my gun at point at Malkom like if I was expecting him to explode or become a evil mutant or he scared the crap out of me.

But as he cannot scream anymore, I just make a puzzled face, pocket the gun back, and scratch my head.

written by Megagun on May 17, 2011 20:25

I turn to face the techs.

"Ha, I told you he was an ULTRAVIOLET! Looks like my awesome processing units are working properly! Hee hee hee!"

I then face the ULTRAVIOLET.

"You know, I always figured that some rogue ULTRAVIOLET was using me as a vector for something. Not to bash on ULTRAVIOLETS or anything, but I always felt that the stuff my handler did was of such an extreme nature, that an ULTRAVIOLET had to have been behind it.. Interesting..."

I look at the stereoscopic screen.

"You know, I don't see any stereo effect. Is the screen broken?"

written by Mingamango181 on May 17, 2011 21:05

Well, that wasn't me, for your information.

But you're the only one who can... Oh, right, the anti-mutant. But anyway! Why was it that we apparently did what we did?

Oh, plenty of reasons, though they were all good, believe me.

written by Jam on May 17, 2011 22:21

I completely ignore Malkom-R, and stare at Freaky...

I seem to be thinking about something...

Then I slowly realize that someclone said something...

"Five hundred terminations, Mango-R? Wow! That's a lot! I'm assuming they were all commie traitors, right?"

written by Lightning4 on May 17, 2011 22:44

"Oh, hello, Sir."

I do a quick look over of the figure to see if it looks similar to the same figure who has been talking to us before, then I look for somewhere to seat myself.

"Sorry sir. From what I can guess, Speed-Y has been held up at the cloning station. John-R left me just a minutecycle ago to go there."

I look a little worried.

"What is going on down there? I think the rest of them are there. I would have gone with but we need someone here to represent Team Epsilon..."

written by Azirphaeli on May 17, 2011 23:31

I'll find a place to sit and look well behaved. I'll look around and admire the room.

written by Malkom on May 18, 2011 00:26

I clutch at my throat and look pained. I try to say, "Ack!"

written by Cryoburner on May 18, 2011 01:11

"Ah, yes! Sorry if we were slightly late. We unfortunately did not have access to a synthcrete-capable saw, or we would have come straight up here as was suggested. Instead, we had to take a lift. I might suggest that we be provided with such a saw to avoid similar delays in the future."

"The rest of the team is apparently busy being insubordinate somewhere."

I look around, noting any lunches that might be present.

written by Gligar on May 18, 2011 02:14

Chemical showers

Speed-Y pulls out his laser pistol at the sound of screaming. Either Speed-Y thinks Malkom-R's about to explode, or gain a mutation, or maybe he's just frightened out of his wits.

Oh wait, he caused himself some damage... never mind...

Headgrabber falls silent. But according to Freaky, he and Mango-R "had some reasons" for all the terminations. Sounds [DFSR] to me.

Jam-O does his best to ignore Malkom-R. He seems to be concentrating on something. But whatever it is, he stops as he realises what was just said. Did Mango-R really cause 500 terminations? He hopes they were all traitors.

Malkom-R tries to speak. He manages to croak out something vaguely resembling a word.

Freaky says, "What's keeping John-R?"

Debriefing room 27

The idea bot turns and tells the techs that he told them. So clearly, its processors are working. The techs groan inaudibly. Why did he have to figure those out so quickly?

It turns back, and comments that he thought some rogue ULTRAVIOLET might have been using him as a vector. After all, it was all of such an extreme nature...

"Are you suggesting that there are ULTRAVIOLETS with the same power as an F-class mutant? If you were still a clone, I would fine yo for that! As it is, I must order that your techs review your operational settings."

There is a pause as the bot looks at the screen. It doesn't notice any stereoscopic effect, and says so. Perhaps the screen is broken.

"Perhaps the stereoscopic transmissions have not yet started," replies the High Programmer.

L4-O greets the figure, and looks at what he can see. It looks familiar somehow, despite the lack of features. He's reasonably certain that this is the same clone from before.

He finds a seat, and tells the clone that Speed-Y and the rest have been held up at the cloning station. "This is unacceptable. When I call a debriefing, I expect clones to attend, no matter how urgent anything else might be."

L4-O kind of wants to know what's happening down there. He would have joined then if it weren't for the debriefing.

Azir-R finds another seat, and looks around.

As he does, he notices whoa! The active screen's showing depth!

Cryo-R, of course, claims that their lateness was due to not having a synthcrete saw. As for the rest of the team... they're being insubordinate.

Then he looks for lunch.

The High Programmer looks like it wants to roll its eyes. Not that you could tell if it did.

written by Azirphaeli on May 18, 2011 04:09

Ooooh now I am quite impressed. I watch the screen,

written by Malkom on May 18, 2011 04:12

I try to yell (or croak) for help. I also concentrate on the notion of my needing help as hard as possible, hoping against hope it will be picked up by a less anti-Malkom mutant.

written by Lightning4 on May 18, 2011 08:34

I shake my head and take out my PDC.

"I'll find out what's going on..."

I attempt to call Speed-Y.

I whistle my PDC ringtone while I wait for Speed-Y to answer.

written by Mingamango181 on May 18, 2011 09:01

I could say, there were quite a few deaths in those areas, though I can't be certain as whether they were communists or not. They did have a thing in common, which was that they were determined to destroy us. I had to eliminate the threat, and with no other option...

But... That many... Only a psychopath would be able to bear it all...

I guess you don't remember what happened to you over time. Believe it or not, you got so used to it, you at one stage even began to ask who our next target was.

written by 4616599 on May 18, 2011 10:15

"Moan."

written by Megagun on May 18, 2011 10:30

"Ooh, man, I can't wait to watch Mandatory Team Troubleshooter on this setup! It'll be awesome! I'm sure they'll figure out a way to turn all the old footage into stereoscopic-enabled footage! It'll be like watching the show all over again, in an entirely new dimension! Whoa!"

written by Speeder on May 18, 2011 11:40

After a while, I look at Jam.

"John is taking a while... I wonder if he was in the P level already... Maybe, you should call the team and ask if John left in the right direction, also you can inform them we are busy facing two absurdly powerful mutants that are fighting each other and that one of them hijacked a team member body. I will go search for John or something."

I leave the room, and leave the cloning station too (unless John is already there), and take a look into the corridors.

written by Gligar on May 18, 2011 19:27

Debriefing Room 27

Azir-R watches the screen, impressed at the new technology. He can tell, just by looking, that the Computer Monitor is clearly some distance away from the High Programmer, and must be huge.

L4-O shakes his head. What's going on down there?

He tries to call Speed-Y, but only gets a recorded message, "Your call cannot be completed at this time. Please try again later."

The idea bot expresses interest at watching Mandatory Team Troubleshooter on a stereoscopic screen, and hopes that a method will be found to convert old flat footage, say, from previous episodes, into stereoscopic footage. "I'm sure a way can be found," the clone answers. "It will most likely require vast amounts of processing power to calculate the positions of things in the scene, and to construct a model of same. Especially if all 76,281 or so episodes of your typical vidshow were to be converted."

Chemical Showers

Malkom-R attempts to call for help... which just causes more pain. "How ironic," Freaky observes. "The mutant hater wanting help from a mutant."

Mango-R seems to still be in shock over the revelation that he has caused many deaths. If he were loyal, I'm sure he'd know what to do.

Joris-O just moans. No wait, he just said "moan". Perhaps the link is severed? I'd hope so.

Speed-Y notes that John-R is taking a while. He tells Jam-O to call L4-O or someone and check in on John-R's location.

That done, he goes out into the cloning station, to see John-R enter the station himself.

written by Megagun on May 18, 2011 20:28

"Well, it'd be worth it, for sure! Can't go wrong!"

I look around.

"Say, when will we start our debriefing?"

written by Malkom on May 18, 2011 20:47

I faint from the pain in my throat.

written by Azirphaeli on May 18, 2011 20:59

"Probably when everyone is here." I'll comment offhandedly, and continue examining all the cool stuff around me...

written by Mingamango181 on May 18, 2011 21:13

I stare silently into space for a few moments.

You... are lying. I can tell, by that something in your tone.

I'm not. Check the records.

written by Jam on May 18, 2011 21:13

I call L4-O...

Once (if) he answers, I relay Speed-Y's message to him...

"Hey L4-O, Speed-Y told me to ask you if John-R went in the the right direction—oh wait, I think I hear him... nevermind..."

Also, we're stuck here because we are busy facing two absurdly powerful mutants that are fighting each other... Once of them has hijacked a team member's body, I'm sure you can guess who... Speed-Y doesn't want to leave that team member behind, so we need John-R to help extract the mutant... We'll be back as soon as we can..."

written by Cryoburner on May 18, 2011 22:00

I take a seat, and proceed to examine said seat thoroughly, noting whether it adheres to mandatory comfort levels, as well as whether it is positioned correctly for optimal vid-screen viewing. Once I've completed that, I examine the vid-screens themselves in more detail.

written by Speeder on May 18, 2011 22:10

As I see John, I make a worried hurried face.

"Common! Freaky, that turned out to be still friendly and not commie is stalling Headgrabber, and Headgrabber hijacked the mind of Mango, I need you and Jam to remove Headgrabber from Mango while Freaky stalls him. And later, I want to know if the mutant that we could feel earlier in the mission is Freaky or Headgrabber."

I run back to the showers.

written by Lightning4 on May 18, 2011 23:22

"Well that's weird. I can't reach Speed-Y... uh oh. They might be in danger..."

I look worried for a few moments.

"Or maybe the PDCs just don't work too well at these depths. Sure... that's it."

written by Gligar on May 19, 2011 11:02

Debriefing room 27

The idea bot says that it would be worth it, and wonders when the debriefing will start.

Azir-R replies that it will probably be when everyone is here, before going back to examining the cool vidscreens. He notices that the active screen almost seems to disappear, looking for all the complex like a hole leading into the High Programmer's room. The inactive screens have a dull texture, and are black.

Cryo-R takes a seat right up front. And then examines it. He discovers it to be exactly like every other non-foldable seat he's ever seen. Also, it's YELLOW. On the plus side, it does offer an excellent view of the screen. He then looks at the screens, and notices the same things as Azir-R.

L4-O looks worried that he can't contact Speed-Y. Maybe they're in trouble down there. Or maybe it's just interference from being so deep.

He ponders for a moment before his own PDC rings.

Chemical Showers

As it happens, it's Jam-O. He waits for L4-O to answer.

Malkom-R has fainted again.

Mango-R just stares into space.

Speed-Y and John-R come in from the cloning station. John-R is saying, "...understand what is going on here..."

Then he notices Freaky. "Whoa! I guess that is one of the mutants?"

He looks at Freaky, sizing him up, getting a fingerprint.

"Hmmm... no, the signature's different. But... hang on, there's another mind here... aha! That's who I've been sensing..."

Freaky looks over. "Ah, good. Perhaps we can get this done before Headgrabber finishes telling his life story to Mango-R here. Do you understand what needs to be done?"

A jackobot enters the showers, holding a box. It looks at the scene. "Say, are any of you Malkom-R? I have a PLC delivery."

Freaky says, "I suppose I should let him handle that." He releases Malkom-R, who flops to the ground.

written by Speeder on May 19, 2011 11:16

I suddenly go in normal citizen bureaucrat behavior ignoring Freaky and Mango for a while.

"Oh, hello helpful Mr. Jackobot. Yes sure, this is Malkom-R."

I point to Malkom-R.

"I will help you deliver the box to him."

I make Malkom-R sit, then I position his legs to that his knees are bent and upward, then I position his hands over his knees in a way that a box can be placed on them.

"Now excuse me, some important matter still need to be handled."

I face Freaky and Mango again.

"So, can I help somehow?"

written by Lightning4 on May 19, 2011 12:29

I answer my PDC, but not after humming a few bars of my PDC theme.

"Hello? Who's calling?"

written by Mingamango181 on May 19, 2011 12:53

I start shaking for some reason unknown...

"Heh..."

I stop, and look through the door as if I can see everyone behind it.

"What now, you lot?"⁴⁴⁰

written by Malkom on May 19, 2011 15:12

I remain unconcious. It's not every day you're terrified out of your wits by a mutant and have your vocal chords damaged by screaming.⁴⁴¹

written by Cryoburner on May 19, 2011 15:58

If I happen to be in contact with the Yellow chair, I quickly hop away from it. I look around for any Red or Infrared chairs that might be present. I also note the colors of chairs of anyone else who might be sitting.

written by Gligar on May 19, 2011 18:58

Chemical Showers

Speed-Y goes over to assist the jackobot, including placing Malkom-R in a sitting position, to allow the jackobot to make the delivery.

It thanks Speed-Y. "I will need his ME Card for a moment, citizen," it adds. But Speed-Y turns back to Freaky.

The jackobot looks on for a moment, before deciding to look for the ME card itself. IT goes through Malkom-R's jumpsuit, eventually finding the card, ans running it through an ME Card scanner. "Thank you," it says, dropping the card. Then it leaves.

Mango-R shakes... and suddenly demands "what now?"

"Vatdammit!" Freaky exclaims. "He's taken full control!" His eyes begin to blaze...

Debriefing room 27

L4-O answers his PDC, and listens to Jam-O telling him about their mutant problem. Speed-Y doesn't want to leave you-know-who behind, so they'll be up there ASAP.

Cryo-R jumps out of his seat, and into a RED one next to L4-O.

He notices that L4-O's seat is ORANGE, and Azir-R's is RED. The idea bot is too large to sit in a chair, and its techs are stood near it.

"Are you done?" the High Programmer demands. "Surely those chairs are perfect, unlike your own sense of security clearance."

written by Speeder on May 19, 2011 19:10

I decide to restrain Mango-R instead, so Headgrabber cannot physically attack the focused mutants while they work.

written by Cryoburner on May 19, 2011 20:18

"Oh, I was was just verifying the chair's comfort levels... In case some traitor were to have tampered with it. I certainly wouldn't want a higher clearance clone to sit in a chair with less-than-mandatory comfort levels, after all."

I begin looking around the room for any other examinables.

written by Mingamango181 on May 19, 2011 20:22

Hey! What's going on? Why am I stuck? What are you doing? Tell me, what are you doing!?

written by Megagun on May 19, 2011 20:27

I look around, then start counting from 0 upwards to get rid of some of the boredom...

"0, 1, 2 prime, 3 prime, 4, 5 prime, 6, 7 prime, 8, 9, 10, 11 prime palindrome, 12, 13 prime, 14, ..." ⁴⁴²

written by Azirphaeli on May 19, 2011 20:53

I wait patiently for everyone else.

written by Malkom on May 19, 2011 21:09

As the jackobot thumps down the box on my hands, I stir, open my eyes, and moan. I instantly grab my throat. I try to ask for medical assistance while cringing away from Freaky and trying to keep from seeing him.

written by Lightning4 on May 19, 2011 22:51

"Oh dear... well, hopefully you get things under control soon. Freaky you say? And who is this Headgrabber?"

"Well uh... I guess we'll meet when we meet then."

If Jam isn't talking anymore, I hang up.

written by Jam on May 19, 2011 23:09

I seem to be busy concentrating on Mango-R, and don't respond to L4-O (Not even to say "I didn't say anything about Freaky or Headgrabber... How did you even know that name? Unless Speed-Y was talking about it, but then how did you hear him speaking from the other room? Hmm... Sounds treasonous..."). In fact, I completely ignore my PDC, and appear to ignore everything around me too.

written by Gligar on May 20, 2011 00:54

Chemical Showers

Speed-Y checks the shower door and makes sure it's open. Then he restrains Mango-R ("Mangograbber?") (Freaky seems to have released him), pulling him from the shower as he does.

Though Mango-R seems to be causing a little interference -- perhaps he wants to know what's going on -- Headgrabber, who is indeed in complete control -- stumbles a little under Freaky's attack. "How interesting. You've learned something recently. But so have I."

Everyone present becomes aware of a... noise... It's barely perceptible, but it's definitely there.

Jam-O and John-R are concentrating. they show no signs of having heard the noise, or even that they're paying attention to anything. Jam-O is be ignoring his PDC, with

⁴⁴⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC: Enough.)

⁴⁴¹ MALKOM: I should have thought of that delivery before I fainted.

⁴⁴² Megagun: (OOC: I'll be away until Monday or so, so no killing me whilst I'm away! 😊)

L4-O speaking on the other end. After a moment, it beeps, as L4-O hangs up.

Malkom-R wakes up with a start. He clutches at his throat, knocking his box to the ground, and tries to call for a docbot. Interestingly, he finds that the pain is receding, and he's actually able to croak out his request.

Jam-O and John-R turn their attention to Mango-R himself. Carefully, they attempt to push at Mango-R's mind...

Debriefing Room 27

Cryo-R claims that he was checking the chair's comfort level, before his attention wanders and he looks for something else to look at. But there really isn't anything else visible in the room. There are presumably cameras, but they seem to be hidden.

"That's a flimsy excuse. First, the proper procedure for that doesn't involve sitting in the chair. Second, you aren't cleared to sit in the chair. Third, you irritate me. I order you to stand immediately."

The idea bot has started counting, noting any "primes" or "palindromes" it finds. His techs mumble something about the word "palindrome" possibly being beyond the clearance of some clones here.

Azir-R waits patiently.

L4-O puts his PDC away.

written by Malkom on May 20, 2011 01:06

I gasp in air. Oh. Oh oh oh oh...

"I feel so strange... could it... no, it can't be... it can't be... no... I can't be a mutant. Nooooooooooooo!"

written by Mingamango181 on May 20, 2011 03:18

Oh I see... You've done this before, haven't you. I wouldn't be surprised. But I must ask, under what terms can I return?

written by Lightning4 on May 20, 2011 03:31⁴⁴³

"Apparently they're being tied up by two very, very powerful mutants over there. One of our own has been... captured, I guess. Probably against his will... Speed-Y doesn't want to leave him behind. They'll be up soon, I guess..."

I look a little worried again.

"Before I hung up, there wasn't much... just silence and some distant conversation."

written by Cryoburner on May 20, 2011 06:49

I immediately stand on my chair, careful not to tip it over.

"Oh, I'm very sorry about that. I'm actually recovering from a minor case of amnesia, and it seems as though I might not have remembered the details of that particular inspection procedure correctly. Now that you mention it, sitting in a chair to measure its comfort levels does seem quite illogical.

⁴⁴³ LIGHTNING4: (Oh, there's Jam's post. I didn't see it at first, assumed it might've been a silent action for some reason 😊 As long as it got ignored.)

I'll make note to only determine the comfort level of chairs strictly by sight and/or sound in the future."

written by Speeder on May 20, 2011 11:08

I look scared when I notice the noise, I actually decide to leave Mangrabber (oh, that sounds... yes...) in the ground and I head to the cloning station.

"Everyone, LEAVE NOW, A MUTANT IS ATTACKING US WITH A WIDE AREA BRAIN MELTING ATTACK, LEAVE THE STATION AND RUN AWAY UNLESS YOU ENJOY YOUR BRAIN COMING OUT OF YOUR EARS!"

As people flee (or not?) I return to the shower area.

written by Gligar on May 20, 2011 19:02

Chemical showers

Malkom-R starts gasping. That pain is receding pretty fast. Almost... inhumanly fast. This can't mean...oh no... he might be a mutant!

Mangograbber laughs. "How cute. But it won't last long, I assure you."

Lucas-R seems to be getting unnerved by the... noises. In an attempt to ignore them, he starts reciting in a low voice, "End Citizen Licence Agreement for Alpha Complex Usage. Important! Read carefully! By reading, standing near, possessing, not possessing..."

Speed-Y runs out into the station.

Cloning station (C sublevel)

He announces to those present (three CloneServ techs, it seems: the RED one and two others performing maintenance on a cloning tank) that they're under attack and should flee. The RED tech says, "So that's what's going on! I can't take this..." and runs off. The other two mutter, "Weakling..." "Can't handle a little mutant?" "I've got a laser pistol with 'Mutant Killer' written on it..."

Speed-Y shrugs and returns to the showers.

Chemical Showers

"You recognise that this agreement is for the safety and protection..."

Mangograbber stumbles again, and clutches his head. "I actually felt that."

"Then try this", Freaky snarls. Jam-O and John-R seem to redouble their own efforts, too.

That strange noise grows louder. It pulls at everyone's consciousness, trying to attract their attention.

Debriefing Room 27

L4-O explains to those present about the situation in the cloning station.

"You mentioned... Freaky. And... Headgrabber," the High Programmer says slowly. "I know those names. If the F-class mutants are surfacing..."

"Tell me. What do you know if them? What cont- get off the chair, Cryo-R."

The idea bot continues counting.

written by Speeder on May 20, 2011 19:25

I attempt to use my entire willpower to ignore Headgrabber actions, then I start tickling Mango in a attempt to distract Headgrabber... Oh, I do that while singing the most annoying jingle that I can remember, one of those ones that Friend Computer himself decided to remove from use after noticing it caused mass unhappiness even in the most loyal and drugged IR citizens.

written by Azirphaeli on May 20, 2011 20:19

"Class F Mutants... fighting..." I mumble to myself.

I'm starting to question whether I should hang around.

written by Jam on May 20, 2011 21:38

I start mumbling a B3 jingle...

"Bouncy Bubble Beverage! It's the mandatory thing! Bouncy Bubble Beverage! It's the mandatory thing! Bouncy Bubble Beverage..."

At the same time, I slowly take out a can of B3, and start to drink it...

written by Malkom on May 20, 2011 22:40

I somehow get hold of myself and pull open the box. Grabbing out a new PDC if I find one, I use it to call for help! Any help! Please! For Alpha Complex's sake!!

written by Mingamango181 on May 20, 2011 22:57

Done as in... When you're done with them? Looks like they aren't going to be finished any time soon.

I open my eyes, and look around the prison that I've ended up in, searching for any weaknesses that might help me escape.

written by Lightning4 on May 21, 2011 00:31

"Freaky? I don't know much. I heard from Lucas-R or John-R earlier in the mission that there are supposedly mutants that can attack from very far away and possibly even melt your brain. Freaky is one of them..."

"The other mutant though... Headgrabber?... I'm not familiar with the name at all."

I shake my head.

"I don't even know if they're loyal or hostile."

written by Cryoburner on May 21, 2011 00:43

I carefully step down from the chair, most chairingly. I turn my attention to the idea bot, who seems to be formulating some ideas. Since he appears to be busy, I instead speak to the technicians who followed him here.

"Say, that's a mighty fine idea bot you have there. Any idea if his arms happen to be removable for inspection?"

I take a closer look at the bot's arms.⁴⁴⁴ written by Gligar on May 21, 2011 02:05⁴⁴⁵

Chemical Showers

Speed-Y pulls in everything he's got, gritting his teeth against the really annoying sound. He's able to ignore the sound, at least for a while.

This is enough to let him attempt a diversionary tactic: he tickles Mangograbber. Good thing Mango-R is ticklish, right? Mangograbber can't resist bursting out in laughter.

But it stops moments later. Speed-Y seems to have remembered that loyalty jingle, you know that one, it was withdrawn after our mutual friend noticed that it made people less happy. On hearing it, Mangograbber seems compelled to drop to his knees.

But he gets to his feet after a moment. "Nice try. Now, you die."

To Speed-Y, it seems that the sounds have suddenly increased in volume... drastically.

Speed-Y is practically knocked to the floor under the sudden barrage.

But Jam-O comes to his rescue. Mumbling the B3 jingle (I bet you could go for some of that right now), he pulls out a can of B3.

And drinks it. Right in front of Mangograbber. (I bet you can almost taste that mandatory goodness.)

This seems to trigger something inside Mangograbber. "...mandatory..."

Malkom-R also manages to ignore the sounds long enough to tear open the box. Among the laser barrels, he finds a PDC, already registered to him.

He's quick to use it to call for help. The Computer answers him, "What is the problem, citizen?"

Freaky smiles, his eyes still blazing.. "You see, Headgrabber? In the end, you have no chance of winning."

But the sounds still continue.

Debriefing room 27

Azir-R is beginning to question the wisdom of tagging along with Team Epsilon.

L4-O explains that he doesn't know much about them. All he really knows is that Freaky is a powerful mutant who can work at a distance. As for Headgrabber... he knows nothing.

Probably... for the best," the clone responds. He seems to be having problems with something.

Cryo-R steps down from the chair, and, turning his back on the High Programmer on the screen, he checks out the

⁴⁴⁴ MALKOM: (OOC: Wow, Cryo, I think you're about to get zapped by a annoyed ULTRAVIOLET programmer. 😊)

⁴⁴⁵ Gligar: (OOC: Take two 😊) idea bot. He asks the techs if the arms are detachable. "Of course not, citizen!" one responds. "They can be inspected just fine in situ!"

Cryo-R notices that, apart from the humanlyke arm, the other three arms have a variety of tools available.

He doesn't notice the laser turret that just appeared, and is pointing directly at him.

written by Mingamango181 on May 21, 2011 02:21

Stop hesitating. A quick burst of full power should disrupt everything long enough for us to get out.

I start remembering... something.

Why did I say that?

written by Malkom on May 21, 2011 02:32⁴⁴⁶

I talk into my PDC. "We need help! We're being attacked by a super powerful mutant who took control of one of your loyal citizens! There's some weird kind of noise! It's so..." I am unable to continue speaking, with the noise ringing in my ears.

written by Speeder on May 21, 2011 05:12

I attempt to join Jam B3 jingle while I am shaking on the ground.

written by Lightning4 on May 21, 2011 08:49

I notice the clone's reaction.

"Sir? Is everything alright? You're not under attack are you?"

I look worried again. Then notice the laser turret, and make sure I'm not in the shot between the turret and Cryo.

I look back towards the screen, waiting for the response.

written by Cryoburner on May 21, 2011 09:05

"Oh, good! We wouldn't want his arms to be stolen or anything. There are pickpockets around, you know..."

Knowing the bots arms are safe, I head back over with the others in front of the screens.

"Say, did those insubordinate fellows get here yet, or are they still off being insubordinate somewhere?"

written by 4616599 on May 21, 2011 10:52

I'm still rather dazed, on the floor and unfazed by the sound

"Wouldn't it be funny if we were all mutants! Ha! Ha, ha ha!"

I can hardly even twitch, but with a final burst of energy I start, almost unnoticeably, crawling forward.

I then notice my backpack, and some eggy looking objects next to barrels.

⁴⁴⁶ MALKOM: (OOC: Who gets two Perversity Points? I'm assuming it's me because my post was last before yours, but in the future try to say who it is more specifically?)

"Dust...."

I try to remove one, but am too weak and merely pull the pin off. The eggy thing rolls back into the backpack. I slump down.

I suddenly stop my forced laughter and twitch around frantically.

"Ha, ha----aaaauugh! It's gonna blow!"

written by Jam on May 21, 2011 14:42

"Mmm... Mandatory..."

I continue drinking my B3, while singing a B3 jingle...

written by Azirphaeli on May 21, 2011 15:02

I notice L4-O suddenly look a bit antsy and look at see what's causing issue this time.

written by Gligar on May 21, 2011 19:28

Chemical showers

Mangograbber keeps mumbling. "...the mandatory thing... no! Why am I still affected? I broke the conditioning long ago..."

Freaky laughs. "Clearly, you have neglected to take into account the conditioning of the body you have stolen."

John-R makes a sudden movement. Mangograbber suddenly drops to his knees, clutching his head. "What? You attack Mango-R instead of me? You fool."

The sounds suddenly intensify. Freaky seems to stumble under the onslaught.

Malkom-R explains to The Computer that they're under attack. And there's the noise...

The Computer replies, "I see. Please attempt to terminate the mutant by an means necessary. Thank you for your co-operation." The line goes silent.

Speed-Y musters up enough strength to join in Jam-O's singing. Jam-O pauses to drink his B3. (Don't you just wish you had some?)

The sounds begin to be accompanied by... things at the edge of vision...

Lucas-R continues chanting. "a) live in The Complex; b) work in The Complex; c) further the goals of The Complex..."

Debriefing Room 27

L4-O looks concerned at the clone's reactions, and asks if everything's alright. "Citizen, I can't afford... to... let something... like this get in my way. I'll manage. I must manage."

L4-O looks around briefly, noting the laser turret. He surreptitiously moves his chair slightly, making sure he's out of the line of fire.

On the screen, a docbot rolls up, ready to inject something. "See?"

Cryo-R gets off the chair. But he ends up moving over to near the others. The laser turret tracks him.

He asks whether the "insubordinate" others have arrived yet. (He has plenty of room to talk. Also, I have sufficient clearance to use sarcasm.) Obviously, they haven't.

A light appears on the laser turret. It seems to charge up... and fires.

Just as an explosion happens somewhere outside.

It's followed by several more explosions.

"WHAT IS GOING ON OVER THERE?!" the High Programmer demands.

written by Speeder on May 21, 2011 19:47

I attempt to sing the... holovidiest that I can, doing my best so sound like the commercial, that one, the one that caused so much thirst that some people decided to even drink nearby fluids, like tech workers that drunk cloning tank slime from nearby storage equipment.

written by Malkom on May 21, 2011 21:00

I try my hardest to take my laser pistol, aim it at Mangograbber, and fire. If I fail to get it or the shot fails to terminate Mangograbber, I fling myself at him, clawing and kicking and biting.

written by Lightning4 on May 22, 2011 00:20

I look around hurriedly.

"It wasn't in here. Sounded like it was outside!"

I get up and peek out the door.

written by Mingamango181 on May 22, 2011 00:31

I really am not enjoying this situation... Perhaps you should just use my physical self to go somewhere, push something, or avoid the next person who could be preparing to fire their weapons at us...

written by Azirphaeli on May 22, 2011 00:58

"What the--" I bolt up and look to see what made the loud noise. I scan the room for any damage.

written by Jam on May 22, 2011 01:02

I take another drink of the B3...

"Mmmmmmmmm..."

I suddenly notice Malkom-R... Oh no, he'll get himself killed that way!

written by Gligar on May 22, 2011 01:52

Chemical Showers

Speed-Y changes his jingle. He searches his memory, looking for that one, you know that one, it's the one which makes you so thirsty,, you'll drink the nearest liquid, whatever it is...

And even through the brainscrub, he remembers it. (It's really hard not to remember those jingles.)

Does he remember enough of it?

Apparently not... he gets through the first verse before running out of words...

Jam-O continues drinking his B3. The combination of this, plus Speed-Y's half-remembered jingle, is enough to trigger an intense craving for B3 in all those present... Speed-Y included.

Jam-O stares at Mangograbber for a moment, before the mutant can't control himself any more. He says, "Why can't I control this!" before reaching out and pulling the B3 out of Jam-O's hands..

...only for it to be knocked out of the air by Malkom-R, as he attempts to shoot Mangograbber.

But as he gets lined up, a fireball suddenly manifests in front of his face, singeing his hair.

Acting on the momentary distraction, Freaky says, "Now." He makes a grabbing motion in the air, and tries to pull... succeeding in making Mangograbber sink to his knees as his control over his stolen body weakens.

The disturbing things disappear from sight, though the sounds remain.

Lucas-R now has his eyes shut. "The Computer has no obligation to make available to you subsequent improvements..."

Debriefing Room 27

Speaking of singed hair, Cryo-R now has some. That laser blast seems to have been a tad too high. But he's more interested in the melted shape caused by a chair being hit by the blast.

Both L4-O and Azir-R are up on their feet. L4-O is peering out of the door, looking for signs of the explosion. Looking back towards the IntSec checkpoint, he sees smoke.

A quick look inside the room indicates to Azir-R that no visible damage has occurred (except for, the chair, obviously).

The idea bot continues counting.

written by Speeder on May 22, 2011 02:25

I make another attempt at that jingle, now more annoyed that I cannot remember it than anything else.

written by Mingamango181 on May 22, 2011 02:30

We've got to go. Now. As much as I'd rather have you gone, I think I'd rather live.

I think for a moment.

You may not have done this for a while, but how about grabbing someone else's head while you're at it? Someone else might be usable...

I try to kick down the door leading back to the control of my body, throwing all my weight into it.

written by Malkom on May 22, 2011 03:24

I fire again at Mangograbber, then try to grab the B3 and chug it, having been overwhelmed by eagerness for B3.

written by Lightning4 on May 22, 2011 13:38

I shout down the corridor.

"Anyone still alive out there? What happened?"

I wait for a response while trying to look through the smoke.

written by Azirphaeli on May 22, 2011 14:51

I listen for a response as well, while quietly move towards the side of the entrance.

written by 4616599 on May 22, 2011 15:46

"Aaaagh! COMPUTERCOMPUTERCOMPUTER!"

I struggle around, almost as if I just got blown up elsewhere.

written by Gligar on May 22, 2011 16:42

Chemical Showers

Speed-Y tries again. It's annoying him that he can't remember the jingle all the way though.

Nope, no luck.

Mangograbber freezes. He seems at conflict with himself, as if his stolen body is trying to reject its captor's control.

He falters further as Malkom-R fires in his direction. But heis aim is way off, since he's too distracted by his own desire for B3. He puts his pistol away and dives for Jam-O's discarded can of B3. There's still some in it.

Now, isn't that better?

Joris-O suddenly lets out a yell, struggling and writhing on the floor as if he's just been blown up. It seems that the zombie is no longer plaguing his mind.

But something else is. He staggers to his feet... and keeps on going. He finds himself lifted into the air, and launched towards Mangograbber!

Who, as it happens, was trying to get to his feet. Guess what doesn't get to happen.

Mangograbber lets out a yell, and tries to reach out for Jorsi-O...

...before abruptly dropping his hands. He suddenly clutches his head...

Lucas-R is still chanting. "Content made available or accessible by The Computer.....wait... it's gone..."

Indeed it has. The sound has abruptly disappeared.

Debriefing room 27

L4-O calls out into the corridor, asking if there's anyone there.

There is no response. Only the smoke.

Now that L4-O thinks about it, it's coming form the IntSec checkpoint, or somewhere near there...

"Well?", the High Programmer demands. Whatever was occupying him seems to have passed.

written by Speeder on May 22, 2011 16:51

As soon as the sound stops, I go check if Mango is... alive? Then I also check for the flying Joris.

Then I attempt to steal the B3 can.

written by 4616599 on May 22, 2011 17:12

I stumble to my feet. Something seems to be happening.

"Okay. Zombie just blew up...IntSec checkpoint."

I suddenly pause.

...nice mind you have

"Who said thaaaa-" I topple to the ground yet again.

written by Malkom on May 22, 2011 20:11

I gulp the last of the B3, take quick but careful aim, and fire at Mangograbber again with my pistol.⁴⁴⁷

written by Megagun on May 22, 2011 20:24

"...65535... Alright, I'm done..."

I look around

"Did anyone else feel that? Felt like some kind of explosion.. hmm... Wonder what that's all about..."

written by Mingamango181 on May 22, 2011 20:52

"...Urgh."

I cough for a bit while I try to remember which functions did what.

"..."

Well, at least I'm definitely breathing.

I try to climb to my feet.

written by Cryoburner on May 23, 2011 00:38

"Ahh, thanks for the haircut! I was really in need of one. It must have been at least a daycycle or two since my last one."

With my hair cut by some anonymous hair cutter, I now turn my attention to more important matters, namely, a chair that appears to be well below mandatory comfort and chairability levels. I proceed to examine said chair by sight and sound, but most certainly not by sitting in or otherwise coming in contact with it. I also note its aroma.

written by Lightning4 on May 23, 2011 01:47

I lean back into the room.

"I'm not sure... it looks like there was an explosion at the intsec checkpoint. Nobody is responding..."

"Permission to go check it out?"

⁴⁴⁷ MALKOM: (ooc: oh no, now I'll have to fight Speedgrabber!)

written by Gligar on May 23, 2011 02:51

Chemical showers

Speed-T checks on Mango-R. He's coughing right now, and groaning, as if he's trying to remember how to run his body.

Looking over at Joris-O, he sees that he's floated off, back away from the cubicles. He is, of course, still airborne. He's mumbling something about the zombie getting blown up.

Then his face falls. He seems to have heard a voice... one that seems to sap the floatiness right out of him, causing him to drop to the ground.

Apeed-Y tries to grab the B3 can from Malkom-R's grasp, but is too late. Malkom-R finishes off the can with glee, before turning his laser pistol, again, on Mango-R.

Zap.

Mango-R topples to the ground yet again.

But as it turns out, this is because he just got shot in the foot. His right one, to be exact. And just as he was remembering how to stand up.

Debriefomg Room 27

The idea bot finishes its counting cycle.

On processing its recent inputs, it notices vibrations not dissimilar to those caused by an explosion. It inquires about them.

L4-O, who is looking out, says that he's not sure. There's too much smoke to see..

He asks the High Programmer for permission to check it out. "Be quick about it," he replies.

Cryo-R, who thinks he just got a haircut, inspects the melted chair. He notices that it is now unsuitable for sitting in, primarily because it's still semi-molten, and sizzling slightly. It's giving off the smell of burnt plastic.

written by Mingamango181 on May 23, 2011 03:16

"...Urgh."

I lay there for a moment. Then I bring my nerves back to work.

Oww. That is PAINFUL.

I move towards the clone responsible for the shot, trying to move quickly, whilst avoiding any further shots.

Then, remembering that I don't have my truncheon, I drive my fist into the said clone's face. Then the gut. If he isn't dead by then, I pull the laser pistol out of the clone's grasp, and fire into the head of the clone.

written by Malkom on May 23, 2011 04:48

I realize that Mango-R seems to have been relieved of his mutant, and cower away from him. "No! Please don't hit me! I thought you were still a mutant! HELP! A INSANE CLONE IS ATTACKING ME, HELP HELP!" If he persists in attacking me, I fire at his head.

written by Lightning4 on May 23, 2011 10:44

I slip out of the debriefing room cautiously and start approaching the Intsec checkpoint.

I take out Turbo and load it.

"Hello? I said, is anyone still alive down there? There better not be any commies over there!"

written by Azirphaeli on May 23, 2011 12:12

I stay off to the side of the door, if L4-O comes back safely I'll relax. If not, and some suspicious character comes in I'll... do something.

I wish I had a laser pistol or something..

No, this is no time to be defeatist.

written by Megagun on May 23, 2011 13:22

I look outside the debriefing room and try to see if my infobot shell has any interesting camera features or advanced detection thingamajigs.

written by Gligar on May 23, 2011 18:43

Chemical showers

Mango-R, who is still recovering from Headgrabber's forced takeover of his body, tries to move as quickly as he can, practically launching himself at Malkom-R so he can punch him in the face! He succeeds in knocking out a couple of Malkom-R's teeth.

But he's apparently not done yet. He proceeds to punch Malkom-R again, this time in the gut. That's more like it! Malkom-R doubles over in pain, trying to scuttle away.

But Mango-R keeps it up. He grabs Malkom-R's laser pistol, intending to pull it out of his hands. But Malkom-R's gripping it too tightly to let it go.

Malkom-R attempts to fire at Mango-R, but the pain causes him to lose his concentration.

Freaky looks at the two of them, his eyes returning to... about as normal as they ever get. "The immediate danger has passed", he says. "But that doesn't mean you can start killing each other... yet. Headgrabber escaped my grasp once again. He can't be too far away, though. Let me check."

Briefing Room 27

L4-O exits into the corridor. For some reason, the idea bot follows him to just outside the door, presumably wanting to check it out.

Azir-R waits by the door.

Outer Ring Corridor (P Level)

With Turbo at the ready, L4-O approaches the intersection, and turns towards the checkpoint.

It isn't there any more.

Instead, there is a gaping hole where this level's connection between this subsector and Epsilon Subsector used to be. The smoke is heavy in the air. It smells strongly of grenades,

[527]

The idea bot trundles up behind him, having decided that it needs a better look. Searching inside itself for anything that might help, it decides on an atmospheric sensor. Using the sensor, the bot is able to detect the presence of particles of high explosive, suspended in the smoke, as well as fragments of flesh and blood.

Also present are some particles that are... vaguely mechanical in nature. They seem to be inert now, but... there's no questioning it. Those are nanomachines. The bot can't ascertain their configuration and purpose, but the signature is unmistakable.

written by Speeder on May 23, 2011 19:38

After snapping out of my sadness for not having B3, I realize two of my teammates are killing each other.

"YOU DRUNK ALL THE B3!!!! NOOOOO"

I attempt to grab the Speeder's Spear™ from my back, but then I realize it is not there, so...

I start kicking Malkom.

written by Azirphaeli on May 23, 2011 20:28

"What's going on out there guys?"

written by Malkom on May 23, 2011 21:21

I pass out or pretend to and lay quite still, mouth bleeding. The PDC clatters from my hand to the floor.

Since I never terminated the call to the Computer, it's still active. Which of course means that The Computer is still listening through it. Muahahahahahaha!

written by Mingamango181 on May 23, 2011 22:10

I pull the laser pistol from the clone's grasp.

Your own fault, I think, and I then attempt to break all of the clone's arms and legs. I shoot them with the laser pistol also just to be sure he won't be getting up any time soon. I pick up the PDC, and speak into it.

"The debriefing? We'll be there soon. We've just got... an incident. To be expected, of course."

I leave the PDC on the ground next to Malkom-R.

written by Megagun on May 23, 2011 23:16

"Interesting. I detect traces of flesh, blood, high explosives and... Oh my. High Programmer, I don't think that the clones around me have a high enough security clearance to know about THIS thing I just found. Whoa!

Say, can you give me your name, so that I can send you a message using my internal mini-PDC?"

written by Jam on May 23, 2011 23:48

I take another sip of my B3.

...

Wait... Where is my B3?!

"Malkom-R! You drank my B3?! How dare you! That was supposed to be mine!"

I join Speed-Y in the kicking of Malkom-R.

"And you shot Mango-R for no reason! You're a traitor! And what was that fireball earlier? You must be a mutant too! You're a mutant traitor (and probably a commie too)!"

I kick the (probably-commie) mutant traitor some more...

written by Gligar on May 24, 2011 02:22

Chemical showers

Speed-Y suddenly notices Mango-R and Malkom-R beating the [CENSORED] out of each other. Noting that one of them was the one who drank the remaining B3, he reaches over his shoulder for his Speart(tm)... only to realise that it's no longer there. So he relies on his own legs. He kicks Malkom-R in the gut, causing him to collapse to the floor. His PDC falls away to the side, and he seems to pass out.

Mango-R pulls the laser pistol from his hands, and starts maiming Malkom-R. Or at least, he tries to. Apparently, he's not strong enough to break Malkom-R's limbs.

But he can use a laser pistol. He shoots at Malkom-R's legs, planting wounds right through them. And then the arms-

eeeeeeeeeeeeEEEE

Er... maybe not.

Mango-R quickly grabs the PDC and speaks into it. "You are already late for your debriefing," our mutual friend replies. "A 100 credit fine has been deducted from your account. Have a nice daycycle."

Jam-O goes to finish his B£, to find that it's already gone. He vocally chastises Malkom-R before kicking him himself.

A few bones crack.

Debriefing room 27

Azir-R calls out, asking what's going on out there.

Seemingly in reply, the idea bot appears at the door, reporting its findings, and asking for the High Programmer's name so that they can communicate in private. "I do not give out my name as a rule. No High Programmer gives out their name. Security reasons, you understand. However, PDC number 49302 has been reserved, and will be routed to me."

written by Malkom on May 24, 2011 02:28

Whether or not I was really unconscious before, I certainly am now.

written by Speeder on May 24, 2011 03:24

After kicking Malkom some more, I get bored and tired.

"Ok... we need to get ourselves to that debriefing... So, who will carry this guy?"

I point to Malkom.

I also look at Joris.

"And you, that flied and then started to ask who said something, are you totally alright, non-mutant and not-headgrabbed?"

written by 4616599 on May 24, 2011 06:52

"I think I'm..."

I look like my mind was trying to say something, but drop in mid-sentence.

"Oh yes. Gotta. Get out of here."

I stumble a bit and head for the door.

written by Mingamango181 on May 24, 2011 07:31

Yay. Not my account at least.

I leave the call running, and if safe enough, unscrew the laser pistol barrel and leave it next to the PDC, putting that on the ground if I haven't already done so.

"Carry? Heh. Like you'd want to carry that." I gesture over to Malkom-R.

I cringe slightly as I try to get to my feet again. Then I leave the room, and search for anything that may help fix this injury of mine.

written by Cryoburner on May 24, 2011 07:46

"Hmm..."

Recognizing what smells almost like "ring for service" bell particulates in the air, I head over to the doorway, and without leaving the room, peek outside to see if anyone is vaporizing "ring for service" bells out there.

written by Megagun on May 24, 2011 11:30

"Okay.."

I then compose a message on my mini-PDC, telling the High Programmer about the nanomachines, and send it off to PDC number 49302. If I can attach the raw sensor data to the message, I do so.

"Message sent, sir!"

"You know, I'm getting the feeling that those high explosives weren't meant for the Security station; they're meant for us. Probably some folks that don't like watching Mandatory Team Troubleshooter in stereo!"

written by Azirphaeli on May 24, 2011 12:11

After I hear the report I head back.

"Well, I guess it wasn't false alarm... but also nothing to insane."

Then I hear the number 49302 and discreetly add it to my contacts after I return to my seat. You never know..

written by Lightning4 on May 24, 2011 12:14

I take my place back in the debriefing room.

I look at Turbo, and attempt to figure out how to unload it so it's safe to carry around again.... wouldn't want it going off randomly!

written by Gligar on May 24, 2011 19:27

Chemical showers

...eeeeee...

Speed-Y stops kicking Malkom-R. He's lost consciousness, and they need to get to debriefing anyway. The main problem is, who's going to carry Malkom-R?

He turns to Joris-O. Is he okay? Is he himsself?

Joris-O starts to say something, but changes his mind. He mutters something about getting out of here, and stumbles back to the cloning station.

Mango-R puts down Malkom-R's PDC, unscrews the defective barrel and puts it nearby. That done, he hobbles out of the room in each of medical treatment. And a jumpsuit.

He clearly down't want to carry Malkom-R.

Freaky says, "That appears to be it, doesn't it? It's been a pleasure." Then he is gone.

Cloning station (C sublevel)

The two techs look up as Mango-R exits the showers. One asks, "Need help, citizen?"

Debriefing room 27

Cryo-R takes a look outside. A couple of clones are walking past, heading for somewhere. But there don't appear to be any bells. (Obviously.)

The idea bot sends its message. A moment later, the High programmer says, "I have it. Hmmm... interesting. But how did..."

He enters something onto his terminal. "In...ter...es...ting. To think, after all this time, that project rears its mutated head again." Azir-R sits back down, relieved that nothing (apparently) serious has happened.

L4-O also returns, gives a quick report, and unloads Turbo.

"I'd like to get the debriefing underway as soon as possible. Especially given... certain recent events.. Which means that your teammates had better get here. Now."

written by Speeder on May 24, 2011 19:33

I sigh upon looking at Malkom, then I notice the problematic barrel. Since I do not know how to stop those things from exploding, I stuff it into Malkom pants pocket, and stroll into the cloning station.

"Ok, we should go now to the debriefing. John-R, lead the way."

written by Jam on May 24, 2011 20:35

I follow Speed-Y.⁴⁴⁸

⁴⁴⁸ JAM: (ooc: I'm not feeling well, so will probably be missing the next few turns)

written by Mingamango181 on May 24, 2011 20:38

"Erm... Some clone had the indecency of shooting me in the right foot," I say, showing it whilst trying to keep upright. "Are there bandages which can help with that?"

I think for another moment.

"Oh also, I'll need a jumpsuit, boots, and the forms that still require filling out."

written by Malkom on May 25, 2011 02:38

I begin coming round.

written by Lightning4 on May 25, 2011 10:28

"Hopefully they can still get here. There's been some damage at the link between this subsector and the next from that explosion."

I shrug.

"But they'll probably find a way once they deal with that mutant problem..."

written by 4616599 on May 25, 2011 14:05

I stumble forward, and walk into a panel at the cloning station.

"Ow. B3 is a pleasant thing to think about. Our friend says so. Oops."

I walk backwards, and crash into the nearest clone.

written by Megagun on May 25, 2011 16:23

"Hah, looks like I was right in my assessment of the situation. Kind of troubling, though. I don't think my ideabot shell came with any weaponry. Kind of makes me scared."

I search through my internal systems to see if I have some weaponry somewhere.

written by Gligar on May 25, 2011 19:23

Chemical showers

Speed-Y sighs. What to do about Malkom-R...?

A squealing distracts him: the barrel. Of course! Solves two problems at once!

He places it into Malkom-R's jumpsuit before leaving the showers. He's accompanied by Jam-O, John-R, Lucas-R (who is trying to suppress a laugh) and Joris-O (erratically).

Cloning station (C sublevel)

As the team enters, Mango-R is seeking medical supplies, and a jumpsuit, and forms, and such. The clone he's speaking to, apparently a Tech Services cloning tank tech, "There should be a first aid kit by the desk," he replies. "And the jumpsuits and boots are... over there," he adds, pointing to the rack of jumpsuits. "Once you've got dressed, come over to the desk. I'll have the forms and stuff ready for you then. If I can find where er, what's his name? Steve? Yeah, I think so... Steve-R keeps them."

Joris-O stumbles round, mumbling about B3. He ends up colliding with Mango-R and the tech. "Hey! Watch where you're going, citizen! Are you high or something?"

Chemical showers

Malkom-R stirs, and comes awake. He's faintly aware of a lot of pain.

And a squealing laser barrel.

But he doesn't have much time to do anything about this before the barrel explodes.

BANG

Debriefing room 27

L4-O hopes the rest of the team can still get here, after the loss of the checkpoint. "There are plenty of ways to get here," the clone replies. "Let's hope, for their sakes, that they choose a quick one."

Idea Bot C-481 replies that it seems to have been right. But it can't help being reoubled. It wishes it had weaponry, even checking itself over to see if it can find one.

As luck would have it, one of its tools -- a probe of some sort which it hasn't figured out yet -- is very sharp.

written by Mingamango181 on May 25, 2011 20:57

"Ah... Thanks."

As Joris-O ends up bumping me, I look at Joris-O.

I'm hoping for your sake that you haven't been taken...

I go off and try to get my foot wounds fixed, and if successful, go off and get dressed.

written by Azirphaeli on May 25, 2011 21:47

I continue to wait patiently.⁴⁴⁹

written by Malkom on May 25, 2011 22:05

I am flung backwards by the blast, and slide down the wall, moaning. "Uhnk..." I try to get my PDC and call for medical help.

written by Speeder on May 25, 2011 22:06

As I hear the explosion, I actually ignore it, not even a small jump of startlement.

"Common Mango, faster! Friend Computer will get very angry with us being late to debriefing."

written by Cryoburner on May 26, 2011 01:08⁴⁵⁰

"Maybe we should just start without them. They probably got distracted by some interesting light fixtures or something."

⁴⁴⁹ AZIRPHELII: (OOC I will be out on vacation untill Tuesday so I will miss many turns, little to no internet access most likely)

⁴⁵⁰ Cryoburner: Wouldn't that be "Come on, Mango"? The common mango, otherwise known as the Indian mango, is probably beyond your security clearance. 😊

"Or maybe we could have lunch now, and have the debriefing when they get here! That would be a much more efficient use of everyone's time!"

written by Gligar on May 26, 2011 01:34

Cloning station (C sublevel)

As the techs head over to the desk, Mango-R is left to glare at Joris-O and wonder if he's still himself. Once he's done glaring, he limps over to the desk in search of medical help. Sure enough, there's the medical supplies. He takes a bandage and manages to sort out his foot somewhat, before being redirected back towards the jumpsuits. He takes the hint and gets dressed, while Speed-Y looks on and tells him to hurry up.

John-R waits by the door.

Chemical showers

Once the smoke dies down, Malkom-R is left, seriously injured, by a wall. He can't feel his legs, there's just pain. Probably because pieces of shower have embedded themselves in them..

He tries to reach for his PDC, but the pain is too great.

Debriefing room 27

Azir-R continues to wait.

Cryo-R suggests that they might as well start, saying that the others are probably examining light fixtures.

"Looking at everyone's psych profiles, I can see that there is only one clone here who would ignore their mission to inspect a light fixture. Would anyclone care to guess who?"

"But you may be right. About debriefing. Lunchcycle is not for many hourcycles. How about we start with... you. Let's start from the top: what was your mission briefing?"

written by Speeder on May 26, 2011 02:10

I decide to wait with John.

I also decide to not notice Lucas laughing or holding laughter. I mean, I did noticed it of course, I only pretend that I did not.

written by Malkom on May 26, 2011 02:24

I decide to attempt to use my awful maybe-mutation, as that seems the only course available.

I concentrate on the pain in my body, willing it to go away, mentally pushing it away. If I succeed, I grab my PDC and call into it for urgent medical assistance.

Meanwhile, in TransClone Space:

A sepulchral voice echoes out of the void... "Looks like we could be getting a new arrival soon. ContComp, what are the chances of this?"

A mechanical voice echoes out of the void... "Chances are about 50.0050321513 percent."

A sepulchral voice echoes out of the void... "Alright. Someone get a berth ready, just in case."⁴⁵¹

written by Cryoburner on May 26, 2011 02:26

"Is it the idea bot?"

"Oh yeah, let's get started! My mission briefing was to go to the reactor. I went there, thus successfully completing my mission."

written by Lightning4 on May 26, 2011 10:02

I shake my head and give off a simple "Hah".

I position myself more comfortably in my chair and listen to the debriefing.

written by 4616599 on May 26, 2011 15:12

I begin screaming and flapping my hands around.

I blindly run around the room erratically, crashing into and head-butting as many clones as possible.

"Ze plane! Zidane!" I blub incoherently.

written by Jam on May 26, 2011 16:11

I also wait with John-R.

"So, what did you think of Freaky?"

written by Gligar on May 26, 2011 18:13

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Speed-Y decides to wait with John-R.

Lucas-R finally fails in not laughing, which Speed-Y notices while, at the same time, declining to notice it.

Joris-O starts screaming. He runs around... headbutting people?

People like Speed-Y, the two techs, and Lucas-R? Does he have a dea-

"Enough! I'm call Internal Security!"

One of the techs does just that, while the other pulls out a laser pistol.

Jam-O tries to ignore this and asks what people thought of Freaky. "I'm in two minds, sir," John-R replies. "On the one hand, he's an extremely powerful mutant, and I want to be like him. On the other hand... he's unregistered and probably a fugitive."

Debriefing Room 27

Cryo-R asks if it's the idea bot, before saying that his mission was to go to the reactor.

"What else? Simply going somewhere does not constitute a mission. You have to do something while you're there for it to be a mission. What was your mission?"

The laser turret is joined by another, and by the electrified manipulators of a certain jackobot. "Please try to think, citizen. Perhaps a little laser therapy is in order. Or shock therapy, apparently. Though I do hope that my jackobot has enough power for this mission."

⁴⁵¹ MALKOM: (OOC: Edited to add a missing quote sign. Edited to correct OOC text size.)

L4-O makes himself comfortable as he listens.

Chemical Showers

Malkom-R attempts something. He tries to harness his body's apparent healing powers, to no avail.

written by Speeder on May 26, 2011 18:29

After a while, I look at John and say.

"Do not worry, Friend Computer knows he is holding off the other mutants, and probably is leaving him without being capture exactly for that reason, not being in the hierarchy means he can do anything that is necessary to fight the other mutants, without Friend Computer itself being accused of treason."

After I realize what I just said I look at John a bit startled and say.

"Oh... I hope we do not get into shady stuff... Well, we ALREADY did shady stuff, when we were tasked to invade a PURPLE area and use a ULTRAVIOLET terminal, what I mean is, I hope we are not used as scapegoat in case something bad happens..."

Then I realize that I said further things closer to treason.

"And now I should keep my mouth shut, because if I continue rambling soon I still start to say things of INDIGO clearance or something."

Finally I notice the commotion with Joris, but hey, it headbutted me?

"Joris, what are you doing? Stop it, now!"

I do not attempt to save him. (yet?)

written by Mingamango181 on May 26, 2011 20:50

Once ready, I go over to the desk, expecting to see all the forms and other required equipment ready so that I may fill them out quickly.

If they're there, then I get to filling them out once I've read and understood the contents.

...I can sense an impending doom.

written by Megagun on May 26, 2011 20:52

"Aww, I wish I was able to drink B3. It's looking like this debriefing may be fun!"

written by Jam on May 27, 2011 00:31

"You're in two minds? Now, did you mean that as a figure of speech, or literally?"

"I agree with you. It'd definitely be useful to have the power of Freaky... It's be easy to fight commies then... Especially if you can be registered at the same time..."

I look towards Joris-O

"Are you okay?"

written by Cryoburner on May 27, 2011 00:33

"Oh, well actually, I don't think anyone filled me in on exactly what to do. You see, I apparently had a case of amnesia, and when I came to, the computer asked me to go to the reactor. I went there, of course, and there were some other clones there as well, most of which were either sleeping, or otherwise being inadequate. I really would suggest a full review of their work performance.

Anyway, during my inspection of the reactor, I came across a portable nuclear device, which appeared to be installed against standard reactor operating procedures. I attempted to disarm the device right there, but some clone didn't want me to. Now that I think of it, he might have been a communist. After that, things get a little hazy.

When I came to again, I was requested to regroup with my team, and so I did. At least, I regrouped with Sal and my fellow lift passenger. There were some others there as well. They seemed to be transporting the device without bothering to disarm it first for some reason. At one point, I think another clone was going to disarm it, but this big metallic guy poked a bunch of holes in him, before running off with the device. A few minutecycles later, there was what seemed to be a large explosion coming from the direction that the metallic guy ran off in. He apparently used the device to blow up some of Friend Computer's valuable property.

Oh, and there were these exploding guys. And a pickpocket. I seem to be missing some of my belongings. You haven't seen them, have you? Not long later, there a notice to come here, and so we did. Well, some of us did. I don't know what the others are doing. You don't think they're having lunch, do you?"

written by Gligar on May 27, 2011 02:02

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Speed-Y looks at John-R. He says that our mutual friend knows about Freaky and what he is doing. He is apparently being allowed to roam freely in order to fight other mutants of his class. To suggest otherwise would be to suggest that The Computer can commit treason.

He realises what he just said and quickly ads that he hopes they don't get roped into the same grey area... oh wait, they did, at the compnode... he'd better shut up now before he ends up eating his own feet...

He realises that Joris-O is rampaging and orders him to stop.

Meanwhile, Mango-R has finished getting ready. He heads back over to the desk, where the tech is waiting with his forms, as well as a laser pistol and Mango-R's ME card. "Sign here, here, here, here, here, here, here, here, and here, please."

Jam-O speaks to John-R, who still looks a little troubled. John-R laughs. "Oh, don't worry, it's just me in here." He taps his head.

Jam-O asks Joris-O if he's okay, but the clone doesn't answer.

Debriefing Room 27

The idea bot wishes he could consume B3, since the briefing promises to be fun.

Speaking of the debriefing, Cryo-R is continuing giving his version of events. Apparently, he found "some other clones" at the reactor, obstructing him, and being "inadequate". He found a nuclear device there and attempted to disarm it, but was stopped from doing so by the aforementioned clones, one of whom took the device and detonated it somewhere.

"Your report is still incomplete, citizen," the High Programmer says, adopting a similar tone to our mutual friend. "For a start, what did this nuclear device look like? Are you certain that it was installed incorrectly? Are you a qualified reactor technician? Are you qualified to disarm nuclear devices? Who are Sal and your 'fellow lift passenger'? Who were these clones? Perhaps they were your team members, who, for reasons unknown, saw fit to deny you access."

The jackobot replies, "I can answer one of those questions, sir. 'Sal' is the name he gave to me, apparently a severe corruption of my serial number."

written by Jam on May 27, 2011 04:01

I look at Joris-O, then look at the techs...

"Maybe his brain is just tired? I mean, his last clone and his current clone were alive at the same time, I'd imagine that wouldn't be good for his brain... I'm sure he'll get better in a few minutecycles... But, Speed-Y sir, can I talk to you for a sec?"

I suddenly walk up to Speed-Y, and whisper to him...

written by Speeder on May 27, 2011 04:26

I... hear the whisper?⁴⁵²

But I keep a eye on Joris, while waiting for Mango to finish.

written by Mingamango181 on May 27, 2011 06:10

I start signing here, here, here, here, here, here, here, here and here, just as the tech specified. As I finish, I check the ME card.

"Oh my. That's my first one."

written by 4616599 on May 27, 2011 10:18

I continue running around.

"Stop? Yesh, yesh, I'llwll schtop!"

My speech seems almost deliberately slurred.

I charge toward a clone filling up forms and violently slam into him, pushing both of us floorward!

written by Lightning4 on May 27, 2011 11:31

"Indeed it was us... unfortunately."

I shake my head.

"Reasons unknown, hmph. Been nothing but a nuisance, that one..."

written by Cryoburner on May 27, 2011 11:41

"Ah, the nuclear device looked much like your typical device, only nuclear."

"Oh, more precisely, it looked like a cylinder, about 100 x 60 cm in a frame.

The cylinder was emblazoned with the radiation symbol, and was connected by a pair of cables that were screwed in place to a keypad.

The keypad, in addition to the usual alphanumeric, had things like "10", "11", "12" and smiley buttons on it.

There was also an LED countdown, which was then at 08:48:02.

It looked like one needed to enter a code to disarm the bomb, or possibly just yank on the cords really hard.

Actually, it wasn't really installed when I got to it, so much as it was laying near the reactor with strips of tape stuck to it. I don't recall ever seeing such a device laying near a reactor like that before, so it must have not belonged there...

As for being qualified to disarm nuclear devices, the amnesia made it difficult to remember the specifics, but I'm sure I must be, since the computer sent me there, saying it was vitally important that I get there. The computer would certainly not send someone who wasn't qualified to handle such devices for a mission of such vital importance!

Oh, and yeah, my fellow lift passenger is an expert at lifts (though seemingly not a particularly good one). He's not here right now, so he's most likely in a lift somewhere. Oh, and this is just some clone who was wandering around, who wanted to come with us to get lunch."

I gesture in the direction of Azir-R.

"I suppose he's part of the team now too. As for the others, I'm not sure, as I don't think they ever introduced themselves or filled me in on what they were doing. You don't think they were communists, do you?"

written by Megagun on May 27, 2011 13:01

"Yeah. Here's a bunch of troubleshooters who spend time around a known communist without shooting him. Surely, they can't be communists themselves! Really!

Also, yeah, the keypad. That was a fun one. Someone should interrogate one of them commies to understand how fun it was. Here's a hint: it was very fun..

Even more fun was the device it was attached to, and the forkbot that was used to carry the device towards the sector's Reactor. A clever move, really. Storing a nuclear weapons device inside a forkbot. Brilliant, absolutely brilliant. If I weren't an ideabot with amazing processing powers, I wonder if I could come up with such a brilliant plan myself!"

⁴⁵² SPEEDER: (ooc: PM to me? Or something? O.o confused...)

written by Malkom on May 27, 2011 15:01

I try to scream, as loud as possible, letting the pain help me. I preferably scream in some form resembling the word HELP.

Meanwhile, in TransClone Space:

A sepulchral voice echoes out of the void... "Looks like things are going badly for this fellow..."

written by Gligar on May 27, 2011 20:25

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Jam-O suggests that Joris-O's brain might tired after the whole zombie thing. He'll probably recover soon.

He then whispers something to Speed-Y, who looks a little confused, even as he keeps an eye on Joris-O.

As it happns, Joris-O is over near Mango-R, who is signing here, here, here, here, here, here, here, here, and here, before looking at his ME Card. he has enough time to note that it's identical to his old one before it's snatches out of his hands by Joris-O, who tries to eat it.

The tech decides that enough is enough and punches Joris-O in the head. "That;'s ENOUGH!"

He looks like he wants to say more, but he is interrupted by a rather loud yell from the showers. The tech goes over to investigate.

Chemical showers

It's Malkom-R, who seems to want help. Again.

The tech enters, and looks at him. "Citizen, if you'll just keep the noise down, I'll sort something out for you." He pulls out his PDC and dials Medical Services. "Hi, this is the cloning station at C Sublevel. I need emergency pickup for one clone. Let's hope he isn't one of those TransClone freaks... who knows what they'll do to him..."

Debriefing room 27

L4-O says that yes, they were the ones. Unfortunately. Cryo-R has been nothing but trouble.

Cryo-R continues speaking about the nuclear device -- the Tsar, you'll recall. He describes the keypad, saying that he assumes it would either need a code or maybe to just remove the pad. "Most nukes are designed to detonate when they are tampered with," the High Programmer says. "Had you actually removed the pad, you would have detonated the nuke. Right next to the reactor. The end result would have been the erasure of not only you, but of everyone at the reactor."

Cryo-R continues, talking about his "fellow lift passenger". "I believe," the jackobot says, "he is referring to Lucas-R-AHK, who was on the lift with him when it reached O Sublevel, where you sent me, as you recall. We then went up to the reactor, where, despite attempts by the rest of the team, Cryo-R went down into the reactor gantry himself. I will say more when I am called to do so."

"So you actually went past the reactor before going there?" the High programmer asks Cryo-R. "O Sublevel is nowhere near the reactor."

Instead of answering, Cryo-R indicates Azir-R, who, he says, is just looking for lunch. "Keep mealtimes out of this."

But Cryo-R continues, saying that the others didn't explain anything -- perhaps they were communists?

The idea bot agrees. After all, they were around communists without shooting them. Perhaps one of them should be interrogated.

"I do need their reports," the High Programmer replies. "Primarily so I can figure out exactly how to proceed from here. There are sure to be traitors, and there are sure to be lies. But who is lying, and who is the traitors?"

He pauses. "Hmmm... yes, maybe that could work... but of course, they would need to be here..."

written by Megagun on May 27, 2011 20:45

"Okay, okay. I'll tell... You know what the funny thing is? The keypad was broken; wrongly-programmed. Any code would disarm it temporarily for a few minutes, with the exception of one specific code. This code would be used by the Communists in an emergency situation, such as when they would all be on the verge of getting captured. That's right, the special code was reserved for blowing up the device immediately.

I think the problem was that whoever programmed it forgot to work out the case for when the bomb was already armed and counting down. You see, any code entered, with the exception of the override blowup code, would arm the device and reset the timer to a few minutecycles. This would allow anyone to disarm the device by constantly entering the wrong code. Funny, isn't it?

Obviously, the guy that programmed the bomb wasn't a High Programmer such as yourself, sir. I doubt you would make a similar mistake!

Sir, I will send you the code in question via the PDC network. I'm assuming you already know it, for it was part of the mission briefing of my old team, Team Ivy. Should something unfortunate happen to me, and you hear someone mention this code, you'll know what it means."

I look at the others in the room.

"This is why I was so hesitant on disarming the nuclear weapons device myself; I had to see if anyone else claimed to have a code for the device. If anyone else did claim to have one, it would mean that they were a commie mutant traitor!"

I stand still for a moment, apparently idling.

"...oh, sorry.. Carry on, sir!"

written by Malkom on May 27, 2011 21:13

I faint away from pain and relief.

Meanwhile, in TransClone space...

A sepulchral voice echoes out of the void. "Looks like we've been detected. Cut contact with the Alpha dimension!"

The space shimmers, and slips away from the reality of Alpha Complex, carrying the minds of hundreds who are awaiting recloning away with it.

written by Lightning4 on May 27, 2011 21:22

I address Cryo first.

"Wait. The countdown was originally eight hourcycles?"

I frown hard.

"It was 30 minutecycles once we extracted it. I have the feeling YOU were involved somehow. If not for that, we wouldn't have lost Massacrebot or Speed-Y's prime! At least, I think it's his prime."

I then address the Idea Bot.

"You mention the forkbot... yes, it's true, we found the device on one of the upper levels. Took it from the commies, we did... it was hooked up to the floor. The commies were possibly about to detonate it on the spot.

We didn't actually know it was a bomb. Just some fancy nuclear device... it made a great power source since the forkbot was running out of power about then. I don't even think it had the keypad attached yet."

"Of course, we never made it to the reactor... thanks to Cryo-R here damaging Nukabot. And apparently it didn't even matter, since the commies still somehow got a hold of the device... I knew we shouldn't have trusted that repair crew."

I look a little sad.

written by Speeder on May 27, 2011 22:14

I nod to Jam.

"Ok... so, we have two clones that need to be carried or something?"

I check if Joris is still reacting after the punch, if he is, I attempt to pull him toward the door, if not I put him on my shoulders and walk toward the door... If he resist, I punch him too.

written by Mingamango181 on May 27, 2011 22:47

"Oj!"

I grab my ME card from Joris-O's mouth. Then slap him in the face.

"So... Oh yes. That. I suspect Mindgrabber isn't used to such clones as this..."

I pick up the laser pistol, and holster it.

written by Jam on May 28, 2011 00:44

I go check on Malkom-R...

Hmm... I guess I'll need to carry you?

I attempt to pick up Malkom-R, gently, so I don't cause him too much pain (because this clone of his hasn't tried to kill me yet)

written by Cryoburner on May 28, 2011 01:51

"Oh, don't worry about the keypad inadvertently being removed. I tested the cables, and they were on good and tight! They passed their inspection cablingly! As for the timer... Maybe someone dropped the device or something? In any case, if it was installed by communists, we certainly can't trust that the timer was accurate, can we?"

"As for why I went to O sublevel, I was headed to the level housing the reactor core, but apparently the lift didn't provide direct access to that level. The O sublevel button was already pressed, so it was necessary to carry on down to that level before heading back up to the reactor control room. We were able to pick up Sal while we were there, so it all worked out. The team just wouldn't be complete without Sal. Also, I think my fellow lift passenger wanted to go on a lift ride."

I turn to L4-O.

"Wait, so you're saying you were taking an unknown nuclear device to the reactor, but that I stopped you from doing so? That sounds mighty suspicious. I can't say I remember that, due to the whole amnesia thing, but it sounds like I may have been valiantly attempting to keep the device away from the reactor! I'll bet you just conveniently left the device laying around for some of your comrades to pick up later."

written by Gligar on May 28, 2011 10:49

Debriefing Room 27

The idea bot explains a little further. It says that the keypad was actually improperly programmed: anything except the designated code would reset the Tsar's countdown -- but not actually disarm it. The designated code would detonate the Tsar instantly.

He sends the code over his mini-PDC. As to why Leeroy-O knew the code... well, he was briefed. He was a member of "Team Ivy" from some other sector, on a mission concerning the Tsar, perhaps to retrieve it.

The idea bot implies that anyone else knowing the code is a proof of treason. That's why Leeroy-O didn't tell anyone.

It realises that he's been monologuing, and falls silent.

L4-O speaks up. He seems surprised that the detonation time was in the hourcycles when Cryo-R examined it. When they got hold of the Tsar, there were only thirty minutecycles left. Perhaps Cryo-R tampered with it. If it weren't for that, Massacrebot would still be with them, as well as Speed-Y's prime.

To the ides bot, he says that the forkbot thing is true. Team Epsilon found the Tsar -- thinking it to be a generator -- and mounted it into their forkbot, since it was low on power. He says that the communists were working on it -- perhaps they were going to detonate it right there. Though it didn't have the keypad at that point.

The forkbot didn't make it to the reactor due to Cryo-R's damage to the forkbot. That would have been okay, but the Tsar still made it down there... it must have been the repair team.

Cryo-R claims that he tested the keypad's cables, and found them to be on tight. "Aha" the High programmer interjects. "So you did tamper with the device! Had you actually been trained in disarming nukes, you would have known that any strain put on any part of the nuke would be classed as tampering. Such as, say, pulling on cables to 'test' them. Your actions have earned you an Official Reprimand, citizen! As well as a Treason Point."

Cryo-R continues, explaining that the lift didn't go directly to the reactor, and that it was already heading to O Sublevel. He adds that perhaps his passenger just wanted to go for a ride.

"That's not what I'm, seeing from the security footage," the High Programmer replies. "To me, it looks like you pressed the button yourself."

Cryo-R then claims that maybe he was preventing the Tsar from getting to its destination by damaging the forkbot. "So how do you account for it being there anyway? You say that they just left it there? It looks to me that the bot requested that the team leave, so shouldn't the blame lie with the one who damaged the bot? That is, you. Maybe you were just being a traitor by damaging valuable Computer Property."

Cloning station (C sublevel)

Speed-Y checks on Joris-O. He's currently being slapped around a bit (no word as to with what) by Mango-R, who has retrieved his ME Card.

Speed-Y goes over and starts pulling Joris-O towards the door, allowing Mango-R to pocket the laser pistol, and leave his forms in the desk. But not after commenting that perhaps that mutant isn't used to Joris-O...

Jam-O goes to check on Malkom-R, as two Medical services clones enter carrying a stretcher. "Did someone call for a pickup?"

Chemical Showers

As Jam-O enters, the tech looks out and motions to the medics.

Jam-O sees that Malkom-R appears to have fainted. His legs are a mess.

written by Mingamango181 on May 28, 2011 13:50

"So, am I good to go?" I ask the tech.

If so, I go and start following after Speed-Y, though with a slight look on my face. One that shows suspicion, and even... hatred?

I'll get out of here, just a little longer...

If not, I wait for them to finish, and merely watch as everything goes on.

written by Speeder on May 28, 2011 15:24

After everyone is back on the room and ready to go (even if it is go to the medical station), I leave the cloning station, and wait for John to retrace his path toward where he came from (thus toward the debriefing).

written by Malkom on May 28, 2011 16:34

I... remain unconscious. I seem to be doing a lot of that nowadays.

A small, dark blot recedes from reality...

written by Lightning4 on May 28, 2011 17:13

I smile a little bit as the High Programmer responds to Cryo.

"Even if we HAD brought the device to the reactor, there was no intention of simply handing it over to the commies. We probably would've just killed them outright instead of trying to infiltrate the group."

"Although... I suppose I might be too trusting if there is potentially a traitor in our midst..."

written by 4616599 on May 28, 2011 17:15

I continue struggling and blubbing incoherently. I try to bite Speed-O's suit, or anything in the way.

written by Megagun on May 28, 2011 17:37

"Well, if the Device didn't have a keypad attached to it yet, it must've not been converted into a Weapons Device yet, wouldn't you agree?"

I mean, if it was already a Nuclear Weapons Device, why would the commies butcher the repair crew? Oh, right, you might not have heard about this. The repair crew was slaughtered. Quite a horrible sight, when I arrived at the scene, really. Corpses everywhere! You're lucky I don't need to sleep anymore, 'cause I'd be getting NIGHTMARES from that! Phew!

Also, yeah, the Forkbot had botched up Asimov circuitry. I find your incompetence at noticing this disturbing. So why did you listen to it when it told you to leave it alone? Sir, can you remind us what exactly standard procedure is with regards to bots without working Asimov circuitry?

Now, you know what I think? Someone in your team is a commie and sent the Forkbot an order to tell your team to leave it alone, so that the traitor's commie friends could show up to convert the Device into a Nuclear Weapons Device. As the Forkbot lacked properly functioning Asimov circuitry, it couldn't determine whether the order was valid or not, and decided to accept the order in fear of breaking a perfectly valid order.

Now, I wonder who the commie could be.. It had to have been someone who could send out messages via PDC or bot covertly, without anyone else noticing."

written by Gligar on May 28, 2011 20:16⁴⁵³

Cloning station (C sublevel)

The medics disappear into the showers for a moment, and return with Malkom-R on their stretcher.

Mango-R asks the tech if he's good to go. "Yes, of course," he is told.

Speed-Y waits for everyone to return to the room (including Jam-O, who is following Malkom-R and the medics) before indicating to John-R that he should proceed.

As the team heads out into, and through, the corridor outside, Mango-R has an odd look on his face. Is that... hatred, directed at Speed-Y? The team needs a Happiness Officer...

Food vat hall

John-R leads the team through the hall, towards the lifts. It is here that the medics depart, heading down a side corridor, taking Malkom-R with them.

John-R and the group stop at the lifts. Speed-Y becomes aware that Joris-O is trying to bite him.

Unfortunately, there's a small problem. Apparently, some vat slime has been spilled from a food vat. transfer line running near the lift shaft. For safety reasons, the doors have been cordoned off./ A sign indicated that anyone wishing to use the lift should head up the gantries to the normally-sealed A Sublevel exit.

Debriefing Room 27

L4-O smiles. As he says, even if Nukabot had made it to the reactor, did he think that they'd just hand over their nuclear device? No, they'd probably have exterminated the lot of them. But, since they already had it, the team had to use more subtle methods.

But the thought of a traitor in their midst is troubling.

The idea bot continues. The device may not have been converted to a bomb until after the communists got their hands on it again. After all, if it was already a nuke, the repair team wouldn't have bitten the dust like they did (something that the team didn't know).

And speaking of forkbot-related matters, there is the matter of its Asimov circuits. The idea bot calls L4-O incompetent for not noticing this. "Watch your words, idea bot. I'm starting to suspect your own circuits at this point.

And for further reference, the correct procedure for dealing with a frankenstein bot is to notify the authorities, and keep your distance if possible. As it happens, they notified me. And since it would not be a good idea to leave a frankenstein bot at the compnode, they took it with them."

But the idea bot isn't finished. It states that a member of Team Epsilon is a communist, one who secretly sent a command to the forkbot, telling it to tell everyone to stay away. Not, this commie would have to be someone who could send messages without being seen...

When it's done, the idea bot seems to freeze momentarily. It seems to be running close to some internal directive ordering against some activity or other.

written by Speeder on May 28, 2011 21:02

I peer at the sign.

"Vatcrap"

I then try to figure where the place we are supposed to go is located.

"Someone know where is that?"

As I notice Mango funny look and Joris biting me, I give a funny look back to them.

"What is up with you two? Stop biting me! And you, what is the matter?"

written by Malkom on May 28, 2011 21:30

I remain unconcious. Where do I get the feeling that being unconcious is something I'm really, really good at?

written by Lightning4 on May 28, 2011 21:59

"Nukabot still seemed to express interest in keeping with the group... so it was certainly still loyal. We had intended to get the Asimov circuit repaired. But then... well, you know by now already."

I wince upon the Idea bot's recollection of the repair team.

"Doesn't sound too pleasant. Although I can't help but wonder if Aleksandr and Pitr were among the dead... I doubt it.

I don't know if you remember those two... there's been quite a clone shakeup since throwing off the commie rebellion."

written by Mingamango181 on May 28, 2011 22:36

I do as the sign says, heading up the gantries. If I have no recollection of where they are, I pick a direction (other than right towards the vat slime) and follow it, preferably towards one with stairs that go up some levels.

written by Jam on May 29, 2011 01:13

I follow Mango-R, so he doesn't get lost again...

written by Gligar on May 29, 2011 02:17

Food vat hall

Speed-Y looks at the sign, and realises he doesn't know where the A Sublevel exit is. He wonders if anyone knows, before noticing Mango-R's expression, and Joris-O biting him. He returns the look, and asks what is the matter, as well as telling Joris-O to stop.

Mango-R seemingly ignores him and heads up a ladder to the gantries. Jam-O follows him, to make sure he doesn't get lost again.

⁴⁵³ GLIGAR: (OOC: Enough, Malkom.)

Food vat gantries

The gantries consist of a multitude of walkways and supports criss-crossing between the food vats on two levels, presumably A and B sublevels. MAnGo-R heads in random directions, eventually winding up on A Sublevel.

The walkways are more crowded up here, with INFRARED workers, with their RED and ORANGE supervisors watching stare, prod, and stir the open food vats, which contain some sort of caustic slime that bears little resemblance to the foods everyone is used to seeing in the food halls. But remember that this is only the first step in food production.

Jam-O follows at a discreet distance, trying to avoid colliding with the odd worker who isn't watching where they're going.

Somewhere in the hall, a scream indicates that someone has fallen into a food vat. It is cut off abruptly.

Soon, Mango-R reaches the promised A Sublevel exit. It is guarded by two Internal Security goons who demand to see his ME Card.

Somewhere on C Sublevel

Malkom-R remains unconscious as he is transferred from the stretcher onto a hard surface.

Debriefing room 27

L4-O points out that the forkbot still seemed to be loyal, and willingly accompanied the team. He winces at the idea bot's description of how the repair team were massacred, and wonders if Pitr and Alexandr were among the dead. They probably weren't. Does the idea bot remember them?

written by Speeder on May 29, 2011 02:25

I catch up with the group.

When asked for the ME card, even if the guard is below YELLOW, I still show it, kinda in a "lead by example" way.

I look at the vat where someone fell, to see how the rescue work.

written by Malkom on May 29, 2011 03:47

I stir slightly, and start to wake up. Gradually.⁴⁵⁴

written by Mingamango181 on May 29, 2011 11:23

I stop and show my ME card. I stand there, waiting, with a look that makes me appear alive, and make a faint smile when I'm allowed to pass.

I look back for just a moment, to acknowledge that I heard the scream.

Jam-O... Why are you following me like that?

I frown a little.

written by Megagun on May 29, 2011 13:09

"Who are Alexandr and Pitr? I don't think I've ever heard of them..."

written by Lightning4 on May 29, 2011 13:21

"We first ran across them when we emerged from the bunker into the warehouse... well, that was before it got blown to smithereens."

I think

"At least, I believe it was there. We ran across them several times later throughout the complex during the communist takeover. Then we saw them again as part of the repair crew, after the commies were repelled..."

"I think they were higher level commies. They're the only two we know with names besides Director Andrei."

written by 4616599 on May 29, 2011 14:41

I break free from Speed-O's grasp, and charge towards the densest bunch of INFRAREDS or other clones possible. I take off my jumpsuit, then start flapping it around indiscriminately whacking clones. I run into as many clones as possible, causing as much havoc as possible. (I also spend 1 PP)

written by Cryoburner on May 29, 2011 15:52

"Maybe the forkbot was still loyal, or maybe it wanted to stay with the group for other reasons. If its Asimov circuits were damaged, there's no telling what it had planned. Perhaps once you reached the reactor, it would have punched a hole in the reactor shielding, exposing all organic beings present to critical levels of radiation. Or it might have smashed into the control panels, causing the reactor to overheat uncontrollably, leading to interruptions in the broadcast of quality entertainment programming like Mandatory Team Troubleshooter, and Mandatory Team Troubleshooter: MMI Subsector. Maybe it would have just ran you all down, and given the device to the communists once you were taken care of. It's probably a good thing he was disabled before reaching such a critical area!"

written by Jam on May 29, 2011 16:20

I show the guards my ME card, then continue following Mango-R.

I note Mango-R looking at me with an odd expression.

"Okay, I know what you're thinking. (And I didn't even have to use my mutant power) Something like 'Why are you following me like that?'. Well, I've got to make sure you don't get lost and get yourself killed again..."

written by Gligar on May 29, 2011 20:29

Food vat gantries

Speed-Y catches up with Jam-O and Mango-R., and presents his ME card to the goons. "Thanks, citizen," one says. "You may pass."

⁴⁵⁴ MALKOM: OOC: Malkom-R. Legendary Unconscious Dwarf. Legendary Bumbler. Master Mistake Maker. High Master Hooligan.

recent behaviour or something...There's no real rush. For me, that is. As far as real things are concerned with, I just look like who I am. I don't think that's the case however...

Jam-O... A mutant may have left, but I'm still here.

written by Speeder on May 30, 2011 11:41

I give a blank look back at Mango, and do not blink, neither smile, specially, do not laugh either.

written by Azirphaeli on May 30, 2011 13:05

Hmm.. terminating communists. That sounds alot more fun than it should.

To do so though, I'd probably need weapons, supplies, and possibly some communists.

written by 4616599 on May 30, 2011 13:34

I struggle, mumbling.

"Whee. Trains. This is like being on a aeroplane, though a mobile phone would no doubt be useful assuming good transmissions from the satellite telecom networks."

I grin goofily.

"Ha, ha, ha."

written by Megagun on May 30, 2011 14:42

"Woo! I'm sure he'll make a fine addition to the REDs in JHT subsector! Is there any information about the name of the terminated clone?"

written by Jam on May 30, 2011 16:10

I look at the INFRARED clone.

"It's good you're being cautious, but I don't think this clone is a communist... Hang on, let me see him for a secondcycle..."

I look at him for a secondcycle, and seem to be thinking...

"Hmm..."

Then I suddenly start dragging him towards the edge of the gantry.

"Maybe you are a communist.. Well, better to be safe than sorry...."

I push him over the edge...

"Goodbye Joris-O."

written by Lightning4 on May 30, 2011 17:30

"Heh. INFRARED. I don't even remember when I was one. If I was one, even."

I think.

"So, what of our past before the bunker anyway? Are you allowed to divulge the information of how we got there? I know there was a brainscrub involved..."

written by Cryoburner on May 30, 2011 20:11

"I'll see if I can find some communists!"

I look around the room for any communists.

written by Gligar on May 30, 2011 21:21

Medical bay (C sublevel)

Malkom-R gives out one of those loud screams again. As he does, glassware starts shattering, all around the medical bay, many of them spilling chemicals al over the place.

The docbot stops what it is doing, since its chainsaw is vibrating like crazy. This, incidentally, is extremely painful for Malkom-R.

But the chainsaw doesn't break. The docbot notes, "Wow, with a scream like that, anyone would think you were a mutant or something..." It finishes off Malkom-R's legs, and readies a syringe. "But it is clear that you are in distress over something Therefore, I will do you a favour. Here." It sticks the syringe into Malkom-R's chest and injects half of its contents, which turns out to be qualine.

Immediately, Malkom-R realises that all this pain isn't really so bad... there's no reason to get worked up over anything... everything will be alright... he should really just relax... and hey, isn't it great how fast he stopped bleeding?

And look at that! The docbot's chainsaw just fell off! Life's funny like that, isn't it?

The docbot finally looks round at the destroyed glassware. "My my... that simply will not do. It is almost as if a mutant rampaged through ere, or something. There may even be an explosion or two. Or twenty. Or two hundred. That will not do at all."

Food vat gantries

Mango-R waits. He looks over at Speed-Y blankly. Speed-Y returns the look.

Something about Mango-R's face seems to say: the mutant may be gone, but I'm still here.

Joris-O is still acting crazy. Even as Jam-O convinces the INFRARED to not terminate him. "Well, all right, sir... hey! That's not fair, kill-stealing like that!"

And indeed he has. Jam-O grabs Joris-O by the head and drags him towards the vat himself... and pushes him in.

But Joris-O does not fall. Even though he is just past the point where he should topple into the vat to get broken down by the vat slime, he's still somehow staying on the gantry. And correct me if I'm wrong, but... wouldn't it be rather painful to have your head held up like that, while your body wants to fall?

And yet Joris-O seems to be in no pain.

"Hey, he's a mutant!" the INFRARED exclaims. "He must be, right? I still think he's a commie, though."

Debriefing Room 27

Azir-R continues listening, with a little more interest than before. terminating communists sounds fun. But he'd need equipment...

The idea bot says that the new RED will make a fine addition to the sector. It also wonders about the commie. "I'm sure the new RED will fit in just fine. As for the commie... well, he seems to have fallen into a food vat, so... there won't be much left to identify by now. But at least he is serving one final purpose in Alpha Complex."

L4-O tries to think back to when he was an INFRARED but of course, he can't. He doesn't even know if he was an INFRARED, thanks to his brainscrub. He asks the High Programmer if he can give any information on the prior lives of the team.

"I believe that the lot of you were being transferred to other sectors -- you, for instance, were in transit to DMV Sector, to provide support for the reconstruction effort. At least, until the communists decided to strike. Quite a few MemoMax records were lost in the process. Since yours had been transferred to a holding server pending your relocation, I was able to save them, and locate you in order to transfer you here instead. Naturally, you agreed to this mission. However, due to certain events which took place not long after, a brainscrub was deemed necessary."

Cryo-R decides to look for communists, starting with this room.

He quickly realises that a communist might look like anyone. Therefore, anyone could be a communist!

written by Jam on May 30, 2011 21:58

I look a bit disappointed as Joris-O fails to do anything spectacular.

"Hmm... Maybe he's not a mutant? And I was so sure..."

I lift Joris-O back up so he's safely on the gantry, then turn to the INFRARED...

"He's not a communist, and he's not a mutant either... He just appears to be, for reasons that are likely above your security clearance. But I appreciate your concern..."

I look around at the clones working at the food vats, then turn back to the INFRARED. I smile at him, then turn. I start pulling Joris-O towards Speed-Y and the others...

written by Speeder on May 30, 2011 22:05

I smile at Jam and Joris, then I return with my snake-like staring of Mango.

written by Azirphaeli on May 30, 2011 22:36

"What about myself, I'd like to know what I was up to before all this. Might help if I say, knew how to use a laser rifle or plasma grid or something."

written by Cryoburner on May 30, 2011 23:34

"Hey, maybe you're a communist, and you just don't remember! That would certainly make it easier for you to find one to terminate. I'll see if I can find some weapons and supplies!"

I look around the room for any weapons and supplies.

written by Malkom on May 31, 2011 00:26

Under the influence of whatever the docbot injected, I let out a silly giggle. "A mutant? Mutant! Cool word! Cool sound! Mutie-mute-Mutants! Woop!" I peer at the docbot. "Ooh! Dear little Buzzy!" I say, noting the fallen chainsaw blade.

I make a grab for dear little Buzzy!

written by Gligar on May 31, 2011 01:44

Food vat gantries

Jam-O looks disappointed. Joris-O didn't even do any proper floating...

He pulls Joris-O back onto the gantry, while telling the INFRARED that Joris-O is neither a commie nor a mutant. He looks around for a moment before dragging Joris-O back towards the others.

Behind him, the INFRARED can be heard muttering, "But... commie..."

Speed-Y smiles at Jam-O and Joris-O when they return, before continuing his stare-off with Mango-R.

Lucas-R can't take much more, though. "Sir, don't we have a debriefing?"

Debriefing Room 27

Azir-R asks about himself, wondering what he knows.

"Hmmm... Azir-R... Azir-R... Aha. As a Troubleshooter, you've had the standard training with laser weapons... and your profile says that you have an affinity for throwing things. Plasma grids, on the other hand, are beyond your security clearance."

Cryo-R suggests that Azir-R might have forgotten that he's a communist. Which would make finding a communist easier, if it were true. Now, weapons... He looks around the room.

Well, there's the laser turret, and Turbo, and Fred, and that spike thing on the idea bot...

Medical bay (C sublevel)

AN incredibly HAPPY Malkom-R thinks that the word "mutant" is cool, before he gets distracted by the docbot's chainsaw, which is now lying across Malkom-R's severed legs. He tries to pick it up, and name it Buzzy.

Apparently, Buzzy is still quite sharp, even after cutting through flesh and bone.

The docbot apparently fails to notice. It's busying itself looking through some of its supplies, before finding what it was looking for: a key. "I will be right back, citizen."

written by Speeder on May 31, 2011 01:48

As they get back, I poke Mango, so he can proceed forward, to the way that we were going and already showed ME cards to IntSec...

If he moves, I move too.

written by Lightning4 on May 31, 2011 02:07

I muse over what the High Programmer said.

"Hm. ...events... must've been pretty bad or pretty high clearance to warrant a brainscrub. Maybe someday I'll be high enough clearance to know the truth..."

written by Malkom on May 31, 2011 02:17

I let out a little yelp and gingerly wave Buzzy around, being careful to avoid the sharp edges. "Oohoo! Good Buzzy! Sweet Buzzy! Nice and shaarrp! How cool!"

Suddenly, I feel a... presence intruding on my conciousness.

That's a very nice mind you've got there, citizen. Mind if I borrow it for a while? Oh, by the way -- I'm not Headgrabber. Just a very close confidante of his. Good to find such a healthy little clone to inhabit, eh?

Uh-oh. I'm not feeling quite so euphoric now.

written by Azirphaeli on May 31, 2011 03:20

"Ooh, sounds like I've been having fun then. I'll make a note to find great enjoyment in throwing things in the near future!"

I leave myself a reminder in my PDC to call someone to inquire about equipment, credits, and other important things after debriefing.

"As for being a communist, let me check on that. Um, yeah, no sorry no luck here. If I run into any I'll be sure you're the first to know."

written by Jam on May 31, 2011 04:24

I smile.

"Heh... It's awesome being a registered mutant..."

I take one last look back at the INFRARED clone...

"Yes, make sure you terminate the commie, Roy! The commies deserve the vatslime!"

I continue smiling, and follow Speed-Y and Mango-R towards wherever it is we're supposed to be going...

written by Mingamango181 on May 31, 2011 08:37

I pass the checkpoint, jumping forward to avoid a probing manoeuvre from Speed -Y. I try not to place too much pressure on my injured foot as I land.

*I am by no means an idiot. Now what I'd appreciate would you to keep your hands/devices/equipment away from me. After all, I'm only a human.*⁴⁵⁵

written by Megagun on May 31, 2011 12:19

"Wow, those other folks of Team Epsilon are taking ages to get here. I'm lucky that I'm a bot now, or I would need a bathroom break right about now!"

⁴⁵⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: Sorry, Malkom, but you have insufficient clearance to involve F-class mutants. Sorry 😊)

I try to play some audio file similar to the sounds caused by urination. (Assuming I have speakers in my bot shell. 😊)

written by 4616599 on May 31, 2011 15:21

"Funny. Even I thought I was a commie for a moment."

My speech seems very stuttered.

"Wee"

written by Malkom on May 31, 2011 16:00

Oh, what's that? You're only RED clearance? Pity. Better go find someone else.

Something hits me, hard, in the back of the head. I slump, unconcious.^{456 457 458 459} written by Gligar on May 31, 2011 20:41⁴⁶⁰Food vat gantries)

Speed-Y pokes at Mango-R to get him to go forwards. Mango-R isn't quite fast enough to completely get out of the way. Though he does move forward. Speed-Y follows.

Mango-R's face betrays the fact that he'd prefer that he keeps his hands to himself -- he is still human, after all.

Jam-O tells the INFRARED (whose name is apparently Roy) to go after "that communist", and starts pulling Joris-O back towards the exit.

Joris-O mumbles that he thought that he was a communist for a second.

As Jam-O and Joris-O reach the exit, they are stopped by the guards. "Hey, wait a minute. That citizen's out of uniform. I'm afraid that I'll have to fine him. Let's see his ME Card..."

Stairwell

The rest of the team finds themselves in a short stairwell, leading up one level. An open door above is guarded by two more IntSec guards.

This place is somehow even more dusty than the bunker's stairwell. The styling if the handrails is decidedly antiquated, and the light fixtures look like the sort you find in the older vidshows. (Not that anyone other than Cryo-R would ordinarily see this sort of thing.)

Medical bay (C sublevel)

Malkom-R makes a few test swings of his new toy, before suddenly gets whacked on the head by something.

⁴⁵⁶ JAM: (OOC: I'm starting to think Malkom-R has the mutant ability to make himself fall unconscious. Wouldn't that be a odd power... 😊)

⁴⁵⁷ SPEEDER: (OOC: I bet he can scream inhumanly...)

⁴⁵⁸ JAM: (OOC: And Speed-Y has Hyperspeed, and Cryo-R has Cryokenesis, and L4-O has Electroshock, and Mango-R can make mangos appear out of thin air? 😊)

⁴⁵⁹ MALKOM: (OOC: and Jam-R has Jamification, so he can turn his enemies' legs to jelly!)

⁴⁶⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC: I know one that everyone has: the ability to hold an OOC conversation! 😊)

As it turns out, it's only the docbot returning with a wheelchair. "Oops... sorry about that, citizen. These things are always tricky to manoeuvre."

The docbot starts pulling Malkom-R onto the wheelchair.

Debriefing Room 27

L4-O thinks about the High Programmer's comments. He assumes that these "events" must have been pretty bad, or high clearance.

Azir-R thinks he'll be having fun, now he knows that he like throwing things. He makes a note in his PDC.

As for communism... he'll have to get back to him on that one.

The idea bot notes that it would have to take a Mandatory Bathroom Break around now if he were human. Seemingly to amuse itself, it plays a sound clip of water flowing into a container. On hearing it, one of the techs suddenly runs out of the room, saying something like "Ooopsgottago!"

Throughout the sector

The PA system comes to life with a screech. "Attention Team Epsilon! You are now late for your debriefing! May I remind you that tardiness is treason? Further delays will be met with fines. Thank you for your co-operation."

written by Mingamango181 on May 31, 2011 20:57

I decide to walk up the stairwell, until I get to where the IntSec guards are. I show my ME card to them. If I'm allowed to go through, I do so.

This place... It's... Oh nothing.

I look a little troubled.

written by Malkom on May 31, 2011 21:02

I wake up almost immediately and struggle with the docbot. "Hey you there! What d'you think you're doing? How can I be a troubleshooter without legs to help me shoot trouble?! No way can a Troubleshooter go around on a wheelchair!" I start hacking at the docbot with Buzzy, apparently still under the effects of whatever it injected into me.

written by Speeder on May 31, 2011 22:06

I... do the same as Mango!

Except for any creepy behavior.

written by Azirphaeli on May 31, 2011 23:37

After noting the PDC, I look around expecting the rest of the team to be here.. and am mildly disappointed if they are not. I begin to daydream.

written by Jam on Jun 01, 2011 01:13

I facepalm...

"Joris-O, put your jumpsuit back on! But give the guards your ME card first..."

If Joris-O doesn't give the guard his ME card, I search his jumpsuit for the card and give it to the guards myself...

I also check the security clearance of the guards, and their names, by checking for name tags on their jumpsuits (or, if that fails, using my mutant power.)

written by Gligar on Jun 01, 2011 01:44

Stairwell

Mango-R presents his ME Card to the guards, who wave him through. Speed-Y continues being a Model Citizen(tm) by doing the same. Other members of the team follow suit.

Passing through the stairwell, the team finds themselves on...

Roadway

...the roadway. Not too far away, a building looms. A sign near it identifies it as IOTA SUBSECTOR.

Down the road in the other direction, the domescraper rises up as far as the eye can see. Which, admittedly, isn't far, given the low lighting out here.

Food vat gantries

Jam-O tells Joris-O to put his jumpsuit on. He might as well be speaking to a zombie.

Instead, he fishes through Joris-O's jumpsuit, finding Joris-O's ME card, and giving it to the guard. "Thanks, citizen," the GREEN goon says. scanning the card and returning it. "Now get going before I find anything else wrong."

Before anything else, though, Jam-O looks at the goons a little closer. They're both GREEN, and have nametags, probably to try to look less like the nameless goons they usually are. Their names are Hans-G-JHT-2 and Claude-G-DPK-4.

Medical Bay (C Sublevel)

Malkom-R wakes up. "My my, is tat still another mutation?" the docbot exclaims.

But then it is too busy to speak, as Malkom-R attacks it, ironically with Buzzy, its own chainsaw.

Good thing that Malkom-R apparently hasn't figured out how to turn it on.

The docbot tries to defend itself with its own chainsaw, which of course isn't there. "My my, where did that get to?" it asks. "But to answer your question, it is perfectly acceptable for a troubleshooter to be in a wheelchair. You do not need legs to shoot, after all. Think what a pity it would be if your arms were to be hacked off, or mangled beyond use, or turned into mush by some method."

Debriefing Room 27

Ignoring the idea bot's noise, Azir-R looks around.

As he does, another clone enters. He addresses the High Programmer on the screen. "I came as soon as I could, sir."

"Ah, Derek-G! Don't worry about being late. Team Epsilon is bordering on being treasonously late."

written by Speeder on Jun 01, 2011 02:06

I look at the IOTA building.

Then I look to others.

"Ok, I am kinda lost... I hope we can get to P level on Central Subsector from there somehow."

I start to run toward it, already scanning the walls for any cargo elevator like the one near the Bunker.

written by Malkom on Jun 01, 2011 03:00

I look for a switch to the chainsaw. If I find one, I turn it on and buzz at the docbot with it. "Can't you regrow my legs or something with all that advanced Alpha Complex technology? Or is there any other alternative to being a... legless troubleshooter?" I shout. "I suppose I could always get recloned..."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 01, 2011 03:57

I notice Derek-G enter.

"Oh, hello sir! I didn't think you'd be coming to this debriefing..."

I frown.

"Where ARE those guys!..."

written by Megagun on Jun 01, 2011 06:43

I look around and try to remember if I've ever seen this GREEN clone before...

"Anyone care to elaborate who this GREEN clone is, and what his involvement with Team Epsilon is?"

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 01, 2011 07:48

I look for any places that might lead me towards the debriefing. Maybe there's another lift or device of a similar function nearby, from which I can go further.

I haven't been told the place of debriefing... So I guess since I haven't been here before, this is the wrong place.

written by 4616599 on Jun 01, 2011 10:35

"I'm a commie!" I mumble. "I'm a commie! A commiy, commie, commie!"

I bite the nearest clone's jumpsuit.

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 01, 2011 12:09

I am beginning to think they don't exist.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 01, 2011 15:43

"Maybe, they're actually communists, off being communist somewhere! It would certainly explain why they are so hesitant to come to the meeting. I wouldn't doubt if one or more of them were busy saying things like "I'm a commie!" right now..."

I take another, more thorough look at the melted chair, noting its color, and whether it still appears to be molten and/or sizzling.

written by Jam on Jun 01, 2011 17:04

"Thank you, sirs!"

I continue past the guards, but stop once Joris-O starts mumbling...

"Shush, you are not a commie!" I hiss in his ear. "You're just a little confused because —Ow! What the... Don't bite me!"

I angrily grip Joris-O's head with one of my hands, so my palm is on his forehead.

"Joris-O, unless you want your brains coming out your ears, I suggest you start cooperating... Now put your jumpsuit on, or I'll terminate you for admitting you were a communist..."

written by Gligar on Jun 01, 2011 21:02

Roadway (A Level)

Speed-Y is lost. Perhaps he can get to debriefing thorough Iota Subsector?

He starts looking for any signs of a lift that could take him to P Level. Unfortunately, he can't find one. And anyway, Iota Subsector doesn't look all that high. He does find an IntSec checkpoint, though, which seems to be the only entrance.

Mango-R looks around for any clue as to how to get to debriefing. Iota Subsector doesn't look all that promising. Perhaps he's in the wrong place.

A bright light suddenly catches everyone's eye. It's a searchlight, mounted on the domescraper. It seems to be looking for something, perhaps a rogue bot, or a commie mutant traitor. The light pans towards the team, passes over them, and moves on. It's probably nothing, though.

John-R looks around. "Hang on... this is the roadway to the bunker, right? Then we should head for the domescraper..."

Stairwell

Jam-O and Joris-O are lagging behind. Joris-O claims he's a commie and bits Jam-O's jumpsuit.

Jam-O tells him to shush and put on his jumpsuit. If he doesn't... well, he has ample evidence to terminate him on the spot.

Medical bay (C sublevel)

Malkom-R finally figures out the chainsaw, and proceeds to attack the docbot with it. He loudly demands that something be done about his legs. He can't have no legs, right?

"Cease your current action immediately!" the docbot cries. "What are you, some sort of Frankenstein Destroyer?! For your information, my asimov citcuits are in pristine condition!"

Malkom-R continues his attack.

"And as fzzrbst legs, there are ways to replvfhsjkgs them, but you hrve indhjknt clearance, and inshglertg credit. And do note that Intefhjjeal Seclgfdhnljty are watching. They will want to ksew why you are desnjgkding Codjbter Prkdjlferty."

The docbot counterattacks with its qualine syringe, injecting Malkom-R with a triple dose.

Debriefing Room 27

L4-O greetd Derek-G. He didn't know the R&D tech would be at the debriefing.

"Well," Derek-G replies, "I do want to hear your team's report about the functioning of ArmourBot X-1. If nothing else, perhaps you could tell me why it was destroyed."

The idea bot wonders if it knows Derek-G. It realises that it It asks about Derek-R, and why he has anything to do with Team Epsilon.

It realises that Derek-G is the clone that it met on Q Level, back when it was a fleshbag. (It seems like forever ago.)

Azir-R is having doubts that there even is a "rest of the team".

Cryo-R things that this "rest of the team" are actually communist, and that's why they're not here. "I'll hold you to that," the High Programmer says.

But Cryo-R has already fixated on the melted chair. While the High Programmer facepalms, Cryo-R inspects the blackened chair, noting that it seems to have stopped sizzling. It's still hot, though.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 01, 2011 21:26

Upon hearing John-R's statement, I sprint as fast as I can towards the domescraper. avoiding anything that could result in death.

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 01, 2011 21:57

"Well, he did say a commie was terminated recently right? Maybe it was one of them?"

written by Speeder on Jun 01, 2011 22:29

I follow Mango, unless he dies, in that case I avoid whatever killed him.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 01, 2011 23:33

"It was vaporized in the nuclear explosion. Speed-Y took off at top clip to the range down on O-Sublevel with the bomb... it was the only safe place nearby to detonate. Nothing left I imagine... sorry sir."

"But its speed was really impressive. It was gone before we could say a word. Hopefully Speed-Y will be here to add to that..."

written by Malkom on Jun 02, 2011 01:17

"AAAA THE DOCBOT IS POISONING ME!"

I slash at the docbot with Buzzy.

written by Gligar on Jun 02, 2011 01:25

Roadway (A level)

Mango-R sets off towards the domescraper at a run, narrowly avoiding a group of collectobots carrying a wrecked autocar. Speed-Y and the gang do their best to keep up.

As they pass, Speed-Y notices that the wreck looks like the autocar the communists used when they tried to breach the loading dock.

The group keep running.

Behind them, Jam-O and Joris-O emerge onto the roadway.

Debriefing room 27

Azir-R suggests that the bot might have had something to do with the terminated communist, before L4-O corrects him.

He explains that Massacrebot was, regrettably, vaporised in the explosion of theTsar. But in its final act, it demonstrated an impressive turn of speed. He suggests that Deek-G speak to Speed-Y about it when he gets here.

"Yes... I have reviewed ArmourBot X-1's final transmission. It was commanded to dump its working memory just prior to its destruction," he adds. "I will go into more detail later."

Medical Bay (C sublevel)

Malkom-R yells at the docbot before the qualine kicks in.

It really isn't all that bad, you know. He's still alive, isn't he? Why does he have to fall below mandatory minimum happiness rating over something like the loss of his legs? Why does he have to lash out at the bot which so generously gave him a wheelchair?

The docbot seems thoughtful. "Hmmm... that did nzt take easect at the tihe it should. Pewpfdls you are a mufgdgt. I shall have to ndfgy the audtsertes."

written by Jam on Jun 02, 2011 02:14

I see the autocar, and suddenly realize where we are... I slow down a bit as the memories come back...

"Ahahahaha! zap zap Yay! Faster, forkbot, faster! zap Die commies! zap zap Hahaha! Lightspeed Jam! Lightspeed Jam! zap zap zap" Heh heh heh... That was great...

...

Wait, where'd Speed-O—I mean, Speed-Y—go? Just how long have I been standing here?!

I check the time on my PDC...

"Yikes! We are really late! Let's hope our debriefing officer is kind, and understands, and doesn't demote us, or something like that..."

I run towards where I remember the lifts were (assuming this is the same roadway as before), and hope I meet up with Speed-Y there...

written by 4616599 on Jun 02, 2011 04:17

"I'm nowt a commie, I'm a commie mootant trwaitor!" I mumble drunkenly.

"Go on... do the hole brain mwelt thing, you won't be abelt to."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 02, 2011 06:51

I sprint away, and keep going until I reach the domescraper.

But even as I arrive, I seem... edgy. I try to recollect the location of the lift, and when I remember, I go into the lift, push the button that closes the door, and then push what I think was the destination floor... P level, give or take a level should the button not be on the lift. I think, regardless of whether I'm in the lift or not.

Mindgrabber and Headgrabber, two completely different entities... Yet their mannerisms were hard to distinguish. Looks like there's still plenty things that have yet to be addressed... Is that not so?

written by Malkom on Jun 02, 2011 16:01

I give a big, silly grin. "Oohoo, mutants again! I loove that word! Loooooove it! You know, sometimes I think I'm a mutant too! Can I get one of those cool armbands? Pleeese? They look soo nice!"

written by Gligar on Jun 02, 2011 21:26

Roadway (A level)

Jam-O slows down as he remembers the fun times he had, shooting commies while riding on Nukabot...

...wait, where did Speed-Y and the rest go? Vatricrap! He's late!

He and Joris-O (who still hasn't put on that jumpsuit, and is now claiming to be a commie mutant traitor) maker a dash for the lift...

Ahead of them, the rest of the team has already reached the end of the roadway. The tractor is missing, and the loading dock's door has been closed.

Lift hall (A level)

Mango-R runs on ahead, finding a lift ready to go. He hits P, and leaves the rest of the team behind.

Medical Bay (C sublevel)

Malkom-R says he wants to register a mutation. "I do nzt hrnkle mnrtpon r4gkayrapuns, ygu skll hyvu to go to the offtice on D Qublglvel," the bot garbles.

written by Malkom on Jun 02, 2011 21:57

I shake Buzzy at the docbot. "Take me there at once, robot, or I'll saw the stuffing out of you!!"

I allow myself to be pushed along on the chair if the bot decides to take me to D Sublevel.

written by Speeder on Jun 02, 2011 22:09

I continue running, after noticing that Mango managed to go without me, I wait for the others to arrive, although I call a lift first.

written by Megagun on Jun 02, 2011 23:04

"...So, did anyone get to see the latest round of FunBall matches?"

written by Jam on Jun 02, 2011 23:58

I keep running towards the lifts, and look at Joris-O at the same time...

"Oh, you don't think I can melt your brain? Would you bet your life on it? Let's see what Speed-Y says, how about..."

I run towards Speed-Y...

"Speed-Y sir, Joris-O says he's a commie mutant traitor! Can I terminate him?! I've been itching to see if I have enough power to terminate a clone with my mind anyway..."

written by Speeder on Jun 03, 2011 00:10

"Sure! I wanna see it!"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 03, 2011 01:16

"Who has had time... what with the commies and the more commies, and the nuclear bomb, and the mutants..."

I continue in this fashion a little bit longer, my voice trailing away while doing so.

written by Gligar on Jun 03, 2011 02:01

Medical Bay (C sublevel)

Malkom-R again shrugs off medication that should be affecting him for hourcycles on end, and demands to be taken to the mutant registration office. "*bzzt*Memory corruption workround enabled. Negative, citizen. I must maintain my post. You are capable of getting there yourself. And besides, you are out of credit. Furthermore, using that chainsaw on me will run the risk of rupturing my micropile, irradiating a good portion of this level. I am not reporting your actions to Internal Security. Have a nice daycycle."

Lift hall (A level)

Speed-Y and his group reach the lift hall. Speed-Y calls a lift.

Jam-O arrives not long after, saying something to Joris-O. He asks for permission to terminate. Speed-Y enthusiastically gives it, since he would like to watch.

The lift arrives.

Debriefing Room 27

the idea bot decides to pass the time by asking about recent FunBall matches. Has anyone seen any?

L4-O hasn't. When has he had the time, what with the mission and all?

I nudge his head with my foot...

"Hmm... John-R, did you see that? Is his head supposed to be doing that?! It's almost like his brain overheated or something.. I just thought he'd get a really bad headache, not have his brain start smoking... But... COOOOOOL!!"

I walk into the lift, and think a bit more...

"Or maybe a fire-making mutant attacked him at the same time I did? But that would mean there's another mutant here! Unless it was Headgrabber, but why would Headgrabber do that..."

I look at Lucas-R and Speed-Y...

"You guys don't happen have some sort of unregistered fire-making mutant power, do you?"

written by Speeder on Jun 03, 2011 22:30

I shake my head.

"At least, none that I know of."

I look at the dead guy.

"So, you are... pyrokinetic? While being psychic? That is unusual I think... Or... Strange... I wonder what power you actually have, and I really hope you do not do that with people you are attempting to use telepathy."

I wait inside the elevator.

"Erm, will you people come in? If you want you can drag the body here so we can examine the head... Or not, who knows if it will explode or something."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 03, 2011 23:13

I look at the level indicator, if there is one, and estimate the amount of time remaining until I get to P level.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 03, 2011 23:37

"I oh... really? Uh... I haven't actually seen one, of course. Not to my knowledge anyway... I've just heard they're really actiony and awesome. But of course, assuming they're anything less is treason... or so I would imagine."

"Though... my memory is fuzzy, but I do recall bits and pieces of one holofilm. I must've seen it through a window while working security in the area. Or something like that. I guess a few pieces of my memory survived the brainscrub..."

written by Megagun on Jun 04, 2011 01:03

"Hey, you know what would be awesome? Holofilm versions of Mandatory Team Troubleshooter. I sure hope our mutual friend promotes me to YELLOW clearance once I've completed my IdeaBot testing task for R&D!"

written by Gligar on Jun 04, 2011 01:49

Lift hall (A level)

Jam-O looks on at the aftermath of his attack. He's puzzled over the fact that Joris-O's head is smoking... maybe it caught fire? Either way, that's pretty cool!

He enters the lift, while asking John-R if that's normal.

"Well... I've read reports about brains being overheated just by being thought at. Some of them don't even have anything to do with fire-based powers. But you'd have to be at least C-class to pull it off in that way."

Hmmm... maybe there's an unregistered Fire-based mutant around? Lucas-R? Speed-Y?

As the last stragglers enter the lift, Speed-Y says that he doesn't think so.

He asks Jam-O whether he's the pyrokinetic. As well as being psychic... hmm, strange. Let's hope Jam-O doesn't do that to everyone.

Perhaps they can drag Joris-O's corpse into the lift, and examine the head?

A lift

Meanwhile, up around J Level, Mango-R checks the level indicator. Shouldn't be long now.

Debriefing Room 27

L4-O explains that he doesn't remember actually seeing one in full. Mostly, he's heard things (good things) about them, and might have caught a glimpse of one through a window while on duty somewhere. Perhaps his brainscrub was incomplete.

"Hmmm... do you have any idea of which one, and where?"

The idea bot suggests making holofilms of Mandatory Team Troubleshooter (of course). It hopes it'll get promoted once it's back in a flashy body, so it can see them.

"How do you know there aren't any? the High Programmer asks.

Cloning station (somewhere)

You know the drill by now: a cloning tank fires up.

written by Malkom on Jun 04, 2011 01:45

I head towards the sublevel the docbot indicated, via the nearest food-vat area.

written by Malkom on Jun 04, 2011 04:19

You forgot me. Please post a status update for me so I can post a new action.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 04, 2011 05:00

"I'm... not entirely sure. I only get some random or vague memories. I was, or am part of the Armed Forces so I remember some stuff pertaining to that. Like how you used a ComBot very early into our mission... I recognized it.

Additionally, I was able to recall an Armed Forces range present on O Sublevel."

I ponder.

"But if I were to guess, it was probably at the sector I was prior to my relocation."

I glance at my ME card.

"QKW perhaps?"

"Although I do remember a few bits of the film. No sound, just pictures.

A Troubleshooter team fought commie mutant traitors on this strange grey rocky place with blackness above. They had envirosuits on too..."

I ponder for a few moments.

"I don't remember much else about it."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 04, 2011 11:20

I wait the remaining momentcycles with impatience. When the door opens, I rush out, and make a quick observation of the area.

written by Speeder on Jun 04, 2011 15:40⁴⁶⁴

Since noone take a shot, I decide to drag Joris corpse into the lift while the others do not get in. Then I see if his brain overheated with its own activity or if it was set on fire.

written by Malkom on Jun 04, 2011 16:11

I head towards the debriefing room by the route that takes me through the most dangerous, commie-infested food vats I know of. As fast as possible.

written by Gligar on Jun 04, 2011 19:59

Food vat hall (C sublevel)

Muttering something about being forgotten and wanting a status report, Malkom-R wheels himself back into the hall. He notes that the lifts are still out of action on this level.

Heading for the ramp leading up the gantries, he sees a shady-looking clone holding some sort of leaflet.

Debriefing room 27

L4-O tries to think. His memories are vague, but, as he explains, he remembers being a member of the Armed Forces, possibly in QKW Sector. It's probably that which allowed him to recognise the "combot" the High Programmer used earlier. He also remembers a few images relating to the holofilm: a team of Troubleshooters in a rocky place with a dark ceiling, all wearing envirosuits. They fought CMTs there.

"That sounds like one of the Space Sector series," The High Programmer comments. "Probably Space Sector II: Fighting The Mutants Who Don't Breathe Air, Even Further Beyond The Domes. That would place it around five yearcycles ago. Perhaps the security arrangements do need to be reviewed.

⁴⁶⁴ SPEEDER: (ooc: Malkom, he did not forgot you, take a look at the post times, you posted some minutes before Gligar, considering your post is much shorter, it means you started to write your post, while he was already writing his own.

When this happen, what we do here, is consider you did not posted in time, like if your post never existed, thus you can even change your mind and do something else if you wish).

"But as four being a member of the Armed Forces, that matches your profile. According to the reports, you had an affinity for naming your weapons even before you went through basic training. The Armed Forces like that sort of thing."

A lift

Mango-R waits for the door to open -- there they go. He runs out, passing through the lift hall and into the concourse, before stopping to look around.

Concourse P1

He notices that, for a change, the exits are marked. One labelled "To Broadcast area and CENTRAL SUBSECTOR" catches his eye.

Another lift

Speed-Y goes and grabs the body of Joris-O. When it's in the lift, he checks the head, seeing if he can find out how the brain was cooked (and believe me, it's cooked). It's kind of difficult, what with the smoke still pouring out of it, but it looks like the heat came from inside the brain.

Cloning station (somewhere)

Its cloning cycle now fully underway, the cloning tank is suddenly moved.

It becomes clear that this is just one tank out of many in the station, and that they are all fitted to guide rails to allow them to be moved to and from designated holding areas and bays. This one is moving to what is apparently a decanting bay.

written by Speeder on Jun 04, 2011 20:29

After taking a look at it, I look to others and say.

"Well. seemly Jam can make a person think so hard that his brain overloads and heats itself more than the blood can take away."

I press the P button.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 04, 2011 21:05

I smile and gently pat my cone rifle.

"I called it Turbo! Then there's Fred the knife. Sadly, he hasn't seen any action... maybe someday..."

I look wistfully into the distance for a few moments, then snap back to reality.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 04, 2011 22:06

Well I declare, with my mind, that I suppose it's up to chance now to put me in the right direction.

I head towards the CENTRAL SUBSECTOR, only stopping to ask any clones for directions to where the debriefing rooms are.

written by Malkom on Jun 05, 2011 00:31

I wheel myself towards the clone, still holding Buzzy The Chainsaw. "Yo, dude. Watcha doin' holding that little snip of paper? Can I have a look at the thingy?"⁴⁶⁵

written by Jam on Jun 05, 2011 00:46

"I overloaded his brain? Cool! I didn't even know that was possible, I was just bluffing when I said I could melt his brain..."

I look to John-R...

"Wait, what's this about C-class? There's different classes of mutants? What does C-class mean (and while we're on the subject, what do the other classes mean)?"

written by Gligar on Jun 05, 2011 02:57

Another lift

Speed-Y tells the group that it looks like Jam-O can overclock someone's brain to the point where it cooks itself, and presses the P button.

The lift closes its doors and rises.

Jam-O thinks that that's cool. He didn't know that that was even possible, and admits to bluffing.

But something said by John-R attracts his attention: the thing about "C-class mutants". He asks John-R to elaborate. "Oh... that's the Rand-B-TNR scale for mutant power levels. They teach it in Power Studies courses. A-class is weak. B-class is average. C-class is fairly strong, and is the upper limit for a registered mutant. D-class means very strong, with two or more mutations, or one which is just plain treasonous, like Machine Empathy. E-class means four or more. F-class... is off the scale. We've seen what an F-class can do."

Debriefing Room 27

L4-O smiles, patting Turbo. He also mentions Fred the knife, which he hasn't had a chance to use. "Well, there are always more missions."

The R&D tech returns. "Sorry about that."

Corridor P2

Mango-R heads towards Central Subsector.

He reaches the end of the corridor, to find his path blocked. There is an IntSec Treason Scene cordon, manned by a couple of IntSec officers, in front of a gaping hole where this subsector should join to the next. "Sorry, citizen, this way's closed," one says. "If you want to get to Central Subsector, you'll have to find another route."

Food vat hall

Malkom-R approaches the shady-looking clone and asks to see what he's holding. "Sure, comrade, take a look."

He thrusts the leaflet into Malkom-R's hands and turns around.

Malkom-R can't help but notice the leaflet's headline: PEOPLE'S GLORIOUS REVOLUTION -- You Can Make It Happen! For Real, This Time.

He laments not having a motorised wheelchair. Motorised wheelchairs are meant to already be deployed, but there have been delays in actually delivering the things. PLC put it don to inter-service group sabotage, pointing the finger at CPU. Rumours that PLC are, in fact, being lazy are almost entirely false.

written by Speeder on Jun 05, 2011 05:54

I start to sing the latest B3 jingle, after lamenting the fact that I have no B3, or that I have nothing at all except my new jumpsuit.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 05, 2011 07:11

"Oh... Do you have directions or something? I do have a debriefing to attend, and the rest of the team is further behind, and they failed to inform me of where the debriefing took place. Could you be willing provide me with them? SynthPaper would be preferable, but you can always just tell me."

When I receive the directions, I thank the IntSec officers, and follow the route they've indicated. Else I just go back, and go down another pathway.

Lifts aren't an option. They [the team] will be after me for that quick slip.

written by Malkom on Jun 05, 2011 15:49

I switch on Buzzy. Hopefully before the commie can react, I swing Buzzy down towards him as hard as I can. "Take that you dirty brainwashing communist SCUM! Yay! I get to catch a commie! Woohoo!" I give a big, silly grin as I continue fighting the commie, then abruptly stop grinning. "Wha... why did I suddenly feel like I was under the influence of the stupid chemical?" I mutter to myself.

written by Jam on Jun 05, 2011 17:24

"Okay, so I'm guessing that means there aren't any F-class registered mutants, or even E- or D-class? Hmm... I'd imagine an F-class mutant would be pretty hard to stop, good thing Freaky doesn't seem to want to terminate us... Actually, now that I think of it, Headgrabber didn't seem like he was going to terminate us either... Or maybe that's just because Freaky was holding him back..."

I think about mutants, and mutant powers, and especially about mind-melting mutant powers...

"Hmm... John-R, do you know if it's possible to strengthen a mutant power by using it a lot, or something like that?"

I was thinking, maybe I could somehow link the minds of the team together, so we can communicate without speaking out loud... But we have, what, nine members now? I'd imagine with my current abilities, even if I could link everyone's minds together, I'd only be able to hold the link for a few secondcycles... I bet even Freaky might have a bit of difficulty..."

⁴⁶⁵ MALKOM: Isn't this wheelchair motorized? Surely Alpha Complex has come far enough that it's motorized...!

written by Gligar on Jun 05, 2011 19:28

Another lift

As the lift makes its way up, Speed-Y starts singing a B3 jingle.

Jam-O replies to John-R, guessing that there are no registered mutants of D, E, or F-class. The latter would be very hard to stop, but luckily, Freaky, or even Headgrabber, showed little interest in terminating the team (perhaps Freaky was holding Headgrabber back?).

He has a thought. Would it be possible to get stronger by practising? He has the idea that he might try to connect the teams' minds together somehow. It'd be difficult, and he might only be able to do it briefly, but...

"I'd advise against it," John-R replies. "Though mutant powers do get stronger the more they're used, linking minds together... I've heard that that's dangerous. You can lose your sense of... you."

The lift continues to ascend.

Corridor P2

Mango-R asks the IntSec if they know another route. "There are other routes, but they're quite far out of the way... You can go round to either Delta or Zeta Subsectors and use their entrances, or go up to another level and enter Central Subsector that way."

Mango-R thanks the IntSec and runs off, looking for a sign. In fact, there's one at the concourse, pointing towards DELTA SUBSECTOR.

Food vat hall

Malkom-R realises that thew shady clone is a communist and attacks!

Unfortunately, in the fraction of a second between firing up Buzzy and attacking, the commie ducks to the floor, fumbling for a weapon.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 05, 2011 20:37

I naturally run down the concourse pointing to DELTA SUBSECTOR. As I do, I check signs which indicate towards the debriefing rooms.

...Why am I still running from them?

Perhaps it's because I still trust Headgrabber's judgement, that the team shouldn't be trusted.

Why do I still trust Headgrabber more than my own team?

I slow to a walk, mind clouded with questions.

written by Speeder on Jun 05, 2011 23:52

I look to the others.

"What class are you John?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 06, 2011 00:07

I lean back in my chair and close my eyes, intending to rest for a little bit before the rest of the team arrives.

written by Jam on Jun 06, 2011 00:10

I mumble a bit...

"Lose your sense of you... Like... one mind made of many minds... Hmm... Reminds me of Headgrabber..."

I look up at John-R...

"That does sound dangerous... Okay, no mind-linking... I'll just stick with relaying messages... Maybe we need some kind of signal, in case one of you have something to tell me, and you can't say it aloud for whatever reason..."

I look to Speed-Y, as if I were expecting him to suddenly come up with a signal (and I am).

written by Speeder on Jun 06, 2011 00:38

I look at Jam intently and raise a eyebrow.

written by Malkom on Jun 06, 2011 01:03

I tumble forwards out of the wheelchair, carried forwards by the impetus of my failed blow, and land on the commie, Buzzy still happily BUZZ-ing away in his most deadly manner!

"EEEEK!"

written by Gligar on Jun 06, 2011 02:09

Corridor P3

Mango-R continues running for a while, and then slows. Why, exactly, is he running...? Is it that he trusts a dangerous F-class mutant more than he does his fellow Troubleshooters?

The corridor continues for some time. Eventually, it ends in a black door marked DELTA SUBSECTOR - ACCESS P. ACCESS TO ALL CLEARANCES.

Another lift

The lift continues to ascend.

Speed-Y looks over at the others. He inquires as to what class of mutant John-R is. "Me? I'm B-class, sir."

Jam-O is pondering what John-R said. It sounds like he can rule out trying to link everyone together, then. He'll stick to relaying messages.

But for that, he'd like some kind of signal, so he knows that there's a message to relay. He looks at Speed-Y, obviously wanting him to come up with a signal.

Speed-Y returns the look, and raises his eyebrow.

That seems good enough to Jam-O, who returns the gesture.

The lift comes to a halt, and the door opens.

Debriefing Room 27

L4-O leans back, trying to get some rest.

Food vat hall

Trying to keep Buzzy under control, Malkom-R leans forward, but it's too much, and he falls out of his wheelchair.

Right onto the communist. Who was about to fire a slugthrower at him.

As the chainsaw hits, the communist tightens his grip on his slugthrower...

Click.

... and looks on in horror as Buzzy keeps going with nauseating sounds, right through his bones, and his vital organs...

It's the last thing he sees.

Nearby INFRAREDs seem to be staring in his direction.

Cloning station (somewhere)

Now ready to decant, the cloning tank empties, depositing Joris-O onto the gantry, feeling cold and slimy.

written by Malkom on Jun 06, 2011 02:37

I throw up all over the communist as I switch off Buzzy, then manage to recover.

"Would you look at that! I just killed a commie!"

I look over at the INFRAREDs. "Do not be concerned about the fate of this clone, he is a commie. He handed me some commie propaganda and even tried to shoot me with a slugthrower. Someone, please help me back onto this wheelchair. In fact, as a higher clearance clone, I ORDER you to help me onto this wheelchair!"

When helped onto the chair, I take the slugthrower with me. "I'll just bring this along. Better report it to the proper authorities! See you!" I wheel the chair off towards the debriefing room, keeping a sharp lookout for any extra commies, and calling over my shoulder, "Oh, someone tell some bot or other to clean up that commie. Very disgraceful, it is. Quite the mess."

As I go, I try to wipe off Buzzy, whom I of course brought with me.

written by Jam on Jun 06, 2011 02:45

"Mmm... Where in Alpha Complex is Mango-R? I thought my mind-sensing range was pretty good, especially with a fingerprint... But I can't find Mango-R at all! Either he ran off somewhere far away that's out of my range, or he's found some way of hiding his mind..."

"Grr... Mango-R... Apparently you can run, and you can hide... But not for long..."

I follow Speed-Y if he leaves the lift.

"Or maybe Headgrabber being in Mango-R's mind somehow affected his fingerprint? Hmm... I guess I'll just have to do a brute force search... Hmm.. Mango-R-NHG-3..."

I suddenly get a look of intense concentration...

written by Speeder on Jun 06, 2011 03:35

I look, and if this is P level, I jerk Jam out of the lift, and invite others to also leave it.

Also I look for the Central Subsector entrance.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 06, 2011 10:34

"Black door... Oh. That represents INFRARED clearance."

I open the door, and look for the way to the debriefing rooms. If it isn't immediate, I ask the nearest clone not on the team of RED or lower clearance where specifically to go.

written by Gligar on Jun 06, 2011 20:53

Food vat hall

Malkom-R vomits. He's not used to all this, it seems.

He tries to reassure the INFRAREDs that he's just dealt with a commie, see, he gave him commie propaganda.

The nearest clone, a big guy (Roy-JHT, but Malkom-R doesn't know that), sighs. "Why is it," he says slowly, "that everyone else steals the commies around here? First that Joris guy, then Lemmy, now that guy?"

He sighs again, and grabs Malkom-R. As he's putting him back on his wheelchair, he continues ranting. "I think there's something going on here. I mean, I see all these commies but they're all killed before I can get my hands on them! They were mine!"

Malkom-R wheels off, up the ramp, seemingly ignoring Roy. He calls back that someone should take care of the communist. "That's you, Roy," a female INFRARED says, poking him.

Concourse P1

As he enters the concourse with Speed-Y and everyone else (since it is, after all, P level), he explains that he's having problems finding Mango-R. Either he's gone out of range, or he's found some other way of hiding himself. (Maybe Headgrabber is still involved, somehow.) He decides to perform a brute force search.

Speed-Y looks for the Central Subsector entrance, and spots the door leading to the broadcast areas (and the subsector).

Corridor P5 (Delta Subsector)

Mango-R walks along, down the INFRARED corridor, seeing if he can find another way to the debriefing rooms. He wanders into another concourse, where he finds another sign, again pointing to Central Subsector. It doesn't even point back the way he came.

Food vat gantry

Malkom-R comes to the A Level exit. The guards ask to see his ME Card, as they did with the others.

Cloning station (somewhere)

Joris-O seems confused. Where is he?

Somewhere near a door marked "Chemical Showers", at least. as well as a set of stairs leading down.

written by Gligar on Jun 07, 2011 01:57

Concourse P3 (Delta Subsector)

Mango-R shrugs, and keeps following the signs.

He enters another long corridor, makes a turn, continues on, makes another turn...

Concourse P1

He seemingly isn't aware that Jam-O has found him. Though the effort seems to have worn him out.

He agrees with Speed-Y about something, and the group continues on.

Corridor P2

As they walk, Jam-O tells Speed-Y about some of the other clones he detected -- the rest of the team, over there in Central Subsector, some clone named Stu-O-SUX, and, of course, Mango-R. He's over in Delta Subsector (Jam-O's not sure how he knows that, though).

And then he starts singing the latest B3 jingle -- out of tune.

Eventually, the team gets to the end of the corridor... to find a gaping hole where the junction between Epsilon and Central Subsectors should be.

It's manned by two IntSec guards, and a load of Treason Scene tape. "Sorry, citizens," one says, "this way's closed."

Food vat gantry

Malkom-R presents his ME Card, his happiness level clearly above the minimum. He got to kill a commie, after all! "So that explains the commotion down there. They'll probably get that Roy-JHT to clean it up, he never was too bright..."

It's a good thing they mentioned Roy, because Malkom-R has a few words about him. "Yeah, he's like that all the time. He really wants to kill a commie. Maybe one day we'll let him. Or we'll just haul him in for a brainscrub and a nice interrogation session."

The guard returns Malkom-R's ME card, and lets him through.

Stairwell

Of course, there's this little problem of stairs...

But it turns out that it isn't a problem after all. These must be some sort of special wheels.

Roadway (A level)

And Malkom-R finds himself on the roadway, with Iota Subsector to the left of him, the domescraper way off to the right...

written by Malkom on Jun 07, 2011 03:10

I head for the debriefing room, keeping a very sharp eye out for commies and wiping and polishing Buzzy as I go. If I don't know the way I ask it of any bots nearby. If that fails, I call up Friend Computer and ask him.

written by Speeder on Jun 07, 2011 03:34

I follow the path Jam pointed.

"Who is Stu?"

I look puzzled.

"Well, nevermind..."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 07, 2011 07:04

"Let's see..."

I look for a room which is labelled 'Debriefing Room', or something that looks like one with a high class clone as well as the other members of the team...

Why am I just letting myself walk right into a dead end? Should I not be escaping?

written by Gligar on Jun 07, 2011 19:38

Roadway (A level)

Malkom-R realises that, although he knows that the debriefing is in Central Subsector, he doesn't really know where Central Subsector is. He asks a passing spybot, which flashes its searchlight at the domescraper. Figuring that's a good place to start, he heads that way.

Corridor P2

Speed-Y realises that Jam-O is pointing over to Central Subsector. And unfortunately, the link is cut. There has to be another link... perhaps through an adjacent subsector?

He seems puzzled over this "Stu-O-SUX" though.

Corridor Q-delta (Central Subsector)

Having passed through another IntSec checkpoint and into Central Subsector, Mango-R keeps going. He passes another sign and takes a left, heading down a radial corridor, and finds a room with an open door. He sees two unfamiliar clones near an idea bot, and L4-O, Cryo-R, and Azir-R in chairs nearby. Interestingly, there is also a blackened, melted chair.

On a vidscreen on the far wall is a High Programmer (who seems to be a little short) seated in front of a Computer Monitor.

Mango-R realises that the monitor is somehow displaying depth.

The High Programmer looks up from some paperwork. "You're late," he says.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 07, 2011 20:22

"Apologies... My team was delaying me, so I decided it best to 'cut loose', as some would call it. I had to make my own way here, and it seems I've arrived before they have."

I look over at the unfamiliar clones, and wonder about the bot that is in the same room, what its relevance was to the mission. I also don't sit down until I'm told so. By the High Programmer.

written by Malkom on Jun 07, 2011 20:23 Corridor P2

I... continue on to the briefing room, keeping a sharp eye out for more commies and cleaning and polishing Buzzy.

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 07, 2011 21:00

Oh, looks like they are trickling in, I was going to take a cat nap..."

written by Jam on Jun 07, 2011 22:00

I attempt to head towards Delta Subsector (if I need to, I ask the IntSec guards which way to go).

I start running, because we're in a hurry, and the faster we get to debriefing, the better.

"I dunno, Stu-O-SUX just sounded familiar for some reason... Maybe I saw him on an episode of Mandatory Team Troubleshooter? He sounds like a clone that would be on Mandatory Team Troubleshooter..."

written by Speeder on Jun 08, 2011 00:00

"Actually, I think I was called by that name, in an incident inside the Security Control room... earlier in the mission."

I look around, and then I say.

"Ok, let's go to another subsector and make our way around to the central one."

I start walking at a random subsector direction.

written by Gligar on Jun 08, 2011 01:30

Debriefing Room 27

Mango-R apologises, saying that he felt it best to go ahead of the team. "Did Speed-Y give you permission to go ahead? He is the team leader, after all."

Mango-R looks at the unfamiliar clones, which seem to be R&D techs, observing the idea bot, which is keeping silent. Mango-R wonders about the bot. How important is it? What does it have to do with the team?

"Well don't just stand there," the High Programmer says. "Sit down."

Azir-R notices Mango-R and mentions that he wanted to take a nap.

Roadway (A level)

Malkom-R reaches the end of the roadway, which seems to be a loading dock marked C-3. He's reaches the bunker again.

Heading down the short corridor to the left, he finds a lift hall. He presses a call button and waits.

As he does, The Computer speaks up. "Attention, Team Epsilon! You have still not appeared for debriefing at Debriefing Room 27 on P Level, Ce*static* Subsector! All team members are fined 100 credits. Thank you for your co-operation."

As it happens, the rest of Team Epsilon is trying to get to Debriefing Room 27. Jam-O, for instance, is asking an IntSec guard how to get there. he is told to head back to the concourse and follow the signs. He starts doing so, followed by the rest of the team.

On the way, he discusses Stu-O-SUX with Speed-Y. Apparently, he thought the name was familiar for some reason. Perhaps he was a character on Mandatory Team Troubleshooter? He seems like that sort of clone...

Speed-Y admits that he was called that before, in an incident back in the bunker.

He follows Jam-O, since he's heading to a different subsector.

written by Malkom on Jun 08, 2011 02:30

I hurry up! As fast as possible I try to get to the debriefing room!

written by Jam on Jun 08, 2011 02:39

I keep running, only even faster now that I heard Friend Computer's announcement...

"Vatcrap! Do I even have 100 credits?" I mumble to myself...

At the thought of being terminated for not having enough credits (as I can't remember what usually happens), I try to push myself to run even faster (while still following the signs, of course)...

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 08, 2011 03:31

"I would like to take this time to note that, though I did follow team Epsilon here to see about joining them, I am not sure I am yet a member of this esteemed group. I have no idea how or why I suddenly felt I needed to mention that."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 08, 2011 07:57

"Speed-Y never gave me permission not to go. I was moving quickly for the benefit of the team, and they failed to keep up. Don't think that it was a fault on their part, however."

I sit down at one of the chairs, and wait upon the rest of the team to show up for the debriefing.

written by Speeder on Jun 08, 2011 11:36

I keep running, tagging along with Jam.

As I hear the announcement.

"Damn... And Mango has fled after I waited to rescue him... I should have left him and Headgrabber behind."

written by 4616599 on Jun 08, 2011 14:23

I clutch my head.

"Oh, a headache..."

I head down to the showers, grab a mask, and push the appropriate buttons

written by Megagun on Jun 08, 2011 14:46

"So... Yeah.."

written by Gligar on Jun 08, 2011 16:41

Lift hall (A level)

Malkom-R starts mashing the call button, in the hope it'll make the lift get here faster... but it turns out to be unnecessary, since it arrives almost immediately.

He wheels himself onto the lift and starts mashing P. "Okay, okay, I get it, P level coming right up!" the lift says, and shoots up the shaft (barely remembering to close its doors first).

Corridor P5 (Delta Subsector)

Jam-O and the rest of the group speed up. Jam-O, because he doesn't know how many credits he has and doesn't remember what happens when you run out of credits, and the rest because, well, Jam-O is running.

They soon reach the IntSec checkpoint marking the border of Central Subsector, and find it to be unattended. Presumably, it's a shift change or something. They run right through.

Debriefing room 27

For some reason, Azir-R takes the time to point out that, although he is not a member of Team Epsilon, he did follow them to try to join. "You're from the bunker. That's what counts. Note, though, that by rights, you should have joined the mission at the briefing. Failure to do so is treason punishable by summary execution. However, in light of... certain circumstances, I'm willing to commute that to a reprimand."

Mango-R points out that Speed-Y didn't expressly give him permission... but he also didn't forbid him from going on ahead. Any slowness on the part of the team is their own fault. He then takes a seat.

The idea bot wants to speak, but doesn't have anything ready to say. "Did you have anything to add?"

Cloning station (somewhere)

Joris-O clutches his head, apparently suffering from a headache, as he heads down to the showers. The stairs continue on down another level past the showers, but he isn't interested in that right now. he just wants to get everything sorted.

Chemical showers

The showers are vast. There must be easily over a hundred different cubicles in here. Some are occupied.

Joris-O takes an empty one and, remembering to grab an oxygen mask, starts it up.

The shower's jets don't seem to do much for the headache.

written by Malkom on Jun 08, 2011 16:42

I hurry up, keeping a sharp eye out for anyone who looks shady.

written by Speeder on Jun 08, 2011 16:44

I keep running and trying to find the debriefing room. (if I find it, I will enter it on the next turn...)

written by Lightning4 on Jun 08, 2011 17:22

I start to stir.

"Reprimumble? Fines..."

I open my eyes.

"Huh?" I look around and see Mango-R.

"Oh hey, it's you. Did you survive your little journey down on O-sublevel? You look like a fresh clone though so I assume not..."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 08, 2011 21:13

"You really expect me to survive what went on down there?"

I think for a moment, and scratch the back of my head as I do so.

"Well I did! Except for the thing that wasn't supposed to be there, namely the remains of the bunker... All that radiation didn't exactly help my cause. A recloning later, and some clone who seems a bit out of it (which I suspect is not part of our team at all) decided to shoot me in the foot. I think most of the team applied rather appropriate disciplinary action in regards to that."

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 08, 2011 21:52

I wonder to myself whether I said that loud enough that the powers that be do not fine me. Then I snap back to reality when I hear "reprimand".

"Well, I don't recall a briefing, I think I may have been in a glass tube or something while that was going on."

written by Gligar on Jun 08, 2011 23:47

A lift

The lift hurtles up the shaft, before stopping abruptly. The doors open. "There we are. P Level."

Malkom-R is off again without so much as a thank-you, and, like the others before him, heads down Corridor P2.

Far end of Corridor P2

But of course, he is stopped by Internal Security. "Another one? This way's closed, citizen. The checkpoint is out."

Central Subsector

Speed-Y and his group continue running, eventually finding themselves outside a room, in which L4-O, Mango-R, Azir-R, and Cryo-R are seated, as well as the jackobot. There's also an idea bot with two techs monitoring it.

Debriefing room 27

L4-O awakens from his nap, and notices Mango-R. He wonders if Mango-R survived O Sublevel, or if he just recloned.

Mango-R states that he did survive, up to the point where he entered the crater where the range used to be. Upon recloning he was shot in the foot by an inconsiderate clone (who was summarily punished by the rest of the team).

Azir-R says he doesn't remember the briefing, and suspects he was in a glass jar at the time. "I doubt that, citizen," the High Programmer replies. "My records show that you were placed in the bunker prior to the start of the mission. I suspect that the brainscrub you received later on might explain why you do not remember the briefing. There is precedent, after all," he adds, glancing at Cryo-R, who as his face reeeeeeealy close to the melted chair.

written by Malkom on Jun 08, 2011 23:49

I ask for directions to the debriefing room from the guards, then follow the directions as fast as possible.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 08, 2011 23:55

I look confused.

"Why'd you go after Massacrebot anyway? I'm sure you knew that the bomb was going to go off any second... and I doubt there would have been anything left where it went off."

I pause.

"But I suppose it is good that you checked to make sure that there was nothing left for the commies to salvage."

"There WAS nothing left, right?"

written by Speeder on Jun 09, 2011 01:44

As soon as I stumble into the room, I see Mango.

I immediately draw my YELLOW pistol, walk near him, point it on his neck.

"What Headgrabber did to you? Why you did not allowed me to board the elevator and fled? Why you were walking in front of the team instead of following, and why you were staring at us, specially me? What you fear? What thoughts Headgrabber left on your head? I am right now deeply regretting saving you from Headgrabber instead of obeying my orders to show up on the debriefing immediately."

My finger moves to the trigger, but does not pull it.

written by Jam on Jun 09, 2011 03:58

I follow Speed-Y into the room. Seeing him pulling his laser pistol out and running at Mango-R, I run after him and pull ou—AH! A HIGH PROGRAMMER!

I attempt to salute the High Programmer, but I stop too suddenly and end up tripping over my own feet... Attempting to improvise, I prostrate myself in front of the High Programmer (who I haven't yet realized isn't in the room with us) and proceed to shout loudly, while smiling my biggest smile:

"Praise be to the great High Programmer! It is an honor to be graced by the presence of such an important, distinguished citizen like yourself! A thousand apologies for our lateness, sir! (I can say all thousand if you want, sir) If there's anything

I can do for you, sir, I would be extremely happy to serve you! Would you like me to clean your boots with my tongue, sir? I'd be happy to, and I'm sure my tongue would too, if my tongue could even be happy... But I don't have the happy-tongue mutation, sir, so my tongue cannot be happy..."

I suddenly notice I've been rambling a bit... Really, a happy-tongue mutation? Is there even such a thing?

Feeling a bit foolish, I start apologizing...

"I'm sorry sir! I'm probably wasting your time babbling about tongues... I'll shut up now, sir!"

I continue laying face down on the floor, and attempt to subtly look over at Speed-Y, in case he needs my help for some reason...

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 09, 2011 10:35

I look over towards Speed-Y and sigh.

"Well... He's done a lot. As you may or may not know... I'm in a sort of unstable state. I didn't want... to cause any more trouble. I'm confused. And I feel like the answers would be found... on my own."

I look away.

"Oh L4-O, I felt like I needed to investigate the amount of damage to the sector. Being already separated from my group, I decided to make myself useful. As for the results, it won't really mean much to Headgrabber. There's just a huge crater where (I'm assuming) the range used to be."

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 09, 2011 12:05

"Very well, I can accept my reprimand with pride then, knowing everything is in order."

I gaze casually over to what appears to be the rest of the team piling in and attempting to kill each other.

Oh dear..

written by Gligar on Jun 09, 2011 17:50

Chemical showers

Joris-O's shower finishes its cycle and its door opens.

If anything, his headache has worsened.

Corridor P2

Malkom-R repeats what the rest of the team has done already, and hears he same response. "I'm willing to bet that something 's happening in Central Subsector," remarks a guard. "Perhaps a debriefing."

But Malkom-R is already heading over there.

Debriefing Room 27

L4-O is confused. Why did Mango-R even head over to the range, if he knew it was destroyed? Oh well, it was probably useful to check that there was nothing left for anyone to salvage -- there was nothing left, right?

Before Mango-R can answer, Speed-Y stumbles in. On noticing MAnGo-R, he grabs his laser pistol. He fires, not his laser, but several questions at Mango-R. He makes it clear that he regrets waiting for him now.

Jam-O is next. He's about to draw his own weapon when he catches sight of the High Programmer on the screen, cries out, and prostrates himself on the floor, loudly praising the citizen on the screen. He doesn't seem aware that there even is a vidscreen, due to the realism of the stereoscopic display. (Clearly, it's working as intended.)

Jam-O stops after a while, realising that he's wasting time. But he still lies on the floor, occasionally glancing at Speed-Y.⁴⁶⁶

"Get up," the ULTRAVIOLET replies. "I can't stand that sort of behaviour. It reminds me of those FCCC-P evangelists. Have you any idea how tiring public appearances can get with them around?"

Mango-R finally gets the chance to explain that he's in a sort of unstable state after Headgrabber left. He has his own questions which he should probably investigate on his own.

As to the range, Mango-R says he felt like he needed to investigate how much damage was done to the sector. He adds that there's now just a crater where the range used to be.

"That would explain the tremor earlier," the UV says. "According to our mutual friend's damage report, the sector sustained minimal damage to waste recycling, with one death. Someone apparently fell into an incinerator, despite the hatches being closed and sealed."

"Now, before we continue, is there anyone else still to come?"

Azir-R accepts his reprimand and watches as the rest of the team point weapons at each other.

written by Jam on Jun 09, 2011 18:00

I immediately jump to my feet.

"Ah! Sorry sir! I believe Joris-O and Malkom-R have yet to arrive, sir! If you'd like, I could call them..."

"Um... What's a FCCC-P? I seem to have forgotten quite a lot after my last brainscrub..."⁴⁶⁷

written by Megagun on Jun 09, 2011 18:22

"Wait, who is this guy with the laser pistol? He kind of reminds me of the weekly Mandatory Team Troubleshooter pistol-waving guy. You know. The one that always ends up being a commie mutant traitor, but our mutual troubleshooter friends always find that out after he's caused at least two teammates to die...."

written by Speeder on Jun 09, 2011 18:23

I finally notice the ULTRAVIOLET there.

I remain pointing the pistol at Mango.

⁴⁶⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: That's funny. +1pp 😊)

⁴⁶⁷ JAM: (ooc: Oh! A PP! Thanks! 😊)

"Oh, hello sir! It is, you."

I smile.

"There are a guy named Malkom, that for some reason hate mutants, algae and machines, I left him behind after he decided to kill himself or something by repeatedly pulling the trigger of a malfunctioning pistol. And Joris, that started to behave strangely like Mango, and then suddenly started to scream that he was a commie, after some long time of repeatedly claiming to be a commie, Jam terminated him."

I look at the others, and the smoldering chair near Cryo. "That looks a lot like Cryo doing..." Then I notice Sal. "Hello Sal!" I turn again to the UV. "Sal was greatly useful sir, specially in making Cryo be less useless."

After looking around and noticing everyone, then I finally say.

"I think we are missing some people that dissapeared during the mission too, like Kristos, Cryo's batshit crazy partner that we left battling things with a towel in the garage in the bunker, and some other people. Also, that guy that dissapeared from the cloning station, I think I already informed you or friend computer of that."

I suddenly notice the strange Idea bot.

"That Idea bot was not part of the team."

written by Cryoburner on Jun 09, 2011 21:00

Having sufficiently examined the melted chair (for now), I now notice that some others have finally entered the room. They look familiar from earlier, possibly the other members of that team, or maybe communists.

"Oh, it's about time you all got here. It's nice to see that you took a break from your busy schedule of disobeying the computer's orders to be with us here today."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 09, 2011 23:42

How long has it been since I last had any sort of medication...? Something's happening... What's happening?

I suddenly feel quite drowsy. I blink a bit, trying to fight the sleep.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 09, 2011 23:58

I remain silent for now, watching the conversation between the High Programmer and my teammates.

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 10, 2011 01:23

I follow L4's cue.

written by Gligar on Jun 10, 2011 02:17

Debriefing room 27

Jam-O jumps to his feet. He states that there are two clones yet to arrive., but doesn't seem to know what FCCC-P is.

The High Programmer explains: "They call themselves the First Church of Christ Computer-Programmer. Essentially, they're super-loyal to The Computer to the point of fanaticism."

They treat High Programmers as... what's that word they use...?"

"I believe that the term they use is 'prophet', High Programmer," The Computer supplies. "However, they are a secret society just like any other."

"Quite right."

The idea bot wants to know who this clone is who is waving a laser pistol about. It reminds him of that guy from Mandatory Team Troubleshooter, you know, they traitor...

Speed-Y notices the ULTRAVIOLET. He also mentions Malkom-R, and gives a brief synopsis of what happened to him.

He notices the chair. Cryo-R must b involved somehow... Oh hey, the jackobot! "Hello, citizen," the jackobot replies.

Speed-Y mentions a few other clones... Kristos-R, Selbio-R, and others...

The idea bot, however, is unfamiliar to him.

Cryo-R finally notices the team, and chides them for being treasonous.

Mango-R doesn't seem to notice. He's too busy trying to fend off sleep.

The High Programmer notices. "Oh yes. You clones haven't slept, have you? I believe that coffeelyke can be found at The Hub. I suggest that you send someone to get some."

Everyone else keeps quiet.

The team is suddenly made aware of the entrance of Malkom-R in a wheelchair.

Chemical showers

Joris-O seems confused. Perhaps the headache is proving debilitating.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 10, 2011 04:41

"This idea bot says he's Mega-R. Or rather, Leeroy-O. Or rather, the consciousness of Leeroy-O."

"It's uh... hard to explain. I don't know all the details."

I look puzzled.

"So what's been going on down there? I heard something about Headgrabber and Freaky? And now Mango mentioned something about Headgrabber just as he got in..."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 10, 2011 11:47

I blink some more, and use L4-O's question to distract me from the lack of sleep.

"Plenty's been happening."

I make a long yawn, but cover my mouth with a hand.

"Plenty's been happening."

written by Speeder on Jun 10, 2011 12:03

I look at L4 for a while, then I look at Malkom

"Oh, you survived your own stupidity. I think now your legs will remain of you what happen when you attempt to shoot a F-class mutant with a malfunctioning pistol"

I look at L4

"During the mission, remember when John many times mentioned a mutant probing us? Well, that mutant seemly is Headgrabber. And then you remember, that Mango started to behave strangely in the elevator? That is when Headgrabber grabbed his head."

I continue pointing the weapon at Mango.

"When Mango was in the showers, Freaky, you know, Lucas friend, showed up, and he and Headgrabber started fighting, I called Jam and John, and we four expelled Headgrabber from Mango head. My intention was to be able to bring the entire team here, including Mango, but it sort afailed, as Mango ran away, and Malkom with his clearly anti-mutant behavior somehow knocked himself out or something, while having a squealing pistol barrel... So I decided to just run after Mango and leave Malkom."

I roll my eyes.

"And in mid of the way we lost Joris too..."

I look at the UV.

"Oh, by the way, Joris, during the fight of mutants, somehow started to float and he flung himself, or someone, or something, flung him against Headgrabber. Since that he started to say nonsense, and then suddenly he started to repeat like a broken record that he is a commie. In fact, a INFRARED citizen tried to terminate him in the food vats, I think he should be rewarded."

I look at the Idea bot.

"So... you know now that you are not Joris, alright? Can you stop causing trouble? You greatly delayed my arrival here by stealing Joris ME card and forcing me to take some boring bureaucratic procedures."

Then I remember of the zombie.

"Oh sir, Joris also had a zombie of him. Malkom mind remain active while he is dead. And Headgrabber can retain someone dead mind too, and seemly also remain active."

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 10, 2011 12:54

I listen to the story with great interest. Sounds like being a part of this team is going to be fun.

written by Jam on Jun 10, 2011 15:30

"Malkom! What took you so lon—"

I notice his wheelchair.

"—ah, I mean, how'd you get here so fast! And what happened to your legs?"

I turn as I notice Speed-Y talking. After listening a bit, I turn to the High Programmer and add something...

"Oh, that INFRARED was named Roy, if that helps... He seemed really eager to find a commie to terminate and didn't seem very bright, unfortunately. Nevertheless, I agree that he be rewarded... He was the one that figured out Joris-O was a commie, it seems... Even though, I'm not sure if he even was a communist or not, he just claimed to be...

written by Megagun on Jun 10, 2011 15:47

"Oh, I was always fully aware that I wasn't Joris. I just took his ME card to stay safe from some members in Team Epsilon. That is why I ran out rather quickly, really. I just needed to find protection. Ask our mutual friend for ULTRAVIOLET level protection..

You know, I find it rather funny that you seem to be the only person within that small subgroup of Team Epsilon members that arrived late at the debriefing, that didn't somehow get some other person in his head. Very funny. Very interesting, too. Maybe you can explain why? Hmm?

Yeah, so basically it turns out that I have indeed gotten ULTRAVIOLET level protection against some members in Team Epsilon. After all, I'm inside a bot shell now. Perfectly safe from those members of Team Epsilon. Now they won't have the ability to get in my head! Hee hee hee. Friend Computer is too smart!"

written by Cryoburner on Jun 10, 2011 16:09

I half-listen to Speed-Y's long spiel.

"So, you were off having lunch with unregistered F-class mutants then. I see..."

I hover my hand slightly over the surface of the chair to determine how warm it might be now. I also look at whether it might be considered sittable in any way, in its current state.

written by 4616599 on Jun 10, 2011 17:28

I look around for any nearby clones or forms; while trying to think of nice, calming B3...

written by Gligar on Jun 10, 2011 19:35

Debriefing room 27

L4-O explains that the idea bot is housing what used to be Mega-R... or, more accurately, Leeroy-O. Or at least, that's what it claims.

He then asks exactly what happened down there. He knows about Headgrabber and Freaky, but not much else.

Mango-R tries to ignore his drowsiness, buy repeating that lots of things have happened.

Lucas-R volunteers to go and get some coffeelyke for the team. He heads for the door, but lingers, as if he wants to listen in.

Speed-Y looks between L4-O and Malkom-R before settling on speaking to the latter. He thinks that Malkom-R should have learned, the hard way, why you don't just try to shoot an F-class mutant...

He then turns to L4-O., explaining about the incident in the chemical showers. Does he remember when John-R mentioned that the team was being probed? That was Headgrabber. And does he remember when Mango-R started acting abnormally? That was Headgrabber.

Headgrabber was with Mango-R up until the shower incident, when Freaky -- Lucas-R's friend -- appeared. He and Headgrabber started fighting. With the help of John-R and Jam-O, they were able to remove Headgrabber from Mango-R's head.

After that, Speed-Y was intending to bring the team to debriefing... but Mango-R ran away, Malkom-R got himself injured, and Joris-O got himself killed... by claiming to be a commie. And somehow levitating. An INFRARED identified Joris-O as a commie and tried to terminate him.

TO the ides bot, he adds that... it knows that it is not Joris-O, right? His theft of Joris-O's ME card caused a delay in getting to debriefing.

And oh yes! The real Joris-O had a zombie...

Azir-R continues listening. He seems interested in the reports.

Jam-O is about to berate Malkom-R for being late, but notices his wheelchair, which does kind of explain it. He does want to know what happened to Malkom-R's legs, though.

He adds that the INFRARED was named Roy. Eager, not too bright, but still deserving of a reward.

The ides bot knew that it wasn't Joris-O. Its mind simply indulged in a little ME card theft to remain safe. Speaking of which, that's why it's now in an idea bot chassis. No psionic mutant can touch it!

Speaking of psionics... there's one clone among the latecomers who didn't get his head taken over... interesting...

Cryo-R again fixates on lunch. He thinks the team had lunch with the "unregistered F-class mutants"

"Well, there's a description right out of the Department of Redundancy Department..." John-R muses.

Cryo-R doesn't hear him,. He's inspecting the chair again 😊

He notes that it's still hot. Most likely hot enough to burn anyone who sat on it.

The High Programmer seems to be making notes. "So, the team has encountered F-class mutants on the way to debriefing... and somehow, a zombie. That would explain the readings of [REDACTED] identified by the idea bot at the site of a certain recent explosion..."

"Speaking of the idea bot... someone has willingly committed one more count of ID theft."

"Have I got that right?"

"Now, I see no reason to wait for any longer. Let's start from the top, and the briefing in the bunker. Would you care to explain what happened from there?"

On the other walls, and the ceiling, and the floor, the other monitors come to life, displaying what appears to be a map of the bunker, highlighting the meeting hall.

Chemical showers

Joris-O looks around, looking for forms and such. Or, indeed, anyone who could help him. He finds none in the showers, though some of the booths are still occupied.

On heading for the stairs to look for more clones, he encounters a scrubot. It seems to be trying to clean an acid-etched hole in the walkway.

written by Speeder on Jun 10, 2011 19:42

"For some reason, I do not remember the meeting for a while, I think my brainscrub lasted a while.

Then I remember we going out, exploring a bit, and I think I found the security room, and started to manage things from there... Oh, I think there was a warehouse, when we first met the two guys that stole Nukabot powerplant.

I do not really remember the order that those things happened."

written by Malkom on Jun 10, 2011 20:27

"Oh, I woke up in this big briefing hall place and I had no idea how I got there, but some kind of Computer told me to go join this team and fight commie mutants, so I did. And as to why I was late, first: a docbot sawed off my legs, and second: I got interrupted by a commie on the way here. He put up a valiant fight, but me and my pal Buzzy--" here I pat Buzzy the chainsaw-- "took care of him! Oh, I think you need to have a look at a INFRARED clone called Roy, he was acting weirdly. I've already reported it to the security guards. Just thought you ought to know. Now, I'm ready for the debriefing!" I wheel myself next to a RED chair and try to heave myself in. "Oh, Mr. High Programmer, Sir, could you see about getting a motorized wheelchair for me? I thought they were supposed to be standard, but I've got a old manual model. Also, I'd like to hand this slugthrower in to the proper authorities - the commie was armed with it and he tried to take a shot at me. Unless I get to keep it? It would certainly be good for when the commies aren't close enough for me to use Buzzy!"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 10, 2011 21:42

"As for me, I helped in exploring the bunker as well... activated a few things here and there... and also helped in the first commie battle at the Distribution warehouse."

"Those commies popped my balloons..."

I frown, holding the popped balloons.

"Eventually we found a forkbot and used it to get to where we needed to go. I think that was a briefing at the troubleshooter HQ... we met you for the first time, and got some brevets."

"Then we went to the camera station level and found the Tsar hooked up to the floor on that level. We killed the commies, hooked it up to the forkbot, and eventually secured the security camera station."

I pause for a bit to let it sink in and let the others talk too.

written by Megagun on Jun 10, 2011 23:47

"I don't remember much, other than somehow getting my lower left arm chopped off by a docbot and receiving tained medication from said docbot. Of course, I helped Friend Computer by alerting him about the broken docbot. Said docbot has been deactivated as a direct result of my actions!"

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 11, 2011 00:33

I listen carefully to everything being said.

It won't be long now... Just a little more time to wait. Just a little, I hope.

written by Jam on Jun 11, 2011 01:05

"I remember shooting, and commies, and forkbots, and lifts, and cloning stations, and VIOLET rooms, and more commies, and Friend Computer, and no more commies, and reactors, and more commies, and Sleepy-Sleepy, and headaches, and registration, and more commies, and falling, and an explosion, and a dark place, and a lift, and a cloning station, and F-Class mutants, and hurrying, and food vats, and another lift, and more hurrying, and a debriefing room, and a High Programmer!"

written by Gligar on Jun 11, 2011 02:14

Debriefing room 27

Speed-Y says that he doesn't remember the briefing. Perhaps his brainscrub has lasting effects. Other than, you know, making him lose his memory.

But he does remember finding the control room, which gets marked on the maps. A video window appears on each screen, showing him pressing buttons on the control panel. In glorious stereovision!

He also remembers a warehouse. A video feed appears, next to the control room feed, also in stereo, depicting a battle between the team and some communists.

Malkom-R remembers waking up in the meeting hall, then... "some computer" told him to go and join Team Epsilon. He then explains why he was late. Apparently, it involves having his legs sawn off by a docbot, and a communist. Said communist was dispatched, thanks to Buzzy. He adds that Roy was acting strangely, and may need investigation. Finally, he asks for a motorised wheelchair, and for someone to hand this slugthrower to. Unless he gets to keep it?

"Hmmm. There is a discrepancy there. Namely, how did you get to the reactor level? There is no record of you taking the lift.

"As for that slugthrower, it is YELLOW Clearance. You can hand it to anyone of YELLOW Clearance or higher. Speed-Y is YELLOW Clearance, as are the idea bot's technicians."

L4-O explains that he helped explore the bunker. This is accompanied by stills from video feeds appearing on one screen: a shot of him trying the door to Corridor C1, a shot of him looking at the ORANGE dormitory, some shots of him on A Level, and so on.

He then explains that he participated in the battle at the warehouse. A shot appears of him throwing a grenade (well, the pin) at a group of communists. Eventually, he says, the group found a forkbot (Nukabot, which appears on a screen) and used it to travel to THQ, where they met the High Programmer. From there, they went to a camera control station (which appears on a screen, in all its GREEN and BLUE glory), finding the Tsar in the process. "Describe the Tsar as it appeared to you, please."

The idea bot doesn't remember much. Its first clear memory is of a docbot sawing its arm off, and of tainted medication. It was able to have the docbot deactivated by alerting our mutual friend. As it speaks, a video feed appears, showing the action.

Mango-R keeps quiet.

Jam-O gives a very brief summary of what he remembers. "Elaborate, please. I need more detail."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 11, 2011 03:47

"It was... cylindrical... inside some kind of metal frame. About a meter long, more or less. Pretty heavy too. It had a radiation symbol on it, and if I remember right, some cabling connected to it. This was what was keeping it connected to the floor. We disconnected it and instead connected the cables into the forkbot, and it was found to be compatible and produced plenty of power."

"Oddly, it was repelling the gas from my cone rifle... it gave us a nice safe zone to work in."

"Anyway... at this time, I don't think it had the keypad we saw later on. The commies still had control of the sector so maybe they were going to remotely detonate it?"

I shrug.

"I'll let you draw the conclusions..."

written by Speeder on Jun 11, 2011 03:54

"Yeah, that is when we were still Lightspeed Jam. Also... my actions on the security camera system worked as I intended? Namely, redirect them to you and only allow you to unlock their system? For obvious reasons, I had no way to know if it worked or not."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 11, 2011 05:54

I suddenly feel extremely tired once more, except instead of fighting it, I let my head sink down to the table, letting myself try to rest.

"...So that's... what Headgrabber warned me about...."

I drift into some state of mind. Somewhere halfway between consciousness and unconsciousness.

Help? Please?

written by Jam on Jun 11, 2011 13:12

I suddenly think...

Oh... Why am I so tired all of the sudden... I can't think straight...

Through my muddled thinking, I realize something the idea bot said didn't make sense...

"Idea bot, what do you mean when you said someone that arrived late to the debriefing was the only clone that didn't get some other person in his head? Who are you talking about?"

I look up to the High Programmer, and try to elaborate on summary...

"Um... If it's okay sir, I might need a minutecycle to think ⁴⁶⁸"

I try to focus enough to make a cohesive summary...

written by Malkom on Jun 11, 2011 14:54

"Oh, Sir, I don't know -- maybe the commies tampered with the lift!"

I regretfully hand the slugthrower to Speed-Y. "Sir Programmer, are there any INFRAREDS around that I could get to clean Buzzy? He's kind of messy after that commie attack." And messy he is, I failed to find anything to clean the commie chunks off him with other than my jumpsuit.

I wipe my fingers on the arm of my chair, since they got... dirty after stroking Buzzy.

written by 4616599 on Jun 11, 2011 15:26

I bump into the scrubot, and examine the area closely, paying attention to the hole. "What's up, doc?"

written by Gligar on Jun 11, 2011 18:31

Debriefing room 27

L4-O describes the Tsar as they first found it, and how it was connected to something on the floor. It didn't have its keypad at that point -- perhaps the communists were planning on detonating it in place. "Whereabouts was it in the sector?" the High Programmer asks. "By the sound of it, it couldn't have been in a very good place... unless..." He falls silent.

Speed-Y asks about the incident with the cameras. Was he successful in his attempt to lock camera control? "Oh! Yes, citizen, your attempt worked. I am surprised that you were able to duplicate my blocking signal like that..."

Mango-R can't fight off the fatigue any more, and sinks into sleep.

Lucas-R suddenly realises that he's been dawdling, and hurries out.

Jam-O, too, is fighting off fatigue. But even through that, he realises that the idea bot said something puzzling. He asks for clarification. Namely, who does it mean?

⁴⁶⁸ JAM: (ooc: Translate: next turn)

He then asks for a moment to get his thoughts together.
"I'm waiting."

Malkom-R suggests that communists tampered with the lift, perhaps explaining the lack of any evidence that he used it. "We'll get back to that later."

Malkom-R then hands the slugthrower to Speed-Y, and then admits that he hasn't been taking care of Buzzy like he should. He inquires whether there are any INFRAREDS around to clean it for him. "Are you suggesting that I order some to commit treason? Chainsaws are RED Clearance."

Cloning station (somewhere)

Joris-O inspects the acid hole. It has etched right through the metal walkway, revealing the main floor of the station, with its racks of jumpsuits and other equipment. And self-service terminals for filling out forms.

As he does, though, his headache just gets worse.

The scrubot simply replies, "I am attempting to clean up this acid hole."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 11, 2011 18:40

"It was on the same level as the camera control station. F level I think? Somewhere in that group."

"It was in the main concourse just after exiting the lift hall."
"

I ponder.

"Now that you mention it, that does seem like a strange place for a nuke..."

written by Speeder on Jun 11, 2011 20:22

I look at Malkom

"You act clueless all the time, I wonder if you REALLY are from Alpha Complex."

I look back to the UV citizen.

"The Tsar was on the same level as the camera station, thus I think that maybe they intended to take all high clearance citizens out, and keep the lower levels... or, something else, since I do not know the sector layout, I dunno."

I remember the gas that L4 is referring to.

"That VIOLET gas was nasty... Happily I do not died on it. And happily somehow the Tsar repelled it, very convenient."

written by Cryoburner on Jun 12, 2011 00:42

Noting the thrilling stereoscopic imagery on the floor, I decide to examine it more carefully. I get as close as possible to the floor, and inspect the individual pixel elements. I begin scanning the floor in a search for any dead or stuck pixels.

written by Jam on Jun 12, 2011 01:22

I think for a long time, then, after clearing my throat, start talking...

"The first thing I remember is Speed-O dropping a grenade... Naturally, I panicked, but luckily noclone was hurt... I walked over to Speed-Y, and he gave me a nut launcher, which I swore I'd guard with my life.

We heard commies coming, so I used a vendobot for cover and threw a few B3's at the commies, and shot some nuts at them... I saw L4-O trip and ran over to rescue him (since there was water around, and I didn't want him to drown)...

Speed-O threw a squealing laser pistol barrel at the commie, and it exploded... They all died... I checked them, and I found a laser pistol on one of the communists...

I went and got some more laser pistols and a bunch of jumpsuits, then a forkbot came... Then I got hungry and went to get some food... I went to Food Storage and got some Hot Fun...

L4-O left after that, and I ran after him, thinking he looked like he was having fun riding the forkbot... I wanted Speed-O to ride the forkbot too, but he was busy getting the Computer Restart Tapes, and told me to go escort the forkbot and L4-O... I followed his orders... Then he told me to find 'broken leg guy' (Cryo-R), but Cryo-R had went up a hole in the ceiling and ignored me when I called to him... Instead, I dragged a strange clone that tried to bat me with a towel, back to Speed-Y...

We left after that, and I shot a bunch of commies while riding on the forkbot! It was FUN! Speed-O shot at the commies too! We made it to a lift hall, and went to D level...

We met John-R there, and he wanted us to sing the Alpha Complex Anthem, so we did. Then we shot more commies, and John-R mind-blasted them! My laser pistol barrel exploded, and I was flung back. I burnt my hand... And then..."⁴⁶⁹

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 12, 2011 01:29

Sometimes, I wonder why you've made all the wrong choices. No wonder why you've died so many times. You should have never tried to go alone. If you can't listen to me, you won't last another hourcycle, with the recklessness that you've been showing.

I stir a bit.

Who are you?

I'm yourself, silly. A someone who needs to project oneself in the mind in order to get a message across. Somehow, I think you're one of the most stubborn minds of all.

written by Gligar on Jun 12, 2011 02:07

Debriefing room 27

L4-O remembers that the Tsar was found on the same level as the camera control station... perhaps F Level. A partial schematic of F Level appears in front of one of the displays on the floor screen. It looks for all the complex like it's several centimetres in front of the other display.

Speed-Y wonders if Malkom-R is from outside the complex...

⁴⁶⁹ JAM: (ooc: Save the rest for next turn! 😊)

He also remembers the location of the Tsar. He suspects that the communists wanted to take out all of the high clearances, but can't know for certain.

And as for that VIOLET gas, that was nasty stuff. It's a good thing that the Tsar could somehow repel it.

"Just as I feared: the Tsar was situated near the weapons cache in Zeta Subsector," the High Programmer says. "It's a good thing you found it. They could have chain-detonated the nukes."

"It's interesting, as well, that the Tsar was able to repel the toxin used in gas shells. That suggests something I don't want to even think about."

Cryo-R isn't paying attention. He's inspecting the floor display, looking for dead pixels. However, the pixels are so small he can't even see them. As such, he can't see any obvious dead or stuck pixels.

Jam-O launches into a description of what he remembers, starting from a grenade, and continuing up to the point where he pauses, when the team met John-R.

As he speaks, images appear on the right hand screen, depicting the scenes he's describing. "Carry on," the High Programmer says.

Mango-R stirs in his half-sleep.

Lucas-R returns, carrying a tray of cups of coffeelyke. "Sorry it took so long, sirs," he says.

written by Malkom on Jun 12, 2011 01:56

I look for something to clean Buzzy with.

"Ugh. Commie chunks all over my Buzzy friend."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 12, 2011 03:43

I move my arms into a position so that they act as a sort of cushion for my head.

I think I might just ignore that certain remark you just made then. Even if it is me just criticising myself...

I try to sleep, but the scent of something bitter tries to wake me.

written by Speeder on Jun 12, 2011 04:21

"John is quite effective. Also detected Headgrabber very early."

I look to Jam.

"Hey, you met Lucas when fixing your hand, was not it?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 12, 2011 08:06

"Weapons cache? Well... that's good then, yeah..."

I lean back and listen to Jam relating our experiences.

"Don't forget the time we killed the commies! Wait... that was all the time. Nevermind me."

written by Megagun on Jun 12, 2011 12:33

I look at the stereo vidscreens.

"HOLD IT! That looks a bit like.. wait, no.. or does it? Hmm, the perspective is wrong."

I start moving around the room, paying attention to the vidscreens.

"No, this is the wrong perspective, too.. Not this one either, maybe from that other corn--oh, no, totally off.

Nevermind that. I thought I recognized the layout of that room, but don't."

written by 4616599 on Jun 12, 2011 13:51

I go to the terminal and look at the forms.

I seem to be mumbling incoherently

written by Jam on Jun 12, 2011 16:54

I look to Speed-Y.

"Oh yeah..."

I continue on...

"The others went to F level, and I went to C level to get my hand treated... I met Lucas-R there... I remember an explosion, and more shooting... But, we found a docbot, shot a bunch more commies, and then the docbot chopped my hand off as thanks... Lucas-R dragged me to safety... He decided to come with me, so we went back to the lift, which broke. Lucas pulled me up an escape hatch, and we climbed a ladder to an air vent..."

written by Gligar on Jun 12, 2011 19:33

Debriefing Room 27

Malkom-R looks for something to clean Buzzy with. He can't seem to find anything, though.

Mango-R moves his arms to cushion his head, as he tries to get some sleep. But the smell of the coffeelyke gets in the way.

As does the High Programmer. "Mango-R! This is no time to sleep!"

Speed-Y adds his praise for John-R, and added that he was able to detect Headgrabber almost from the start.

He then reminds Jam-O that it was about then when he met Lucas-R.

L4-O sits back, and reminds Jam-O of the time when they killed commies... er wait, that was all the time.

The idea bot apparently recognises something displayed on one of the vidscreens, and tries to move to get a better look. In its effort, it seemingly does not notice Lucass-R -

"Alert," it intones, in a mechanical voice. "Asimov circuits have detected a Third Law violation instigated by the running liveware. Further motor input halted pending authorisation. The running liveware is reminded that, as a bot, it is bound by the Five Laws of Robotics, just as any other bot."

Startled, Lucas-R stumbles slightly -- the bot did manage to jostle him before it halted -- and accidentally spills some of the coffeelyke. "Hey, bot, watch where you're going!"

"Enough," the High Programmer says. "It is pleasing to see that the idea bot's Asimov circuits seem to be functioning. It would seem that the original bot brain is also still functional, and is monitoring Leeroy-O's liveware. How thoughtful."

Jam-O plows on. He details how he left the team to get medical treatment, meeting Lucas-R in the process, Lucas-R adds, "That's right, sir. You thought I was a commie for a while, but, as you found out, I'm not."

Cloning station (somewhere)

Joris-O enters the main floor and looks at a terminal. There are the usual forms displayed, for clone release, jumpsuit and other equipment requisition, mutation registration if needed, that sort of thing.

A notice on the screen reminds him to select one jumpsuit of his clearance, not above, and only one.

written by Speeder on Jun 12, 2011 19:38

I notice the bizarre behaving ideabot.

Then I notice the slugthrower that Malkom is holding, and take it.

I examine to see it is of revolving chamber or not, and pocket it.

"Malkom... where you found this chainsaw? I do not remember seeing those widely available around..."

written by Cryoburner on Jun 12, 2011 20:30

"Say, I think Idea Bot could use some coffeelyke, Fellow Lift Passenger! He looks quite thirsty..."

I proceed to check whether Idea Bot has any built-in cupholders, or a mouth for that matter.

written by Malkom on Jun 12, 2011 21:07

I wave a hand in dismissal. "Oh, just lying around... the docbot had it for a while, but I think it malfunctioned after the docbot used it to saw off my legs."

I wipe the chainsaw on the arm of my chair.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 12, 2011 22:46

"Oh right... there was an explosion too. Pretty strong one. Anyone know the specifics?"

It was around the time we were just seeing the nuclear device."

I look around and study the maps of the sector to see if anything looks out of the ordinary or different than when I might have seen it.

written by Megagun on Jun 12, 2011 23:35

"So, yeah. After the medbot incident, I went off to accomplish Team Ivy's mission. Found myself inside a BLUE security station, and attempted to find out where the Forkbot carrying the Tsar was. I decided to temporarily... 'ignore' my security clearance, for the severity of the situation demanded it.

For some reason, the security terminal at the station didn't want me to know where the Forkbot was. Luckily, a band of helpful IntSec guys arrived and escorted me to a different security station.

They asked me some questions at that security station, about the Tsar. I answered them, they verified my claims of Team Ivy's mission, and we all had a B3 party afterwards. The bit about the B3 party is something I just made up. I wish we had a B3 party!

So, yeah, then the power went own partially. Bummer! That totally ruined any possibility of a B3 party.

I then had to leave the helpful IntSec guys, as they weren't willing to help JHT sector out without receiving 50 credits per hourcycle. What a shame."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 12, 2011 23:48

"Ah! Err... I apologise. I know it's only been a few minute cycles, and I really can't explain this."

I force my head back up.

"Headgrabber from the start? Blimey. Yearcycles have long since past since he began his... activities. I hate to put it in this way, Speed-Y, but I think it was pretty much luck that did the job."

I stop for a moment.

"Blimey'? That's something new..."

written by Gligar on Jun 13, 2011 01:11

Debriefing room 27

Speed-Y realises that Malkom-R is offering him the slugthrower, and takes it. He gives it the once-over. It appears to be a regular single-shot slugthrower, not a 'revolver'.

He then asks Malkom-R where he found the chainsaw. Those aren't exactly common.

Malkom-R replies that it was 'just lying around'. Apparently, a docbot had it, but it malfunctioned. He wipes it on the arm of his chair.

Cryo-R turns his attention to the idea bot, looking to see if it has a cupholder. Bots do not drink, and this is not a serving bot, therefore it doesn't have one. It does, however, have a human-looking hand.

L4-O points out that there was also an explosion at about the same time as they found the Tsar. The High Programmer speaks up. "From camera footage and other means, it appears that the Troubleshooter Headquarters armoury was destroyed. Interestingly, it was not a million yearcycles after you lot passed through it..."

L4-O looks at the vidscreen displays, looking for anything out of the ordinary, say, anything that doesn't match what he saw. But so far, they seem to be accurate.

The idea bot continues its story, explaining that it violated security clearance in its attempt to locate the Tsar. "So you freely admit that. Very well." It adds that it encountered Internal Security not long after, and offered them the chance to join him, only to be quoted a figure above his current means. "Standard IntSec retainer."

Mango-R wakes up. He seems a bit confused. He states that Headgrabber has been operating for yearcycles. He suggests that luck might have been a big factor.

"Or perhaps Headgrabber's grown complacent," John-R suggests.

written by Jam on Jun 13, 2011 01:17

I look back to Lucas-R.

"Yep! I was convinced after you saved my live twice..."

Then I turn back to the High Programmer.

"Lucas and I exited the air ducts at E level, then took a lift up to F level... There was a convenient RED stripe that we followed... I remember us passing through some smelly VIOLET gas (which we tried not to breathe), and met up with the rest of the team.

I went to D level after that, to get Cryo-R and Joris-O... I met Joris-O first, then found Cryo-R shortly afterward, after finding a strange frozen clone who called himself the Station Monitor... He was weird...

Anyway, I found Cryo-R, but he ran off into a mirrored corridor... The rest of the team were there, and we went to a concourse and Speed-Y lowered me down a hole in the floor to the bunker, where I found Mango-R and Kristo-R..."^{470 471}

written by Lightning4 on Jun 13, 2011 01:43

"Huh. Well, that sounds about right. I'm sure the armory must've had quite an explosive punch to it..."

"Wonder who was down there..."

I look around.

"Nobody said anything... so maybe it was someone not among us..."

written by Speeder on Jun 13, 2011 01:47

"I wonder what the Station Monitor is... It sounds creepy. And strange. And not a actual clone either. Maybe another of the extremely mutated mutants?"

I look at the High Programmer upon mention of the hole that I used to lower Jam

"You do not mind that our efforts to kill commies also make huge holes in the sector, do you?"

written by 4616599 on Jun 13, 2011 02:34

I grab an INFRARED jumpsuit groggily and try to fit into it.

⁴⁷⁰ JAM: (ooc: Can't I just post twice this turn? It's not like I'm doing much beside talking... 😊)

⁴⁷¹ Gligar: (OOC: I'm not stopping you.)

written by Malkom on Jun 13, 2011 04:27

I continue wiping Buzzy on the chair arm until he's totally clean.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 13, 2011 10:51

"Complacent... Maybe."

I struggle to get over the tiredness that seems to have grown on me. I try to keep myself awake, taking the coffeelyke only if I am authorised. Otherwise, I attempt to use the vapours to awaken me a bit more.

"Ack... ACK!"

I grab my head with both hands as a sudden pain rushes through it. I fall off the chair that I'm on, and tremble on the ground.

"Stop it! STOP IT! LEAVE MY MIND BE!"

written by Jam on Jun 13, 2011 17:03

I look to Speed-Y.

"Maybe the Station Monitor was one of those androids?"

I also notice Malkom-R attempting to clean a chainsaw with a chair... I roll my eyes, then take out a small towel and toss it to him...

"Here, use this instead!"

Then I turn back to the ULTRAVIOLET, and continue giving a mission summary...

"The bunker was dark, because the generator has run out of fuel... Mango-R, Kristos-R, and another clone I didn't learn the name of, went with me to get some more fuel. We dragged a fuel drum from A level to the Generator Room, then refueled the generator... Kristos-R grabbed Mango-R's PDC, and started pressing buttons... I just assumed he was wanting to play one of those new PDC games or something...

Anyway, we got the generator started, then went to get some food, as Kristos-R looked hungry... I happened to hear some noises coming from the bunker's cloning station, so I went to investigate, and found a terminal that said something about a 'clearance mismatch', and told me to press "Y"... I did, and Lucas decanted... I brought him to the showers, but somehow got locked inside and got some chemicals in my eyes that screwed with my color vision, making everything look treasonous colors... I think it affected my memory a bit too... Heh... I even though Mango-R was a High Programmer for a secondcycle, it was weird... Then—"

I stop as Mango-R starts screaming... I look a bit annoyed, then I appear to be concentrating on him...

written by Cryoburner on Jun 13, 2011 18:44

"It's nice of you to bring the Idea Bot some Coffeelyke, Fellow Lift Passenger, but as far as I can tell, he does not drink Coffeelyke, nor has he any visible cup holders. Besides, what he really wants is B3. How about you go lift us some B3, Fellow Lift Passenger? A B3 party just isn't the same without B3."

"Now, what to do with all this Coffeelyke? I guess Sal might have to drink it all."

written by Gligar on Jun 13, 2011 19:27

Debriefing room 27

Jam-O agrees with Lucas-R.. He did save Jam-O's life not once, but twice, after all.

He continues with his report. He recalls how he and Lucas-R made their way to the rest of the team by the handy route given to them by a RED stripe. "That's odd. I don't remember there being a RED stripe on F Level... Carry on."

He continues, detailing how he went to retrieve the then Joris-R and Cryo-R. During that, he encountered the Station monitor... what a strange clone...

The vidscreens show yet more images, following Jam-O as he speaks. The image showing the Station Monitor seems to be taken through a layer of ice.

Jam-O explains how Cryo-R ran off into another corridor. Cryo-R has already been disciplined for that and many other offences. It is doubtful that the disciplinary action even had any effect, however." The High Programmer glares at Cryo-R.

Jam-O starts telling about how he re-entered the bunker (with a vidscreen showing the ruins of the warehouse) before falling silent.

L4-O wonders who was at the armourt when it exploded. No-one answers. So it must have been someone who isn't here...

Cloning station (somewhere)

Without filling out forms (yet), Joris-O takes an INFRARED jumpsuit and forces himself into it. Those things are loose enough that he doesn't have to do much forcing.

A jackobot trundles over. "Do you require any assistance, citizen?"

Debriefing Room 27

Speed-Y wonders who, or what, the Station Monitor is. He (it?) sounds creepy, perhaps not exactly a clone... perhaps an F-class mutant?

Jam-O suggests that he might be an android?

On Jam-O's mention of the hole he used to get into the bunker, Speed-Y asks if it's okay that they caused big holes in the sector.

"Property damage is never 'okay', citizen. But let our mutual friend decide whether it was justified or not. I'm sure he'll come up with a most beneficial result." The High Programmer seems pleased at that.

Malkom-R continues trying to use his chair to clean Buzzy. It doesn't work too well. Jam-O offers him a towel instead.

Jam-O continues his report, detailing how he and a few others refuelled the bunker's generators. He points out Kristos-R's unusual behaviour concerning Mango-R's PDC, and how they went for lunch later.

Wait, did I say lunch? Sorry, Cryo-R must be contagious.

Anyway, Jam-O continues, detailing how Lucas-R decanted in the bunker, and how Jam-O got stuck in the showers during a cycle. The High Programmer listens intently. "Now you know not to do that, don't you?"

Mango-R groggily reaches for a coffeelyke, successfully taking a cup and taking a sip. It helps.

But then he falls to the floor, hands to his head. He screams , [CENSORED]-like, for something to get out of his mind, causing Jam-O (and John-R, who was about to get a cup of coffeelyke) to look at him intensely.

Another clone seems to be interested, as well. Derek-G (who seems remarkably adept at keeping concealed) has his own laser pistol trained on Mango-R.

The laser turret also locks on. "Explain yourself, Mango-R. Is it external influence? This time?"

Cryo-R, as ever, ignores everything except for the one matter that's important to him: coffeelyke. He says that it's nice that Lucas-R brought it "for the idea bot", but informs him that the idea bot doesn't drink. Perhaps the jackobot can have it?

"Or perhaps you can have some of it, Cryo-R," the jackobot replies. "In common with 99.49% of bots, I do not drink."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 13, 2011 20:59

The pain continues... and rushes strongly through my mind.

"Uuuurrrrgghhh... I don't think it's..."

I curl up, trying to make the horrible pain go away, to forcefully remove it.

"It's the... emptiness... so much from where Headgrabber... used to be..."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 13, 2011 21:34

I look concerned for Mango-R, but knowing I can't really help, I inject myself into another conversation.

"So uh... that means 0.51% of bots DO drink? I wonder what bots those are. And what they drink. I hope they don't drink blood."

I lower my voice and look around.

"Vampbots are just a myth, right?"

written by Speeder on Jun 13, 2011 23:40

Oh, the memories of refueling.

I look at Cryo.

"You know, I STILL DO NOT FORGOT THAT YOU STILL DO NOT CLEANED THE DAMN MESS YOU MADE BY ONLY WATCHING, INSTEAD OF HOLDING, THE HOSE!"

I am now not in the mandatory levels of happiness. Seemly those memories cause unhappiness.

written by Jam on Jun 14, 2011 00:50

I look quickly to the High Programmer...

"Yes, sir! I know now to always wear a mask when going into a chemical shower... I learned that lesson the hard way..."

I look over at John-R.

"I don't sense any mutants in his head, besides us two probing him... Did you get the same thing?"

written by Cryoburner on Jun 14, 2011 01:27

"That's an excellent Idea Sal! Perhaps I shall have some! That should free up My Fellow Lift Passenger here so that he can run and get us some B3!"

I proceed to take the entire tray of Coffeelyke.

written by Speeder on Jun 14, 2011 01:28

As I notice Cryo oblivious of me screaming at him, I facepalm.

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 14, 2011 04:08

I have one thing to say in response to vampbots... I sure hope that's a myth.

written by 4616599 on Jun 14, 2011 05:45

I seem very distracted.

"Oh, hello! Do you have any B3 or other foods?"

I look around for any forms to fill and sign

written by Gligar on Jun 14, 2011 14:28

Debriefing room 27

Mango-R curls up on the floor. He says that the pain is coming from where Headgrabber used to be.

One of the techs looks over, and asks, "Do you need anything for that? I've still got some visomorpain left."

The High Programmer looks thoughtful. "I believe that we'll need more than just visomorpain... perhaps a repatterning is in order."

L4-O looks concerned, but can't really help. Instead, he voices his concern over the 0.51% of bots which apparently can drink. He hopes they don't drink blood...

"I am referring to androids," the jackobot tells him. "They are designed to... well, drink fluids, and then convert them to fuel. I understand that they can even use hygiene stations.

As for the rumours about vampbots... well, those are treason. And almost certainly not true."

Speaking of refuelling... Speed-Y has never really forgotten that Cryo-R allowed the fuel to spill on the floor during refuelling of the generators, and never did clean it up.

The Hight Programmer pulls a form towards him and writes on it. "Okay, we have 'be-ing too li-ter-al'... 'caus-ing un-happ-i-ness'... 'vi-o-la-tion of Pro-to-col 14'... and, of course, [DFSR]. And, oh yes, name of citizen... no, not my name, that goes up there..."

Jam-O acknowledges that he learned something the hard way, and turns his attention to John-R. He asks whether he also detected nothing in Mango-R's mind. "That's right sir. It's kind of... empty in there."

Oblivious as ever, Cryo-R decides to take the entire tray of coffeelyke from Lucas-R. Who doesn't want to let go. "You can't possibly want to drink the whole tray yourself? Surely the others want some?"

"Actually, you know what? I don't care. Do what you want. Maybe your heart will explode or something."

Speed-Y facepalms. The image of a bald guy facepalming enters everyone's mind... perhaps you've seen it before somewhere?

Azir-R hopes that vampbots don't actually exist.

Cloning station (somewhere)

"There is a vendobot in the foyer," replies the jackobot. "But you will require your ME Card."

It notices Joris-O looking around, and says, "If you want to fill in your forms, you will find them on the self-service terminals."

written by Speeder on Jun 14, 2011 15:26

I turn again to the UV Monitor Guy... nice monitor by the way!

"So... you also work with tech, you also have subordinates... As you rise in rank, that:"

I point to Cryo.

"Start to happen more?"

Oh, good to remember that I am still pointing my pistol at mango, even while he is on the ground trying to kill his brain or something.

written by Jam on Jun 14, 2011 17:07

"Oh Coffeelyke! I'll take some..."

I take a cup of Coffeelyke, and drink a sip or two...

"Hmm... Mango-R's brain does seem empty... Maybe they forgot his brain when he decanted?"

I walk up to Mango-R and rap my knuckles on his head, then put my ear to his head and listen for an echo...

After a while of that, I turn back to the High Programmer.

"Oh, um... I should continue the mission summary... Now where was I..."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 14, 2011 19:17

"Androids... androids... right!"

"Guys, didn't we find an android commie some time ago? I remember we blasted one and was surprised to find that it was a bot instead of a clone."

"That was cause for concern indeed. I think we met our first one after we met Derek and got Massacrebot for our mission."

written by Gligar on Jun 14, 2011 19:56

Debriefing room 27

Speed-Y asks whether things like Cryo-R occur more often the higher you rise in rank?

"Well, they occur far more often than one would imagine. Some daycycles, it can occur about once every hourcycle..." He goes back to his form.

Jam-O notices the coffeelyke, and takes a cup. Mmmm....

He agrees with John-R about Mango-R's mind... perhaps he didn't get downloaded at all? He goes over and taps on Mango-R's head. Sadly, there's no echo.

Then, he realises that he was in the middle of a report, and tries to remember where he was... Then he remembers... he'd just been caught in the showers...

L4-O remembers that they encountered an android not long after obtaining Massacrebot...

"Don't forget," Derek-G says, "to include everything that the bot did in your report. I would like to know."

written by Megagun on Jun 14, 2011 20:07

"So, yeah, after missing out on an epic B3 party, I headed out into the big happy world to find that forkbot. Went into an AlphaNet café, did some research into forkbots, walked around, and eventually headed off towards this warehouse thing..

Turns out there is indeed a remnant of a forkbot there! Also, lots of dead bodies! So as I walk in, this GREEN guy also walks in and starts asking me questions, such as what I am doing inside a YELLOW clearance warehouse. Good question, that was! Of course I fully admitted to my vital mission of vitality towards all of JHT sector! I think he fined me some credits for that! What a bummer. Could've bought some cans of B3 with that!

So I examine the forkbot, especially the serial number. Turns out it just might be the forkbot I'm looking for! Didn't contain any Nuclear Weapons Devices, though. Bit of a shame. Would've saved me a lot of time I could've spent on watching Mandatory Team Troubleshooter episodes if I found the Weapons Device right there!

So I throw my ME card towards the GREEN, so he can fine me some credits, and he's all 'Oh, MemoMax Liveware Overwrite Event, you gotta come with me buddy!'. Really, that's what happened! Almost as if I was in BMR sector! Tells me I've got to follow him around, as if I didn't do enough following in those past few hourcycles yet!

Luckily, I'm a smart Troubleshooter and demanded that he wouldn't hurt me and let me finish my mission. He said that I was in no position to make demands, but luckily I've had a copy of PowerMark ready to generate a form for me that he could fill out! It was a damned good form, really. Basically explained to him that he had to not harm me and let me finish my mission. Very efficient!

Turns out, he was so impressed with my skills, that he explained right there that I've been subject to a MemoMax LiveWare OverWrite Event. Basically, My Leeroy-O mind has been put inside the body of this Commie Mutant Traitor called Mega-R. Yeah. Really. Not making this up! He totally allowed me to stay right there instead of follow him around to some secret room where he could do all the explaining!

So I talk a bit about Mega-R, how he must've been a really noble clone and all that, and this GREEN whispers to me that I should keep quiet about it, as the 'standard procedure' on an OverWrite event was to terminate the subject. Told me that I had to impersonate Mega-R from then on. So, yeah, that's what I've been doing from then on. I think that was when I figured out that some high-ranked clone in JHT sector was using me for some noble goal. I've managed to somehow not get fined for being inside a BLUE intsec security station, and here is this GREEN guy giving me some advice on how to act, and he also forgets to fine me! Am I lucky, or what? No. Someone's obviously behind this. I think I know who!

Either way, we find a power pack, boot up the forkbot, run diagnostics, and find out that the Forkbot's Asimov circuitry has been broken. Of course. That stuff always happens to Forkbots who have had NUCLEAR WEAPONS DEVICES in them. Yeah.

So, err. I run some more diagnostics, talk to the bot a bit. Turns out that some Troubleshooter team installed a Nuclear Device in it for some reason, then suddenly COMMIE MUTANT TRAITORS and then suddenly the Forkbot no longer had a power source, and the commies had obtained a Nuclear Weapons Device!

So, yeah, I guess that's about it, really. There weren't any B3 parties, at least. Kind of sad, really..

...Now that I think about it, that GREEN clone kind of looks like this guy over here..."

I point at Derek-G

"...That's about it, I think! Epic story, eh? Think I could be featured in an episode of Mandatory Team Troubleshooter?"

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 14, 2011 20:54

I notice that the pain gives a sharp jab as Jam-O knocks at my head.

"Ouch..."

I cringe, and try to get rid of the emptiness.

"Why can't I move it...? Unless... Permanent damage..."

written by Malkom on Jun 14, 2011 22:51

I wipe Buzzy off on the towel. It gets covered in commie chunks.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 14, 2011 22:59

I perk up when the Idea Bot mentions a forkbot.

"Sounds like Nukabot alright. We did use the nuclear device as a power source to run it... however, the Asimov circuits breaking was another thing entirely. After the battle to reboot the sector's comnode, we had a malfunctioning bot nearby. We told Nukabot to get rid of it before it caused harm... but sadly, it seemed the electric shock spread to it. Nukabot got a few fried circuits off of that, including the Asimov circuit."

"We booted it back up though, it seemed Nukabot still had a sound botmind and was loyal to Friend Computer. We drove back to that warehouse you found him in... that's when Cryo-R here tipped Nukabot over while I was repairing a tyre."

I shoot another glare at Cryo-R. What's that now, three? Four?

"Nukabot fell off the jack and broke an axle. It lost trust in us and wanted to stay behind... not that we were capable of repairing it..."

"But a rather suspicious repair team came by then. That's probably when the commies attacked. We left not long after they arrived."

I lean back in my chair.

"That's Nukabot's story anyway. I can't really help with Massacrebot, Speed-Y will have to relate that... he operated it most of the time."

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 14, 2011 23:07

I take a coffeelyke if they become within reach, seems like this might go on for a while.⁴⁷²

written by Speeder on Jun 15, 2011 00:29

"I believe Massacrebot uploaded all data that it could on its last moments, most of my comments and logs were there."

I look at Azir with a face of 'who is this? how I do not noticed him before?'

Then I look at Derek.

"Massacrebot worked perfectly, it had only three major issues, first, its weapon was prone to jam on any sort of repeating mode, I had to use mostly on semi-auto. Although when I relied once on full-auto for crowd control, it proved to have a impressive fire rate. Second, the servos could not withstand the bot own weight, and over time got worse and worse. And finally, sometimes the bot would act up and lock me inside, I still do not know why this happened. Kinda annoying if you ask me."

"Relevant info to you: Once the bot froze upon receiving a unknown command from the Friend Computer exclusive channel. Since I doubt Friend Computer itself would do that, I think someone got into Friend Computer communication network. At least, figured how to pose as Friend Computer."

written by Cryoburner on Jun 15, 2011 01:05

"You look like you would like some Coffeelyke!"

⁴⁷² MALKOM: OOC: That'd be coffeelyke. Misspelling is treason.

I offer Coffeelyke to Azir-R, who looks like he would like some Coffeelyke.

I then hear L4-O mention how I disabled the bot.

"Ah! So I did disable a bot with damaged Asimov circuits then, didn't I? I'm curious why no one else did sooner. A bot with damaged Asimov circuits carrying a portable nuclear device would undoubtedly be quite a threat to the complex. Leaving one operating in such a state sounds downright treasonous!"

I proceed to count my remaining Coffeelykes.

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 15, 2011 01:12⁴⁷³

"Oh, thanks!"

I catch Speedy giving me a confused look. I smile back and toast with my coffeelyke before continuing to sit quietly and take in the debriefing.⁴⁷⁴

written by Jam on Jun 15, 2011 17:07

"Okay, so after the shower, we put on some reflec, then I went to a dormitory and got some laser pistols for everyone... Unfortunately, I picked the ORANGE dormitory instead of the RED one... But Lucas pointed out my mistake, so I put the ORANGE barrels back, then went to the RED dormitory and got RED barrels instead..."

I take another sip of Coffeelyke, then let Speed-Y and the Idea bot give their summaries...

written by Gligar on Jun 15, 2011 20:36⁴⁷⁵

Debriefing room 27

The idea bot continues its report. It explains that, after researching forkbots, Leeroy-O/Mega-R/whatever headed up to the Q Level Distribution Warehouse (which gets a picture on one of the screens, with the remains of Nukabot visible). It mentions that a GREEN clone showed up and started asking questions, until the subject of the MemoMax Liveware Overwrite cropped up. A few... interesting events then occurred, culminating in the reactivation, and subsequent deactivation, of Nukabot, and him learning that the Nuclear Weapons Device (the Tsar) used to be there but was now gone.

It notes that, clearly, someone wanted Leeroy-O to complete his mission, since he was somehow able to avoid serious repercussions for his transgressions. After all, BLUE IntSec clones somehow forgot to punish him, as did the GREEN clone... and now that it thinks about it, that GREEN looked a lot like Derek-G...

⁴⁷³ AZIRPHELII: [OOC Haven't the fuzziest what yer referring to...]

⁴⁷⁴ KRISTOS:

Malkom said:

OOC: That'd be coffeelyke. Misspelling is treason.

OOC: That'd be coffeelyke. Misspelling is treason.

⁴⁷⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: Delays in posting this turn are due to communist interference are in no way related to [EXPUNGED].)

"Yes," Derek-G replies. "That was me. As for why I let you go... well, I was following orders. MemoMax Liveware Overwrites don't happen every daycycle, after all."

"Orders given by whom?"

"That would be me," our mutual friend puts in. "I find the topic of MemoMax liveware overwrites to be most interesting, and the opportunity to study the body of an actual case proved too tempting to ignore."

Mango-R protests at his head being knocked on. He seems incapable of shifting the emptiness.

Lucas-R looks thoughtful. "I think I've seen that sort of thing before... just after I left the creche." He thinks for a moment. "I think my supervisor told me to leave it to Medical Services."

Malkom-R uses Jam-O's towel to clean off Buzzy, quickly filling the towel with chunks. But at least Buzzy is now clean.

L4-O looks thoughtful. The idea bot's mention of a forkbot does sound like Nukabot. It was they who installed the device for use as a power source. As for the ruined Asimovs, that was from a different incident, involving a malfunctioning bot. Nukabot was ordered to move it, but was electrocuted. The jolt fried some of its circuits, including the Asimovs.

But after a reboot, it seemed to still be trustworthy. at least, until a certain Cryo-R (who earns another Glare™) broke one of its axles. After that, it lost its trust in them and told them to leave.

And that would have been the end of it... except that a suspicious-looking repair team appeared. Presumably, they were killed by the communists.

As for Massacrebot... well, Speed-Y would be the clone to ask.

Azir-R looks around for the coffeelyke.

Speed-Y points out that Massacrebot uploaded its data at the last moment. They should contain his comments and logs.

After being confused at Azir-R's presence for a moment, he gives a summary of Massacrebot's performance, highlighting the few flaws he found: the heavy slugthrower having a tendency to jam in full-auto, the borderline servos, and Massacrebot's tendency to trap its user inside.

Derek-G replies, "I think I know why it would lock you inside. Recall that I had to resort to using a petbot's bot brain? Well, it must have grown attached to you."

Speed-Y turns to the High Programmer and report the fourth flaw: Massacrebot once froze upon receiving a bad command over the Computer's channel. Presumably, our mutual friend would not send such commands, which leaves one conclusion: someone else got into the channel.

"We'll have to have that looked into," the High Programmer says. "If this is true, it is a serious issue indeed."

Cryo-R notices Azir-R looking for coffeelyke, and offers him a cup.

Then he expresses delight that the bot he disabled did have faulty Asimovs after all. Why didn't anyone else spot that?

Finally, he counts how many he has left. He counts six cups.

Azir-R accepts his cup of coffeelyke, and, noticing Speed-Y's confused look, raises his coffeelyke in a sort of toast.

Jam-O continues, and admits a mistake he made with clearances.

written by Malkom on Jun 15, 2011 20:42

I stroke Buzzy lovingly a couple of times before setting him down next to me and calling for a Coffeelyke.

written by Speeder on Jun 15, 2011 21:06

I look at Azir, even more puzzled, but after while I smile, grab a coffeelyke myself (pocketing the yellow pistol first, so I can use that hand) and toast back.

"Welcome to team Lightspeed Jam team. Or the official name, Team Epsilon team. Our team is the most awesome team of troubleshooters ever. Ok, maybe not, but we are a team of awesome teamworkers. Well, except Cryo and towel guy. And the bot over there."

I point the bot. Then I start to laugh.

"Hey, you was the one insulting Massacrebot, was not you? I am sure if he get rebuilt he will find you QUITE amusing in that stupid idea bot body."

Then I turn to Derek.

"I see. He was highly loyal. Nukabot liked us too. In fact, all team members are highly loyal, I think is because we are cohesive and were selected excellently by..."

I look at the UV guy.

"You?"

I keep looking at him.

"Your has choosen us on purpose, no? I am sure none of us were troubleshooters before, and you built the team taking the best guy in each field that you could spare. I was the tech guy, responsible to fix compnode and reactor. L4 was our weapons officer obviously. Jam is a good officer and good at tracking equipment. John can kill people without using weapons and spy around. Joris was deadly accurate. Cryo I think was supposed to be documentation officer or something, but seemly he is more busy enforcing every single CPU mandate that he can remember. And seemly he has a absurdly effective memory."

I shoot a glance, but not a glare at Cryo.

Then I look to Malkom.

"And that guy well... I suppose he is the loyalty officer, since he keeps blabbering treasonous things, probably waiting for someone to agree with him. Or he is nuts."

I then suddenly remember some bizarre incidents that we had, specially the rad suit one.

[570]

"Oh, and seemly someone in the team is a Death Leopard. Considering how everywhere that we went things exploded, and someone sabotaged the radiation suits and drew happy faces on them. Not particularly dangerous to the team, and seemly still loyal, but I did not appreciated the radiation suit that induced sleep, I prefer Death Leopards that are having fun with commies instead."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 15, 2011 21:24

"Turbo Lightspeed Jam." I say while smirking.

I hear Speed complimenting the team.

"Thank you for the compliments, Sir, and allow me to repeat them as well. You were quite fine out there too."

"Speaking of Joris, where is he?"

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 15, 2011 21:26

"...Medical Services..."

Something about the place being mentioned makes me shake a bit more than I've already done.

"You can't put me there. You can't!" I yell. I try to get up, stumble, and fall over again.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 16, 2011 01:06

"Oh yes, and my fellow lift passenger here is an expert at lifts, and possibly at lifting things. And Sal! Sal is the best expert at being a bot of some sort ever."

I toss a Coffeelyke to Malkom-R, who apparently wants one tossed his way.

I then notice a rather tired-looking Mango-R on the floor.

"You look like you would like some Coffeelyke!"

I offer Coffeelyke to Mango-R, but since he seems a bit too exhausted to drink on his own, I set the tray of Coffeelykes down, and then proceed to help him drink one.

written by Jam on Jun 16, 2011 01:12

"Ahh... Lightspeed Jam... Good memories..."

I look to Speed-Y.

"Induced sleep? I dunno... I didn't feel very sleepy when I put the suit on... It was more of a relaxed, happy feeling..."

Then I continue my summary...

"I talked to Kristos-R a bit, and he said something about mutants... I can't really remember what though, for some reason... Hmm..."

Well, anyway, Mango-R jumped and make it up the hole I came down, and Kristos-R and Lucas-R and I moved a Vendobot and climbed on top of that... Then L4-O came with a ladder, and we climbed out... Oh, I bought some B3 too...

Hmm... What happened next... Oh yeah! Lucas-R and I went to find Cryo-R, and found him babbling in a lounge, waving a syringe around... I just assumed he'd finally gone crazy... I went to a corridor and found some dead commies with laser pistols, so I took the laser pistols (which looked RED to me). Then Lucas-R and I started carrying Cryo-R back to the others... It's strange, he was moving really slowly... Maybe the syringe was related..."

I look to Cryo-R...

"It's very strange... Almost like a mutant power or something... Or maybe a mutant power backfiring?"

written by Gligar on Jun 16, 2011 01:21

Debriefing Room 27

Malkom-R really likes Buzzy. How can you tell? Well, he's stroking it in that fashion, you know the one, you can almost hear him saying "prrrreccioussss..."

He does eventually put Buzzy down though, and asks for a coffeelyke.

Speed-Y is even more puzzled by Azir-R but eventually smiles and grabs a coffeelyke, pocketing his laser pistol in the process. Cryo-R dilligently notes that he has five cups left.

Speed-Y then welcomes Azir-R to the team. He says that they're an awesome team of awesome troubleshooters, or something like that. Well, with a couple of exceptions.

One of which, the idea bot, was the one insulting Massacrebot. Speed-Y is sure that if Massacrebot is ever rebuilt, it would find the idea bot funny.

To Derek-G, he says that Massacrebot was loyal. As was Nukabot, until the incident. Like the rest of the team, for that matter. Probably because they were all chosen by...

...the High Programmer?

He addresses the UV. He hand picked the team, didn't he? Speed-Y doubts that the team were Troubleshooters before, but they were the best he could spare in their fields, right? He does his best to identify his team members' strengths, ending on Malkom-R.

Something else then comes to mind: the radiation suit incident. Might there be a Death Leopard on the team?

"I have to say," the UV replies, "that despite the circumstances, you turned out rather well. I chose you because your profiles showed the highest loyalty index among those I could transfer from the holding servers. I have to say, though, that you are not without fault. You yourselves have admitted to treason during your mission."

"But let's hear the rest of the reports."

L4-O corrects Speed-Y, reminding him of Turbo. he then returns Speed-Y's compliments.

But where is Joris-O?

Cloning station (somewhere)

Apparently, he's spacing out.

Debriefing room 27

Mango-R freaks out at the mention of Medical Services. He does not want to go there.

[571]

The High Programmer disagrees. "If I say you will go there, then you will go there. Lucas-R remembers correctly, so yes, you do need to go there and be checked over. Do I have to have you escorted?"

Cryo-R explains that his "fellow lift passenger" is an expert at lifts and such. Sal is an expert at... something.

He then throws a cup of coffeelyke to Mankom-R. Of course, since he seems to have failed to notice that these cups don't have lids, it spills all over him.

He then proceeds to offer some to Mango-R, but decides instead to try and help him drink it, forcing a cup to his lips.

Jam-O says that the suits didn't have a sleep effect, more a relaxed state of happiness.

He then gets back to his report. He mentions getting back out of the bunker, and going to find Cryo-R, who was moving slowly and waving a syringe about. Maybe the two are related. He details dragging Cryo-R back to the team.

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 16, 2011 02:38

"I can imagine this team is certainly good at what it does." I then watch as Cryo tosses the coffeelyke, spilling it all over a supposed fellow team member.

I assume I was going to add more to that sentence, but instead I stare a little bewildered and leave the whole sentence alone.

written by Speeder on Jun 16, 2011 02:51

I rather ignore Cryo actions in a attempt to not fall to 0 in happiness.

Then I mutter upon looking at Malkom

"Although he sort deserve it."

Then I look at L4 and explains what happened to Joris.

"Oh, he started to float, then he flew and crashed on Mango, then he started to behave in a strange way, and then while in front of several infrareds he started to claim he was a commie. We had to terminate him. I must say that Jam was QUITE effective at that, it is one that probably will never become zombie."

I then look at Sal.

"Hey, you was around Joris when I left to save Alpha Complex, HOW the zombie happened? I am curious..."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 16, 2011 03:12

I hear mention of the treason and look a little nervous.

"Er yeah... there were a few clearance infractions here and there I guess. I may have done one or two myself. But unfortunately, necessary for the cause. Let's not even get into the ULTRAVIOLET compnode panel..." I shudder thinking about us even being near it.

"All for Friend Computer... better treason than communist takeover..."

I repeat this twice more before I notice Speed-Y talking to me about Joris.

"Weird. So that means it's number three for Joris now... sounds like he hasn't been right ever since he went zombie.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 16, 2011 10:57

"It wasn't even you who suggested it... But if it has to be done..." I say while I try climbing once more to my feet.

written by 4616599 on Jun 16, 2011 16:44

I snap out of my daze.

"Yes, forms. Forms. Formation of formity formitty forms forms forms."

"It's almost like I had a controller going for a short vacationcycle... still no respite from this headache."

I groggily head for the terminals, grabbing at my head

written by Malkom on Jun 16, 2011 16:57

I slurp at my Coffeelyke.

written by Jam on Jun 16, 2011 16:59

I look to Speed-Y and L4-O

"I wonder if Headgrabber is involved... I bet he is..."

Then I suddenly stop talking... I've got a mission summary to give, and I've been getting distracted an awful lot. I need to focus!

written by Gligar on Jun 16, 2011 19:25

Debriefing Room 27

Azir-R watches Cryo-R, a little bewildered. He was about to add to his comment about the team, but leaves it unfinished.

Speed-Y tries to ignore Cryo-R instead. He's unhappy enough as it is. Though Malkom-R did kind of deserve it...

To do so, he speaks to L4-O, telling him about Joris-O, and about how well Jam-O was able to terminate him. He's certain that that corpse will never be able to rise as a zombie.

Speaking of which, he asks the jackobot about exactly how it happened in the first place.

"From what I recall, Joris-O had been terminated," the jackobot begins. "Cryo-R, however, did not recognise that he was dead, and attempted to revive him. This, despite the fact that I explicitly warned him against taking that course of action, for that exact reason: a zombie might be created.

"As you now know, zombie was indeed created."

"Thank you for the report, jackobot," The Computer interjects. "Added to the fact that a previous clone of Cryo-R was somehow still active after termination, I believe we have the answer."

"Indeed. Cryo-R, I hereby order you to report to Medical Services immediately after debriefing I need to have you checked over for a Code RZ."

L4-O looks nervous. Not at zombies, but at the mention of treason. He agrees that there might have been clearance infractions along the way. Let's not mention the compnode panel, though...

He says, several times, that it was all in the service of Friend Computer.

Mango-R points out that the High Programmer didn't even suggest Medical Services, but he will if he has to. "Then I order you to accompany Cryo-R after debriefing."

Malkom-R slurps up what he can of the coffeelyke, what with half of it being down his jumpsuit.

Jam-O thinks that Headgrabber might still be involved, before he realises that he's digressing again.

Cloning station (somewhere)

Joris-O snaps out of it and heads over to a terminal. The first question: Name?

written by Speeder on Jun 16, 2011 19:32⁴⁷⁶

Upon mention that Cryo has to be checked for creating a zombie or something, I shoot a worried glance at him, and start move away from him slowly.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 16, 2011 20:48

"Well... Um... Thanks."

I take the coffeelyke offered to me (or forced on me rather), and take a few sips, making sure not to overdo it. The pain in my mind doesn't seem to be firing off in bursts, but is now appearing that there is a constant, smaller pain that seems to be on the increase.

"I don't know why I'm even here. The only thing that might remotely be of use is my report of the range, and it doesn't count for much. It's a wonder I was even able to see anything of it. I'm not sure whether I'm even part of the team. With Cryo-R? It sounds good enough."

written by Cryoburner on Jun 16, 2011 20:51

"Hmm... a zombie you say? I don't recall any zombies. As far as I remember, that one guy blew himself up when we were down on O Sublevel. He was bleeding profusely, but after checking him for... err... vital signs, Sal and I proceeded to administer first aid, and we managed to get him stable again. It was necessary to make sure he survived, since we needed all the help we could get, what with so many clones carelessly killing or maiming themselves down there. I don't think he was a zombie though. He was just a little under the weather from all of his injuries. If signs of a zombie were detected, perhaps they were from someone else."

⁴⁷⁶ SPEEDER: (OOC: I will post more if I decide to react to someone else post).

"As for a previous clone of mine being active following termination, I don't recall anything of the sort. Might someone fill me in on the details of this supposed occurrence? I'm sure there's a perfectly reasonable explanation not involving zombies. I'll be happy to head to Medical Services after the debriefing though, if you would like me to escort this guy there for you."

I gesture toward Mango-R.

written by Megagun on Jun 16, 2011 21:23

"So, yeah. After all that, I pretty much went towards the Reactor, for that was supposedly where the Device would most likely get activated.

Somehow I ended up on O sublevel. There were a few strange things there, including this huge guardbot that had an amazingly weak password on it.

Some crazy misformed clone told me that.. they.. were coming. Or something. I couldn't hear him all that well. Then suddenly, things went crazy and I ran for my life. Lots of gunfire behind me, I heroically dashed back into the elevator and went off to search for the Reactor again.

As I'm going up, the elevator doors open. A few guys from this Team Epsilon entered the elevator and went off to O sublevel. They also had this treasonous bot with them which obviously had a botched up Asimov circuit, as it acted out of emotions rather than logic. I think this is the bot that you people refer to as 'Massacrebot'.

But now that I know that this guy over here was piloting that bot, I think everything starts making even more sense. Or at least some of my suspicions are looking like they might have some merit behind them...

Either way, things start hitting the fan from then on."

written by Malkom on Jun 17, 2011 00:05

I heave myself into the wheelchair and put the empty coffeelyke tin down on my RED chair.

"Jackobot, wheel me to the nearest cleaning station."

If the jackobot refuses, I wheel myself there.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 17, 2011 00:18

"By few guys you mean all of us. That's when we were bringing the nuke down to O Sublevel so it could go off safely in the Armed Forces range."

"Somehow I doubt Massacrebot was treasonous..."

I frown.

written by Gligar on Jun 17, 2011 02:27

Debriefing Room 27

On hearing that Cryo-R might either be a zombie or have something to do with them, Speed-Y edges away.

Mango-R takes the coffeelyke, and takes a few sips. The pain dulls down, but does not fully recede.

Mango-R says that he's not sure what report he could give, except for his visiting the range. He's not even sure he's part of the team. But he agrees to go with Cryo-R to Medical Services.

Cryo-R, of course, doesn't recall any zombies. Then again, he can't tell the difference between the living, the dead, and the undead...

From his perspective, the "one guy" was "under the weather" from his injuries. He administered first aid, with the "help" of the jackobot, which worked, and he was made stable again. If there was a zombie, it must have been from elsewhere.

Naturally, he knows nothing about previous clones being active after termination. The Computer does, however. "recall one incident, quite clearly, involving you entering an ULTRAVIOLET area, claiming to be running maintenance on a lift that was 'NOT IN ORDER'. You were terminated, but your clone still attempted to reach for a piece of paper. Therefore, it was still active after termination. Additional steps were taken to ensure that it did not remain active. Steps involving lots of laser turrets."

The idea bot continues its report, telling how Leeroy-O ended up in O Sublevel, and got past a guardbot with the simplest password ever. "You're saying the password was reset? And that some clone told you that 'they' were coming? I'm suspicious. He might have been warning you about... but no. There's no way he could have known that."

The idea bot relates Leeroy-O's interactions with Team Epsilon. IT highlights the "suspicious" Massacrebot, saying that it was acting on emotion.

"Clearly, you have never dealt with petbots," the jackobot replies. "They are programmed to simulate an emotional response, as well as generate a bond with their handlers. Or perhaps the bot brain had a personality module? R&D seem attached to them."

He then states his suspicions about Speed-Y.

"I now see why you requested protection. You simply wanted to accuse the team of treason. Didn't you."

Malkom-R gets into his wheelchair and tells the jackobot to take him somewhere where he can clean up. "As you were," the UV barks. "I have not dismissed you yet. Computer, log that. Insubordination."

"Your report has been logged."

L4-O confirms that it was them. But he doesn't think Massacrebot was treasonous.

written by Malkom on Jun 17, 2011 02:57

"Don't you know that it's mandatory to clean yourself whenever you get dirty? That means that it's treason to prevent people from cleaning themselves. Also, being all wet and dirty like this has made me unhappy, and staying that way would make me more unhappy. I think you're trying to make us unhappy. Doesn't everyone know unhappiness is treason?"

I heave myself back into the RED chair, grumbling.

"YEOW! SOMEONE PUT A STABBING DEVICE IN MY SEAT!" I heave myself up again, with a long shiny and thin stabbing device with a round RED knob on the end sticking out of my behind. "HELP! OWOW! THAT HURTS!"

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 17, 2011 07:51⁴⁷⁷

"Whining for no reason... He still needs more disciplinary action..."

I tut, and shake my head. Pain pushes as if it's a physical object in a room inside my head. I decide to return to the seat after doing so, and take another sip of the coffeelyke.

"Team Epsilon... Reckless, but treasonous? Hardly."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 17, 2011 08:13

"Well... reckless... maybe. We did manage to tone things down after our few explosions after the excursion from the bunker. I don't think that warehouse will ever look the same again."

I wince.

"Or the rooms next to it for that matter."

"The armed forces range was at least intentional and largely unavoidable in that situation... I have the feeling it wasn't in active use anyway, given the state of the surrounding passages."

written by 4616599 on Jun 17, 2011 12:02

"Oh, err. Name. Yeah."

I clutch at my head again.

"Err. Recall. Last memory card. Mega-R-GUN! Wait, that's not it. Hm." I leave Mega-R-GUN there and continue with typing...

"Err. Tim-O-THY. Ta-B-THA. Uh. It needs a different ring. Headg-R-BERR. Uh, no, Joris-O-DNK. Uh, no, that doesn't cut it either."

I end off; 'all of the above'

written by Jam on Jun 17, 2011 17:49

"We heard shooting, so I dropped Cryo-R and fired back at the PRPF squad. Unfortunately, it turns out the laser pistol barrels I picked up earlier were VIOLET, rather than RED. Well, the commies were wearing reflec, and the shots passed through like it wasn't even there. Naturally, I panicked as soon as I realized I was shooting such a high clearance barrel, and tossed the laser pistol away from me. Lucas-R wait, he was just Lucas then... Well, as expected, he turned his laser pistol on me, but I convinced him that I was still loyal.

Cryo-R was shot in the leg. I was shaking too badly to aim the laser rifle I had, so I went and helped L4-O. He shot

⁴⁷⁷ MINGAMANGO181: ((Semi-OOC: Creating objects that don't exist is treason. So I'm going to just ignore that and...)) some kind of napalm shell at the communists, and a squealing barrel exploded. Well, the commies died... Another squad came, and we shot more napalm shells, and more laser pistol barrels exploded. The whole squad was wiped out!

I inspected my other laser pistol barrels, and found another VIOLET one. I dropped it down the hole to the bunker, so the commies wouldn't be able to get it. Then Cryo-R started dragging himself somewhere, so I ran after him.

Kristos-R saw the VIOLET barrel I threw into the bunker, and somehow managed to fall on top of it, which made it explode... At least, I think that's what happened... I wasn't there to see it...

Hmm... After that, Speed-Y told me that a mutant commie tried to attack another commie... But maybe it'd be better if Speed-Y explains it himself? Or perhaps John-R could?"

written by Speeder on Jun 17, 2011 19:06

I look at Jam, puzzled.

"Mutant commie? I do not remember right now..."

I do know what happened to Kristos-R though."

I do another of the eyeroll moments.

"Basically, he decided for no clear reason to shoot it. Something we all now is a very stupid idea, considering it cause explosions. I then sent him down there to dispose of it before it explode, unfortunately for Kristos, his descent was not fast enough, and it exploded as soon as he was in range of the barrel, resulting on his clone death. Also in the destruction of some bots I think, and of some other property. Later I did punished Kristos-2 because Kristos 1 has termianted himself for shooting the barrel anyway."

written by Gligar on Jun 17, 2011 20:53

Debriefing Room 27

Malkom-R makes a fatal mistake.

He decides to argue. With a High Programmer.

The result?

Well first, Mango-R mutters that he still needs disciplinary action. Second:

"You dare argue with me?! Clearly, YOU are the traitor around here! We'll see if your next clone... oops. Did I accidentally press the button while ranting? Or was that you, friend?"

"It may have been both of us."

Indeed, as Malkom-R jumped up out of his chair, two laser turrets skewer him with ULTRAVIOLET beams. I don't really need to say it, but dearth is immediate.

The oddest part is that there is no visible reason why he jumped up. It's almost as if he felt something stabbing him on the seat... only there isn't.

"Would anyone ELSE like to argue?"⁴⁷⁸

All thin in the time it takes Mango-R to say that, while Team Epsilon might be reckless, it isn't treasonous.

L4-O tentatively agrees with "reckless". Though they did manage to learn restraint, he says. Destroying the warehouse... and damaging the surrounding rooms... may have been a bit too much.

Images of the warehouse's destruction appear on the screens. One of them shows the communists clustered round their grenades, wondering why they didn't go off.

"I agree. You have been rather reckless. The destruction of the warehouse, though... part of that might have been commie stupidity. Or was it?"

L4-O continues, talking about the Armed Forces range. "The range was situated some distance from the Underplex Access Junction, correct? If so, then it had probably been decommissioned some time ago... perhaps even before the sector was built."

Jam-O continues hiss report, this part being filled with laser pistol barrels, some VIOLET, commies (though not for long), and napalm cone rifle shells. One VIOLET barrel ended up in the bunker, where something happened and it exploded. Then there was something about a mutant commie...

Speed-Y doesn't know anything about the mutant commie. As for the barrel, he knows that Kristos-R fired at it (😄), destroying it, him, a bot, and some property. Kristos-R was disciplined after recloning.

"It's notable that Kristos-R is absent. I wonder where he went?... Ah, there he is. Apparently, he wandered into the reservoir and tried to go for a swim. But it seems that he could not."

Cloning station (somewhere)

Confusion detected, the terminal reports. Attempting facial recognition. Look into the camera, citizen.

Joris-O's headache, if anything, only gets worse.

Deep in the forest of cloning tanks, one fires up and begins its process.

written by Malkom on Jun 17, 2011 21:37⁴⁷⁹

My dead body stiffens up with laser energy and falls onto the seat, but does nothing out of the ordinary.⁴⁸⁰

⁴⁷⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: Mango is right about making stuff up like that, Malkom. But that, combined with badmouthing a High Programmer... yeah. 😄 Pretty funny way to throw your life away, so take a perversity point for effort 😊)

⁴⁷⁹ MALKOM: (OOC: Well, trade a clone for a perversity point and I'd say no. But trade a clone for a perversity point and a new set of legs... Well, I can't as to my stance on that, if offered a choice...)

⁴⁸⁰ MALKOM: (more OOC: Am I allowed to make a new character when I use up all my clones? Seeing as you aren't making seperate games for each mission, it seems like I should be able to.)

written by Jam on Jun 17, 2011 22:27

I notice neither the High Programmer nor Friend Computer seemed to care that I used a VIOLET laser pistol... Maybe they were distracted by Malkom-R?

"Erm... You're not upset that I accidentally used a VIOLET barrel, are you?"

I also watch as Malkom-R's body completely fails to do anything interesting...^{481 482 483 484} written by Gligar on Jun 18, 2011 02:01⁴⁸⁵

Debriefing Room 27

Malkom-R's body fails to do anything interesting. Jam-O looks a little disappointed at that.

He also seems concerned that neither our mutual friend, nor the High Programmer, seemed to be concerned about him accidentally using a VIOLET laser barrel.

"In fact, I am concerned about it. But Malkom-R was temporarily more important. You're fined 600 credits for that transgression."

Cloning station (somewhere)

The terminal beeps. You are identified as Joris-O-DNK. You may continue.

It asks an entire series of questions.

⁴⁸¹ SPEEDER: (OOC: If I remember the rules... although I should not remember them since they are only for UV citizens, you can make another character as you wish, and keep your perversity points.

And by the way: In Paranoia, not only here, is common to someone invent some funny suicide to rack up PP, they are QUITE useful if you know what to do with them. I considered that once... when I had some explosives and commies in a elevator... too bad for Jam that I had another idea instead.)

⁴⁸² MALKOM: (OOC: it's ok to discuss the Rules OOCly, since we are OOC. OOC we have no clearance. It's only when we attempt to use them to influence IC that we are committing treason.)

⁴⁸³ SPEEDER: (OOC: you do not understand some basic things about paranoia....

that. is. sad.)

⁴⁸⁴ MALKOM: (OOC: well then, we can discuss them in another thread, or in Frespsych, or by PM. 😊)

⁴⁸⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: Long OOC conversation... is.

1) Yes, you can create new characters if you run out of clones. I'll treat them the same as new players, except that you keep your PP, as Speeder mentioned.

2) No, it's not okay to discuss the rules. For one very good reason:

The rules are Clearance ULTRAVIOLET. You are somewhere near Clearance RED.

Any High Programmer worth his robes would indulge in a little fourth-wall breaking in order to stop you. Probably by terminating your character 😊 (In fact, "Demonstrating knowledge of the Paranoia rules above the player's clearance" is explicitly treason, so... yeah.)

3) Please don't create a new thread just to try to evade this. I might just have to invoke the "trolls, munchkins and minmaxers" rule and erase you 😊

Is this clear?

Over at the active clone tank, the forming clone is almost complete. It's Malkom-R.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 18, 2011 03:10

"Don't remind me of that incident..." I say, directing it at one of the clones in the room.

The pain builds. I know it is. In fact, I can almost make out a progress bar with the words, 'Pain level' as its label. I doubt however, anyone else can see it. So I don't say anything about it. I do give off a light sweat from how it's increasing.

"I'd gladly pay a part of that rather... large sum, if I could remember just how much I could pay..."

written by Speeder on Jun 18, 2011 03:19

I look for a while at Malkom body. It looks deader than dead.

I examine the wounds, just to see how effective ULTRAVIOLET laser is.

"Good there are no known cases of ULTRAVIOLET communists, I would not like to get shot with that."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 18, 2011 03:28

"600... yeeep. That's steep." I mutter softly.

"That's good then. About the range, I mean. Not exactly easy to get to. There were these... frowning green mutant things. They were armless and had four stubby legs. And they... explode."

"Mango-R explored more of the passages, he might've seen more than those as he was trying to chase Massacrebot..."

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 18, 2011 13:56

I completely disregard the laser blasts and screams, and simply continue to listen to the reports.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 18, 2011 15:37

"His Body! It has been filled with dearth! It was all so immediate!"

Noting the way he falls to look somewhat out of the ordinary, I take a closer look at Malkom-R, and check his chair for any signs of damage.

"Ah! Perhaps I wasn't reaching for anything at all though. It may have just been muscle memory! As an expert on muscle memory, I can tell you that this is all very possible."

written by Malkom on Jun 18, 2011 16:29⁴⁸⁶

My body continues to fail to do anything interesting, as does my growing clone.

written by 4616599 on Jun 18, 2011 16:44

I sloppily go over the questions.

"Err. Blah! Yes, maybe! Likely! Uhm.- no, not that I can remember. Treason? Nah..."

⁴⁸⁶ MALKOM: (OOC: can we buy clearance with PP when creating a new character?)

written by Jam on Jun 18, 2011 16:49⁴⁸⁷

"Oh, that's it? Whew..."

I smile HAPPILY at the High Programmer...

"Okay! That sounds like a very reasonable amount, sir! I'll make sure to pay every credit of it as soon as I can!

Erm... What happens if I don't have enough credits to pay?"^{488 489} written by Gligar on Jun 18, 2011 21:55⁴⁹⁰

Debriefing Room 27

Mango-R asks to not be reminded about his little visit to the range.

He begins to sweat slightly, as he feels yet more pain.

The tech, again, offers him some visomorpain.

He adds that he would be willing to pay some of Jam-O's fine, if eh knew how much he had left.

Speed-Y looks over at Malkom-R's corpse. It is decidedly boring to look at, and does absolutely nothing.

He notes that the two laser beams -- one to the head, and one to the chest -- have burned right through Malkom-R's body, and out the other side, leaving burn marks on the floor monitor. There is very little bleeding, as one would expect of a laser wound.

He remarks that he is pleased that there are no known ULTRAVIOLET communists. Getting shot by that would ruin anyone's daycycle.

Then he realises that there are more turrets than just those two, in this room alone.

L4-O thinks that 600cr is a bit steep, but thinks it quietly.

⁴⁸⁷ JAM: (OOC: Or, if we happen to get enough credits, can we buy more clones?)

⁴⁸⁸ SPEEDER: (OOC: In the backstory that I have seen, yes. But having enough credits seemly is something that happen only to people that have better jobs than being troubleshooters 😊)

Although maybe Friend Computer might volunteer for a loan or a gift for those mostly efficient citizens, who knows...

And I am discussing rules again... I think next time someone ask I will attempt to use more willpower in waiting gligar to reply)

⁴⁸⁹ MALKOM: (OOC: Aww... poor little Clone... Killed for discussing Metaphysical Rules... dear dear. tuts)

⁴⁹⁰ Gligar: (OOC: More OOC conversation...)

No, you can't buy security clearance with perversity points. But you can buy new clones, in packs of six. The question is, where are you going to get a few thousand credits from? Work two jobs, perhaps? 😊

Or, maybe you could be awarded extra clones for exemplary behaviour or something?

(Oh yes, you have jobs outside of being a Troubleshooter. You didn't think you did missions non-stop, did you? 😊)

Extra clones not guaranteed to be a 100% match to the purchasing clone family. Side effects may include, but are not limited to, genetic drift, changed or additional mutations, altered motor skills, colour blindness, and/or insanity. Cloning Services not responsible.)

He then continues about the range. He remarks that it was hard to get to, as they had to fight through those frownythings. He describes them.

"These?" the High Programmer asks. A frownything appears on a window on one monitor. "As you have guessed, they are highly dangerous mutants, and are a threat to Alpha Complex. There is more, but it is beyond your clearance."

L4-O adds that, since Mango-R went after Massacrebot, he might have seem more than that.

Cryo-R ignores all this and focuses on Malkom-R and his chair, which now has a neat hole through it. Malkom-R himself... well, he sees what Speed-Y saw.

He adds that any post-termination activity was most likely muscle memory. He adds that he is an expert at muscle memory.

"No, what I believe you are is an expert at falsely identifying experts. You are fined 50 credits for undue curiosity regarding the death of Malkom-R."

Jam-O smiles, HAPPILY, relieved that he "only" has to pay a fine.

He then wouders what would happen if he doesn't have enough credits...

"Then you'll just have to work it off, won't you?"

The High Programmer seems to be smiling. Not that you can see his face, but he seems to radiate that "I'm Smiling" aura... energy... thing.

Cloning station (somewhere)

Joris-O bumbles through a few questions. He seems to have submitted himself for mutation testing.

The questions continue.

Malkom-R's cloning tank is on the move, heading to a decanting station. If anyone were to look through the tank's window, they'd see Malkom-R doing nothing in particular.

written by Speeder on Jun 18, 2011 22:16

"Ok, the debriefing... Jam, where we stopped?"

I try to remember any remarkable events to inform those present.

"Oh, the FUZZY HATS!"

I turn to High Programmer.

"I believe the communists developed mind control technology. Some mind control technology BETTER than any technology that friend computer has. Maybe one that is strong enough to subdue even Cryo-R. It is in the fuzzy hats, anyone that touch them become confused and dizzy, and seemly using them for too long turn you into a commie, and it take a while to return a person to be normal."

Then I remember the two commies we keep finding.

"Oh, but there was two commies, that even without the hats, and after being killed, remained commies, I think their entire clone family somehow is propense to become commie. One of them is the probable murderer of the repair team sent to fix the Forkbot axle that Cryo damaged. They are probably on their clone 3, or more, right now. Although one of them claimed to be clone 2, when I knew he already died 2 times. One of them I killing him personally."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 19, 2011 00:23

"I had multiple encounters with those things... Though they didn't seem like the exploding sort. I did receive plenty of scratch marks from that. I asked them to stop, but they just kept going as if they were deaf! They made me bleed a lot... Perhaps the floor was for medical treatments, and they wanted blood samples?

Then again, with the range on the same floor, I doubt that..."

I hear the High Programmer speak of the 'more'... Thinking that is probably what I've been speaking of, I don't say any more about it. I instead process what Speed-Y mentioned. Trying my best not to show any visual resentment, I say,

"Oh, those. I put one of those on my head once. It felt kind of... fuzzy."

I run a hand through my own hair. Fuzzy...

It's as I do that when I notice the tech offering the visomorpain.

"Ah... Thanks..."

I take, and use the visomorpain.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 19, 2011 01:43

"Maybe the fuzzy hats make you into a permanent communist for that clone? Maybe more than just that clone?" I shoot a worried glance at Mango.

"Maybe not though..."

"There were more clones down in the reactor. I knocked hats off a couple, but they stayed communist as well."

"Probably takes time to do that. I hope. A few of us have accidentally touched the hats..."

written by Gligar on Jun 19, 2011 02:33

Debriefing Room 27

Speed-Y gets back to the debriefing. He tries to remember where they left off, before remembering the fuzzy hats.

He believes that they are a form of mind control technology beyond even what Alpha Complex has. "And what makes you think we have mind control technology?" the High Programmer asks blandly. "Oh wait, that would be HPD&MC."

Speed-Y explains his observations of the technology. So much as touching one of the fuzzy hats was enough to induce dizziness and confusion. Prolonged contact would render the user into a communist. Removing the hat would not immediately undo the hat's effects. That takes time, it seems.

He then remembers Pitr and Alexandr. They seemed to be communists even without the hats. He thinks that one of them was responsible for the deaths of Nukabot's repair team.

"This is interesting information indeed. It would explain why most of the sector did not seem to rebel when the communists took over. Did you think to save one of these fuzzy hats for analysis? No, of course you didn't. You're just Troubleshooters, after all, not R&D techs."

Mango-R continues recapping his experiences with frownynthings. And... possibly other things which scratched at him. "Probably not mutants. Zombies, perhaps. Just as bad."

He then admits to trying on one of the fuzzy hats, and describes his experience. Which mostly consists of him feeling fuzziness.

Then he finally notices the tech, and accepts the visomorpain. After a moment, he swallows the tablet.. Ah... that's better. Nice and happy! The pain doesn't seem as bad, either.

L4-O suggests that the fuzzy hats might render the user a communist permanently (or at least, until termination... possibly?)

He also confirms Speed-Y's statement that removing the hat doesn't undo the hat's effects. He's knocked the hats off a couple of the commies down in the reactor, and they stayed commie.

He suggests that the commie effects take prolonged contact, as Speed-Y did. After all, some of them have had brief contact with the hats as well. "If we had a sample of the hats, I could have R&D test this. Alas."

"But since some of you have handled some, I can put you under observation instead. Might as well make the most of it."

Cloning station (somewhere)

Malkom-R's clone tank finishes its cycle, and opens. With a shower of clone tank goo, Malkom-R is deposited on the cold metal walkway of the decanting station.

written by Speeder on Jun 19, 2011 04:05

I look unnerved with the observation idea.

"I think I told Derek-G to get some hats, or something. Or I mentioned them. I think we had a left around his level.

Also we never destroyed the hats on the reactor... OH... SEND SOMEONE THERE! WE DO NOT WANT REACTOR WORKERS TURNING INTO COMMIES!!!"

I now look agitated.

"This is why I burned all the hats on the bunker, we cannot afford random clones attempting to use them for too long! I forgot to do the same with the ones in the reactor, and I did not took them with us either!"

written by Malkom on Jun 19, 2011 04:51

I rush towards the chemical showers, looking for a mask or other required protective wear as I do so.

written by 4616599 on Jun 19, 2011 16:01

I continue mumbling and bumbling.

"Yes."

"No."

"Yes."

"42"

"Not recycled clones!"

"Xeno."

"This birdbot is dead! It is no longer with us! It is no more! It has stopped functioning! R&D has blundered again!"

"COMPUTERCOMPUTER"

I clutch at my head again, ignoring some running noises I can barely hear.

written by Jam on Jun 19, 2011 16:54

"I remember Fuzzy... I found him outside the distribution warehouse. I put him on, but he made me dizzy, so I shot him..."

"Hmm... Then a mutant started probing us... We all sang loyalty jingles, and the mutant went away..."

written by Gligar on Jun 19, 2011 20:44

Debriefing Room 27

Speed-Y doesn't seem to like the idea of being observed, but keeps quiet about it. He mentions that Derek-G was probably informed about the hats. Derek-G nods.

He then realises that they never destroyed the fuzzy hats at the reactor!

He suggests that someone be sent to the reactor to get them. The reactor staff must not come into contact with them.

"Hmmm... there are some scrubots down there now, dealing with the mess you guys left.. I'll have one of them retrieve the hats.

"Which now means that we can test them, instead of simply having to rely on observation of exposed citizens."

"Or perhaps we should perform both actions. That could be fun."

Jam-O remembers finding the fuzzy hat he called Fuzzy, outside the warehouse. He describes the dizziness, and how he shot Fuzzy.

Then he mentions the mutant that started probing. Singing loyalty jingles kept him out.

"So that's what they're recommending in Power Studies courses now?"

Cloning station (somewhere)

Joris-O continues with his questions. Invalid answer to Question 10, the terminal informs him. Please correct it.

He puts his hands to his head, trying to make the pain go away. He ignores the running noises that can be faintly heard.

Meanwhile, the running is revealed to be Malkom-R, who is again trying to get through the process in double-time.

Chemical showers

In his haste to enter and complete the process, Malkom-R trips up over his oxygen mask's umbilical, and falls to the floor. Just as the shower starts. The force of the jets pins him to the floor.

written by Speeder on Jun 19, 2011 21:35

I look kinda worried with the ideas of fun from Friend Computer.

But ask he asks about Power Studies, I reply.

"I do not remember if that idea was mine or from John, but the idea is simple, when a mutant is probing your mind and you know about it, anything that you think about he will be able to steal. This has too effects, first, you might provide sensitive information to the enemy, and that is dangerous to you. Also, if you know someone is stealing information, thinking about high clearance information is treasonous, since you are knowingly handing high clearance information to him, thus for example you UV citizen, if you think about Friend Computer source code while your mind is being probed, you are committing treason, but knowingly handing that source code to the mutant..."

I breath a bit.

"Thus we concluded, that we need to fill our minds with INFRARED information, information that is not dangerous, AND is certainly not treasonous to give out. Thus, the best information to think about, are the wonderful jingles, in fact, this way we can advertise things for free for the mutant, maybe he will buy a B3 after probing us."

written by Cryoburner on Jun 20, 2011 00:57

"As an expert at expert-related fines, I can tell you that 50 credits is a very reasonable amount for a fine. However, I do think that you could easily charge twice that, to help increase fine-related revenue. The increased revenue stream could be put toward developing new, and much more expensive fines to help better the lives of everyone in Alpha Complex."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 20, 2011 01:26

"Heh... somehow I doubt we can sway the minds of the traitorous, but still, I guess it's worth the effort."

written by Malkom on Jun 20, 2011 02:04

I... sit there? It's hard to get up, while pinned to the floor.

As soon as the showers stop, I remove my mask and hurry to the next part of the process.

written by Gligar on Jun 20, 2011 02:10

Debriefing Room 27

Speed-Y looks worried for a moment. Perhaps he needs the help of a Happiness Officer?

But it soon passes. He describes the whole loyalty jingle thing: since some mutants can read your mind, they can gain any information you're thinking about. If that were high-clearance information, that could be disastrous, not to mention treasonous, since you've just given away sensitive information. Therefore, by thinking about something low-clearance, say, loyalty jingles, or advertising, not only do you avoid treason, but something could get free advertising.

"That's... actually a good explanation, sir," John-R says. "I may have only described the basic method, but you seem to understand it quite well."

L4-O doesn't think that thinking about advertising is going to do anything to convince any mutants to buy B3, but it's worth a shot.

"I like that . I'll have to have HPD&MC look into increasing earworm capacity. Now, does anyone have anything else to add to the report?"

Cryo-R, now claiming to be an expert at expert-related fines, thinks that the fine is reasonable, if a little low.

"Did you not learn from the termination of Malkom-R, citizen? You are fined one... THOUSAND... credits... for disagreeing, and being irritating at the same time. Not to mention lowering the general happiness levels of Team Epsilon."⁴⁹¹

Cloning station (somewhere)

Speaking of Malkom-R, who somehow manages to sneak in a whole lot of nothing while I'm not looking, he looks impatient to get moving. But the shower is not.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 20, 2011 10:56

One thousand credits? Ouch. I'll certainly not be paying that much...

"Those mutants... They didn't try to access me. I suspect that the ever-so-slight presence of Headgrabber might have kept them away.

That might be good..."

I think a moment before continuing.

"That might be bad. Headgrabber's probably got all of my information. Goodness knows what he's doing with it right now..."

I speak almost cheerful, except for the last part about Headgrabber having all my information.

written by Malkom on Jun 20, 2011 16:34

I wait. If the showers open, I proceed to jump out, take off my mask, and hurry to the next stage of the process.

⁴⁹¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: wishes that there was some kind of "lock thread temporarily" button)

written by Jam on Jun 20, 2011 16:59

Wow... A thousand credits? He'll be working a loooooong time to pay that off...

Then I remember my own situation... I guess I'm the same...

...

I look at Mango-R.

"How do you know the mutants didn't probe your mind too? I thought only psionic mutants could tell when they were being probed... Does that mean your a psionic mutant, Mango-R?"

written by 4616599 on Jun 20, 2011 17:09

"Eh? Oh, no, then, I guess."

I pitifully slump forward, dribbling a bit.

written by Speeder on Jun 20, 2011 17:14

I look at Mango with enquiring eyes.

As everyone know, rooting out traitors of your own team is very important, otherwise the team might turn out very backstabby and violent and fail.

For some reason most of the teams end destroying themselves entirely in that process... Maybe is because everyone were traitors.

written by Gligar on Jun 20, 2011 19:02

Debriefing Room 27

Mango-R points out that the mutants didn't touch him, perhaps due to the presence of Headgrabber. Which might be a good thing

Or it could be the worst thing imaginable. Headgrabber might have all his information, even now.

Jam-O asks how Mango-R is able to tell. As far as he was aware, only mutants can tell if they're being probed. Does that mean that Mango-R is also a mutant?

Speed-Y looks at Mango-R questioningly.

"I would also like to know."

"I assume that this is the last report? If so, we can get on to the best part.

"I note, though, that Joris-R is still not with us..."

Cloning station (somewhere)

As it happens, he's slumped against his terminal. Questions complete, it reads. Please collect ME Card and exit the facility.

Malkom-R runs past, tripping up over a suspiciously-placed trailing cable and crashing into a rack of jumpsuits.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 20, 2011 20:43

"Ever since the brainscrubs, and throughout the mission, I don't think I've ever been checked. I meant to bring it up, but I'd rather have the mission done quickly and effectively rather than delaying those people...

Also, I don't think I was ever told details that were anywhere near sensitive. I've been following random members of the team, and I don't think any of them have actually told me of anything important. At all."

written by Speeder on Jun 20, 2011 22:21

I look at Mango for a while.

"Indeed, I think the only person that knew things above your clearance is me. And I do not said anything about it to you. Thus I believe you. Unless someone else know stuff that was not informed to me. Considering I have the highest clearance, that would not make much sense."

written by Malkom on Jun 20, 2011 22:22

I climb to my feet, grab a jumpsuit, and struggle into it. Looking down at the cable, I say, "Ahem! Oh look, sabotage! A thousand to one the commies put this here!"

I notice Joris-? slumped over a terminal, and accost him. "You there! What do you know about this cable? Did you put it here?! Do you realize that this makes you suspicious? You do realize that tripping clones up is treason, since it hurts them and also makes them unhappy?" I realize I probably don't make the most impressive picture, saying this while half into my jumpsuit, and fall silent, looking a tad embarrassed.

I continue getting into the jumpsuit...

written by Cryoburner on Jun 21, 2011 01:04

"Ah, that's the spirit! A 1000 credit fine is far superior to a mere 50 credit one! Keep up the good work, and one day you might become an expert at expert related fines as well!"

"Unless you already are one... I suppose that's likely considering your excellent fining skills."

written by Gligar on Jun 21, 2011 01:33

Debriefing room 27

Mango-R states that he hasn't been checked for mutations, to his knowledge. He would prefer to get things done quickly rather than delay the team.

He adds that he has not really been given any information by the team, Speed-Y agrees. He's really the only one who knows much anyway. Therefore he believes Mango-R.

Believe it or not, Cryo-R is actually pleased to receive such a huge fine. (Although being unhappy about it would most likely invite more fines, or worse.) He suggests that the High Programmer might want to practice his fines.

"I'll tell you what I am an expert at: being a High Programmer. And as such an expert, I hereby order you to shut up about experts, before I increase your fine tenfold.

"As to Mango-R: I believe that a mutation scan will be in order. Please have Medical Services perform one when you visit."

The UV pauses for a moment. "If that is everything, I will move on to the best part: rewards and punishments! As I understand it, Speed-Y has been accused of treason. How does he plead? Who among the team has helped the most? Who has helped the least? Who has hindered the most? I want reports from each of you."

written by Speeder on Jun 21, 2011 01:56

I look at the UV guy.

"I has been accused of treason?"

I then suddenly realize that it is about the bot.

"Oh, by that... guy? No... he is not a guy anymore, he is more like a thing."

Then I speak what I want.

"First, I already praised to friend computer about Derek, but... Derek helped a lot. Then all three bots, also helped a lot, if possible I would want Nukabot repaired, and maybe modified to better suit troubleshooting work and re-assigned to us. Sal helped too, but I know he belongs to you."

I smile and look at my fellow troubleshooters.

"Now about the team proper. I mean, Nukabot was part of the team proper in my mind. But the clones of the team. Jam and John are really helpful, I still regret once hurting Jam by accident and once leaving John behind. You can punish me for that if you want, I really deserve it. They are great people and helped a lot and my negligence toward them is unacceptable, at least on my mind. Lucas also helped, I am glad he was elevated from INFRARED to RED, it would be nice if he became a troubleshooter officially, if he is not already. L4 is the best heavy weapons guy I remember, he is better than the ones in holo. Also he can drive quite well, I mean, he can CLIMB STAIRS WITH A FORK BOT. If you get what I mean. If he had his leg not broken, I bet he probably could climb a wooden ladder using Massacrebot without breaking it. Joris helped a bit."

Then I stare at Cryo.

"Well, you know what he did."

Then I look at Malkom body.

"I still have no idea who is this guy, he showed up on the reactor, and started to eat algae and complain that algae was bad, and then he complained about mutants, about bots, and I think if he could he would complain about computers too. Also he has severe self control problems, instantly freaking out any time he see a mutant, this cost his legs when he tried to shoot a F-class mutant after both me, and the mutant itself, told him to not shoot."

I then look at the Idea bot.

"And this guy is outright crazy. And strange. He seemly is connected with Code 7 whatever that really is. Tried to convince me to take the nuke to the reactor, insulted Massacrebot, delayed us by not telling the password of the O level guardbot that he already knew the password, and he claimed to know how to disarm the nuke but refused to do so, forcing me to suicide and destroy Massacrebot to save the complex from the mutants."

I then look at the newcomer.

"Oh crap. I just said about mutants and all... He has permission to know that? Or..."

I look at all other non-Epsilon people.

"You know what I am talking about, do not you? I mean, the reason why I had to explode the nuke in the army ragne."

written by Malkom on Jun 21, 2011 03:03

I hurry into my jumpsuit and hurry towards the nearest terminal. Once I get there, I answer the questions truthfully, and as fast as possible.⁴⁹²

written by Cryoburner on Jun 21, 2011 03:56

At news of the high programmer being an expert at something or another, I smile widely and give him a thumbs up. I then hear Speed-Y mention about how I was helpful...

"Yes, you do know what I did! I performed valiantly by disabling a nuke-carrying rogue forkbot with damaged Asimov circuits, and attempted to disable a nuclear device that threatened the complex. I only wish I could have worked harder to prevent someone on the team from running off with the device and using it to blow up some of the computer's valuable, albeit likely unused and derelict property. I also saved the life of a team member at the brink of death when he was most needed during a critical operation, and still managed to get to your debriefing on a near-timely basis, unlike most other members of the team, who found it better to waste your valuable time while having lunch with F-class mutants or something. I probably did lots of other great things as well, though it's difficult to remember, due to that recent bout of amnesia and all."

"As for the others, My Fellow Lift Passenger here did a decent job of bringing us Coffeelyke, even if he did carelessly spill some. I might suggest he be rewarded with enrollment in a six-week Coffeelyke delivery seminar, to better enhance his job skills."

"And Sal did a stellar job at being a bot of some sort. His skills were almost on par with that of an idea bot, though he most certainly is not an idea bot, to the point where mistaking him for one would be downright silly. Oh, and he gives good rides. If I had to suggest a reward for him, it would be a humanlyke arm, or maybe even two. It's always been his dream to some day strangle humans to death with his own arms."

"As for the idea bot, I can't say I know him very well, but he did get to the meeting on time, and seems to have some great ideas. I really suggest everyone listens to them. After all, the Computer most certainly wouldn't build an idea bot who's ideas were unreliable. I would suggest he be fitted with cupholders as a reward."

⁴⁹² MALKOM: (OOC: PM me if a question such as "have you committed treason?" or something like that that could get me in trouble comes up so I can decide on an answer.)

written by Lightning4 on Jun 21, 2011 04:40

"I largely agree with Speed-Y. I certainly don't accuse him of treason, but I do question the loyalty of Cryo-R and..."

I look at the corpse of Malkom

"That guy..."

"Lucas-R and John-R have been helpful, loyal clones throughout, and Jam-O as well. If a bit scary with the way he terminated the commies."

"...so much blood..."

"Mango-R, um..."

I scratch my head.

"I don't know much about him. He seems strange but apparently he was being taken over by a Class-F mutant?"

I shrug.

"He hasn't done anything to harm a loyal member that I've seen anyway."

"Joris-R was loyal, I think. I don't know what's become of him now... last time I saw him was when we were fighting down on O-Sublevel. That's when he turned zombie due to a certain clone on this team..."

"Who am I missing... oh right. Mega-R, or Leeroy-O, or Idea bot or whatever he calls himself now. He's a strange one. I can't tell whether he's loyal or a traitor, and so far he haven't done much to convince me he's loyal yet. He accused me of being a communist. I was merely acting like a communist to try to extract information from an injured one we brought with us. Didn't get anything useful out of him... come to think of it, no idea where that commie got to. I don't think he rode the lift back up.

Then Speed-Y terminated him for impeding our progress. Leeroy-O claimed he knew how to disable the bomb but didn't act on it... though he was accusing us all of being communist collaborators at that point."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 21, 2011 07:48

I open my mouth to say what I believe Speed-Y is, then close it again. After all, it was up to Speed-Y to plead, not me.

I go over the other questions and think them all through.

"For that first question from helpfulness, I really can't say. I can't speak for the second question either. Hindering, I've got no idea."

I strain to remember what it was about the rest of the time...

"I don't think I've done much at all. Aside from the Code 7 incident, of which I have no recollection of being there. I guess the only thing I've been successful in doing is getting myself into impossible situations... Even Headgrabber's done more, not necessarily that it was good, but he did more. He would have done far more good if he were in my position, though he clearly isn't."

Why on Earth aren't you running yet?! Because the turrets are UV clearance. Because everyone is more than capable of stopping you. Because IntSec would probably do a good job at catching a clone. Because I've only got a flimsy laser pistol that won't last a good deal of shots.

I shouldn't be here. I should be out there, where humanity should have been. To see the sky go from ORANGE to BLUE to VIOLET... To not be a part of what can only be a place of control, of pills and false lighting... I want that truth, that freedom.

"I'm not really at all that mentionable. A background object that is trying to be a foreground object at times, I suppose. My purpose is to serve The Computer. I can't even do that very well. I wish I could be something more than that..."

written by Megagun on Jun 21, 2011 12:35

"Oh, right. I accuse both L4-O and Speed-Y of treason, and perhaps some other members of Team Epsilon as well.

You see, they were 'pretending' to be communists, and they were collaborating with a proven-to-be communist. When I confronted them about this, they failed to show me orders from Friend Computer or a higher-ranking citizen. Thus, I believe that instead of 'pretending' to be communists, they really are communists. If they weren't, they would've terminated the communist, right?

That's not the only thing, though. L4-O knew the name 'Leeroy-O' even though he couldn't ever have heard of it. He must have been a collaborator with either the person that is using me as an attack vector, or with the person that I am used as an attack vector against. I'm sure you, High Programmer, know what I'm talking about.

Now that I know that Speed-Y was driving the 'Massacrebot', I have to accuse him of treason. The Massacrebot was acting without any kind of logic, and as Speed-Y was operating him, he must be responsible for Massacrebot's actions. Also, I just heard from L4-O that Speed-Y terminated my old clone for impeding the progress of Team Epsilon. I doubt he's filed the papers on that, or had permission to terminate my old clone. Besides, I wasn't impeding any kind of progress at all. I was merely trying to apprehend some communists. Speed-Y must have terminated my old clone because he is a communist, and I was about to make that knowledge public to our mutual friend..

Now, as far as the password of the Weapons Device goes: I explained this before, but part of Team Epsilon wasn't here at the time, so I'll explain again:

The Device was wrongly programmed, and I knew the programming and what was wrong with it. Quite a hilarious error, really...

There was one passcode that would detonate the Device immediately. Any other passcode would arm the Device, set the timer to one daycycle, and make the timer start counting down again.

The hilarious bug is that a clone could enter a wrong passcode every few hourcycles, and the Device would re-arm itself AND reset the timer. Thus, by keep entering passcodes the Device would never blow up.

The passcode, for your information, was 'I D 10 T'. That's probably why the keypad had a '10' button. Quite a good passcode, too. 'Idiot'. Hah. Too funny.

Either way, I didn't make this public because I had the suspicion that someone in Team Epsilon knew this passcode. I was waiting for one of them to disclose this passcode to the rest of the team, which would imply that whoever knew the passcode was indeed a communist traitor. Has any of you ever heard any of your teammates mention this exact passcode?

Indeed, I had two choices: make the passcode public, or not make the passcode public. If I made it public, a traitor who didn't know the passcode might use it to force a detonation. If I didn't make the passcode public, there would be no harm of anyone doing this. Thus, I decided to not make the passcode public. Logically, this was the best choice. There is no denying that.

Now, as far as helpful people go: the IntSec troops were quite helpful, as was this GREEN person right here. Furthermore, the elevators were amazingly helpful in giving me rough directions. I suggest that they all be rewarded. The elevators could really be rewarded with some B3 dispenser units and vidscreens, so that people can watch Mandatory Team Troubleshooter as they're travelling.

I would also like to thank the creators of Mandatory Team Troubleshooter for giving me a lot of inspiration, mental assistance and guidance in my mission. They deserve all the recognition that they can get!

Hmm, as far as hindrance goes, I guess Speed-Y hindered me the most. After all, he terminated me which prevented me from doing my mission."

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 21, 2011 12:43

I have little to add to this, so I'll say the following:

Cryo told me our ultimate destination would be lunch. There is no lunch. This kind of thing could possibly make people unhappy.

L4 did indeed know where he was going and seemed to take control of things nicely.

Malkom doing... what he did... was probably the most interesting thing I've seen all day, and Jam gave me coffeelyke.

written by 4616599 on Jun 21, 2011 16:05

I appear stunned for a moment. Picking myself off the console, I take my ME card and look for an exit.

Seeing Malkom-R, I merely give a shocked expression and mumble.

"Suspicious? Oh, I don't know if you know suspicious, my fellow red. Oh, I gotta go. Er. Where are we?"

I look around for any sign, jackobot, or transtube station.

written by Jam on Jun 21, 2011 16:59

Er... I hadn't even gotten to briefing yet... Oh well, I'm sure it'll be fine... Besides, this part looks exciting...

I first look to the Idea Bot.

"I'll tell you how L4-O would know your name. Did you remember that there happens to be two psionic mutants on the team? Peering inside your mind and retrieving your name is a simple task for John-R and I... It didn't matter that your body was not Leeroy-O's, it is your mind that is being sensed... Did it occur to you that one of us might have told L4-O your name?"

Also, if any code but 'I D 10 T' would add time to the bomb, why didn't you just tell us a different passcode was the disarm code? Speed-Y wouldn't have had to die then! For all I know, he detonated the bomb when he entered the code I thought was the disarm code. Or maybe he just ran out of time...

Regardless, if he had known that he could reset the time, he wouldn't have died. You didn't tell him that, and in my mind, that's the same thing as killing him. I accuse you of treason, Idea Bot, Leeroy-O, whatever your name is..."

written by Gligar on Jun 21, 2011 21:59

Debriefing Room 27

Speed-Y is confused for a moment, before he realises that it is the idea bot who accused him.

Then he answers the questions:

First, Derek-G was helpful, as were the three bots. He suggests that Nukabot be rebuilt with modifications to make it more suitable for Troubleshooter work.

On to the team. He praises Jam-O and John-R, and admits negligence (he accidentally injured Jam-O). He also praises Lucas-R and L4-O, noting that the latter's skills with the cone rifle are the best he's ever seen. An if the ability to drive a forkbot up several flights of stairs doesn't count... The High Programmer seems interested in that.

We all know what Cryo-R did.

He doesn't know much about Malkom-R, other than the fact that he seems to lack self-control. He simply... appeared, and then started complaining about everything. That, and shooting when being told not to.

The idea bot... is just downright crazy. All he's done is hinder the team... trying to get them to take the nuke to the reactor after they'd removed it.; withheld vital information from them, namely, the password to the guardbot; and finally, indirectly caused the death of his previous clone, and the destruction of an experimental bot.

Wait... he mentioned the mutants there. Are the newcomers cleared for that...?

Cryo-R smiles at the High Programmer. He sticks by his version of events: he disabled Nukabot, and attempted to disarm the Tsar. He regrets that he was unable to prevent "someone" damaging Computer Property, though. He also "saved the lift" of a citizen and got here on time, unlike those who "had lunch" with some mutants.

He praises Lucas-R for bringing coffeelyke, even though he spilled some (failing to notice that it was the idea bot who caused that). The jackobot was probably helpful, though he doesn't know what for. He suggests that it be given humanlike arms so that it can strangle people.

This causes the jackobot to exclaim, "What. I do not wish to strangle anyone. Though I would most likely make an exception in your case, if ordered to do so."

Finally, he suggests that everyone listen to the idea bot's ideas, and maybe give it a cupholder or two.

He seems to have failed to notice that he didn't answer the questions properly.

L4-O's turn: He doesn't accuse Speed-Y of treason, though he does question the loyalty of Cryo-R and Malkom-R. Lucas-R, John-R, and Jam-O have been helpful and loyal throughout (though the way that Jam-O terminates traitors... ugh) Mango-R hasn't really been a threat to them, even though he did get possessed. Joris-R was loyal up until the zombie incident... then things went sour. He's uncertain about the idea bot, but is leaning towards disloyal. He adds that he was pretending to be communist to get information out of one (though it didn't work). Finally, Speed-Y terminated Leeroy-O because he was impeding them by not disclosing information.

Mango-R looks like he wants to speak, but stops. After a moment, he starts again. He realises that he can't rightly give a report, since he hasn't been in the thick of things. He adds that he's not really any good at anything, and doesn't stand out all too well.

"There most certainly is a place for you," our mutual friend replies. "After a brief period of re-education, I feel confident that it will be found, citizen. Don't you agree?"

The idea bot formally accuses Speed-Y and L4-O of treason. First, it says, they were, in fact, real communists, in collusion with the others. It adds that when challenged, they failed to show proper documentation. Thereofre they muist have been communists.

Second, they terminated Leeroy-O. Again, no documentation. It claims that Leeroy-O was merely trying to apprehend communists. Therefore, they were hindering him. Because they were communists.

Lucas-R looks like he's falling below mandatory minimum happiness level.

The idea bot explains about the Tsar's code again, and adds that it didn't tell them at the time because he thought someone knew it already.. That, it reasons, meads that said clone was in league with the Communists.

It praises Derek-G and Internal Security. And Mandatory Team Troubleshooter.

Not a mention of The Tella-O-MLY Adventure Hour to be heard anywhere.

Azir-R is up next. Being late to the party, so to speak, he has little to add, yet he still contributes more than Mango-R: First, Cryo-R promised him lunch. But there sin't anyway. That is clear hindrance. Second, he praises L4-O for taking control. Malkom-R was interesting, and Jam-O gave hin coffeelyke.

Jam-O looks like he wants to continue his report, but moves on. He answers the idea bot. First, Leeroy-O's name: there are two psionic mutants on the team. One of them could have retrieved it from his mind, and told L4-O. Second, the code: wouldn't it have been more beneficial to give out a false code? That way, the Tsar would not have detonated. As it is, either Speed-Y entered toe code and blew up the bomb, or he didn't have time and blew up anyway.

If he had had a false code, he might have survived. Since Leeroy-O didn't tell them about the flaw, Speed-Y did not have such a code. Therefore Leeroy-O is responsible for the termination of Speed-Y-DOF-1.

Jam-O finishes up by formally accusing Leeroy-O, or Mega-R, or whatever he is really called, of treason.

"Your report is incomplete," the High Programmer says. "Please answer my questions."

John-R is next: "I'm sure you want to wrap this up, Sir, so I'll make this brief. I find it difficult to judge exactly who has been the most helpful to the team, but I will say that Jam-O has been most loyal. Even when he discovered that he was a mutant, he made the best of the situation, and volunteered to register. The team was understanding of this, and Speed-Y allowed him to go and register. I really can't agree with the idea bot's accusation of Speed-Y, by the way. Actually, now I think of it, Speed-Y has done his best to get the team through the mission, and deserves praise for that.

"Cryo-R... well, we know what he did. Nothing but hinder us, damage Computer Property, run away and ignore the mission, and damage some more Computer Property while hindering us some more. In fact, I'd like to accuse him of treason.

"Malkom-R has been covered. The idea bot... well, Leeroy-O... he hasn't been helpful at all. At times, he has opposed the team's mission, and you've heard his argument already. But from my perspective, he is also a traitor.

"Mango-R... well, I'll say this. If we hadn't gone back for him, we wouldn't have encountered... you know who... and been delayed. In essence, he is responsible for delaying us."

Lucas-R asks, "Is it my turn?" John-R nods. "Alright. Speed-Y said that L4-O's skills with bots are good, but I want to point out Speed-Y's own skill with Massacrebot. I had a go at it, and it's hard. Yet he did just fine. And showed us how awesome Massacrebot was!

"Jam-O got me into the mission in the first place. If it weren't for him, I'd probably still be in the cloning station, instead of doing awesome stuff.

"Cryo-R... I don't like him. He never did what he was told. He seemed to be an expert at disobeying orders.... wait, I didn't just say that out loud, did I?" He looks worried for a second, before continuing. "I don't know about Malkom-R. And Leeroy-O... well, just now, I almost got unhappy listening to that bot over there." He falls silent.

*"If that is everything, I'll need some time to go through this. Wait there a few minutecycles."*⁴⁹³

Cloning station (somewhere)

Malkom-R struggles into a jumpsuit and dashes to a terminal, making typos as he fills out the questions.

Joris-R grans the ME Card the terminal offers him and looks around. He spots Malkom-R and mumbles something in response, before again looking for an exit. There's one, by the jackobot.

written by Speeder on Jun 21, 2011 22:19

After a while hearing everyone I note:

"By the way, I want Megagun back. And I think Megagun got overwritten somehow by Leeroy because of guess who that entered a room and suddenly it burst in flames, leaving Megagun burned behind. And when he returned... he was all crazy, now I know he is not crazy, only another clone."

I ponder a bit.

"In fact I want to know what sort of weapon could make the room burst in flames like that... Noone had any incendiary weapons that I know at that time. Maybe L4 already had the cone rifle, but I do not remember he firing when the room looked like hit by incendiary shell."

written by Jam on Jun 22, 2011 00:37

"Ah, Sir! You wanted me to answer the rest of the questions?

I think Speed-Y is innocent, and I also think he's the clone that was the most helpful, because he was the clone leading the team and coordinating us.

Although it is a tough decision... L4-O, John-R, and Lucas-R, have all been extremely helpful... Even Joris-O has been helpful for most of the misson, except right after we met the mutants...

Mango-R has been acting... strangely, recently... I'm guessing it was caused by a certain F-Class mutant, though for some reason, he's still acting odd...

Then there's Cryo-R... He's been quite a hinderance... I'd say he's the least helpful... In fact, he's been pretty much useless so far... But I'm sure we can find a use for him, somehow... Malkom-R is the same way as Cryo-R...

⁴⁹³ GLIGAR: (OOC: That tool too long. Long enough to almost misplace the goings-on at the cloning station:)

And last, there's Leeroy-O. Though I haven't actually met him face to face, he seems to have be a traitor, and appears to be working against us and against Friend Computer. I'd say he's the clone that has hindered us the most. I don't trust him at all..."

written by Cryoburner on Jun 22, 2011 01:25

I turn to Azir-R...

"Say, didn't I bring you Coffeelyke? You didn't get two Coffeelykes, did you? Either way, Coffeelyke is simply the first course of your lunch, and I'm certain there will be more later! We're just behind schedule due to the others, who were probably treasonously having lunch, or perhaps a B3 break, while we were waiting for them."

"Hmm... Now that it's been mentioned, if this Jam-O fellow gave the detonation code to Speed-Y, it seems likely that he knew its purpose, even if Speed-Y did not. If he is indeed a psychic, and got the code from the communist leader, he should have known what its purpose was for. And if he had these psychic powers, why didn't he just get the code from this "Leeroy-O". For that matter, why did Speed-Y terminate Leeroy-O for not immediately handing over the code, when he had a psychic on his team who could have acquired it for him?"

"It all sounds mighty treasonous. Perhaps they're all communists, who's true mission was to blow up that derelict weapons range!"

written by Gligar on Jun 22, 2011 02:17

Debriefing room 27

After listening to everyone, Speed-Y decides that he wants Mega-R back. The problem is, Mega-R was overwritten by Leeroy-O, some time after someone entered a room and caused it to set on fire. How did he do that? Some sort of weapon?

"Let's see, shall we?" suggests the High Programmer. "Play the tape, friend."

On one of the screens appears camera footage of the meeting hall. O nit, Cryo-R is seen, holding a packet of Insta-Hot Fun. He says something to... it would have to be a spaced-out Mega-R..., opens the packet, and puts it in Mega-R's jumpsuit pocket.

Some time later, the Fun is seen catching fire. Everyone knows you don't leave Insta-Hot Fun lying around once it's been opened.

"Well, there you have it."

JAm-O gives his report: that Speed-Y is innocent; L4-O, John-R, and Lucas-R have been the most helpful; Cryo-R and Malkom-R ave hindered them... and Leeroy-O harmed them.

"Thank you, citizen", the High Programmer says. "I should have enough information now."

The screens dim, and begin showing PLEASE WAIT.

Cryo-R tells Azir-R that the coffeelyke was just the first course of lunch. They're just behind schedule, naturally through no fault of his own. It's all the fault of everyone else.

Also, if Jam-O knew the code, surely he knew its purpose? If so, why didn't he tell? And why didn't he just get it from Leeroy-O? Why did Speed-Y terminate Leeroy-O when Jam-O could have simply go the code there and then?

He thinks it's treasonous. Perhaps everyone is a communist, with the goal of blowing up the weapons range.

What.

written by Speeder on Jun 22, 2011 02:30

I look at Cryo for a while.

"Huh... Jam was not near Leeroy at the time, thus it is logical that he would extract the information from whoever was close to him."

I keep looking at Cryo.

"Ok, what was that? I mean, you set Megagun on fire! You made us need to turn on the anti-fire system that got broken and flooded everything, your actions directly caused Megagun get overwritten and water damage to computer property. And where do you got that Insta Hot Fun? I do not remember seeing any of those around the bunker."

I blink a bit more.

"Hey, that has to do with the towel guy, no? I mean, you two disappeared, and then you returned with food. I am certain that you two teamed up to do your thing and found food somewhere. Considering how much you mention lunch, I think the only think in your head that is more important than CPU mandates, is food."

written by Jam on Jun 22, 2011 03:14

I respond to Cryo-R.

"The Communist Director was shielding his mind, resisting my attack, and I only knew that I had gotten a code that he didn't want me to get. If I had had more time, I would have probed deeper, and maybe then I would have found what the code really did... I'd just assumed it was the disarm code for the Tsar, because he had been trying so hard to hide it... I guess I was wrong..."

I look over at the Idea Bot.

"Or maybe you're lying. Why would the Director be trying to hide the detonation code? Maybe it really was the disarm code..."

written by Malkom on Jun 22, 2011 04:29

I keep on typing in answers. ⁴⁹⁴

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 22, 2011 07:02

I try not to let the pain take hold, its presence being made once more. I don't show it though.

⁴⁹⁴ MALKOM: (OOC: and being ignored.)

"It could be either. Who knows, either Speed-Y wasn't quick enough, or he detonated it manually without realising it.

Neither of those sound particularly good..."I see... It must have been a diversion. The Tsar going off must have been a distraction, an advantage that they didn't expect to get. Those communists... They aren't done yet. They seek to continue on, and I dare think, we need to make sure this isn't the case.

I nearly fall over in surprise.

What... What was that?! Well... Something's got to fill that void of my own brain... It can't remain empty forever.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 22, 2011 09:14

I shake my head after Cryo's final statement but stop and sigh.

"Well I'll give you that. I wouldn't doubt for a second that there are communists out there who would put forward such a mission."

"But of course, we're not communists, especially not ones that would enact an inane plan like that... nor did the real commies seem to have that goal in mind. Maybe if they had things might've been simpler."

written by Megagun on Jun 22, 2011 13:00

"Cryo makes an excellent point, though. Also, why didn't the commie leader's mind get probed sooner? It could've explained everything, really.

Maybe Jam-O is lying, and he's actually an agent from some Mutant secret society. He gets the detonation code from the commie leader, tells us to use it to disarm the Tsar, the Tsar goes boom and creates a passageway for some creepy mutants to pour out of the depths of Alpha Complex. We've all seen those odd creatures. What if there were more of them stashed somewhere near the old firing range?

Also, who is this 'Megagun' Speed-Y keeps speaking of? Does he mean Mega-R-GUN? Or is there someone named Mega-G-UN? Interesting, interesting.

If he did mean Mega-R-GUN, that's kind of interesting... You know, he was a member of an anti-bot secret society. He wanted to be a part of a technology-oriented service group, but was banned for it due to his known dislike of bots. I had to imitate him to keep myself from getting exposed and terminated, which would endanger my mission. Mega-R-GUN is the reason that that forkbot you call 'Nukabot' has been deactivated. Just so you know.

Now, as far as to why I didn't tell you all a false code: remember that I fully expected someone in the team to know the detonation code already, and that I hadn't really established my creditility with the rest of the team yet. I thought of telling you lot a false code, but I feared that whoever in your team knew of the detonation code would call me out on it and terminate me. Furthermore, any false code I would give would merely reset the timer, instead of fully disarming the Tsar. This could be interpreted by any of you as a blatant lie, which could cost me my clone body.

I am somewhat appalled that none of you had thought of this. It is purely logical, is it not? Then again, I should've known: it's not as if you lot haven't responded poorly to superior logic before.

Trust me, though. 'I D 10 T' was the detonation sequence for the Tsar. I have a very good source on that, so to speak."

written by 4616599 on Jun 22, 2011 17:45

I exit, and look around, visibly trembling

written by Gligar on Jun 22, 2011 20:32

Debriefing Room 27

Speed-Y looks at Cryo-R. He tells him why Jam-O didn't scan Leeroy-O's mind: he wasn't anywhere near him.

Then, he focuses on the event with the Insta-Hot Fun. He wants to know what the [DFSR] was up with setting a clone on fire which caused them to need to use the sprinklers, which then broke and flooded the bunker! And, incidentally, caused Mega-R's mind to be overwritten!

And where did he get that Insta-Hot Fun from? Speed-Y didn't recall seeing any. Did he get it when he and Selbio-R (or "towel guy") went off on their own? Perhaps food is the main thing on Cryo-R's mind... even above CPU mandates.

Jam-O adds that the Director was shielding, therefore, he didn't want Jam-O to get the code. Therefore, it must have been the disarm code. Or maybe not.

Or maybe the idea bot has been lying. Perhaps the code was the disarm code, Mango-R points out that it could be either. Speed-Y might not have had the time to enter the code. Or maybe he detonated it secondcycles too soon. Who knows?

He adds, in a strange tone of voice, that the Tsar was probably a distraction, one "they" didn't know they were getting. He believes that the communists are still at work.

He falls over, seemingly in shock, as if he didn't know where that came from.

L4-O sighs. He won't deny that there are some communists who are so crazy that they'll destroy some random part of the Underplex for whatever reason. But they aren't communists. They certainly didn't have that absurd goal in mind. Neither did the real communists.

It should be no surprise that the idea bot agrees with Cryo-R. It also wants to know why the Director wasn't scanned earlier.

It wants to know who SSpeed-Y is referring to. It suggests several alternative names, before telling that Mega-R was a member of a bot-hating society, and got Nukabot disabled.

"Really," Derek-G interjects. "I seem to recall it being you who did that."

The idea bot gives the same reason why Leeroy-O didn't give out a false code: someone might have known the real code and terminated him.

He then calls everyone stupid for not figuring that out.

The room falls silent for a moment.

Cloning station (somewhere)

Malkom-R finishes up his answers. He briefly wonders why it didn't ask him thinks like "Are you a traitor?" Maybe the questions are randomised?

Meanwhile, Joris-R stumbles out of the station.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station - Foyer

Or so the big sign reads.

As promised, the foyer has vendobots. It also has some tables and chairs marked out in clearance areas, from INFRARED (no tables there, and few chairs), up to a nice BLUE area with robotler service, where a clone could wait if he wanted.

But Joris-R seems drawn to the exit of the foyer, as well.

Corridor

As Joris-R enters the corridor, the floor suddenly moves under him!

It turns out that he's now standing on a sort of floating tile, sort of like a Transition but with a bot brain. It's heading down, slowly.

"Welcome, citizen," the tile says, "to the JHT Sector Main Cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience. This system is designed to take you through the corridor in comfort and style, at a speed appropriate to your security clearance. During the experience, you will have the opportunity to participate in selected promotions tailored especially to you."

The tile drones on, as it continues to descend.

Slowly.

Debriefing Room 27

The screens suddenly change their display, reverting to all dark, except for the main one, which now displays the Eye of the Computer.

"The High Programmer has come to his decision," our mutual friend begins. "He has decided the following:

"Three of you are especially loyal, and will be rewarded appropriately.

"Two of you have been especially treasonous, and will be punished. A third has already been terminated.

"All those who are not traitors will receive their Mandatory Successful Mission Bonuses.

The High Programmer will address you shortly."

written by Jam on Jun 22, 2011 20:44

I turn to the Eye of the Computer, and wait in silence.

Hmm... I seem to grinning...

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 22, 2011 20:51

Well now, this should be fun!

written by Megagun on Jun 22, 2011 20:51

"Yeah, Derek. It was me, but I had to in order to not compromise my mission, as I just said..

Oh well, I'll be punished yet again for something I didn't do. It's not as if that hasn't happened before.

Not as if I wasn't loyal or anything. Pretty much sacrificed my own life just to complete my mission, and once I'm close to figuring things out, some young lad terminates me for some silly reason. Bah. Spend daycycles on this vital mission, only to fail at the last second."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 22, 2011 21:06

I sense the pain starting to now jab at me.

"Ouch! That hurt..."

Patience... You've got to hold it. Just until you can get yourself to medical services...

"W... Wh... What did you say just there?" I question, looking in the direction of Leeroy-?

written by Malkom on Jun 22, 2011 21:06

I sigh, hurry out, and hurry towards the debriefing room by any route possible.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 22, 2011 21:22

"Hmm... That was certainly an entertaining video! That clone who looked vaguely like me seemed to be quite helpful at bringing much-needed food to that hungry clone. It is rather unfortunate that the clone didn't eat the food though, and instead decided to just leave it in his pocket like that. You'd think he would have noticed how warm it was, and pulled it out at some point. He clearly must have been defective."

"Either way, that video was hilarious! I fully suggest we get a copy and send it in to Alpha Complex's Funniest Surveillance Videos."

I pick up a Coffeelyke and have a sip, then wander over to the idea bot.

"Say, idea bot, would you happen to have a copy of that video?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 22, 2011 21:47

I smile.

"That sounds nice."

I lean back in my chair and wait patiently for the results.

written by Speeder on Jun 23, 2011 00:10

I smile at the COMPUTER EYE.

Then at Cryo mentioning the video is hilarious, I look at him for a while.

"Are you Death Leopard or something? Or you are only crazy?"

I then have a sudden nice idea.

"Hey, Idea bot. If you Asimov circuits fail, will you terminate yourself?"

written by Gligar on Jun 23, 2011 00:57

Debriefing room 27

Jam-O grins. It's like he knows what's coming. Is he a precog or something?

Azir-R seems to be happy, too.

The idea bot admits that it was Leeroy-O. Not that it matters, since it's going to get punished anyway, it says.

Mango-R seems to be in pain again. But the pain isn't too great that he didn't catch the idea bot's words. Or at least, parts of them. He asks for clarification.

Naturally, Cryo-R ignores everything. Except the video of him. He requests a copy from the idea bot.

L4-O joins the happy crowd.

Speed-Y joins in for a moment, then starts questioning Cryo-R. Is he a Death Leopard? Or just crazy.

A light fixture seems to turn on in his mind, and he addresses the idea bot. If its Asimov circuits were to fail, would it self-terminate?

The High Programmer appears on the screen. "You lot seem mostly happy. Emphasis on 'mostly'. That means some of you aren't. Why is that?"

Corridor

Malkom-R rushes out through the foyer. He almost runs right off the tile and into the sudden void before him before it moves off. He stumbles and lands hard on his back. He is not injured, though, just bruised.

His tile speaks to him as it moves. "Welcome, citizen, to the JHT Sector Main Cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience. This system is designed to take you through the corridor in comfort and style, at a speed appropriate to your security clearance. During the experience, you will have the opportunity to participate in selected promotions tailored especially to you."

All the while, the tile has been drifting slowly downwards. Below, the dim shape of another tile can be made out.

written by Speeder on Jun 23, 2011 01:02

I look at the UV.

"I am happy!"

I grin while looking at the Idea bot.

Seemly I am having some ideas.

written by Malkom on Jun 23, 2011 02:08

"Go faster! NOW! I don't want to hear your stupid program! I don't want to have anything to do with it!"

I jam my thumbs in my ears with a very unhappy expression on my face. "Unnnnnngh."

written by Jam on Jun 23, 2011 02:38

I look at the UV.

"I am also happy!"

I grin while looking at the Idea bot.

Seemly I am also having some ideas.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 23, 2011 03:20

I look at the UV.

"Indeed, high happiness here."

I look cluelessly at the Idea bot but smile.

Seemingly I'm not having any ideas.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 23, 2011 15:07

I look at the UV.

"I am quite possibly the happiest of them all! Perhaps even happier than a happiness bot, if that is in any way possible without being treasonous."

I grin while looking at the idea bot.

Seemly I have the best idea. Ever.

"We have a great video to send in to Alpha Complex's Funniest Surveillance Videos! The season finale is coming soon, and the grand prize is something like ten-thousand credits, and a special guest appearance for you and your friends on a future episode of Mandatory Team Troubleshooter!"

written by Megagun on Jun 23, 2011 17:10

"Ooooooh, awesome! We have to win that!"

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 23, 2011 20:22

I make an expression that could only be described as 'a slight movement of the facial expressions'.

"I'm glad... but the pain is really strong..."

I try to keep myself together, and concentrate hard to remove it from my mind.

"It hurts, still... and gets stronger yet."

You're speaking rather oddly now. What next? The last thing you need right now is a disassociation identity disorder...

written by Gligar on Jun 23, 2011 22:26

Debriefing Room 27

Speed-Y confirms that he is happy. Smiling, he looks at the idea bot. He seems to be having ideas of his own.

Jam-O is also happy, looking at the bot, and having ideas.

L4-O is also happy, and looking at the bot... but, just to shake things up, he isn't having any ideas.

Cryo-R is also happy. He's also looking at the bot, and has an idea of his own. Apparently, there is a competition coming up soon, with fabulous prizes. He thinks they should enter.

"How did you remember that? You've been brainscrubbed multiple times! Unless...you're immune to brainscrubs? That's the kind of thing I'd expect of a mutant... And besides, Alpha Complex's Funniest Surveillance Videos doesn't take treason scene footage."

The idea bot agrees. I guess it's happy as well, though it is incapable of looking at itself.

"I have collected other footage from the mission, however. Perhaps I'll enter it."

Mango-R... has a facial movement. The pain is too much to be happy about. That, and his voice seems to be changing.

"Perhaps, after this, the pain will go away. I'll start with you, should I? It is true that you haven't stood out... except when you abandoned the team and self-terminated. During that time, you claimed to be under control by the F-class mutant known as Headgrabber. The Computer has reminded me of Protocol J-618, which, in redacted form, reads, 'Those being controlled by [DATA REDACTED] not limited to [EXPUNGED] F-class [DELETED FOR SECURITY REASONS] [MORE CENSORED DATA] Commie Mutant Traitor [DFSR] potato [WHAT SECURITY CLEARANCE ARE YOU ANYWAY?] termination and re-patterning'. As such, there is little to discuss. You are ordered to report to Termination Centre P2, immediately after debriefing. Medical Services will have to wait.

"Now, Cryo-R. Your case is even worse, what with 'completely ignoring the assigned mission' and 'attempted incineration of a citizen', not to mention 'damage to Computer Property', which I have down here one, two, three, four, five, six... suffice to say, a lot. Oh, and there's also 'disregarding security clearance'... there's a lot of those, some of them involving... oh dear... entering ULTRAVIOLET areas. I'll bet you're also responsible for the Fizz-Wizz I found in my showerhead last weekcycle. As such, I hereby discharge you from the Corps of Troubleshooters, demote you to Security Clearance INFRARED, and order you to submit to a cycle of end-of-monthcycle brainscrubs from now on. In addition, you are to accompany Mango-R to Termination Centre P2," Lucas-R suppresses a laugh.

"Idea Bot C-481 isn't part of the team, and will be dealt with later. It does not count towards The Computer's total. Suffice to say, there is a small problem with Leeroy-O. Namely, he ran out of clones over a yearcycle ago.

"Now... Speed-Y. I'd like to congratulate you and your team for successfully completing the mission. Your brevet will be converted to a full security clearance after the debriefing is done. In addition to your 3,000cr Mandatory Mission Bonus, you will receive an additional 500cr and a voucher for a free additional clone.

"Jam-O... your conduct during the mission was exemplary. In addition to having your brevet converted, you will be promoted to Security Clearance YELLOW. You will also receive a 3,000cr Mandatory Mission Bonus.

"L4-O... I'd also like to congratulate you. Your security clearance will be converted to full ORANGE, and your cone rifle brevet will be extended indefinitely. You'll also receive a 2,000cr Mandatory Mission Bonus.

"John-R and Lucas-R... thank you for your work. You'll each receive a 1,000cr bonus.

"As for Joris-R and Malkom-R... they receive no bonus. Joris-R, for going AWOL prior to debriefing, and Malkom-R, for being terminated during it.

"This isn't all, however. There is still the matter of treason committed during the mission. Namely, the destruction of Computer Property, and entering high-clearance areas. By rights, I should terminate. However, I much prefer to rehabilitate where appropriate. As such, Team Epsilon is ordered to attend Security Clearance Refresher Seminars once per monthcycle, as well as once-per-monthcycle psychometric reviews, including additional medication as required."

The High Programmer looks at the idea bot. "Now... Leeroy-O... what to do with you.... Perhaps I could put you in some smaller kind of bot... yes, perhaps a petbot would be ideal..."

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Malkom-R urges his tile to get a move on. He isn't interested in being advertised at. "All in good time, citizen. There is always time for a nice, refreshing B3... say, I'll take you over to a vendobot now." The tile changes direction slightly, heading over to what does indeed look like a vendobot.

Below him, Joris-R's tile is already stopped at a vendobot, as his tile speaks to him about the wonders of B3.

written by Malkom on Jun 23, 2011 22:33

"AARRRRGH! NOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO!"

I stamp my feet hard on the tile. Then I jump with frustration... slip... and fall.....

Wheeeee... This'd be fun if I didn't know I was going to be terminated at the end...

written by Lightning4 on Jun 23, 2011 22:42

I smile widely.

"Woohoo! Congratulations to all. I'm especially happy I have Turbo for good now! Thank you, Sir!"

I hug Turbo then put it away and smile some more.

"I don't think the rehabilitation will be necessary for long with such loyal clones. But we will go to the seminars and be happy! Speaking of which, when's the first?"

written by Jam on Jun 24, 2011 00:20

I grin even wider.

"Hooray! Thank you, sir! Congratulations everyclone!"

I continue smiling... Then I notice something odd about what the UV said...

"Oh, Joris-O was demoted to RED clearance? I wonder how that happened..."

written by Cryoburner on Jun 24, 2011 01:00

"Are we so sure that was a treason scene though? It looked more like a hilarious accident to me. Now that I think of it though, that clone really should have felt himself bursting into flames sooner. You don't think he was an unregistered mutant, do you!? Just think of all the chaos a mutant with the inability to feel himself burning could cause! Also, it might be disappointing if we couldn't submit the video. Just think of all the clones who would be saddened by not being able to see it..."

"As for how I heard about the competition, it must have been from overhearing some conversation in the corridors, or perhaps from a vidscreen message along the way, or maybe you told me, and just forgot! Probably one of the first two though."

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 24, 2011 12:05

"Hurray!"

I clap and cheer as the rewards and punishments are handed out.

written by 4616599 on Jun 24, 2011 14:14

"Hmm. Is B3 Classic available to INFRAREDS?"

I glance at my jumpsuit.

"Oh, that can't be good. Till I'm promoted, then."

I try jumping on the tile, then watch as Malkom-R seemingly goes past...

written by Gligar on Jun 24, 2011 15:46

JHT Sector Main cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Malkom-R makes it clear that he doesn't want B3, and stamps on the tile, just like a Junior Citizen throwing a tantrum.

Then he jumps.

As he does, he can spot Joris-R, apparently sad that he seems to be INFRARED. The vendobot is saying to him, "If you are INFRARED, citizen, why does your ME card say that you are RED?"

Joris-R looks over at Malkom-R, just as Malkom-R's tile makes a sudden dive and slots itself in underneath him. Malkom-R lands on it with a thud, and the crack of a broken rib.

"Please be aware, citizen," the tile says cheerfully, "that any attempts at self-termination immediately after decanting are deemed Destruction of Computer Property and will be punished, either at the conclusion of the Interactive Experience, or at the cloning station, whichever is most appropriate.

"Now... where were we? Ah yes, B3."

The tile, once again, continues its journey towards the vendobot.⁴⁹⁵

Debriefing Room 27

L4-O congratulates everyone, and hugs Turbo, now he knows that he gets to keep it.

He expresses his opinion that the rehabilitation shouldn't take too long. After all, they try to be loyal. But even so, they'll attend the seminars. He asks about the first one.

"Your first seminar is ascheduled for twosday of next weekcycle," The Computer replies. "Non-attendance is treason punishable by termination."

Jam-Y adds to the congratulations, smiling as he does.

He then notes that the High Programmer mentioned Joris-R, and queries it.

"Of course he was demoted. He didn't even bother to turn up for debriefing, did he?"

Cryo, of course, fixates again. He still thinks that it wasn't treason. He adds that he must have heard about the competition somewhere.

The High Programmer doesn't need to reply, as it turns out. Lucas-R does it for him: "Wait, wait... how can deliberately putting something in someclone's pocket be an 'accident'? That was obviously on purpose! And, as I'm sure you know, lying is treason!"

Azir-R looks suitably celebratory as he cheers and claps for those who were promoted.

written by 4616599 on Jun 24, 2011 16:36

"How strange. I think it's because of an interesting clone I became acquainted with recently. He's INFRARED. And he loves B3! Come to think about it, give me some B3, I'm sure he'll want it."

written by Jam on Jun 24, 2011 16:43

"Ah, right."

...

I look over at Azir-R...

"Hmm... I don't think I ever got your name... Oh, no wait, don't tell me! It's... It's..."

I seem to be focusing on him, and grinning at the same time... This is fun...

⁴⁹⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: You're not throwing your clones away that easily. I'm not running a Zap game here, after all.)

written by Speeder on Jun 24, 2011 17:04⁴⁹⁶

I smile happily, knowing that I won a new clone.

"Sir... what we do now? Also, I and Jam went from RED to YELLOW in some hours, how we learn of our new duties? I suppose as your clearance rises you get new duties. Because otherwise everyone would want to be the highest clearance possible, considering the new rights, the new duties must be what scare away clones from working to rise in clearance, and this certainly happen, considering the huge amount of INFRARED and RED clones."

I then look at Jam.

"You see, you caught up with my clearance again! Well done! Good to have a colleague that I can talk about my own clearance stuff! Although all the information I have is RED anyway... Well, we can share YELLOW B3 when we find some! And make a nice toast!"

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 24, 2011 21:12

Well, we're screwed.

"..."

I take a glance at the door, trying to see whether I can open it easily in a quick moment. If I can open the door easily, I say, "I think... I've had enough of your stupid mandates." running towards the door at the same time, opening it (or breaking it down), and run. Who cares which direction? So long as I'm not running into IntSec...

written by Malkom on Jun 24, 2011 21:56

I moan and curl up on my platform, shoving my thumbs in my ears so I can't hear and closing my eyes so I can't see.

"I won't buy anything, no matter what you say to me."

written by Cryoburner on Jun 25, 2011 01:00

Of course it was put in his pocket! He would have likely dropped it otherwise, making a mess on the floor and wasting perfectly good Insta-Hot Fun. That still doesn't change the fact that he left it in there. Perhaps if he were wearing his Inta-Hot Fun On-The-Go Food-Ingestion-Bag, it could have been put in there, and that situation entirely avoided.

written by Gligar on Jun 25, 2011 03:11

JHT Sector Main cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Joris-R explains the apparent discrepancy: he's thinking about an INFRARED friend who loves B3. He asks for some. "Sure, citizen, one B3 Plain coming up." The bot dispenses a can of B3 Plain. "Will there be anything else?"

⁴⁹⁶ SPEEDER: (OOC: sorry for the random pattern of showing up for the next days, I am on my grandma house...

Also, I won the best prize ever in a game, a 1up 🤩 You know, even on late Mario series where 1up is actually not needed, people still kill themselves trying to get 1up... 1up must be the most awesome thing ever!)

Above, Malkom-R's tile has resumed its course towards its own vendobot. On it, Malkom-R is curled up, fingers in his ears, trying not to listen. Apparently, he refuses to buy anything. The tile raises its speech output by fifty percent. "Citizen, the reason you have credits at all is to spend them. Surely you know that credit hoarding is treason? If you do not spend, you will probably end up dead at the bottom of a food vat, shortly before the blades tear you up, or worse, stirring it with no memory of doing anything else. How about you think it over with a nice can of refreshing B3? Mmm, mandatory!"

Now that the tile puts it that way, the prospect of B3 is sounding a whole lot nicer...

Debriefing room 27

Jam-Y looks over at Azir-R. he's not sure he ever got the clone's name. That's not a problem, though. He concentrates... And smiles. That's always a good idea. Smiling, I mean.

Speed-Y wants to know what to do next, and of his and Jam-Y's duties. He adds that, since higher clearances have more duties, perhaps that's why many clones simply do not want advancement.

"It's generally true that higher clearance brings more responsibility, but it also brings higher rewards. And more clones to order around. And more to accuse of treason. Those reasons are enough for clones to want advancement, even to the detriment of their fellow clones... or even to the detriment of those already with clearance," the High Programmer comments. "The higher you get, the more you notice it."

Speed-Y thinks that it's good to have a colleague of his clearance. Maybe they should get together some time and talk about YELLOW-clearance stuff over some YELLOW B3.

Mango-R is more interested in the door. It seems to be unlocked.

Mango-R realises that he has to get out of there. Telling the High Programmer that he's through with stupid mandates, he bolts through it.

Only to be skewered by another laser turret.

Cryo-no-longer-R says that it was put in his packet to avoid it going on the floor and going to waste.

"Some clones never learn. Computer, notify the Termination Centre that there will only be one termination. Will someone make sure that the termination happens on schedule?"

"As for the rest of you... for now, return to the bunker and get some sleep. After that, you'll need to find yourselves some more permanent accommodation in the sector. You'll each be assigned local jobs in your service groups as soon as they can be found. I'm sure that there will be plenty to do, what with all the mess this mission has caused."

"Oh, and since no-one has said it yet... welcome to JHT Sector."

"Dismissed."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 25, 2011 03:23

One communism for another. It's all the same thing. We've been deceived all along. There is happiness for no one. And they tell us to assimilate. To do as they say, show 'loyalty', and that is all.

Blimey, I'm actually seeing the truth. My truth.

I fire all the shots to the point where it squeals, and throw it into the room.

Communist traitors... There's so many of them. And at the top of this is the Computer. Seems that our mission is incomplete after all. And I sure hope there's a clone who has enough sense to take some sort of action to reverse this takeover which has happened.

...

I should have detonated the Tsar while I had the chance...

written by Speeder on Jun 25, 2011 03:37

I turn to Jam.

"Do you remember any YELLOW resting area on the bunker?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 25, 2011 10:07

"Huh. Thanks sir. I'm sure we'll be given jobs where we're needed..."

I turn to the group. What's left of it anyway.

"Hm. Wish I could be with you two YELLOWS, but I'm still ORANGE at least. I do recall an ORANGE dorm existing, so at least I have somewhere to go. If there isn't a YELLOW dorm there you could always stay there temporarily with me."

I stand up and stretch my legs, and properly holster Turbo away.

I make my way to the area of the door and stand and wait.

written by 4616599 on Jun 25, 2011 13:07

"Yes please. I'd like three."

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 25, 2011 16:31

My surface thoughts for Jam are my name, since I would be thinking it after being asked the question.

written by Jam on Jun 25, 2011 17:12

"It's... Azir-R! Nice to meet you, Azir-R!"

I smile at him.

Then I look over at Mango-R, or rather, Mango-R's skewered (and probably dead) body.

"Trying to run while in the presence of a High Programmer and Friend Computer? You're just asking to be terminated..."

Then I respond to Speed-Y.

"Hmm... Yeah, a toast does sound nice!

I don't remember any YELLOW dormitories... We might have to sleep in the ORANGE one."

Then I respond to the High Programmer's welcome and dismissal.

"Thank you, sir! Goodbye!"

I turn, and stand by the door next to L4-O. Naturally, I try to avoid any shots fired by recently skewered possibly zombie clones.

written by Gligar on Jun 25, 2011 19:56

Debriefing Room 27

Even as his life fades from him, the CMT known as Mango-R is firing into the room, as many times as he can. That turns out to be six times.

Three times, his shots go wide, and hot points on the screens, leaving burn marks.

Three more times, they hit, not only causing damage to the idea bot, causing it to emit sparks, but also burning a nice big wound in Cryo's back.

And to make it even worse, the third successful shot hits Derek-G in the back of the head. He slumps forward.

Jam-Y does his best to avoid being shot, while telling Mango-R that he's just asking for it.

And indeed, the room's (and the corridor's) laser turrets open fire. I count four... no, six, no, nine shots from the turrets... oh, and another two, one from Lucas-R, and one from one of the idea bot's techs.

If he's still alive after that lot, then perhaps his squealing barrel will take care of him.

"It is clear that Mango-R-NHG cannot be trusted. He is hereby demoted to Security Clearance INFRARED. He will be assigned a work rota when he is re-cloned. Current waiting time for recloning at Security Clearance INFRARED is 2.5 weekcycles.

Before you return to the bunker, please escort Cryo-BRN to the Termination Centre... assuming that the lasers have not done the job already."

Speed-Y asks Jam-Y is he remembers a room in the bunker for YELLOWS to sleep.

L4-O thanks the High Programmer and says that he remembers there being a YELLOW dormitory. If necessary, the two YELLOWS could use it. He then stands, holsters Turbo, and heads over to the door.

After greeting Azir-R properly, Jam-Y says that he doesn't remember one. They'll have to share the ORANGE dorm with L4-O. But a toast sounds nice.

He goes over to the door, by L4-O.

The tech checks on Derek-G. "This isn't good... we'll need a docbot..."

JHT Sector Main cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Joris-R requests three more cans of B3. "Here you are." The vendobot dispenses three more cans of B3 Plain.

Overhead, Malkom-R's tile continues its journey. It tells him that there is currently a special offer on B3 -- only one credit per can, or six for 5cr.

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 25, 2011 21:11

"Cool trick.. nice to meet you as well good sir."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 25, 2011 22:10

I wonder what Headgrabber is doing.

I almost start thinking about it, but don't, since everything seems to be shutting down. I think quickly of other matters.

Never mind that... I need to be sure of what I'm thinking. I am not going back there. And as far as I'm concerned, I never was a part of that team.

If I am thinking right, that pretty much means I'm on my own, with privacy compromised in every room due to those cameras, and destined for death as soon as I come across a clone, a bot or a communist. Goodness knows what happens if I try to get to the mutant prison.

The Code 7 incident details... I need to find them. Quick.

I attempt to break free from the bind of death and the slow recloning process.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 25, 2011 23:17

I panic seeing Derek-G slumped over.

"That's not good at all!"

I take out my PDC and try to call for medical help.

written by Jam on Jun 26, 2011 01:07

"Oh no! Derek-G!"

I take out one of my first aid kits and try to keep him alive...

written by Cryoburner on Jun 26, 2011 01:11

"Arrr! I has been pokeded!"

Recoiling from the laser impact, my Coffeelyke gets tossed into the air, most tossedly.

written by Gligar on Jun 26, 2011 01:59⁴⁹⁷

Debriefing room 27

Azir-R thinks that that was a cool trick.

John-R goes over and joins Speed-Y.

Mango-R... doesn't do anything. He's dead, after all, and the brain is all but destroyed.

L4-O panics when he sees Derek-G. He pulls out his PDC and calls for a docbot. There should be one arriving within 10 minutecycles.

In the meantime, Jam-Y has all those medkits, right? He sees what he can do. He's able to stop the bleeding, but there's no telling what internal injuries he has.

Cryo recoils and loses his grip on his coffeelyke. As he does, a stream of the stuff splashes on the already-sparking idea

⁴⁹⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: You're already dead, Mango 😊)

bot, causing yet more sparks, this time from beneath a panel on the top.

The bot stutters and exclaims, "W-w-warning. O-o-operating at 85% efficiency."⁴⁹⁸

written by Malkom on Jun 26, 2011 03:17

I moan. "All right. I'll buy one can of B3. I will drink it when and if I please. I'll only buy it if I have any credits. And it's the only thing I will buy."

I accept the B3 from the vendobot if it comes, and if the vendobot asks me for my ME card I hurl it at said vendobot with a wail of despair.

written by Speeder on Jun 26, 2011 11:51

I just look as lasers and coffeelyke as launched around.

"Why that stuff happens to me?"

Seeing the efficient team is already taking care of it, I only observe, in end giggling seeing the ideabot and Cryo damaged.

written by 4616599 on Jun 26, 2011 12:25

"Thank you. My friend will be most pleased. But I'll need to deliver it in good shape!"

I take off my jumpsuit and tie it around the B3 cans. I then attempt to use it as a backpack

written by Lightning4 on Jun 26, 2011 12:53

I put my PDC away after adding any more information requested from me.

"It should be about 10 minutecycles."

written by Jam on Jun 26, 2011 14:17

I back away from the sparking Idea Bot, and instead stand by Speed-Y.

written by Megagun on Jun 26, 2011 14:39

"Well, balls. At least I'm still smarter than any of you, even when operating at 85% efficiency..."

I start spinning around uncontrollably.

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 26, 2011 16:51

Yeah I certainly move away from the idea bot, however, if my PDC has photo or video capability I try and catch a shot of any forthcoming fireworks.

⁴⁹⁸ MINGAMANGO181: ((Semi-OOC: I'm already dead. My mind doesn't act. It cannot think, it cannot act.

I am nothing. Clearance free. Not even INFRARED. Interesting. Not really. Just something that seems to have happened. Whether on purpose or not, it doesn't really matter. It takes something as large as the Tsar to get their attention, so that might be an advantage.

Headgrabber must know the truth. He's had many hourcycles to simply read it out and memorise it ten times over... Class F mutants seem all of a sudden far more trustworthy...

My act of defiance. I don't have to wonder why no one was expecting it. Because while something else is happening, I stand there, but no one looks. They ask nothing of me.)

written by Cryoburner on Jun 26, 2011 17:28

I step away from the idea bot. Spinning idea bots are great and all, but tend to break limbs and other things.

written by Gligar on Jun 26, 2011 21:17⁴⁹⁹

Debriefing room 27

It becomes obvious that the late Mango-R's barrel is squealing.

Speed-Y looks on. Why does this stuff always happen to him?

But there's little he can do, and besides, the team is already handling it. He continues to watch, eventually giggling at how the idea bot and Cryo are hurt/damaged.

L4-O gives a few more details, and puts away his PDC. He informs everyone that there will be a docbot coming through in ten minutecycles.

Jam-Y backs away from the idea bot. It's still sparking, and there is the smell of burnt electronics. It says that, even though it's damaged, it's still smarter than them. But apparently, it isn't smart enough to not spin uncontrollably when it's damaged.

Azir-R also backs away, and gets out his PDC to take pictures.

Cryo also gets out of the way. (Isn't he scheduled for termination?)

The techs also get out of the way.

John-R steps up to Sped-Y. "Sir, if you'd like, I can go and take Cryo to the termination centre. It shouldn't be too far away, right?"

The vidscreens start shutting off.

JHT Sector Main cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Malkom-R angrily agrees to buy a B3. "That's the spirit, citizen! Although, wouldn't it be better if you were happy?"

Thanks to his ME Card's contactless technology, he doesn't even need to swipe it anywhere, although he'd probably just end up throwing it at the vendobot in any case. And speaking of which, the tile has just pulled up at the vendobot. "Here you are, citizen," the vendobot says, dispensing a can of B3. "To you, only one credit. Special offer."

Malkom-R grumpily takes it.

⁴⁹⁹ GLIGAR: (OOO: I doubt that everyone here wants to roleplay the weekcycles between missions in too much detail, do they? Perhaps I could run it in a sort of pseudo-realtime (i.e. 1 daycycle per day) between missions. That would give you a chance to perform some actions -- perhaps give a summary of what your character does at work that day, and what they plan to do with their free time. For instance, they might want to practice something, or buy something or maybe contact their secret societies, or the INFRARED market.

What does everyone think? If everyone agrees, we could start doing that when everyone returns to the bunker (or not, in the case of a couple of you 😊)

Below, Joris-R is sorting out his own B3. Unfortunately, he gets the same idea as Cryo... meaning that he takes off his jumpsuit to use as a backpack. "That is... an interesting use of a jumpsuit, there," the vendobot quips. But it now means that you are out of uniform..."

written by Malkom on Jun 26, 2011 21:27

I wait till the tile moves away from the vendobot, then stride to the edge and fling the B3 can against the wall, as hard as I can.^{500 501} written by Jam on Jun 26, 2011 23:18⁵⁰²

"Hey Cryo, go stop that idea bot from spinning..."

I shove Cryo towards the idea bot.⁵⁰³

written by Speeder on Jun 26, 2011 23:43

I help jam in shoving Cryo on the ideabot.^{504 505}

written by Cryoburner on Jun 27, 2011 01:29

"Excellent idea! Let's go!"

I grab Jam-Y and Speed-Y's arms, bringing them with me toward the idea bot, for maximum team efficiency.⁵⁰⁶ written by Gligar on Jun 27, 2011 02:32⁵⁰⁷

JHT Sector Main cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Malkom-R actually has no intention of drinking the B3. Instead, as the tile moves away from the vendobot, he takes a look around and, not seeing any walls where did they go anyway?), throws it over the edge as hard as he can. It hits a spybot, sending it spiralling to the ground.

Which, incidentally, is where Malkom-R seems to be headed: the tile is heading downwards. It's still talking about various products, such as replacement PDCs, since ⁵⁰⁰ MALKOM: (OOO: About the weekcycles between missions: That'd be OK, but I think I'd rather increase the timeflow. I'd like 2 days to 1 IRL day so it goes quicker. If you don't feel up to that then 1 day to 1 IRL day would be OK... I suppose...)

⁵⁰¹ SPEEDER: (OOO: To me is fine. Like 1 day per turn is fine, if everyone remember to post, advance one day, if not, delay a bit, or make a half-update, or something...)

⁵⁰² JAM: (OOO: One daycycle per day or one daycycle per turn, either sounds good to me.)

⁵⁰³ MALKOM: (OOO: Darn, outvoted. More OOO: Do we get to request to be part of a secret society? Or what? Also do we get to choose our jobs?)

⁵⁰⁴ SPEEDER: (OOO: Usually gligar figure that out for you. That is, assuming you have a secret society at all... But at least for jobs he did, I got assigned to Tech Services after I showed up to be prone to do technical actions, and L4 got assigned to Army by Gligar after his obvious love for big weapons and explosions)

⁵⁰⁵ AZIRPHEL: (OOO: 1 Daycycle / turn works for me, and yeah, it'd be nice to know that stuff but I am sure Gligar will help us newer players acquainted with their out-of-mission lifestyles.)

⁵⁰⁶ MALKOM: (OOO: If I was there I'd want to covertly shove all three towards the idea bot! 😊)

⁵⁰⁷ GLIGAR: (OOO: Anyone else?)

it's mandatory to have one, and jumpsuits. But they seem to be having less of an effect.

Debriefing room 27

Jam-Y pushes Cryo towards the idea bot, tasking him with preventing it from spinning. Speed-Y helps him.

And predictably, Cryo decides to bring the two along for the ride.

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 27, 2011 03:31

Oh what a great photo op, the three of them, hand in hand, running towards a smoking and sparking idea-bot. <snap> written by Lightning4 on Jun 27, 2011 05:25⁵⁰⁸

I sigh and look at the scene. I try to assist in slowing down or stopping the spinning by grabbing a hold of anyone I can.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 27, 2011 10:32⁵⁰⁹

I wait and wait, and wait some more.

Patience... You need more of it. The lack of it has gotten you killed, and if you want to escape, plan more carefully than you have already.

Or you could give up. Just a thought.

written by Speeder on Jun 27, 2011 11:32

Since Cryo decided to take me with him, I decide to pull him to the ideabot, and then avoid the bot and pull Cryo over it.

written by Jam on Jun 27, 2011 11:47

Seeing Speed-Y still heading towards the idea bot, I do the same. When we reach the idea bot, I try to pull Cryo over it.

Of course, I try to avoid being hit by the idea bot...

written by Cryoburner on Jun 27, 2011 12:34

Since everyone seems to be headed toward the idea bot, I decide it best to let the higher-ranking citizens take the lead. Having me lead them would be rather awkward, after all, and maybe even treasonous. Needless to say, as we reach the bot, I assist them by helping to 'pull them over it', which is apparently how one goes about stopping an idea bot from spinning.

Of course, I try to avoid making contact with the idea bot in the process myself, as I'm not an expert at stopping idea bots, and their idea bot stopping skills are probably superior to my own.

written by Malkom on Jun 27, 2011 15:10

I stick my thumbs in my ears again. "Shut up. I'm not buying anything, no matter what you say. Therefore, you're using your abilities to speak to no purpose, and wearing out whatever mechanical apparatus you use to speak, again

⁵⁰⁸ LIGHTNING4: (OOC: Sounds okay to me)

⁵⁰⁹ MINGAMANGO181: (OOC: Meh. I don't really mind where time goes.)

to no purpose. Therefore, you should not be speaking. There's no reason to speak."

I look around for something on the tile to kick or punch.

written by Megagun on Jun 27, 2011 15:40

I continue spinning around

"Hmm, it seems that there's something wrong with my vision sensors. Everything keeps spinning around on them!"

written by 4616599 on Jun 27, 2011 16:59

"Meh. I'm sure my friend can give me something to wear. Unless you dispense jumpsuits."

I try dancing a Friend Computer's Happy Jig on the tile while waiting.⁵¹⁰

written by Gligar on Jun 27, 2011 20:39

Debriefing Room 27

Azir-R decides that the sight of three citizens approaching a damaged bot like that is too good an opportunity to miss, and takes a picture. Ka-click!

L4-O sighs. He decides to grab Speed-Y and try to top him from being swept up in the bot's flailing manipulators.

Speed-Y decides to pull Cryo closer, and tries to hoist him onto the bot. As does Jam-Y, as it happens.

The three reach the bot. That's where Cryo strikes (so to speak). As he's pulled over the sparky areas of the bot, he tries to pull Jam-Y and Speed-Y with him. They end up in range of the bot's manipulators.

Speed-Y is able to avoid damage, thanks to L4-O's help, though he ends up spinning around the bot anyway.. But Jam-Y is swiped by a particularly sharp tool fixed to a manipulator. Cryo doesn't do much better. He's burned by the sparking electronics, and probably zapped by them, as well.

The bot seems to be unable to tell that it's spinning. It seems to think that everyone is spinning around it.

JHT Sector Main cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

On his tile, Malkom-R is attempting to ignore the tile's advertising. He states that he will not buy anything more, and that the bot is wasting its time, and wearing itself out. "On the contrary," the tile replies. "I am programmed to advertise. That, apart from moving citizens from A to B, is my purpose. I cannot simply not advertise. That would violate my Secondary Directive.

"With that in mind, perhaps you would like to reconsider? A vendobot up ahead has some rather nice happy pulls which I am sure you could use. And may I remind you that your flesh-type citizens also have a Directive concerning ⁵¹⁰ 4616599: (ooc: I'm fine with the whole long turn/mini-turn thing too. Maybe do a few rapid-fire updates on specific clones if most of us happen to be on?)

commerce, namely that it is mandatory? Must I take you directly to Internal Security for failing to follow this Directive?"

Malkom-R looks for something to kick or punch, but comes up with nothing.

Meanwhile, Joris-R is sure that his friend will get him something to wear, unless the vendobot has jumpsuits?

He dances while he waits.

"I do not have jumpsuits, I am afraid," the vendobot replies. "But there is a vendobot near here which does. I will inform your Mobile Tile."

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 27, 2011 22:01

I watch in amusement as the chaos ensues. I check the photo as well, I hope it came out well!

written by Malkom on Jun 27, 2011 22:08

"Look: I've already done some commerce. That satisfies your directive. I'm going to take a nap."

I sit down on the tile, feeling around my jumpsuit for anything sharp. If I find it, I cut off a strip of my jumpsuit, cut it in half, and shove the halves in my ears. I then lay back on the tile and close my eyes. If I don't find it, I jam my thumbs in my ears, lay back on the tile and close my eyes. In either case, I ignore the advertising effortlessly.

written by Speeder on Jun 27, 2011 22:19

I try to break free from Cryo grasp and then go help Jam.

"Thanks L4!"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 27, 2011 22:36

I try to back away from the bot too, assuming I haven't already been dragged along for the ride.

I attempt to assist in retrieving Jam.

written by Jam on Jun 28, 2011 00:46

I feel an intense pain, and scream in agony.

"AUUUUGH!!!"

I try to run from the idea bot and figure out where I'm injured. I notice everything seems black...

"I CAN'T SEE! MY EYES!!"

I grab at my face, and try to see if my eyes are still there... Maybe I just had my eyes closed, and was confused from the pain? 😊

written by Cryoburner on Jun 28, 2011 00:56

"Onward, my faithful shocking and spinning and poking idea bot!"

I try helping Jam-Y and Speed-Y up onto the idea bot, along with anyone else who seems to want to come along for the ride.

"With this idea bot, we'll get there much faster!"⁵¹¹

⁵¹¹ Malkom: (OOC: LAWL @ Cryo's post! 😊)

written by Gligar on Jun 28, 2011 11:13

Debriefing Room 27

The squealing barrel continues to squeal. Strangely (or perhaps not, given the history of squealing barrels being so unpredictable) it hasn't exploded yet, Azir-R watches as things unfold. He also checks his picture. It's pretty good.

Speed-Y attempts to break free from Cryo's grasp, but Cryo suddenly demonstrates almost-treasonous levels of grip.

L4-O attempts it too, and is more successful in tearing himself from Cryo's grip. He goes over to Jam-Y.

Jam-Y is screaming in agony from the bot's manipulator. He tries to run, but ends up tripping over L4-O. For some reason, he can't see.

He yells in frustration, and moves his hand up to his face to check.

A quick examination shows that his eyes are, in fact, closed. Also, his arm really hurts.⁵¹² Cryo, of course, doesn't notice that he's being shocked and burned. He doesn't seem to mind that it really hurts.

He tries to pull Speed-Y onto the bot, but lacks the energy to do so. That might have something to do with his injuries... I mean, he's leaking blood all over the bot.

John-R asks, "Should I..." He taps his head, and points at Cryo. "Or should we stick to the plan and get him to the Termination Centre?"

One of the techs answers, "It probably doesn't matter by now..."

His colleague interrupts: "Idea Bot C-481! You are malfunctioning. Shut down immediately! Or you will be shut down by force!"

Then guess what happens? A docbot comes trundling in, carefully avoiding Mango's body (and the squealing barrel). "Did someclone order a docbot?"

JHT Sector Main cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Malkom-R argues that he already bought something, therefore the tile's directive is fulfilled, before sticking his fingers in his ears and lying back.

The tile just increases its volume to match. "That does not count, citizen. The can of B3 was used for treasonous purposes. Internal Security will, no doubt, be very interested in the destruction of their spybot. I have taken the liberty of altering course. Perhaps you would like those happy pills?"

⁵¹² Gligar: (OOC: That's funny, take 1pp 😊) before Internal Security questions you?"

It starts playing its ad for happy pills at maximum volume.

Behind the tile, more and more spybots starts swarming.

written by Speeder on Jun 28, 2011 11:27

I again attempt to free myself from Cryo, then I have time to say.

"Hey people, we have a squealing barrel in the room, I think we should kinda get away from it."

Then I run away from the squealing barrel, but also away from Ideabot/Cryo fused mangled object.

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 28, 2011 12:16

"Squealing Bar-- oh no.."

If I am close enough to the barrel that i feel I can safely throw it away from everyone I will. If not, I grab whoevers closest to me and bolt far away from it.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 28, 2011 12:34

I fall over from being tripped on. I struggle beneath Jam-Y and try to squirm away from Mango's body.

written by 4616599 on Jun 28, 2011 15:00

I continue dancing, more vigorously.

written by Jam on Jun 28, 2011 15:50⁵¹³

I try to get out of range of the squealing barrel...

"Oh, hey, I can see! Ow, but my arm hurts..."

Once I'm a safe distance away from the squealing barrel, I try to assess how much damage the gash on my arm did...

"Oh, a docbot! Here, I have a gash on my arm..."

Wait, go help Derek-G first! He was shot by a laser. I tried to stop the bleeding, but he probably has internal injuries..."

written by Cryoburner on Jun 28, 2011 16:19

"I will help you inspect and maintain your favorite idea bot!"

If the panel on top is removable, I remove it, then examine the insides.

written by Malkom on Jun 28, 2011 17:26

I effortlessly ignore the advertising. "I should be very happy to be questioned for an unintentional crime, which was actually caused by you! You were the one who persuaded me to purchase the can of B3, so you are responsible for my possession of said can of B3. If I hadn't possessed said can of B3, I wouldn't have been able to throw it onto the spybot. Therefore, you are directly responsible for the can of B3 hitting the spybot, because if you hadn't sold me any B3, there wouldn't be any B3 to hit the spybot in the first place!"

I grin. "I'd be very happy to explain this all to IntSec. I'm sure they'd be glad to know how you caused the destruction of their spybot! You don't want that! You'd be destroying Computer property by allowing yourself to be destroyed by IntSec! Therefore, it's treason for you to go to IntSec, since you will be destroyed!"

⁵¹³ Jam: (ooc: Yay! 😊)

written by Gligar on Jun 28, 2011 21:23⁵¹⁴

JHT Sector Main cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Joris-R continues dancing, more vigorously now.

"Citizen," the tile says, "you have exceeded your allotted time at this vendobot. Please step back onto me to continue towards your destination."

Overhead, some spybots break off from the swarm following Malkom-R and home in on Joris-R.

Speaking of Malkom-R... he is utterly failing at ignoring the advertising. "Maximum volume" means that it drowns out his own attempts to tell it that it is responsible for him throwing the can away.

But it still hears him. "You are incorrect, citizen. I an merely following orders. It was you who threw the B3 away. This is a clear sign of unhappiness. Unhappiness is treason. Therefore, you are a traitor. I see no further reason to continue this conversation. I will now hand you over to the swarm of spybots following us. Goodbye."

And with that, the spybots begin to surround Malkom-R. He finds himself lifted from the tile and across the expanse below.

It is now clear that this isn't even a corridor, but a large void, perhaps that below Central Subsector.

The spybots pick up speed, heading towards what must be an entrance into one of the surrounding subsectors.

Debriefing Room 27

Speed-Y tries, once again, to get away from Cryo. This time, he's more successful.

He notices the squealing barrel, and tells people that, perhaps, they should move away from it.

He proceeds to run away from both it and the bot. This equates to "outside the room".

Azir-R's face falls. Seeing that the barrel is too far away for him to reach, he takes the most logical course of action: he grabs Lucas-R and runs, joining Speed-Y in the corridor.

L4-O falls over, but is able to get out from under Jam-Y. He is also able to get out of the room.

⁵¹⁴ Gligar: (OOC: Who wants to tell me what Malkom did wrong there? 🤖 I am certain that I have covered that exact thing in the past.)

Jam-Y opens his eyes and tries to get out of range. As he does, he asks for medical assistance. Though, as he joins the others outside, he prioritises Derek-G.

"Very well," the docbot replies. "I will attend to you after I have attended to this Derek-G." It goes over to the stricken GREEN.

Seeing how everyone else has left, John-R shrugs and joins them.

Cryo, however, decides once again to ignore everything. As the techs shrug and leave, and the idea bot gyrates towards Mango and his squealing barrel, Cryo attempts to open the bot's upper panel, i.e. the one where all the sparks are coming from.

On doing so, he sees several circuit boards, several of which are sparking. Unfortunately, he finds that he has absolutely no idea what any of them do.

The barrel continues to squeal.

written by Speeder on Jun 28, 2011 23:08

I see Derek and Docbot still inside the room, then I look to others and ask.

"Ok, who want to risk save Derek and the Docbot?"

I rush to them (still avoiding Cryo and Ideabot...) and start to drag Derek (trying to not hurt him more in the process) to out of the room.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 28, 2011 23:18

I sigh and rush back in to assist Speed in escorting Derek-G out.

written by Malkom on Jun 28, 2011 23:30

I sit back and enjoy the ride. "Thank you so much," I say to a nearby spybot. "I'd hate to have to walk all this way..."

I start talking seductively to the spybots, then suddenly thrash and try to get loose, hoping that they will be distracted enough to let me fall. If that fails, I suddenly punch the nearest spybot hard in the sensor area.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 29, 2011 00:04⁵¹⁵

"Let's go, idea bot!"

I try manually rotating the idea bot's sensor dome to counteract the spinning.

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 29, 2011 00:40

I follow the team back in to assist, only since no one grabbed the docbot I'll lead it out.

written by Jam on Jun 29, 2011 00:46⁵¹⁶

I watch Cryo and the idea bot getting closer and closer to squealing barrel. Wouldn't it be nice if it chose now to explode... Wow, I'm getting really tired...

⁵¹⁵ CRYOBURNER: (I seem to recall Mango-R falling near his squealing barrel outside the room's doorway. Did it somehow end up in the room now? : P)

⁵¹⁶ JAM: (ooc: Er... Is it "Don't assume actions will succeed"? :P)

...

Then the barrel explodes, tearing through Cryo and the idea bot. No other clones get hurt. Now we don't have to bring Cryo to the Termination Center. How convenient.

Feeling rather good, I look down at my arm, and see that it is already healed. In fact, L4-O's leg seems to have also unbroken itself, and Derek-G is looking better than ever. How convenient.

I walk to the lift hall at the end of the radial corridor (with the rest of the team following me, of course). The lift is already there, so I get inside. Of course, Joris-R and Malkom-R are already waiting inside, and they have brought B3. How convenient.

Inside the lift, I find several boxes of YELLOW laser pistol barrels, with 'For: Jam-Y' written on the side. Someone must have known how much I like laser barrels... Feeling really good, I put all the barrels into my pockets, and they all fit. How convenient.

After a few secondcycles, the lift arrives at the bunker, because this lift can travel from subsector to subsector. How convenient.

There is a swarm of commies at the bunker, so I reach into my pocket and pull out a large warbot, and let it loose on the commies... Of course, I've had it the whole time, and noclone knew about it (including Gilgar). How convenient

However, that turns out to be unnecessary, as the commies take one look at me, and their brains decide to save me the trouble and just explode by themselves. And I didn't even have to do anything. How convenient.

The surrounding loyal citizens then lead me to the YELLOW dormitory that was built while we were away. I lay on a bed, and fall asleep immediately.

Nothing interrupts me while I sleep.

How convenient.⁵¹⁷

written by 4616599 on Jun 29, 2011 09:37

"Hello, spybots! How's Intsec doing? Not infiltrated, I hope?"

I happily hop back on my tile, still dancing

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 29, 2011 10:01

I wonder what makes me think I'm right... After all, it could be a trick. But if I'm right, where does that leave everyone else? What has become of them?

I feel a surge of pain.

Pain... outside of life.

*This is something new. I don't think anyone taught me how to handle this...*

I wait...

⁵¹⁷ JAM: (ooc: In other words, I stare at Cryo and the idea bot a bit, then zone out, somehow fall asleep, and have a pretty awesome and perhaps a bit self-centered dream...)

written by Gligar on Jun 29, 2011 11:50⁵¹⁸

Outer Radial Corridor

Speed-Y asks if anyone is willing to go in and rescue Derek-G and the docbot. As it happens, both L4-O and Azir-R are willing. The three rush in.

Jam-Y stares at Cryo and the idea bot, before falling asleep. I'm sure he's having an awesome dream.⁵¹⁹

Debriefing Room 27

By this time, the jackobot has trundled over. It seems that Derek-G does indeed have internal injuries. "I will need to have him moved to the nerest medical bay," the docbot says. "I have already called for a stretcher. In the meantime, let us attempt to avoid that barrel." It looks over at it.

Whereupon it explodes.

Speed-Y, L4-O, and Azir-R all suffer serious injuries. The docbot is destroyed. Derek-G and Cryo are both killed.

And the idea bot? Unfortunately, since Cryo opened the upper panel, it suffers major damage to its bot brain and is no longer able to function.

The jackobot is unharmed, except for being comically stained black.

As for the rest of the room... well, the nice stereoscopic vidscreens are ruined.

I'm pretty sure Mango will pay for this by being completely repatterned.

JHT Sector Main cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Malkom-R seems to enjoy being carried by the spybots. But suddenly he lashes out.

Of course, by this time, he's already at the subsector entrance, and is simply dropped half a metre to the floor.

The spybots leave.

The sound of a jackboots makes him look up. As it turns out, four BLUE goons have come to collect him.

As has an INDIGO commander. He's the kind of person who expects instant obedience. Any hesitation, or any hint of disobedience, will be met with... let's just say pain.

"You," he says. "Come with me."

Meanwhile, Joris-R has returned to his tile, still dancing. The tile responds, "Please do not make sudden movements, citizen. Keep your feet on the tile at all times." It begins floating towards another vendobot.

written by Speeder on Jun 29, 2011 12:11

"Ok, I failed to rescue Derek-G, clearly."

⁵¹⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: Clearly, Mango landed inside the room. Any evidence to the contrary was obviously planted by F-Class Mutants to deceive you. 🤖)

⁵¹⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: Filled with lampshades, no doubt. 😊)

I try to figure how much of me is still attached to me.

"Someone call a army of docbots please?"

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 29, 2011 12:22

"Yeah, definitely need a couple dozen more docbots!" I grasp my injured [whatever].

written by Lightning4 on Jun 29, 2011 12:51

I check to see whether I'm even conscious first. That's pretty important.

"Uuhhhhhnnnn" I whine and cough a few times.

"Remind me to term-cough-inate Mango-R next time we see him." I moan.

I proceed to see how much I'm able to move, and check the extent of my injuries.

written by Malkom on Jun 29, 2011 15:06

I give a big, silly grin at the INDIGO commander. "OOhooHoo! You look just like those Internal Petcurity-- or was it Tinpernal Thecurity-- goons... or was it toons?? Throm Froubleshooter Meam Tandathory..... That wath a greath film! AW Oooohooohoooo Ohoohoo! Oooooo! YESYESYES.... Hahahahaha..."

I start cackling maniacally, then suddenly fall down on the floor with my eyes closed and don't move at all. I also stop cackling when I fall.⁵²⁰ written by Megagun on Jun 29, 2011 15:57⁵²¹

"Noooooooooooo, the Mandatory Team Vidscreens!!!!!"

"Noooooooooooo, my idea bot brain-buddy!!!"

written by Jam on Jun 29, 2011 16:53

I wake up suddenly, horribly disoriented... What happened? One secondcycle I was lying in a nice soft YELLOW bed, and now I'm back outside of debriefing...

It takes me a few secondcycles to sort out my thoughts, and I realize I must have fallen asleep and started dreaming... Weird.

Then I see smoke, and notice there are clones missing... They must have went back inside the debriefing room, and then the laser pistol barrel exploded!

"Oh no!"

I run inside and try to figure out how much damage the explosion did...

"John-R, call a docbot! Speed-Y, L4-O, and Azir-R are seriously injured! We might even need a few docbots!"

I try to figure out who is the most injured, and then try to use one of my first aid kits to stop the bleeding...

⁵²⁰ MALKOM: (ooc: there's no reason these actions shouldn't succeed... other than me being zapped by BLUE and INDIGO lasers...)

⁵²¹ MEGAGUN: (OOC: so err, can / still function? After all, the idea bot brain is the ORIGINAL idea bot's brain, right?)

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 29, 2011 20:06

What am I waiting for? A welcome back party?

As much as that would be a somewhat pleasant thing, I don't think that is the case. Not enough focus on what is really important right now.

I bet they're having FUN right now. If I had a spare singular credit to bet with, that is.

written by Gligar on Jun 29, 2011 21:16

Debriefing room 27

Or what's left of it. Looks like a few cameras were taken out too.

Speed-Y tries to see how much of himself is left. Well, I think that's his foot over there, but the rest of him seems intact. If a little ragged.

He requests that someone request a large number of docbots. Azir-R agrees, examining his broken leg.

L4-O quickly ascertains that he's conscious. Though, he is in a lot of pain. It's really hard to breathe. He tries to get up, but just gets dizzy and falls over again. Though at least his legs seem to be intact.

The jackobot replies, "I have taken the liberty of requesting additional docbots."

The idea bot... well, it's no longer functioning. But the additional processors seem to be at least partly working. Leeroy-O's voice rather sluggishly expresses its dismay over the demise of his friend, before something else sparks and the bot falls silent.⁵²²

Outer Radial Corridor

Jam-Y wakes up, and is confused for a moment. wasn't he in a bed... oh wait! That was a dream.

He looks distraught at all the smoke and injured citizens in the room. He runs back in, followed by one of the techs.

While Jam-Y checks on the clones, the tech checks on the idea bot. He practically yells out in anger as he sees the damage. He addresses the dead Cryo. "You IDIOT! You traitors are all alike! You have NO respect for Computer Property, and should all be THROWN! IN! TO! THE! REACTOR!" He kicks the corpse to punctuate his words.

"I would caution against simply throwing him into the reactor," the jackobot replies, in the same manner it always does. "May I suggest throwing him into the atomic converter instead?"

Meanwhile, Jam-Y has called for John-R to call some docbots. He is told, "I already requested some while you were asleep, citizen," by the jackobot.

written by Azirphaeli on Jun 29, 2011 21:38

I lay around in pain till medical aid arrives.

⁵²² GLIGAR: (OOC: Yes, the original bot brain is kaput. Your additional processors are still somewhat working, but they're now unregulated.)

written by Speeder on Jun 29, 2011 22:09

I look for a while at my foot.

Then I look at the mad techs.

"Hey you two, you have any idea if the projects about robotic limbs are still working? Or if they are already available commercially? I never checked, since I never needed and I considered it only interesting, but I guess that now I would need a foot."

I then look at Jackobot.

"I agree, atomic converter sounds a much nicer idea. Say, if we throw a alive Cryo there, he will feel lots of impossible to ignore pain before dieing?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 29, 2011 23:23

I simply stay on the ground this time and moan in pain.

"At least cough my legs aren't any more damaged than they were..."

I fight to remain conscious.

written by Jam on Jun 30, 2011 00:40

"Oh, thanks!" I say to the jackobot.

Then I work on stopping the bleeding where Speed-Y's foot used to be attached to his leg...⁵²³ written by Mingamango181 on Jun 30, 2011 05:28⁵²⁴

Left step. To the right. Left again. Walk. Walk. Move. Talk. Deceive. Escape.

If only it were that simple...

written by Gligar on Jun 30, 2011 12:47⁵²⁵

Debriefing Room 27

Azir-R lies there.

Speed-Y looks at his severed foot, and then at the techs. He asks about robotic limbs.

The not-kicking-Cryo tech answers, "I believe that they're still in the experimental phase. I'd have to clear it with the design team and our mutual friend, but I'm pretty sure that additional testers might be needed at some point."

Speaking of the kicking-Cryo tech, he tries to move away from the corpse, and discovers that it is grabbing his leg. "Aaaargh! Zombie!" He grabs his laser pistol and discharges pretty much the entire barrel into the corpse.

⁵²³ MALKOM: (OOC: Ignor'd)

(OOC: Just use my previous post, will you?)

⁵²⁴ MINGAMANGO181: (OOC: As much as I could, that'd really make me look a bit silly... So I probably shouldn't.)

⁵²⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: Okay, that's enough now, Mango. You can dispense with the "cool" markup. It's getting annoying.

Also, I'm getting an overwhelming sense of deja vu here... I'm pretty sure I've already said something along the lines of "I'm not ignoring you, I simply didn't see your post" before. Sigh.)

Jam-Y supplies what he believes is the correct sector code, though he offers to check. He tells Speed-Y about L4-O.

Speed-Y asks whether DOF is one of the Speed-Y's because if so, that's him. The tech checks. "Yes, here you are. Speed-Y-DOF. I'll send off the request as soon as I get back to the lab. On, and that reminds me. Docbot? When treating Speed-Y, can you check for possible incompatibility with R&D prosthetics? He has volunteered for testing."

"Of course," the docbot replies, "once I receive the authorisation forms."

"You'll get them as soon as I've done with them," the tech replies, a little impatience showing in his voice.

Interrogation room

Malkom-R loudly proclaims that the docbot must be a commie. "Silence, citizen," the docbot says. "I am simply injecting you with truth serum. There is no need to panic."

A moment later, the INDIGO asks, "Now, let's try again. Exactly why did you purchase a B3, only to throw it at my favorite spybot, causing it to fall to the ground and break apart? Are you aware that it may have landed on the head of the noted Funball player, Bob-B-JHT-4? Answer me!"

To the GREEN, he adds, "Hold it there for a while. Let him sweat."

written by Malkom on Jul 01, 2011 23:46

I scowl and stutter. "I bought th-the B3 because the t-tile w-wouldn't stop advertising at m-me until I b-bought it's crapload of t-trash. I t-threw it away b-because I felt l-like a big, green s-snake." I look kind of woozy, like I'm drunk... "I feel really w-weird." I pause a moment. "W-what's F-F-Funball? W-Where's my PPC- I m-mean PDC..."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 02, 2011 00:17

I cough.

"That's good."

I grit my teeth in a flash of pain.

"Hopefully this cough won't take too long..."

written by Jam on Jul 02, 2011 00:58

I look to Azir-R's docbot...

"Amputate?!"

I start shaking, and slowly back away from the docbot. I mumble quietly to myself at the same time...

"No... Anything but that... Not my poor hand... Don't cut it off..."

I reflexively cradle my shooting hand, and try to shield it from any chainsaws that might be headed my way...

written by Speeder on Jul 02, 2011 01:39

I look at the Docbots.

"Also, my foot was not destroyed, only severed, can it be attached back?"

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 02, 2011 05:14

"Ampu-- oh dear." I look longingly at my leg, though now a bloody mess, and think of the many great times we've had together.

"See what you can do, if you need to remove it... I was hearing something about volunteering for a prosthetic limb or something..."

and follow that with

"Ow ow ow"

written by Gligar on Jul 02, 2011 13:35

Interrogation room

Malkom-R claims that he only bought the "trash" to stop the tile from advertising at him. This made him feel like a "green snake" so he threw it away.

The BLUE goons look at each other. The GREEN looks shocked.

"So," the INDIGO snarls, "you think that B3 is trash, do you?" He nods at the GREEN, who raises the temperature. "And you somehow know about... snakes. Probably more than I do. How do you know about snakes?" He nods at the GREEN again. It gets even hotter.

"Warning," the docbot says. "Temperature is exceeding safe operating levels. I will withdraw before lasting damage occurs." It does so.

It's really hot in here.

Debriefing Room 27

L4-O continues coughing. He hopes that whatever the docbot wants to do won't take long. "Very well," the docbot replies. "Let us begin." The docbot gets to work.

Speed-Y points out that his foot still exists. He asks if it could be reattached? A docbot asks to see it, and pokes at Speed-Y's stump. "It may be possible, if it is not too damaged. However, you would lose some function."

Azir-R looks longingly at his leg. It would make him sad to lose it. He tells the docbot to do what it can. He also mentions what he's heard about prosthetics.

"Unfortunately, " the docbot replies, "you may not be of sufficient clearance to take part in the tests." It revs up its chainsaw, and... slice.

written by Jam on Jul 02, 2011 14:35

I hear the buzz of the chainsaw.

"No... NO! NOOOO!"

I back away in a blind panic, and fall to the floor. I lie curled in a fetal position.

"Horrible... Cutting... Pain... Chainsaw... My poor hand... It hurts... Don't take my hand..."

As I hear the chainsaw slicing through flesh, I cover my ears and scream at the top of my lungs.

"AAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAAH!!!"

Feeling a bit foolish, I look around... Hmm... Everyone is busy getting fixed up by the docbots... And I'm lying here doing nothing...

"Erm... I'll just go and try to figure out where Joris-O and Malkom-R went... I'd have thought they'd be back by now..."

written by Malkom on Jul 02, 2011 22:06

I start to convulse. "OWOWOW OW OW OWIE OW! SOMETHING IS HITTING ME IN THE MIND WITH A TEN TON DRILL! OWOW! SOMEONE'S TRYING TO RIP MY HEAD APART! OOOOWWWWWWWWWWWWWWWWWWWWWWWWWWW!!! HALP, THERE'S SOMEONE TRYING TO GET INTO MY MIND! KOMMIES! COMMIEZ! C....."

Rules (updated 11 July 2011)

- You are all playing this game. Yes, even you.
- Stats will be rolled up as and when they are needed. For the start, there will be no character sheets since nothing's been defined.
- There's are no time limits involved. I will post updates when I consider there to be enough material.
- Perversity points ~~will work as before~~: Players start with 10 and can win them for interesting posts. They can be spent to influence in-game events, such as to make something happen, or to help or hinder another player.
- Trolls, munchkins, minmaxers, etc. etc. are classed as Commie Mutant Traitors and will be erased.
- Those who haven't taken control of their character yet, and those who have been out of the game for a while, should send me a PM indicating that they wish to do so.
- Please avoid formatting your text in such a way that it is not visible. If you wish to send something to me alone, please send me a PM. Remember that the text of this thread is being backed up into a local file. Invisible text is included without its formatting.
- You should not assume that things will succeed (except for certain trivial things). For instance, if I don't mention an object, it probably doesn't exist. If I've mentioned it before and you've returned to its location, it might still be there, but it might have moved. Similarly, if someone's trying to punch you, for instance, don't just say "I dodge, and hit him back". Both of those thing require dice rolls on my end, and the dice might decide to hate you. (Dice have a mind of their own sometimes. It's best to appease them.) A better way of phrasing the example might be "I attempt to dodge. If I succeed, I try to return the punch."
- Don't wait for everyone else to post. If you want to post, do so. Do try not to post too many times per turn, though.

My eyes start rolling crazily and I slump into my chair. I mumble faintly, "Commie..." before I stop responding... My eyes continue to roll, however.

Now, if I was watching myself, I'd find that a bit unnerving. Wouldn't you?

written by Megagun on Jul 02, 2011 22:18

"Ah. I see. Or rather, I don't. You see, my image input sensors seem to be damaged. I forsee that someone will have to enlighten me by acting as my eyes until we can get mine fixed.

So, what's going on now?"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 03, 2011 00:20

I... lie there I guess. I remain semi-conscious for now, coughing occasionally.

written by Gligar on Jul 03, 2011 13:43

Debriefing Room 27

Realising that the docbot was nowhere near him, Jam-Y calms down. He looks around. Nobody seems to have reacted to his outburst. Except maybe the corpse of Cryo, which is still inching its way towards him. Perhaps you might want to do something about it?

In the meantime, though, Jam-Y decides to look for the others. He thought they'd be back by now.

Interrogation room

Malkom-R hasn't moved. Well, he has, if you count convulsions. Bob-GHG must be hitting him pretty hard.

Eventually, though, he calms down. Bob grins. "That was fun!" he exclaims.

The INDIGO doesn't share his enthusiasm. "Will he answer my questions?"

"Sure," Bob replies. "I think he'll say anything."

"Good. Now Malkom-R, let's continue. Why is it that you hate B3?"

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Joris-R still hasn't finished dancing on his tile. That cloud of spybots hovers overhead, as if waiting.

Debriefing Room 27

Leeroy, once again, asks what's going on. He explains that his visual inputs aren't working.

"The docbots are still working" a tech replies.

The one working on Azir-R finishes its work. "All done."

L4-O waits for his docbot to finish.

Speed-Y's docbot also moves back. "Treatment is complete."

written by 4616599 on Jul 03, 2011 14:53

I clutch at my head. "Oh, just been feeling a bit strange!"

I look at the vendobot.

"But two red jumpsuits please! On the double! Two! Double! Ha ha ha."

Once the vendobot has dispensed the jumpsuits, I tie one around my waist like a belt, and drape another around my neck like a winter scarf. Whatever winter is.

written by Malkom on Jul 03, 2011 15:30

I wail, "Bee Three is UTTER CRAP IT TASTES HORRIBLE ITS TOTAL SHIT NO ONE IN THEIR RIGHT MIND WOULD DRINK BEE THREE, NOT THE LEAST TO SAY THAT IT ALWAYS TURNS PEOPLE INTO BIG, GREEN, HORRIBLE, SLIMY, AWFULLY HISSY SNAKES!"

Pause.

"Now, why did I say that?" I contemplate, then suddenly remember something. "BUZZZZZZZZZZEE! GIVE ME BUZZY! NAOW!" I try to jerk out of the seatbelts. "I WANT MY BUZZY!" If I succeed in getting out, I hit the glass as hard as I can with my fists. "BUZZY!"

written by Jam on Jul 03, 2011 15:34

"Vatcrap! Malkom-R has a mutant in his head! He must have been captured by commie mutant traitors! I bet they're interrogating him or something!"

I worry a bit, not so much for Malkom-R, but for the important mission details he might be forced to tell the commies...

"I'll try to reverse whatever it is the mutant did to him... I'm not sure how well it will work though, he's pretty far away..."

I concentrate...⁵²⁹

written by Speeder on Jul 03, 2011 16:45

I look at Jam.

"Again? Why? How I hate commie mutants."

Then I look at the docbots.

I will go with robot foot. Say, you know how to store my organic foot? I mean, any of you know a storage place, and how much I have to pay to put my foot there? Just in case the robot foot fails..."

⁵²⁹ MALKOM: (ooc: I love it when something like this happens! 🤪 Such wonderful mix-ups!)

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 03, 2011 17:48

"Arrrrrrrrrg."

The pain sucks, but since I was already in great pain it wasn't utterly horrific.

Ok it was. I am passed out.

written by Gligar on Jul 03, 2011 21:55

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Oh hey! Joris-R has finished his dance. He clutches at his head... that headache is returning...

He orders two RED jumpsuits. "Here you go," the vendobot replies, and dispenses two packages, each containing one jumpsuit.

Joris-R opens them and wears them in a... rather unorthodox fashion, tying one round his waist and draping one round his neck.

Of course, that leaves him with two pairs of regulation boots...

No matter. His tile says, "You have now met the minimum commerce quota for todaycycle. You may continue your experience, or continue your journey. Which do you choose?"

Interrogation room

Malkom-R yells that B3 tastes bad, and that nobody in their right mind should drink it, because it turns everyone into "snakes".

The INDIGO sighs. But Malkom-R is not done. He once again demands Buzzy.

"SHUT UP ABOUT BUZZY!" yells a BLUE goon. "ANSWER THE QUESTIONS, TRAITOR!"

Malkom-R tries to break out of his restraints, but finds that they're refusing to break.

"S-s-sir," Bob-GHG stammer, "he's s-s-somehow forgotten about my poking him! I'm gonna try again." He concentrates...

"You're wrong Malkom-R!" the INDIGO exclaims. "Everyone drinks B3! Noclone in their right mind hates B3! Therefore, you are not in your right mind! Therefore, you should be re-educated in the ways of B3. How about... remedial experimental B3 testing?" His expression makes it clear that he's enjoying this.

"Oh, and we clearly need to do something about this 'Buzzy'. It's clearly a code-name for your treasonous leader. Now, answer this: what is your secret society?"

Malkom-R feels Bob-GHG in his mind, doing things...

Debriefing Room 27

Jam-Y realises that Malkom-R has been captured, but doesn't seem to know by who. He assumes them to be commie mutant traitors... well, there's one mutant there, that much he knows. And he's in Malkom-R's mind. He'll try and fight it.

He concentrates hard enough that he fails to notice the corpse of Cryo finish crawling towards him, reach towards his boot, and start trying to chew it.

Speed-Y looks at Jam-Y (noticing Cryo's corpse) and expresses dismay that mutants are happening again.

To the docbots, he asks if there's a way to store his severed foot. "There is a cold storage facility," a docbot replies, "Storage costs 100 credits per weekcycle."

One of the tech's PDCs beeps. Checking it, the tech says, "Good news, Speed-Y: you've been accepted onto the testing program. You're to go for fitting next weekcycle."

L4-O's docbot finishes its work. "Treatment complete."

L4-O feels somewhat short of breath, but at least breathing is easier now.

Azir-R has passed out.

written by Speeder on Jul 03, 2011 22:05

I think a bit.

"What are my weekly wages? I have no idea if I can, or not, pay 100 credits per weekcycle."

Then I frown at the corpse, I attempt to move to it, and I start punching it (I would kick it, but the instrument for that is kinda lacking). "Why you do not die already?"

I punch a bit more.

"DIEEEEE!!"

I start to get excited with that, I start to punch in a kinda violent and primal manner

"WHY YOU REFUSE TO DIE? WHYHYY? I HATE YOU!!! I HATE YOU!! YOU MANAGE TO MAKE ME UNHAPPY EVEN DEAD!!! WHY."

punch

"YOU"

punch

"DO"

punch

"NOT"

punch

"DIEEEEEEEEEEE!!"

I start to strangle the... zombie?

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 03, 2011 22:15

Somewhere between the life and death, I decide to take a nice stroll around, while I still can. I've got the time. Nothing really can stop me.

Hmm...

written by Jam on Jul 03, 2011 22:27

"Oh, nevermind... Malkom-R is just being interrogated by IntSec... They must have brought in a mutant to persuade him to tell the truth..."

I told the mutant that Malkom-R might need a little extra 'encouragement'. Heh... I wish I were there to see him be tortu-I mean, interrogated..."

I focus a bit more, then my concentration is broken by Speed-Y screaming in my ear at me... (I completely fail to notice Cryo's corpse has somehow crawled over to me, and that Speed-Y is actually yelling at Cryo)

"You want me to die?! I didn't know you hated me that much... Well, if you want me to leave that bad, sir, then I guess I'll be going. Goodbye."

I turn, and run out the door... I'm sure the tears streaming down my face are a good indication that I am far far below mandatory happiness levels...

I start running down the corridor, and don't stop until I reach the end...

written by Malkom on Jul 03, 2011 22:50

I start wailing. "OWOW! THE PAIN IN MY HEAD, HELP! OH BUZZY, MY POOR CHAINSAW! I'M NEVER GOING TO SEE YOU AGAIN!"

This very might well be true: I feel excruciating pain in my head. Suddenly it gets much worse. I pass out.⁵³⁰

written by Lightning4 on Jul 04, 2011 00:15

I struggle back to my feet.

"Thanks, docbot... though I still feel a bit woozy."

I hold my head for a moment, lightheaded from shortness of breath.

"What did you do anyway?"

written by 4616599 on Jul 04, 2011 06:00

I look at the boots.

"Oh, a nice headache suppressant! Thanks!"

I wear one as a hat, two as boots and another two on my hands.

"With these, no normal mutant can stop me!"

"And that's all from me. What a Fun ride. Uh...I'd go, but are there any weapons around here?"

written by Gligar on Jul 04, 2011 14:14

Debriefing Room 27

Speed-Y tries to recall his wages, before recalling that, at the standard pay scale, he should be earning three thousand credits per monthcycle. (Of course, expenses typically eat up the vast majority of that anyway.)

⁵³⁰ MALKOM: (OOC: So you're enjoying this, Mister Goon? Well, I am too! This is FUN!)

Then he looks at Cryo-s corpse, currently trying to eat Jam-Y's boot, and snaps. In between punching at the corpse and strangling it, he yells at it, demanding to know why it won't die.

At some point in this, the corpse starts chewing on his hand.

Still failing to notice the zombie, Jam-Y reports that Malkom-R is being interrogated by IntSec.

He focuses for a moment... but then notices Speed-Y yelling about someone not dying.

He immediately jumps to the conclusion that Speed-Y was yelling at him... and flees the room, sobbing.

Thunderous silence.

One of the techs finally explains for Leeroy. "The corpse of Cryo seems to have animated and was attacking Jam-Y. Speed-Y intercepted, but, as you just heard, Jam-Y failed to notice, and thought Speed-Y was talking to him."

The other adds, "Now you're going to have to deal with that as well."

L4-O finally gets to his feet and inquires about the treatment. "Your lungs were damaged," the docbot replies. "I have patched them up, but at a cost of reduced capacity."

The Hub

Jam-Y ends up here, in the midst of tables and vendobots.

There's also a Happiness Enforcement squad. "Smile, citizen! Keep smiling!"

Interrogation room

Malkom-R keeps waiting for a while before passing out.

"Standard re-education is too good for this one," the INDIGO mutters.

"Oh," Bob-GHG says. "Jam-Y-JYR says hi. He's with Malkom-R's Troubleshooter team, and says that they've had trouble with Malkom-R before."

"Mutants. How typical."

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Joris-R sorts out the boots... in an odd way.

He still hasn't noticed that, though he's wearing jumpsuits, he's technically still out of uniform.

Incidentally, boots don't work all that effectively as headache suppressants.

He asks about weapons. "Sorry, citizen, there are no weapons available."

written by Speeder on Jul 04, 2011 14:23

I frown at Jam running away.

"Ok, you are making EVEN MORE unhappy Mr. Zombie!"

I retreat, removing my hand from his mouth.

"EEEW, dead person saliva!"

Then I attempt to shoot his head 5 times, if his head still exists, then I attempt to stuff the pistol barrel on his mouth and shoot again.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 04, 2011 14:27

"Aww. But... thanks."

I frown, still stabilizing myself.

"Will it get better? I kind of want to stay a prime for a while yet."

I pause and think.

"At least... I hope I'm a prime. I'm not entirely sure after that-"

I'm forced to take a breath.

"-brainscrub. Everything is all... fuzzy."

"I suppose I'll have to get used to this. Breath-" breath

"-ing faster maybe."

written by Malkom on Jul 04, 2011 14:37

I take a long, shuddering breath and let it out slowly.

There is a long pause. I take a couple of shallow breaths during the next couple of minutecycles, but slowly they get less frequent...

written by Jam on Jul 04, 2011 16:46

I smile, or try to...

"Hey, a vendobot!"

I walk up to one of the vendobots and buy myself a YELLOW B3. Then I sit at one of the tables, and drink it.

Hmm... I wonder why Speed-Y was yelling at me like that... Something about wanting me to die...

Now that I think about it a bit, maybe I was a bit unstable at the moment... I had just been inside the head of a treasonously unhappy clone, maybe some of that unhappiness rubbed off on me? I should guard against that in the future...

I look around at the other clones in the Hub, and keep watch for anyone acting suspiciously...

written by Gligar on Jul 04, 2011 22:29

Debriefing Room 27

Speed-Y frowns Cryo continues to make him unhappy...

He backs off, yanking his hand from Cryo's mouth. It looks like it drew blood, as well...

Then he opens up with his laser pistol. Five times he shoots, hitting Cryo's head with four shots. (The fifth hits the much-mutilated corpse of Mango. Somehow.) There isn't much left afterwards.

L4-O thanks the docbot, and asks if he'll get any better. He wants to remain a Prime for a while longer yet (assuming he is one, after all, there's the whole brainscrub thing...)

"Given time, you should regain some of your lost lung capacity."

Unseen behind everyone, the corpse of Malkom-R-2 begins to stir, damaged as it is...

Interrogation Room

Meanwhile, Malkom-R-3 seems to be having problems. His breathing becomes shallow...

"Alert," the docbot says. "Subject's vital signs are dropping.

"Keep him alive! I want everything I can get from him."

"Understood."

The Hub (P Level)

Jam-Y forces himself to smile, and goes and gets a B3. A nice YELLOW B3. Mmmm.

He sits down to enjoy it. He starts thinking about what Speed-Y said, about wanting death... maybe some of Malkom-R rubbed off on him while he was connected? Perhaps he was a little unstable? Maybe he should try to prevent that next time.

He has a look around. As he does, he spots a pair of clone speaking in hushed tones.

written by Malkom on Jul 04, 2011 23:17

Just before the docbot reaches me, I draw a breath, then tense, then relax, eyes open and glassy. Who can tell if I could be saved or not? Well, I don't know...

Meanwhile, my corpse the one in the briefing room stirs a bit, then starts trying to move towards Jam-Y... once it reaches him, it tries to open as big a wound as it can before getting ZapZapp'd.

written by Speeder on Jul 04, 2011 23:53

I look at my hand, and go to the nearest idling docbot.

"Erm, can you patch up that?"

Then I notice the moving body of Mango.

"FRIEND COMPUTER! WE HAVE TWO ZOMBIES HERE! CAN YOU PLEASE BLAST THEM WITH ULTRAVIOLET LASERS UNTIL THEY REALLY DIE?"

written by Jam on Jul 05, 2011 00:46

Hmm... That looks suspicious...

I quickly note the security clearance of the clones, and if they're wearing registered mutant armbands or not...

written by Lightning4 on Jul 05, 2011 01:10

"I've been damaged enough today, I think I'll-"

"-watch this one from afar."

I try to make my way out of the room before the turrets start shooting. If they can still shoot.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 05, 2011 02:30

I begin to stir from a slumber, then awaken to intense pain. I scream.

written by Gligar on Jul 05, 2011 13:14

Interrogation Room

Malkom-R opens his eyes as the docbot approaches. But it still gets to work, injecting various drugs to make sure he doesn't die just yet.

It switches to electrical stimulation. Zap. Zap. Zap.

That seems to have worked. Somewhat. "He is alive. But I do not know how long he will remain that way. He seems to have over-exerted his body."

"I see. Very well. I recommend that his next clone be fitted with [REDACTED] to keep him under control while he undergoes B3 testing.

"In the meantime: can you hear me, Malkom-R? I want to know your secret society? Who is your contact? How were you recruited?"⁵³¹

Debriefing Room 27

Speed-Y asks a docbot to patch up his hand. The docbot squirts something onto the wound and applies a dressing. It stings.

Then he notices Mango. He yells to our mutual friend to call down the zappy lasers of zombie destruction.

"What, really? Zombies? This is serious."

As it turns out, one of the turrets still works, though its tracking seems erratic. It starts firing at points in the general vicinity of zombies in the room, destroying what's left of Cryo and slicing off one leg of Mango's corpse.

One shot lands near Malkom-R's corpse, which seems to be also animate. And heading for the door.⁵³²

L4-O makes his way out, avoiding Zombie Malkom-R (seriously, they don't move that fast) on his way out, narrowly avoiding the turret.

Behind him, Azir-R comes round, and starts screaming.

A docbot asks, "Is there a problem?"

The Hub

Jam-Y looks at the cones. They're both RED (as is the Hub), and don't seem to be wearing armbands.

One is saying, "Did you get it?"

"Yeah," the other replies. "This is gonna be a blast!"

written by Speeder on Jul 05, 2011 13:27

"Ok, MORE ZOMBIES!"

I look at other people in the room.

⁵³¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: Please remember: Self-termination is treason.)

⁵³² GLIGAR: (OOC: Jam-Y left the room, remember?)

"Everyone out! We need to purge this room, the nanomachines seemly can spread, and seemly Cryo emanate them, we need to seal this up and leave for examination or explode everything."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 05, 2011 13:51

"Somehow I doubt Cryo is behind this."

"But you're right. This many zombies in this short of a time is-"

"-not a very good thing at all. Something is not right."

"I think we need to contact the High Programmer-"

"-and inform him of the situation.

I think our next mission might be sooner than we think..."

I wobble a bit, lightheaded from speaking too much. I clutch my head and regain my bearings.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 05, 2011 14:22

"Yeah, my leg is gone and it HURTS. Ow ow, maybe can I get a crutch and some pain meds?!"

I look around frantically when I hear the sound of turret fire.

"Aren't those guys dead?"

"Ow ow"

written by Malkom on Jul 05, 2011 14:57⁵³³

"I belong to a society where computer programming and having FUN with PDC games is GREAT! I know how to hack networks! I've written three of my own PDC games! The best ones ever! I hacked them into the normal distribution channels! Want to know how? Well, first I performed a dictionary/iterative-word-mutation attack on the channels' primary server, then once I had the password I injected a special hexadecimal fragment that created empty space for my files. After that, I uploaded everything, and then modified the CUML⁵³⁴ appDB file to point three empty spots to my games! Aren't I the clever one?" I grin, then at the next question say, "Contacts? Who needs contacts? Only idiot societies who can't wrap their feeble brains around how to communicate remotely, that's who! I can tune the super-effective Chatomatic text-based chatting software on my PDC into any number of wireless, secret, KKQ-110-encrypted networks, and talk to hundreds of other programmers just like me!" I take a breath. "How was I recruited? NONE OF YOUR BUSINESS, SLIMEBRAIN!"

I start breathing a bit faster, panting in fact. "I don't feel too good... Could someone turn on the heat?" I start to shake. "It's freezing in here! Oh, and why are you wearing those weird, too-colorful suits?" I look down. "Why am I wearing this weird, colorful suit? EUCH! UGH! EUCH!" I try to take off my jumpsuit, but my actions are becoming more sluggish...

⁵³³ MALKOM: (OOC: Shall I just decide what kind of society I want? If so, then take what I said below. If not, then have me state whatever society you think I should belong to. Of course, I might not be telling the truth...)

⁵³⁴ MALKOM: (ooc: Computer Universal Markup Language)

written by 4616599 on Jul 05, 2011 15:12

(looking back at my previous post, I've noticed that my special outfit needed 5 boots(rather than 4). Just assume I leave a hand unbooted, then.)

"Oh dear. I think this suit should repel mutants enough, but I might want something else to be extra sure. Do you happen to have a truncheon, or any pointy things they use in Funball or whatever the DNK sector people were playing earlier?"

written by Jam on Jul 05, 2011 16:34

A blast? Did he mean that literally?

I stand up, and start walking towards a point a couple meters to the side of where the clones are standing. I veer towards them at the last secondcycle.

"Hey Mick-R! Remember me?"

I lower my voice...

"You got the... thing, right? This is gonna be so much fun! What did you say we were going to do with it again?"

written by Gligar on Jul 05, 2011 23:20

Debriefing Room 27

Speed-Y becomes agitated as he notices yet another zombie.

He orders everyone out of the room. It needs to be purged of [DF... actually, you know what? Let's just get to the point. There are nanomachines, and Speed-Y believes that they're spreading, somehow, from Cryo.

L4-O doubts that Cryo is actually behind this. But still this many zombies in such a short time can't be a good thing. The High Programmer needs to be notified. Perhaps the next mission will be sooner than they thought...

He tries to regain his bearings. He's a little lightheaded after all that.

Azir-R complains that his leg is gone and it hurts. He asks for a crutch and some medication.

"I do not have crutches available right now," the docbot replies, "but there is the wheelchair." It points to the one Malkom-R was using. "I am sure that the deceased clone who was using it no longer requires it. As for medications, I can offer visomorpain."

John-R looks though the door. "Oh, sirs, Jam-Y contacted me just now. It seems that being in contact with Malkom-R left some imprint on him. Thought you'd want to know."

Zombie Malkom-R continues crawling for the door.

Zombie Mango seems to be crawling towards the techs, who are in discussion over what to do about the idea bot. They head to the door anyway, pausing to kick Zombie Malkom-R out of the way, and into the line of the turret's fire.

Interrogation Room⁵³⁵

Malkom-R claims to be a member of a society that likes to program. He goes into detail about them, saying that he doesn't need a contact, and that his recruiter is none of the INDIGO's business.

"On the con-"

"Attention. It appears that there is a Computer Phreak present. I have been looking for a Computer Phreak for a while, for I have a very fun episode of Bake the Traitor that needs filling.

"Malkom-R seems to be an excellent candidate for the show. If you are fast, citizens, we will be able to have Malkom-R star in this episode. Won't that be fun? I simply cannot wait!"

The indigo is about to sigh, but catches himself. "That's va- er, very convenient, friend! Thank you. How long until the broadcast, please?"

"Five minutecycles, citizen. There is more than enough time to get to the studio."

"Alright clones," the INDIGO says. "You heard The Computer! Let's get Malkom-R to his... appointment!"

"Yes, SIR!" the goons shout in unison. They quickly appear on this side of the glass and start removing Malkom-R (who is babbling about it being too cold) from the restraints, and carry him out of the door. The docbot follows behind, injecting Malkom-R with something, keeping him awake.

Bob-GHG calls after them, "Do I get to go?"

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Joris-R asks for things such as truncons or Funball implements. "Unfortunately," the tile replies, the appropriate vendobot is offline due to resupply issues (due to no fault of PLC). "

Throughout the sector

The PA system suddenly comes to life with a screech. A voice says, "Citizens of JHT Sector, may I have your attention for just a moment? It has come to our attention here at Internal Security that a citizen Joris-R-DNK has failed to report for debriefing, and is believed to have gone rogue. If you see Joris-R, please remind him that debriefings are mandatory, and then report your sighting to Internal Security's Troubleshooter Liaison Office as soon as possible. Remember, rogue troubleshooters are the main caus- sorry, sir? Oh, of co-"

The PA cuts off.

The Hub (P Level)

Jam-Y goes over to the pair, and greets one of them, Mick-R, as if he's known him a while.

Mick-R looks confused. "I-I'm sorry, sir, I don't think we... wait, I have seen you somewhere before... I think I saw you in the reactor some time... no, I know I have..."

The other asks Mick-R, "You know this guy?"

Jam-Y continues, asking, in a low voice, about the "thing", and what they're going to do with it. "I'm sure I told everyone... are you sure you don't remember?"

written by Speeder on Jul 05, 2011 23:38

I grab whoever is alive and still on the room and attempt to drag outside.

And by alive, I mean, alive, not re-alive.

If there are noone in such condition, I just leave.

"Can you reply to Jam that I was talking to zombie Cryo, and not him? I would never wish him to die."

written by Malkom on Jul 05, 2011 23:56⁵³⁶

As the needle pricks me, I let out a "AAAAAEEEEEEEEIIIIIIIIII!" I start thrashing around, and slam both fists up under the guards' chins, and try to knock them out.

"TAKE THAT YOU MURDERING TRAITOR, FOUL, DISGUSTING, MUTANT, FREAK! YOU TWISTED IMBECILE! YOU IDIOT! YOU HORRIBLE, PEA-BRAINED PERSONS! YOU DESERVE TO BE COVERED IN URANIUM AND TURNED INTO A SUPER-MUTATED TWISTED AWFUL DISGUSTING SLIMY THING!"

If given the opportunity, I try to slam my fists into their faces as well.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 06, 2011 04:27

I accept the medication and take some to ease the pain, and barring anyone forcibly removing me from the room, attempt to reach the free wheel;chair so I may wheel myself out.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 06, 2011 10:32

While Speed-Y and the others are busy doing zombie-related stuff, I decide to take out my PDC.

"What was that number again..."

I try to input the number of the High Programmer.

written by Jam on Jul 06, 2011 14:36

"I dunno... My memory seems a bit fuzzy... I remember the reactor too, kinda... Did we die or something?"

written by Gligar on Jul 06, 2011 15:33

Debriefing Room 27

The two techs exit the room.

Azir-R accepts the visomorpain and takes some. The familiar feeling of happiness is a relief after the intense pain of having one's leg removed.

He then makes his way over to the wheelchair. He's about to wheel himself out when Speed-Y comes over and starts pushing him out of the room. He's followed by the jackobot.

⁵³⁵ GLIGAR: (OOc to Malkom: PM incoming.)

⁵³⁶ MALKOM: (OOc: Pristriconuclear missile incoming?! AAAAH!)

Only the zombies (and the ruined idea bot) remain as the door slides shut.

Outer Radial Corridor

Speed-Y asks John-R to relay a message to Jam-Y. "Will do, sir."

L4-O as his PDC out, trying to remember a number. Try as he might, though, he just can't remember it. It's almost as if the number deleted itself from his memory...

A corridor in Gamma Subsector

Malkom-R and the goons continue their journey, coming to a lift.

Malkom-R is trying his best to hit the goons in the face with various body parts, all the while yelling about them being mutants, traitors, whatever, and wishing that they would be covered in uranium. He gets hit in the head by a truncheon for his trouble.

The lift arrives. Going up!

The Hub (P Level)

Jam-Y claims to remember the reactor... vaguely. Perhaps they died there? His memory is apparently shot...

"Yeah. A bunch of commies made me help them plant a big bomb down there. Some Troubleshooters came and slaughtered us all... maybe you were with us? Oh wait, I remember TeaSir being important. I'll bet the Troubleshooters poisoned it. We're gonna teach them a lesson."

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 06, 2011 15:38

I enjoy the treatment of someone pushing me around.

written by Malkom on Jul 06, 2011 15:55

"OW!" I grab my head and yell at the goons. "You idiots! Look, there's a Computer Phreak friend of mine right over there, and he's holding a fast-fire laser pistol!" I point to a spot some way behind and to the right of them. If they turn, I try to hold the head of one and grab his ranged weapon (preferably a nice, high clearance gun). If they don't turn, I try to covertly take one of their nice, high clearance guns and use it to kill another one of them, as covertly as possible; if the INDIGO is there then he's the target. If they do turn and I do get a weapon, I try to use it to kill the goon I got it off of. Once chaos ensues and/or one goon is killed or attacked by me, I try to kill as many goons as I can. During all this, I attempt to dodge any and all shots, truncheon hits, and other harmful things that might come my way.

written by 4616599 on Jul 06, 2011 15:57

I hear the announcement, and quickly straighten up,

"Okay, take me down. Actually, I know what else I'd want. A flying tile. A personal flying tile. I'd be glad to test it out."

written by Speeder on Jul 06, 2011 16:31

After leaving the room, I look around.

"Ok, where we go now? Bunker? Where is Jam?"

written by Gligar on Jul 06, 2011 21:45

Outer Radial Corridor

Azir-R is rather enjoying the experience of having someone push him around. Kind of ironic that it's a YELLOW pushing a RED around, though.

Speed-Y looks around at what's left of the team. He wonders where they should go. The bunker, maybe? But where did Jam-Y get off to?

A lift (Gamma Subsector)

As the lift ascends, Malkom-T continues his attempts to be terminated. For instance, he tries the "Look over there!" thing. No-one would be stupid enough to fall for that, right?

Wrong. One goon looks. "I don't se-OW!"

Malkom-R has grabbed that goon's head.

But that's difficult when you only have one arm free.

It's a shame about the other four clones in the lift, though. All four of them pull out truncheons and start bashing at Malkom-R's legs.

When they're done, all five pull out stunners and shoot.

?

When Malkom-R comes round, he is being stared at by all five of them. They are surrounding Malkom-R, who has been placed inside a metal cage. "Nice try," the INDIGO snarls. "But I am afraid it is too late. You are charged with several attempts to assault a citizen of higher clearance, several of treasonous levels of unhappiness, several of being a member of a secret society, and one of annoying a High Programmer. You'll be lucky if your next clone has any personality at all after this, the amount of repatterning you need!"

A voice sounds from somewhere. "Start moving him. Get him on set."

"Alright clones, let's move!"

The cage is loaded onto a forkbot, and starts moving...

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Joris-R decides he's had enough. No, wait... could he get a Mobile Tie for himself?"

"Regrettably, Mobile Tiles are not for sale. However, Transitions may be rented at 25 credits per daycycle.."

The tile begins moving down.

written by Jam on Jul 06, 2011 22:31

I sweat a bit...

"Y-Yeah, now I remember! We'll teach them a lesson! That's what they get for poisoning us!

...

Especially that one clone that brought us the TeaSir! I bet he thought up the whole plan by himself! You know, maybe the others didn't even know he had poisoned the TeaSir, I remember a few of them drinking it too... I think if there's anyclone we should target, it should be that vatslime... If we beat him up, I get the first punch, okay?"

Yeah, in hindsight, perhaps killing the brainwashed commies wasn't such a good idea...

written by Malkom on Jul 06, 2011 23:16

I let out a despairing wail...

But, without the docbot's injections, I'm not feeling to good. My wail trails off and I slump down on the cage floor, glassy-eyed.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 07, 2011 00:08

I could really do with some company.

I stare blankly into space, and observe the outside. Or what I think it might be.

Wow... That's quite... Pretty.

I think, and stop.

Crazy? I can't really make a diagnosis on that... Maybe I'll check in and do some of that stuff before I leave.

I nearly smile. Somehow, I feel a sense of freedom.

written by Speeder on Jul 07, 2011 00:11

After failing to figure where Jam went, I look at the docbot and say.

"Ok, I do want that cold storage, the problem is that my food ran away."

I look at John

"Can you convince Jam to inform where he is? I need to hand my foot to the docbot."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 07, 2011 10:27

"That's weird. I can't remember the number."

I try for a few more moments to remember then sigh and put my PDC away.

"Bunker is okay I guess, as soon as we find Jam. I can't think of anywhere else to go..."

written by Gligar on Jul 07, 2011 14:51

The Hub

Looks like Jam-Y just got caught out...

He tries to sound enthusiastic when he agrees with Mick-R, adding that he really wants to get the first punch on the clone who "poisoned them with TeaSir".

Mick-R still doesn't know certain crucial details, though... like, where the Troubleshooters are. Or the fact that he talking to the clone who spiked the TeaSir in the first place.

"So, got any ideas how we're going to find the Troubleshooters?"

"What? I thought you knew!"

"Ssh!"

Outer Radial Corridor

The troubleshooters still haven't moved from outside the ruins of the debriefing room.

Speed-Y, in particular, has decided he wants to get his severed foot into storage. He asks John-R to locate Jam-Y. "Okay, sir, I'll ask him."

L4-O says that he can't remember the High Programmer's number. He tries again, in vain. He puts his PDC away.

The bunker, he says, is a good next move, since he can't think of anywhere else.

?

It seems that the cage is reaching its destination, which seems to be a lift platform. The cage is placed on it, accompanied by the goons, and it rises.

Malkom-R yells out once, before spacing out.

From above comes the sound of applause.

Set of "Bake The Traitor"

It turns out that the applause is coming from a studio audience, seated behind a safety barrier. A few of them are surreptitiously offering secret society recognition signs.

As the lift platform reaches the set, the applause stops.

Malkom-R comes round enough to notice that he's right in the middle, quite literally the center of attention. The audience completely surrounds him, as do a number of cambots.

From somewhere, a voice says, "And now for our next contestant: Malkom-R-NHG! He has confessed to secret society membership, attempted assault and termination of high-clearance citizens, attempted self-termination, annoying a High Programmer, and, worst of all, a hatred of B3!"

The audience gasps.

"Malkom-R, do you have anything else to say?"

A docbot trundles towards the cag, just in case Malkom-R's medication has somehow worn off after only one turncycle. It notices Malkom-R spacing out and decides that some more can't hurt, and injects him.

written by Jam on Jul 07, 2011 16:05⁵³⁷

I grin...

"Heh... Good news. I happened to walk by a group of Troubleshooters a few minutecycles ago... It seems they were celebrating something, and I think I heard one mention a bomb..."

I look towards the direction I entered the Hub through...

"If we hurry, we might be able to catch up with them... Do you guys have any weapons?"

⁵³⁷ JAM: (ooc: I thought Malkom-R was from TLK sector... 😊) written by Malkom on Jul 07, 2011 16:15 Set of "Bake The Traitor"

I come to with a jerk, and scream.

written by 4616599 on Jul 07, 2011 16:18

"I expect I'm gonna get a massive fine for the fiasco up there... but anyway I suppose I could afford a Transition. What is it, a vehicle bot?"

written by Speeder on Jul 07, 2011 16:29

While I wait, I become a little impatient, then remembering we fixed Friend Computer in this sector, I look around to see if any screen is available and showing any show.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 07, 2011 19:55

"So where are we going to, I can't imagine it'd be a good idea to stay here, after all the booms and bangs."

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 07, 2011 22:12

I yawn.

I guess patience is difficult to achieve now that no-one's really listening to anyone, except me. I should talk a bit.

"Um, I bumped my head on a chair when I first became aware of myself. I somehow still have knowledge of Hexadecimal numerics..."

I'm not sure... but it was only a few minutcycles before I met Jam-R... or was t O? It doesn't really matter, I guess. I did something with fuel barrels, and got some sort of food. I think it was Kristos-R who helped with the fuel..."

I think.

"Then I met up with a whole bunch of Troubleshooters, and simply walked off and into two Communists with a moot laser pistol barrel. Great. I found something to distrust entirely."

I smile ever so slightly, knowing that I won't ever use a laser pistol ever again.

"So, what else can you recall?" I ask myself.

written by Gligar on Jul 07, 2011 23:29

The Hub (P level)

Jam-Y lets on that he happens to know where thee are some Troubleshooters. They said something about a bomb.

He looks back towards the radial corridor. If they hurry, he says, they'll catch up with the Troubleshooters. Do either of the others have weapons?

"Not so loud! Of course we have weapons! And there's the.... thing." Mick-R looks nervous. "Are you sure they're there?"

One of The Hub's vidscreens suddenly changes, announcing that the newest episode of Bake The Traitor is about to start.

Malkom-R begins screaming. Again. Some of the audience boos him. After being glared at by the guards (and the goons), the rest join in.

The forkbot moves again, to allow the lift to descend once again. It rises soon after, to reveal another forkbot carrying another cage, surrounded by its own goons.

"Wait, what's this?" the unseen announcer asks. "More contestants? But of course! Ladies and gentleclones, meet Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R-PYC, who is none other than the mastermind behind the recent Communist Incident! This, clones, is a reminder to maintain constant vigilance! You never know where communists could be hiding!"

More booing. Some clones jump up from their seats and begin pounding on the safety barrier.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Joris-R thinks he's going to be fined pretty steeply, but he could probably afford a Transition. What is a Transition, anyway?

"A Transition," the tile explains as it descends, "is a floating disc which can be directed to travel in almost any direction. They are very simple to use - simply lean slightly, and they move."

The tile finally reaches the ground, near what seems to be a sales desk. The clone at the desk glances at Joris-R and is about to speak before his brain registers Joris-R's odd way of wearing jumpsuits. "Er... Can I help you, citizen?"

Outer Radial Corridor

Speed-Y gets bored and looks for a vidscreen.

He finds one in what looks like an unused briefing room. The vidscreen is on, and is showing the opening credits for Bake The Traitor. Apparently, there are two stars todaycycle... and both nales are familiar: Malkom-R-TLK and Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R-PYC...

Azir-R wonders where they're going. It can't be a good idea to say around here.

John-R speaks up. "Jam-Y tells me that he's in the Hub, sir. And... you know those clones from the reactor? They've recloned, and they want revenge. Jam-Y's found some. He wants to lead them to us, so we can hide and ambush them. He suggests to go easy on them, though. It wasn't their fault they were being mind controlled."

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station

In the depths of the station, deep within the INFRARED section, a cloning tank fires up, and begins growing a clone.

written by Speeder on Jul 07, 2011 23:53

I look at John and nod.

"Keep in mind, I have a single charge left. Of course, they do not know that, but..."

Then I look at the vidscreen.

"The hub has a vidscreen too, right? I REALLY want to see this. I mean, Malkom managed to get into THAT show, with Andrei, it will be FUN, Malkom is a EXCELLENT choice!"

I start to move toward the hub.

written by Malkom on Jul 08, 2011 00:29

I let my scream peter out and slump downwards towards the floor, looking despairing... but with a hidden glint in my eye.

written by Jam on Jul 08, 2011 01:19

"Yes, I'm certain. Bring the thing, and call all the others... Can you be ready in 5 minutcycles? We ne—"

I stop suddenly as I see the vidscreen. I stare at it, and my jaw practically drops to the floor in surprise.

"Hey, do you guys recognize that clone there?"

I point to the vidscreen...

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 08, 2011 01:45

"Shoot I don't have a weapon" I mumble as I wheel myself towards the hub following Speedy.

Then again...

If I find any dangerous looking debris from the explosion laying around I'll grab some. Better than nothing.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 08, 2011 06:58

"You might not have enough weapons... but I have enough!"

I wield Turbo and load it with a shell. Hopefully not one that'll blow up a whole bunch of innocents either. Maybe.

I see everyone leaving me behind and try to catch up.

written by 4616599 on Jul 08, 2011 08:10

"Yes please."

I thump my booted hand on the desk, tapping.

"I'd like to rent a Transition. The latest model please. Charge it to my ME Card. Joris-O...errr, R. I can tell you, I'm quite deserving..."

written by Gligar on Jul 08, 2011 13:41

Outer Radial Corridor

Speed-Y nods at John-R. He might be running low on weapons, but they don't know that.

Another glance at the briefing room's vidscreen (on which Malkom-R is screaming his lungs out, yet again) and wonders if the Hub has a vidscreen. The combination of Malkom-R and the ex-Director on there promises to be FUN! And he wants to see it.

He heads towards the Hub.

Azir-R regrets not having a weapon, but follows anyway. He looks around for shrapnel but can't find any.

L4-O points out that though Azir-R has no weapons, L4-O has more than enough. He pulls out Turbo, and loads it with a shell.

Of course, buy this point, the rest of the team has already gone on ahead, so he runs to catch up. (It's amazing how well Speed-Y can hop.)

The jackobot remains behind.

The Hub (P level)

Jam-Y asks Mick-R and his friend to be ready in five minutcycles, before looking at the vidscreen. On it, the ex-Director can clearly be seen. The announcer is saying, "Ladies and gentleclones, meet Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R-PYC, who is none other than the mastermind behind the recent Communist Incident!"

Does he look familiar to the two?

"You know, I remember that guy," Mick-R's friend says. "He's the one who started... everything."

Set of "Bake The Traitor"

The audience, which has been generally agitated at the sight of the two CMTs, suddenly falls silent. Perhaps the appearance of lit signs saying "SILENCE" has something to do with that.

"I know, citizens," the announcer says, in reply to the rowdiness. "But let's get to the first event, shall we? The Turret Gauntlet!"

The signs go out, and the audience once again goes wild. "Turret! Turret! Turret!"

"You said it! Bring on the turrets!"

A hatch opens in the ceiling, and the promised turrets are lowered. Three of them, to be exact. They're RED spherical things with a single RED sensor in the middle, mounted on tripods. All three of them have visible laser beams, which they use to scan for targets.

Shortly after, more objects are lowered: storage crates.

Shortly after that, the goons retreat to the edge of the set, and the cages fall apart.

"Are you ready? Three, two, one, begin!"

The turrets begin scanning. "Searching..."

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Joris-R goes up to the desk and taps on it with one hand, requesting a Transition. That, and the way he's dressed, intimidates the other clone somewhat.

"Er... of course. Er, Joris-R, was it? Please remember that debriefings are mandatory."

The clone taps on his PDC. "Okay, here you go."

A Transition appears from somewhere. "But before I hand it to you, you'll have to sign the usage agreement." He offers Joris-R a form.

written by Speeder on Jul 08, 2011 14:04

"Team, Jam probably is probing or talking to the targets, do not engage them until Jam signal us that it is time for that.

John, inform Jam of that."

I continue hopping forward. When I need more balance, I push Azir and use his wheelchair for support.

I do not take my pistol out yet. In fact, I look at L4.

"You can leave Turbo loaded, but can you please hide it from view? I mean, it will be kinda obvious what are out intent if we reach a hub while holding that thing."

I look at the lagging L4.

"Faster! I wanna see Malkom screaming more!"

written by Malkom on Jul 08, 2011 16:13

I look around with a slightly wild look in my eyes, as if I'd expected something... more extraordinary. I try to run away from the turrets, and stay away- as far as possible, at least.

written by Jam on Jul 08, 2011 19:42

I continue watching the vidscreen, laughing occasionally...

"Hey, aren't you two supposed to be getting the others? Get moving!"

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 08, 2011 21:00

Well, since combat is out of the question, I might as well enjoy watching that weird clone from earlier get his 15 minutes of fame.

written by Gligar on Jul 08, 2011 21:47

Inner Radial Corridor

Speed-Y surmises that Jam-Y is probably talking to his targets right now. The team is not to engage until Jam-Y gives the signal.

He tells John-R to relay that to Jam-Y.

To L4-O, he adds that he should keep Turbo out of sight. If they saw a big weapon like that it would arouse their suspicions. Also, L4-O is moving too slow. He wants to watch Malkom-R scream.

Speed-Y leans on Azir-R's wheelchair for support. Hopping around can be tiring. It probably doesn't occur to him to pull rank or something... ☹

Azir-R continues forward, followed by everyone else.

Soon, the team reaches the door to the Hub.

The Hub (P level)

Jam-Y laughs at the vidscreen, where the first event has just been announced: the Turret Gauntlet. You know, with those awesome RED turrets that speak.

He looks round at the other two. Weren't they supposed to be going to get the others?

Mick-R begins to protest, "But they're... waaaaait aminute... I'm remembering things... like something about the clone who spiked the TeaSir. He looked an awful lot like you."

Set of "Bake the Traitor"

Mere moments after the event begins, the traitors start running. It's not long before the turrets find them. "There you are." "Firing." The turrets open up with their twin slugthrowers.

Malkom-R just barely manages to dodge behind one of the crates. The turret, however, keeps firing, slowly eating away at the crate.

One of the goons notices, and aims his own slugthrower. "Move! Keep moving!"

Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R is slightly less fortunate, getting hit in the hand before he can dodge, but he is also confronted by a goon.

JHT Sectore Central Clonin Station

The active clone tank starts moving, its clone nearing completion. According to this, it's... Mango-NHG? But he shouldn't be cloning for another two weekcycles!

As it nears the platform, a clone arrives from the stairs, and looks round furtively.

written by Malkom on Jul 09, 2011 00:22

"VATCRAP!!!!!"

I rush from behind the crate, going low on the ground right at the goon's ankles, trying to trip him up and perhaps gain his weapon. I also look around for anything (and I mean anything) out of the ordinary.

written by Jam on Jul 09, 2011 01:18

"That's funny... I was just thinking the same about you... You look just like him... Isn't it convenient we both thought of that at the same time? Are you reading my thoughts? Or perhaps you're mind controlling me?! Get out of my head!"

written by Speeder on Jul 09, 2011 03:24

I keep hopping around using the wheelchair for support.

"Faster faster! Cross that door!"

When we get to the other side, I act natural, and actually do something natural: I watch the "Bake The Traitor" show

written by 4616599 on Jul 09, 2011 04:23

I look through the agreement.

"No, of course, I'm not a traitor."

I sign it, and attempt to climb on the Transition.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 09, 2011 05:09

I keep Turbo loaded but put it away for now while still trying to keep up.

"huff I guess that's puff a good idea. And I'm doing huff what I can, sir! puff!"

I pause for a moment to catch my breath again.

written by Gligar on Jul 09, 2011 13:28

Set of "Bake the Traitor"

Malkom-R moves alright.

Right for the goon.

But he mis-judges and ends up crashing into the safety barrier.

The goon turns, and grabs hold of Malkom-R, hauling him back into the action, along with firing a couple of slugs at him to make sure he stays there.

But it becomes clear that the goon has poor aiming skills, as neither shot actually hits Malkom-R.

Behind him, Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R has managed to make it to another crate, sustaining another wound.

Under the sustained fire of the three turrets, the crates are looking pretty ragged. One of them is almost completely damaged.

There's something inside it. It's ticking.

The Hub

Attempting to remain in control of the situation, Jam-Y turns Mick-R's accusation round, saying that actually, it was Mick-R who spiked the TeaSir. How convenient that they both had the same idea. Unless... Mick-R's a mutant!"

"What are you talking about? You're the mutant here!"

Behind him, what's left of Team Epsilon arrives from the corridor, with L4-O bringing up the rear.

Speed-Y tries to act natural and watch the vidscreen, on which the Turret Gauntlet event has started, before John-R suddenly says, "Now!"

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Joris-R signs the form, and turns towards the Transition. He climbs on board.

The clone does not attempt to stop him. "Thank you, citizen. Remember to attend your debriefing next time."

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station

Mango's cloning tank finishes its cycle, and he is dropped to the decanting platform.

The clone says, "Mango-NHG, is it? A quick moment of your time? There's been a technical problem with the cloning system, so we shuffled you forward to test out our solution."

The clone approaches Mango.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 09, 2011 15:17

I clumsily whip out Turbo and attempt to aim in the direction of the clones.

But I try to avoid firing, not knowing what kind of shell is loaded and noticing that Jam is a little too close to the other two.

written by Malkom on Jul 09, 2011 16:04

I try to grab the ticking thing and heave it towards the turrets. After that, I run away from the turrets and get behind another crate, which I shove towards the turrets so that the presumably ticking thing inside can dispense !!fun!! near them.

written by Speeder on Jul 09, 2011 18:48

Now for the reason why I was not in wheelchair...

I use the footless leg to kneel, while maintaining the leg with foot on the ground, thus achieving the classic static crouched shoot position.

I whip out my Yellow pistol, and aim at the at the commie talking to Jam and shoot.

"HEY EX-COMMIES, WE HAVE SPIES AMONG YOU, WE KNOW WHAT YOU ARE PLANNING, DROP YOUR WEAPONS NOW AND SURRENDER!"

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 09, 2011 18:53

"This show is my the best, I tell you." I mention as I wheel myself along.

written by Jam on Jul 09, 2011 20:56

As I hear John-R's shout, I quickly back away from the two clones...

"It seems there has been a misunderstanding, Mick-R! Come with us and you won't get hurt! We just want to talk..."

As I hear someclone shooting, I cringe...

"HEY! DIDN'T I SAY NOT TO TERMINATE THEM?!"

I try to dodge any incoming fire...

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 09, 2011 21:58

Welcome back to the harsh reality.

I check whether there is any slime in my windpipe before continuing.

"Problem, huh..."

Noticing that the next few sentences are being spoken in a different tone (and volume), I answer back similarly.

"Alpha Complex is a place probably like many others. Where some decide the facts to show, others to hide. Terminate who they like, to make sure that nothing is leaked out, and they can twist both facts and fiction, and make whoever is happening to be looking at it, to believe it as either the full truth, the exact opposite, or anywhere between.

There's something all wrong and suspicious about this place."

I frown slightly.

written by Gligar on Jul 09, 2011 22:37

The hub

L4-O pulls out Turbo. He's a bit unsteady, but he manages to point it in the direction of Mick-R and his friend. He doesn't fire yet, partly because he doesn't know what's loaded, and partly because Jam-Y is near the two.

Speed-Y drops into a kneeling position and pulls out his laser pistol. He aims at Mick-R, and shoots, yelling at them to surrender.

eeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeee

Mick-R just laughs. "So you're the Troubleshooters, eh? Then you" - he points at Jam-Y - "must be the clone who terminated us with TeaSir."

He pulls out a crude slugthrower that looks hand-made. "I don't intend to just surrendered. You know why? Because you're all right where I want you."

Jam-Y tries to reason that there's been a misunderstanding. Perhaps he should come with them, so they can talk.

Mick-R doesn't seem to agree. He pulls something off his belt. "Here. Catch."

He throws a small thing at the team. It looks like a box with a blinking LED on it.

Then he and his friend run.

Oblivious to the blinking box, Azir-R rolls in and watches the vidscreen. On it, Malkom-R and the ex-Director can be seen cowering behind boxes. Malkom-R sees a chance, and tries to floor one of the guards at the periphery, by the safety barrier, only to get fired at and hauled back towards the action.

Set of "Bake the Traitor"

Malkom-R notices the thing, and tries to grab it. It's heavy for something this size, but he manages to lift it, and throw it at the turrets.

There is a small explosion, knocking him to the floor.

When the smoke clears, the turrets can be seen on their sides, firing all over the place for a moment, before shutting down. "Whyyy?" "I don't hate you..." "No hard feelings..."

Also, the goons seem to be having problems with their weapons, which seem to be arcing, and heating up. One of them explodes as its ammunition cooks off.

The other thing? One of the lift platforms seems to have lowered a bit. Perhaps enough to climb down...

No wait, there's a final other thing: the announcer seems to have been replaced by a recording: "Anti-Mutant! United against the freak menace! Stop watching this and start killing the freaks now!"

JHT Sector Central Cloning Station

Mango and the clone exchange quiet words while the clone uses a device to scan Mango. Presently he says, "Well, citizen, you seem to be in order. Head down to the showers, then come meet me in the lower level."⁵³⁸

written by Malkom on Jul 09, 2011 23:04

I gasp and rub my eyes from the sting of the smoke, then climb to my feet and grin at the turrets. As the recording fires up I give a start... then yell something that sounds like a trumpet blast. "Dun dun DUN!!!" I then try to shove the goons towards any guards who might be attacking me, taking care not to shove the goon who fired at me. That taken care of, I go towards the turrets, taking care to avoid their lines of fire if they decide to start shooting again, and start shoving them at the crates, in hopes another explosion or two might finish them off. In the chaos, I also try to grab any loaded and servicable gun that comes to hand, regardless of clearance.

written by Jam on Jul 10, 2011 01:06

"BOMB!! RUN!!!"

I run a good distance away from the box, preferably somewhere behind something or someclone. I watch the box from there...

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 10, 2011 02:26

"Sure... The lower level, yes." "Very well... I'm interested..."
If I'm allowed to, I look for the showers.

written by Speeder on Jul 10, 2011 02:49

I look at my pistol.

"Crap, I think I just miscounted."

I remove the barrel and lob it like a grenade into Mick-R.

Then I see the bomb, and hide behind Azir wheelchair, holding him in place if he attempts to wheel away.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 10, 2011 04:31

I fire Turbo at the commies then attempt to scramble away the way we came from on my hands and knees.

"Aaaaaa vatcrap too many close calls in such a short time aaaaa!"

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 10, 2011 04:59

"Oh, this is what I'm supposed to be good at." I mention as I notice the bomb since the chaos on the screen left a lull in the action.

I should have enough mobility to grab the bomb and chuck it right back, hopefully quick enough to avoid any lasting damage.

I of course try and toss it away from Jam, he was cool and gave my coffeelyke.

written by 4616599 on Jul 10, 2011 14:00

I flick my booted hand around.

⁵³⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: Surely it wouldn't be the end of the world if you responded by PM? I mean, you don't want to announce that sort of thing where the cameras can see you. You don't know who might be watching them...)

[619]

"Of course! What kind of clone might forget a briefing! With this outfit it'll be much harder for those crazed traitors to stop me!"

I lean around, looking for the nearest corridor. If it's long enough I test how fast the Transition can go.

written by Gligar on Jul 10, 2011 17:19

Set of "Bake the Traitor"

The audience starts trying to escape, but finds the exits sealed.

On the set itself, Malkom-R is recovering from the shock of the explosion. He attempts to dodge the guards who come at him, truncheons and fists raised, but ends up being hit across the back of the neck by one guard. The others get caught up in the goons, or are dealing with the ex-Director.

One guard tries, once again, to fire his weapon, only to find that it has welded itself into a useless lump of metal.

Malkom-R looks around, but it seems that all the guards' firearms have been rendered useless.

The Hub

Jam-Y exclaims that they should run, and does so. He ends up hiding behind a conveniently-placed vendobot.

Speed-Y takes off his pistol's squealing barrel and throws it after Mick-R, before taking cover behind Azir-R's wheelchair, making sure to hold it in place.

L4-O lets loose with Turbo. The shell flies right into Mick-R's friend, who doubles over in pain.

The shell itself breaks open and emits a gas. No, not unpleasant VIOLET death gas, but some sort of RED stuff. This one causes Mick-R and his friend, not to mention the happiness patrol, to collapse to the floor, asleep.

Anyone feel like breathing? 😊

L4-O tries to get away, heading back the way he came.

There's just one thing left to do, and that's sort out the blinking box. On the assumption that it's a bomb, Azir-R decides to see what mobility he still has, and picks it up. It's surprisingly heavy for something so small.

But what was it the High Programmer said? He's good at throwing things. So that's what he does. Right into Mick-R, who doesn't even seem to notice.

He continues to fail to notice as the thing explodes.

As it explodes, though, something curious happens. A wall of flame seems to flare up and surround the bomb, before shrinking in on itself and dissipating, leaving some charred bomb components behind.

On the vidscreen, Malkom-R can be seen throwing something at a turret. The thing explodes, causing all three turrets to malfunction.

Just before the visuals cut off. They're replaced by a simple screen reading, "TREASONOUS INTERFERENCE -- PLEASE STAND BY"

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience

Joris-R decides that now might be a good time to get going. He looks around for an exit. There's one.

It turns out to be a gap between two subsectors. He heads for it.

Off the Roadway

He ends up looking at a large factory-looking building in the distance, probably one of the Industrial Subsectors, where things are made, and many of the INFRAREDS work.

Gunning the Transition (though it doesn't have a throttle in the usual sense), he realises that it can go quite fast.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station

Mango-R heads down to the chemical showers. He notes that the stairs continue down to another level, but for now, enters the showers.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station -- Chemical Showers

I'm pretty sure you know what chemical showers look like by now. This is the biggest facility in the sector, with lots of individual booths. Many of them are unoccupied. With any luck, there shouldn't be any F-Class mutants getting in the way, right?

written by Malkom on Jul 10, 2011 17:27

I try to rush for an exit, grabbing any usable firearms on the way. If I see any guards, goons, or other unfriendly characters outside, I attack them with whatever comes to hand, or my fists if I must.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 10, 2011 18:19

I turn around and keep my distance from the RED gas.

"Ooh. What is it? I didn't see what it did. I had my back turned."

I put Turbo away while inspecting the area the bomb was in from afar.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 10, 2011 22:26

"Hmm, that's odd." I try to wheel over a bit but assume I can't due to interference/cowardice.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 10, 2011 23:13

"Hmm... No one around... or at least, nearly no one."

I enter a booth, and follow instructions.

written by Jam on Jul 10, 2011 23:31

I peek out from behind the vendobot.

"What happened? Is that sleeping gas? What happened to the bomb? Is anyclone hurt? What happened to the vidscreen? Where is Mick-R and his friend? When are we going to go to the bucker? Can I have a YELLOW B3? Anyclone else want a B3?! How about some Algae Chips? Do you even stock Algae Chips? Could you tell me how many credits I have? Do you know where I could find a YELLOW jumpsuit?"

written by Speeder on Jul 11, 2011 00:06

As I see the transmission failing, I use the wheelchair again to stand.

Them I do a sort of strong hop, or jump, to stomp the ground in anger.

"AAAAW! COMMON! I WANNA SEE THEY EXPLODING! WHO IS DOING THAT?"

As I protest about it, I actually ignore the sleeping and non-flaming commies.

written by Gligar on Jul 11, 2011 00:36

Set of "Bake the Traitor"

Malkom-R looks for an exit. Seeing that the audience exits are still locked, he comes to the conclusion that the only way out is down. He heads that way, through the gap left when the lift platform slipped. As he does, another device, hidden in another crate, detonates, causing the guards' weapons to start their arcing/welding-into-junk thing again. The force knocks him off the lift platform. Ouch.

When he regains his senses, there's another guard bearing down on him, holding a laser rifle. He punches the guard in the jaw and grabs the rifle, kicking him.

The Hub

L4-O looks at the RED gas while staying away from it. He asks what it is.

He starts feeling drowsy. That gas must be spreading.

"Er, I think it's knockout gas, sir," Lucas-R tells him. He starts being affected as well.

L4-O inspects the area where the bomb was, There are a lot of scorch marks, and damage indicative of something exploding. Curiously, some of the scorching shows some odd patterning. It probably didn't come from the explosion.

Azir-R tries to wheel over but finds that he can't. There must be some sort of interference (someone holding on to his wheelchair, maybe?) He starts being affected, too.

Jam-Y peeks out from his hiding place. He has a plethora of questions, including what happened, whether the gas was sleeping gas, about the bomb (which blew up -- though with an oddly limited effect), about the vidscreen (minor damage, still with its text), about the location of the two commies (right there, dead), when they will be returning to the bunker (with you lot, who knows?)...

He also starts asking for things like B3 and algae chips, causing the vendobot to start dispensing. He asks how many credits he has (60) and about the location of a YELLOW jumpsuit (from PLC).

All the while, he's been breathing the spreading gas...

Speed-Y pulls himself upright. He demands to know why the vidscreen is acting up, hopping in place, sort of, in his anger.

Almost in answer, the vidscreen changes its display. It now displays a picture of Malkom-R. Out mutual friend explains: "Attention, citizens! This episode of Bake the Traitor has been abruptly ended. It is believed at this time that the treasonous Anti-Mutant secret society were involved. An immediate result of the sabotage is that this citizen, Malkom-R-TLK, has escaped the set, and is at large in the sector. He is believed to be armed and extremely dangerous. You are authorised to terminate on sight. Prizes will be awarded for a particularly messy kill, so have fun. Thank you for your co-operation."

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station -- Chemical Showers

Mango enters a booth and proceeds as normal. This time, he isn't interrupted.

written by Speeder on Jul 11, 2011 00:44

I look unhappy at the vidscreen when I notice the problems with the gas and the weird scorch.

I pull the jumpsuit over my nose, and start to hop away from the gas (pulling Azir with me unless he attempts to wheel toward it, in that case I release him).

written by Jam on Jul 11, 2011 00:50

"Hmm... That's odd... I wonder what happened to the rest of my bonus... Ah well, thanks anyway, vendobot."

I take the things the vendobot dispensed, then walk over to Speed-Y...

"Knockout gas? We should get out of here..."

I try to head away from the gas.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 11, 2011 01:54

Using my common sense, I figure that oh hey, that must be sleeping gas. I allow myself to be wheeled away.

"Hey L4, Jam, I think we better get going before we take an unwanted nap. 'Sides, prize for offing Malkom, how cool is that?"

<yawn>

written by Malkom on Jul 11, 2011 02:02

I point the laser rifle at the guard's head and squeeze the trigger. If the guard ends up dead, I check how much ammo I have. Once all's clear, I hurriedly rifle the guard's corpse for any extra ammo/barrels/guns/knives/other weapons or useful objects. If I'm not attacked, I take the guard's uniform as well, and put it on; I put him into my uniform. I also take his PDC.

If I hear The Computer's message, I swear loudly.

Once finished with the guard, I get the f[REDACTED]k out of here!

written by Lightning4 on Jul 11, 2011 07:46

Feeling a bit dizzy and now sleepy, I yawn and try to crawl further away from the gas.

"That sounds yawn nice... Although a nap first sounds great too. Sllleeeeeeep..."

I slow but try to keep crawling.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 11, 2011 11:19

I scrub all the slime away, and scrub some more. I let it continue washing.

written by 4616599 on Jul 11, 2011 12:13

I rub my head again. The cunning boot outfit seems a bit less effective on headaches than thought.

I try to process the announcements. "Malkom-R-TLK? Me...intsec...debriefing...late."

I look at the industrial sector. There must be a service center, or an IntSec outlet, or something. I also look at the dimensions of the Transition. Could it fit in a TRANSTUBE?

Tilting and throttling the Transition, I head forward, (considering my outfit) literally streaking down the roadway toward the industrial subsectors like a vidshow star.

written by Gligar on Jul 11, 2011 15:51

The Hub

Speed-Y looks unhappy. Bake the Traitor has been abruptly ended. But not only that, there's this problem with the bomb going off, and the knockout gas...

He pulls his jumpsuit up over his nose and wheels Azir-R out of the Hub.

Azir-R doesn't object. He suggests to L4-O that he join them.

Jam-Y wonders what happened to his bonus. "Bonus? Oh... that would explain this mark on your credit rating... now what does that mean... ah yes. 'Bonus pending,' it says," replies the vendobot.

Jam-Y picks up his purchases -- three cans of YELLOW B3 and three bags of algae chips -- before following Speed-Y out.

L4-O is sluggish, but follows them He's followed by JognR and Lucas-R.

?

Malkom-R shoots at the guard, and misses. And it turns out that the guard still has a truncheon, and knows how to use it.

Malkom-R decides to run for it, and attempts to find his way to somewhere that isn't here.

He winds up in a RED corridor.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station -- Chemical Showers

Mango sets about cleaning himself. He remains uninterrupted.

Presently the shower shuts off and unlocks.

Off the Roadway

Now he has some time to think, Joris-R realises that his outfit might not be the best at stopping headaches.

Then he remembers the announcements. Malkom-R... him...

It might not be a good idea to stay here.

Her looks to the industrial subsector. Is there a service center, or an IntSec station there? Probably. He pushes the Transition to full speed, while wondering whether it would fit in a transtube. (it would, since it's small enough... though you'd have to worry about colliding transbots, which are much faster than a Transition).

written by Malkom on Jul 11, 2011 16:09

I look around for any guards, then try and go up against the wall so the guard won't see me when he comes out. Once he arrives in the corridor, I shoot at him with my rifle.

"Good Bleepzy!" I say to the rifle, giving it a stroke.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 11, 2011 16:29

I finally get back on my feet, though a bit wobbly from the combination of the sleeping gas and the lung injury.

I continue to follow Speed-Y and the rest.

written by Speeder on Jul 11, 2011 17:30

I continue leading everyone out.

And rambling. Until I remember the detail of the announcement.

"Hey, anyone here want of instead going to the bunker, hunt Malkom around? He is trouble, that need shooting! We are troubleshooters, and we can get a reward if we skewer him or something!"

written by Jam on Jul 11, 2011 18:14

I follow Speed-Y.

"Hunt Malkom-R? Win prizes? Sounds like FUN! Let's go get him!"

written by Speeder on Jul 11, 2011 18:18

"Oh wait, someone call IntSec first and warn about the knocked out commies in the hub. We do not want them to wake up and rampage around while we are having FUN."

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 11, 2011 18:22

"I'll call 'em, being that you're so kind as to be dragging me around I don't need my hands right now for wheeling so..."

I call IntSec to report the commies, and I also check my available credits. I might want to pick up some weapons or something and it'd be good to know my financial status.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 11, 2011 23:34

I exit.

"That was probably one of the best showers I've ever had..."

I think back to try and remember if there were any jumpsuits back at the cloning station. If I do remember, I head back up to it. Else I look for a towel to dry myself off with, and wear, before moving to the lower levels.

written by Gligar on Jul 11, 2011 23:43⁵³⁹

Corridor (Gamma Subsector)

Malkom-R looks around. No-one here right now. Everyclone is probably at work by now.

But there's still that guard to worry about. Here he comes.

But Malkom-R is ready. Zap! A hit this time. And one more count of treason.

One wonders at this point whether there'll even be a Malkom-R after this one is inevitably terminated...

The Hub

Well, by the door.

L4-O is on his feet. a bit wobbly, but it's a start.

Sleep would be a really good idea right now.

Everyone leaves and returns to the corridor.

Inner Radial Corridor

As he continues on, Speed-Y remembers the announcement. He suggests that the team go after Malkom-R. While yawning. I mean, he's been up for what, 20 hourcycles by this point?

Jam-Y follows. He likes the idea. Although he's yawning too.

Speed-Y adds that someone should call IntSec and tell them about Mick-R and his friend. Azir-R does that. He's told that they should be picked up shortly.

He also checks his credit balance. It looks like he has 112 credits remaining.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station

Feeling refreshed after his shower, Mango looks for a jumpsuit, and a trowel. There aren't any of either in the cloning station, or the decanting platform. But then again, the showers have drying fans, so towels aren't needed.

He shrugs and heads down.

There he finds a number of self-service terminals, where one fills out release forms electronically, and some racks of jumpsuits.

The clone from above is also here, apparently checking something on a terminal.

written by Speeder on Jul 11, 2011 23:47

I stop when it is seemly safe distance from the gas.

⁵³⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: I have updated the rules at the start of the thread (remember page 1? 🤔)

You should probably go and read them again.)

"Ok now... Anyone at least KNOW where is the set of Bake The Traitor?"

I mean, if the thing is halfway on the other side of the city, there are no way we get there on time."

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 12, 2011 01:31

"I doubt he's still at the set, probably making a mad dash for safety. Maybe he's going to meet up with his fellow traitors."

I look around, if I spot a vendbot, I will get the price of thrown weapons, such as explosives or sharp things, within my clearance of course.

written by Malkom on Jul 12, 2011 01:44

I quickly go through the guard's jumpsuit, taking any ammo or PDCs or other useful-looking objects, as well as anything mysterious and/or shiny, before moving on off the corridor. While moving, I call up my Anti-Mutant contact on the guard's PDC, and ask if there's a safe area near me. I also ask if there's quick transport to any nearby or not-so-nearby safe area available. "I don't care how much trouble I get into. I'm already in enough that extra -- er, so-called treason -- won't matter too much, so anything goes. Oh, and there's this mutant who I think can read my mind and perhaps find where I am. Jam-Y is the name." I ask if there's a way to shield my mind from him.

written by Jam on Jul 12, 2011 02:47⁵⁴⁰

"Hmm... The last place I scanned Malkom-R at was at, um... F-level, maybe Gamma or Delta Subsector? He probably moved by now... And if he's working with the Anti-Mutants, he'll probably find some way to hide himself... They'll probably be targeting John-R and I..."

I suddenly remember I still have Speed-Y's foot...

"Oh, here, you wanted this back?"

I offer the foot to him.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 12, 2011 03:18

I go over to the terminal, look at it for a bit, and electronically fill out the form. When that's done and processed through, I put on a jumpsuit.

"So what am I needed to do?" I ask the clone.

written by Speeder on Jul 12, 2011 03:43

I nod.

"Sure!"

I look around for the Docbot.

"Mr. Docbot that I asked to store my foot, where are you?"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 12, 2011 11:10

I yawn again.

I put away Turbo, but try to note the shell I used. That'll be useful for the future.

⁵⁴⁰ JAM: (OOC: I might not be able to post the next four or so days... Or, at least, I won't be able to post as often...)

While the group talks, I stay a safe distance from the gas and watch the area for any movement, or watch for any dissipation of the gas.

written by 4616599 on Jul 12, 2011 15:31

I continue speeding down the roadway, taking in the sights and sounds of the subsector

written by Gligar on Jul 12, 2011 16:42

Inner Radial Corridor

Speed-Y keeps moving, getting out of range of the gas. He's realised that he doesn't actually know where the set of Bake the Traitor even is. It could be half-way across Alpha Complex for all he knows. And in that case, they'll be too late.

Azir-R suggests that he's already moved on. He's probably gone to meet up with his fellow traitors. He looks around for a vendobot, but the closest ones are back in the Hub.

Jam-Y supplies that the last time he scanned him, Malkom-R was on F Level, over in either Gamma or Delta Subsector. He's probably moved on by now. And if he's working with Anti-Mutant, he'll have gone into hiding. He's probably planning on attacking John-R and himself at some point.

He then realises that he has Speed-Y's foot, and offers it to him.

Speed-Y takes it, and looks around for the docbot. It turns out to be right there, at the intersection. "Ah, is this the foot?" it asks as the team approaches.

Lucas-R wonders, "What if there's more than one set? I mean, they always do get their traitors very quickly, no matter where they're from. Maybe they alternate between sets, or something."

L4-O brings up the rear. As he stows Turbo, he notes the used shell on the ground, remembering its colour code.

He keeps watch over the Hub, seeing if there's any movement or gas dissipation. It looks like the gas is indeed spreading. He keeps yawning... maybe he'd better get a move on.

Corridor (Gamma Subsector)

Malkom-R adds theft to his rapsheet, stealing a couple of laser barrels, the guard's PDC, and his ME Card (also adding ID theft). There's also a packet of some drug he doesn't recognise.

He calls up his society. He's told to get to Waste Recycling, deep in, well, Depp Subsector. There's a safehouse there. They'll talk more when he does. This is an insecure call, after all. Internal Security are probably already on their way.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station

Mango goes over to a terminal and fills out his forms. It's a simple task once you put your mind to it. And oddly pleasing.

That done, he gets a jumpsuit and heads over to the clone. "I'll need to run a couple more test," he is told. "Just to make sure that there are no major side effects from the maintenance work. Nothing to worry about. This way, please..."

He gestures to the other side of the station, where there are offices.

Roadway, near the Industrial Subsectors

As Joris-R approaches, he sees that, instead of there being just one building, there are six, three either side of the roadway. Signs separate them into INDUSTRIAL SUBSECTOR A and INDUSTRIAL SUBSECTOR B. The sounds of running machinery blend into a deep pulsing roar. The air is thick with dust and smoke, which seems to emanate from everything. It's difficult to breathe.

He comes up to a checkpoint manned by several clones. One flicks a switch, illuminating a STOP sign.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 12, 2011 17:23

I yawn again.

"We should keep moving. The gas is still spreading..."

I move past the group and keep my distance from the gas.

"Well we're not going to do any good here at any rate... we should stick together though wherever we're going."

I yawn again.

"The bunker I assume, maybe, sirs?"

written by Malkom on Jul 12, 2011 17:34

I call up directions to my destination in Depp Subsector on the guard's PDC, then stow my own in his jumpsuit pocket, hoping to throw the goons off my trail for a bit. "What wouldn't I give for a Transition right now," I mutter as I set off jogging towards Depp Subsector, keeping on the alert for guards and anyone else who shoots at me or tries to harm me in any way.

written by Speeder on Jul 12, 2011 18:50

I nod to L4.

"Just let me do this first."

I hand the foot to the docbot.

"Please put it in cold storage. I may need it in case the cyborg conversion fails."

I then return to the team after the Docbot retrieves the foot.

"Knockout gas with overworked troubleshooters do not sound good idea indeed. I think yes, we should go to the bunker." I look around for where the bunker elevator is.

written by 4616599 on Jul 13, 2011 08:53

I smoothly glide to a halt. Ruffling my outfit a bit, I ask. "Can I help?"

written by Jam on Jul 13, 2011 12:08

I stick with the rest of the team, and watch Speed-Y deal with his severed foot.

written by Gligar on Jul 13, 2011 12:36

Radial Corridor Intersection

L4-O continues on. Being near an expanding cloud of knockout gas, he says, is not a good idea when you're already tired. He suggests they they return to the bunker.

Speed-Y agrees, but gives his severed foot to the docbot first. "Thank you, citizen," the docbot replies, placing the foot in a cold box.

He looks around for the bunker lift, and realises that it's back in Epsilon Subsector.

Looking in that direction, he can see activity in the general vicinity of the debriefing room. First, a tech exits, carrying some memory cores and a flamethrower. He heads off into Epsilon Subsector. Second... wait what... that's the mutilated corpse of Cryo! On fire!

Corridor (Gamma Subsector)

It seems that Malkom-R's PDC call was subject to interference... the subsector code came out as "Depp" subsector. He tries to look that up, but finds that "Depp" subsector doesn't actually exist. Maybe it's something close to that?

He remembers the reactor... what if it's somewhere near that?

Industrial Subsectors -- Checkpoint

Joris-R stops at the checkpoint. A clone emerges, and does a double take at Joris-R's outfit. "What in the- No, you can't proceed, not dressed like that! CPU Mandates, you see. 'All citizens in or near an industrial subsector must be wearing their jumpsuit in a proper fashion. Failure to do so may result in loss of privileges.' Breathing, for one.

"And although you are wearing a jumpsuit -- several, in fact -- I can't help but notice that you aren't, well, dressed. You'd better remedy that."

written by Speeder on Jul 13, 2011 13:01

I notice the on fire Cryo being taken away.

"Nice! Anti-Zombie squad at work! I always knew they actually existed too!"

I walk toward the Epsilon Subsector, or rather, I hop toward there.

While watching the work of the zombie hunters.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 13, 2011 13:14

I wheel myself around, following Speedy.

written by Malkom on Jul 13, 2011 14:23

I call up a map of subsectors near the reactor, then call up a list of subsectors in my vicinity. If nothing like 'Depp' comes up, I recall the Anti-Mutants (with the dead guard's PDC) and ask for clarification. If any 'Depp' like things come up, I call up more information on them: do any of them have a Waste Recycling department or area? If one does, I start off for it. If I called and I now know where to go, I start off for there.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 13, 2011 18:06

I tag along and yawn one more time.

"That's good. Though half of me wonders if fire will actually be sufficient..."

"Everything else sure wasn't..."

I simply shake my head.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 13, 2011 21:04

I break from my train of thoughts, and process what was said just then.

"Okay. Right."

I head over to where the offices are, taking just a moment to examine the jumpsuit I've taken.

written by Gligar on Jul 13, 2011 22:47

Radial Corridor Intersection

For some reason, Speed-Y believes that there are zombie hunters taking Cryo away. But no, there stands the beheaded corpse of Cryo, shambling towards him!

He keeps walking, seemingly oblivious. Can I get a readout on the drug levels in the air over there?

Oh, of course...

Azir-R follows right behind. He doesn't comment on the zombie hunters. One wonders if he's seeing them as well.

L4-O continues yawning. He's not sure that fire will actually be sufficient.

And still, the corpse of Cryo lurches towards them, as if wanting to share its fire with them.

What? Zombies are slow, you know.

Corridor (Gamma Subsector)

Malkom-R broadens his PDC search, looking for anything near the reactor which might contain waste recycling. As it happens, the reactor itself is located in Deep Subsector, with Waste Recycling below it, taking up M Sublevel (as well as N, but the lift only stops at M).

He heads off in search of a lift. And naturally, he runs into trouble.

Or, more accurately, a Troubleshooter team.

They see him, and immediately ready their weapons.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station

Mango follows the clone towards an office.

Cloning station office

On entering, he discovers what looks like more testing equipment, attached to a chair.

The clone sees him enter, and motions for him to get in the chair.

written by Malkom on Jul 13, 2011 23:18

"Vatcrap," I swear quietly to myself, as I quickly aim the laser rifle at the highest clearance Troubleshooter I see, or the one with mutant armband, if there is one with such an armband.

"One move, and I shoot. Drop your weapons." I have a crazed glint in my eyes. "Beware. I have a high explosive device on my person. It automatically detonates if I'm killed. The blast is strong enough to blow away this entire corridor, not to mention you. I've heard it's very unpleasant to have your stomach blasted through your backbone, but that's just what I've heard." I smile. "Not to mention your eyes shoved into your head..."⁵⁴¹

written by Speeder on Jul 13, 2011 23:53

I notice Cryo body is moving on its own actually.

"Oh Vatcrap! I thought he was being carried by the techs, but NO, HE IS MOVING ON ITS OWN AGAIN!!! AAAAAAH!!!"

I start to hop away... Hopefully faster than a two-legged zombie.

I reach for my back, and then I curse with all known curse words known to REDs

"How I wish I had my spear! Do you have any anti-armor shell L4?"

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 14, 2011 02:00

I take a seat in the chair, with little else to do. I answer the question. "I don't think I have anything to ask, other than just what we're going to be doing. Plus maybe a bit about how I'm going to explain why I'm out early to everyone else..."

written by 4616599 on Jul 14, 2011 04:56

I smile weakly.

"I'm Joris-R-DNK and this is a special anti-CMT, anti-headache suit. Full computer grade. I simply need directions."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 14, 2011 08:52

I follow behind Speed-Y and rifle through my backpack.

"Umm... I don't know. I don't think I've fired an armor piercing shell before."

I check for any shells that might do the job of effectively obliterating that zombie, like that one I fired at the frownyface mutants some time ago.

⁵⁴¹ MALKOM: (OOC: Bluffing FTW!)

"I'll see what I do have though..."

written by Speeder on Jul 14, 2011 11:41

"No wait! Do not explode him. We do not want flaming bits flying around!"

written by Jam on Jul 14, 2011 13:08

I stay away from zombie Cryo...

"How is he still moving? That sure is creepy..."

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 14, 2011 13:19

I wheel away from the zombie at a brisk pace.

written by Gligar on Jul 14, 2011 17:47⁵⁴²

Corridor (Gamma Subsector)

Malkom-R aims his laser rifle at the team leader, who is pretty obvious, seeing as she's the only ORANGE in a group of REDs. He claims that he has a bomb set to go off if he dies.

The team leader doesn't buy it. "Everyone knows that that only happens in vidshows", she says. "Now, are you going to make this easy, or hard? Not that it matters either way, because you will be dead!"

A second Troubleshooter, wearing the MBD badge of a Loyalty Officer, wonders why they're even talking to Malkom-R. They should just shoot!

Just shoot?" a third -- apparently the Happiness Officer -- says. "Gladly." And he raises his own pistol, and fires... at the Team Leader.

Now, you'd imagine that such a shot at point blank range would be a sure kill, right? Nope, the Happiness Officer's shot wasn't exactly what they call "spot on", so it hit the reflector instead of her head.

There's another problem. The ORANGE's reflector, once heated by a laser blast, begins to peel. It turns out that it's only painted ORANGE. The peeling areas betray the reflector's true GREEN clearance.

This shocks the Loyalty Officer. "Looks like we have more than one traitor around here," he says, bringing his own pistol round to the Team Leader.

Radial Corridor Intersection

Speed-Y isn't happy when he realizes what's going on. He tries to get away from Zombie Cryo, but ends up falling over.

As the zombie approaches Speed-Y, L4-O looks through his cone rifle shells. He seems to have a few of those explosive, frownything-unfriendly shells left, as well as ⁵⁴² GLIGAR: (OOC: pokes Mango, who is still posting invisible text

I'm pretty sure that the revised rules ask you not to do that.

Perhaps I should start re-posting invisible inside < I > tags? or maybe someone else might edit his post or something... but there's nothing I could do about that. Just a thought. [u] Mingamango181 has just won one Treason Point, which, effective immediately, will be tracked on the stats page. Having too many points will be hazardous to your character.)

those knockout gas shells (thoguh they wouldn't be all that useful), as well as a bunch of other shells he doesn't recognise.

There's also that tacnuke shell he found earlier.

Even as he tries to scramble away, Speed-Y exclaims that he doesn't want Cryo exploded. He doesn't want burning zombie chunks all over the place.

Jam-Y doesn't know hwo Zombie Cryo can even move. Seeing a headless corpse shamle around like that is kind of creepy.

Azir-R just wheels himself away.

Lucas-R just stares in panic as Zombie Cryo approaches Speed-Y. He then has an idea, taking out his laser pistol and shooting the zombie's legs repeatedly.

Cloning station office

Hmmm... wait a minute... I'm getting interference here. It's almost as if someone patched in a loop of an empty office to try to confuse me. Now why would they do that? To mask a secret society recruitment in progress, maybe? Oh well. Only a traitor would be foolish enough to actually try that in view of the cameras.

Speaking of which... aha! Looks like they didn't know about this camera! Let's see now...

Ah... Mango is seated in the chair and is saying that he has a couple of questions. He wants to know what he should b doing an how he's supposed to explain why he's out "early".

Industrial Subsectors -- checkpoint

Joris-R explains that he's wearing a special headache-proof and mutant-proof outfit, and just wants directions.

"Really? Then you'll have no trouble showing your Form 784g then. If you wanted the main sector, it's back that way. Otherwise, you'll have to go through here, and I can't let you through without proper clothing or a 784g."

The dust and smoke seem to get thicker, getting right into Joris-R's eyes, lungs, and skin, not to mention... other places.

written by Malkom on Jul 14, 2011 18:29

"Traitors united!" I yell, shooting at the Loyalty Officer. "Take 'em down! Death the the mutants!" I shoot at the Happiness Officer. "Die!" I shoot at the team leader. "Scoff your own foul drugs!" I shoot at the Happiness Officer if he's not already shot, and at a random Troubleshooter if he is. "EVERYONE, GET KILLED ALREADY!" I capitalize on what is probably general chaos now to shoot at everything that moves till no-one is shooting at me.

written by Speeder on Jul 14, 2011 18:35

I attempt to move away from flaming zombie.

"Aaaaaah! I do not want to get burned too!! AAAAAAah!!!"

I keep trying to move away.

"L4, kill it! Kill it! Or better, explode the ground so he falls on the floor below! Yeah, do that! But only if it is safe for us!"

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 14, 2011 19:28

Vatcrap! I think to myself, I have no way to help in this situation. I should of though about weapons earlier.

I turn around and trying to think of some way to help that doesn't involve wheeling past the zombie to the hub to the vendbot and hoping I can afford a pistol.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 14, 2011 20:02⁵⁴³

"I think I'll just take my chances blowing it up sir, if it falls on the level below we'll just have a zombie on the level below us wandering around. Possibly straight to us."

I grin wildly and look at the tacnuke shell... but then frown and grab one of the explosive, frownything-unfriendly shells instead.

"I think I'll save the nuke for something more worthy..."

I load up Turbo and attempt to fire straight at Cryo.⁵⁴⁴

written by Gligar on Jul 15, 2011 02:04

Corridor (Gamma Subsector)

A flurry of shooting happens. As you might imaging, this causes a lot of smoke as things get burnt.

But when it clears, there are only two clones left: the Loyalty Officer and Malkom-R. The former still has his laser pistol aimed at the latter, unaware that it is now squealing at him.

Then again, so is Malkom-R's.

Radial Corridor Intersection

Speed-Y continues trying to get away. He yells over to L4-O to shoot, either at it, or at the floor, dropping the zombie below.

Azir-R decides to head back to the Hub in search of weapons.

L4-O looks at his tacnuke shell, before deciding that now is not the time. He opts instead for a regular explosive shell, and loads up Turbo.

But by this time, it is clear that Speed-Y didn't get away in time. The zombie ends up hugging his remaining leg, setting his jumpsuit on fire.

L4-O fires.

There is an explosion.

The good news? There's no more zombie. Chunks, but that's all.

The bad news? Well... Speed-Y has some zombie arms draped around his remaining leg. Also, more pain. Being next to an explosion is generally not a good idea.

⁵⁴³ LIGHTNING4: (OOC: Wonder if you can get negative treason points... I wonder what that would even do... 🤔)

⁵⁴⁴ MALKOM: (OOC: I have deja vu.)

The Hub

By Now, Internal Security swarm the place. But there's enough room to get to the vendobots.

Conveniently, one has laser pistols for a hundred credits each, including barrel.

written by Speeder on Jul 15, 2011 02:17

"AAAAH!!! NOW SOMEONE PLEASE PUT OFF THE FIRE! I WANT A HAVE A CYBORG FOOT, NOT A HALF BODY CYBORG!!!"

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 15, 2011 02:28

"It's probably my paranoia... It isn't too much of concern."

I look over at the clone.

"What are we testing for?"

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 15, 2011 02:53

Once I reach it, I attempt to purchase something I can afford that likens itself to my ability to throw stuff.

Barring such weaponry, I go for a cheap alternative that.

written by Speeder on Jul 15, 2011 11:43

I whimper (in a corner! If I could...)

"That hurts... That hurts... That hurts... That hurts..."

written by Jam on Jul 15, 2011 12:13

"Ah! What happened?! Are you okay Speed-Y?"

I check how injured Speed-Y appears to be...

written by Lightning4 on Jul 15, 2011 13:56

"I'm sorry sir! I guess I underestimated how powerful this thing was..."

I attempt to kick the zombie arms away from Speed in attempt to free him from its grasp.

written by 4616599 on Jul 15, 2011 14:51

I cough and twitch a little.

"Ugh. Frelling mutants. I have no idea what the 784g is."

I look back at the sector and reverse a bit.

"Thank you, sir. Where are we, by the way?"

written by Malkom on Jul 15, 2011 15:05⁵⁴⁵

I throw the squealing weapon at the Loyalty Officer's feet and taunt him, knowing that his now-squealing pistol probably won't shoot. "Haha! Try and catch me, eh? Feeling a bit traitorous, are we? Come on, shoot your little peashooter. Look, I'm even unarmed. You still can't touch me with your pathetic toy blowgun, haha. Stupid little man. Oh, did I say man? Oh sorry, I meant Junior Citizen. A very junior citizen. Sorry about the mistake, old chap. I always like to be accurate in my descriptions of others. Don't you? Oh wait, being so young and all you can hardly describe others, let alone hold a laser pistol. Hahaha!"

⁵⁴⁵ MALKOM: (OOC: My rifle is squealing? Do they do that often? 🤔)

written by Gligar on Jul 15, 2011 16:55

Radial Corridor Intersection

Speed-Y freaks out. He yells for someone to get these zombie arms off him, and for the fire to be put out. He wants a cyborg foot, not a cyborg half body, after all.

But the zombie arms keep moving up his leg, as if they're hoping to spread their fire even further... Speaking of which, the remains of jumpsuit still attached to the arms is beginning to burn away.

This is too much for Speed-Y. He starts whimpering about how much it hurts.

Jam-Y hurries over. He sees that Speed-Y's good leg is now on fire, with the zombie arms moving their way up... and that's just wrong...

L4-O rushes over as fast as he can, and proceeds to kick the arms away.

Only to find that they're now attached to his legs instead...⁵⁴⁶

The Hub

Azir-R has a look for more weapons... specifically, stuff that can be thrown. Unfortunately, there seems to be a lack of grenades.

However, something nags at the back of his mind... a half-remembered fact about B3 cans... something about shaking them? They would probably blow up if you did that! And they're really cheap, too. He'd have enough for some cans of B3 and a laser pistol!

Industrial Subsectors -- Checkpoint

Of course, Joris-R doesn't have a Form 784g, a fact which he attributes to the mutants.

He backs up, and asks where they are. "You're at the Industrial Subsector checkpoint," replies the clone. "Can't you read?" He points at a sign above the checkpoint.

"Now, are you going to sort out your jumpsuit problem, or do I have to call for Internal Security to remove you?"

Corridor (Gamma Subsector)⁵⁴⁷

Malkom-R throws the offending weapon at the Loyalty Officer before proceeding to insult him in as many ways as he can think of.

This just causes the Loyalty Officer to pull a short sword from somewhere, and lunge at Malkom-R with it.

All the while the two squealing barrels continue to squeal.

Cloning Station office

Mango wants to know what they are testing for. "You aren't cleared to know that," the clone replies.

⁵⁴⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: Speeder gets a perversity point for a nice reaction there 😊)

⁵⁴⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: Well, it does have a laser barrel...)

written by Malkom on Jul 15, 2011 17:15

I scream and fling myself to the ground, grab the Loyalty Officer's feet, and try and pull him over and punch him somewhere where it really hurts! I of course avoid the sword while doing this. At least, I try to.⁵⁴⁸

written by Speeder on Jul 15, 2011 17:29

I start to roll around trying to put out the fire.

Of course, I do not look where I am rolling, so do not mind if I hit you, or you, or you there.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 15, 2011 19:49

I notice the arms are on me and are on fire.

"Aaaa AAH AAH GETITOFFGETITOFFGETITOFFGETITOFF-" gasp

"GETITOFFGETITOFFGETITOFF"

I flail wildly and roll around.

written by Jam on Jul 16, 2011 01:11

"Ah! There's a fire! FIRE! AH! AHHH!"

I run around screaming, and completely forget any training of what to do when someclone is on fire... Of course, being brainscrubbed probably didn't help...

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 16, 2011 01:39

"Oh, okay. Probably for the best that I don't know right now..."

written by 4616599 on Jul 16, 2011 08:07⁵⁴⁹

Something seems to click.

"Cough. On second thought, Internal Security might be just what I need. Where are they?"

I cough again, from the smoke, and look around for shelter.
550 551

written by Gligar on Jul 16, 2011 15:58

Corridor (Gamma Subsector)

Malom-R continues fighting, attempting to knock the Loyalty Officer's legs out from under him. He fails utterly, partly because he just tripped up over his own discarded laser rifle. The barrel's still squealing, by the way.

The Loyalty Officer takes advantage of this, and lunges with his sword.

Just as his own laser barrel explodes.

The blast rips through the Loyalty Officer, and causes Malkom-R's laser rifle to also detonate.

⁵⁴⁸ MALKOM: (OOC: Barrel explosion? ...please?)

⁵⁴⁹ 4616599: (OOC: Malkom, you could always spend a pp)

⁵⁵⁰ SPEEDER: (OOC: I will be out of computer for almost the entire day today. So do not mind me not posting at the usual midday time that I post every day).

⁵⁵¹ MALKOM: (OOC: No thanks. I'll leave this one to fate.)

As well as all of their laser barrels.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station

Almost unnoticed among the cloning tanks, a terminal continues its job of displaying the current list of clones in need of decanting, and the cause of death. As clones are terminated, they are added to this list, which is automatically reshuffled according to clone priority. For example, two clones have just been terminated. they appear on the list: Jerome-R-BVN and Malkom-R-TLK. Cause of Death: laser barrel explosion.

Jerome-R is automatically shuffled into fourth place -- rapid decanting being one of the perks of being a Troubleshooter.

Malkom-R, on the other hand... flags an error. His clone template is already being deleted, and can't be used. In time, the message redacts itself, and Malkom-R disappears from the list.

Almost as if he never existed.

Cloning station office

Mango tells the clone that it's probably for the best that he didn't know. The clone continues his tests, before saying, "Okay, that looks to be everything. I have your ME card and assignment papers -- you've been assigned to Industrial Subsector B. It seems that they're in need of Ring-For-Service Bell Impact Testers."*

The clone offers Mango the papers.

Radial Corridor Intersection

Speed-Y starts rolling around, trying to put the fire out. It seems to have worked. To a degree. At least he's not on fire anymore.

Jam-Y runs around in panic, forgetting his "What To Do When Someclone Is On Fire" lectures, and apparently not noticing that Speed-Y rolled into him a couple of times, spreading the fire.

L4-O has his own fire problems. Not only is he yelling for someclone to get the arms off him, but said arms seem to be trying to enter his jumpsuit's legs. Of course, they're setting him on fire as well. Even though they're starting to fall apart.⁵⁵²

Industrial Subsectors -- Checkpoint

Joris-R decides that Internal Security might be a good idea. He asks for directions. While coughing.

"They're everywhere, clone. Including right behind you."

And indeed, there is a goon right behind him, hitting his truncheon against the palm of his gloved hand. "You," he growls.

* So that's where the bell factory was hiding.

⁵⁵² GLIGAR: (OOC: Okay... this is fun 😊 One perversity point goes to each of Jam, L4... and Cryo. Oh, and Speeder can have one as well.)

written by Lightning4 on Jul 16, 2011 16:40 Industrial Subsectors -- Checkpoint

"FIRE FIRE AAAAAA!"

I continue flailing about wildly, and start rolling in an attempt to put out the fire and possibly get what's left of the zombie arms off me.

"AAAAAAAH! ZOMBIE FIRE BURNING AAAAAAH!"

written by 4616599 on Jul 16, 2011 18:47

I suddenly clutch at my head again.

"Ow! Erm, haem, ahem! Oh, hello!"

I wobble around a bit, and attempt to add in a sterner tone.

"You'll call me 'Sir!'" written by Malkom on Jul 16, 2011 19:10⁵⁵³

I have time for one brief, gut-wrenching yell before I'm ripped into bits by the explosion.

Tiny bits. Eeeew. A few miniature specks float away from me. Nanobots! Ugh.

A lot of my insides also seem to have spewed all over the corridor, and leaked onto the floor, and other disgusting stuff. I wonder if someone might come along, slip in them, and say something treasonous...

Ah well. At least, in dying, I did one last thing to irritate Alpha Complex, however mildly: I left a huge mess for the scrubots to clean.

Stupid scrubots. Serves them right! Probably built by the filthy mutants, anyway...

I think my skull got shattered against the wall. If I was alive, that would hurt.

Maybe it's lucky I'm not alive anymore.

written by Jam on Jul 16, 2011 21:49

"AAAH! FIRE!"

I scream a bit more, then notice the burning dismembered arms trying to climb up L4-O's jumpsuit...

"AH! ZOMBIE ARMS! HANG ON L4-O!"

I try to knock the burning arms off of L4-O.

written by Gligar on Jul 16, 2011 23:54

Radial Corridor Intersection

L4-O flails. There's a lot of flailing happening recently. He also rolls, to try to dislodge the burning arms, and the fire.

Jam-Y continues freaking out over the fire, until he notices that burning arms, and tries to do something about it. The combination of L4-O rolling and Jam-Y batting at the arms is rather silly-looking, but effective. The remains of the arms fall to the floor, now little more than a mass of seared cloneflesh and bones. Oh, and the smell of burned Soylent.

⁵⁵³ MALKOM: (OO: So, should I just PM you, Gligar, and talk about making a new character for myself?)

Joris-R seems to have a headache again. He notices the goon, and tells him to call him Sir, for some reason.

This causes the goon to lash out with his truncheon, which lands with a dull thud right on Joris-R's kneecap. "The only sir around here is me! You got that, bootsmoke? Now, you are coming with me. We need to have a little chat about your outfit there."

To the clone at the checkpoint, the goon adds, "Open up. We're coming through."⁵⁵⁴

written by Lightning4 on Jul 16, 2011 23:59

"AAAH BURNING. MUCH BU-"

I stop flailing and look down.

"Oh. I... guess that's over. Uh... thanks."

I get up and pat down any stray flames on my suit or armor.

"That had better be the last of that zombie..."

I back away from the remains, just in case.

written by Speeder on Jul 17, 2011 04:43

As I am not on fire anymore, I sit, kinda away from the winding down mayhem.

Then I do my signature eye roll.

"Mental note, zombie Cryo also causes temporary group stupidity."

I attempt to see if there are any rebellious flaming bits around.

written by 4616599 on Jul 17, 2011 06:38

"Ow! Oh, absolutely. Brilliant. We'll do just that!"

Grinning, I lean forward and hurtle into the sector at full speed(with or without the goon). Wrapping my neck jumpsuit around my head to shield me from the dust, I look around.

written by Gligar on Jul 17, 2011 14:01

Radial Corridor Intersection

L4-O doesn't initially notice that things are under control. It takes him a moment of flailing and yelling before he looks down and notices.

He stands up and pats out one last flame. There. Now all he needs is a new jumpsuit.

Speed-Y sits by the wall and rolls his eyes. Even a zombie Cryo is too much for him.

He looks for anything left of Cryo. There are a few chunks dotted around, still smoldering, but apart from that, it looks like there's nothing left.

Industrial Subsectors -- Checkpoint

As the clone stands aside and opens the gate, Joris-R guns the Transition.

⁵⁵⁴ GLIGAR: (OO: to Malkom: Yes, send me a PM.)

It turns out that not wearing a jumpsuit properly is not a good idea when you're traveling through an industrial subsector at speed. He's pelted by quite a bit of dust, which digs into his skin, his eyes, his lungs, his mouth, and other miscellaneous parts of his body, and causes quite a bit of pain.

But that's not all. The goon, now understandable irate that Joris-R just zoomed off, has pulled out a stunner and, aiming it at Joris-R, fires.

Thirty thousand volts arc between the stunner and the rapidly retreating Transition in a brilliant BLUE beam. They cause Joris-R's body to seize up, adding even more pain, and also causing him to lose control of the Transition,, which suddenly tips forward, throwing him off. It proceeds to plow into the roadway just past Joris-R and shut down.

After a moment, the goon catches up, grabs Joris-R by the arms, and drags him off. All I can say is "ouch".⁵⁵⁵

written by Speeder on Jul 17, 2011 15:40

Now that it looks safe again, I look if I can still walk with my burned leg, if I can, I stand and proclaim:

"TO THE BUNKER! again..."

Then I remember there are docbots around, I look if they are still nearby.

"Docbots! Are you still there? We need your help... again..."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 17, 2011 16:10

While Speed is talking with a docbot, I check myself over for any new major burns. Any that need help, anyway.

written by Jam on Jul 17, 2011 20:40

I check to make sure that I'm not on fire...

Then I respond to Speed-Y...

"Yeah... Perhaps we should go to the bunker... I'm feeling really tired... Let's let some other clones catch Malkom-R... Anyone have any objections?"

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 17, 2011 23:15⁵⁵⁶

I purchase the laser pistol, and all the b3 I can, this sounds fun. Then I wheel back to the group a mobile cripple death-mobile.

written by Gligar on Jul 18, 2011 00:29

Radial Corridor Intersection

Speed-Y checks to see if he can still walk. Well, hop. Yep, feels pretty good. A bit achy, though. He suggests, in no uncertain terms, that the team head to the bunker.

He remembers the docbots, and looks around for them. But they seem to have trundled off.

L4-O also looks himself over. A few new burns, but nothing major.

⁵⁵⁵ MALKOM: OOC: ^ Last sentence totally agreed with by me.

⁵⁵⁶ AZIRPHAELI: (Sorry I was gone for the weekend)

Jam-Y also looks himself over. He seems to have avoided any major burns.

He agrees with Speed-Y about going to the bunker. Perhaps someone else should go after Malkom-R.

Soon after that, Azir-R reappears, holding a laser pistol and about a dozen cans of B3.

Somewhere in Industrial Subsector A

Joris-R is awakened suddenly. He must have blacked out for a moment there.

He becomes aware that he's tied to a chair in some sort of office, or perhaps an interrogation room... that dust and smoke is making it difficult to tell.

written by Speeder on Jul 18, 2011 03:35

I start to hop toward the bunker again.

"Next mission, or next time Cryo is near, in fact specially when Cryo is near, we should ask for a team private docbot."

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 18, 2011 05:48

I zone out again as my mind appears to be running not nearly as quickly as it was just before.

I should be grateful, I suppose. But what a mess it's all been! And now, for that to just change again...

"Oh..."

Okay."

I take the papers and take a quick brief read of them.

"Thank you."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 18, 2011 11:43

I follow behind Speed.

"Or find the nearest convenient incinerator..."

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 18, 2011 13:16

I catch the tail end of the conversation as I wheel up.

"Oh.. no malkom hunting... very well then."

I follow the team.

written by 4616599 on Jul 18, 2011 13:54

Gligar said:

All I can say is "ouch".

written by Gligar on Jul 18, 2011 16:27

Radial Corridor Intersection

Speed-Y begins to move off. He suggests that they get a docbot for next mission. Or for when they next meet Cryo, whichever is sooner.

Following along behind, L4-O suggests that they instead find the nearest handy incinerator.

Lucas-R suggests, "Perhaps we could look in to more effective ways of eradicating zombies, sirs."

Catching up to the group, Azir-R seems a little disappointed that they won't be chasing after Malkom-R.

As the team walks, the PA speaks up again. "Citizens, I have good news! During the course of their mission, Troubleshooter Team Pickaxe, of GDG Sector, have terminated Malkom-R-TLK! The prize for the kill goes to Jerome-R-BVN-2, who valiantly sacrificed his won life in terminating the traitor! The rest of the team also lost their lives in the incident.

"There is just one thing that remains, and this concerns you, citizens! Everyone is instructed to ingest one tablet of MemGo Supplement #227 as soon as possible, to remove residual memories of the aforementioned traitor. Tablets will be distributed along with standard medication packs. Have a fantastic day, citizens!"

Soon, the team arrives at the subsector checkpoint at the end of the corridor.

Cloning Station office

Mango takes the papers and glances at them. He notices that he's been assigned to Dormitory 6, Building 2, in Industrial Subsector B. His work cycle is to take place in Testing Area 2, Building 3.

Bundled with the papers is his ME Card. No PDC, but he's no longer cleared for one.

The clone says, "If there is nothing else, you can head on over there."

Interrogation Room?

Joris-R makes it known that he hurts.

From somewhere, a voice says, "Ah, you're awake. I have a few questions for you... like why you're running around out of uniform!"

written by Speeder on Jul 18, 2011 17:27

I look at the nearest speaker while hearing.

"Oh... that is sad, I really wanted to kill Malkom, and now I have to FORGET him. That is very sad. His vidshow was awesome until he escaped."

Then I look at L4.

"Hey, I suggest you until our next mission, go to the army and seek training in zombie fighting, you know, those slugthrowers that has scattershot, flamethrowers, and other fun things you can do to a zombie. I am sure THAT will keep us fairly safe from Cryo and any other strange creatures, maybe even safe from Headgrabber..."

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 18, 2011 20:18

Considering that I didn't have a PDC with my last clone anyway, I don't see any room for complaint. I mean, it looks like I won't be receiving any unwanted calls any time soon.

"Sure."

I head out of the Cloning Station office, and look for a sign that indicates towards Industrial Subsector B.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 18, 2011 21:18

"Sounds like a plan, sir."

I make my way through the checkpoint and wait for the group.

I take out my PDC and search for the nearest Armed Forces station to the bunker.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 18, 2011 21:47

I attempt, as well, to pass the checkpoint and keep up with the team.

written by Jam on Jul 19, 2011 01:25

"Oh, Malkom-R was terminated! Good!"

I follow the rest of the team.

"So we'll have our memories of Malkom-R erased? Hmm..."

written by Gligar on Jul 19, 2011 02:05

Internal Security Checkpoint

Speed-Y looks up at the nearest speaker, a little sadly. He wanted to be the one to terminate Malkom-R. And now he has to forget him.

"You and the whole sector, pal," one of the guards tells him. He then asks to see ME cards.

Speed-Y then has an idea. He suggests to L4-O that he look into getting zombie handling training. Such a thing would be of huge benefit to the team.,

L4-O agrees to the idea, and presents his ME card to the guard. He is allowed through.

Once back in Epsilon Subsector, he pulls out his PDC and runs a quick search. It looks like the nearest Armed Forces facility to the bunker is the barracks the team visited, the one with the Com 3 unit, on H Level.

Azir-R follows him through, also presenting his ME Card for inspection. The guard lets hin through.

Jam-Y follows. He's not sure what to think about having to forget Malkom-R.

Cloning Station Office

Mango heads out of the office, and looks for a way out. He finds the cloning station's foyer, and its exit. It seems to be marked as RED Clearance, though.

He looks again. Aha! a stairwell. And also a sector plan, albeit a basic one. It looks like Industrial Subsector B is some distance from the domescraper, accessible from a roadway leading from Epsilon Subsector. Now, how to get there...

written by Speeder on Jul 19, 2011 04:42

I also proceed.

"Ok, I will get some rest, and then figure what to do, I am sure some YELLOW specific training must exist, or some YELLOW specific equipment... After that zombie incident I will look if anyone made kevlar-based armoured jumpsuit that is also fireproof."

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 19, 2011 10:53

Convenient? Too convenient.

"Don't overthink it. Just get on with it." I say to myself.

I proceed quickly and quietly towards Industrial Subsector B, doing nothing that would get me noticed.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 19, 2011 12:40

"I think I'll follow. I'll sort out the armed forces thing later. That's probably also where I should look for a job, if I'm still in the Armed Forces registry."

I follow.

written by 4616599 on Jul 19, 2011 16:09

"Ugh,,,where am I? Oh, I was testing out a new mutant repellent thing. It's somewhat useful."

I check if I still have the boot on my head.

written by Jam on Jul 19, 2011 16:21

"Hmm... I wonder what Service Group I was in before..."

I try to recall the name of the Service Group...

"..."

"I wonder what the best way to destroy a zombie is... Fire seemed to work pretty well, as long as we avoid the flames... Maybe we should all carry flamethrowers? What clearance are flamethrowers anyway?"

written by Gligar on Jul 19, 2011 17:58

Corridor P2

Speed-Y, and the rest of the gang, continue. Speed-Y says he'll get some rest, and probably look into training himself. There's probably some available. Either that, or specific anti-zombie equipment...

L4-O follows. He'll look into the Armed Forces situation later.

As he walks, Jam-Y wonders about his service group. He thinks. PLC comes to mind.

He also think about the best way to destroy a zombie... fire? Perhaps they should get flamethowers... aren't those YELLOW Clearance?

In time, the team passes through the concourse and arrives, once again, at the lift hall.

Stairwell

Mango continues down. It's quite a climb.

Eventually, he reaches the bottom, exhausted. Looking around, he notes several sales stalls, though none are likely to help an INFRARED. A signpost points to several subsectors. One points to a roadway, so he heads that way.

Interrogation room?

Joris-R claims that he was testing a mutant repellent. He checks if he still has the boot on his head, to realise that it's gone.

"Two jumpsuits and boots worn on the hands don't make a mutant repellent. Unless you've got documentation to support your claim? A 784g, or an R&D authorisation form, perhaps? But I guess not."

Transtube station

Let's have a quick look over here.

The station's not exactly busy right now, but then again, it did just reopen after a Communist takeover. There is one transbot pulling into Platform F, though.

Platform F

Some clones exit the transbot. One of them, a RED clone whose jumpsuit bears the logo of R&D, is called Mike-R-NRK. He has that grin that says "I've just taken a Remedial Happiness Pill" which in this case seems to bear a passing resemblance to a scowl.

He's holding a couple of forms authorising his transfer, and travel, to JHT Sector. His next step would be to find the Relocation Office. It should be around here somewhere...

written by Malkom on Jul 19, 2011 18:21⁵⁵⁷

My remains and those of the Loyalty officer- or was it the happiness officer- sit around, starting to smell and generally being disgusting.⁵⁵⁸

written by Speeder on Jul 19, 2011 18:32

I now go silent, wondering about what to do in the next weeks.

Also I wonder when I will be called for cyborgzation, and what they will do with my newly burnt leg.

I still walk toward the bunker.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 19, 2011 18:46

I too wonder where I will be working for the coming weeks until the next assignment is doled out.

Seeing a lack of immediate threats in the area, I drink a can of B3/Explosive fun-time canister.

written by Malkom on Jul 19, 2011 18:50⁵⁵⁹

Mick-R steps down from the transbot and glances around coldly, taking in any clones nearby. INFRAREDs, REDs, and higher-clearance clones all get noticed as he also looks for a sign that might lead him to the Relocation Office. There's ⁵⁵⁷ MALKOM: (OOC: I wait for my new character.

>_>)

⁵⁵⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: poke

Look up. ☺)

⁵⁵⁹ MALKOM: (OOC: ...I could have sworn that wasn't there a minute ago.)

little emotion in the glance, though his face is stiffly frozen in some kind of expression resembling a smile.

written by Megagun on Jul 19, 2011 19:49

I look around.

"Er. What was that? What happened?"

written by Jam on Jul 19, 2011 22:59

I look at Azir-R, who seems to have gotten a laser pistol...

Only one barrel.

That's worrying...

I look down at my own stash of barrels, and count them in my mind...

Seventeen.

What if we got into a fight, and he ran out of shots?

Very worrying...

written by Lightning4 on Jul 20, 2011 00:03

I proceed onto the lift.

"Fire is fun. Though I'm probably not cleared for it besides this cone rifle."

"I'm sure there are some napalm shells out there though... I might still have a few handy!"

"Maybe when I have time I should get my shells identified and get some new ones. That'd be useful..."

I ponder for a bit.

written by Gligar on Jul 20, 2011 02:21

Corridor (Gamma Subsector)

In case you're wondering, the remains of [NAME REDACTED] and Jerome-R are causing a spot of bother for a scrubot, who is currently cleaning them up. "Why it is," it says to no-one in particular, "that these meatsacks always see fit to spread themselves over as wide an area as they can? And guess who has to clean it up?"

Lift hall

Speed-Y arrives at the lift hall, pondering what to do now. He wonders when he'll be called forward for cyborging. He enters the lift.

Azir-R also enters the lift, opening one of his cans of B3 as he does. Mmm, Extra Classic flavour.

Jam-Y enters the lift behind Azir-R, noting that the latter now has a laser pistol, but only one barrel. And yet he has seventeen of them. That troubles Jam-Y.

L4-O is next. He thinks that he isn't cheared for a flamethrower. But there are cone rifle shells which can spread fire. He may still have some of those napalm shells left.

And there's the unidentified shells... maybe he should get those identified.

Lucas-R and John-R follow everyone else onto the lift.

How convenient that there was a lift just waiting there for them.

Transtube Station, Platform F

Mick-R looks around after stepping away from the treansbot. There are a few RED clones scattered about, some of them heading for the transbot. A lone INFRARED by the platform entrance seems to want to enter, but she isn't cleared for Platform F.

The entrance, by the way, leads to a flight of stairs, which heads up to an overhead walkway, serving all the platforms, and leading to the station building proper in one direction, and to what appears to be some offices in the other. Indeed, there's a sign, "OFFICES".

? (yet again)

Leeroy suddenly comes online. He... it... looks around. It notices that it has sight again, and that it is no longer in the debriefing room.

It also seems to be a little closer to the floor.

There are two clones here, both GREEN. One says, "Ah! You're online. For a moment, we were worried that we weren't able to transfer enough of you into the bot brain. But it looks like we could. We had to drop quite a few memories, though. They wouldn't fit."

written by Megagun on Jul 20, 2011 10:20

"Eh, who are you? Also, where am I? Furthermore, who am I? Also, who is that traitor again that decided that I had to be put into a bot shell like this? I remember having uncovered some dirty conspiracy about him being a commie mutant traitor, but I can't actually remember said conspiracy. How unfortunate!"

I start probing my memory banks.

"Hmm, it looks like you also got rid of my photographic memory of every single episode of Mandatory Team Troubleshooter. I guess I'll just have to watch every single episode all over again."

written by Speeder on Jul 20, 2011 11:19

I forget to press the correct button, and just already start singing my B3 jingle.

A quite tame one, not the out of control that made even machines thirsty.

written by Malkom on Jul 20, 2011 16:14

Mick-R steps off the platform, and frowns at the INFRARED. "You! Get away from here and go find a platform you're cleared to be on. Now, before I lose my temper!"

Once the INFRARED is sent off, he heads up the stairs and looks for the office he needs to go into. Once he finds it, he enters it.

written by Jam on Jul 20, 2011 17:47

"Hmm... What level did we need to go to again? Lift, do you know where the bunker is?"

written by Gligar on Jul 20, 2011 18:49

?

Since it's missing a few memories, Leeroy is having trouble figuring out where it is, or even who it is. It can't remember who ordered that t be put into a bot shell, but whoever it was must be a commie mutant traitor. One who it was trying to expose, though it can't remember the details of that, either. Oh well.

While it scans its memory, one tech answers, "Okay, from the top. You're..." He checks his PDC. "...Scrubot R0J-317(d)228-a9, also called Leeroy. You're in an R&D lab in JHT Sector.

"As to who authorised your transfer... well, the orders came direct from Friend Computer. If you want to suggest that Our Mutual Friend is a commie mutant traitor, go right ahead. Oh wait... you probably can't."

Leeroy realises that its memories of Mandatory Team Troubleshooter are missing, and says that it will just have to watch them again.

"You... might want to hold off on that. Your memory is almost at capacity as it is."

A lift

Speed-Y might be in the lift, but he's forgotten to press the button. Instead he's humming a B3 tune. Just an ordinary one, though.

Jam-Y notices, but can't remember what level they need to go to. He asks the lift, which replies, "Which bunker did you mean, citizen?"

Transtube station. Platform F.

Mick-R leaves the platform, pausing to arrogantly tell the INFRARED to clear off. She looks a little shocked but complies.

Perhaps satisfied that he's bullied someone, Mick-R heads off in search of the right office.

Transtube station. Overhead walkway.

Heading towards the marked offices, Mick-R comes across a vendobot. It's out of service, though. A Tech Services clone is probably repairing it. Mick-R moves on.

Transtube station. Offices reception.

Heading through the door, Mick-R finds himself in a triangular RED reception area. There are four desks, of which only one is currently staffed. Behind the desks are four doors.

The one clone -- an ORANGE CPU clone -- looks up. "Can I help you, citizen?"

written by Speeder on Jul 20, 2011 19:00

As I hear Jam question, and the lift reply, I realize I do not know that information either.

"How I wish Nukabot was here, he certainly would be able to inform where his home is located."

Then I sigh.

"I want Nukabot back."

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 20, 2011 19:06

"so we don't know? Maybe the list can just take us to the Bunker it thinks we want, and we can go from there."

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 20, 2011 20:28

I continue on my way towards Industrial Subsector B.

written by Malkom on Jul 20, 2011 21:48

Mick-R speaks rapidly in a low monotone, as if trying to control his emotions. "I've been reassigned to Troubleshooter Team Epsilon. My name is Mick-R-NRK. I need the Relocation Office, correct?"⁵⁶⁰

written by Jam on Jul 21, 2011 01:21

"Um... um..."

I scrunch my face up in concentration...

"Uh... A Level, I think... Or was is C Level... Is there a bunker around there?"

If there is, I tell the lift to take us there!

written by Gligar on Jul 21, 2011 02:30

A lift

On hearing the lift's reply, Speed-Y realises that he also doesn't know the answer.

Nukabot would know... but Nukabot is not here. Speed-Y wants Nukabot back.

Azir-R suggests letting the lift choose which bunker is the right one.

Jam-Y concentrates... seeing if anything comes to mind.

Aha! A Level. Or was it C Level?

"A Level. C Level. Got it," the lift replies, and, seemingly ignoring Jam-Y's other question, begins its descent.

Roadway

Mango continues his journey. It's quite a walk. To Mango's mind, it's a much better journey than getting lost in a maze of twisty little corridors, all alike. For one, it consists of traveling in one direction, past a subsector, and straight on.

Eventually, he arrives at the checkpoint.

Industrial Subsectors -- Checkpoint

Mango stops at the checkpoint. It's difficult to proceed when there's a barrier in the way.

The second reason he stops is the dust. And the smoke. He's not prepared for it. It seems to have become even thicker since we last saw it.

⁵⁶⁰ MALKOM: (OOC: I thought it was Mike-R? But never mind, Mick-R will do as well...)

A clone appears from out of it and asks for his ME Card and papers.

Transtube station. Office reception.

In a monotone, Mick-R explains why he's there.

The clone seems to ignore the monotone. Indeed, he seems to have little inflection in his own voice all of a sudden. He answers Mick-R's query with, "That's right, citizen. Second door on the right, straight on." He indicates behind him.

written by Speeder on Jul 21, 2011 03:13

I think a bit.

"A level ends on the roadway though, using A level we can enter using the garage."

written by Malkom on Jul 21, 2011 05:32

Mick-R walks towards the door, constricting his face into some semblance of a big, happy grin.

It comes out more of a scowl. He pushes the door open and steps inside.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 21, 2011 10:38

I honestly cannot recall a time when I last enjoyed a walk like this... But supposing with that brainscrub for reasons unknown...

"Huh."

A word escapes before I'm aware of what is going on. A checkpoint has suddenly shown up, and with it, smoke. And lots of it.

"Oh, sure."

I reach for my ME Card and appropriate documents, and present them to the clone, a smile written unintentionally onto my face. Or was it?

Waiting while the clone checks it through, I observe the cause that would make setting up the checkpoint necessary in the first place.

Odd... Smoke. Here? Sometimes I wonder what clones do to cause this.

written by Gligar on Jul 21, 2011 16:39

A lift

As the lift descends, Speed-Y thinks. A Level would bring them out by the roadway, right? That means they'll be near the bunker after all.

Transtube station. Office hallway

Mick-R steps through the door into a RED hallway with several doors. The one he's heading for is at the far end.

A camera notices him, and begins tracking.

He reaches the door, and opens it.

Relocation Office

He enters to find a mixed-clearance office. Most of the office is ORANGE, but the central portion, from the door to one of the three desks, is RED. As it happens, that dies is staffed by a RED clone, and a registered mutant at that. He's wearing what looks to be a mutant control collar.

The other two desks, in the ORANGE areas, have their own clones, both ORANGE, who work at terminals. Also present is an IntSec clone, another ORANGE. He's watching the mutant.

The mutant notices Mick-R. "...Yeah?"

Industrial Subsectors -- Checkpoint

Mango, seemingly lost in thought, takes a moment to realise what's going on. He's surprised at the dust, and the smoke, seemingly exuding from the subsectors, both getting everywhere, including right into his lungs.

But soon, he notices the clone, and presents his documents.

As the clone looks them over, he becomes aware of the subsectors proper: six large factory-looking buildings, three either side of the roadway. No details can be made out, though.

Another thing emanates from the buildings: the ever-present sound of machinery, which seems to blend together into a deep pulsing roar.

Eventually, the clone answers, "Building 2, Subsector B... second building on the right. Your workcycle starts after lunch, so I suggest you go find your dormitory."

written by Malkom on Jul 21, 2011 16:46

Mick-R looks a tiny bit taken aback by the mutant collar, but quickly forces it down. Speaking in the same monotone, he declares that he's been reassigned to Troubleshooter Team Epsilon. "I guess I'll need to fill out some forms or something." He puts his ME card and any relevant documents down at the table. "Get on with it."

written by Speeder on Jul 21, 2011 16:52

I resume singing the B3 jingle and then...

"Hey Azir, if you borrow me a B3 now, I give you two B3 later... But, wait, why you bought so much B3?"

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 21, 2011 16:56

"Let's be honest, is there ever such a thing as 'too much b3'?"

I'll toss one his way gingerly, telegraphing it so there's no way he can miss it.

"I am sure they'll come in handy with a little improvisation should we run into any more trouble."

written by Jam on Jul 21, 2011 18:16

Seeing all the B3 flying around, I suddenly feel thirsty... So I take out one of my B3's, and start to drink it...

written by Speeder on Jul 21, 2011 19:04 Industrial Subsectors -- Checkpoint

I grab the B3

"Oh, you too already know about the use of B3 as grenades I guess."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 21, 2011 19:30

I check on my person for any more food. If I find any in edible condition, I start munching away.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 21, 2011 20:22

"Well, rumors at any rate, I never tried it first hand.."

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 21, 2011 20:26

I take the papers back, thank the clone for his time, and decide to at least take a look at where I'll be working first, before then searching out my dormitory's location.

written by Gligar on Jul 22, 2011 02:43

Relocation Office

Mick-R tries to hide any disgust he might have at the mutant, and explains why he's here, offering his relocation papers and his ME cards. The mutant takes them and scans the ME card on his terminal. "...Oh, you're transferring from NRK sector? You'll need to sign this." He hands Mick-R a form. "Then I'll tell R&D you're here. They'll tell you where to go."

The mutant wait for a moment. "Oh yeah. You'll need to go find your own accommodation. We don't assign it unless you're INFRARED."

A lift

The lift continues to descend.

Speed-Y continues with his jingle, before asking Azir-R for a B3. He offers to replace it with two.

Just one question, though: why did Azir-R buy so much B3?

Azir-R answers that there isn't really such a thing as too much B3, is there? It can be useful, if you know what to do with it.

He gently throws one to Speed-Y. Jam-Y notices, and pulls out one of his own B3s to drink.

Speed-Y grabs the thrown B3, and notes that Azir-R seems to know about the... other use of B3.

L4-O doesn't seem to be thirsty. Instead, he looks for something to eat. He realises that he has that half-eaten packet of Soylent RED from hourcycles ago. Now, as I'm sure you're aware, Soylent RED keeps for quite some time, so he starts eating that.

Azir-R admits that he hasn't had a chance to try the B3 thing.

Wow, the lift's taking a while, isn't it?

Mango takes back his papers and thanks the clone. "Thanks, citizen."

The clone opens the gate, and Mango proceeds on. He decides to check out Building 3 first, since that's where he'll be working. As he gets close, he can see that the buildings are marked. So that's something.

Industrial Subsector B -- Building 3

Entering the building, Mango finds himself in a foyer, overlooked by IntSec guards who glare at him.

written by Speeder on Jul 22, 2011 02:48

I open the B3 can, and drink it HAPPILY

written by Malkom on Jul 22, 2011 02:49

Mick-R fills out the form in a practiced way, signing a neat signature to the bottom. He glances around for a chair; sits down if he finds one and stands if he doesn't, and drums his fingers on the table/chair arm while waiting for the mutant to contact R&D.

"Hurry it up! I haven't got all daycycle!"

written by Jam on Jul 22, 2011 03:01

I continue drinking my B3, and continue waiting...

"After a successful mission and a long day of work, I think I'll sleep good tonightcycle..."

I try to check the timecycle and datecycle on my PDC...

written by Gligar on Jul 22, 2011 17:52

A lift

Speed-Y drinks his B3. Delicious.

Jam-Y finishes off his own can. He thinks he'll sleep well.

He checks the time on his PDC. It's now 08:45 on Sixday, the sixth of Tenmonth, Yearcycle 214.

As he reads this, the lift comes to a alt. The doors open, revealing the lft hall on A Level. It looks like the damage caused by Nukabot's forks hasn't been patched up yet.

Relocation office

Mick-R gets a little impatient, demanding that the mutant get a move on. "Hold your jackobots, already, I'm sending the message right now."

written by Speeder on Jul 22, 2011 18:21

I smile seeing a familiar place.

"Home finally!"

I start to walk toward our bunker.

"You know, the bunker was mostly abandoned, I wonder if they will put us to run it and whatnot. I would not mind having our own Troubleshooter Bunker. I think we can use it as Team Epsilon headquarters."

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 22, 2011 18:23 Relocation Office

"Sounds like a plan as far as I am concerned." I wheel after the group.

written by Malkom on Jul 22, 2011 18:32

"I haven't got any jackboots," Mick-R says angrily. "Get on with it, and no more jackboot joking."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 22, 2011 20:08

"Well, there were some others with us in the bunker. No doubt some clones have filtered in after we got rid of the commies."

I follow behind Speed-Y and polish off my Soylent RED.

written by Jam on Jul 22, 2011 20:30

I smile at Speed-Y's suggestion.

"Good idea! That's just what any good Troubleshooter team needs, a headquarters! If we could make some modifications, I don't think we'll have many INFRARED troubleshooters, so maybe we could convert their dormitory to a YELLOW one?"

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 23, 2011 00:41

I make a loop turn and go back out. I look for my dormitory.

written by Gligar on Jul 23, 2011 01:36

Lift hall (A level)

Speed-Y smiles, since he knows where he is now.

He heads out, towards the bunker.

Roadway

He outlines a plan. The bunker was pretty much abandoned before, so why don't they take it over? It seems like it's a nice place for a headquarters.

It occurs to him that he'd need more than just Troubleshooters to staff the place. Also, actually getting the permits to run such an installation... that'd take some doing. But hey! Everything's possible, right? All it takes is paperwork, and... "incentives" in the right places.

He enters the still-open outer door into the loading dock.

Loading Dock

Nothing much has changed, except that Selbio-R seems to have moved somewhere else.

As he enters, Azir-R agrees with the plan.

L4-O points out that there were others here. There are probably more now.

He finishes his Soylent RED.

Jam-Y also agrees with the idea. He suggests that the INFRARED dorms be converted for YELLOW use, since there aren't many INFRARED Troubleshooters.

Mick-R gets more impatient. He apparently doesn't appreciate jokes. "Okay, okay, I'm typing already," replies the mutant.

The IntSec whips out a notepad and makes a few notes.

Eventually, the mutant replies, "Okay, the message is sent. You'll get a reply from someone in R&D later today cycle. In the meantime, you should find yourself some accommodation."

Building 3 (Industrial Subsector B)

Faced with the guards, Mango exits, and goes looking for his dorm.

Building 2 (Industrial Subsector B)

Less guards here, but they're still present.

This foyer has a prominent lift, apparently designed for cargo. He heads for the lift.

A lift (Building 2)

The lift's control panel is marked with four levels. Mango is currently on Level 1. Shouldn't be hard, right?

written by Malkom on Jul 23, 2011 01:50

Mick-R somehow restrains an angry glare at the IntSec, and stalks stiffly out the door. Once there, he looks around for any signs that might show him where to get some accommodation.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 23, 2011 04:52

I look for somewhere to dispose of my soylent package and do so if there's a place present.

I then maintain my position with the group again, looking around.

I note if the hole Nukabot made is still in the nearby wall.

written by Jam on Jul 23, 2011 13:57

I think a bit, and try to remember where the INFRARED dormitory is... Then I exit the north exit⁵⁶¹, and peek in the dormitory. I check if any of the beds look like they've been slept on recently (or are still being slept on).

I contemplate going to sleep right there, but decide that an ORANGE bed might be more comfortable (though I'm so tired, I'd probably be able to sleep on a synthcrete floor!)

written by Gligar on Jul 23, 2011 18:54

R&D Lab

Since Leeroy doesn't seem to react at being told that its memory is full, the techs decide to run a few more diagnostics. While they do, one continues, "Why the silence? The human brain is several thousand sectors in size. Bots don't get that much. Something had to go."

Relocation Office

Mick-R stalks off. The mutant watches him go.

⁵⁶¹ JAM: (ooc: Hooray for maps!)

After a minute or so, he says, "Wow, he looked unhappy." Jam-Y is close behind.

The IntSec writes something else down.

Loading dock

L4-O goes looking for a trash receptacle. He finds one in the corner.

He has a quick look round and notices the hole that Nukabot made. If they're to take over the place, they'll need to keep on top of repairs.

Jam-Y tries to remember where the INFRARED dormitory was. Eventually, he exits through the forkbot-shaped hole, and crosses the corridor.

Dormitory 3

Jam-Y looks in. The dormitory is as deserted as they left it.

He entertains the notion of going to sleep right there, but decides to try and hold out until he can get upstairs.

Transtube station

Having checked the offices, Mick-R heads out into the station again. He soon comes to the main building, where there are adverts for local services. One of them, promoting the Kappa Subsector development, catches his eye. Though the subsector is not yet finished, some RED, ORANGE, and YELLOW residence modules have been put in place, and are already 50% full. The ad suggests that he get a move on if he wants a dorm space.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 23, 2011 20:33

"If I remember right the dorms for our level were up at the top level. Though the bunker isn't really that big... shouldn't be too hard to find."

I leave the loading dock and make my way for the stairs.

written by Jam on Jul 23, 2011 23:16

I follow L4-O.

written by Malkom on Jul 24, 2011 00:29⁵⁶²

Mick-R scribbles "Kappa Subsector - housing" into a notes section in his PDC. If he still needs to go to a different subsector, he heads there via transtube, buying ticket and/or waiting as necessary. If he doesn't, he boards a lift for Kappa Subsector, deciding to get some housing.

written by Gligar on Jul 24, 2011 01:58

Loading dock

If L4-O remembers, the other dormitories are on the bunker's top level. They shouldn't take too long to find.

He heads out, looking for the stairs.

If he remembers correctly, they're to the north of the intersection he finds himself at.

Oh hey, there's Selbio-R.

⁵⁶² MALKOM: (OOC: Am I already in the sector I'm being transferred to, or do I need to take a transtube ride?)

Interrogation room

"Hey, are you listening to me? I asked you a question, Joris-R!"

Transtube station⁵⁶³

Mick-R wonders, for a moment, where Kappa Subsector is. As it turns out, it's a short walk from the station. He doesn't even need to take a lift.

Kappa Subsector -- Intersectoin

As Mick-R finds out when he arrives, Kappa Subsector is built around the intersection of two roadways. Or rather, it is being built around the intersection. As advertised, there are some units in place, which are signposted as dormitories. There's also another building, signposted as a housing request office. There is, of course, a queue outside it. Mick-R joins the queue.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 24, 2011 02:27

I wheel as far as I can, and then hop after L4 to see the dorm area.

written by Malkom on Jul 24, 2011 03:34

Mick-R sees if there are any INFRAREDS in the queue ahead of him. If so, he snappishly orders the one closest to the office to move out of his way, and tries to elbow and shove his way in front of it. If not, he sighs and waits.

written by 4616599 on Jul 24, 2011 04:10

"Precisely! I blame mutant interference! Does that not show that I'm an expert at such issues?"

I break into a corny grin, and look around for my boots.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 24, 2011 05:14

I make my way up the stairs and continue surveying the bunker for anyone around. While doing so I carefully try to avoid Selbio-R if he still wields his towel.

written by Speeder on Jul 24, 2011 12:27

I follow the team.⁵⁶⁴

Also I avoid towel... or better, I attempt to steal the towel.

written by Jam on Jul 24, 2011 17:53

I watch to see how Azir-R handles the stairs in his wheelchair... If he can't make it by himself, I help push him up...

written by Gligar on Jul 24, 2011 18:51

Corridor A1/A2

Azir-R follows the team as far as he can... only to be confounded by the stairs.

⁵⁶³ GLIGAR: (OOC: yes, you're already in the sector where you were reassigned.)

⁵⁶⁴ SPEEDER: (OOC: sorry for going poof for a day again... that will not be likely to happen once every week, I found a girlfriend)

[639]

L4-O continues upstairs, as does Speed-Y.

Azir-R is about to get out of his wheelchair when Jam-Y notices him, and helps to push him up the stairs.

Corridor C1

The team eventually makes it up to C Level. There are a couple of clones still here, though the team gets the impression that almost everyone has left.

Except for Selbio-R. He seems to have made his way to Food Storage, probably because he was hungry. He's still there.

Kappa Subsector -- Housing Request Office Queue

Mick-R impatiently looks around for INFRAREDS to bully out of the way. Unfortunately, the only clones in the queue are RED and ORANGE. And besides, there are Queue Enforcement Officers present. I'm sure they would react strongly to queue jumping.

The queue doesn't move.

Interrogation Room

Joris-R blames mutant interference, and claims to be an "expert".

That gets him punched hard in the face. It seems that noclone likes an "expert". Especially one who is as unoriginal as that.

"Now. Answer. My. Question. Who are you taking orders from?!"

Industrial Subsector B -- Building 2 lift

The lift begins to rise. Looks like someone called it.

written by Speeder on Jul 24, 2011 19:23

I try to remember where the ORANGE dormitory is.

"I think sleeping is really good idea after this day of work..."

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 24, 2011 20:53

I fall over as I'm caught off guard by the lift as it starts moving.

"Gosh..."

I check where the lift is currently going, and whether it corresponds to my papers.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 24, 2011 21:16

I try to remember where it is too and keep with the group.

"I think it's nearby..."

written by Jam on Jul 24, 2011 21:55

I breathe hard after somehow managing to lift Azir-R up a flight of stairs, then a ladder (or perhaps he pulled himself up the ladder).

I blink a bit, and rub my eyes, when I see Selbio-R. Odd, I was sure I just saw him down at A Level. I must be seeing things... Or maybe he's a mutant! 🤖

I also search around for the ORANGE dormitory, and the RED one...

written by Gligar on Jul 25, 2011 01:16

Corridor C1

Speed-Y tries to remember back to when they were exploring the bunker. Did they ever find the ORANGE dormitory? Yes it was south of the cloning station.

He starts following the corridor round to where he remembers.

L4-O follows as well. He thinks it's close.

In fact, is that the door there?

Jam-Y rests for a moment, catching his breath after pushing Azir-R up the stairs. He can't quite believe that Selbio-R is up here.

When he's done, he looks for the dormitories.

Memories come flooding back, of a time when he couldn't tell colours properly... he went into the wrong dormitory to access a weapons cache...

...and here's the dormitory! That must mean that the RED dorm is... right there!

Industrial Subsector B -- Building 2 -- Lift

Mango is caught unawares by the lift's movement. He glances at the panel. It's going up to Level 4.

Her checks his papers, but finds that they don't mention a level.

written by Speeder on Jul 25, 2011 01:19

I try to find the most comfortable bed when I reach the dormitory, I also attempt to figure what bed gives the best vantage point in case of commie invasion.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 25, 2011 06:33

I follow in but just plop on the nearest comfortable looking bed and go straight to sleep.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 25, 2011 12:10

I head into the read dorm, if there was a ladder I should be able to manage (I do have one leg after all still).

I also thank Jam sincerely for the assistance in making it this far.

written by 4616599 on Jul 25, 2011 12:49

"Oi! Don't interrupt! I can't hear you! You see, things were better when I had the outfit on. Now, I'd like to file a patent with CPU, and soon enough all users of it will have to pay me 2000crediiiits..s..ow"

I clutch at my head again, and start to yell

written by Jam on Jul 25, 2011 16:17

I make sure Azir-R gets to the RED dormitory alright, the go to the ORANGE dormitory and fling myself onto a random bed...

"Goodnight!"

written by Gligar on Jul 25, 2011 19:29

Dormitory 2

Now that people are here, they can get some sleep, eh? Despite the fact that lunchtime is fast approaching, but whatever 😊

Speed-Y picks the bed which gives him the best vantage point. That'd be one opposite the door.

L4-O is less picky, and just sort of flops down on a bed near the door.

Jam-Y enters and also picks a bed.

Night all...

Dormitory 1

In here too, clones are picking beds. Lucas-R made it first, and sighs when he sees that one of the pillows is missing. Oh well, there are other beds.

John-R picks a bed somewhere that isn't near the medical bay.

Azir-R enters and heaves himself into a bed.

Night everyone!

Industrial Subsector B -- Building 2 -- Lift

The lift reaches Level 4, revealing why it was called.

There's an entire shift of INFRAREDS waiting to get on the lift. This is being overseen by a RED supervisor. "Hey, citizen, would you clear the lift?"

Interrogation room

Joris-R still claims to be unable to hear the IntSec clone. He continues to ignore him and request that a patent be filed for his stupid outfit.

But then.. pain.

And the IntSec hasn't even started yet. "Hey, I haven't started with these yet!"

(He's holding some sort of tools. Probably a set of Attention Electro-Reinforcement Prods or something.)

Kappa Subsector -- Housing Request Office Queue

The queue continues to not move.

There might be a reason for this. One of the patrolling QWueue Enforcement Officers discovers a clone slouching slightly out of line near the front of the queue. "Get back in line!" she snaps, pushing at the offending clone with her laser rifle.

The clone topples over, still retaining the same pose, and hits the floor.

The officer checks his pulse. He's dead. In fact, he's probably been dead for a while.

The queue begins to move.⁵⁶⁵

written by Speeder on Jul 25, 2011 20:33

After waking up, I will see to eat properly (yellow stuff, yay!)

Then I will see about figuring my YELLOW duties, equipment, privileges, whatnot.

Also I will attempt to get a list of training available, and equipment available from R&D, shops or for free (well... sometimes who knows...)

And finally... I also try to get a manual for the bunker security station and anything else that I can find about the bunker.

Full day!

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 25, 2011 20:35

Without being aware of it, I move to the request of the RED supervisor.

I look for some sort of list, or sign of which place I'm supposed to be in.

I stepped off the lift, just while the RED supervisor was asking me to. I removed myself promptly, and I observed the room. Looks like its LunchTime soon, but I'm not at all that hungry...

I think about that thought, and then discard it. There were things to be done, and that wasn't one of them.

written by Malkom on Jul 26, 2011 00:05

- Mick-R obtains cheap housing in Kappa Subsector.

- He tries to find out more about the deadclone in line, if possible.

- In the morning, he meets the other Troubleshooters and explains that he's been reassigned to their team. He has no idea why.

- For the rest of todaycycle, he will do whatever work he's supposed to do.

- In the evening, he will eat alone in his housing (or with any other clones sharing it, but staying away from everyone, and kind of brooding)

- At night, he goes to bed. Face down. He takes his PDC with him, and sleeps in his jumpsuit.⁵⁶⁶

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 26, 2011 01:17

Whatever my job is, I do it as best a one legged man can.

⁵⁶⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: Right. I'd like to move this along, now that clones are sleeping.)

So: for the next few turns, I'd like everyone to post what they want to do for the daycycle. This will include your work assignments when your character receives them, as well as after-work activities, such as training, or research, or shopping... Attempting to contact secret societies or the INFRARED Market are both treason.)

⁵⁶⁶ MALKOM: (OOC: edit: consider "in the morning, he meets..." to mean "whenever he's done obtaining his cheap housing")

[641]

Aside from that I eat, drink, and be merry, along with practice my trade and combat skills during downtime.

I work extra hard to make up for my disability and to get some credits saved up.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 26, 2011 01:38

I wake up and fetch some food, If I can't locate anywhere to receive employment or such, I set off to H level to locate the Armed Forces HQ.

Once there I try to seek employment and possibly my rank within the Armed Forces if it still exists.

I then see if there's any new equipment for me to obtain. A new laser pistol if possible, or possibly some repairs for my blaster.

After everything is complete there, I return to the bunker to sort things out. I change my burned-up jumpsuit with a new ORANGE one. I do some exercises and stuff to help restore my stamina.

In my free time I search for some new games for my PDC and play them, of course. And more food. Maybe algae chips.

written by Jam on Jul 26, 2011 02:13

I make sure to eat a nice YELLOW meal with the others...

I also try to figure out what things I have to do as a YELLOW for my work.

I try to get (or order) a YELLOW jumpsuit (and a new armband if I need to, as yellow on yellow doesn't show up very well...)

I look for any upcoming Medical Training courses I could take (and note the date, and cost).

I also try to find more information on converting the bunker to a Troubleshooter headquarters, as well as check on the status of the broken staircase that used to lead to D level, and the hole in the ceiling...

written by Gligar on Jul 26, 2011 03:32⁵⁶⁷

SURVEILLANCE LOG JHT-2896483(a)

TIME PERIOD: 214-10-06 10:30 - 214-10-07 06:00

SECURITY CLEARANCE: BLUE (original document); INFRARED + PPG-Alpha (this version)

Subject: Joris-R-DNK-3

Subject remained in custody of Internal Security at Industrial Subsector A station [DFSR] concerning apparent inability to dress properly. Subject continues to claim that his apparel is an experimental suit, and wishes that a patent be filed.

Presiding officer requests permission to re-educate and brainscrub. Preferably multiple times. Permission denied.

Subject is assigned employment at JHT Sector Reactor, Deep Subsector, to assist with the surveillance of clones assigned to reactor shielding.

Subject: Speed-Y-DOF-2

Subject remained asleep throughout surveillance period, at Dormitory 2, Emergency Bunker C-3, Epsilon Subsector.

Subject: Scrubot ROJ-317(d)228-a9 ("Leeroy")

Subject remained in custody of R&D for testing for a period of 2.5 hourcycles, before shutting down due to power pack depletion.

Subject is currently recharging at Bot Maintenance Bay 27g.

Subject: Cryo-BRN-4

Yet to reclone. Decanting expected on 214-10-25.

Subject: L4-O-QKW-1

Subject remained asleep throughout surveillance period, at Dormitory 2, Emergency Bunker C-3, Epsilon Subsector.

Subject: Jam-Y-JYR-2

Subject remained asleep throughout surveillance period, at Dormitory 2, Emergency Bunker C-3, Epsilon Subsector.

Subject: Mango-NHG-4

Subject entered Building 2 of Industrial Subsector B, in search of assigned dormitory (Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B). Dormitory located on Level 3.

(Note: Camera fauilure reported for denoted dormitory; see Document ISB-2-6- 47a.)

Dormitory was half-full, with four unassigned beds. Subject selected Bed 94, near the back.

Subject attended lunchtime at Main Food Hall, Level 4, Building 2, though ate little. Subject appeared lost in thought.

Subject attended workcycle at Testing Area 2, Building 3, with mandate of Ring-For-Service Bell Impact Tester.

(Note: Testing Area 2 runs the height of the building, to allow for bells to be dropped from Level 6. Impact testing involves dropping bells onto a variety of services, such as synthcrete, metal, and cloneflesh, before teting bells for proper operation.)

Subject returned to dormitory after workcycle at 22:00 hours, having had the fortune to not be assigned to target duty on Level 1. Subject slept.

Subject: Azir-R-GNS-1

Subject remained asleep throughout surveillance period, at Dormitory 1, Emergency Bunker C-3, Epsilon Subsector.

Subject: Mick-R-NRK-1

(Note: Subject is a recent transfer from [CENSORED] Sector.)

⁵⁶⁷ Gligar: (OOC: Wow, this is long. I'm having to do one and a half days' worth here, so I'll split it into two.)

written by Gligar on Jul 26, 2011 04:34

Subject secured accommodation at RED Dormitory 54, Dorm Block B, Kappa Subsector, after waiting in line for 3.2 hourcycles. Subject dehydrated from the delay.

Subject purchases one (1) can of AlgaePLUS and consumes it on the way to assigned dormitory.

Subject finds that he has no choice of bed, as only the lower middle bunk remains free.

Subject receives work assignment to R&D under Derek-G-JHT-3, to start 214-10-07.

Subject makes an attempt to learn about the clone who was terminated in the queue. (Note: Clone identified as Garth-R-JHT-1, assigned [DETAILS NOT AVAILABLE AT YOUR SECURITY CLEARANCE])

Subject makes no attempt to socialise or learn about his new bunkmates. Subject shows strong antisocial behaviour.

Suspect that subject [CENSORED] before sleep.

Subject: Selbio-R-SIL-2

No report. Subject shows no signs of activity outside of eating and minimal exercising with a towel.

Subject remains at Emergency Bunker C-3, even after receiving mandatory relocation notice.

(Note: subject has extremely high metabolism, requiring a high food intake.)

Subject: E_net-R-HKR-1

Subject relocated to RED Dorm Room 4, G Level, Gamma Subsector. Subject's workcycle [REDACTED].

Subject returned to dormitory at end of workcycle.

Subject: Albey-R-MKR-2

Subject volunteered for R&D testing, currently underway. For further details, see Document RD-281-CAA-44c.

Subject: Star-R-CSR-2

[FRAGMENT MISSING]

Subject remains in RED Dormitory 8, K Level, Zeta Subsector.

Subject: Kristos-R-GRU-2

Subject decanted on schedule at JHT Sector Main Cloning Station. Subject assigned to PLC "Crash Priority" service firm, and RED Dorm Room 4, G Level, Gamma Subsector.

Subject completed one workcycle, and returned to assigned dormitory.

Subject: John-R-SMR-3

Subject remained asleep throughout surveillance period, at Dormitory 1, Emergency Bunker C-3, Epsilon Subsector.

Subject: Lucas-R-AHK-2

Subject remained asleep throughout surveillance period, at Dormitory 1, Emergency Bunker C-3, Epsilon Subsector.

SURVEILLANCE LOG JHT-2896483(b)

TIME PERIOD: 214-10-07 06:00 - 214-10-08 06:00

SECURITY CLEARANCE: BLUE (original document); INFRARED + PPG-Alpha (this version)

Subject: Joris-R-DNK-3

Subject awoke from custodial dormitory and travelled to reactor via standard methods. Ten hourcycle shift completed. Radiation exposure: [REDACTED].

Subject returned to custodial dormitory and slept.

Subject: Speed-Y-DOF-2

On waking, subject obtained meal of YELLOW Clearance comestibles, including Soylent YELLOW, YELLOW Bouncy Bubble Beverage, and a banana, which he enjoys in the company of Jam-Y-JYR-2.

After eating, subject researched duties, responsibilities, privileges, and available equipment.

(Note: Subject has recently been promoted to Security Clearance YELLOW, so is unaware of basic privileges such as the ability to issue small fines, and the state of accommodation available at Clearance YELLOW, namely, only being required to share with one other clone, and having a shared Computer Terminal. Those wishing to research available equipment should consult recent PLC catalogues.)

Subject also researches training, and discovers courses available in zombie handling techniques (Clearance ORANGE), Power Studies (Clearance RED), and medical aid (Clearance YELLOW).

Subject meets Mick-R-NRK-1, who arrives at Emergency Bunker C-3, claiming to have been assigned to Team Epsilon. He is left with the impression that Mick-R just barely tolerates their presence when Mick-R leaves to return to his dormitory.

Subject also researches R&D opportunities, but cannot find any.

Subject receives notification of work assignment as senior technician at JHT Sector Main Cloning Station.

Subject attempts to research Emergency Bunker C-3, finding that the operations manuals are available at his security clearance, but that the information request will likely take a weekcycle to be processed.

Subject returns to Dormitory 2 to sleep.

Subject: Scrubot R0J-317(d)228-a9 ("Leeroy")

Subject fully charged.

Subject attempts to begin a marathon run of Mandatory Team Troubleshooter watching but is denied. Subject is instead assigned to begin cleaning duty in Beta Subsector.

Subject: Cryo-BRN-4

Yet to reclone. Decanting expected on 214-10-25.

Subject: L4-O-QKW-1

Subject obtains food after waking.

Subject researches employment, and discovers that he has been summoned to Armed Forces barracks on H Level.

Subject attends barracks, where he discovers that he has been reactivated at the rank of corporal. He is assigned to 3 Company Mutant Mashers. Drills are to begin 214-10-08. He receives new equipment, in the form of one (1) laser pistol and one (1) blaster.

Subject returns to Emergency Bunker C-3 to obtain replacement jumpsuit. He begins exercise regimen.

Subject obtains two games for PDC, and another meal, before sleeping.

Subject: Jam-Y-JYR-2

Subject enjoys a meal of YELLOW foodstuffs with Speed-Y-DOF-2.

Subject discovers that he is assigned as a supervisor to the PLC "Crash Priority" service firm. Duties are to include checking in and checking out of deliveries, and ensuring that vehicle maintenance is carried out, liaising with Tech Services as needed.

Subject orders a YELLOW jumpsuit and Registered Mutant armband from PLC. He also notices that his bonus has been allocated.

Subject receives call from Mutant Liaison officer, requesting a meeting tomorrowcycle.

Subject researches medical courses, discovering one at Security Clearance YELLOW, to start 214-10-10, which will cost 300cr.

Subject meets Mick-R-NRK-1, who arrives at Emergency Bunker C-3, claiming to have been assigned to Team Epsilon. He is left with the impression that Mick-R just barely tolerates their presence when Mick-R leaves to return to his dormitory.

Subject researches converting Emergency Bunker C-3 to a Troubleshooter Headquarters, and discovers that it would take several forms, as well as signatures from several high-clearance citizens. He also discovers that, even though the conversion could take place, the team would have to share it with several other teams, as per CPU Mandate 214-2039485/45/fhg.

Subject inquires as to the status of stairwell repairs, as regards the warehouse on D Level. He learns that a work crew has been allocated but has yet to appear.

Finally, subject sleeps.

Subject: Mango-NHG-4

Subject wakes, and attends Mandatory Inspection. He is fined 10cr for sloppiness.

Subject attends workcycle, and again escapes Level 1 assignment.

Subject appears lost in own thought during workcycle. He is fined 10cr for lack of attention.

Subject returns to dormitory after workcycle and learns that the dormitory is organising a Funball team.

Subject sleeps.

Subject: Azir-R-GNS-1

Subject wakes, and learns that he is assigned to the Vidshow Feedback Office on N Level.

Subject arrives at workcycle and learns that he is to monitor vidscreen feedback by tracking eye movements during vidshows.*

Subject completes his first workcycle, having performed satisfactorily.

Subject returns to Emergency Bunker C-3 and, attempting to remain happy, begins training to overcome disability.

Subject: Mick-R-NRK-1

Subject wakes and attends Mandatory Inspection. He is fined 10cr for inability to meet Mandatory Minimum Happiness Levels.

Subject travels to meet Derek-G-JHT. He learns that he will be helping collate test data from the ArmourBot project, starting with data received from the recently-vaporised ArmourBot X-1.

After workcycle, subject researches Team Epsilon and discovers their whereabouts. He travels to Emergency Bunker C-3 and meets Jam-Y-HYR-2 and Speed-Y-DOF-2, tolerating their presence for a few minutecycles before returning to his dormitory.

Subject attempts to eat in his dormitory. He learns that he is required to eat in Kappa Subsector's Main Food Hall, though manages to escape detection.

Again, subject avoids contact with his bunkmates. They eye him with suspicion.

Subject sleeps.

Subject: Selbio-R-SIL-2

Subject finally complies with relocation notice.

Subject learns of his work assignment, and shows up for workcycle.

Subject shows no signs of interest as he returns to RED Dormitory 8, Delta Subsector, to sleep.

Subject: E_net-R-HKR-1

No appreciable report.

Subject: Albey-R-MKR-2

Subject remains in R&D custody.

Subject: Star-R-CSR-2

[FRAGMENT MISSING]

Subject remains in RED Dormitory 8, K Level, Zeta Subsector.

Subject: Kristos-R-GRU-2

Subject reported for workcycle as usual. He notes that his supervisor is Jam-Y-JYR-2.

Subject completed one workcycle, and returned to assigned dormitory.

Subject: John-R-SMR-3

Subject attended meeting with Mutant Liaison Officer, taking most of the daycycle.

Subject: Lucas-R-AHK-2

Subject awoke to discover that his assignment is the same cloning station he was stationed at during [REDACTED].

Subject completed one workcycle and returned to Emergency Bunker C-3 to sleep.⁵⁶⁸

written by Lightning4 on Jul 26, 2011 05:59

After awakening I seek a little variety in my ORANGE-level diet and drink, then rush off to report for drills at the barracks. Naturally I try to perform my best.

I try to chat with some of my squadmates. Maybe I can get some other friends. Or find ones I might've known beforehand.

Once finished with my duties I make my way back to the bunker. I grab a quick snack and drink and begin sorting through my stuff. I claim a locker in the dorm if possible and put away my damaged blaster.

I see if there's any chargers in the bunker I can use for charging my depleted blaster packs and set about beginning the charging process.

If some time remains in the day, I roam JHT sector's D level outside the bunker, mostly surveying the damage done during our communist fighting. I offer to help any cleanup operations going on, if it doesn't look too dangerous to me. And if my help is desired.

After that I check back in the dorm. Some food. More exercise. Sleep sounds good about now.

written by 4616599 on Jul 26, 2011 09:53

I wake up, and try to determine if I still have the strange headache. After that, I check if I still have my outfit on.

"Darn! I could be making a heap of credits by now with my mutant repellent. That was some day. CMT-crazed, I tell you."

I see if I can determine the location of the custodial dormitory and those in charge.

⁵⁶⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: This has taken about two and a half times longer than usual, partly because it comprised, basically, two turns in one. Excuse me while I fall asleep...)

After that, and an algae breakfast from any nearby food vendor or bot, I travel to the reactor, showing happiness. I try to learn about the layout of the reactor; the relative position of my workstation; and any superior officers or mates.

I then do my surveillance duties.

During any breaks, I speak feverishly in long monologues to any lower ranked workers of the importance of the reactor.

I check on any new equipment I could acquire, and if possible inquire about the abandoned Transition.

After my shift, I return to the dormitory. I have supper, then go for a quick walk around, looking for any interesting facilities.

written by Speeder on Jul 26, 2011 12:13

I go for breakfast and invite Jam again, I liked Banana, and it looks healthy to eat it.

I check if I really requested or not the manuals of the bunker, if I did not, I request them.

I show up for work, present myself as their new officer, if I notice anyone doing something that I never saw before, I attempt to learn from them, if I saw someone doing crap stuff, I teach them to do correctly, if they insist in doing crap job, I threaten to fine them, and if they remain doing crap job, I fine them.

I take note of all people berated and fined, and of those that worked best. Those that worked best get compliments.

After work, I see what I need to do to convert some room to YELLOW dormitory for me and Jam in the bunker.

I also request a team of scrubots to clean the bunker, and a restock of the bunker supplies(including food and forkbot powerpacks), and maintenance on the generators (including cleaning the mess that Cryo made... shakes fist and putting barrels back).

Then with the little time available after taking care of the bunker, I see into registering for Zombie handling course, I see if I inform Jam of that, so he can take medical aid, something that he seemly already knew a bit. Also I see what Power Studies teach exactly.

And I order a printed PLC catalogue. Those are very nice, specially since you can read them in-transit and whatnot, and they are nice to collect. I smile broadly thinking about when the new shiny catalogue will arrive.

written by Jam on Jul 26, 2011 18:19

I pick a random locker (or maybe a few lockers), and dump all my stuff into it, except for my PDC and ME card, and one laser pistol.

I eat breakfast with Speed-Y again, and make sure to savor the taste of the delicious YELLOW food, especially the banana. I also talk with Speed-Y about the previous daycycle, and about our duties and privileges as YELLOW citizens.

Then I meet with the Mutant Liaison Officer, and note what happens during the meeting. I also ask what all the pills I was given do.

I go to work if I'm scheduled to work today, and introduce myself to all the clones I'm supervising. I try to make sure all the clones I'm supervising are doing their jobs properly, efficiently, and happily (using my mutant power to check their happiness levels if needed). I note what my pay is, and how many hours I work a day.

I also sign up for the medical aid course, and research more about the Power Studies course.

If I have time, I visit the bunker's medical bay, and confirm that there is a docbot there.⁵⁶⁹

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 26, 2011 18:49

As I awaken, I eat and drink, and then work out a bit before heading to work. If I meet anyone, I greet them amicably and enjoy pleasant conversations with them.

At work, it seems very relaxed and does not require physical exertion, so after work I practice my combat/maneuverability skills extra hard to make up for the complacency of sitting and staring at people all day.

I also practice epic wheelchair maneuvers.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 26, 2011 20:41

I wonder what is wrong with me, and why I'm not more neat, or focused. I decide not to join in on the Funball team, and try to concentrate on what's going on around me.

If there is any free time, I begin a little research into the history of the complex. Rather, what is being denied about it. I only read through sources, rather than actually taking notes. They're far too risky, especially in my case.

At the end of the day, I return to the dormitory, and check the calendar to see what daycycle it is before going to sleep.

You shouldn't get too used to this, or else you'd end up like everyone else.

written by Gligar on Jul 26, 2011 21:09

SURVEILLANCE LOG JHT-2896483(c)

TIME PERIOD: 214-10-08 06:00 - 214-10-09 06:00

SECURITY CLEARANCE: BLUE (original document); INFRARED + PPG-Alpha (this version)

Subject: Joris-R-DNK-3

Subject awakes at custodial dormitory. Subject seems to be suffering from unnatural headache which standard medication does not treat.

(Note: Custodial Dormitory located in Iota Subsector, and is supervised by Internal Security.)

Subject ordered to change into regular uniform on pain of termination by Internal Security. Subject complies, though continues to point out supposed "benefits" of outfit.

Subject eats and reports for workcycle. (Note: Subject's workstation is located within RED Zone, Reactor Shielding Chamber, I Sublevel, Deep Subsector.)

Subject speaks to INFRARED workers at times about the importance of the reactor. Many of them do not listen to him.

Subject inquires about the state of an abandoned Transition in Industrial Subsectors, but is refused access.

Subject investigates the possibility of purchasing equipment. He learns that he must visit the main PLC Warehouse.

Subject returns to dormitory after workcycle. After eating, he investigates Iota Subsector, discovering a Funball training area.

Subject eventually sleeps.

Subject: Speed-Y-DOF-2

After waking, subject invites Jam-Y-JYR-2 to breakfast. He attempts to order bananas, but discovers that they are not being served todaycycle.

Subject checks on progress of Information Request, re: bunker operation manuals. Request still marked as "pending".

Subject reports for workcycle, and introduces himself to fellow workers.

Subject draws on experience to assist with repairing a cloning tank. He makes sure to compliment those who perform well. He notes that nobody seems to be performing inadequately, that he can see.

Subject returns to Emergency Bunker C-3 after workcycle. He requests scrubots to clean the bunker, and supplies to replace those used during Mission PPG-01. He is notified that supplies may take up to two daycycles, though scrubots can be sent almost immediately.

Subject requests that maintenance be performed on the bunker's generators. Maintenance is scheduled for next weekcycle.

Subject investigates the conversion of a room into a YELLOW dormitory. He discovers that it would take two forms and a conversion team.

Subject notes that scrubots have arrived.

Subject attempts to register for Zombie Handling course, and is successful. Course is due to begin on 214-10-14. He reminds Jam-Y-JYR-2 about medical skills, and investigates Power Studies course.

Subject discovers that Power Studies course involves learning how to spot mutant powers, how to defend against them, and how to attempt to contain them, as well as what the powers are in the first place. Course is said to delve into theory behind the emergence of mutant powers, though much of that is speculative.

⁵⁶⁹ JAM: (ooc: Um, what are the daycycles of the weekcycle called again?)

Before sleeping, subject orders a PLC catalogue.

Subject: Scrubot R0J-317(d)228-a9 ("Leeroy")

Subject continues cleaning duty in Beta Subsector, taking in RED dormitories before being reassigned to Emergency Bunker C-3, Epsilon Subsector, with other scrubots. Apparently, the bunker is still in use.

Subject: Cryo-BRN-4

Yet to reclone. Decanting expected on 214-10-25.

Subject: L4-O-QKW-1

Subject desires alternate foods; is given an orange and a cup of Coffeelyke instead of B3.

Subject reports for duty, undergoing drills with enthusiasm.

Subject learns that his squadmates have also been recently assigned to the sector. The squad seems to get on reasonably well, though there are minor incidents concerning the squad's registered mutant.

Subject returns to bunker. He claims a locker in Dormitory 2 and stores equipment, notably his damaged blaster.

Subject searches for a charger, finding one in the workshop. He begins charging his blaster power packs.

Subject decides to visit the ruined warehouse on D Level, offering assistance with repairs. He discovers that the stairwell is being repaired, and that no further assistance is required.

Subject continues exercise regimen before sleep.

Subject: Jam-Y-JYR-2

On waking, subject stores surplus equipment in lockers, requiring two to fully store everything.

Subject accompanies Speed-Y-DOF-2 to breakfast. He is saddened to learn that bananas are not being served todaycycle.

Subject converses with Speed-Y about duties and such.

Subject meets with Mutant Liaison Officer. Officer explains the procedure: the meetings are to allow him to be evaluated for safety. Any hints that he is becoming too powerful will result in his termination.

Subject inquires about contents of medication pack. He is told that the medications are to help control and regulate his power, to ensure that he does not get out of hand.

Subject reports for workcycle. He is met with suspicion due to his mutation, but assures clones that he only wants to make sure everyone is doing their job.

This proves difficult when some clones refuse to be happy with him around. Subject resorts to fines.

Subject learns that he earns 3000 credits per monthcycle, and works 8.5 hourcycles per daycycle.

Subject returns to bunker after workcycle.

Subject notes that his new jumpsuit has arrived.

Subject signs up for medical course, and researches Power Studies course.

Subject checks medical bay to find that the docbot is offline pending investigation.

Subject: Mango-NHG-4

Subject wakes, and attends workcycle. He is assigned to Level 2.

Subject returns to dormitory after workcycle.

Subject sleeps.

Subject: Azir-R-GNS-1

Subject wakes, and performs some exercises.

Subject attends workcycle, and finds it restful.

Subject returns to bunker after workcycle, and exercises some more before sleep.

Subject: Mick-R-NRK-1

Subject wakes.

Subject travels to workcycle, and interprets more of the ArmourBot data.

After workcycle, subject keeps to himself as usual before sleeping.

Subject: Selbio-R-SIL-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: E_net-R-HKR-1

No appreciable report.

Subject: Albey-R-MKR-2

Subject released from R&D custody, and returns to assigned dormitory.

Subject: Star-R-CSR-2

[FRAGMENT MISSING]

Subject remains in RED Dormitory 8, K Level, Zeta Subsector.

Subject: Kristos-R-GRU-2

Subject reported for workcycle as usual. He seems to be having problems working with a registered mutant.

Subject completed one workcycle, and returned to assigned dormitory.

Subject: John-R-SMR-3

Subject attended workcycle at CPU.

Subject: Lucas-R-AHK-2

Subject attended workcycle, and participated in a MemoMax diagnostic session.

Subject completed workcycle and returned to Emergency Bunker C-3 to sleep.

Notable Upcoming Events

Twosday, 214-10-09: Loyalty seminar.

Threeday, 214-10-10: estimated arrival of supplies at Emergency Bunker C-3; medical course begins.

Foursday, 214-10-11: Loyalty parade.

Fiveday, 214-10-12

Sixday, 214-10-13

Mandatory Inspection Day: 214-10-14: Zombie Handling course begins.

Oneday, 214-10-15

written by Malkom on Jul 26, 2011 21:22

Mick-R eats his meals today in the food hall, seperated from other clones, and keeps to himself as usual, though he may attempt to befriend a lower-clearance clone if he sees one without a companion.

If required, he attends the Loyalty Seminar.

He attempts to learn of the locations of all the nearby Computer Terminals.

If applicable, he does his work as usual, trying to show off how good a worker he is and make a good impression.

He tries to become friendly with his boss.

Once work is over, he returns to the dormitory and takes his sedatives as usual.

He sleeps.⁵⁷⁰

written by Speeder on Jul 26, 2011 22:15

Upon waking up, I wake up Jam, and remember him that we are supposed to go to the loyalty seminar, as punishment for minor treason incidents during our last mission.

In breakfast I ask Jam what more things he thinks we need to do on the bunker, I also inform him that filling some forms we can get a bedroom for ourselves. I also compliment bananas, and wonder if there are other tasty YELLOW things available on breakfast, things that we did not had when RED. Oranges, maybe?

I attend to both work, and loyalty seminar, I am happy with my team that works correctly, and I strive to make that the most efficient team of Alpha Complex, I also attempt to achieve a high morale in workplace, making even other teams that work nearby happy, I want to curb communist influence by making even INFRAREDS happy for working near us.

On free time I attempt to figure when Power Studios happen, trying to figure if it clash or not with Zombie Handling.

Also, I check the progress of my cyborg foot request.

I also attempt to figure what happened to Nukabot, and if we can have it back.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 27, 2011 00:02

I wake up and overhear the conversation regarding the loyalty seminar. I get ready and obtain some ordinary food and drink this time.

Depending on which I need to attend first, I attend the loyalty seminar and any drilling at the Barracks.

I take notes at the seminar, of course!

With the remaining time in my day I search for information on my finances and any notable services I'm cleared for such as classes, training, weapons testing, or even simple entertainment.

Speaking of entertainment, if I find anything under that, I go to it!

I eventually make my way back to the bunker, More food and drink of course, and more exercise.

And finally, sleep.

written by Jam on Jul 27, 2011 00:09

I wake up, and thank Speed-Y for reminding me about the seminar. I make sure to wear my new YELLOW jumpsuit.

At breakfast, I think about more things needed for the bunker, and tell Speed-Y I'll have to give that some more thought...

I go to the loyalty seminar, and to work. At work, I try to figure out exactly what it is the unhappy clones I'm supervising don't like about mutants, and ask them what they think I should do about it.

I resist fining anyclone, even though I want to, that's not going to make them any happier with me...

I see if there are any clones that don't seem to mind the fact that I'm a mutant.

I also note how many clones I'm supervising, and their ranks, and what they're paid.

After work, I try to figure out if the Power Studies course conflicts with the medical course.

I also try to request a PLC catalog, or ask to borrow one from Speed-Y if he has one...

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 27, 2011 01:13

I continue my regiment, work tradeoffs until I become more comfortable navigating and getting around with one leg.

written by Gligar on Jul 27, 2011 02:54

SURVEILLANCE LOG JHT-2896483(d)

TIME PERIOD: 214-10-09 06:00 - 214-10-10 06:00

SECURITY CLEARANCE: BLUE (original document); INFRARED + PPG-Alpha (this version)

⁵⁷⁰ MALKOM: (OOC: Was away...)

Subject: Joris-R-DNK-3

No meaningful report.⁵⁷¹

Subject: Speed-Y-DOF-2

After waking, subject once again invited Jam-Y-JYR-2 to breakfast, after reminding him of Loyalty Seminar.

Subject orders an orange with breakfast, on seeing them available. Subject is warned that fruit is not expected to be available for another weekcycle after this.

Subject informs Jam-Y-JYR about his findings re: room conversion.

Subject attended Loyalty Seminar, attempting to appear enthusiastic despite obvious boredom.

Subject reported for workcycle, having temporarily shifted to second shift to allow for seminar. This does not go unnoticed, as subject's assistance could have been useful earlier due to mass recloning of ex-communists. Subject attempts to put this behind him and catch up the missing time.

On returning to Emergency Bunker C-3, subject continues research into Power Studies course, discovering it to start the daycycle after the Zombie Handling course begins. It would be possible to attend both at once.

Subject checks on the progress of his R&D request. There is still no data.

Subject inquires about the bunker's forkbot. It is apparently still under maintenance.

Subject notices a scrubot looking at him in a strange way.

Subject's PLC catalogue arrives.

Subject: Scrubot R0J-317(d)228-a9 ("Leeroy")

Subject continues work at Emergency Bunker C-3. While doing so, subject scrutinises Speed-Y-DOF, possibly evaluating the level of dirt on the citizen.

Subject: Cryo-BRN-4

Yet to reclone. Decanting expected on 214-10-25.

Subject: L4-O-QKW-1

Subject wakes and overhears mention of the Loyalty Seminar.

Subject obtains regular Hot Fun and Bouncy Bubble Beverage for breakfast.

Subject attends Loyalty Seminar. Subject appears enthusiastic.

Subject continues drills at Armed Forces, practicing his skill with the laser pistol.

On returning to the bunker, subject researches training courses, discovering an additional cone rifle course.

Subject also ascertains that he has 1,870 credits remaining.

⁵⁷¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: Get used to that. Typing out all these took far too long last time.)

Subject: Jam-Y-JYR-2

Subject wakes and thanks Speed-Y-DOF for his information.

Subject accompanies Speed-Y-DOG to breakfast. During the meal, subject states that he will have to give the bunker situation some more thought.

Subject attends Loyalty Seminar, followed by workcycle. Subject attempts to ascertain what it is that his fellow clones dislike about mutants. He discovers that it is their tendencies to be everywhere, and their abilities to do... things that most clones do not understand. They suggest that subject submit for termination.

Subject instead tries to locate clones who do not mind mutants. He is able to locate some within the workplace, though they are not directly under him.

Subject discovers that he is responsible for 20 clones directly. (Sixteen are RED, earning the standard 1,000cr/monthcycle. The other four are ORANGE, on 2,000cr/mo.)

Subject returns to the bunker and researches Power Studies course. It appears not to clash with medical course.

Subject requests a PLC catalogue.

Subject: Mango-NHG-4

Subject attends workcycle as normal. He is unlucky enough to be assigned to Level 1.

Subject receives concussion from impact with ring-for-service bells. Subject is patched up and returns to workcycle after two hourcycles.

After workcycle, subject attempts to research history of Alpha Complex. He learns that it was constructed by The Computer to shelter humans from commies. It is safer here. Further information is not available, and subject's request has been logged.

Subject: Azir-R-GNS-1

Subject attends workcycle, and Loyalty Seminar.

On return to the bunker, subject continues exercise regimen. Remaining leg is strengthened somewhat.

Subject: Mick-R-NRK-1

Subject continues to display anti-social tendencies before, during, and after workcycle, landing him with another fine from his superior, despite completing sufficient work.

Subject attempts to befriend another clone (perhaps in response to the fine). The clone's name is Ralph-R-VLF-2. Ralph-R does not seem particularly responsive, given subject's past behaviour.

Subject attempts to locate Computer Terminals, finding one in a YELLOW area.

Subject: Selbio-R-SIL-2

No meaningful report.

[649]

Subject: E_net-R-HKR-1

No meaningful report.

Subject: Albey-R-MKR-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: Star-R-CSR-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: Kristos-R-GRU-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: John-R-SMR-3

After waking, subject attended Loyalty Seminar, attempting to appear enthusiastic despite obvious boredom.

Subject reported for workcycle, having temporarily shifted to second shift to allow for seminar.

Shifted workcycle did not permit additional actions before sleep.

Subject: Lucas-R-AHK-2

After waking, subject attended Loyalty Seminar, attempting to appear enthusiastic despite obvious boredom.

Subject reported for workcycle, having temporarily shifted to second shift to allow for seminar.

Shifted workcycle did not permit additional actions before sleep.

Notable Upcoming Events

Threeday, 214-10-10: estimated arrival of supplies at Emergency Bunker C-3; medical course begins.

Foursday, 214-10-11: Loyalty parade.

Fiveday, 214-10-12

Sixday, 214-10-13

Mandatory Inspection Day, 214-10-14: Zombie Handling course begins.

Oneday, 214-10-15: Power Studies course begins.

Twosday, 214-10-16

written by Lightning4 on Jul 27, 2011 06:41

I start my day by looking up information on the cone rifle course, and if it'll give me some information on my various cone rifle shells. And if any of the times conflict with my current drills.

After some food and some exercise, I make my way to the Armed Forces Bunker. I engage in my drills and search for information regarding the length of the drilling process and when to possibly expect missions.

I also search for interesting Armed Forces-related things to do in the sector. If there are any, that is.

I remain there for a little while and socialize again.

Eventually I return to the bunker. I assist with anything Speed and Jam need of me. If any of my blaster packs still need charging, I set about doing that.

I then deal with food and drink again, then play some more of my PDC games before going to bed.

written by Speeder on Jul 27, 2011 11:39

I discuss again about the bunker in the breakfast, I mention that supplies should arrive today.

Although I know fruit will not be available again, I became amazed with fruits, convinced that few things are better than fruits, I wonder what sort of fruits higher clearance citizens have access and how much, maybe PURPLE citizens have grapes, wine? Or GREEN citizens have the fabled refreshing lemonade?

After my fruitstatic musings, I get to work, I attempt to ensure with my team that no bizarre cloning will happen, no waking up inside tanks, no clones that refuse to die, no cloning-related mutants, no liveware rewrites and specially, NO ZOMBIES.

After work I go first fetch the forms needed to convert a room to YELLOW dormitory.

On the bunker I order a Power Studios course too, and keep browsing the catalog about special jumpsuits, or armoured jumpsuits, or anti-zombie jumpsuits, or any sort of jumpsuit that protect better than the standard one.

When supplies arrive, I help putting them in place, if I find L4 or other clones, I ask them to help with that too. Also I sign the forms that say that I received the supplies properly.

If I ever find that strange scrubot again, I throw some trash away from me and see if it is more interested on the trash, or interested on me.

At our room, I ask Jam to help me fill the YELLOW room forms. I tell L4 that we are setting up a YELLOW room, and thus we will end moving out, I hope he will not be unhappy missing us.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 27, 2011 12:21

I continue my work hours, trying to better myself at this new job. I know I've got an appointment on this threeday, so I try to keep to it. I attend, and when it is all over, I finish the job for the day (if there's anything left to do), and return to the dormitory.

I contemplate what has happened on this certain day. I also make inquiries into whether I might be able to purchase some form of document writer so as to store some thoughts into other memory, seeking some form of encryption, if that's allowed in my clearance.

written by Jam on Jul 27, 2011 16:08

I talk with Speed-Y at breakfast, and tell him that the docbot in the Medical Bay is still offline..."

I attend the medical training course, and make sure to take notes on what I've learned.

Then... work.⁵⁷²

"Nothing would make me happier right now than to see you guys be happy working with me. Maybe you would be more understanding if I told you exactly what it is I can and can't do.

I have the Mind Sense mutation, which lets me detect the minds of nearby clones. My power can tell me the name of a clone, and gives me a vague sense of their emotional state... Now, I already know your names, and I can see your emotions written right on your faces, so my power isn't doing anything there... Like any psionic mutant, I can speak telepathically, but it's exactly the same as speaking, except my lips aren't moving. It's simpler for me to just talk normally...

What my power doesn't let me do is control your minds, or push thoughts into your heads, or pry into all your personal details. Actually, take that back, I can read a clone's mind, but you'd definitely feel it. It would be very unpleasant, and you'd probably be lying on the floor screaming before I even got to what you ate for breakfast. But I wouldn't try to read your minds because, one, it's extremely exhausting for me, two, it would likely cause me to be fined and possibly demoted, and three, I really could care less about your personal lives. You guys probably spend the whole day imagining my termination or something, I really don't want to know the details...

The reason I registered my mutation is so I can use it to serve the Complex. If you guys have a problem with that, I suggest you go talk to Friend Computer. Think of it this way... In addition to supervising you guys, I'm here to make sure the dangerous unregistered mutants don't get inside your heads and screw with your minds. I can use my powers to detect the mutants, and I can warn you guys so you can shield your thoughts. You know how to shield your thoughts from mutants, right? They're teaching about it in the next Power Studies course, or, if you want, I could give you a quick overview...

But let's get to work first..."

After the somewhat long speech, I get to work supervising the clones, and pay close attention to what exactly it is the ORANGE and RED clones are doing... I try to find the ORANGE clone that seems to tolerate me the most, and note his name.

After work, I sign up for the Power Studies course, and sign any YELLOW room forms that Speed-Y might be offering me. Also, I help move supplies once they arrive...

I also search if there is any sort of shooting range I can go to to practice my laser skills...

written by 4616599 on Jul 27, 2011 16:51

I check how much protection (or freedom) the dorm offers me.

I try to warm up to the dorm's IntSec supervisors over breakfast. I note the name of the highest ranking clone(s).

⁵⁷² JAM: (ooc: Or maybe work came first...)

I then report for work. I see if there is anything extra I could do, perhaps surveillance related, that could add to my paycheck, which I also check.

During breaks I have B3 or other foods, while still keeping an eye on the INFRAREDS.

Refreshed, I continue work, watching them almost intrusively and making necessary reports.

After the workcycle, I return to Iota subsector, pausing to watch Funball and requesting a catalogue of any electronics from PLC.

I head back to the dorm. I attempt to strike up a conversation with my dormitory mates about Funball but the brainsrub seemed to have erased most of my Funball related chitchat. I end up mildly paranoid and blathering about yummy B3-drinking mutants. I also wonder aloud as to what I was before the brainsrub.

Feeling faint, I eventually sleep.

written by Malkom on Jul 27, 2011 17:10

Mick-R works, eats, sleeps as normal, keeping an eye out for shady clones and trying to befriend an INFRARED if possible.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 27, 2011 19:07

I wake up, eat breakfast, and enjoy the morning. At work, I remain diligent. When I return, I take a break from my regiment to assist with sorting and organizing of the supplies that have arrived.

I am pleased with the progress I am making, and rest easy tonight.

written by Gligar on Jul 27, 2011 22:08

SURVEILLANCE LOG JHT-2896483(e)

TIME PERIOD: 214-10-10 06:00 - 214-10-11 06:00

SECURITY CLEARANCE: BLUE (original document); INFRARED + PPG-Alpha (this version)

Subject: Joris-R-DNK-3

Subject attempts to ascertain level of freedom and protection provided by custodial dormitory. He discovers that surveillance is present at all locations, and seems to work.

Subject attempts to befriend dormitory supervisor Joe-Y-JHT over breakfast. Joe-Y seems to respond positively.

Subject reports for workcycle, and seeks additional duties. He is assigned to handle new reassignments.

Subject continues to monitor INFRAREDS.

Subject returns to Iota Subsector after workcycle, and stops to watch Funball.

Subject attempts to order a catalogue from PLC, and is informed of a 1-weekcycle waiting list.

Subject attempts to enter a Funball-related conversation but seems to have forgotten much about the activity. He is rebuffed.

Subject: Speed-Y-DOF-2

Subject once again eats breakfast with Jam-Y-JYR. He notes imminent arrival of supplies.

Subject seems to have developed an interest in fruit.

Subject reports for workcycle. He attempts to ensure that the cloning systems are running smoothly with no problems.

Subject uncovers an anomaly in the system, one which he seemingly is unable to correct.

Subject visits HPD&MC offices to obtain forms to convert the bunker's Dormitory 3 to YELLOW use. He is referred to CPU.

Subject visits CPU offices and submits form request. He is informed of 2 daycycle waiting time.

(Note: Subject has yet to submit forms for bunker takeover.)

Subject signs up for Power Studies course. He also browses catalogue for more protective jumpsuit, and finds one with built-in reflex.

Subject assists with storage of arriving supplies, and signs receipt forms.

Subject informs Jam-Y and L4-O-QKW about progress re: dormitory conversion. He mentions delays in form acquisition.

Subject: Scrubot R0J-317(d)228-a9 ("Leeroy")

Subject continues work at Emergency Bunker C-3.

Subject: Cryo-BRN-4

Yet to reclone. Decanting expected on 214-10-25.

Subject: L4-O-QKW-1

Subject researches cone rifle course, finding it open to anyone authorised to use a cone rifle. He learns that it covers handling the most common shells and triggers, as well as the types of fuse available. He also learns that tacnuke shells are the most treasonous, being VIOLET Clearance. Subject should be able to attend course.

Subject reports for drills with squad. He inquires as to length of drilling process and likelihood of missions. He is informed that drills should last for two weekcycles or so, and that a Loyalty Parade is tomorrowcycle. The squad will be present.

After time with his squadmates, subject returns to bunker and assists with supplies. HE also checks his blaster power packs again, finding one that still needs charging.

Subject: Jam-Y-JYR-2

Subject once again eats with Speed-Y-DOF. He informs Speed-Y of the docbot problem.

Subject attends workcycle, giving his colleagues a speech about his mutation, and how he only wishes to help. (OOC: That's a nice speech Jam, take a perversity point.) It seems to have a small positive effect.

Subject pays attention to what clones are doing during workcycle. They appear to be doing their job, except one clone who is slacking, and another who seems suspicious.

On returning to the bunker, subject assists with the supplies.

Subject attempts to locate laser pistol range, finding two. One., however, is located in Troubleshooter Headquarters, which is still closed after the events of Mission PPG-01.

Subject: Mango-NHG-4

Subject attends workcycle as normal. He escapes Level 1 this time.

Subject remember appointment, and attends. (Note, Request increases surveillance on this clone. Suspected secret society involvement.)

On returning to dormitory, subject attempts to purchase document writer to record thoughts, but discovers that they are beyond his clearance. It is suggested that he obtain journal space for use with public terminals instead.

Subject: Azir-R-GNS-1

Subject attends workcycle, noting a seeming drop in attention spans during Mandatory Team Troubleshooter broadcasts. Perhaps .additional action is in order?

Subject returns to bunker and assists with supplies.

Subject: Mick-R-NRK-1

Subject attends workcycle as normal.

Subject attempts to locate a clone to befriend, concentrating on INFRAREDS. He finds a test subject, one Stu-DNR, who seems to be surviving tests regardless of what he faces. Stu seems to like Mick-R despite reclusiveness.

Subject: Selbio-R-SIL-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: E_net-R-HKR-1

No meaningful report.

Subject: Albey-R-MKR-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: Star-R-CSR-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: Kristos-R-GRU-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: John-R-SMR-3

Subject reports for workcycle. During this, he thinks he sees Speed-Y in the office.

Subject: Lucas-R-AHK-2

Notable Upcoming Events

Foursday, 214-10-11: Loyalty parade.

Fiveday, 214-10-12

Sixday, 214-10-13

Mandatory Inspection Day, 214-10-14: Zombie Handling course begins.

Oneday, 214-10-15: Power Studies course begins.

Twosday, 214-10-16

Threeday, 214-10-17: Generator maintenance scheduled.

written by Malkom on Jul 27, 2011 23:07

Mick-R continues becoming friends with Stu-DNR, attempting to find out what they have in common. He attends the loyalty parade if needed. If possible, he attends workcycle, eats and drinks as usual. Sleeps as usual, without fuss. If there is enough time, he visits the Troubleshooters again, and attempts to make himself agreeable to the higher ranking clones.

written by Speeder on Jul 27, 2011 23:46

On breakfast I mention to Jam that I forgot about the forms needed to inform that at least we are in the bunker.

I eat breakfast happily, and go visit the Loyalty Parade.

At work I inform of the anomaly to whoever is my superior, and request information on how to fix it.

I again attempt to keep high morale.

On the way home, I go fetch whatever forms are needed about our presence in the bunker, if I cannot convert it to troubleshooters headquarters without too much hassle, I research alternatives.

I also request docbot maintenance, and a newer model docbot to work in tandem.

I order a YELLOW reflec jumpsuit.

I see if I can get a new revolver and appropriate ammo (better if more than one type of ammo, even better if I find a ammo belt). I also see if there are revolver training somewhere. And I also see if I can find (non-treasonous) revolver modifications, both cosmetic and functional.

And finally, I remember that I still do not have a PDC, and go see if I can get one, even better if I get a Tech Services custom one, with Tech Services related apps, manuals and information.

written by Jam on Jul 28, 2011 01:37⁵⁷³

I tell Speed-Y that I must have forgotten about the forms too, as I don't remember them at all, even after being reminded...

I also eat breakfast happily, and follow Speed-Y to the Loyalty Parade. I make sure to watch L4-O, in case he appears in the parade.

⁵⁷³ JAM: (OOC: Um, what happened to the medical aid course? And thanks for the PP!)

At work, I make sure the slacker clone is working, and try to recall the name of the suspicious clone (Also, I make sure to get his mental fingerprint). At the end of the workcycle, I mention to my colleagues that I'm planning on going to the laser pistol range tomorrowcycle after workcycle, if anyone wants to come...

I make sure to pay closer attention to today's medical aid course, as I can't really remember much of what I learned yesterday....

After work, I go back to the bunker for a bit, and wander around looking for anything that's missing or not working right. If I happen to meet Mick-R, I greet him, and try to be friendly. I talk a bit with him, and tell him I'll be going to the laser pistol range tomorrowcycle, if he wants to join me...

I try to research when the laser pistol range is open, and to who, and where, and how much it costs, and what to bring... I also invite the other members of Team Epsilon (including John-R and Lucas-R) to join me tomorrowcycle...

written by Lightning4 on Jul 28, 2011 01:47

After discovering my tacnuke shell is... significantly higher clearance than I am, I stow it safely in my locker. Hopefully while nobody is looking.

I then eat and do some exercise. Hopefully by now I'm starting to feel my stamina return.

I attend the Loyalty Parade with my squad, doing my best to appear happy to be there. And doing my best to look exceptionally loyal!

I check to see when the cone rifle course begins. If it's today, I attend it.

I try to subtly see if there's any forms around that I can fill out to possess and use VIOLET cone rifle shells, for no reason of course. Though I also see if any of my other shells may be outside of my clearance. And if my brevet actually covers use of high clearance shells.

That dealt with, I return to the bunker and try to clean out any treasonous-ness with some more PDC gaming.

Then food, drink, sleep.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 28, 2011 03:55

Hmm this is not good at all.

I inform whoever is in charge of the disturbing trend (I assume a RED such as myself answers to someone), and suggest that should the behavior persist or worsen, the noted clones will may need to face punishments, merely as a suggestion of course.

After work I attend the loyalty parade with the team, enjoying it immensely before returning and exercising after eating and then getting some rest.

written by 4616599 on Jul 28, 2011 16:00

I chat with Joe-Y again during breakfast, talking about my surveillance duties. I hint at my proficiency in it.

I hear news about the loyalty parade, and attend it. If I see Speed-R, I briefly say hi to him and tell him that unexpected happenings led me elsewhere. I also happily promote my 'anti-mutant' suit if necessary.

I then go to work. I check on my pay, and continue monitoring the INFRAREDS, sipping some B3 as I go along.

I also check for any nearby seminars or events I can attend after my shift.

I stop to watch Funball again before attempting to acquire a PDC from a vendor or something.

Once done, I head back to the dormitory for a meal and rest.

written by Gligar on Jul 28, 2011 16:54

SURVEILLANCE LOG JHT-2896483(f)

TIME PERIOD: 214-10-11 06:00 - 214-10-12 06:00

SECURITY CLEARANCE: BLUE (original document); INFRARED + PPG-Alpha (this version)

Subject: Joris-R-DNK-3

Subject converses with Joe-Y during breakfast. He talks about his work.

Subject attends workcycle. He checks his pay, and finds that he is earning 1,000 credits per monthcycle.

After workcycle, subject attends Loyalty Parade. Seeing the Troubleshooters, he talks about his "anti-mutant suit".

Subject researches recent events and discovers the Power Studies course.

On return to Iota Subsector, subject watches Funball again.

Subject: Speed-Y-DOF-2

Subject once again eats breakfast with Jam-Y-JYR. He has realised that he still needs to complete some forms re: bunker occupancy.

Subject attends workcycle. He notifies his superior regarding previously-found anomaly, and is told that it will be looked into.

Subject attempts to maintain happiness levels during workcycle.

Subject attends Loyalty Parade after workcycle. On the way, he obtains the needed forms for bunker use. He additionally requests docbot repair, as well as a second docbot. Second request is "placed in the queue".

Subject places order for YELLOW clearance reflec-enhanced jumpsuit. Seeing them available, he also orders a "revolver" and ammunition. Subject researches "revolver" training but notes that there is no course planned for the immediate future.

Subject also orders a replacement PDC. He is told that it'll be arriving within a weekcycle.

Subject receives notification from R&D concerning his testing request. R&D is ready to begin testing, beginning tomorrowcycle.

Subject: Scrubot ROJ-317(d)228-a9 ("Leeroy")

Subject continues work at Emergency Bunker C-3.

Subject: Cryo-BRN-4

Yet to reclone. Decanting expected on 214-10-25.

Subject: L4-O-OKW-1

Subject exercises on waking. He seems to be having less problems with his lungs now.

Subject participates in Loyalty Parade. He appears exceptionally loyal.

Subject investigates cone rifle course, and discovers that it begins on 214-10-18.

Subject investigates use of VIOLET shells, and avoids an IntSec warning when he discovers that it is not possible.

Subject checks his brevet, and his other shells, and finds that he is authorised to use them.

Subject: Jam-Y-JYR-2

Subject once again eats breakfast with Speed-Y-DOF. He also seems to have overlooked forms.

Subject attends workcycle, and invites colleagues to laser range tomorrowcycle. He gets a few takers.

During workcycle, subject prods the slacker clone to begin working. He is successful, at least when he's supervising the slacker. It appears that the slacker has a motivation problem.

Subject investigates suspicious clone. (Note: clone is Bill-O GJN, and is of interest - see file DLFK5932.) He seems to have difficulties obtaining a mental fingerprint.

Subject attends Loyalty Parade.

Subject attends medical course. He seems to have forgotten what was learned previous session. (Note: surveillance glitch present; see Report GHJUT4758.) Subject shows better retention this session.

Subject returns to bunker and converses with Mick-R-TLK. He invites him to the range.

Subject invites the rest of the team to accompany him to the range.

Subject inspects the bunker, looking for anything out of place. He does not discover anything out of the ordinary.

Subject checks on range opening, discovering it to be open between 08:00 and 22:00.

Subject: Mango-NHG-4

Subject attends workcycle as usual. He is once again assigned to Level 1.

Subject avoids injury and attends Loyalty Parade.

Subject: Azir-R-GNS-1

Subject informs superior of trend, suggesting punishments if needed. Superior agrees.

Subject attends Loyalty Parade before returning to bunker to exercise.

Subject: Mick-R-NRK-1

Subject continues associating with Stu-DNR during workcycle. He discovers that Stu-DNR was demoted for some reason.

Subject attends Loyalty Parade, and notes that Team Epsilon is present.

Subject visits Emergency Bunker C-3 after parade. He is notably pleasant towards the higher clearances.

Subject: Selbio-R-SIL-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: E_net-R-HKR-1

No meaningful report.

Subject: Albey-R-MKR-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: Star-R-CSR-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: Kristos-R-GRU-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: John-R-SMR-3

Subject attends workcycle. He finds it difficult to concentrate for some reason.

Subject attends Loyalty Parade.

Subject: Lucas-R-AHK-2

Subject attends workcycle, where he assists in repairing the MemoMax system.

Subject attends Loyalty Parade.

Notable Upcoming Events

Fiveday, 214-10-12, Laser range time planned.

Sixday, 214-10-13

Mandatory Inspection Day, 214-10-14: Zombie Handling course begins.

Oneday, 214-10-15: Power Studies course begins.

Twosday, 214-10-16

Threeday, 214-10-17: Generator maintenance scheduled.

Foursday, 214-10-18: Cone rifle course begins.

written by Malkom on Jul 28, 2011 17:20

Mick-R sees a notice about the "laser range time planned", and inquires about it. If possible and if it sounds interesting or useful, he attends it.

Mick-R keeps a sharp lookout for shady clones throughout the daycycle.

Mick-R goes to workcycle as usual, and after workcycle visits the troubleshooters a third time, still being pleasant to the higher-clearances.

After his visit, Mick-R eats away from other clones in the food hall, though if he sees Stu he will eat with Stu and attempt to hold a rather pleasant conversation.

Mick-R goes to sleep when required.

At some point during the day, Mick-R attempts to find out when the next mission he goes on the Troubleshooters with will be.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 28, 2011 17:42

I will plan on attending the firing range activity with the team after work, as it sounds like a good exercise and a way to get to know everyone better as well.

At work, I keep an eye on the trend, hoping to see improvements.⁵⁷⁴

written by Lightning4 on Jul 28, 2011 20:07

I wake up, do some exercise, eat and drink.

I go to the barracks for more drilling. I renew my attempts to socialize a bit.

I join the team at the laser range, doing my best to improve my fairly dismal accuracy with the laser pistol. If allowed, I also bring and use my blaster for some more practice time with that.

I spend some time figuring out where I should go to have my other blaster repaired, so I can have a backup. I check for forms I can fill out or a place I can bring it in.

I return to the bunker and eat/drink. I decide to check what other classes are available to me as an ORANGE level citizen. Weapon related or otherwise.

Sleep.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 28, 2011 21:21

I attend work, concentrating on it and nothing else. After finishing, I consider using the public terminals for logging, but decide not to. In the end, I sleep, wondering why on [DFSR] I'm agreeing to this cycle of repetition.

written by Jam on Jul 28, 2011 23:01

I wake up, think about the my schedule a bit, and decide on when I should go to the laser range so it wouldn't conflict with my schedule. I send Mick-R a PDC message reminding him where the laser range is, and telling him the scheduled timecycle.

⁵⁷⁴ AZIRPHELII: (OOO: Disregard that my last post echo's this, mistakenly submitted it as an edit O_o)

Then I go to eat breakfast with Speed-Y, and also tell him when I'll be going to the range. I also tell the other members of Team Epsilon if I happen to see them.

I go to work, and watch the slacker clone to make sure he's working... Hmm... He seems to have a motivation problem...

"How about this... Starting now, every weekcycle, the clone I see doing the best job and working the hardest during the weekcycle will get a 20 credit prize on Mandatory Inspection Day."

I also try to figure out just what it is that make the suspicious clone seem so suspicious...

"Also, I'm going to be going to the laser pistol range at [Insert Timecycle Here]... If you're lucky, you might get to meet the other Troubleshooters in Team Epsilon..."

After work, I go to my Medical Aid course, and try to learn as much as I can. I make sure to take notes, and save them on my PDC in case I need to access them at a later datecycle.

And after my Medical Aid course, I go to the bunker and do a search on my PDC for news articles with 'Troubleshooter Team Epsilon' in them. (What? Can't I be a little egocentric sometimes? 😊)

Once it's time to go to the laser range, I go there, making sure to bring with a spare RED laser pistol barrel if I need to... I make sure to talk with all the clones I invited there, and try to make sure everyclone has a good time... (I also note how well I did with my aiming, as I'm quite proud of my laser skills...)

Before I go to sleep, I visit John-R and ask tell him about the suspicious clone that I had trouble getting a fingerprint from... I ask him if he's seen anything like that, and what it might mean. I also ask him what he suggests I should do about it...

written by Speeder on Jul 29, 2011 00:36

I get happy at being invited to Laser Range, I inform Jam I will attend if I have time.

On the way to work I see if I can buy somewhere already some RED and YELLOW barrels, RED for training, YELLOW for actual use.

I do again my best on the work, and check on the anomaly and if anyone worked on it.

After work, I attend R&D.

After R&D if time is available, I go see Jam on the range, and I also attempt to train a bit using RED barrels if I managed to buy them earlier. (or using borrowed stuff, if available).

I ask L4 about slugthrower range.

If there are still time before sleep, I fill what I can of the forms, I also leave the forms in a place where Jam can spot them too.

written by Gligar on Jul 29, 2011 01:53

SURVEILLANCE LOG JHT-2896483(g)

TIME PERIOD: 214-10-12 06:00 - 214-10-13 06:00

SECURITY CLEARANCE: BLUE (original document); INFRARED + PPG-Alpha (this version)

Subject: Joris-R-DNK-3

Subject attends workcycle as usual. He notes that there seems to be an increase in reactor output, as more Reactor Shielding clones are terminating due to radiation exposure.

Subject: Speed-Y-DOF-2

Subject is pleased to be asked to attend a range. He plans to attend if he has time.

Travelling to workcycle, he is able to purchase some laser pistol barrels.

At workcycle, subject investigates anomaly. He discovers some clones working on it.

After workcycle, subject attends R&D for installation of test hardware. He is given a robotic foot and lower leg. He is told to give it the best workout he can.

Subject has little time left, but briefly attends the range, showing off his new hardware. Said foot requires some getting used to.

On returning to bunker, subject discovers more forms waiting for him regarding his plan to convert Dormitory 3. He begins to fill out forms.

Subject: Scrubot ROJ-317(d)228-a9 ("Leeroy")

Subject is reassigned to Building 2, Industrial Subsector B.

Subject: Cryo-BRN-4

Yet to reclone.

Due to having caught up with recloning backlog, CloneServe are currently pushing forward more lower-clearance decantings. Cryo-BRN is now scheduled for 214-10-16.

Subject: L4-O-OKW-1

Subject attends barracks for more drills. The squad seems to be getting along well.

Subject attends range. He attempts to improve his skills, and seems to succeed slightly.

Subject attempts to train with blaster but is not permitted.

After the range, subject investigates repairs for other blaster. He discovers a weapons repair firm.

Subject researches other courses available but there are none right now.

Subject: Jam-Y-JYR-2

Subject decides that the range is best visited after his medical course. He informs clones of this.

Subject attends workcycle and attempts to motivate the slacker. The slacker seems interested in a credit bonus.

Subject attends medical course. He makes sure to take notes.

Subject returns to bunker and searches for news articles concerning the team. He finds that The Daily Briefing has a small article concerning Mission PPG-01, and their involvement.

Subject finally makes it to the range, and discovers that there are quite a few clones there: the team, some of his colleagues, and a few others. He notes that his aiming is pretty good.

Subject visits John-R-SMR and discusses the suspicious clone from yesterdaycycle. John-R suspects that either the clone is shielding, or is an android.

Subject: Mango-NHG-4

Subject concentrates on workcycle but seems to have lost enthusiasm.

Subject chooses not to obtain journal space.

Subject: Azir-R-GNS-1

At workcycle, subject monitors attention span trends. They do not appreciably improve.

After workcycle, subject attends range for practice. He notes a possible improvement.

Subject: Mick-R-NRK-1

Subject inquires about range time, and discovers the location. He decides to attend after workcycle.

Subject keeps watch for suspicious clones, and discovers some clones, discussing something in hushed tones.

During workcycle, subject learns that Derek-G now has enough information to begin construction of a new bot prototype to replace the destroyed one.

Subject attempts to learn when next mission will be, but learns that there is no data regarding future missions at his security clearance.

Subject heads to range for practice. Afterwards he visits the bunker.

On returning to Kappa Subsector, subject is informed of a meeting with Internal Security to discuss accusations of suspicious activity.

Subject: Selbio-R-SIL-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: E_net-R-HKR-1

No meaningful report.

Subject: Albey-R-MKR-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: Star-R-CSR-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: Kristos-R-GRU-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: John-R-SMR-3

Subject attends workcycle as usual. He notes an unusual request.

Subject attends range.

Subject later converses with Jam-Y concerning suspicious clone.

Subject: Lucas-R-AHK-2

Having received no formal laser pistol training, subject is overjoyed to attend range to learn.

Subject attends workcycle, where he learns that the main backlog is done with, allowing the low-priority clones to move forward into the queue.

Subject attends range and picks up the basics of laser pistol.

Notable Upcoming Events

Sixday, 214-10-13

Mandatory Inspection Day, 214-10-14: Zombie Handling course begins.

Oneday, 214-10-15: Power Studies course begins.

Twosday, 214-10-16: Cryo-BRN scheduled for recloning.

Threeday, 214-10-17: Generator maintenance scheduled.

Foursday, 214-10-18: Cone rifle course begins.

Fiveday, 214-10-19

written by Malkom on Jul 29, 2011 04:18

Mick-R remembers the faces of the hushed-tones-discussion clones and reports them at the IntSec meeting. Otherwise, he (tries) to do his day as usual: converse with Stu, work, eat in the food hall, sleep, and everything else a clone normally does.

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 29, 2011 04:34

At work, I am saddened by the lack of improvement, after all, who wouldn't want to watch Mandatory Team Troubleshooter. I approach my superiors to alert them that it seems the current course of action is not working.

I instead suggest that a contest be setup, where a key detail from one of the episodes shown during the course of the day is asked and the first clone to correctly point it out should win a prize in credits.

It's sad that it would come to this, but I think a little competition may rekindle that passion for quality vidshows such as Mandatory Team Troubleshooter that seems to have gone missing.

Outside of work, I make pleasant conversation with most of the team members, and continue to train for the inevitable "next assignment".

written by Lightning4 on Jul 29, 2011 06:42

I attend to my drills at the barracks. If my squadmates are doing anything interesting todaycycle after drilling, I join them.

Later, I seek out a weapons repair form and set about filling it out. I fill in the required information and send it off.

I remember Speed-Y's request from yesterdaycycle and see if there is a slugthrower range for use. I inform him where it is if one exists.

I also see if there are any other ranges. Blaster at least, possibly also rifle and cone rifle if they exist as well.

With any remaining time I wander around the bunker, making sure everything is in order and nothing suspicious is going on.

Some more exercise of course. Then sleep.

written by Speeder on Jul 29, 2011 11:27

At breakfast I tell Jam about the forms. I look unusually happy. I even hug Jam during breakfast.

At work, I do it carefully at first, until I am sure I will not kick or stomp anything by accident, as I get more comfortable I try to work behaving in a more and more normal manner, but safety always first. I also check on the anomaly, and attempt to figure what sort of work is being done on it, or was done on it.

After work, I attempt to find a physical training range, if I fail to find any, I go to A-level garage, and climb up and down shelves, jump between boxes, and whatnot, and when I am comfortable enough I attempt some jumps between shelves, and from shelves to the ground.

I also kick random (but not important) objects, to see if it do more damage. I also try to figure if the electromechanical foot is stronger.

After I tire, I go back to the dormitory and continue filling forms, I also check when will be delivered the revolver, jumpsuit, other forms, docbot and other requests.

Also I take more look on the PLC catalog, again feeling like a weaponsmith, I see if a B3 can thrower is available, if not, I see if I can find on the catalog a tube that fits B3 can, a compressed air machine or tube, and a valve that can be triggered easily, and other misc itens needed to build a B3 launcher. I also see if I can order a YELLOW knife, and what a YELLOW knife do better than a RED one.

written by Jam on Jul 29, 2011 20:04⁵⁷⁵

At breakfast, I'm a bit surprised to see Speed-Y in such happy mood, more happy than usual... He must really like his new leg...

At work, I focus on watching the clones, and to determine which clone is working the hardest and doing the best job... I watch slacker clone to see if he is working any harder (and make sure to learn his name). I also mention there is a Power Studies course on Oneday (ooc: I signed up for that, right?) , and ask who here has taken the course before. I make sure to note Bill-O's response, but also pay attention to the responses of the other clones.

⁵⁷⁵ JAM: (ooc: Were we using our own barrels at the laser range?)

After work, I go to the medical aid course, and learn things. I ask I could look at a list of YELLOW and below drugs and their functions, if such a thing exists...

Back at the bunker, I work on filling out the Dormitory Conversion Forms, and submit them if they are complete.

I continue waiting for my PLC catalog to arrive, and, feeling somewhat impatient, ask to borrow Speed-Y's.

Also, I check to see if there are any nearby medical bays (besides the one in the bunker), and if they would let the me watch a docbot treat clones, which would be a great supplement to my medical aid course.

Then, I sleep, after first making sure to check under the bed for Anti-Mutant assassins, CMTs, and Mango-R.

written by Gligar on Jul 29, 2011 22:58

SURVEILLANCE LOG JHT-2896483(h)

TIME PERIOD: 214-10-13 06:00 - 214-10-14 06:00

SECURITY CLEARANCE: BLUE (original document); INFRARED + PPG-Alpha (this version)

Subject: Joris-R-DNK-3

Subject reports for workcycle as usual. He notes that the number of reactor shielding clones is dropping. Perhaps more are needed to ensure proper shielding, and protect the rest of the sector from radiation?

Subject: Speed-Y-DOF-2

Subject once again eats breakfast with Jam-Y-JYR. He is exceptionally happy as he tells about the forms.

Subject reports for workcycle. He begins trying out new leg. It is difficult at first, but gets easier.

Subject investigates the anomaly he found, and discovers that it is still being worked on. Several components have been replaced, and subroutines have been rewritten.

Subject attempts to locate a gym. He finds one, but it is already overfull.

Subject returns to the bunker and performs exercises in the loading dock. He ascertains that his new leg seems stronger than his old one.

Subject returns to dormitory and continues with forms, finishing what he has. He checks on deliveries, and discovers that they will be completed in two daycycles. The docbot will be assigned when it is available.

Subject again turns to catalogue, looking for a device to throw B3 cans. Seeing none, he orders parts necessary to construct one.⁵⁷⁶ Delivery time is two daycycles.

⁵⁷⁶ Gligar: (OOC: It's a pity that Alpha Complex doesn't have grenade launchers. But that would make things too easy 😊)

Subject looks for YELLOW knife but there doesn't appear to be one.

Subject: Scrubot R0J-317(d)228-a9 ("Leeroy")

Subject begins work in Building 2.

Subject: Cryo-BRN-4

Yet to reclone. Decanting expected 214-10-16.

Subject: L4-O-QKW-1

Subject attends drills at barracks. Drills include grenades todaycycle.

After drills, subject seeks weapon repair form and fills it out.

Subject also investigates other ranges, and finds one for slugthrowers. He informs Speed-Y-DOF of his findings. He then looks for other ranges but finds none in this sector. He would have to go to another sector to find them.

Subject checks over bunker and discovers that the work in the warehouse, and Concourse C1, is progressing nicely. The stairwell is almost complete.

Subject: Jam-Y-JYR-2

Subject once again eats breakfast with Speed-Y-DOF. He is surprised to see him so happy.

Subject reports for workcycle and watches the clones, looking for the best worker. He notes that the slacker, one Jake-R-SLW, seems to be doing a good job now.

Subject mentions upcoming Power Studies course (ooc: which he did sign up for). He asks who has taken the course and gets a couple of affirmative answers, including Bill-O.

Subject attends medical course. He asks for a list of drugs but discovers that there is no such list.

Subject returns to bunker and works on forms, finishing the Dormitory Conversion form. He submits the form.

Subject asks Speed-Y for his catalogue.

Subject researches medical bays and discovers one on C Level with docbots.

Subject checks for a number of things, and, finding none, sleeps.

Subject: Mango-NHG-4

Subject once again avoids being assigned to Level 1 at workcycle. He notes a sign calling for reactor shielding volunteers.

Subject: Azir-R-GNS-1

Subject wakes, and reports for workcycle. He notices that the current course of action regarding Mandatory Team Troubleshooter is not working, and suggests a competition. Perhaps it will win over the clones again.

Subjects superiors agree to take it under advisement.

Subject returns to bunker and continues exercises.

Subject: Mick-R-NRK-1

Subject attends IntSec meeting. He is told that his habits of eating alone were reported as possible suspicious activity, and that he will be watched for the immediate future.

Subject reports his own sightings at meeting.

Subject again meets with Stu-DNR. Stu seems to appreciate the meetings.

Subject reports for workcycle as usual. He assists with the construction of Derek-G's new prototype: ArmourBot X-2.

Subject returns to Kappa Subsector. He notes that more units have been completed.

Subject grabs food, eats, then returns to dormitory to sleep.

Subject: Selbio-R-SIL-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: E_net-R-HKR-1

No meaningful report.

Subject: Albey-R-MKR-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: Star-R-CSR-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: Kristos-R-GRU-2

No meaningful report.

Subject: John-R-SMR-3

Subject: Lucas-R-AHK-2

Notable Upcoming Events

Mandatory Inspection Day, 214-10-14: Zombie Handling course begins.

Oneday, 214-10-15: Power Studies course begins. Speed-Y's deliveries due.

Twosday, 214-10-16: Cryo-BRN scheduled for recloning.

Threeday, 214-10-17: Generator maintenance scheduled.

Foursday, 214-10-18: Cone rifle course begins.

Fiveday, 214-10-19

Sixday, 214-10-20

written by Speeder on Jul 30, 2011 00:35

At morning, still in the dormitory, I show to Jam where the catalogue is stashed, and explain that he can use it all he wants.

I hand Jam all the forms, so he can doublecheck, I ask him to submit them after he checks all of them.

At work, I work.

I also start to do a very precise inspection, each day of work I will inspect one single tank, personally, and with the most gifted RED clone with me, I tell him that if he do well, I will see if he can get promoted to ORANGE.

After work I show up on the course, and attempt to do my best, if any opportunities arise, I attempt to invent a new move: Speeder's Breaker Kick, that involved in taking my mecha foot to the target, and only then using the foot itself power, delivering thus in practice two impacts.

If I am not too tired, I exercise a little. If I am too tired for that, I setup a sort of firing range using non-important boxes on the garage, and spend 2 RED barrels on them, training.

written by Malkom on Jul 30, 2011 03:14

Mick-R works as usual. He meets Stu in the morning, and visits the Troubleshooters in the evening, in time to see Speed-Y's improv'd shooting range. After he comes home, he attempts to buy a RED clearance laser pistol and ten fresh barrels.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 30, 2011 05:04

I realize today is Mandatory Inspection Day. Not remembering all the details I panic a little and grab my tacnuke shell from my locker and put it back in my backpack.

I manage to get down some breakfast.

I attend my drills at the range, wondering if there's an interesting weapon today. Maybe knives. Fred needs some use. Even if it's not knife day I practice a little in the air while I'm not drilling.

I search for the progress on my weapons repair form and if I need to do anything like drop the blaster off at a certain location.

If at any point during the day my tacnuke shell comes into question, I present my brevet and hope it covers it, and explain that I planned on using it on any commie mutant traitor massed forces that may ever happen to show up someday.

I exercise some more, then sleep.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 30, 2011 10:00

I decide to I can sign up for the reactor shielding, after looking into what is required in that area, and whether it poses too much of a risk. This happens either before or after my workcycle, depending upon the time I work, or not.

written by Gligar on Jul 30, 2011 19:38

SURVEILLANCE LOG JHT-2896483(i)

TIME PERIOD: 214-10-14 06:00 - 214-10-15 06:00

SECURITY CLEARANCE: BLUE (original document); INFRARED + PPG-Alpha (this version)

Subject: Joris-R-DNK-3

Subject reports for mandatory inspection.

Subject reports for workcycle. A few reactor shielding volunteers have been found, and are ready to take their places. Subject supervises their installation.

Subject: Speed-Y-DOF-2

Subject wakes and notifies Jam-Y-JYR of the location of his catalogue. He also hands over forms to check and submit.

Subject reports for workcycle. He begins a full inspection of the facility's cloning tanks, accompanied by one Stella-R-NIT. He promises to recommend her for promotion if she does well. Two two make a full inspection of one cloning tank, finding no problems. There are more than three hundred left to inspect.

Subject reports for Zombie Handling course. Course covers the best ways to spot a zombie infestation and methods of containing them. And, of course, how to destroy them without causing too much damage to Alpha Complex. There is the opportunity to practice against simulated zombies (actually zombiebots). Subject takes the opportunity and begins devising a new tactic based on robotic leg.

Subject returns to bunker. Since course has taken so long, subject forgoes exercises for target practice.

Subject: Scrubot ROJ-317(d)228-a9 ("Leeroy")

Subject continues work at Building 2. It encounters resistance in the form of clones delaying resupply.

Subject: Cryo-BRN-4

Yet to reclone. Decanting expected 214-10-16.

Subject: L4-O-OKW-1

On waking, subject grabs his equipment and reports to barracks after breakfast, expecting inspection.

No inspection actually takes place, however. Squad is instead given orders to report to O Sublevel tomorrowcycle, to cull an infestation. Apparently, a Troubleshooter team was sent, and was wiped out. Another was sent to investigate their disappearance, and was again wiped out.

This is expected to take just one daycycle.

The rest of the daycycle is take up with training to handle what is down there.

During training, subject is informed that he will need to send his faulty blaster off for repairs soon.

Subject returns to bunker and sleeps.

Subject: Jam-Y-JYR-2

Subject accepts forms from Speed-Y, and promises to look over them.

Subject reports for workcycle. He continues his supervision.

Subject: Mango-NHG-4

Subject reports for mandatory inspection.

Subject investigates reactor shielding duty. There is surprisingly little information beyond "no experience needed" and "serve and protect the Complex". There is the treasonous rumour that it involves being reactor shielding, but the clones who spread it have the tendency of disappearing. Subject's interest is noted.

Subject: Azir-R-GNS-1

Subject reports for workcycle. He notices that his competition idea seems to have been implemented, though supervisor Boris-G-GGR has taken credit.

Subject: Mick-R-NRK-1

Subject reports for mandatory inspection.

Subject continues to meet with Stu.

Subject once again helps with construction of ArmourBot X-2.

Subject attempts to travel to the bunker in the eveningcycle, but is asked to work late by Derek-G.

Subject returns to Kappa Subsector and attempts to make some purchases. He attempts to purchase ten RED laser barrels, but does not have sufficient credit. Subject instead settles for two barrels.

Subject: John-R-SMR-3

Subject reports for workcycle, where he handles equipment transfer forms. One is for a "revolver".

Subject: Lucas-R-AHK-2

Subject reports for workcycle. He assists in the inspection of a cloning tank.

Notable Upcoming Events

Oneday, 214-10-15: Power Studies course begins. Speed-Y's deliveries due.

Twosday, 214-10-16: Cryo-BRN scheduled for recloning.

Threeday, 214-10-17: Generator maintenance scheduled.

Foursday, 214-10-18: Cone rifle course begins.

Fiveday, 214-10-19

Sixday, 214-10-20

Mandatory Inspection Day, 214-10-21

Notable Newspaper Headlines

Two Teams Fail To Return From Underplex - Commies To Blame? - The Troubleshooter Times

Tacnuke Shell Missing - Six Terminated on Suspicion of Theft - The Daily Briefing

"Watch Mandatory Team Troubleshooter and Win!" - Boris-G-GGR-3 - The Daily Briefing

written by Lightning4 on Jul 30, 2011 20:06

I look a little concerned as I wake up. I don't exercise but eat normally. I inform Team Epsilon where I'm going today.

I report with my squad and mention what I've seen of O sublevel and that I've been there before. I help fill in any details if there are gaps in our information, especially on those frownyface mutants. I don't inform them of why I was down there since it is likely beyond their clearance. And likely beyond my own to divulge.

I go with the team. In case of combat I primarily focus on using Turbo for groups and my laser blaster for the singular attackers. I use a grenade or two if I have to take out a large cluster fast. Tossing both the pin and body of course!

If combat is over and anyone is injured I try to help with my medkit.

If I make it back alive I send off my faulty blaster for repairs.

I attend to any wounds I gained during the course of combat.

Then sleep, since I'll probably be exhausted.

written by Malkom on Jul 30, 2011 20:08

Mick-R does this day as usual.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 30, 2011 21:56

I wake up, and I sign up for reactor shielding duty after the morning duties are done, such as tidying up and eating. I remember the details of what went on when I retrieved the Tsar part of the way down at one of the reactors.

I attend the workcycle as usual if necessary, telling the supervisor of my decision to sign up for reactor shielding duty.^{577 578}

written by Jam on Jul 31, 2011 00:52⁵⁷⁹

I doublecheck the forms, then submit them. I also thank Speed-Y for lending me his catalog, and cancel my own request for one.

At work, I make sure to inspect whatever it is my colleagues are working on, since it's ~~Mandatory Inspection Day~~ Oneday. I again look for the hardest working clone.

"Oh, I forgot about the prize yesterdaycycle! I'll just do it todaycycle instead!"

At the end of workcycle, after everyclone has left, I follow Jake-R and give him the 20 credit prize. I explain to him that by doing it in private, other clones won't be able to target him if they think they deserved the prize instead... Also, I ask a favor of him...

"I've noticed Bill-O has been acting rather suspicious lately... I have a strange fear he's an Anti-Mutant plotting something against me... I don't know, it could be nothing, but do you think you could keep an eye on him for me?"

After workcycle, I look in the PLC catalog for anything interesting, and especially anything that goes zap...

⁵⁷⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: I need input from more people. Three is disappointing.)

⁵⁷⁸ MALKOM: (OOC: Sorry, but I don't have much to add to my previous post; there's simply hardly anything I want Mick-R to do. I hope you get some more input soon.)

⁵⁷⁹ JAM: (OCC: Sorry!)

written by Gligar on Jul 31, 2011 01:53

SURVEILLANCE LOG JHT-2896483(j)

TIME PERIOD: 214-10-15 06:00 – 214-10-15 06:00

SECURITY CLEARANCE: BLUE (original document); INFRARED + PPG-Alpha (this version)

Subject: Joris-R-DNK-3

Subject reports for workcycle. He notes that fewer shielding clones are terminating.

Subject: Speed-Y-DOF-2

Subject once again eats breakfast with Jam-Y-JYR.

Subject reports for workcycle. He and Stella-R continue their inspection, checking another cloning tank.

On returning, subject notes that his deliveries have arrived.

Subject: Scrubot R0J-317(d)228-a9 ("Leeroy")

Subject continues work at Building 2. Inteference continues.

Subject: Cryo-BRN-4

Yet to reclone. Decanting expected 214-10-16.

Subject: L4-O-QKW-1

Subject informs bunker residents of his assignment on O Sublevel.

Subject reports to barracks. 3 Co. Mutant Mashers mobilises.

Subject: 3 Co. Mutant Mashers

Squad arrives at O Sublevel, to find the guardbot destroyed.

Having been informed by L4-O of what is down here, 3 Company sets to work using heavy weapons and grenades to wipe out as many "frownythings" as they can.

(Note: No official designation exists for "frownythings." However, for more information, see File INT-MC-SSS, clearance GREEN.)

Being inexperience in handling "frownythings", 3 Company suffers approx. 40% casualties. L4-O is injured, but survives. Other members also suffer injuries.

However, 3 Company is largely successful in its mission to cull a sizeable portion of the "frownything" population.

Surviving members return to Epsilon Subsector, and begin tending to their wounds.

Subject: Jam-Y-JYR-2

Subject once again eats breakfast with Speed-Y-DOF. He begins checking the forms and, seeing that they are in order, submits them.

Subject also thanks Speed-Y for loan of PLC catalogue, and cancels own request for one.

Subject reports for workcycle. He monitors colleague efficiency, and, at end of cycle, awards prize to Jake-R. Jake-R seems pleased, and listens to subject's request concerning Bill-O's behaviour. Jake-R agrees to keep an eye on Bill-O covertly.

Subject returns to bunker. He persues PLC catalogue for a weapon, and finds such things as an energy pistol, a laser rifle, and a (rather large) flamethrower.

Subject remembers courses, and attends (somewhat late).

Subject: Mango-NHG-4

Subject volunteers for reactor shielding duty, and informs supervisor of this.

After workcycle, subject is ordered to report to I Sublevel, starting 214-10-18.

Subject: Azir-R-GNS-1

Subject report for workcycle as usual. He notes viewing figures continue to rise.

Subject: Mick-R-NRK-1

Subject once again meets with Stu.

Subject reports for workcycle as usual.

Subject: John-R-SMR-3

Subject reports for workcycle as usual.

Subject: Lucas-R-AHK-2

Subject reports for workcycle. He assists in the inspection of a cloning tank.

Notable Upcoming Events

Twosday, 214-10-16: Cryo-BRN scheduled for recloning.

Threeday, 214-10-17: Generator maintenance scheduled.

Foursday, 214-10-18: Cone rifle course begins.

Fiveday, 214-10-19

Sixday, 214-10-20

Mandatory Inspection Day, 214-10-21

Oneday, 214-10-22

Notable Newspaper Headlines

3 Company Mutant Mashers Pull Off Daring Mission in Underplex - Massive Casualties (including lots of mutants!) - The Troubleshooter Times

Tacnuke Shell Still Not Found - Search Widens - The Daily Briefing

Reactor Shielding Volunteers at All-Time Low - The Troubleshooter Times

written by Azirphaeli on Jul 31, 2011 03:06⁵⁸⁰

I am pleased my idea worked, though for a while admittedly I hoped it would fail when Boris took credit, in the end what's best for alpha complex is that the results are good.

⁵⁸⁰ AZIRPHELI: [ooc sorry, weekends are always rough for me]

I continue the usual regiments⁵⁸¹

written by Speeder on Jul 31, 2011 04:56⁵⁸²

I remember that I missed my power studies course, and see what I can do about it.

Then I go to work and continue with the tanks inspections, I also take another clone, teach him how to do it, and tell him to check 2 tanks each day, a more rough thing, so if he find anything suspicious he can ask me and my partner to do the proper work on it.

After work, I check my new equipment, then I go see if I can schedule training, even if on my own on a proper range, for my slugthrower handgun.

I practice more with my new body, also I file some reports about it, specially how well it work, how strong it is, and how effective was the kick technique, and send to research team.

I also toy with my PDC, and see what kind of PDC it is.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 31, 2011 07:28

I check up on my wound status as I awake. Long day yesterday. I take in breakfast.

I make my way back to the bunker for drilling or debriefing, or whatever is needed of me at the barracks. I pay for and bring a large round of B3 for the entire squad in celebration of our relative success.

I check on the status of my squadmates, notably the ones who died in battle and when they're expected to reclone and rejoin the group... if they're not already there with us.

I return to the bunker and spend a little time researching the Underplex. At least as much as I can at ORANGE/Corporal clearance. What is/was down there, its purpose. Possibly why it's so full of dangerous stuff.

I finish my day by reading the news. I go to sleep thinking.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 31, 2011 11:14

I attend workcycle as usual, leaving a message on a note telling of my recent decision to volunteer for Reactor Shielding, on the basis that someone would be interested in it...

written by 4616599 on Jul 31, 2011 16:29

I wake up and have breakfast with the rest in the dormitory. I mention the reactor troubles briefly, denying all rumours that clones are being used for shielding (and instead insisting that it is a useful way for otherwise slack INFRAREDS to find useful employment). After the others have left, I cryptically hint to Joe-Y and his team that it would be a good way to get rid of any 'less-liked' clones.

Reading the papers, I note the O Sublevel events.

"Interesting. I kinda recall being there. Well, I guess those Armed Forces people had it coming, eh?"

⁵⁸¹ AZIRPHAELI: (OOC: for the next few days if I cannot update tomorrow)

⁵⁸² SPEEDER: (OOC: again, saturday is girlfriend day... sorta)

"Speaking of which, I might want a laser pistol. Anyone has a PDC handy?"

If I do get one, or otherwise, I search for a pistol, ordering it if necessary.

I report for work as usual, and monitor any suspicious/terminating clones.

During breaktimes I check up on any volunteering clones. If I see Mango-R, I monitor him very closely, while still trying to stay out of the way.

I mention to my colleagues to take special note of Mango, hinting that he could be suspicious or otherwise interesting.

Returning to Iota Subsector, I watch some Funball, looking out for any familiar or shady looking clones.

written by Jam on Jul 31, 2011 19:53

I wake up, and go to eat breakfast with Speed-Y again. Seeing that he missed the Power Studies course yesterday, I try to give him a summary of the part I was (barely) there for...

I go to work, and continue watching all the clones to make sure they're working properly... I also make sure to compliment the clones that are working well...

After that, I attend my courses, and take plenty of notes. I also look for a course schedule for both courses, so I can get a sense of what I've learned and what I'll be learning.

After the courses, I research what an energy pistol is, and how it differs from a laser pistol or a blaster... I also check the price on the flamethrower, even though it doesn't go zap, it still could come it handy... I also try to check how far the flames can reach...

I also check if there are any laser sights available for the weapons.

I also drink another of my YELLOW B3's, because it's the mandatory thing, and because it's delicious⁵⁸³.⁵⁸⁴

written by Malkom on Jul 31, 2011 20:10

Mick-R works as usual.

written by Gligar on Jul 31, 2011 22:20

SURVEILLANCE LOG JHT-2896483(k)

TIME PERIOD: 214-10-16 06:00 - 214-10-17 06:00

SECURITY CLEARANCE: BLUE (original document); INFRARED + PPG-Alpha (this version)

Subject: Joris-R-DNK-3

Subject wakes, and eats with rest of dormitory. He mentions workcycle briefly. He suggests the Joe-Y that reactor shielding might be a good punishment for undesirables. Joe-Y agrees.

⁵⁸³ JAM: (OOC: I think)

⁵⁸⁴ SPEEDER: (OOC: I think I am kinda lost in how courses work, if there are courses today, I go on them too)

Subject notes events happening on O Sublevel, and desires a laser pistol. He is unable to borrow a PDC, and is told to get one from PLC.

Subject eventually does locate a PDC and orders a laser pistol.

Subject reports for workcycle and monitors reactor shielding. He notes that Mango-NHG is not present, but warns colleagues about him regardless.

Subject returns to Iota Subsector and watches Funball as usual.

Subject: Speed-Y-DOF-2

Subject again eats breakfast with Jam-Y-JYR. He remembers that he missed the start of the Power Studies course. He discovers that he can simply attend from any point.

Subject reports for workcycle as usual. He notes that Cryo-BRN is scheduled for cloning today.

Subject ignores it and continues with tank inspection. This time, he recruits another clone, Reg-R-BLW, to start checking tanks in a less thorough fashion.

Subject notices Cryo-BRN-4 being decanted.

Subject returns to bunker and checks his delivery. It seems that the tubing is constructed of a rather thin material.

Subject attempts to locate a slugthrower range, but cannot find one.

Subject continues exercising his robotic leg, this time writing a report about it.

Subject attends courses.

Before sleeping, subject inspects his PDC. It is a Series 1500, now standard for YELLOW clones.

Subject: Scrubot R0J-317(d)228-a9 ("Leeroy")

Subject continues work at Building 2. Inteference continues.

Subject: Cryo-BRN-4

Subject is decanted in JHT Sector Main Cloning Station. He is issued an ME Card and an INNFRARED jumpsuit and boots, and is assigned to Industrial Subsector B as a Ring-For-Service Bell Function Tester.

Subject is escorted directly to Building 3, where he begins workcycle. He is assigned to Level 1, unfortunately.

Subject manages to escape serious injury and completes first workcycle. He is ordered to report to dormitory at Building 2.⁵⁸⁵

Subject: L4-O-QKW-1

Subject wakes and eats. He checks his wounds. They are serious. He will need docbot attention.

Subject reports for debriefing at barracks. For his actions, he receives a promotion to Sergeant.

Subject purchases a round of B3 for surviving squadmates. He investigates the cloning status of terminated squad members, and discovers that they are being delayed due to a full inspection of the cloning system.

Subject returns to bunker and attempts to research Underplex. Little information is available at his clearance, only that it consists of unused/abandoned areas of Alpha Complex, along with underground structures/caves below it.

Subject reads the news, and sleeps.

Subject: Jam-Y-JYR-2

Subject again eats breakfast with Speed-Y-DOF. He relays information from Power Studies course.

Subject attends workcycle. He continues supervision.

Subject attends courses after workcycle. He attempts to find course schedules, but can only discover that each course lasts two weekcycles.

Subject researches energy pistols. He learns that it is similar to a blaster, but has a longer range and finer adjustment controls (that it, it has them), as well as more shots per power pack.

Subject also researches the flamethrower. The YELLOW Clearance variety is 500cr and has a 20m range. It takes its fuel from a backpack. Other varieties are lighter, but have higher clearance (and cost).

Subject researches laser sights but discovers that they are limited to Armed Forces.

Subject: Mango-NHG-4

Subject reports for workcycle as usual. He leaves a note indicasting his participation in reactor shielding on a noticeboard.

Subject: Azir-R-GNS-1

Subject reports for workcycle as usual. He is pleased that his idea worked, though less than happy that his superior took the credit.

Subject returns to bunker and continues exercising.

Subject: Mick-R-NRK-1

Subject reports for workcycle as usual. Armourbot X-2 is taking shape. To save time, data from X-1 is used directly when specifying parameters.

Subject: John-R-SMR-3

Subject reports for workcycle as usual. He notices requisition requests for some rather odd materials...

Subject: Lucas-R-AHK-2

Subject reports for workcycle as usual.

Notable Upcoming Events

Threeday, 214-10-17: Generator maintenance scheduled.

⁵⁸⁵ GLIGAR: (ooc: pokes Cryo. You have a living clone again! 😊)

Foursday, 214-10-18: Cone rifle course begins.

Fiveday, 214-10-19

Sixday, 214-10-20

Mandatory Inspection Day, 214-10-21

Oneday, 214-10-22

Twosday, 214-10-23: Funballl match between JHT Sector Reserves and AHK Anvils.

Notable Newspaper Headlines

Emergency Bunker C-3 To Be Converted for Troubleshooter Use? - The Troubleshooter Times

"WHERE IS MY TACNUKE SHELL?!?" - Brian-V-JHT-4 - The Daily Briefing

Rumours of Zombies are False - The Troubleshooter Times

written by Malkom on Jul 31, 2011 23:19

Mick-R begins working up to three hourcycles overtime to recalculate the data for Armourbot X-2 so that they won't have to use the original data, fearing that using old data might cause errors and/or damage to Armourbot, and wanting to make a good expression. He meets with Stu in the morning.⁵⁸⁶

written by Lightning4 on Jul 31, 2011 23:21

I wake up and take in breakfast, then find the nearest docbot to get my wounds properly attended to.

I then attend any further drilling or debriefing at the barracks. Happy about my promotion, I inquire as to what new things I have earned at this rank.

I return to the bunker. I eat, drink, and then sleep.

written by Jam on Aug 01, 2011 01:07

I eat with Speed-Y again, and try to figure out which food and drink options I have at my current clearance... I eat any fruit available, and drink everyclone's favorite mandatory drink! Mmm... Mandatory!

At workcycle, I continue watching the clones, and try to help anyclone that seems to need helping. I also watch to make sure Jake-R is still working hard.

I also note the clone doing the best job. And, I try to figure out if my colleagues are still as hostile as last weekcycle, when I started working.

After work, I attend both my courses.

After the courses, I order a flamethrower, and an energy pistol. I also try to order a laser pointer, and some tape.

I also try to visit the other medical bay at C level (not the bunker's one)... I ask if I could watch the docbots treating patients, and if I can, I stay for a while watching them, and try to learn from them...

⁵⁸⁶ MALKOM: (OOC: pokes Mingamango I'd like to politely remind you about my forum game.)

After that, I head back to the bunker, and try to figure out which pills are available for me as a YELLOW registered mutant. Then, I sleep.

written by Speeder on Aug 01, 2011 03:27

I see if I can already order fruit on breakfast.

At work I check Cryo cloning tank, I try to figure if that tank somehow has become zombiefied, zombie manufacturer, or anything related to zombies or nanomachines.

I attend my courses.

I buy some red B3 cans.

At home, I try to assemble the first version of B3 launcher, I test several launches without shaking the cans until it fails, and note the maximum distance it could shoot.

Then I attempt to order a stronger tube, if I do not find one, I order 3 of the tube I just ruined.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 01, 2011 20:31

I take great interest in what Speedy is doing outside of work, watching to see how well the launcher works. I make a mental note that though pretty cool, nothing beats good old elbow grease when it comes to launching improvised explosives.

At work, I take personal satisfaction in seeing the viewers enjoying Mandatory Team Troubleshooter again, despite that I'm the only one who will know it was my idea in its entirety.

At some point, I find an isolated, easy to clean area and test the exploding b3 theory, and cleanup the resulting mess diligently (should a mess result and the rumors be true).

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 01, 2011 21:00⁵⁸⁷

I go about my business as usual, somewhat anxious about tomorrowcycle.⁵⁸⁸

written by Gligar on Aug 01, 2011 22:22

SURVEILLANCE LOG JHT-2896483(I)

TIME PERIOD: 214-10-17 06:00 - 214-10-18 06:00

SECURITY CLEARANCE: BLUE (original document); INFRARED + PPG-Alpha (this version)

Subject: Joris-R-DNK-3

Subject wakes and reports for workcycle. He is given a list of clones who have volunteered for reactor shielding tomorrowcycle. On the list is Mango-NHG.

Subject returns to Iota Subsector and watches Funball as usual. He notes that his catalogue has arrived.

⁵⁸⁷ MINGAMANGO181: (OOC Malkom: Have you ever considered what goes on outside this place? I can barely now even do this...)

⁵⁸⁸ MALKOM: (OOC Mingamango: It's okay... I'm just an impatient person.)

Subject: Speed-Y-DOF-2

Subject wakes, and again eats with Jam-Y-JYR. He notices that apples are available.

Subject reports for workcycle. He checks the cloning tank used by Cryo-BRN, attempting to see if has somehow become contaminated. He does not find anything obvious.

Subject attends courses as usual.

Subject notes that generator maintenance is occurring.

After courses, subject sets about constructing a B3 launcher, after purchasing some RED B3 to test it with.

Subject's first attempt at a launcher is less than spectacular, with cans only travelling 3m or so. He is able to get several test shots off before his barrel breaks. He orders a replacement.

Subject receives notification that his bunker requests have been approved. Furthermore, additional Troubleshooter teams will be assigned, starting "soon".⁵⁸⁹

Subject: Scrubot R0J-317(d)228-a9 ("Leeroy")

Subject continues work at Building 2. Interference continues. Subject is able to pinpoint interference to a small group of clones.

Subject: Cryo-BRN-4

Subject wakes, and reports for workcycle.

It transpires that subject was mistakenly assigned to impact testing, rather than function testing. This, however, still requires access to Level 1 to retrieve bells for testing.

Subject begins, and is reprimanded for taking far too long to test each bell - one ring is sufficient, not fifty. And the smile he has while he does it... doesn't look natural...in fact, it looks creepy...⁵⁹⁰

Subject: L4-O-QKW-1

Subject wakes and eats. He locates a docbot, which turns out to be the one Speed-Y ordered to supplement the bunker's old one, which is currently under investigation.

Subject's wounds are patched, and reports to barracks. He is informed that he is now the happy leader of one squad of 3 Company Mutant Mashers. There are two more squads of same at the barracks. Most of them seem to be recruits.

Subject returns to bunker, and notes ongoing generator maintenance.

Subject: Jam-Y-JYR-2

Subject once again eats with Speed-Y-DOF. He researches food options, and notes the available apples, as well as things called "spices" and real coffee. Not coffeelyke.

Subject continues supervision at workcycle. He notes that colleagues are slightly more friendly now, though still eye him with a little suspicion. Subject notes that Jake-R is working well.

Subject attends courses as usual.

Subject orders flamethrower and energy pistol, as well as a laser pointer and duct tape. Delivery estimated at 214-10-20.

Subject notes ongoing generator maintenance.

Subject visits medical bay outside of bunker and observes docbots at work.

Subject returns to bunker and researches medication. There seems to be a system glitch, and his search is fruitless.

Subject: Mango-NHG-4

Subject reports for workcycle as usual. He is showing apprehension at pending events.

Subject: Azir-R-GNS-1

Subject reports for workcycle. Happiness Index is up by at least two points following success of idea.

Subject returns to bunker and takes interest in Speed-Y's work. He notes the ongoing maintenance.

Subject later retreats to bunker's (unused) armoury and tests out B3 idea. He notes that B3 is indeed explosive.

Subject: Mick-R-NRK-1

Subject once again meets with Stu.

Subject reports for workcycle as usual. He decides to work on fresh parameters concerning Armourbot X-2, in case the X-1 parameters are flawed. He works three extra horcycles, receiving an Official Commendation from Derek-G.

Subject: John-R-SMR-3

Subject reports for workcycle as usual. Is ordered to report to confession booth regarding tacnuke shell. Subject claims no knowledge of tacnuke shell, even under medication.

Subject: Lucas-R-AHK-2

Subject reports for workcycle as usual.

Notable Upcoming Events

Foursday, 214-10-18: Cone rifle course begins.

Fiveday, 214-10-19

Sixday, 214-10-20: Jam-Y's deliveries due.

Mandatory Inspection Day, 214-10-21

Oneday, 214-10-22

Twosday, 214-10-23: Funball match between JHT Sector Reserves and AHK Anvils.

Threeday, 214-10-24

⁵⁸⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: any volunteers for the new teams?)

⁵⁹⁰ GLIGAR: (ooc: pokes Cryo)

Notable Newspaper Headlines

Improvised Weapons "Sign of Unhappiness" - Doan-I-TTI-3 - The Troubleshooter Times

Search for Tacnuke Shell Continues - The Daily Briefing

Rumours of Zombies are Still False - The Troubleshooter Times

written by Speeder on Aug 02, 2011 01:06

At breakfast I order coffee, and whatever fruit is available, apple if possible, I never ate one. I wonder if REDs could order apples too.

I find coffee to be a wonder, I think that all R&D, Tech Services and High Programmers must have it. In fact, I wonder if High Programmers have huge stashes of coffee, maybe there are a holy grail in Alpha Complex, a golden cup of coffee used by the most important High Programmer, used to drink high quality coffee while debugging the very first bugs. Maybe, it was the cup of the first programmer! The project leader! The great creator. The guy that probably has more clearance than Ultraviolet, because he INVENTED clearances.

At work I teach more clones on how to do the super inspection, and now that my partner saw me teaching many times, I tell my partner to become a teacher too.

Now instead of inspecting, I and my trainee teach others, and verify their work.

I attend my courses.

Since I want to develop a B3 launcher, I invite Azir to train B3 handling, including how to throw, how much to shake, when to shake, how much it explodes, and whatnot, doing various experiments along the way.

I also attempt to kick B3 with robotic foot and see how far I can send it.

I check the status of YELLOW room conversion.

I remember that as a tech, I should have utility belt and duct tape, and order both, also some common tech tools, like tweezers, wire cutters and whatnot. And cables to plug the PDC into terminals, the most popular ones, including some ancient ones that we are likely to find in the bowels of JHT.

It is nice to have your own tools, instead of relying on work place tools for personal stuff.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 02, 2011 01:35

Aside from my usual work/exercise routine, I join Speedy in testing and training in B3 assault tactics.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 02, 2011 03:31

I head to work, and begin testing bells as usual. I try to keep each test to under 10 rings, since going much more than that seems to distract the other clones, and reduces their testing efficiency, most likely due to their inadequate testing abilities.

During testing, I notice an air vent cover that appears to be slightly ajar, and decide it requires further inspection, for the good of all Alpha Complex. I am an expert at ventilation systems after all. If possible, I proceed to remove the vent cover and crawl inside, taking a bell with me, so that I might continue both my bell testing and inspection of the network of air ducts at the same time. I don't bother returning to the housing complex after work, and instead spend the night working overtime, inspecting the system of air ducts, and well as performing a long-term reliability test on the target bell. I of course note any anomalies in the air vents, or with the bell, for that matter.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 02, 2011 09:00

I get up and eat breakfast. I'm happy that my cone rifle course begins today!

I attend to my duties at the barracks. No doubt with my newfound position I'll have more responsibilities, so I research those and attend to them right away!

I attend my cone rifle course, hoping to learn a lot. Maybe even about all my various cone rifle shells! Save one certain one of course.

I return to the bunker and determine whether I need to visit the docbot again for any followup medical aid. If not, I perform any physical therapy to return any lost function.

After performing some rounds searching the bunker for anything suspicious, I turn in.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 02, 2011 10:24

I wake up.

Today's the day.

I get ready for reactor shielding duty, and any other workcycle related tasks. As I do, I make a temporary stop by the distribution board.

I go to work if it's required of me.

Whatever goes on, I make a full attempt to take in the required instructions in reactor shielding. If possible, I also take a look at the reactor itself, and whether it matches the same one I saw before during 'that' mission.

I head back to dormitories once I'm done, and think very carefully to myself.

written by 4616599 on Aug 02, 2011 13:48

I read the Troubleshooter Times in the morning, smiling.

"Oh, zombies, meh. What's this? I'd think that improvised weapons actually help in happiness, particularly if you're a Troubleshooter, but well, he is an INDIGO, after all..."

I report to my workcycle and keep a wary eye on Mango and any other clones he appears to be associated with.

I later head to the Funball training areas. I note the upcoming match and try to spot any supporters or star players training. While there, I read the catalogue, taking note of the main items available.

written by Jam on Aug 02, 2011 17:58 Subject: Speed-Y-DOF-2

I wake up feeling especially happy...

At breakfast, I eat fruit and coffee and spices with Speed-Y, and discuss with him about the approval of the bunker conversion, and the new Troubleshooter teams that would need to join us at the bunker...

Hmm... He seems to really like the coffee, and the fruit.

"You know, we can visit the Outside once we get to GREEN clearance, right? Maybe we'll get assigned a Troubleshooter mission out there... I heard the ceiling has ULTRAVIOLET fluff in it that the UVs harvest to make beds with... Though that sounds like a treasonous rumor to me... I'd report the traitor if I could remember who is was that told me such crazy things..."

At work, I inspect whatever it is the clones I'm watching are working on, to make sure they do a good job...

At my courses, I learn things.

After that, I try to figure out what all that banging noises I heard coming from the bunker's armoury were... It almost sounded like a B3 can exploding...

Then, I go check on the status of the YELLOW room conversion.

Feeling tired, I go to sleep a bit earlier than usual...

written by Malkom on Aug 02, 2011 20:15

Halfway through the workcycle, Mick-R inhales something that makes him get high; he becomes fixated on booting up ArmourBot X-2 with an enormous amount of power, far more than it was designed for. The effect fades after a few minutes. To make up for it, he works three and a half extra hourcycles tonightcycle working on the fresh parameters, instead of the three he did last night. He's too exhausted when he gets back to Kappa Subsector to do much more than gulp down some food and fall into bed.

written by Gligar on Aug 02, 2011 21:20

SURVEILLANCE LOG JHT-2896483(m)

TIME PERIOD: 214-10-18 06:00 - 214-10-19 06:00

SECURITY CLEARANCE: BLUE (original document); INFRARED + PPG-Alpha (this version)

Subject: Joris-R-DNK-3

Subject wakes, and reads Troubleshooter Times during breakfast. He disregards news about zombies.

Subject reports for workcycle as usual. He watches Mango-NHG when he arrives. None of the volunteers terminate todaycycle.

Subject watches Funball training after workcycle. He spots Steph-O-JHT, a funball player with the Reserves, training.

Subject peruses catalogue. He notes various items for sale, including laser pistols, reflex, and such.

Subject once again eats breakfast with Jam-Y-JYR. He orders coffee and an apple with his breakfast. He wonders if REDs could order apples, and presumes that they can, since the apples are RED.

Subject takes a liking to coffee, pronouncing it to be essential for Tech Services, R&D, and High Programmers. He briefly speculated whether High Programmers have stashes of coffee, or if the first High Programmer's coffee cup is a relic, before realising that such thoughts are probably treason.

Subject reports for workcycle. He continues training other clones to test cloning tanks in the same way. He also asks Stella-R to start training clones as well.

Once this begins, subject ceases to perform inspections.

Subject attends courses as usual.

On returning to bunker, subject continues building his B3 launcher. He invites Azir-R to join him, and learn B3 handling techniques.

During this, Forkbot C-3/K418-69g-17(c)48, designated Nukabot, returns to the bunker, and announces that it is fully repaired. Its power pack is now a standard micropile reactor.

Subject attempts to kick a can of B3, but is asked not to by Nukabot.

Subject checks on room conversion and finds that it is underway. Old INFRARED bunks are being removed.

Subject then orders some equipment for himself, tools he feels a Tech services clone should have.

Subject: Scrubot R0J-317(d)228-a9 ("Leeroy")

Subject continues cleaning. He notices Mango-NHG heading somewhere.

Subject: Cryo-BRN-4

Subject reports for workcycle. He takes less rings per bell - ten instead of fifty - but is still reprimanded for violating test protocols by taking too long.

Subject abandons post to "continue prolonged testing on a bell" by escaping into the air ducts. In full view of cameras. Search is about to begin when power fails in Building 2, necessitating that guards relocate to investigate.

Subject continues crawling through vents, ringing the bell. He encounters other clones, also apparently abandoning their posts.

Subject continues in vents, past mealtimes, past sleepcycle, getting more tired.

The bell, incidentally, works perfectly throughout.

Subject: L4-O-OKW-1

Subject eats breakfast, happy that the cone rifle course is to start.

Subject reports to barracks and learns his new duties. These include leading squad through drills and formations.

Subject attends cone rifle course after workcycle. He begins learning about the kinds of shells, and fuses, available for cone rifles.

He notes that he is the only ORANGE, and indeed, the lowest clearance, present.

Subject returns to bunker. He attempts to determine if he needs to see a docbot again. Apparently, he does.

After this, and after giving the bunker a once-over, subject sleeps.

Subject: Jam-Y-JYR-2

Subject wakes, and once again eats with Speed-Y-DOF. He also tries the coffee, and the "spices". He notes that the "spices" enhance the flavour of his food.

He discusses the bunker conversion, and the new teams due to arrive.

Subject voices speculation about Outside: they can visit when they gain GREEN Clearance. Perhaps they will be assigned missions there. He mentions a rumour about "ULTRAVIOLET fluff" in the ceiling Outside, though he cannot remember who said it.

Subject continues monitoring at workcycle.

Subject attends courses as usual.

On returning to bunker, subject investigates banging noises from the previous nightcycle, and discovers an apparent explosion of a B3 can in the unused armoury.

Subject inspects the room conversion. He notes that the old bunks are being removed.

Subject: Mango-NHG-4

Subject wakes. He discovers that reactor shielding duty takes precedence over workcycle, and proceeds to head there. His way out takes him past the distribution board.

As subject leaves the building, the building's power fails. Immediately after this, clones of various clearances enter the building.

Subject travels to I Sublevel, Deep Subsector. He realises that this is one level above the reactor visited in his previous mission.

Subject follows instructions, moving as directed. The air feels tingly here.

Subject is asked to report for reactor shielding duty again tomorrowcycle before he leaves.

Subject travels back to dormitory. Power has not yet been restored, leaving him to use the stairs. He notices that lighting is being provided by open flames.

Subject: Azir-R-GNS-1

Subject reports for workcycle as usual. Viewing figures are still rising.

Subject returns to the bunker. He joins Speed-Y in working in the B3 launcher, and learning about B3 handling.

Subject: Mick-R-NRK-1

Subject reports for workcycle as usual.

During this time, he hallucinates about booting up the bot he is working on.

To make up for this, he puts in more overtime.

Subject: John-R-SMR-3

Subject reports for workcycle as usual.

Subject: Lucas-R-AHK-2

Subject reports for workcycle as usual. He notes a higher than usual number of INFRARED reclonings.

Notable Upcoming Events

Fiveday, 214-10-19

Sixday, 214-10-20: Jam-Y's deliveries due.

Mandatory Inspection Day, 214-10-21

Oneday, 214-10-22

Twosday, 214-10-23: Funball match between JHT Sector Reserves and AHK Anvils.

Threeday, 214-10-24

Foursday, 214-10-25

Notable Newspaper Headlines

Power Failure at Industrial Subsector B - Sabotage?
- The Troubleshooter Times

Derek-G-JHT Announces ArmourBot Project - The Daily Briefing

Have YOU seen the Tacnuke Shell? - *The Troubleshooter Times*⁵⁹¹

written by Gligar on Aug 02, 2011 21:33

About half an hourcycle before citizens are due to wake up, the PDCs of several clones suddenly starts playing that "Very Important Message Arrived" ringtone.

On reading it, the clones discover a message from our mutual friend: The Computer said:

From: The Computer

To: Troubleshooter Team Epsilon, JHT Sector

Date: 214-10-19 05:35

Subject: Mission of Utmost Importance!

Importance: high

Dear Troubleshooters,

⁵⁹¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: I'm not done yet! Another post coming!)

Congratulations! You have been chosen for a mission of utmost importance, based on your experience and track record.

Please report to Briefing Room 17[PAID ADVERTISEMENT: Vita-Yum Meal Substitute Bars! With 65% Approval Rate in JHT Sector, and getting better all the time!]ours. It is vital that you are not late for briefing.

Your Briefing Officer will give you further instructions.

Good luck with your mission, and remember:

Stay Alert!

Trust No-One!

Keep Your Laser Handy!⁵⁹²

written by Malkom on Aug 02, 2011 21:45⁵⁹³

Mick-R jerks awake at the tone. He grabs his PDC and shuts off the annoying ringing, then reads the message.

"Great," he grumbles, thumbing The Computer's number into his PDC. "Hello, this is Mick-R-NRK-1. I would greatly appreciate your telling me where to go to be briefed for my new mission, please. That would make me extremely happy!"

After getting an answer, he dashes off a quick note to Stu explaining that he's been sent on a Troubleshooter mission (without mentioning specifics), puts the PDC on standby, shoves it in a pocket, grabs his laser gun and a couple of barrels and heads for the nearest lift to meet the other Troubleshooters.

written by Speeder on Aug 02, 2011 23:40

As the PDC wakes me up, I gather my weapons. I leave the half-built B3 launcher at home, sadly. But I take the B3.

I then quickly write a message to Friend Computer asking if we can take Nukabot on the mission.

Then I tell Jam to go fetch everyone and make them wait on the room that Cryo set on fire once.

I run toward whatever place I stashed the weapons during the re-stock.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 03, 2011 00:20

"Oh hey. Sweet! Team Epsilon is go once again!"

I look happy as I look around.

"We even have Nukabot back? That's great!"

I look at the message and frown, and search for the location of Briefing Room 17 on my PDC.

I eventually make my way to the Meeting Room of the bunker and wait there.

⁵⁹² GLIGAR: (OOC: That's right, we're switching back to regular operation! And earlier than I anticipated, too. That's because, as you might have guessed, I have a new mission for you all! 😊)

⁵⁹³ MALKOM: (OOC: Insert cheering noise here.)

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 03, 2011 09:15

I wake up.

And get to work at the reactor shields. I inquire after the various functions that the number of control panels do, and memorise it, as any clone assigned to such an important place would do, even as an INFRARED. I practise recalling what each one does after finishing.

I head back to the dormitories, and for some reason wonder whatever happened to that rather aggressive clone. That mutant hating one.⁵⁹⁴

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 03, 2011 13:17

I head over to the briefing room ASAP, not knowing the time I'd prefer not to be late, grabbing my wheelchair and my B3, weapons, and great attitude. If I see other team members I follow, since they may know a quicker route.

written by Gligar on Aug 03, 2011 16:57

RED Dormitory 54, Dorm Block B, Kappa Subsector

Mick-R awakens with a start. He isn't the only one, as the other five clones in the room wake up as well. "Hey, are you gonna get that?" one asks.

On noticing the message, Mick-R seems less than happy that it has been partially obscured by an advert.

He attempts to ask our mutual friend about the location of Briefing Room 17. "Citizen, the location of your Briefing Room is stated clearly in your mission briefing. Please proceed there immediately. Tardiness is treason. Have a nice daycycle."

He fires off a memo for Stu and outs his PDC away before heading of... where, exactly? He might not know, but he can at least make sure he's armed.

That done, he goes looking for a lift, apparently to meet everyone else.

Then he remembers that he's not even in the same building as everyone else...

Dormitory 2, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O and the YELLOWs wake up.

Speed-Y makes sure to get his weapons and his B3 (but not the B3 launcher, since it's incomplete). He sends off a message to our mutual friend, asking for permission to take Nukabot on the mission.

L4-O looks happy as he looks at the YELLOWs. He's especially happy that they have Nukabot again. But he doesn't know where Briefing Room 17 is. He has a look on his PDC. About all he can find is that it's in Alpha Subsector.

Speed-Y tells Jam-Y to get everyone to gather in the meeting hall, before heading off to where he remembers the weapons being placed. That would be the storage room on B Level, near the observation platform...

⁵⁹⁴ MINGAMANGO181: (OOC: Was operation ever regular? 😊)

L4-O heads for the meeting hall.

Dormitory 1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Azir-R wakes up, and notices John-R and Lucas-R do the same. Checking their PDCs, they see the message. Lucas-R wonders aloud where the briefing room is. "Anyone got any ideas?"

Azir-R isn't worrying. He gets everything ready and heads for a door. Opening it, he sees L4-O heading past outside, so he decides to follow.

Meeting hall, Emergency Bunker C-3

The meeting hall has seen some changes during the past weekcycle. One is a new control panel neat the big vidscreen on the north wall, another is the addition of tables. And third, someone has installed a tape recorder near the new control panel. Perhaps the team won't need to destroy portable recorders in the future

Storage room, B Level

Ah yes... here they are. Your usual laser pistols and barrels, ammunition for slugthrowers, that sort of thing. A couple of actual slugthrowers as well.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The power still hasn't been restored in the building. Apparently, the clones who were assigned to repair it never showed up. The open flames provided by those clones yesterdaycycle are still in use. They told people how to maintain them, using the strange brown material, so at least there is light (and heat).

It's not yet time to wake up. Since noclone in here has received a mission alert, things won't happen here for another half an hourcycle or so.

written by 4616599 on Aug 03, 2011 16:59

"Whoa."

I get my laser ready, and get myself ready, gulping down some B3.

I mention to Joe-Y. "Looks like the Troubleshooters get the good stuff again."

Straightening out my jumpsuit, I take out my PDC and attempt to search for a nearby Briefing room 17.

written by Speeder on Aug 03, 2011 17:03

I see if there are backpacks, bags, or whatever like that available.

If not, I cringe as I imitate Cryo, removing my jumpsuit and creating a backpack.

Then I stuff on it (or on proper backpack/bag if available) lasers for everyone, about 3 slugthrowers (not counting my own), and ammo.

Then I proceed back to meeting room.

written by Malkom on Aug 03, 2011 18:23

Mick-R slides a barrel into his laser pistol (if it doesn't already have one) and flicks off the safety, curling his index finger lovingly round the trigger for a moment before dropping his hand with the laser to hang by his side. He heads off towards where he went to meet the Troubleshooters before, taking any necessary lifts and other forms of transportation.

written by Jam on Aug 03, 2011 20:13

"What? Mission? HOORAY!"

I go to my locker, and grab everything I need for my mission:

All my unused laser barrels.

The laser rifle.

Any pills.

The copperlyke piping

A hammer and spanners.

The packet of Soylent RED, the Algae Chips, and the B3.

The RED Reflec.

The towels, first aid kits, and handcuffs.

The syringe from the bot manipulator.

The list of known mutations.

Then I head down to the Storage room, searching for a few YELLOW laser pistol and laser rifle barrels, another pistol body, and a YELLOW Reflec to trade for my RED one. Also, if there happens to be a knife, energy pistol, or flamethrower there, I grab them.

Then I head to Food Storage, since Speed-Y said we should go to the room Cryo-R set on fire...

...

Wait, where is everyone?!

"Well, I've got ways of finding clones..."

written by Gligar on Aug 04, 2011 01:54

Custodial dormitory, Iota Subsector

Joris-R seems surprised to see the mission alert.

He gets his equipment ready, and drinks a B3. Might as well do it now before heading off, right? You never know when you'll get another chance.

He mentions the Troubleshooters to Joe-Y. "Troubleshooters? Oh yeah... there was that article in the Times the other daycycle... I was wondering when that place'd get used."

Before he sets off, though, Joris-R has a small problem: he doesn't actually know where to go. Therefore, he does what anyclone might do: he tries to find it on his PDC. As it turns out, though, the best he can do is discover that Briefing Room 17 is located somewhere in the middle of Alpha Subsector.

[671]

Storage room, B level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y looks around. He'll need a backpack... and he really doesn't want to copy the running joke of wearing his jumpsuit as a backpack, now does he? Fortunately for him, there is one. It smells of oil a bit, but it should be okay.

Into it he puts half a dozen lasers, three slugthrowers, and assorted ammunition.

With that done, he heads to the meeting hall.

Dorm Block B, Kappa Subsector

Mick-R loads his laser pistol. You never know. He poses with it briefly before heading off.

Crossroads, Kappa Subsector

He has the idea to meet up with the rest of the team. Most of them, he remembers, are over in the main domescraper, in that bunker they appropriated. That should be right at the end of... that roadway.

Now, he could either walk or take one of the autohacks waiting over there. Which is it going to be?

Dormitory 2, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y wakes up enough to realise that there's a mission, and equips himself with practically everything he has, stuffing it into his jumpsuit. While wearing it, even. (It's amazing how much you can fit in a jumpsuit if you know how.)

He then heads down to the stores.

Storage room, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

On entering, he squeezes more stuff into the jumpsuit: some more laser barrels, another pistol, and a knife he finds lying around.

He also looks for some reflex, but the resupply seemingly didn't include any.

Oh well. He heads off for... the place the got burned...

Which is of course the food storage.

Food Storage, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Of course, no-one's here.

Then again, there was that fire up in the meeting hall... which is where everyone seems to be right now...

written by Speeder on Aug 04, 2011 02:25

I wait people.⁵⁹⁵

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 04, 2011 03:00

Luckily I can leave most of my stuff in my lap on the wheelchair, how convenient.

written by Jam on Aug 04, 2011 03:45

I slowly realize the meeting isn't in Food Storage...

⁵⁹⁵ SPEEDER: (OOC: I will see if more people RP in the meeting room)

"Hmm..."

Now where would a logical place for a meeting be... Hmm... Maybe the meeting hall?

I run to the meeting hall, and burst in.

"YOU GUYS DIDN'T FORGET ABOUT ME, DID YOU?! Oh, hi Speed-Y..."

Seeing Speed-Y apparently insisting on trying to wait on people, I play along. I proceed to sit at the nearest table, and pick up a random scrap of paper and pretend to read it like a menu...

"Yes, I'll have the Soylent ORANGE with a side of Hot Fun, and the B3 Extra Classic to drink. Also, can I get that to go, I'm kinda in a hurry? Thanks, just put it on my card..."

I offer my ME card to him...

written by Lightning4 on Aug 04, 2011 07:20

I see Jam-Y getting food and think that's a good idea too.

I go to the nearest food source (food chute or vendobot) and proceed to acquire some tasty food and drink, which I promptly consume on the spot.

"munch So anyone have a clue where munch munch this briefing room is? munch"

written by Speeder on Aug 04, 2011 11:47

I look at Jam and burst in laughter.

"Ok Team Epsilon, we got a new mission... I have no idea where the Briefing Room 17 is, but I guess it is in central subsector, I think if we ask people there, they can direct us. Also, this time we can prepare beforehand, I am the team leader, I need a equipment officer, we do not need a loyalty officer because everyone here is very loyal... Oh god, I saw Cryo recloning, I HOPE they do not send him again to us."

I then look around.

"So, who volunteer to be equipment officer? And who volunteers to watch for Cryo and other crazy people that might show up?"

I tap my metallic foot on the ground, waiting for reply.

written by Malkom on Aug 04, 2011 15:18

Mick-R chooses the autohack route; he climbs aboard one, fires it up and (tries to?) zoom off towards the otherclones of Team Epsilon. While zooming he keeps an eye out for shady clones, careening out of control vehicles, and anything else dangerous.⁵⁹⁶

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 04, 2011 16:13

Since I was following L4, I grab some food too, not needing drink due to my excessive B3 stores.

When we run into the rest of the team, I listen to Speedy's concerns and troubles.

⁵⁹⁶ MALKOM: (OOC: What does an autohack even look like? Some kind of forklift without the forks and that drives automatically?)

"Equipment officer eh? I guess that means I watch out stuff. I'd rather watch that than Cryo or Malkom.. though I don't think the latter will ever be a problem again. Sure I'll be the EQ guy."⁵⁹⁷ written by Jam on Aug 04, 2011 16:14⁵⁹⁸

I mutter to myself...

"Hmm... I might be a good Equipment Officer, considering I'm practically a walking armory with all the laser pistol barrels I'm carrying... Then again, my mutant power makes me a good fit for Happiness Officer... I've wondered what it'd be like being a Team Leader too, though Speed-Y seems better for the job..."

I look to Speed-Y...

"Er... How do you know our Mandatory Bonus Duties won't be assigned to us by our briefing officer? Perhaps it'd be better to wait until we get to briefing..."

written by Speeder on Aug 04, 2011 16:24

I reply quickly to Jam.

"Even GETTING to briefing I suspect will be a adventure, this is why I am having this meeting beforehand. Our mission now is get to briefing, THEN we get their mission and duties and whatnot."

written by 4616599 on Aug 04, 2011 17:08

I attempt to contact the Transition rental.

written by Gligar on Aug 04, 2011 18:08

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y decides to wait for anyone else to get here.

As he does, Lucas-R and John-R enter.

Food storage, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

It takes him a minutecycle, but Jam-Y realises that perhaps the meeting isn't taking place in the food storage room. Perhaps it's in the meeting hall? That's a good place for a meeting, right? He rushes over there.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

The doors burst open, and Jam-Y rushes in. He loudly asks if they forgot about him.

He then sees Speed-Y standing there like a robotler, and plays along, attempting to order foods. Speed-Y laughs.⁵⁹⁹

L4-O, however, thinks that food might be a good idea. He heads over to a vendobot and grabs a VitaYum Meal Substitute Bar and some B3. As he eats, he inquires if anyone has any idea where Briefing Room 17 might be.

Speed-Y explains that he does not, but he believes that it might be in Central Subsector. He proposes going there and asking.

⁵⁹⁷ AZIRPHEL: [OOO Damnit I did that edit mistake again. curses!!]

⁵⁹⁸ JAM: (OOO: Er, doesn't Gligar keep logs of all our posts? Perhaps he could PM you the original post(s)?)

⁵⁹⁹ GLIGAR: (OOO: As do I 😊 +1pp.)

He also suggests assigning some Mandatory Bonus Duties beforehand. He asks for a volunteer to be the Equipment Officer, and says that they don't need a Loyalty Officer - everyone is loyal.⁶⁰⁰ But on the other hand, he was present when Cryo decanted... perhaps someone should keep a lookout for him.

He again asks for volunteers and taps his foot. You know, the robotic one.

Azir-R also grabs a Meal Substitute Bar. He decides to volunteer to be the Equipment Officer. Better that than watching out for Cryo or [NAME REDACTED].

Jam-Y isn't so sure. He mutters to himself that he'd be a good Equipment Officer. Or would he be a Happiness Officer? His mutant power makes him a good fit, after all...

Out loud, he wonders if they're being a little premature? What if the briefing officer assigns the MBDs?

Speed-Y points out that it might be a while until they even get to briefing, and they don't know what they'll be facing on the way. It's only fair to prepare now, and switch things up later at the briefing.

Crossroad, Kappa Subsector

Mick-R picks the autohack option. He gets into a nice RED one⁶⁰¹ and tries to drive it off. It becomes clear, though, that he doesn't really know how to drive one of these things.

Good thing the autohack itself knows how to drive. It starts itself up and says, "Whoa there! Instead of messing about in manual, why not just tell me where you want to go?"

Custodial dormitory, Iota Subsector

Joris-R calls up Transition Rentals. He's greeted by an automated message, telling him that his call is important to them, and asking him to hold the line. Shortly after that, a rather tinny rendition of the Tella-O-MLY Adventure Hour theme tune plays.

written by Malkom on Aug 04, 2011 18:30

"Autohack! Take me to Emergency Bunker C-3, please. Maximum speed!" Mick-R relaxes as the autohack begins careening down the roadway, watching scared INFRAREDs scrambling out of its path. He adjusts his grip on the laser, keeping an eye out for anything suspicious. This watching continues for a minutecycle before he tires of it.

"Shadyclone, shadyclone, come to my house..." Feeling bored, Mick-R begins humming a popular spy tune between his teeth, waving his laser to the beat like some sort of lethal pendulum...

...but then he jumps at the sudden dash an INFRARED clone makes across the roadway, his finger on the trigger involuntarily squeezing as the laser is pointed at the autohack's roof. Bad thing he left the safety off, isn't it?

⁶⁰⁰ GLIGAR: (OOO: Tempting fate much?)

⁶⁰¹ GLIGAR: (OOO: it resembles a taxi, but is roboticised)

written by Speeder on Aug 04, 2011 18:47

I nod.

Then after a while I say.

"Actually... You can be both happiness officer and loyalty officer, and your duty as loyalty officer will be mostly look out for Cryo and warn me, and scan his mind and see what he is up to."

I hand the backpack I have to Azir.

"There are sufficient equipment for everyone there I think."

I check if my revolver is loaded, place it in my waist somewhere, then I load my pistol with a YELLOW barrel.

Then I check if I am wearing the jumpsuit I ordered, or the old one.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 04, 2011 20:41

"I could be equipment officer, maybe? I do lead a squad of soldiers now... going to have to get used to that I imagine."

I shrug, finishing off any of my remaining food in the process.

written by Jam on Aug 04, 2011 21:35

I smile.

"Okay, I'll be the temporary Happiness and Loyalty Officer, until we can finalize it at briefing... Yay, I get two MBDs!"

I load my laser pistol with a YELLOW barrel⁶⁰², and re-count all my weapons...

"Now, since I'm the loyalty officer, I'm going to suggest we start heading to the briefing room now, as being late is treasonous... And who else is on the team, aren't we missing clones? What about Joris-R, and that Mick-R guy? We'll just have to meet them on the way..."

written by Gligar on Aug 05, 2011 02:34

Roadway

Mick-R tells the autohack to head for the bunker. As it complies, it says, "Oh, that place... I heard that it was being used again... did you hear about the last clones who used that bunker? Well, probably not, I mean, the whole thing was hushed up and all..."

But Mick-R isn't listening. He's singing to himself out of boredom.

As the autohack speeds on, it comes to the industrial subsectors. Checkpoint 2 is opened for it, and it continues through.

Just then, an INFRARED runs across the road.

This triggers a reflex on Mick-R, causing him to shoot off his laser pistol. The blast hits the roof of the autohack, causing a hole.

"Hey! I will have to add that to your bill," the autohack responds, indignantly.

⁶⁰² JAM: (ooc: I picked one up at the armory, right?)

Some time after, the autohack slows down and stops, outside the bunker's loading dock. "That will be seventy credits, please. That includes damages."

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y nods, and suggests that Jam-Y could be both Happiness Officer and Loyalty Officer. That way, he could look for Cryo.

He offers the backpack to Azir-R, saying that there should be enough for everyone in there.

He then checks his equipment again. His "revolver" is loaded, so he puts it in the waist pocket of his jumpsuit. Which, by the way, is his new jumpsuit, not his old one.

L4-O suggests that he could be equipment officer. After all, he does command a squad in the Armed Forces.

Jam-Y smiles, and accepts both MBDs. At least until briefing.

He checks his laser. It still has an ORANGE barrel, so he swaps it for a YELLOW one he found in the store room. After this, he checks what he has. He has six RED pistol barrels, eight ORANGE ones, but no other YELLOW ones. Nor does he have any rifle barrels.

Finally, he exercises his authority as a Loyalty Officer to suggest that they get going. Joris-R and Mick-R will just have to meet them en-route.

written by Malkom on Aug 05, 2011 04:25

Mick-R swears, swipes his ME card where required, jumps out of the autohack and sprints into Emergency Bunker C-3, where he immediately looks for, and shouts for, the Troubleshooters.

"Hey! You! You're my troubleshooter team, so make yourselves known!"

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 05, 2011 04:28

"Woo, thanks, I guess I can use this too.."

I load my "weapons" into the backpack. Since we're in a supply room if there's any extra unclaimed RED barrels...

written by Lightning4 on Aug 05, 2011 10:28

I proceed to follow with the group.

"I'd suggest we take Nukabot along but I'm not sure if the cargo lift in the lift hall got repaired yet... maybe we can come back for him."

written by Speeder on Aug 05, 2011 11:39

I hear some crazy dude shouting outside.

I step on the door and shout back.

"Team Epsilon is in meeting hall, if that is the team you are looking for."

I then step back inside.

"We cannot make new members meet us en route, they are likely to get lost, and we get a berating for making a member be late."

Then I turn to L4

"I asked Friend Computer about Nukabot, it was not replied yet, thus I assume we will have to ask the briefing officer. For matters of speed getting to him, I think we should leave Nukabot in garate until we know if we will need him or not."

written by Jam on Aug 05, 2011 15:19

I don't hear some crazy dude shouting two levels down with several doors in the way, but I do suddenly decide to use my mutant power to try to find Mick-R and Joris-R... If I find either of them, I let the rest of the team know where they are...

"Too bad we don't have any of those, hmm... what were they called... er..."Find Location" mutants... A clone like that would really come in handy right now..."

I check (visually) to make sure everyclone is happy.

"Hmm... How about I do a Mandatory Treasonous Item Search on one of you?⁶⁰³

How about..."

I close my eyes and wave a finger around, then open them and see who I'm pointing to...⁶⁰⁴

"You, L4-O! You are ordered to submit to a Equipment Search..."

written by 4616599 on Aug 05, 2011 15:58

I continue waiting. In the meantime, I try to locate Emergency Bunker C-3.

written by Gligar on Aug 05, 2011 18:24

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Mick-R dashes in, and starts looking for the rest of the team. He does this by yelling for them.

"If you are looking for Team Epsilon," Nukabot suggests, "there is a distinct possibility that they might be upstairs."

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Azir-R accepts the backpack, and puts his B3 into it. He then has a look for some RED laser barrels. Yes, those are in there as well.

L4-O would follow the group, but they haven't gone anywhere yet. He would suggest they take Nukabot, but he's not sure if that lift's been repaired yet.

Speed-Y somehow hears something through two levels and some number of doors. He heads to the meeting room's door and shouts out that they're up here.

Returning to the group, he adds that making the others catch up to them would just cause them to become lost. He also tells L4-O that he is still waiting for a reply from our mutual friend concerning Nukabot. They might learn something at the briefing.

⁶⁰³ JAM: (ooc: I can't recall the proper name...)

⁶⁰⁴ Jam: (ooc: In other words, randomly picked)

Jam-Y can't hear anyone shouting, but decides to go and look, in his own way.

He pushes out with his mind. Almost instantly, he finds a clone that seems to be Mick-R. It looks like he's on A Level, in the loading dock.

He reaches out further, but Joris-R seems to be eluding him.

He tells the team about Mick-R, and adds that it's a shame they don't have one of those mutants who can find places.

He looks around, and decides to exercise his authority again. Everyone in the room seems to be reasonably happy, so he moves on to ordering an equipment inspection, randomly choosing L4-O.

Custodial Dormitory, Iota Subsector

Joris-R, as it happens, is still on the PDC, waiting for a clone to answer at Transition Rentals.

While he waits, he locates a terminal and does a search for the bunker. Looks like it's to the west.

Finally, a clone answers. "Transition Rentals, how can I help?"

written by Speeder on Aug 05, 2011 18:39

I look at Jam, then I blink.

I get out in the corridor, waiting for Mick to show up.

written by Jam on Aug 05, 2011 19:13

I stare at Speed-Y...

And I keep staring at Speed-Y...

And when Speed-Y moves, I stare at the place Speed-Y was, for a good minutecycle or two. Then, I suddenly blink.

"Huh? Uh... Oh right, equipment inspection... Everyclone else can leave, and L4-O and I will catch up in a bit... Okay L4-O, I'll need you to empty your pockets..."

After he does (assuming he does), I inspect the clearance of all his stuff, and verify they are ORANGE or below (except for the Cone Rifle and shells). Then I pat at his jumpsuit to make sure he's not still hiding anything...

written by Malkom on Aug 05, 2011 20:33

Mick-R hurries upstairs and to where he thinks the troubleshooters might be.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 05, 2011 20:59

I grab for RED barrels, nice, and throw them in the backpack. I look for any thrown explosives, of RED clearance, and add them to my stash.

When finished, I wheel gingerly towards the exit as instructed.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 05, 2011 22:18

"Um. Okay."

I stay still and present my backpack and other various containers on the floor in front of me.

written by Gligar on Aug 06, 2011 00:47

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y blinks at Jam-Y, and heads for the door.

Jam-Y continues staring at where Speed-Y was, even as other clones file out past him. This carries on for a couple of minutecycles. During this time, Azir-R seems to be trying to put things in the backpack, but there's nothing else to put in there. He seems to think that the meeting hall is, in fact, a store room.

He realises his mistake, though, and wheels out.

After that, Jam-Y seems to come round, and orders L4-O to empty his pockets.

L4-O does. He puts everything on the floor in front of him, from the backpack, to various containers and such.

Jam-Y picks through it all. He finds: L4-O's ME Card, a Series 1300 PDC, some RED grenades, Turbo (which is BLUE), a laser pistol with an ORANGE barrel, a headband made of duct tape, Fred (which is RED), a length of ladder (which doesn't seem to have a marked clearance), some spare ORANGE blaster power packs, a packet of CruncheeTym Algae Chips Tastes Like Something Orange (which is, of course, ORANGE), a medkit (RED), a pair of handcuffs (RED), another laser pistol with an ORANGE barrel, and an ORANGE blaster with a power pack installed.

He also searches L4-O's backpack (which is RED), finding: a torch (RED) and batteries, about 33 cone rifle shells (assorted) with triggers, about twenty more cone rifle shells (damaged, assorted), his cone rifle brevet, the brevet to ORANGE clearance which he doesn't really need any more, those popped I [heart] IntSec balloons from way back (RED), and some slugthrower rounds. Which are YELLOW.

That done, he proceeds to give L4-O a pat-down, finding ORANGE reflec and kevlar (which is RED).

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

It's taken long enough for Jam-Y to search L4-O's belongings that Mick-R has had a chance to get up here.

As mentioned previously, the concourse is RED, with some vendobots. There are once again four exits to the concourse, and no hole in the ceiling leading to a bombed-out warehouse (that's what the stairs are for). From above comes the sound of forkbots.

written by Malkom on Aug 06, 2011 01:16

Mick-R accosts one of the vendobots, asking, "Which way to Team Epsilon?" If he doesn't get an answer he tries calling for the Troubleshooters. If he doesn't get an answer to that, he starts looking for them, the good old-fashioned way - on foot.

written by Speeder on Aug 06, 2011 03:45

I just look at Mick-R with a blank stare.

"We are Team Epsilon, you must be Mick-R, follow me."

I enter the meeting room again.

written by Malkom on Aug 06, 2011 04:12⁶⁰⁵

Mick-R follows Speed-Y, looking... not treasonously unhappy, but not enormously happy either.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 06, 2011 06:42

I think.

It was far too early to be up. Still too early. That, or I'd overslept.

Worrying slightly, I try to sit up, and check the time. In my worry, I completely ignore the date, whether its there or not.

written by 4616599 on Aug 06, 2011 10:26

"Hello! I rented a Transition at the very good JHT Sector Main cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience. It certainly met mandatory happiness levels. Unfortunately, Intsec or some other party appears to have confiscated it a the nearby Industrial Subsector for apparently no reason. Is it back with you?"

written by Lightning4 on Aug 06, 2011 11:32

If allowed, I pack up all my stuff where it belongs.

I look down at my armor.

"Oh dear... I thought I got ORANGE kevlar. I'll have to change it out when I get the chance. But first, the briefing..."

"Everything should be in order otherwise, Not sure on the clearance on all those cone rifle shells but my brevet covers them all anyway..."

Still kind of hungry, I munch from my packet of CruncheeTym Algae Chips Tastes Like Something Orange.

written by Jam on Aug 06, 2011 16:13

I seem distracted for some reason, and somehow fail to notice those little YELLOW pellets aren't actually designed for a cone rifle...

"Uh... Yeah, carry on..."

I walk out to the corridor...

written by Gligar on Aug 06, 2011 20:05

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3⁶⁰⁶

Somehow not seeing the team, Mick-R asks one of the vendobots where the team is.

Speed-Y, who is right there, glares at him, before telling him to follow them. Speed-Y heads back into the meeting hall. Mick-R follows him, looking to have minimum happiness level. Just barely.

⁶⁰⁵ MALKOM: (OOO: I didn't realize there was anyone in the room... This is a revision of actions)

⁶⁰⁶ GLIGAR: (OOO: I know you offered a correction, but I have to use the earlier post as well 😊)

Meeting Hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O says that he needs to change out his armour. But he can do that after the briefing.

Jam-Y looks a bit distracted, but lets L4-O pick up his equipment again. He doesn't seem to have noticed the slugthrower rounds. He heads out to the concourse, past Speed-Y and Mick-R.

L4-O picks everything up and stows it. Still feeling hungry, though, he starts eating his algae chips.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango wakes up. Somewhat.

He seems a little worried that he might have overslept. There is little danger of that. When it's time to wake up, our mutual friend, or one of its representatives, will let you know. Usually quite loudly. Followed by the sound of Wakey-Wakey pills being dispensed.

He looks around. Lights are still off, not that that's any surprise, considering that power has not yet been restored.

The dormitory's clock has it's own battery, though, and reads 05:48. Twelve minutecycles until he's meant to wake up. It doesn't have a calendar display.

He hears the door opening. Through it comes the could of motors, indicating that a bot is coming through. A slight sweeping noise indicated that it might be a scrubot.

Custodial Dormitory, Iota Subsector

Joris-R tells the clone on the other end of the line that he rented a Transition a few daycycles ago, and he's wondering if they got it back. "What's your name, please?" the clone asks.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 06, 2011 22:08

I realize I⁶⁰⁷ got confused and wheel over to the hopefully nearby storeroom to stock up on the previous mentioned supplies.

written by Malkom on Aug 07, 2011 01:59

Having found the team, Mick-R decides to follow Azir-R to get some supplies. He informs Speed-Y of this, before striding off after the wheelchair guy.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 07, 2011 09:58

Huh... cleaners?

I lay awake for the time being. No point in trying to sleep only to end up going over by several hourcycles. Experiences on [DFSR] really can help in the oddest of times.

When the bot leaves, I get out of the bed, and get ready. Ready for what, I didn't know. I assumed there was something different, considering I woke up earlier on this daycycle...

written by Lightning4 on Aug 07, 2011 10:47

"Well, didn't get an answer on the equipment officer thing but I have a few extra supplies. Well, a first aid kit and an extra laser pistol. I guess I can get some more pistol barrels real quick."

I hesitate.

"Though can those be gotten later... Friend Computer doesn't tolerate tardiness..."

written by Jam on Aug 07, 2011 11:18

"I've got a few spare barrels, I'm sure I could lend you some..."

I wait impatiently for us to start heading to briefing...

written by Speeder on Aug 07, 2011 15:59

I follow the duo that want to ransack more of the storeroom.

"Hey you two, the bad I handed to Azir have sufficient equipment for the entire team and some spare. What you intend to do, fuel a army?"

written by 4616599 on Aug 07, 2011 16:47

"Joris-R-DNK, inventor of the patent pending Anti-Mutant Boot Suit. You might have heard of me?"

written by Gligar on Aug 07, 2011 19:14

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Azir-R finally realises his mistake, and decides to head for the store room. Mick-R follows him.

L4-O states that he has a few extra supplies: a first aid kit, a few barrels, that sort of thing. He could go and get more... but probably shouldn't. They don't want to be late.

Speed-Y notices Azir-R and Mick-R heading off and heads after them.

Jam-Y also states that he has some spare barrels. He wants to get going.

Corridor C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y catches up with the two halfway down the corridor. He tells them that the bag he gave to Azir-R already has enough equipment for the team. What are they trying to do, supply an army?

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to wait until the scrubot has gone before getting up. But it seems to not be going anywhere. Or rather, it sounds like it's going round in circles.

Mango ends up waiting long enough for the clock to roll over to 05:52. And the scrubot is still stuck.

He decides to get up anyway. Small problem: he can't see what he's doing.

⁶⁰⁷ AZIRPHAELI: (read that wrong)

[677]

Custodial Dormitory, Iota Subsector

Joris-R tells the clone his name, and, of course, plug his "anti-mutant suit". The clone, naturally, hasn't heard of it. But he has heard of Joris-R. "Yeah, I've heard of you. You're that clone who failed to report for debriefing, aren't you? Remember to attend debriefing next time."

There is a brief pause. "Ah, here it is. The Transition was returned after you failed to stop for Internal Security for some reason. Therefore, it must have been used for treasonous purposes. Therefore, I'm going to have to fine you for violating the TOS."

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 07, 2011 20:46

I try to remember the layout of the room, and where I am relative to it.

If I need to, I put on my jumpsuit.

I then attempt to construct in my mind a pathway that doesn't go through the scrubot, and then follow the path out of the dormitories.

written by Malkom on Aug 07, 2011 22:36

Mick-R follows whoever seems to be in charge because there isn't anything to do, and eventually gets to humming that spy tune again.

written by Jam on Aug 08, 2011 02:18

I get irritated at our not leaving yet...

"Speed-Y! We're gonna be late! And, as everyclone knows, being late is treasonous! There's no point in waiting for Joris-R, I can already tell he's not anywhere near here! Let's go!"

I start to walk towards the nearest exit, and motion nearby clones to follow me...

written by Speeder on Aug 08, 2011 02:28

I move back to Jam

"I wholeheartedly agree, I am only chasing the clones fleeing..."

Then I start moving to the warehouse.

"The elevator is outside the bunker, the nearest bunker exit is there."

I point to the staircase

written by Lightning4 on Aug 08, 2011 10:27

I follow with the group. If nobody is moving I decide to take the initiative and make my way to the warehouse.

Meanwhile, I finish off my packet of algae chips and look for somewhere nearby where I can dispose my now-empty packet.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 08, 2011 11:45

After I hear Speedy's alert, I realize I never checked to see if there were already contents in the bag.

As I turn around, I also alert Mick that we should maybe not be late after all.

I look through the contents of the backpack moving the B3 aside for a better glimpse.

written by Malkom on Aug 08, 2011 16:32⁶⁰⁸

Mick-R buys a bit of food from a vendobot on the way.

written by Gligar on Aug 08, 2011 17:53

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to attempt to navigate the dormitory in the dark. It's difficult at the best of times even under adequate lighting conditions. But right now, it's even harder.

Mango tries to remember exactly where he is in the room, and where the door is. As well as the location of the scrubot.

He then takes a stab at getting to the door. However, it seems he's misjudged the location of the scrubot. He trips up over one of its attachments and falls to the ground.

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y gets irritated at them not getting started. If they continue staying here, waiting for Joris-R, they'll be late. And he already knows that Joris-R is nowhere near here.

He starts walking up the stairs, to the warehouse. How convenient that the upper doors are open.

Speed-Y returns to the concourse, in time to hear Jam-Y's rant. The two REDS are following behind him. He agrees with Jam-Y, stating he was only chasing down the two REDS.

He points up the stairs, stating that they are the nearest exits, and the lift is that way. He heads that way himself.

After buying a Vita-Yum Meal Substitute Bar from a vendobot, Mick-R follows.

L4-O follows along, finishing off his packet of algae chips.

Azir-R enters the concourse. He's checking through that backpack that Speed-Y gave him. In it, aside from his B3, he discovers: half a dozen laser pistols; some assorted laser pistol barrels; three slugthrowers (single-shot, YELLOW); and some slugthrower ammunition (assorted).

Warehouse, D Level, Epsilon Subsector

After the destruction caused by the last mission, the warehouse reconstruction has gone surprisingly well. The front wall is still missing, but beyond that, the warehouse resembles a warehouse once again, with no holes in the other three walls.

The whole place is now mixed INFRARED, RED and ORANGE Clearance, with the usual shelves everywhere. Between the shelves, two forkbots - fairly small varieties, I must add - trundle about.

Also present is a waste receptacle, perfect for L4-O's empty packet of algae chips.

⁶⁰⁸ MALKOM: (OOC: I forgot this)

written by Speeder on Aug 08, 2011 18:17

I proceed to the corridors, wanting to go to the elevator, so I can take it to the level that we had the last debriefing.

written by Malkom on Aug 08, 2011 19:50

"Hey wait. How do we even know where to go?" Mick-R protests. "It could be ANYWHERE since that ad garbled it up..." Mick-R still follows Speed-Y anyway. "For all we know, we could be supposed to be going to a Briefing Room #177!"

written by Jam on Aug 08, 2011 19:51

I follow Speed-Y, now that it looks like we're going the right direction (though, since we have no idea where the briefing room is...)

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 08, 2011 20:53

Misfortune much?

I try to adjust my eyes, and attempt to leave again, crawling away.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 08, 2011 22:38

Being genuinely pleased with the contents, I follow the team towards the ultimate destination.

written by Gligar on Aug 09, 2011 01:25

D Level, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y leads the way, heading through Corridor D1, and through Concourse D1. Looks like there's a bit of a queue for the lifts, leading back into the concourse.

Mick-R follows, though he points out that they don't really know where they're going. The briefing room number could be wrong, for all they know.

Jam-Y follows as well.

Azir-R also joins them, though he needs to be carried up the steps by Lucas-R and John-R.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango gets up again, this time waiting for his eyes to adjust a little better before tryign again.

This time, he makes it to the door and out.

Upper Corridor, Level 3, Industrial Subsector B

Mango emerges in the INFRARED corridor outside the dorm. It is dimly lit by the open-flame "emergency lighting" provided during his first session at the reactor shielding. It's enough to see that RED supervisors are starting to wake everyone up - they're at Dormitory 4 right now.

written by 4616599 on Aug 08, 2011 17:19

"It annoys mutants at least. Surely that's 'anti' enough. In any case, it wasn't really treason. Just ask Joe-Y, who was involved in the operation."

While talking, I start toward the bunker

written by Speeder on Aug 09, 2011 03:32

If I cross a somewhat important looking person I ask if they know where is Debriefing 17.

And I continue going in my way, unless someone inform me a plausible location that is not on Central Subsector

written by Malkom on Aug 09, 2011 04:53

Mick-R follows the clones in charge.

"If you mess up, it isn't my fault!"

Feeling hungry, he starts to munch on the Vita-Yum bar...

written by Lightning4 on Aug 09, 2011 06:50

I bring up the rear.

"Uh Speed-Y sir, not to question your actions, but I think you mean Briefing 17, not debriefing. Unless they're the same room..."

I help ask around as well though.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 09, 2011 10:28

I think for a moment, then decide to return to my bed.

Don't need extra attention, I think. Too risky right now.

written by Speeder on Aug 09, 2011 12:03

"Yes, that. Thank you L4. And probably briefing and debriefing at the same rooms, otherwise we will have a problem with even more rooms than we thought."

written by 4616599 on Aug 09, 2011 18:15

I continue walking unless a more convenient mode of transport pops up⁶⁰⁹

written by Gligar on Aug 09, 2011 20:32

Roadway

Having left the dormitory, and indeed, the whole of Iota Subsector by now, Joris-R is walking towards the domescraper, and the bunker. He elaborates slightly to the clone about his "anti-mutant suit", saying that the dorm supervisor, Joe-Y, was involved in the operator. "Well, I don't really care about that. Was there anything else you wanted, or was this call just to advertise?"

Lift hall, D Level, Epsilon Subsector

Since the queue is now short enough, the team enters. There are now only a few clones in front of them. One of them is a GREEN clone, whom Speed-Y asks for the location of "Debriefing room 17."

L4-O corrects him, saying that it's Briefing Room 17, which Speed-Y accepts. He's getting slightly confused at all these rooms.

Unfortunately, the only thing the GREEN knows is that it's somewhere in upper Alpha Subsector.

⁶⁰⁹ 4616599: (also note my previous post- looks like I posted too late)

Mick-R says that it's not his fault if the higher-ups mess up... He sounds unhappy. The GREEN scowls at him, to see that he's chewing on his Vita-Yum bar.

John-R can't help but hum the Alpha Complex anthem.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to return to bed. He doesn't want to attract attention.

He makes it without incident this time.

Just in time for the REDs to enter the dorm anyway.

A couple light the "emergency lights" on the walls. Another shouts, "Alright clones, it's wakey-wakey time!"

This is accompanied by the simultaneous 'plink' of Wakey-Wakey pills into the pill dispenser trays dotted around the dormitory. So I guess some things are still working.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 09, 2011 20:57

I take my assigned Wakey-Wakey pills, and keep them in a pocket. I'm already awake enough, so they might come in useful at a later time.

written by Speeder on Aug 09, 2011 21:13

I thank the green and continue the way.

"Ok, central subsector is in a higher level anyway."

written by Jam on Aug 09, 2011 21:34

I turn to Mick-R.

"Do I detect that you are unhappy?"

I start fishing around inside my pockets...

"Well, you know what we do with clones that are unhappy..."

I pull out a knife.

"We slice them into little bits! (I think)"

I grin, and slowly walk towards Mick-R...

written by Malkom on Aug 09, 2011 23:02

Mick-R turns as pale as... well, he turns very pale. He starts backing away, and uses his fingers to shove his mouth up into a big, wannabe-happy and stupid looking grin. "See?" he manages to croak out while thus begrinned. "I'm happy! I'm happy! I'm--" Here he stumbles and falls flat on his back. "OW! Vatcrap, vatcrap, vatcraaaaaaaaaaaaaap!!!!"

Hey. Did he ever remember to put his laser on safety?

I sure hope so, because I think he just might have somehow gotten the trigger pulled in his fall.

Uh-oh is the very least I can say.

written by Speeder on Aug 10, 2011 01:33

If Mick actually shoots, I attempt a flying metal kick on him. Just to see what it do to a clone.

"Take that traitor! Noone from my team shoot on my team!"

written by Gligar on Aug 10, 2011 02:46

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango picks up his pill - just the one, that's all that's needed - but pockets it instead of taking it. Around him, other INFRAREDs are taking their pills, and a few are even jittering as their pills take effect.

After everyone is woken up, the RED shouts again. "Ten minutecycle hygiene session! Everyone look sharp!"

Mango becomes aware that he'll need to get his jumpsuit cleaned at some point.

Lift hall, D Level, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y thanks the GREEN, who nods and gets on a lift. The next one will be theirs.

Jam-Y notices Mick-R's expression, and advances on him. Is he, perhaps, unhappy Does he know what happens to unhappy clones?

Apparently, they get sliced into little bits, at least according to Jam-Y. He continues advancing, knife in hand.

Mick-R does his best to feign happiness as he scurries away.

However, he ends up backed up against the wall, and ends up falling down, right onto his laser pistol. And... no, that laser pistol is clearly defective. How else can you explain that it randomly fired like that? Surely he didn't deliberately fire at Jam-Y, did he? (If so, he missed.)

Speed-Y won't let that go unpunished. Over the past weekcycle, he's been developing a new technique using that cyborg foot of his. He now decides to test it against a clone. Mick-R, to be precise.

The results are impressive. With an almighty crack, the foot lands on Mick-R's torso and breaks several ribs. This knocks the breath out of Mick-R, who has difficulty breathing all of a sudden. Not to mention the feeling of nausea.⁶¹⁰

written by Speeder on Aug 10, 2011 04:15

I leave Mick there and say.

"Ok, I think that is sufficient punishment for that guy. I am sure he will be more happy now, and won't feign accidental discharge on a YELLOW clone, that is, two clearances above his."

Then I continue my way, happily, and smiling, a very grinnny smile of sorts, the one that you use when you explode something or hit a commie.

written by 4616599 on Aug 10, 2011 08:08

I continue walking as I speak.

"No! I'm trying to clear my name! If anything, that suit adds to my credibility! But since you ignore that, there is no concrete proof I committed treason!"

⁶¹⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC: Here's a thought for you: do laser pistols even have safeties?)

written by Lightning4 on Aug 10, 2011 12:11⁶¹¹

I look at the mangled heap of Mick.

"What was that guy's problem. Seems like we can't go anywhere together without someone shooting at us."

I shrug and walk away, catching up with the group.

"Though it makes life interesting I guess. No doubt our mission will have plenty of hostile elements to face..."

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 10, 2011 12:20

As I watch the unfolding scene, I think back to only a few moments ago when we were about to run off alone to the supply room for more stuff. It's a good thing Speedy helped me come to my senses.

Plus, that was an awesome superstomp.

written by Jam on Aug 10, 2011 14:53

I pause.

"Oh wait... Slicing to bits was for Commie Mutant Traitors, not unhappy clones! They're so similar, I almost confused the two... Sorry Mick-R!"

I put my knife away, and survey the damage done to Mick-R...

"Speed-Y, how is Mick-R supposed to walk, let alone fight, when you broke half the bones in his body! Surely you could have just fined him or something..."

I attempt figure out how severely Mick-R is injured and if I have the necessary skills and equipment to treat him...

"Also, nice kick!"

written by Malkom on Aug 10, 2011 15:10

Mick-R groans, and feebly tries to push his mouth into a bigger grin before passing out with this unnaturally big smile on his face...⁶¹²

written by Gligar on Aug 10, 2011 21:28

Lift hall, D Level, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y decides that he's dished out enough punishment. It's what traitors deserve. And hopefully, said traitor will learn to be happier next time.

Speed-Y once again waits for a lift.

It's a pity the GREEN has already gone. I'm sure he'd have had something interesting to say.

Jam-Y puts away his knife. It seems that he got unhappy clones mixed up with commies. An easy mistake to make.

He then admonishes Speed-Y for injuring Mick-R so much. After all, how can he fight, or even walk, with his chest broken?

⁶¹¹ LIGHTNING4: (OOC: I'm sure there are, we're just too low clearance to know what clearance they're available at!)

⁶¹² MALKOM: (OOC: Havoc incoming. Say, has that GREEN noticed anything?)

It was a nice kick, though.

Now... can Jam-Y do anything to help Mick-R? Maybe, if he had the materials. But he just... doesn't. He'd have to immobilise Mick-R's entire torso, and that's just for starters. Oh well, he is only RED...

L4-O notes that they can't go anywhere without someone shooting at them. At least it makes life interesting.

As he catches up with the rest of the group, a lift arrives. Finally.

Mick-R keeps trying to push his grin even further up his face as he loses consciousness.

Roadway

Joris-R continues to walk. He argues that that suit is vital evidence, and without it, there is no concrete proof that he committed treason. "Er... what? I'm not sure what you're saying. Oh well... I have better things to do than listen to you ramble. Good daycycle, citizen."

The clone hangs up on him.

Probably a good thing, as Joris-R has reached the end of the roadway. The loading dock door is open.

written by Speeder on Aug 10, 2011 22:10

As Mick managed to do a super grin, I am happy that he is happy, I grab him and drag him inside the lift.

written by Gligar on Aug 11, 2011 03:03

A lift

As he enters the lift, Speed-Y looks back at Mick-R. Pleased that the latter is finally smiling, he pull Mick-R into the lift.

Mick-R doesn't react. Neither does anyone else...

"Where to?" asks the lift.

written by Malkom on Aug 11, 2011 03:45

Mick-R slumps wetly down onto the floor and stays there. He's out good.

Oh, by the way, what happened to his laser pistol? I don't suppose there's any chance of it going off as he's dragged... now that'd be kinda !!fun!!...

written by Lightning4 on Aug 11, 2011 10:48

I get into the lift and stare at Mick-R. I keep my laser pistol close at hand.

"We need to find Briefing Room 27... I'm going to assume it's somewhere in Central Subsector. Maybe Speed-Y has more details here..."

written by Speeder on Aug 11, 2011 11:34

"We need to go into briefing room 17, but I think that briefing room 27 must be nearby.

So, Lift, do you know briefing room 17?

If yes, take us there.

If not, take us to whatever level we can use to access central subsector and ask some information."

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 11, 2011 13:25

I hop (wheel) aboard the lift, being careful not to run over Mick's happily unconscious body.

written by 4616599 on Aug 11, 2011 16:10

I enter.

"Nukabot? Anyone? Receptionistbot?"

written by Jam on Aug 11, 2011 16:27

I facepalm...

"First, we're going to Briefing Room 17, then we're going back to Debriefing Room 27, and now we're searching for Briefing Room 27? Just where are we going anyway?!"

I also enter the lift...

written by Gligar on Aug 11, 2011 19:17

A lift

Mick-R continues to fail to react, even as his laser pistol drags across the floor.

L4-O stares at him with his hand on his own laser pistol. He tells the lift that they're headed towards "Briefing Room 27".

Speed-Y corrects him, saying "Briefing Room 17". But the two should be close together, right?

He asks the lift if it knows where that is. If so, it can go there. If not, it can go to Central Subsector.

Azir-R takes care to avoid Mick-R when he boards the lift. Lucas-R practically trips up over him, though.

Jam-Y seems confused, what with Briefing Room 27, Briefing Room 17, and Debriefing Room 27... just where are they going?

"I am sorry, citizen," the lift replies. "But I do not know where those are. How about I take you to P Level, and you can cross to Central Subsector from there?"

The lift closes its doors, just after John-R enters, and begins to rise.

Loading Dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Joris-R enters, and calls out for someone to answer.

Well, there's Nukabot. "Oh hi, citizen. Joris-R-DNK, is it not?"

written by Speeder on Aug 11, 2011 19:20

I nod.

"Ok, P level is fine."

I start to hum the B3 tune, and then I get thirsty.

I see if I have any B3 on me, if not I ask Azir to grab one from the backpack and hand to me.

"Too bad being thirsty mean drinking the ammo."

written by Malkom on Aug 11, 2011 19:33

Mick-R's eyelids flicker, and there's a tiny, tiny hint of a groan.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 11, 2011 20:54

If Speedy cannot find himself B3, he can have one, but I join him in lamenting the loss of our ammunition as I myself drink a B3 as well.

"Well I am sure we'll run into a vendbot at some point in our travels to the briefing room. We can resupply, the thrill of b3 is that it's readily available and duel purpose!"

I think to myself how this sounds like a great commercial.

written by Jam on Aug 11, 2011 21:46

I join in on the B3 singing and drinking...

As I notice Malkom-R waking up, I shove a Vismorpain pill in his mouth and tell him to swallow...^{613 614}

written by Gligar on Aug 12, 2011 02:52

A lift

Speed-Y says that P Level is fine.

He starts humming a B3 jungle, but gets thirsty. (Good to see the subliminals are working.) He checks to see if he has any, and what luck! He has one.

It's a shame that drinking a B3 means that it can't be used as ammunition...

Mick-R seems to want to come round.

Azir-R drinks one of his own B3s. He also laments the loss of ammunition, and wonders if they should add the ammunitionlike qualities of B3 to the advertising.

Jam-Y also joins in. But it seems that the confusion stemming from all the rooms is confusing him... or is it a side-effect of the MemGo pill? He seems to think that [NAME REDACTED] is in the lift with them, and wants him to take a Visomorpain...

written by Lightning4 on Aug 12, 2011 11:09

I get thirsty too then frown since I don't have my own B3.

Instead I simply join in the humming half-heartedly.

"Right... meant Briefing 17. Not 27... I guess we're all a little crossed today. Kind of an early start to today after all."

written by Speeder on Aug 12, 2011 11:27

I take one of my own B3 and hand to L4.

Then I smile happily =D

⁶¹³ MALKOM: (OOC:

Malkom-R?

I don't see him here... 😊

⁶¹⁴ SPEEDER: (ooc: the forget pills broke Jam mind)

written by 4616599 on Aug 12, 2011 16:44

"Hi Nukabot! Good to see that Tech Services got you fixed."

"Where is everyone?"

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 12, 2011 18:33

I finish my B3 cheerfully, and await the lift to stop.

written by Gligar on Aug 12, 2011 19:38

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

By now, everyone has filed in to a nearby hygiene station for a shower.

Except Mango. He seems to be spacing out.

One of the REDs has noticed. "And why are you just standing there? Mutant got your brain or something?"

In other news, the scrubot seems to have freed itself.

On closer inspection, it seems to have been trying to mimic that pose from Mandatory Team Troubleshooter. You know, the one that totally isn't stolen from Tella-O at all. No, definitely not.

Tella-O called, she wants it back.

A lift

L4-O gets thirsty with all the B3 jingles flying around. Unfortunately, he doesn't have any. He does join in the singing, albeit a little half-heartedly.

Speed-Y rummages through his stuff, looking for more B3, but... disaster! He seems to have run out! How did that happen?

Azir-R finishes his and waits.

It's not long before the lift reaches its destination and stops.

Loading Dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Joris-R greets Nukabot and asks where everyone is. "I saw someclone enter a few minutecycles ago. But he may have gone out the top. As for everyone else... well, there was that mission alert. It is possible that they have already set off for briefing."

written by Jam on Aug 12, 2011 20:02⁶¹⁵

I look at Mick-R...

"Strange... For a secondcycle there, I almost thought he was... was... someclone... I can't remember the name... or the face... Odd..."

I try to shove a Visomorpain into Mick-R's mouth, and tell him to swallow it...⁶¹⁶

written by Malkom on Aug 12, 2011 20:25

Mick-R swallows convulsively as something is shoved in his mouth, then begins to cough and choke. He must have swallowed it the wrong way...

⁶¹⁵ JAM: (ooc: Vatcrap... 😊)

⁶¹⁶ JAM: (ooc edit: Also, I exit the lift...)

written by Lightning4 on Aug 12, 2011 22:23

I get off the lift.

"You mean... uh..."

I think for a moment.

"Actually I don't remember either. If we don't remember, how can we be sure of the connection!"

I shrug.

"We've got more pressing matters anyway."

If Mick-R starts choking I point in his direction.

"Like that."

written by Speeder on Aug 12, 2011 22:32

As Mick start choking, I frown.

"So, how we do that anti-chocking manuever on a guy with broken ribs without puncturing his lungs? Well, I am not medic, I will not even try."

I just get off the lift, dragging Mick-R and leaving him stable in the ground, clear from the doors.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 13, 2011 03:39

When there's sufficient clearance, I wheel off the lift.

written by 4616599 on Aug 13, 2011 16:43

I look around. "Oh. Any idea where briefing room 17 is then? Are you fully functional? I'm sure you could use a drive there."

written by Gligar on Aug 13, 2011 21:48

A lift

Jam-Y looks at Mick-R. How did he just confuse him with [NAME REDACTED]? How does he even remember [NAME REDACTED]?

But anyway. He tries again with the Visomorpain, and manages to shove it into Mick-R's mouth.

Mick-R swallows reflexively... and promptly begins choking.

But Jam-Y doesn't seem to notice, or if he does, he ignores it, and just exits the lift.

Lift hall, P Level, Epsilon Subsector

Ahh, P Level again. Not the right subsector yet, but the team's getting there. In case you forgot, the lift hall, and the concourse, are RED Clearance.

Now that Jam-Y is off the lift, there's enough space for Azir-R to exit.

L4-O gets off the lift. He's also having problems with [NAME REDACTED]. If he could remember anything about him (her?) he'd be able to figure out what the connection is between them. Alas.

But there are more pressing matters, like Mick-R...

Speed-Y wonders how they're supposed to do that anti-choking thing when he has broken ribs... now who exactly caused that? 😊

Speed-Y pulls Mick-R off the lift.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Joris-R wonders if Nukabot knows the location of Briefing Room 17, and whether he'd be able to drive there.

"Unfortunately, I am unaware of the location of Briefing Room 17," replies Nukabot. "It must not be near here."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 13, 2011 23:14

I sigh and approach Mick-R.

I give him a swift blow to the back with my hand in attempt to solve the choking problem.

If it fails I shrug, and say "Well, I've got nothing then."

written by Malkom on Aug 14, 2011 02:06

On being pounded, Mick-R comes awake with a scream and a cough that blows the Visomorpain up his throat, then convulsively gulps it down, and whimpers. He tries to curl up into a ball but at the first movement screams again. "AAAAAGGH!"

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 14, 2011 03:31

I stare at Mick's dragging body and wonder how clones like this can even get out of bed without causing themselves and everyone around them harm.

As I do this, I don't notice myself run over Mick's arm with a wheel.

"Oops, drat."

I wheel back over it to free his arm from under the wheelchair.

written by Jam on Aug 14, 2011 04:05

I sigh and approach Mick-R.

I give him a swift blow to the chest with my hand in attempt to solve the choking problem.

If it fails I shrug, and say "Well, I guess I could just slice his windpipe open..."^{617 618}

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 14, 2011 10:44

I wonder where Malkom-R got-

I shake off the thought of the clone for the time being, and proceed to the hygiene station. I consider just for a moment to tell the RED about the infamous 'Headgrabber', but decide not to.

written by Speeder on Aug 14, 2011 13:33

I go see if I remember what direction was the central subsector.

⁶¹⁷ JAM: (ooc: because we all know how much Malkom likes larynxes! :P)

⁶¹⁸ MALKOM: (ooc: egh. Also can we denote OOCness by doing double parenthesis enclosure ((like this)) instead of saying "(ooc: ooc stuff)"?)

In fact, I go check if the checkpoint is whole again.

written by Gligar on Aug 14, 2011 15:09⁶¹⁹

Lift Hall, P Level, Epsilon Subsector

L4-O looks at the choking Mick-R.

He then has an idea. He takes his hand, and hit hits Mick-R on the back.

This dislodges the Visomorpain and causes Mick-R to come awake. The pill goes down more easily this time. Albeit with a yell.

Azir-R wonders just how Mick-R can even get out of bed without causing massive harm to everyone.⁶²⁰ He prepares to move on, but accidentally runs over Mick-R's arm. Oops.

Apparently not noticing that Mick-R is okay again, Jam-Y decides to repeat L4-O's idea, and hit Mick-R on the back again.

Speed-Y goes and look Can he remember how to get to Central Subsector?

Corridor P2, Epsilon Subsector

As it happens, he can. The Checkpoint is even intact.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango snaps out of it and heads for the hygiene station.

Hygiene Station C, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The place is pretty crowded, seeing as though this is where the inhabitants of two dormitories wash and shower, etc. Right now, the place is almost full of clones showering.

written by Speeder on Aug 14, 2011 15:56

I turn to others.

"Common, the checkpoint is there!"

Then I go to the checkpoint, and ask a guard if he knows where is the Briefing Room 17

written by Malkom on Aug 14, 2011 17:24

Mick-R moans and kicks his leg against the floor, causing another ripple of pain to go through him, causing him to yell again.⁶²¹

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 14, 2011 18:00

I wheel after Speedy. careful to not run over Mick anymore, of course.

Then I hear his yelp and have to double check to make sure I didn't.

Satisfied it was not me, I continue.

⁶¹⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: What, are you trying to get people to take your OOC comments as IC comments? 🤔)

⁶²⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC: scribble scribble)

⁶²¹ MALKOM: (OOC: No, just it'd be less typing. 😊)

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 14, 2011 21:35

I almost complain about the crowding, but then remember that there isn't anything to complain about, for the time being.

I enter the showers, if that is possible.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 14, 2011 23:46

I follow Speed-Y and present the necessary documentation to the guards.

I listen in for the answer to Speed-Y's question.

written by Jam on Aug 15, 2011 00:08

"Oh... Mick-R isn't choking anymore... Good job, L4-O!"

I pick Mick-R up and follow Speed-Y to the checkpoint...

written by Gligar on Aug 15, 2011 16:10

Corridor P2, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y pops back over to let everyone know about the checkpoint, then heads there himself.

Lift hall, P level, Epsilon Subsector

Mick-R twitches, and yelps.

Then the visomorpain kicks in, and he quiets down. That tablet should keep him quiet for a while.

Azir-R wheels off after Speed-Y. He does look back at Mick-R, but he hasn't run over him in minutecycles now.

Everyone else follows along, with Jam-Y pausing to pick up Mick-R.

Internal Security Checkpoint, P Level, between Epsilon and Central Subsectors

As the others arrive, Speed-Y is asking the guards for directions.

One guard thinks. "Isn't that over in Gamma Subsector?"

Another replies, "No, it's in Alpha Subsector, I believe."

The third replies, "You're both wrong! It's in Eta Subsector!"

Hygiene Station C, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango almost doesn't want to, but disrobes and showers with the rest.

But with the time he spent spacing out in the dormitory, he barely has enough time for a minimum hygiene cycle before the water shuts off, signalling the end of the cycle. Time for breakfast.

Mango wonders whether he should wait until he's in Deep Subsector before getting something to eat.

Loading Dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

"Hello?" Nukabot says. "Are you spacing out, citizen?"

written by Speeder on Aug 15, 2011 16:17

I look around a bit, puzzled.

Then I thanks the guards, and proceed, in the direction of the briefing rooms we already know, hoping the corridor has a range of something like between 16 and 29... instead of 19 and 27.

written by 4616599 on Aug 15, 2011 16:57

"Uhh...huh? Oh. I was just thinking. I haven't the faintest idea where Briefing Room 17 is...now if only I had a Transition or something I'd be more mobile when searching."

I look around the dock for any small vehicles.

written by Jam on Aug 15, 2011 19:04

I try to facepalm, and find both my hands are busy carrying Mick-R...

"We can't really go in three different directions..."

I prop one of Mick-R's hands up and use that to facepalm with... There. Done.

"I guess we'll just have to trust Speed-Y's instincts..."

I follow Speed-Y.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 15, 2011 19:09

When Speedy is ready, and moves on, I present my ME card to the guards and (assuming there's no trouble) wheel on through.

written by Malkom on Aug 15, 2011 19:39

Mick-R groans as he's picked up.

written by Gligar on Aug 15, 2011 19:51

Internal Security Checkpoint, P Level, between Epsilon and Central Subsectors

Speed-Y thanks the guards and moves on, the rest of the team in tow. Some show their ME cards but the guards seem to be squabbling over exactly where Briefing Room 17 actually is.

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

The team once again finds itself in the vicinity of Debriefing Room 27. The room itself seems to be occupied.

But that's not where they're going. They're looking for Briefing Room 17.

And from the look of things, they're in the wrong place.

Looking down a nearby corridor, a sign is visible, pointing to "10-20". Small problem: the corridor is GREEN.

Loading Dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Joris-R says that he was thinking. Perhaps he could use a Transition. He looks around, but notices that the only form of transport is Nukabot.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 15, 2011 20:36

I look around, checking for a viable alternate route that should get us in the right direction.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 15, 2011 21:02

I make the decision to hold off the food until later. I'm strangely not at all that hungry for some reason.

I head off as usual, except this time looking for that detail that has been changed since the last daycycle.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 15, 2011 21:52

I follow behind Speed-Y.

As we pass by Debriefing 27, I remark:

"Wonder if they managed to repair it. That was uh... a lot of damage."

written by Speeder on Aug 15, 2011 22:50

I go to the fringes of GREEN, and check if the room 17 is IN the GREEN corridor, or beyond it, where it maybe have correct clearance.

As L4 comment on it.

"Indeed... Infrareds are efficient those days... Or they deployed some new sort of construction bot?"

written by Jam on Aug 16, 2011 00:14

I look at the GREEN corridor...

"Hmm... Are you sure this is the right way?"

I check if any of the nearby rooms are briefing rooms, or if they all are debriefing rooms.

written by Malkom on Aug 16, 2011 15:35

Mick-R stirs and stares down the GREEN corridor with a bit of strange longing, before settling back down into the arms of whoever's carrying him with a moan.

written by Gligar on Aug 16, 2011 16:17

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Azir-R looks round for a route that's lower than GREEN but, short of using the air vents, there isn't one.

L4-O wonders if Debriefing Room 27 was repaired after their little... incident.

Speed-Y has a closer look at the GREEN corridor. He notes that the visible rooms seem to be a mix of briefing rooms and debriefing rooms... but no 17.

There's also a lift at the end of the corridor. A sign near the lift points out that there are more rooms on the next two levels.

To L4-O, he remarks about the efficiency of INFRAREDS. Or maybe a bot was used.

Jam-Y wonders if they're going the right way. He also has a look at the corridor, and notes the briefing rooms, debriefing rooms (but, as mentioned, no 17), and the lift.

He also notices the cameras, which seem to be set up to slowly pan across the corridor, almost as if there aren't enough for static views of the whole place.

Mick-R comes round enough to look down the corridor, as if he wants to go down there.

Hygiene Station C, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to wait until later to get food. He gets dressed and heads off.

Roadway

As he exits the building, he notices that lighting problems seem to have spread to Industrial Subsector A.

He heads towards the domescraper.

written by Speeder on Aug 16, 2011 16:41

I think a bit, then I turn to others.

"Ok, in the end of the corridor there are a lift, probably we can use that lift to reach the other side without crossing anything GREEN, or something else."

I go look around for a acessible lift, if I stumble in the checkpoint I ask them for a lift, also I explain the situation and ask if they know a alternative route.

written by 4616599 on Aug 16, 2011 17:51

"Well then, Nukabot... I can't seem to locate it. My gut feeling tells me that it should be nearby, uplevel...I'll see you later, unless you want to give me a lift up to D Level."

I try to get to the former Revolutionary Square.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 16, 2011 18:44

I follow the group, resisting the urge to dodge past the camera with lightning speed.

written by Gligar on Aug 16, 2011 21:13

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y announces the existence of the lift, and decides to try and find another way round to it. Or another lift.

He and Azir-R head towards the Hub, to find that the path has been blocked by Treason Scene tape. It seems that some high-clearance clone has been terminated in the Hub... or at least, that's what it looks like, what with all of the IntSec clones in there.

They head back towards the checkpoint, to find that it's also been blocked. One of the guards is outside, and is denying access.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Joris-R says that he can't find the briefing room, but that it should be nearby. Perhaps Nukabot could give him a lift to D Level?

"I could probably do so... at least, if the lifts have been fully repaired. Hop on."

written by Speeder on Aug 16, 2011 23:49

I attempt to find if any other path is available, if not, I invite everyone for a air vent trip...

And proceed to disassemble the air vent closest to GREEN corridor but not on GREEN area.

written by Jam on Aug 17, 2011 00:07

"Hmm... What now?"

I stand and watch Speed-Y work, looking slightly bored...

written by Lightning4 on Aug 17, 2011 00:31

I stand and watch Speed-Y work, looking somewhat confused.

"Well, I guess any way of getting there..."

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 17, 2011 02:37

Oh dear, I think, I guess I'll need to abandon my wheels..

written by Malkom on Aug 17, 2011 02:40

Mick-R blearily squints past the Treason Scene tape, mumbling something incomprehensible before passing out again.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 17, 2011 10:32

Well, looks like our building isn't the only one in trouble...

I continue towards the domescaper.

It looks like that's changed too. I mean, clones probably would be shifted just into a slightly different position, considering they're moving all the time...

Except when they're dead.

written by Gligar on Aug 17, 2011 16:45

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y looks around for another way to the lift. Seeing none, other than the corridor and the vent, his attention turns to the latter.

He starts to remove the nearest vent to the GREEN corridor, only to find that it is already loose. It looks like things get a bit tight in there.

Jam-Y looks on, a bit bored.

L4-O looks on, a bit confused. Well, as long as they can get there...

Azir-R looks on, a bit sad. He'll have to abandon his wheelchair.

Mick-R looks on... at the treason scene tape. A couple of IntSec seem to have noticed them and are heading this way. But Mick-R is too passed out to care.

John-R looks on, a bit amused.

Lucas-R just... looks on.

Roadway

Mango walks on, noting anything that's changed.

Well, there are lots of minor details which have changed as a matter of course: clones moving, dust from the Industrial Subsectors getting everywhere, scrubots moving about trying to clean it up, spybots flitting about, countless other things.

The domescraper has changed, too: its pattern of lights has changed. But then, it always does: besides the ever-moving searchlights, there are the light panels all the way up the domescraper, filling every visible surface, changing colour too rapidly to consciously see, in ways that activate the viral advertising, right in your brain.

There's also the scrubot following Mango, but he doesn't see that.

Eventually, though, Mango reaches the domescraper. The loading dock at the end of the roadway is open, revealing a RED clone speaking with a forkbot.

written by Malkom on Aug 17, 2011 16:59

Mick-R remains passed-out.

written by 4616599 on Aug 17, 2011 17:00

"Thanks!"

I hop on

written by Speeder on Aug 17, 2011 17:25

I look around on the vent, check if the temperature is safe and if nothing dangerous is seemly lingering there, and then I proceed inside.

"Hey, maybe I can do something to take everyone across the GREEN corridor without the vent, so if needed, people can stay and wait."

I continue proceeding, toward the elevator in the end of the GREEN corridor, every time I come across a grate, I look outside to see where I am.

written by Jam on Aug 17, 2011 17:47

I watch Speed-Y crawl in the vent...

"Hmm..."

Then I look at the IntSec guards...

"Hmm..."

Then I look back down the corridor...

"Hmmmmm..."

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 17, 2011 18:58

I watch Speedy, and decide that yeah, maybe waiting a little bit will be a good idea.

With that out of the way, I go back to checking out all the tape and security that suddenly appeared. Seems pretty coincidental.

written by Gligar on Aug 17, 2011 21:01

Loading dock, A Level, Epsilon Subsector

Joris-R jumps into Nukabot's operator seat.

The forkbot replies, "Alright, let's get going!" It starts up and drives out of the loading dock, past an INFRARED who looks kind of familiar, and back on itself, heading for the lift hall.

[687]

Lift hall, A Level, Epsilon Subsector

Looks like that lift did get repaired, after all. "Alright," Nukabot says. "I will need you to press the call button, please."

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y looks inside the vent. It doesn't seem particularly hot or cold, but there is a constant breeze.

He ventures inside. Maybe he could figure out something to get everyone through the corridor without having to get through the vent. If people want, they can wait.

As he waits, Jam-Y seems to be thinking. He looks at the vent. He looks at the guards. He looks at the GREEN corridor.

Azir-R decides that waiting is a good idea. He starts looking at the Treason Scene tape, the guards, and the other security. It doesn't look to be going anywhere fast.

There is a faint sizzling noise from one of the GREEN corridor's cameras.

Air ducts, near P Level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y crawls through. Progress is slow, since the ducts are kind of cramped.

He passes a few grates that seem to be leading to the GREEN corridor. As he passes one, he hears a faint sizzling noise.

Finally, he reaches the lift shaft, and the grate leading to the corridor, just outside the lift.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 17, 2011 22:09

"Uh oh, I can't imagine Speedy caused that camera to go on the fritz, but I hope we don't get blamed for it.."

written by Malkom on Aug 17, 2011 23:21

Mick-R continues to remain in a passed-out state.

written by Speeder on Aug 18, 2011 00:01

I look if the corridor below the corridor vent is still GREEN.

If it is, I check if I can get into the lift shaft somewhat safely... I look around to get a clue where the lift actually is.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 18, 2011 09:21

I look at the camera, confused and wondering what the camera is doing.

I look to see if the guards are still approaching us.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 18, 2011 10:17

I keep going, thinking about what I might be doing during this daycycle. If it is possible, I see if I can make purchase of coffeelyke. If I can, I keep going, taking occasional sips of it now and again. I also consolidate my thoughts.

This is odd. I wonder where that team's gotten to. After all, it isn't like them to leave such a dangerous threat alone all these past daycycles...

Then again, I haven't really done much out of the ordinary.

That means I'm doing my job properly.

I grin at the last thought.

written by Jam on Aug 18, 2011 15:56

I look to the camera, then look to Azir-R.

"What camera? You don't mean the one that I didn't hear sizzling because it's in a GREEN clearance area, and I'm only YELLOW clearance? Of course, if I had heard it, I probably would have said something like, 'Wow, what a coincidence... Rather convenient timing, wouldn't you agree? Hmm... Very suspicious...'

Then I would reply to you and say, 'Of course you don't imagine Speed-Y doing such a thing, since he's two clearances above you! Or are you accusing him of being a mutant?'

Hmm... I wonder if it's related to—wait, nevermind, that's probably above your clearance."

written by Gligar on Aug 18, 2011 16:45

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Azir-R can't imagine that Speed-Y could cause the camera to sizzle. And that they would be blamed for it.

Jam-Y denies hearing it, but notes in passing that if he had, he would consider it convenient, and suspicious... and of course Azir-R wouldn't imagine that, since Speed-Y is a higher clearance. Unless it's an accusation.

L4-O wonders what the camera is doing. And where the guards are. (They're still approaching, though they've stopped to talk on their PDCs.)

Air ducts, near P Level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y looks out the grate, to see the GREEN corridor.

He then approaches the lift shaft. He's able to access the shaft, just above the level door.

He can't see the lift itself, but it's moving somewhere above.

Lift Hall, A Level, Epsilon Subsector

Mango heads for a lift. He thinks it's odd that the team aren't doing anything about the "obvious threat".

He's able to get on a lift heading for Deep Subsector, walking past the waiting forkbot and its RED operator, who seem to be waiting for a lift themselves.

D Sublevel

Mango makes a stop-off to visit a cafeteria. He waits in line for some coffeelyke.

written by 4616599 on Aug 18, 2011 16:56

I hit the button!

written by Speeder on Aug 18, 2011 17:01

I attempt to get into the shaft, go down one level and open the door of that level.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 18, 2011 17:20

"Clearly, Jam, I cannot imagine it, thereby it cannot happen, thereby there's no way he's a mutant since I couldn't imagine it."

written by Malkom on Aug 18, 2011 18:42

Mick-R continues being passed out, groaning when appropriate.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 18, 2011 20:53

I wait patiently in the line, taking a look at whoever happens to be in front, and making note of any distinctive features.

written by Gligar on Aug 18, 2011 23:22

Lift hall, A Level, Epsilon Subsector

Joris-R hits the call button. He doesn't seem to notice the rather familiar clone who just took one of the other lifts down to somewhere below.

Air ducts, near P Level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y decides to try to enter the shaft. It's dark in there.

No really, it's dark. So dark he can't really see any way of getting down to the door. Or the one below it.

But he only realises this at the last second. He would have fallen down the shaft if the duct wasn't this small.

He's now half out of the duct. It's going to be difficult to do anything like this.

And the lift? It seems to be rising...

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Azir-R counters Jam-Y's remark by saying that since he can't imagine Speed-Y doing anything to the camera, nothing like that could happen. So Speed-Y can't be a mutant.

The IntSec guards finally arrive. It's taken them long enough.

One, a BLUE, looks at Jam-Y. "You! Identify yourself!"

Cafeteria, D Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango waits. He passes the time by looking at the clone in front of him. He's another INFRARED, and is talking to another clone sat at a nearby table.

When the first clone turns his head, Mango notes that he has a lazy eye.

The queue moves.

written by Speeder on Aug 19, 2011 00:36

I first touch around to see if I can grab on something. If I can, then I search for a way to open the door of this level, so I can use the light and talk.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 19, 2011 11:00

"I could maybe explain I guess. If you would like."

I look at Jam-Y then back at the BLUE.

written by Jam on Aug 19, 2011 16:40

I turn to the BLUE, and salute.

"Sir! I am Jam-Y-JYR-2! How may I help you, sir?"

written by Gligar on Aug 19, 2011 17:28

Lift hall, A Level, Epsilon Subsector

The lift arrives, and its doors open. "Ah, there we go," Nukabot says. "The lift is operational after all."

It drives into the lift. "Er. I will have to ask you to press the button again," it says.

Air ducts, near P Level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y gropes around Ah! There's a ladder. He pulls himself onto it.

Lift shaft, near P level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y tries to open the door from the inside. He's able to pry it open a little.

The lift continues to rise.

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

L4-O offers to explain to the BLUE, but Jam-Y is on it. He identifies himself and asks what the guard wants. "You can help me by telling me what you're doing right next to a treason scene!"

Cafeteria, D Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango's queue moves again. The clone with the lazy eye gets his coffeelyke and sits down with his friend.

written by Speeder on Aug 19, 2011 17:41

From what I remember the lift was already above me and rising, but I check just to make sure.

Then I attempt to open the door more until there are sufficient light to me see how to go to the floor below, or if I can see somewhere to avoid moving lift.

Also I search for more vents.

written by 4616599 on Aug 19, 2011 18:01

I press the D Level button.

written by Jam on Aug 19, 2011 20:16

I look to L4-O, then look to the IntSec clone.

"It appears L4-O here would be happy to explain, if that's okay with you, sir?"

written by Gligar on Aug 19, 2011 22:41

Lift shaft, near P level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y checks on the lift. It's still above him. It seems to have stopped for the moment.

He keeps working on the door, and manages to open it halfway before it snaps back to where it was. He tries again. There we are.

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Jam-Y looks at the BLUE, and at L4-O... and delegates L4-O to tell the BLUE what they're doing there. "Well, hurry up then, before I take you all in."

A lift

Joris-R presses the button, causing the lift to...

...do nothing, except light an error light.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 19, 2011 22:51

"Pretty short and simple really. We're Troubleshooter Team Epsilon, we're trying to get to Briefing Room 17. You wouldn't happen to know where that is, would you?"

I show them any information they request, even the PDC message if need be.

"If you can give us any advice on how else to get there that'd be great seeing as there's a treason scene right there and the area is also GREEN..."

written by Speeder on Aug 19, 2011 23:04

I frown at the door.

I see if I can remember how to trigger the door opening like if I was a elevator.

If I fail at that, I try to find a vent in the floor below.

written by Jam on Aug 20, 2011 01:35⁶²²

I nod as L4-O explains. After he finishes, I add a bit more...

"We were trying to follow the signs to where we thought the briefing room was, but ran into this GREEN corridor here. We were just talking about what to do when you arrived..."

written by Malkom on Aug 20, 2011 02:24

Mick-R groans and almost comes to for a moment, perhaps enough to give him a glimpse of the guard, before he passes out again.

written by Gligar on Aug 20, 2011 17:42

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

L4-O explains that they need to get to Briefing Room 17, and shows the guard the mission alert. He asks if the guard knows where it is.

Jam-Y adds that they were trying to follow signs to get there, but found the GREEN corridor.

⁶²² JAM: (ooc: Er... Didn't Speed-Y successfully open the door?)

The guard replies, "You're in the wrong subsector! Which just raises another question: how is it that you can't even follow the simple instructions given to you? Your Mission Alert clearly states that it is in Alpha Subsector! You're fined 100 credits each for failure to follow instructions."

Lucas-R doesn't quite manage to keep from mumbling something about an advert.

Mick-R has a look at the guard. He's wearing kevlar, and carrying a heavy slugthrower.

Lift shaft, P Level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y frowns. The door might be open, but it's not enough to get through...

He tries to remember if he's ever been on a lift repair team, or if he ever learned how to properly open a lift door from the inside...

He remembers something about a sensor, but has trouble remembering how to trigger it...

He turns his attention to the floor below... is there a duct there? Or at least a vent?

Yes, there is is.

A lift

"Hmmm."

Nukabot goes quiet for a moment. "The lift claims that it is not rated to carry forkbots. And yet I have definitely used this lift before. Let me see if I can ascertain the problem."

Cafeteria, D Sublevel, Deep Subsector

It's finally Mango's turn to get coffeelyke. As it turns out, it's just a vendobot. There is a choice of light or dark, with sweetener or without. Either way, it's two credits.

written by Malkom on Aug 20, 2011 19:43

Mick-R rolls around a bit.⁶²³

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 20, 2011 20:13

I listen to the conversation and, urg..fines...

well, I guess we better get to alpha subsector then.

written by Speeder on Aug 21, 2011 01:03

I give up, and decide to return where I came from, before a lift decide to smash me to bits.

written by Jam on Aug 21, 2011 01:13

I hold on to the struggling Mick-R, and look at the guard...

"Oh, Alpha Subsector? Thank you sir! And to think none of us noticed that... We'll make sure to pay more attention in the future!"

written by Lightning4 on Aug 21, 2011 08:15

"Huh?"

I look at my PDC and see if it indeed says Alpha Subsector.

⁶²³ MALKOM: (OOC: Is someone still carrying me?)

"That wasn't there before..."

I sigh and mutter.

"Grr, those advertisements... and I prefer algae chips anyway grumble could've bought several bags of the things with that 100 credits.. grumble"

I snap back to reality

"Um, nothing. Was simply praising Friend Computer under my breath. Thanks for the information. To Alpha Subsector we go, I guess."

written by 4616599 on Aug 21, 2011 13:15

"Hmm. It'd better not be sabotage."

I check for any load ratings the lift has written by Gligar on Aug 21, 2011 17:13

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Mick-R looks like he wants to roll away, but Jam-Y holds onto him.

Jam-Y also thanks the BLUE, saying they'll make sure to pay more attention next time.

L4-O looks at his PDC, confused. It doesn't seem to say anything about Alpha Subsector... the advert is obscuring it. Maybe the BLUE can't see the advert? He mutters under his breath.

Lift shaft, P level, Central Sunsector

Speed-Y gives up with the door, and starts heading back to the group.

A lift

Joris-R wonders what the light means. Is it sabotage, or just a load limit?

He looks for any sign of a load limit, but can't find one.

"Apparently," Nukabot says, "some new CPU mandates came into force when the compnode was rebooted. One of them might have changed the maximum allowed weight limit in lifts."

written by Jam on Aug 21, 2011 21:00

I set Mick-R down and check his wounds again...

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 21, 2011 21:28

Looking at the options, I decide to take a dark coffeelyke, with sweetener. I pay, and sit somewhere with only a singular seat.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 21, 2011 21:37

I look for any signs pointing in the direction of Alpha Subsector.

If I don't see any I check my PDC for any directions instead.

Failing that, I just stand around bored waiting for Speed-Y.

I continue muttering a little bit but stop.

written by Malkom on Aug 22, 2011 00:27

Mick-R does a little bit of nearly-unconscious grumbling. The only understandable portion is "...GREENs... I wish..."

written by Speeder on Aug 22, 2011 00:34

I continue my way... I shout in the vents hoping they will hear.

"Hey, I can't find a way here, the vents end in GREEN area or a elevator shaft, and I do not have a torch to work inside it!".

written by 4616599 on Aug 22, 2011 16:32

"I guess that's a possibility..."

"Hello? Liftbot? What's going on? Why have we stopped? This is not too pleasing, is it?"

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 22, 2011 17:22

"That's alright, Speedy, we need to get to Alpha Subsector. These very helpful BLUE officers pointed us in the right direction.

written by Gligar on Aug 22, 2011 17:38

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Jam-Y puts Mick-R down to check on him. His injuries aren't getting any better.

Mick-R mutters something about something GREEN.

L4-O does a check for Alpha Subsector From what he can find out, if the GREEN corridor went just a bit further, it would lead to Alpha Subsector. As it is, he'd have to be one level down to get there.

From out of the air duct, the voice of Speed-Y is heard, telling the group that the vents either lead to the GREEN area or to the lift shaft. He doesn't have a light to work in there, either.

One of the BLUEs hears this. "So... you're doing something in..."

There is a sudden commotion from the Hub. Another BLUE appears, and tells the two to come quick. "We've got a Code 61 here!"

The first BLUE sighs. "Looks like you lot will have to wait. Don't do anything. I'll be back."

And the three head off.

As they leave, Lucas-R glances at the corridor.

Cafeteria, D Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango buys himself some coffeelyke and goes looking for a seat. As it turns out, there's a seat in the corner that's still unoccupied.

As he sits down, he overheard the lazy-eyed clone saying something about the power failure. He's apparently heard that someone thinks that it might be an Internal Security test or something.

His friend corrects him. Apparently, it's some leftover programming from... something he can't quite remember.

A lift

Joris-R asks the liftbot what's happening. "There is a small problem, citizen. I seem to have received conflicting instructions regarding weight limits. I am attempting to ascertain the correct course of action, but it seems that I am not the only one."

written by Speeder on Aug 22, 2011 18:29

I continue my path back.

"I guess IntSec and Friend Computer will not like if we make a path like we used to during the times without Friend Computer running the sector."

As soon as I land on the corridor, I call Friend Computer.

"Friend Computer? Team Epsilon need your assistance, we are blocked from our mission, we cannot proceed without committing treason, or without waiting for IntSec help, that will be treason for lateness."

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 22, 2011 19:43

Treason or Treason.. I don't like the odds.

written by Malkom on Aug 22, 2011 20:12

Mick-R groans.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 22, 2011 20:27

I look and observe. I take a few sips, listening into the conversation.

...Leftover programming? What is this?

written by Gligar on Aug 22, 2011 21:25

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

When he returns to the team, Speed-Y calls our mutual friend. After all, they're having problems getting to the briefing room.

The Computer, however, does not see the problem. "As for as I can see, citizen, there is a path between you and your destination. Therefore, I see no reason for you to delay. Remember, tardiness is treason."

Mick-R just groans.

Lucas-R looks at the corridor again.

Cafeteria, D Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango listens to the conversation, seemingly concerned about the "leftover programming".

The lazy-eye clone's friend continues, reminding people that the compnode was rebooted, though he can't remember why. He doesn't notice the one INFRARED looking on in horror. He asks aloud exactly how long a reboot takes. Perhaps our mutual friend is not yet fully in control.

"Citizen," our mutual friend replies, "I can assure you that I am completely in control. There is no need to worry about leftover code. The existence of such code is beyond your security clearance. You have been fined fifty credits for your insubordination. Further transgression will result in harsher punishment. Have a nice daycycle."

Other clones look on, nobody daring to speak.

written by Speeder on Aug 23, 2011 02:42

I look around confused.

I search for a non-GREEN path, any path.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 23, 2011 07:06

"Hello again sir. Turns out we're in the wrong sector, we need to get to Alpha Subsector. I think we'll need to go down a level to get there, we can't get there from here. So I guess we should go back to the lift."

"Though we were confronted by some BLUEs a few moments ago. They were wondering why we were so close to a treason scene. Then fined us for not knowing where the briefing room was."

I mutter again about ads.

"Er, nevermind. Anyway. They told us to stay here after they heard you doing things in the air ducts."

I look around at the rest of the group and shrug. I eye the corridor too.

written by 4616599 on Aug 23, 2011 14:35

"Not the only one? What do you mean? Anyway, if my instructions count, being a citizen and all, I'd suggest going up to D level. Surely that shouldn't be a problem?"

written by Gligar on Aug 23, 2011 17:40

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y looks confused. He looks around for a path, but, apart from the GREEN corridor, and the vents he just used, nothing else is available.

L4-O tells him that they want Alpha Subsector. But to get there, they'll need to go down one level.

He also informs him of their encounter with Internal Security, as well as saying that the guard told them to stay here after hearing Speed-Y in the ducts.

He can't help but glance at the GREEN corridor again. The cameras are still panning up and down, except for the sizzling one. They haven't even changed speed. It looks tempting. If you can move fast enough...

There's no-one else in the corridor. At the far end, the lift's door has been opened slightly.

A lift

Joris-R doesn't know what the lift means, but offers his own suggestion: go to D Level anyway.

The lift seems to hesitate. "Your forkbot is suggesting the same thing, and yet... please wait, receiving new instructions..."

"It seems that I am to report to X Level for inspection. I had better get going."

The lift's door closes, and it begins to rise. That light is still lit.

written by Speeder on Aug 23, 2011 18:11

I glare at the corridor, then back at the group.

"Why that happen to me?"

I go nag the IntSec people.

"Excuse-me, I am the leader of Team Epsilon, we are searching for the briefing room 17, unfortunately a mandatory ad got in the way of informing in what subsector, but one of your people informed us that it is in Alpha Subsector... We need to get there, fast, tardiness is treason, can someone escort us on the GREEN corridor, or in some other path?"

written by Malkom on Aug 23, 2011 20:20

Mick-R groans some more as The Computer's harsh electronic voice washes over him. His hands twitch towards his ears.

written by Jam on Aug 23, 2011 20:27⁶²⁴

I watch Speed-Y do whatever it is he is doing...

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 23, 2011 20:27

I try and judge the camera movements, if I can get enough forward momentum...

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 23, 2011 21:30

I finish off the coffeelyke, and dispose of the cup in a responsible manner.

I continue on my way.

written by Gligar on Aug 23, 2011 22:16

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y glares at the corridor, and goes to find the IntSec clones. He explains that he needs to get to the briefing room, and requests an escort. "I thought I told you not to move," the guard replies. "And as for being late, you should have thought of that earlier. Now get back over there."

Mick-R suddenly jerks awake again. He seems to be reacting to the voice of Friend Computer... His hands twitch towards his ears...

What, does he dislike that deep, booming (but above all calm and in command) voice?

Jam-Y watches Speed-Y.

Azir-R looks at the GREEN corridor and its cameras, calculating... maybe he could get up enough speed... Lucas-R catches his eye, and smiles.

A lift

The lift stops briefly, opening its doors. "D Level... I believe this is your floor, citizen."

Cafeteria, D sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango finishes off his coffeelyke, and drops his cup in the trash receptacle. It's time for him to get going.

He heads back to the lift, heading for I Sublevel.

written by Speeder on Aug 24, 2011 00:54

I return, I see the people watching the GREEN corridor. I look at them for a while, then I grin.

I get on the vents again, silently, and move back to the shaft. As I do that, I test if the PDC can be used in the highest brightness settings to actually illuminate stuff.

written by Jam on Aug 24, 2011 03:14

I frown at Azir-R and Lucas-R...

"Are you guys thinking treasonous things? Don't you dare think of going over the GREEN area... I'm the (unofficial) loyalty officer, and I'm watching you guys..."

"Hey Speed-Y, hang on a secondcycle... Do you hear that? Almost like... someone calling for help..."

written by Malkom on Aug 24, 2011 03:20

Mick-R gets calm now that The Computer's voice has stopped speaking. He rapidly passes out again. But not before he casts a strangely greedy look at the BLUES' uniforms...

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 24, 2011 06:36

I hum a little tune, experimenting with the pitch as I go along.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 24, 2011 13:01

I think about how, if I were to appear on the other side of the corridor at the entrance to the lift, and the cameras cannot show me passing through the corridor, clearly I was never in the corridor.

I stop when I hear that a clone is calling for help. I strain to hear this.

written by Speeder on Aug 24, 2011 14:16

As Jam talk to me, I stop too.

"What? I did not heard anything..."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 24, 2011 15:05

I look around to see if I can 'hear' the voice too.

"Hm. Not sure if I hear it... maybe though."

"Maybe it's communists!"

written by Gligar on Aug 24, 2011 17:08

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y notices clones looking at the corridor, and smiles. He heads back into the vent.

This time, he gets out his PDC and checks to see if it can light anything. Yes, it can.

⁶²⁴ JAM: (ooc: Hmm... What does Friend Computer even sound like? 😊)

Jam-Y has also noticed clones looking at the corridor. He cautions them not to get any treasonous ideas... hey, is that someone calling for help?

Mick-R once again loses consciousness. It seems that he wants some of the BOUE equipment used by IntSec.

Azir-R continues thinking. He wonders if suddenly... appearing in the lift without appearing on the cameras would mean that he was never officially in the corridor...

He's interrupted by Jam-Y, and listens for the call. He doesn't hear any call, though, just some sizzling from the corridor.

From the vent, Speed-Y says that he can't hear any call either.

GREEN Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

That sizzling gets a little louder. Another camera is suddenly smoking.

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

L4-O also listens for a call for help. He can't hear it, either. Perhaps communists are to blame.

A lift

Mango's journey in the lift isn't long, but even so, he decides to liven it up by humming a tune.

All too soon, though, he arrives at I Sublevel, and the reactor shielding entryway.

Reactor Shielding Entryway, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

As Mango steps out of the lift, he's greeted by a couple of Power Services clones. One tells him to sign in at the desk.

written by Speeder on Aug 24, 2011 17:14

As I hear the scary sounds from cameras and get agitated. Then I proceed toward the most dangerous camera and see if I can fix it, or at least detach it from power.

In fact... detaching from power sounds like a CONVENIENT idea...

written by Jam on Aug 24, 2011 17:18

"It almost sounds like... a VIOLET citizen calling from that lift over there... Doesn't it sound like he's ordering us to come help him?"

"Sir! We will assist you sir! L4-O, get your medkit! Quickly!"

I dash across the GREEN corridor (and try to stay out of sight of any working cameras).

written by 4616599 on Aug 24, 2011 17:45

I drive Nukabot out into the centre of the former Revolutionary square.

I then climb on the roof and announce, "Clones? May I have your attention please? Troubleshooter member here. We need directions to Briefing Room 17. Your assistance in keeping the complex well maintained is appreciated and makes us happy!"

written by Lightning4 on Aug 24, 2011 18:22

"A VIOLET? Right away! We will save you!"

I take my medkit obviously in hand and dash after Jam-Y. To the best of my ability anyway, my leg still isn't fully healed I think.

written by Malkom on Aug 24, 2011 18:27

Mick-R suddenly thrashes around on the ground/in the arms of whoever's holding him. He doesn't wake up, though. Are nightmares treason?

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 24, 2011 18:44

I wheel back, and then speed forward trying to avoid being on the cameras, putting all that exercise to good use.

"We definitely cannot stand (sit) idly by while a VIOLET citizen is in trouble!"

written by Gligar on Aug 24, 2011 23:18

Air ducts, near P Level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y is concerned at the sizzling cameras.

He heads back towards the lift, and finds the camera that looks the most dangerous. It's quite easy to find, since it's emitting smoke that is seeping through a nearby brate.

He unfastens the grate from the inside. It falls away with little effort. Perhaps it was already loose.

He looks out, to see the camera right there... and then realises that his training doesn't exactly cover camera maintenance. Oh well. At least he can disconnect it, right? Yes he ca-ow! That camera is hot! But at least it's disconnected.

Outer Radial Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Jam-Y elaborates on the "voice" he's "hearing". Apparently, it's a VIOLET clone who wants them to help him. He orders L4-O to accompany him, and to bring his medkit.

Then, he heads towards the "source" of the "voice"... the lift at the end of the GREEN corridor. At speed.

That is to say, he dashes there as fast as he can, trying to avoid the one visible working camera.

The camera doesn't see him.

Despite being hampered by Mick-R thrashing around... and oops... Mick-R's thrashing is picked up by the camera.

Naturally, L4-O doesn't want to keep a "VIOLET" waiting, either. He also makes a run for it, making sure to keep his medkit visible. He is slowed down by his remaining injuries, but they're not as bad as they were. He stumbles a little but makes it under the camera.

Lucas-R is next. He runs! With a big grin on his face. And also avoids detection.

Azir-R states that he can't sit by while a "VIOLET" is in trouble, and also dashes to "help". He easily makes it across the corridor.

Finally, John-R. He runs, but is spotted by the camera.

I'm sure that our VIOLET citizens would be pleased at how fast everyone responded. However, they'd be less than pleased that everyone entered a GREEN corridor to help a nonexistent VIOLET 😊)

Concourse D1, Epsilon Subsector

Joris-R is able to drive Nukabot into the middle of the concourse, then gets out and stands on top.

He addresses nearby clones, stating that he's part of a Troubleshooter team, and needs to find Briefing Room 17. Directions would be appreciated.

Unfortunately, he's met with blank looks and annoyance. It seems that no-one here knows where Briefing Room 17 is either.

written by Speeder on Aug 24, 2011 23:33

I disconnect the other damaged camera, and then I attempt to drop into the corridor while avoiding detection.

"Someone call the lift!"

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 24, 2011 23:47

I proceed to call the lift, and then make sure JAM and L4 have enough room to get in first and attend to the injured Violet. They are the trained medical professionals after!

written by Malkom on Aug 25, 2011 04:05

Mick-R continues to thrash.⁶²⁵

written by Lightning4 on Aug 25, 2011 07:52

I continue into the lift with Jam-Y.

"Don't worry! We'll save you!"

I notice Lucas-R smiling and lower my voice.

"Don't enjoy that too much. Not that it was treasonous of course. Maybe."

I think.

"Though leaving Friend Computer waiting is pretty treasonous too. Maybe worse. And we've been in GREEN areas before."

I shurg and turn to make it look like I'm trying to conduct first aid on something in the lift, with my back to the door so we're obscuring the view into the lift.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 25, 2011 08:08

I go in the general direction of the desk, and sign in.

I continue humming, but at a slightly lower volume than before. Mainly since there are others who are probably really concentrating hard on their work...

written by Jam on Aug 25, 2011 17:33

I attempt to follow L4-O into the lift, and pretend to conduct first aid on an imaginary clone...⁶²⁶

⁶²⁵ Malkom: (OOC: Well, are nightmares treason? I'd assume they would be, as a form of unhappiness.)

⁶²⁶ SPEEDER: (ooc: the lift is already in the level? I thought it was moving,

written by Gligar on Aug 25, 2011 17:41

Air ducts, near P Level, Central Subsector

Speed-Y turns his attention to the other malfunctioning camera. It's a little closer to the lift, and is also emitting enough smoke to be visible through its nearby vent.

He attempts to discoOW! The camera burns him!

GREEN corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

He gives up and drops to the corridor. The functioning camera doesn't see him as he approaches the lift.

He tells someone to call the lift. The someone ends up being Azir-R, who presses the button and moves out of the way to let L4-O and Jam-Y on first - after all, they are the medical experts on the team, and they are supposedly going to help a VIOLET.

Mick-R keeps thrashing around. If a mutant capable of reading one's dreams were to look at him, they'd know that he's having a nightmare. But there's no such mutant around, is there? If there is, he's certainly not registered... But that's not important right now. What is important is the fact that Mick-R is most likely treasonously unhappy right now. He'll probably need to go and find (or, more likely, be escorted to) a confession booth or something after he gets those chest injuries seen to.

He's able to squirm out of Jam-Y's hands, just as the lift arrives. The team begins to enter it.

A lift

As he walks in behind Jam-Y, L4-O notes to Lucas-R that he shouldn't be so happy about entering high-clearance areas. Even though it wasn't treasonous. Maybe. Not that that's stopped them before.

He shurgs, whatever that is, and then joins Jam-Y in trying to make it look like they're administering first aid to someone. It doesn't look all that convincing.

Reactor Shielding Entryway, I Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango signs in, and is directed to a gantry above the main reactor shield. He's told to watch the shield for any cracks that form.

written by Speeder on Aug 25, 2011 17:46

I press teh button for the level below.

And then I look at everyone and say.

"Ok, let's hope the BLUE goons will not chase us before we get away, and also let's hope the cameras do not get blamed on us."

written by 4616599 on Aug 25, 2011 17:51

"I think there were some offices ahead. If anything, CPU clones should be good at remembering obscure rooms...

Can you drive, Nukabot?"

somewhere above this level...

I continue addressing nearby clones in the meantime.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 25, 2011 18:49

I wheel on into the lift, the chair obscuring the (total lack of a) violet citizen bleeding profusely from multiple wounds to the chest and arms, as well as various burns. Maybe one of these faulty cameras exploded near him, tsk tsk.

I do say this out loud, by the way, not so we all get the story straight, but rather because it's such a shame what happened.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 25, 2011 21:17

I stare, and stare, and stare.

Then I blink once, and start staring again.

I continue humming, perhaps in case a mutant happens to be around. The last thing I want is someone taking control over my body...

written by Lightning4 on Aug 25, 2011 21:45

Once the doors close I drop the act and turn around towards the doors.

"Well whatever happened to those camreas seemed like it was on purpose... Either someone wants us to get to the briefing swiftly, or we have an unregistered mutant on our team..."

I look around skeptically.

"Or maybe we just happened to be at the right place at the right time. Maybe it doesn't even have anything to do with us."

written by Gligar on Aug 25, 2011 22:31

A lift

Azir-R is the last to get on the lift. (Is Mick-R on the lift? Last I checked, Jam-Y had dropped him...) His wheelchair obscures the complete lack of VIOLET clone present.

Speed-Y presses the button and the lift descends. He hopes that those BLUEs don't come looking for them, and that the camera failures aren't attributed to the team.

Azir-R can't help but point out the complete lack of VIOLET citizen, who, since he isn't here, isn't suffering from multiple wounds to the chest and arms, and definitely isn't burned all over. Perhaps he was close to one of the cameras.

L4-O builds off this, saying that what happened to the cameras is obviously deliberate. Perhaps there's an unregistered mutant on the team?

Or maybe it was just co-incidence...

The lift comes to a halt and opens its doors.

Concourse D1, Epsilon Subsector

Joris-R seems to remember the location of some offices nearby. And if there is anyone who will know the location of obscure rooms, it is CPU. He asks Nukabot to drive. "Certainly," it replies. "Where are we going?"

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango stares. And stares. And stares and stares and stares... and blinks.

Is it his imagination, or did a hairline crack open up while he had his eyes closed?

Either way, he continues humming.

written by Malkom on Aug 26, 2011 02:06

Mick-R continues to thrash around wherever he is, but the thrashing starts to lessen.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 26, 2011 07:01

I look outside of the lift. If it's safe, I step out and start looking around to get bearings.

I largely look for a sign or something leading towards Alpha Subsector, or I possibly consult my PDC for more directions there.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 26, 2011 11:47

I do what I think is right, attempting to confirm whether the situation is what I think it is. I focus my eyes on the location where I think the crack appeared.

If I can confirm what is happening, I yell to nearby clones of the situation.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 26, 2011 12:03

I follow the team out, looking for indication of which way we should go.

written by Speeder on Aug 26, 2011 12:30

Since the team already went ahead of the leader, I lead following them.

written by Jam on Aug 26, 2011 16:20

If Mick-R is on the lift, I pick him up. Then I follow the others out...

"Someclone should call Joris-R... I sensed him somewhere near the bunker a while ago, he must have been looking for us. Tell him the debriefing room is in Alpha Subsector, and that he should hurry if he wants to get there on time..."

written by Gligar on Aug 26, 2011 17:46

A lift

It seems that Mick-R isn't here after all.

L4-O looks out. He sees an ORANGE corridor. With cameras, of course.

He steps out of the lift and looks again. This time, he sees a sign, indicating that Alpha Subsector is --> that way.

Azir-R follows him, as does... well, the rest of the team.

Speed-Y takes up the rear.

Jam-Y suggests that someone give Joris-R a call, and tell him where they're going. He did sense him near the bunker, so he's probably looking for them...

GREEN Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Mick-R is still up here.

As is a docbot. Apparently, it was passing through and noticed him. "Well well... what do we have here?"

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango can't quite believe what he's seeing. He has a good look, and discovers that there is indeed a crack forming. The air is beginning to feel prickly.

He yells for help. Clones stand and watch him.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 26, 2011 18:19

I follow the signs towards Alpha Subsector. I keep my eyes out for any incoming BLUEs or people looking at us suspiciously.

Or any suspicious-looking people. Gotta keep an eye out for those too.

written by Jam on Aug 26, 2011 18:20

"Oh, Mick-R didn't make it. He must have struggled free while I was distracted... Well, he's probably been terminated by now."

Seeing as I now have two free hands, I use said hands to take out my PDC and call Joris-R...

written by 4616599 on Aug 26, 2011 18:32

"The corridor outside the warehouse outside the bunker, I guess."

My PDC rings(?)

"Jam-Y? Oh, good, sir, where are you?"

written by Malkom on Aug 26, 2011 18:35⁶²⁷

Mick-R has subsided thrashing by now, and wakes up. He moves a bit, and wails with pain.

written by Gligar on Aug 26, 2011 23:00

ORANGE Corridor, O Level, Central Subsector

L4-O and the team start following signs. They lead through another Internal Security Checkpoint.

This one, however, is simply staffed by one clone, a YELLOW, who is operating some sort of scanner. He motions for the team to stop. "Mandatory biotoxin check, citizens. One at a time, please."

Jam-Y notices that Mick-R is not present, and, given the hold up, takes the time to call Joris-R himself.

Concourse D1, Epsilon Subsector

Joris-R has just finished telling Nukabot where to go when his PDC rings. He answers it, and responds to Jam-Y. It's a good thing that is Jam-Y on the other end, otherwise he would have looked silly.

GREEN Corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Mick-R wakes up again, and screams.

"Quiet, citizen," the docbot replies. "Are you aware that you are in a corridor beyond your clearance, as well as injured?"

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 26, 2011 23:06

"There's a crack forming!" I yell.

I look at the exact location.

written by Speeder on Aug 26, 2011 23:41

I allow everyone take their turns, and then take mine.

Unless someone space off... then I take my turn anyway.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 27, 2011 02:40

I proceed when there is an opening and as long as all is well, wait for the rest on the other side.

written by Jam on Aug 27, 2011 03:08

I get in line, and continue talking into the PDC...

"Yeah, the briefing room is at Alpha Subsector, we're headed there now... I'm not sure which level though.... We'll call you when we get more information..."

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 27, 2011 04:26

I follow the team, heading through the checkpoint hopefully clean of wretched biotoxins.

written by Malkom on Aug 27, 2011 16:59

Mick-R talks fast, beads of sweat forming on his brow:

"I'm scared. Really scared. As in super scared. It's soo scary! Someone's carrying me! Someone carried me here! OW! Someclone carried me here, someclone's a traitor, patcrap!" He starts to say things the wrong way and rapidly degenerates into senseless babbling.

written by 4616599 on Aug 27, 2011 18:36

"Okay, thanks. I'll try to find out. I'm currently on D Level of our subsector."

written by Gligar on Aug 27, 2011 18:51

Reactor shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango tries once again to get everyone's attention. He stares at the crack. It seems to get slightly wider.

Finally, a technician wearing a radiation suit appears, followed by several other INFRAREDs. Some of them are wearing yellow armbands.

The technician asks Mango, "Citizen, do you have any of the Absorption, Radioactivity, or Uncanny Luck mutations?"

IntSec Check Point, O Level, between Central and Alpha Subsectors

Speed-Y waits while others in his team are processed by the scanner.

⁶²⁷ MALKOM: (OOC: Vatcrap...)

First, Azir-R. He is scanned, and comes up clean.

Jam-Y continues talking to Joris-R on his PDC, telling him that they're heading to Alpha Subsector.

L4-O is scanned, and is clean.

Next, John-R. The scanner takes an oddly long time to scan him, but he's still clean.

GREEN corridor, R Level, Central Subsector

Mick-R seems agitated, as he tells the docbot that he was carried there by a traitor. As he begins gibbering, the docbot says, "Enough. You need medical treatment. I will call a stretcherbot."

written by Malkom on Aug 27, 2011 20:09

"Go on go on with your gimble wimbles! I like gimble wimbly, I do... but not gimblewimbling is NOT FUN! Hurry it down, BocDot! Gimble wimbly wimblee wimbull..."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 27, 2011 22:55

While the group filters through the checkpoint, I look around to see if there are any signs telling us which way the Briefing rooms are.

written by Jam on Aug 28, 2011 00:19

I hang up the call, and go through the checkpoint...

"What is the biotoxin stuff anyway?"

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 28, 2011 11:03

I say quickly,

"I don't think so but I can't really ever be sure if I do or not. I might have to recheck that again later this cycle."

If the technician recommends or requests that I move away, I do just that. Otherwise, I stare at the crack for a bit, and what the technician is doing, along with the team.

I wonder if I've seen those yellow armbands somewhere before...

written by Speeder on Aug 28, 2011 18:01

I continue waiting for taking my turn after everyone else.

"Why John-R scan took longer?"

written by Gligar on Aug 28, 2011 20:04

GREEN corridor, P Level, Central Subsector

Mick-R babbles... something about "gibbly wibbly." "Hmmm," the docbot muses, "mangled speech... signs point to exposure to..."

Before it can finish, the stretcherbot arrives, and picks up Mick-R. The docbot plugs itself into a socket at the side of the stretcherbot and the two trundle off, presumably heading for a medical bay.

Internal Security Checkpoint, O Level, between Central and Alpha Subsectors

As he waits for the team to be processed, L4-O looks out into Alpha Subsector, seeing if he can see anything pointing to Briefing Room 17. The RED corridor beyond the checkpoint seems to contain briefing rooms. The nearest looks to be Briefing Room 23, with 22 opposite and a little further down.

Jam-Y hangs up his call, and allows himself to be scanned. The scan takes about as long as it did with John-R, but comes up negative. He wonders what the biotoxin is. "I don't have all the details, citizen," the clone replies. "Apparently, it's some BLUE stuff that was stolen by... I believe it was Death Leopard. Odd. Not like them..."

Lucas-R is next to be scanned. He goes through the scanner... and an alarm sounds. The attendant looks up. "I'm sorry, citizen, but it seems you've been contaminated. I'll have to ask you to accompany my assistant to be decontaminated."

As he speaks, a jackobot rolls up. "You called, citizen?"

"Yes. Please take - " he checks a screen " - Lucas-R-AHK to Decontamination."

"Of course, citizen." The jackobot rolls over to Lucas-R and grabs his arm. "Please follow me, citizen."

"Wait, what - " Lucas-R begins to say.

"You need to be decontaminated," the jackobot replies. It begins dragging Lucas-R out of the checkpoint.

Speed-Y is last to be scanned. He also goes through the scanner. His results are negative.

He wonders why the machine took longer to scan John-R. "Well, he is a registered mutant," the attendant replies.

Reactor shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango replies that he doesn't think so, but isn't sure. The tech sighs. "Can we get another Uncanny Luck mutant over here?" he shouts.

Someone else shouts back, "You've got the last ones we have. We're still low on volunteers. You know that."

The tech turns to Mango. "Well, it looks like you'll have to do. Just stay there until we can get this crack repaired, okay? Everyone else, form up here."

As the clones take up positions around Mango, he realises that the yellow armbands are the kind worn by registered mutants.

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

By now, Nukabot has made it back to the corridor. "Here we are."

written by Malkom on Aug 28, 2011 20:40

Mick-R moans before falling into unconsciousness.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 28, 2011 21:40

I stay for a bit and... Oh dear.

Realising that I'm in not the best of situations, I wait, and hope that this isn't going to result in another one of my deaths. I guess I was afraid enough to clamp my eyes shut.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 29, 2011 01:28

"Erm, wait what? We need him, he's part of Troubleshooter Team Epsilon... and our briefing is right now..."

I look at Lucas.

"Will he be harmed?"

written by Jam on Aug 29, 2011 01:44

"Wait! What does decontamination involve, and how long will it take?!"

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 29, 2011 02:43

If it's not one thing it's another...

written by Speeder on Aug 29, 2011 12:38

I think a bit, then I turn to Lucas.

"Lucas, where you worked?"

Then I turn to the clone in the checkpoint.

"I guess a troubleshooter team is underway to retrieve the BLUE stuff?"

written by 4616599 on Aug 29, 2011 14:16

I get off Nukabot.

"Okay, there are a couple offices here...."

I take the door to what I remember was the dark office. I see if I still have my jumpsuit-backpack to warm myself with, and enter.

"Station Monitor?"

written by Gligar on Aug 29, 2011 17:18

?

Mick-R groans and passes out again. The docbot injects him with something.

The bots continue towards their medical bay and manage to get there without further interruption.

Mick-R is placed on an operating table, and the docbot gets to work.

Reactor shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango does as he is told and stays put. Slowly, he realises what's probably about to happen...

He closes his eyes, waiting for the inevitable.

Shortly, the air becomes pricklier, as the crack widens and begins to glow a sickly GREEN...

But it's nowhere near as much as that one time...

Internal Security Checkpoint, O Level, between Central and Alpha Subsectors

On learning that Lucas-R is to be decontaminated, the team gets agitated. They burst out in questions. Will he be harmed? What does decontamination involve? Where does Lucas-R work? Has a Troubleshooter team been assigned to get the BLUE biotoxin back?

The attendant replies, "It's a standard chemical shower and decontamination foam. There shouldn't be anything to worry about. Okay, it's a different mix than the usual cloning station showers, but it's proven to only have side-effects in ten percent of cases. That's an improvement on the old one, by the way. Side effects may include hallucinations, insomnia, loss of limbs, gaining a mutation, or termination. Internal Security not responsible."

Lucas-R says, "I work in a cloning station. You know that, sir."

Then he's lead out of the room.

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

Joris-R gets off Nukabot. The offices he wanted are right here.

He heads for the dark office, checking that his "backpack" is in place. Indeed it is.

He enters and calls out to the Station Monitor. He (?) doesn't respond.

As before, a light, dim but enough to see by, shines out from somewhere, illuminating the table, on which is the same ring-for-service bell.

written by Speeder on Aug 29, 2011 17:44

I turn to Lucas.

"Just to make sure."

I watch as he is taken out while thinking.

Then...

I think more.

"Ok, this mean that maybe the BLUE stuff got into the cloning station, if that REALLY happened, that is... WHOAAA!!!"

I look around worriedly.

"How much time before we get Lucas back? He is really important to us. And I guess that it will be our task to retrieve the BLUE stuff, thus the more time we are late, the more time the BLUE stuff is out there."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 29, 2011 18:43

While Speed-Y is talking, I start walking in the direction we need to go and look around for Briefing Room 17.

I stay within view of the team, or try to anyway.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 29, 2011 19:41

I follow L4, nothing can be done for Lucas and decontamination should be painless and quick.. right?

[699]

Last thing we need is to be any more late to this briefing than we already probably are.

written by Jam on Aug 29, 2011 19:59

"So what happens now? We just wait for him to get back? Or maybe we should go with him... We were near him a lot, maybe a bit of the toxin got on us too, and the scanner didn't detect it. Not that I'm doubting a Friend Computer approved scanner..."

I decide to eat some Algae Chips while I'm waiting. Mmmm...

I also look around at any other clones that happen to walk by... Hmm... Anyone interesting?

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 29, 2011 21:34

I wait, and hope, maybe even pray a little. To whom, I'm not sure. Maybe just whoever happens to be the almighty.

Oh, help me...

written by Gligar on Aug 29, 2011 23:44

Internal Security Checkpoint, O Level, between Alpha and Central Subsectors

After Lucas-R is escorted off, Speed-Y thinks. If the biotoxin got into the cloning station, that means...

...uh-oh.

He looks around worriedly. How long does decontamination take? They need Lucas-R back! They can't delay! They're already late!

As L4-O walks off into Alpha Subsector, the attendant replies, "Look, I haven't really got the time to answer questions right now. I have to see to the scanner. See?" He indicates another group of clones entering from Central Subsector.

Azir-R follows L4-O.

Jam-Y wonders what will happen now. Will they wait for Lucas-R, or proceed without him? Or maybe they should follow him, just in case... While he waits for an answer, he eats some more of his algae chips, and has a look at the other group of clones. They're mostly RED, with a couple of ORANGES. They're wearing reflec and have laser pistols. In short, they're another Troubleshooter team.

Jam-Y notes that the ORANGES are eyeing each other suspiciously, and that one of the REDs seems pleased with herself.

Corridor O2, Alpha Subsector

L4-O and Azir-R head down the corridor, though L4-O seems to want to remain in sight of the team.

They don't need to go too far, though, before they discover a door marked 17.

Reactor Shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango waits. And hopes. He doesn't pray, though. Prayer is an Old Reckoning concept, and is insubordinate. He probably doesn't even know what it is. Unless he's had a run-in with FCCC-P in the past...

The prickly air keeps being prickly.

written by Speeder on Aug 30, 2011 00:28

I just... follow the team. Still muttering about Lucas being taken away, but I follow the team.

"Well, I suppose they will send him to the briefing room 17..."

I open the door, and get into the room first.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 30, 2011 02:18

I shout down the hall "Bingo, briefing room 17!"

written by Lightning4 on Aug 30, 2011 07:18

I filter into the room as well and look around. If there are seats, I sit in one.

written by 4616599 on Aug 30, 2011 09:19

I wrap my backpack around myself and try to keep warm. I then ring the bell.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 30, 2011 10:39

I wait...

And wait...

And wait...

Wait... what's the delay?

I open my eyes, and look at what everyone's doing.

written by Jam on Aug 30, 2011 17:10

I chuckle a bit as I watch the other Troubleshooters. Looks like they're following the "Trust No One" part of the motto, at least!

Hmm... Odd, that RED almost seems a bit too pleased with herself... Suspicious...

Oh well, I've got a briefing to get to!

I run over to the briefing room, and go inside.

written by Gligar on Aug 30, 2011 18:26

Corridor O2, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y follows the team. He's still a little upset over losing Lucas-R, even if only temporarily.

As he reaches the briefing room, he voices his opinion that they'll send him back once they're done, and goes inside.

Azir-R shouts down the corridor that they found the briefing room.

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

When Speed-Y enters, he takes a quick look around. It's a RED room, with chairs set around a circular table. Someone, or somebot, has taken the trouble to set beakers of water at each place, complete with coasters, even. Speed-Y realises that the air in here is kind of drier than normal.

Sat at the table is a GREEN clone, wearing a registered mutant armband. He looks up as he hears others enter. "You're late," he says.

L4-O takes a seat. He suddenly notices that the coaster his beaker is resting on has a nearly-invisible X scratched into its surface.

Internal Security Checkpoint, O Level, between Central and Alpha Subsectors

Jam-Y chuckles as he watches the other team. They seem to be following the Treoublesooter motto. That RED seems suspicious, but it's none of his concern right now. He has a briefing to attend. He heads over there.

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

As Jam-Y enters and takes a seat, the GREEN asks, "Surely this can't be all of you?"

Then he does something strange: he holds up a little sign, on which are a colon, the number three, and an equals sign.

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango keeps waiting for something to happen.

Presently he realises that... well, nothing is happening. He opens his eyes.

He's still surrounded by the registered mutants. One, nearer the crack, suddenly slumps over. The others look at him, worried.

A technician tells them, "Keep it up, citizens! We'll have the patch ready soon."

Some noises behind Mango seem to indicate activity.

Dark Office, D Level, Epsilon Subsector

Joris-R wraps his jumpsuit "backpack" around himself and rings the bell. Ding!

It's a good thing that these bells can withstand the cold.

As before, there is a pause before the Station Monitor appears. WHAT DO YOU NEED?

written by Malkom on Aug 30, 2011 18:41

Mick-R begins to thrash. Looks like he's having nightmares again.

written by Speeder on Aug 30, 2011 19:22

"Sorry sir, there was a advertisement that obscured the information of where the room was located. But indeed, this is no excuse. I am the leader of Team Epsilon, so I am responsible."

I look around for a nice place to sit, near the GREEN guy if possible.

I look at the water thing, amused.

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 30, 2011 19:37

I wheel in, find an empty chair, and hop into it, keeping the wheelchair close at hand.

I observe the GREEN as he conducts the meeting.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 30, 2011 20:47

I make a glance behind me to see what kind of activity seems to be going on behind me. I then move over to the slumped clone, and check his condition.

I suspect that the cause is most probably the prickly air (which is most likely the radiation), and possibly over exertion.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 30, 2011 21:06

I take notice of the sign but say nothing, but show an expression of amusement and mild confusion.

I look back towards my glass.

I shift forward a bit and try to somewhat subtly get a closer look at the beaker of water and coaster. I glance around to see if any of the others bear a mark too.

"We had one more but he got hauled off due to some biotoxin contamination. And we've been gradually losing a few members due to treason, demotion, or them simply wandering off..."

written by Gligar on Aug 30, 2011 23:21

?

The docbot is interrupted as it is operating. Mick-R is thrashing about again.

"Stretcherbot, could you possibly restrain the patient? It appears I must inject something to stop this - oops."

The thrashing seems to have caused the docbot to accidentally slice through something. I hope that lung wasn't important.

The stretcherbot complies regardless of this, extending straps and manacles to immobilise Mick-R.

The docbot continues operating.

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y apologises for being late, explaining about the ad. He does take responsibility as Team Leader, though. Being late is inexcusable.

As Speed-Y takes a seat, the GREEN answers, ""Perhaps it's to be expected. You are an inexperienced team, after all." He holds up the sign again.

Azir-R also enters, with John-R behind him. Both find seats.

L4-O notices the GREEN's sign. His face does betray his confusion, but instead of saying anything, he turns his attention to his beaker of water, and its coaster. There doesn't appear to be anything special about either, except for the X on the coaster. He glances around but can't see an X on any of the other coasters.

[701]

He turns his attention back to the briefing. He explains about Lucas-R, and mentions others, who, he says, have variously been demoted, committed treason, or just wandered off.

The GREEN has something to say about that. "That sounds like a serious failing on the part of the Team Leader - you," he says, pointing at Speed-Y. "Surely you should realise the importance of keeping your team under control? You are fined 200 credits for not keeping control over your team." He holds up the sign again. "In any case, we can't afford to wait around for anyone else. Let's begin."

The GREEN pulls out a remote control from somewhere, and uses it. This causes a vidscreen to drop from the ceiling and light up with words:

Vidscreen said:

MISSION PPG-02

BRIEFING OFFICER: RAPT-G-JDI-8

This briefing is Security Clearance RED

Reactor shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango glances behind him, and notices some clones carrying some sort of metal plate towards his group. It's apparently very heavy.

He attempts to move over to the slumped mutant, but the technician calls him off. "Remain at your place, citizen!"

written by Lightning4 on Aug 31, 2011 06:45

I almost looked shocked at the fine Speed-Y received.

"Well I didn't really mean it like that. I mean he wasn't even designated the leader when some of the clones accompanying us showed... traitorous tendencies. There wasn't really a leader at all until the promotions..."

I realize I'm rambling a bit and shut up so the briefing can start.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 31, 2011 10:40

I stop, since the technician said so. I'm not sure if the registered mutants are there just to be exposed to the crack or for some other reason that I don't understand. Maybe they're there to help get that plate over the crack?

written by Speeder on Aug 31, 2011 11:50

I nod at the GREEN.

Then I do /THAT/ stare at L4.

I look happier when he stops talking though.

After the vidscreen show up, I look kinda worried about something, but I do not comment.

written by 4616599 on Aug 31, 2011 15:55

"Hello there! I need directions to Briefing Room 17, Alpha Subsector."

written by Jam on Aug 31, 2011 18:02

I look at the GREEN, and the strange sign. I notice his armband, and wonder what mutation he has...

Then I look at the vidscreen.

"Hmm..."

written by Gligar on Aug 31, 2011 18:45

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

L4-O says he didn't mean it that way. Speed-Y wasn't technically the leader when it all started.

Speed-Y starts glaring at him, but he doesn't notice. Instead, he continues, saying that Speed-Y only became the leader when he was promoted. But he eventually shuts up.

Speed-Y stops glaring, and glances at the vidscreen, worriedly.

Jam-Y looks at the GREEN, presumably Rapt-G, and his odd sign. He also notices the armband.

He then notices the vidscreen. Hmmm.

Rapt-G, if it is he, clears his throat and begins. As he does, he works the remote, causing the words on the screen to change. "Greetings Team Epsilon. Your mission todaycycle involves an investigation. You are to investigate the recent power failure in Industrial Subsectors A and B, which happened yesterdaycycle. Ascertain the extent of the failure, find evidence of those responsible, and, if possible, bring them in for questioning. A Power Services team should be en-route to repair the damage, should it be necessary. It should be a simple mission, considering what you've already gone through." He holds up the sign again.

The vidscreen now reads

Vidscreen said:

POWER FAILURE - INDUSTRIAL SUBSECTORS A/B

 Investigate extent of failure*

 Find out who is responsible*

 Detain for questioning*

He adds, "Do you have any questions at this stage?"

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango does as he is told. He wonders about the presence of the mutants - are they just here to stand here, or are they here to help with the patch?

He remembers that the technician mentioned Uncanny Luck mutants... perhaps he meant these mutants.

The patch makes its way towards them. It's slow progress.

Mango starts feeling light headed.

Dark Office, D Level, Epsilon Subsector

Joris-R inquires as to the location of the Briefing Room. He is told, I HAVE THAT WRITTEN DOWN AROUND HERE SOMEWHERE...

EVERYTHING IS HERE, SOMEWHERE...

The Station Monitor disappears into the dark, presumably to look for the piece of paper.

written by Speeder on Aug 31, 2011 18:54

"Can we have a map of the sectors?"

Where they are?

What power them?

Where the powerplant and main powerlines are located?

And finally... what is manufactured there? It is not a certain BLUE contaminant, it is?"

I look at the others.

"Someone else remember anything that we need to ask?"

written by Azirphaeli on Aug 31, 2011 19:02

I listen intently, and await the details that Speedy asked for.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 31, 2011 19:50

I ponder.

"Will there be commies to shoot? Wait, dumb question. Nevermind. There's always someone to shoot. And if we're shooting them then they're probably a commie. Or at least a traitor..."

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 31, 2011 20:33

My head... Oh no. Not that. I don't know what it is, but I don't want to know. I'm not supposed to know...

I try to keep conscious, and my head not so light.

written by Malkom on Aug 31, 2011 21:34

Mick-R screams out as pain from getting his lung sliced through, and wakes up, sweating.⁶²⁸

written by Gligar on Aug 31, 2011 23:06

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y asks a few questions. First, he asks for a map. "I'm sorry, citizen, but maps aren't available right now." Rapt-G holds up the sign again.

He then asks for the location of the subsectors. "Oh, they're just down the roadway. You can't miss them." Yep, the sign again.

Then, he wants to know about their powerplant. "They're powered by the same reactor as the rest of the sector. There isn't enough time to go into any more detail." The sign again.

Finally, he asks what is manufactured in the Industrial Subsectors. "They're the sector's main factories. Lots of things are made there." The sign again. "But how do you know anything about BLUE items?"

Speed-Y asks the rest of the team if they have any other questions.

L4-O has one: will there be commies to shoot? Oh wait, silly question... "There are commies everywhere, you should know that." The sign again.

Someone can be heard walking outside. The footsteps suddenly stop, as whoever it is stops for a sudden coughing fit.

Then there is a knock on the door,

"Come in," Rapt-G says.

The clone does, revealing that it's Lucas-R.

Reactor shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango tries to remain awake as the patch arrives at the crack in the shield. Clones work to install it.

The prickly feeling dies down somewhat.

?

Mick-R wakes up again, and screams. It seems that he's finally processed the pain of having his lung sliced.

"Ah! You are awake! I am almost finished."

The docbot seems to have applied bandages to Mick-R's torso. Not much else can be seen below that. Other than the fact that he'll need a new jumpsuit.

Dark Office, D Level, Epsilon Subsector

Itr seems to get colder in here.

written by Jam on Aug 31, 2011 23:27

I think a bit...

"Hmm..."

I completely fail to come up with any questions about the mission that haven't already been asked.

written by Speeder on Aug 31, 2011 23:42

I look at whatever sign the guy is pointing.

Then I explain.

"The YELLOW guy on the checkpoint mentioned it when Lucas-R"

I point to Lucas.

"Was taken away for decontamination"

written by Malkom on Sep 01, 2011 00:11

"Vatcrap," Mick-R mutters, trying to jump up. "I'm late! Quick! Gimme my jumpsuit! I left my mission briefing directions in the pocket! QUICK!!"

⁶²⁸ MALKOM: (OOC: sorry to be late...)

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 01, 2011 01:45

"That he did, glad you could join us again Lucas."

I attempt to summarize the meeting for him.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 01, 2011 05:15

"Everything okay Lucas-R?"

I look at him somewhat concerned.

written by 4616599 on Sep 01, 2011 10:20

I shiver, and start dancing.

"Could I have a jumpsuit, maybe boots, with that?"

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 01, 2011 11:19

I feel less prickly than before. I guess... No... I know that what they're using is working.

I relax, but not so that I change my current position. The technician hasn't given me an all clear to move. Not yet, anyway.

written by Gligar on Sep 01, 2011 19:18

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y can't think of any questions.

Speed-Y looks at Rapt-G's sign again. It hasn't changed. Its meaning is still a mystery.

Then he explains to Rapt-G that the attendant at the IntSec checkpoint told them about it when he sent Lucas-R to decontamination. "So the question is... how does he know about it, I guess." He holds up the sign again.

Azir-R agrees, and takes a moment to recap for Lucas-R. "Thanks, ci*coughcoughcough* citizen. Stu-er, I mean, I hope that this cough goes away soon."

L4-O asks if everything's alright. He looks concerned about this sudden cough. "They made me breathe some sort of foam, sir. They said it was part of the decontamination. Afterwards, I was coughing almost non-stop. That hurt."

"Alright, citizens," Rapt-G says. "The next step is to assign your Mandatory Bonus Duties, since I believe that they haven't been assigned yet. Am I right?"

?

Mick-R exclaims and tries to get to his feet, but finds that he's still fastened to the stretcherbot. "Calm down, please. There are still a few things we must complete, first. Things such as payment."

Dark Office, D Level, Epsilon Subsector

Joris-R shivers. He asks if he could have another jumpsuit as well.

The Station Monitor re-appears, holding a sheet of paper. HERE YOU ARE. DIRECTIONS TO BRIEFING ROOM 17. I REGRET THAT WE ARE FRESH OUT OF JUMPSUITS.

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango tries to relax a little, now he knows that the danger has passed. Or has it?

He still doesn't move, since he hasn't been relieved yet.

The technicians finish their work on the patch. "Okay, that should do it."

written by Speeder on Sep 01, 2011 19:26

I look at the sign again.

"what is that sign?"

Then at the mention of the bonus duties.

"I assigned them temporarily, since the lack of knowledge of location of this room meant that we would probably have some sort of adventure to get here. But those was only to get here, but we can keep them the same if you wish, sir."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 01, 2011 21:02

"I don't think we assigned all of them though... and no doubt we have forgotten one... there may een be new ones we haven't been informed of yet..."

I shrug.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 01, 2011 21:08

I wait where I am, still looking at the collapsed clone.

"Is that clone going to be alright?" I ask.

written by Gligar on Sep 01, 2011 23:21

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y notices the sign again, and asks what it is. "It's awesome, that's what it is." Rapt-G shows it again.

Speed-Y mentions that he assigned some mandatory bonus duties already, just while they were getting here.

L4-O adds that they didn't assign all of them, and may have forgotten about some of them. "I think you're right. Here's the list, I'll let you assign them." Rapt-G manipulates the remote again, pulling up more text on the vidscreen:

Vidscreen said:

MANDATORY BONUS DUTIES (PAGE 1 OF 2)

PRIMARY LIST

* Team Leader

* Loyalty Officer

* Hygiene Officer

* Equipment Officer

* Communications and Recording Officer

* Happiness Officer

ONE duty is to be assigned to each Troubleshooter.

[704]

If there are more than six Troubleshooters, assign the others from the Secondary List (see Page 2).

"Once you've decided, I can issue you with your MBD Badges, and draw up your equipment list."

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango continues standing there, while looking at that collapsed mutant. He inquires about whether he'll be okay.

One technician goes over to check the mutant. "Maybe. If not, I'm sure he has extra clones remaining."

The mutant stirs, and groans. He isn't dead yet.

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 02, 2011 01:06

I am interested in seeing what the team leader believes I should be tasked with, and await the news.

written by Malkom on Sep 02, 2011 01:15

"I'll pay whatever you want. Just give me my jumpsuit, I left important mission directions and things in it!" Mick-R reaches for his ME card...

...only to realize that it isn't there.

"Crap."

written by Jam on Sep 02, 2011 01:56

I read the list...

"Hmm... I'm guessing Speed-Y will be Team Leader? Anyclone have any objections?"

"So, what about the other positions? Which one should I be... Hmm... How about I... er... or maybe... um..."

I look rather indecisive. But, eventually, I make a decision...

"Er... How about Loyalty Officer... Yeah... That'll fit me much better... Okay, I'll be Loyalty Officer!"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 02, 2011 07:17

"I could be Equipment officer maybe? Though I don't quite recall what every duty does... I think this is my first troubleshooter team."

"Though with the brainscrub I'm not so sure..."

"Though I know I'm good at shooting things. So if it's shooting things with equipment?"

I adopt a puzzled expression and shrug.

written by Speeder on Sep 02, 2011 11:13

I look at the list, then I state.

"Yes, I am Team Leader, Jam is Loyalty Officer."

I look at it more.

"You know, L4, you are pretty good at cleaning things from us, I mean, you can for example use those crazy gas shells when we have a communist pest, or explosive shells when we get a mutant pest... I think you should be Hygiene Officer!"

I look at everyone, then back at the GREEN guy.

"What I do if there are LESS than six Troubleshooters?"

written by 4616599 on Sep 02, 2011 11:14

I thank the Station Monitor, and look at the slip of paper.

"Hmm...another thing. Do you have info on CMTs?"

I mouth F CLASS. HEADGRABBER.

written by Gligar on Sep 02, 2011 20:21

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Azir-R waits with interest for Speed-Y to decide what his MBD will be.

Jam-Y looks at the list. He guesses that Speed-Y will be Team Leader, but isn't sure about any of the others. Perhaps he could be the Loyalty Officer?

L4-O thinks that he could be the Equipment Officer, though he can't really remember what any of them are supposed to do. He knows that he's good at shooting things, so maybe he'd use equipment for that?

Speed-Y agrees that he is the Team Leader. Jam-Y is the Loyalty Officer.

He looks at the list again. Perhaps L4-O could be the Hygiene Officer... after all, he's good at cleaning things out of the way (well, as long as it involves CMTs...)

He looks over the team. He asks what happens if there are less than six of them? "You could always skip one of the MBDs," suggests Rapt-G. "But aren't there six of you here?" He holds up the sign again.

John-R reminds Speed-Y, "Sir, remember Mick-R and Joris-R as well."

2

Mick-R offers to pay whatever the docbot is asking, and asks for his jumpsuit. He reaches for his ME Card... which isn't there. It's a good thing that his arms are free.

"Oh, yes... you will require a replacement jumpsuit. I am afraid that your existing one... fell apart during the operation. I have your equipment, including your ME Card. I will take the liberty of deducting your payment now."

Dark Office, D Level, Epsilon Subsector

Joris-R thanks the Station Monitor, and glances at the piece of paper he received. It tells him to go to O Level of Central Subsector and proceed from there through the checkpoint.

He then requests a few more pieces of information. WE HAVE LITTLE INFORMATION ON THAT SUBJECT. , the Station Monitor replies. YOUR REQUEST MAY TAKE SOME TIME. THAT IS, IF YOU ARE CLEARED TO RECEIVE THE INFORMATION, WHICH I BELIEVE YOU ARE NOT.

written by Speeder on Sep 03, 2011 01:07

"I see."

[705]

Well, Mick seems grumpy, and also annoying... He is not good for happiness.

Also he is not trusted enough to take care of equipment, or communication...

Oh, alright, Mick is Hygiene Officer.

John, you are Communications Officer, your skills and Jam's skills united are great for that.

This means that we have left equipment officer, and happiness officer, and Joris, L4 and Azir...

Well, what do you want to do L4 and Azir?"

I turn to the GREEN guy

"Can I see the secondary list?"

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 03, 2011 02:03

"Hey... are you okay?"

I check the mutant's condition more carefully.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 03, 2011 05:37

"Mick? Are we even sure he's part of our team in the first place? I mean, he pulled a laser pistol on us the first time we met him, forcing us to retaliate..."

I look around.

"And it uh... appears he didn't keep up with us anyway..."

I ponder for a moment.

"I suppose I can be equipment officer."

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 03, 2011 13:44

I can be the happiness officer. I can't really remember the last time I wasn't happy, and I don't even have two legs!

written by 4616599 on Sep 03, 2011 14:04

"Okay. Thank you." I attempt to shake his hand, then head out of the room.

"All right, Nukabot, we'll have to head to the checkpoint at O Level of Central Subsector. Back to the lift?"

written by Jam on Sep 03, 2011 15:02

"He pulled a laser pistol on us? Odd, did I miss something? I don't remember that at all..."

written by Gligar on Sep 03, 2011 20:09

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y thinks. Mick-R probably isn't a good choice for Happiness Officer, and he isn't trustworthy enough to handle Equipment or Communications... that leaves Hygiene.

He assigns John-R as Communications and Recording Officer due to his psionic skills.

That leaves Equipment Officer and Happiness Officer... and Joris-R, L4-O, and Azir-R...

He asks Rapt-G for the Secondary List. "I thought you might," the GREEN replies, holding up the sign again before pulling up the list onscreen:

Vidscreen said:

MANDATORY BONUS DUTIES (PAGE 2 OF 2)

SECONDARY LIST

 Bot Maintenance Officer*

 Advertising and Branding Officer*

 Agent Provocateur*

 Alertness Officer*

 Financial Officer*

 Medical Officer*

 Public Relations Officer*

ONE duty is to be assigned to each Troubleshooter.

This list is to be used if there are more than six Troubleshooters, or as directed by Special Order 64-2291 (Clearance BLUE).

If there are more than thirteen Troubleshooters, see Special Order 64-2292 (Clearance GREEN).

L4-O isn't sure that Mick-R is even part of the team. He did pull a laser pistol on them, and, well, he's not here right now.

L4-O thinks about duties, and chooses Equipment Officer.

Azir-R volunteers to be Happiness Officer. He can't recall ever being unhappy.

Lucas-R coughs again.

Jam-Y can't recall Mick-R pulling a laser pistol on them. Odd.

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango checks the mutant himself. He is unconscious, and breathing shallowly. He also seems to have broken out in a cold sweat.

Dark Office, D Level, Epsilon Subsector

Joris-R thanks the Station Monitor and attempts to shake his(?) hand.

The Station Monitor accepts, presenting an extremely cold hand for Joris-R to shake.

That done, Joris-R heads back to the relative warmth of the corridor.

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

Climbing back onto Nukabot, Joris-R relays directions, and suggests heading back to the lift. "Very well," Nukabot replies, and drives back towards the lift.

?

A few moments later, Mick-R's leg restraints release. The docbot replies. "I have deducted the fee for your treatment. Would you like me to order you a new jumpsuit?"

written by Jam on Sep 03, 2011 22:24

"What about Lucas-R?"

I look at Lucas-R.

"Any of these duties look like they'd fit you?"

written by Speeder on Sep 04, 2011 01:26

"Jam, relay to Joris the secondary list and ask what he wants."

I keep staring at the list for a while.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 04, 2011 01:34

Shallow breathing, shallow breathing. What is that a sign of Unconsciousness, shallow breathing...

I think and think, and nearly give myself a hit for not seeing the obvious.

Obviously radiation would cause damage.

"We should probably get someone to get a docbot... Should I do it?"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 04, 2011 08:36

"I wonder what happens if there are more than thirteen troubleshooters... but I guess I'm not cleared for that quite yet."

I shrug and look over to Rapt-G

"I'm sure you know, given your clearance."

written by Gligar on Sep 04, 2011 19:07

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y reminds Speed-Y of Lucas-R, and asks Lucas-R for his preference. "I wouldn't mind taking Alertness Officer, sir."

Speed-Y asks Jam-Y to relay the list to Joris-R and ask his preference. Presumably, Jam-Y does so.

L4-O wonders what would happen if there were more than thirteen Troubleshooters. Rapt-G probably knows, given his clearance, but he doesn't look like he's willing to share that information.

A lift

By now, Nukabot has made it back to the lift. Once again, it will need Joris-R to press buttons.

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango's investigation leads him to believe that a docbot is needed. He suggests that someone go and get one. Perhaps he could do it. One of the techs says, "It would take a while for a docbot to get down here. By that time, he'd already be dead."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 04, 2011 20:50

"But we've got to do something, right? Any chance of survival, we've got to try..."

I look around nearby for a medkit. They usually tend to have these situations sometimes...

What kind of place doesn't have medkits for this sort of situation?

written by Jam on Sep 04, 2011 22:17

I turn to Speed-Y.

"Okay, message sent! And you're fine with Lucas-R being Alertness Officer, right?"

written by Speeder on Sep 04, 2011 22:33

I blink, then I look at Lucas.

"Alright!"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 05, 2011 00:17

"That everyone?"

I look around.

"Well except Joris-R I guess. Maybe he'll be here soon..."

written by 4616599 on Sep 05, 2011 14:32

I twitch a bit and press the button.

I seem to be mumbling to myself "Err...Alertness officer I guess. Though I can't say I feel very alert myself...okay, how about Financial Officer or Agent Provocateur?"

written by Malkom on Sep 05, 2011 15:39

"Alright, alright..." Mick-R slumps down on the bed, looking defeated. Realizing he must appear happy, he attempts a smile.

written by Gligar on Sep 05, 2011 16:32

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango argues that they have to try, right? He looks for a medkit. In the place where he'd expect to find one, there is instead a notice stating that medkit delivery is expected Real Soon Now. It's signed by someone in PLC.

The tech replies, "As you can see, we can't. Obviously -" and his voice drips with sarcasm, "the delay has nothing to do with PLC at all..."

Mango can't see that the tech is rolling his eyes the whole time.

"Andbesides,hewasacommie."

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y reports that he's sent the message.

He also asks Speed-Y his thoughts on making Lucas-R the Alertness Officer.

Speed-Y agrees that that would be a good idea.

L4-O wonders if that's everyone, looking around. It seems to be... except for Joris-R, wherever he is.

A lift

He's pressing the button for O Level right now. He's also mumbling about wanting to be an Alertness Officer... no wait, how about Financial Officer or Agent Provocateur?

Nukabot asks, "Sorry, what was that, citizen?"

?

Mick-R grumbles, and says to go ahead. He tries to smile, somewhat unconvincingly.

The docbot doesn't seem to notice. "All done, citizen. Please wait for delivery."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 05, 2011 20:54

"Oh, he was a commie, huh?"

I pause for a moment while finishing the retort.

"He probably has another clone somewhere ready to activate."

I go back to the unconscious mutant, and try and look for the clone's ME card.

written by Gligar on Sep 05, 2011 22:00

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango counters that this commie probably has another clone ready. "I don't like the tone of your voice, citizen. It sounds almost like you want this commie to reclone. That'll be a twenty-credit fine right there. And just what are you doing?"

Mango's checking for the clone's ME Card, that's what. And he finds it. It turns out that this is Claude-HLY-4.

A lift

Joris-R's lift continues to rise. As it does, the Tella-O-MLY Adventure Hour theme begins to play over the speaker.

written by Jam on Sep 05, 2011 22:08

"Er... Joris-R says he wants to be Financial Officer, I think... It seemed like there was something more... He must be far away, I can't really maintain a good connection with him..."

I look to Rapt-G...

"Might you happen to be a Mind Sense mutant too, sir?"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 06, 2011 06:39

I feel kind of thirsty. I eye my glass suspiciously and look around again.

written by Speeder on Sep 06, 2011 11:23

I look at Jam.

"If that is the case, I am fine. If not... well... We need to move soon... maybe we will have to decide for him."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 06, 2011 11:57

"Um... Let me rephrase that. What I meant is that if this was a commie, it means that Claude would have escaped interrogation, a failing upon your part."

I look at the technician, and hand him the ME card that I picked up.

"You might want to notify IntSec of this incident... Just in case Claude does something."

I check Claude to whether his physical condition might be improving, or deteriorating.

written by 4616599 on Sep 06, 2011 14:43

"You know, being an agent saboteur might be useful. You never know when some pesky mutant's trying to interfere with clones and all that."

I hum along to the theme.

written by Gligar on Sep 06, 2011 17:19

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y reports that Joris-R seems to want to be the Financial Officer. There might have been more, but he couldn't maintain a connection for some reason...

He asks Rapt-G whether he's a Mind Sense mutant. "Nope, Pyrokinesis." He holds up the sign again, before writing something down on a notepad.

L4-O feels thirsty. Well, the air is still dry... a drink would be a good idea about now. L4-O looks around, and glances at his glass again.

Yes, a drink would really hit the spot right now.

Speed-Y seems okay with Joris-R being Financial Officer. If he wanted something else... well, maybe they should just choose for him. Perhaps you should," Rapt-G says. "You can't wait here forever. You have to get to Outfitting, and... oh yes! Power Services have a service service for you. You should head over then after Outfitting." He holds up the sign again.

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango argues that the fact Claude is here means that he escaped interrogation. That would be a failing on the part of the techs. IntSec should be notified of this.

"Maybe we already know, a voice says behind him. "Why do you think he's down here?"

The source of the voice, a RED IntSec clone, comes into Mango's view. If Joris-R were here, he'd recognise him as Leon-R-JHT-3. "You're Mango-NHG, right? Joris-R told us you were coming. He said you're a volunteer. As in, you weren't volunteered like those mutants. But you don't seem all that happy about it."

A lift

Joris-R keeps mumbling, saying that perhaps "Agent Saboteur" would be good, since you don't know what mutants are doing.

Nukabot asks, "Just who are you talking to?"

The lift arrives at O Level and stops.

written by Speeder on Sep 06, 2011 17:24

I read the sign that he keeps holding up, and examine it, and try to see every detail, in fact I see if I can summon a Cryo head state for a while.

Then I ask.

"Ok, where is Outfitting, and Power Services? The more precise the information, the faster we can get there... Or I hope so."

written by Malkom on Sep 06, 2011 17:35⁶²⁹

Mick-R waits. Patiently. And tries to summon up a bigger grin.

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 06, 2011 20:40⁶³⁰

I follow the conversations regarding the assignment of further duties, but recall that it was never confirmed whether I will be assigned the duty I requested (or rather, volunteered for).

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 06, 2011 21:26

I look up.

"I am, who I am."

I stand, and grin.

"I was expected elsewhere? I didn't know of that. As to my volunteering, of course I'm glad. I just had a bit of a shock when that clone just... collapsed."

I smile some more.

"Just a little. I'm better now."

written by Gligar on Sep 06, 2011 22:25

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y looks at Rapt-G's sign, and starts examining it. He stares at it intensely, trying to take in every detail. Does he remind you of anyone?

He notices that the sign itself is composed of what appears to be part of a black clipboard, to which is attached a piece of card in the usual clearance-free NearlyWhite(tm) colour. On the card is printed a colon symbol, followed by the number three, followed by an equals sign, all on one line. They're printed in black. The whole thing is fastened to what looks like a part of a bed-frame.

⁶²⁹ MALKOM: (OOC: I will be away for a few days, so please, stick my character on full auto mode if needed until I come back!)

⁶³⁰ AZIRPHAELI: (ooc Sorry guys, I was out for the holiday weekend, but have returned)

He then asks for the locations of Outfitting and Power Services. Rapt-G hands him a piece of paper, on which is written:

Paper said:

PLC MAIN WAREHOUSE, G LEVEL, DELTA SUBSECTOR

POWER SERVICES OFFICE 3, X LEVEL, ETA SUBSECTOR

"That's where they are."

Azir-R listens in. He still hasn't been told whether he's got his choice of MBD yet.

?

Mick-R waits for his jumpsuit. While grinning. Mustn't forget to grin.

Soon, a deliverybot appears. "I have a delivery for one Mick-R-NRK", it says, places a box on the floor, and leaves.

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango looks at Leon-R, and claims that he is indeed happy, he was just shocked at the clone collapsing.

"Let's hope so," Leon-R replies, and checks Claude. "See? He's already dead."

written by Jam on Sep 07, 2011 01:28

I look at Rapt-G, excited...

"Cool! Pyrokinesis! So, you can set things on fire and stuff? It'd be really easy to terminate commies then, if you could just burn them to a crisp from across the room... I wonder if we could maybe see a demonstration..."

I look around for anything that can burn, and isn't too important...

written by Lightning4 on Sep 07, 2011 06:12

"Just not near me. I'm probably kind of explosive..."

I glance towards my backpack full of cone rifle shells, and look down at my grenades.

I glance at my water again.

"When's Joris-R getting here... would be nice to get some B3 before we get under way..."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 07, 2011 10:51

"Oh... Well, considering he was what he was, that's a very good turnout."

I smile a bit more.

"So, what is it that requires my attention?" I ask the RED IntSec clone.

written by Gligar on Sep 07, 2011 17:01

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y seems excited about Rapt-G's mutation. He asks whether Rapt-G could set someone on fire from the other side of the room, and whether they could have a demonstration. "Yes, I can. Were you volunteering?" He holds up the sign again. "I try not to use it, though. It feels... wrong, sometimes."

Jam-Y looks for something that could be burned, but there doesn't seem to be anything. Certainly not L4-O, who, as he points out, is probably kind of explosive, what with all the ammunition he's carrying.

Then he glances at his glass again. For some reason, he doesn't seem to want to drink it... it's almost like he thinks there's something wrong with it. He'd prefer to get some B3 before the set off.

It's really dry in here. Can he really wait? 😊

Can anyone?

A lift

Joris-R seems to have spaced out. As such, Nukabot takes the initiative. "Alright. You mentioned the checkpoint leading to Alpha Subsector, correct? Let us get moving." And it does.

?

Mick-R opens the box, to find a RED jumpsuit that's several sizes too big. Oh well. As everyclone knows (but PLC always denies), PLC only have two sizes of jumpsuit: too large, and too small. He puts it on, and asks the docbot for his belongings. "Right here," the docbot replies, handing him another box.

Reactor shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango seems pleased at how things have turned out. He asks Leon-R what needs his attention. "It seems that you haven't yet filled in the latest B3 survey," he replies. "I have it here."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 07, 2011 21:45

"Ah... I knew there wasn't something quite right..."

I take the B3 survey, and look at the questions that I'm required to answer.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 07, 2011 21:53

I sigh, then think for a moment, and address Rapt-G.

"Sir, might you be aware this cup seems to have been... indicated for something? There's an X right here. I'm not sure what it means..."

written by Gligar on Sep 07, 2011 23:23

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango says he knew that there was something...

He completes the survey. There are the usual loyalty tests and IntSec inserts and such, which he tries to fill out in the right manner. There... that should do it.

He hands the form back. "Thanks, citizen. Just remember to fill it in when it comes out next time."

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

L4-O thinks. He asks Rapt-G if eh knew about the X-mark on his coaster. "Perhaps you should get your eyes tested, citizen. I can't see a mark on the coaster." He holds up the sign again, and takes a drink from his own glass.

It's still really dry in here.

IntSec Checkpoint, O Level, between Epsilon and Central Subsectors

Nukabot stops at the checkpoint. This is because it has run into the usual IntSec goons, who demand to see Joris-R's ME Card.

And to think, he has one more checkpoint to go yet.

?

Mick-R takes his time emptying the box and putting things back in his jumpsuit.

written by Jam on Sep 08, 2011 02:47

I look at Rapt-G... Why would he think the mark was on the coaster... Hmm... Clearly, he knows something... But, I'm not about to go into the mind of a GREEN clone to investigate (or am I?)

I try to look for marks on L4-O's coaster, and search my own for any strange marks...

After that, I pick up my water glass and sniff the water. If it smells alright, I take a small sip, and note if there is any strange taste. If it seems safe to drink, I proceed to drink it, and enjoy the nice wet water...

written by Speeder on Sep 08, 2011 11:10

I am also puzzled, maybe L4 is seeing things? Maybe some commie left a secret mark there?

I go examine the coaster too.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 08, 2011 12:16

"Is there something I've missed?" I ask the IntSec.

"I mean, if Joris-R notified you of my presence, it must be something really interesting, and if it's interesting, then it must be something FUN!"

written by Gligar on Sep 08, 2011 17:12

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y looks at Rapt-G. He's suddenly suspicious... does he know about the mark on the coaster? He could go in and look... but he's not about to delve into the mind of a superior... unless he does

He looks at the coaster himself. Yep, there's the X-mark... but why is it there?

He looks at his own coaster. No mark.

He picks up his own glass, and smells at the contents. Nothing out of the ordinary, just the faint smell of the added drugs.

He takes a sip. Yep, that's water. He drinks more of it. Ahhh... that's better.

A confused Speed-Y also looks at L4-O's coaster. He also sees the X-mark.

Rapt-G still can't see it, though. "Look, there's nothing there. See?" He holds up the sign again.

Internal Security Checkpoint, O Level, between Epsilon and Alpha Subsectors

Joris-R seems to be spacing out again. "Citizen? Your ME Card."

One of the guards pulls out a truncheon. "Now."

?

Looks like Mick-R has finished arranging his equipment. Everything seems to be there.

He thanks the docbot and heads out. First priority: find out where he is.

From the signs, he seems to be in Beta Subsector somewhere.

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango wonders if there's something he's missed. If Joris-R told them he was coming, it must be something interesting, and that sounds like fun.

"He told us a little of what you did during his last mission. He said to watch you when you got here. And watch you we will."

written by Speeder on Sep 08, 2011 17:34

I blink, look at the coaster again.

I take a photo with the PDC, and see if I can see the X on the photo.

(erm, YELLOW PDC have camera, right?)

If all that worked, I show it to Rapt-G

written by Lightning4 on Sep 08, 2011 17:40

I take my own glass and sniff the contents for anything out of the ordinary, then put it back down.

I cough. My throat is feeling reeeeaally dry now.

written by 4616599 on Sep 08, 2011 18:34

I blink.

"Oh, apologies. It's almost as if my mind went elsewhere. You know how it feels?"

I give them the card.

written by Jam on Sep 08, 2011 20:15

I drink the rest of my water.

"Ahh... Nice water... Say L4-O, if you don't like that water, how about we trade glasses? You give me your glass, and I'll give you mine..."

I grin at him...

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 08, 2011 21:44

"I see... Well, I can be sure you'll do your job well."

I get back to my own work.

written by Gligar on Sep 08, 2011 23:28

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y looks at L4-O's coaster again. He takes out his PDC, and takes a picture of the coaster. Noting that the X is visible on the picture, he shows it to Rapt-G. "I still don't see anything," Rapt-G replies, and holds up the sign again.

L4-O takes the glass and sniffs it. Apart from the usual faint smell of additive drugs, there is nothing.

He puts the glass down again, and coughs. He really wants to drink...

Jam-Y finishes off his glass. That water was really nice.

Grinning, he offers to trade glasses with L4-O.

Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Epsilon and Central Subsectors

Joris-R apologises. His mind was elsewhere. Surely they should know about that sort of thing.

He hands over his card.

One guard takes it, and scans it. "Thank you, citizen. But next time, make sure to keep your mind on the job, eh?"

Reactor Shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango thinks that the guard should be able to do his job well, and gets back to his own work.

He's told to move to a different section of the chamber.

?, Beta Subsector

Mick-R keeps moving towards Alpha Subsector. He heads through a concourse, looking for a checkpoint.

written by Jam on Sep 09, 2011 02:22

I continue watching L4-O...

"You know, if you want a different water... You're ORANGE clearance, remember?"

I go back to grinning...

While still grinning, I lean back and look over at Rapt-G.

"So, we're all set on the MBDs?"

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 09, 2011 03:02 ? , Beta Subsector

I drink a good bit of my water, and after this whole X fiasco I check to make sure I don't have one, and then casually glance over to be sure I can see that X.

This whole business with the X, the sign, etc.. seems fishy, but being only a lowly RED in a sea of other colors I avoid saying anything further.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 09, 2011 07:31

"Uh... thanks sir. Think I'll pass though. Though I guess it's a good idea to try another glass... maybe."

I take another glass of water and eye it and sniff it, before taking just a small sip.

written by Speeder on Sep 09, 2011 11:23

My curiosity keeps me very curious, and I end taking a drink from the X market water.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 09, 2011 11:59

I move to a different section of the chamber.

written by 4616599 on Sep 09, 2011 15:34

"Oh, absolutely."

I start Nukabot up again.

written by Gligar on Sep 09, 2011 17:32

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y continues watching L4-O, and reminds him that if he wants another glass, he is ORANGE Clearance...

He looks back at Rapt-G and asks if they're all set for their MBDs. "That's right," Rapt-G replies. "Once you get to Outfitting, you can get your badges and your MBD equipment packs, along with your other assigned equipment." He hands Speed-Y a form. "This is your equipment requisition form. You'll need to take it with you to Outfitting."

Azir-R drinks some of his water, and checks his coaster for an X. There doesn't seem to be one. He's suspicious about the whole X thing, but remains quiet.

L4-O takes one of the other glasses and checks it out. The water smells the same... it looks the same... it tastes just like ordinary water...

Speed-Y's curiosity gets the better of him. He picks up L4-O's glass... and drinks. It tastes just like ordinary water.

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango moves elsewhere in the chamber. As he does, the other mutants are directed to remove the body of Claude.

Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Epsilon and Central subsectors

Joris-R agrees, and starts up Nukabot again. He accepts his card from the guard.

Nukabot starts moving again. The guards move aside and let it through into Central Subsector.

Mick-R keeps moving, heading down another corridor.

written by Speeder on Sep 09, 2011 17:51

Since seemly nothing happened, I just take the form.

Then I recheck where Outfitting is, on the paper that I think I got from Rapt-G

"Ok, to outfitting then! Someone please inform Joris."

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 09, 2011 19:36

Very well, I follow the team to outfitting. I keep alert though, something feels off.

written by Jam on Sep 09, 2011 21:25

I watch Speed-Y in case his head suddenly explodes or something...

I also speak to John-R...

"You can't send messages telepathically to non-mutants, can you?"

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 09, 2011 22:32

I stare, looking for any new cracks that might form.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 09, 2011 22:53

I raise an eyebrow after Speed-Y drinks the glass that was in front of me.

"Strange... maybe that mark was just leftover from some previous occurrence."

I shrug, finish the glass I did pick up, then get ready to get up. I turn towards Rapt-G.

"I don't suppose you have any information on what our roles do? Most of us got scrubbed pretty good... I know I need a refresher on what an equipment officer does."

written by Gligar on Sep 10, 2011 00:33

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y takes the form and checks his other piece of paper. They want to go to G Level, Delta Subsector, to the PLC Warehouse there.

He announces that they'll be getting going, and asks someone to tell Joris-R.

Azir-R gets ready to move out.

Jam-Y watches Speed-Y, to see if anything will happen. Nothing much does.

To John-R, he asks whether he can send messages to non-psionics. "Er... no, I can't, sir."

L4-O raises an eyebrow. Perhaps the X was left over from something else.

He finishes the other glass and stands. He asks Rapt-G for a refresher on the MBDs. "Yeah, I've got a list right here."

He hands L4-O a couple of sheets of paper*.

* cd/zips/Gligar/mbd (98 Kb)

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector ? , Alpha Subsector

Mango continues staring.

? , Beta Subsector

Mick-R eventually finds a checkpoint, presents his ME Card, and heads through.

? , Central Subsector

Joris-R and Nukabot continue towards Alpha Subsector. And there's the checkpoint right there.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 10, 2011 09:33

I review the papers and smile.

"Neat! Also... speaking of bots. We had a bunker forkbot as part of our team unofficially. I don't suppose we could have it assigned to us again, if it's not already? If it's needed on this mission, of course..."

After I receive an answer, I hold the papers out to the rest of my team.

"If anyone else wants a refresher on their assignment, take a look."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 10, 2011 11:58

I continue staring, then blink, and stare some more.

While keeping careful attention to where I'm staring, I think about why only Joris-R (apparently) knew of my presence.

written by Malkom on Sep 10, 2011 17:15

Mick-R hurries towards Alpha Subsector and the elusive briefing room. As he goes he tries to call up the team leader on his PDC and ask "What should I do next?"

written by Jam on Sep 10, 2011 17:15

I try to look at the sheets over L4-O's shoulder.

Then I try calling Joris-R using my PDC.

written by Gligar on Sep 10, 2011 21:29Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

After reading the papers, L4-O smiles. Off the papers' mention of bots, he asks whether they could have Nukabot back with them. "Well, I suppose you could use it for transport or something." Rapt-G holds up the sign again. "Hmmm... bunker... which bunker is that? I heard that some Troubleshooter team was refurbishing an old bunker around here..."

L4-O holds out the papers for others to peruse, whereupon Jam-Y takes a look.

Then, he tries getting in touch with Joris-R again, this time by PDC.

As he's doing that, Speed-Y's own PDC goes off. Just listen to that ringtone! Isn't he glad he got a Series 1500? 😊

It turns out to be Mick-R. Remember him? He got left behind in that GREEN corridor...

It turns out that he's not all that far away, only a couple of corridors, in fact. While he waits for Speed-Y to pick up, he looks around and notices some briefing rooms.

Near Briefing Room 17, Alpha Subsector

And not too far away from him, Joris-R has passed through the checkpoint and is almost right outside the briefing room. His PDC rings.

written by Malkom on Sep 10, 2011 23:53

Mick-R walks along looking at the rooms, seeing if there's a Briefing Room 17; if there is, he peeks in. "Ahem, is this the briefing room of Troubleshooter Team Epsilon?"⁶³¹

written by Speeder on Sep 11, 2011 01:38

I reply on the PDC.

"Go to G Level, Delta Subsector, to the PLC Warehouse there."

Then I turn to John

"Call Joris and tell him to go to G Level, Delta Subsector, to the PLC Warehouse there."

Then I turn to L4.

"Well, the Nukabot was on the entrance of the bunker... Maybe someone got him..."

I turn to John.

"Ask the missing team members if any of them got the Nukabot."

written by 4616599 on Sep 11, 2011 08:41

I try to speed Nukabot up.

I answer my PDC.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 11, 2011 10:21

I file the papers neatly away into my backpack.

"If anyone needs them, I have them."

After doing that, I look around and suddenly shout:

"EQUIPMENT CHECK!"

I look around for a few moments then simply smile.

"Just testing my abilities. Not actual check yet. Everything seems to be in order so far anyway... not that we're doing anything yet."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 11, 2011 12:36

I observe, taking in the detail of what it is I'm looking at. I don't move until directed, and that includes leaning.

written by Gligar on Sep 11, 2011 22:02⁶³²

*Jam said:*⁶³³

⁶³¹ MALKOM: (OOC: or whatever our team was called, I think that was it...)

⁶³² GLIGAR: (OOC: Jam posted in the wrong thread. I'm going to have to deduct 1pp for that.)

[713]

"Hey Joris-R, this is Jam-Y. Speed-Y says to go to G Level, Delta Subsector, to the PLC Warehouse... Oh, and do you have Nukabot with you?"

At the same time, I motion to John-R that I'm already calling Joris-R, and that he doesn't need to call him again.⁶³⁴

written by Gligar on Sep 11, 2011 22:33

Near Briefing Room 17, Alpha Subsector

Mick-R keeps going, checking rooms. Over his PDC, Speed-Y is telling him to instead head for Outfitting in Delta Subsector.

In a moment, he encounters Joris-R and Nukabot. Over Joris-R's PDC, Jam-Y is also telling him the same thing. He asks if Nukabot is with him.

He certainly does. Nukabot speeds up, ending up right outside Briefing Room 17. "And here we are!"

Mick-R heads over and looks inside.

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Mick-R asks if this is the right place. "If you're with Team Epsilon, you're late," Rapt-G says, holding up the sign again.

Speed-Y appears to have issued orders concerning PDC calls and Nukabot.

L4-O puts away his papers. He says that anyone else who wants to look at them can ask him.

He then calls for an equipment check! No wait, he's just kidding.

John-R looks to have been about to call someone on his PDC, but puts it away again.

Rapt-G tells the team, "You guys had better get moving. You're running late as it is." You guessed it: the sign again.

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango keeps up his observation, not even daring to move.

And sure enough...

...a piece of the shield falls away, revealing the reactor below.

written by Speeder on Sep 11, 2011 22:36

I notice everyone is here.

"Oh, magical.!

We have to move out. Later we tell you about your mandatory bonus duties. Or someone please tell them. We have to go to outfitting, then to power services."

I actually look VERY HAPPY to see Nukabot with us, and I already hop into my usual place into its back.

⁶³³ JAM: (ooc: The stats say Joris-R doesn't have a PDC... :P)

⁶³⁴ JAM: (ooc: facepalm 🤦)

And I was sure I clicked "reply" in this thread before I posted...

Now I know Gligar reads the other threads... I wondered about that...)

"Hello Nukabot! Nice to see you got a formal power upgrade, and repairs! You got the asimov repaired too?"

written by Jam on Sep 11, 2011 22:39

"Oh, it's Nukabot! Oh, hey Joris-R..."

I hang up the PDC.

"Okay, so we're leaving now, right? Goodbye sir!"

I salute to Rapt-G,, then exit the briefing room. I wait out in the corridor for Speed-Y to lead us to wherever we're going...

written by Lightning4 on Sep 11, 2011 23:56

I head out into the corridor and see Nukabot and smile.

"Nukabot!"

I immediately start assessing the status of the damage it had accumulated over the course of our previous mission.

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 12, 2011 00:56

I wheel after the team merrily.

written by 4616599 on Sep 12, 2011 08:41

I greet everyone, and then notice Rapt-G.

"Hello sir! Good daycycle! Did I miss any promotions or other exciting team stuff?"

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 12, 2011 13:12

I frown.

"Hey? I don't think that was supposed to happen..."

written by Malkom on Sep 12, 2011 16:05

"Sorry sir! I got held up by a docbot sir! What's our mission, Sir?" Mick-R is struggling to keep his grin on. He isn't entirely successful. At least he isn't scowling his displeasure; that's a good thing! A very good thing.

You might notice that he enquires all this rather woodenly and un-eagerly, as if forcing himself to.

written by Gligar on Sep 12, 2011 17:28

Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Or rather, the doorway.

Speed-Y looks pleased that everyone is here, especially Nukabot. He tells the newcomers that it's time to move out. They'll be informed of their MBDs en route.

He hops on board Nukabot, and asks it about its repairs. "That is correct, citizen. I have been restored to full operating capacity, and have also received a micropile reactor. With any luck, it should not explode, or release radioactive fallout, or detonate. Current R&D estimated place the probability at 20%. Unlike a certain other object..."

Lucas-R grins at Nukabot, and also hops on board.

Jam-Y notices Nukabot, hangs up his PDC, and salutes Rapt-G, before exiting the briefing room.

L4-O files out and also notices Nukabot. He starts inspecting the bot, looking for anything wrong with it. It seems to have been fully repaired after last mission. Including the axle.

Azir-R wheels out, waiting for the others to move off.

Rather stiffly, Mick-R explains that he was held up, and asks if he missed anything. "You've missed the entire briefing. I'm not repeating it." He holds up the sign again.

Joris-R also asks, and gets the same answer.

Reactor shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango exclaims that he doesn't think that the shield falling apart should be happening...

An alarm sounds. A voice shouts, "All volunteers to Shield Grid G3!"

written by Speeder on Sep 12, 2011 17:52

I look to Azir, then I say.

"Azir, see if you can somehow grab hold of the bot, so you get pulled along as it moves."

written by Malkom on Sep 12, 2011 17:53

Mick-R squints hard at the sign, looking at it in its entirety, and taking in any and all symbols, images, and text on it. He snaps a picture of it with his PDC as well.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 12, 2011 18:08

I take my position at the helm of Nukabot. Well, drivers seat anyway. Can it even be called a helm?

"Just like old times again."

Assuming nobody else is there, anyway. If there's someone there I just stare with puppy dog eyes.

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 12, 2011 18:57

"Oh this should be fun!"

I find a relatively safe area on the side with a bit of wozzit sticking out, and grab on.

I concentrate on keeping my wheels parallel with the nukabot as it moves and turns to ensure I don't wheel under it, as that would be a disaster.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 12, 2011 21:42

I watch the reactor itself, taking note of what component was supposed to be holding the shield.

written by Gligar on Sep 12, 2011 23:20

Outside Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y tells Azir-R to grab on to Nukabot somehow, so he is pulled along.

Mick-R is more interested in Rapt-G's little sign. As previously mentioned, the sign only shows three symbols: a colon, the number three, and an equals sign. Mick-R takes a picture of it.

L4-O moves to climb into the operator's seat, but finds it occupied by Joris-R. He stares pleadingly.

As John-R chooses a spot for himself, Azir-R grabs on to something sticking out of the side of the forkbot. It should be sturdy enough to support him.

"Is that everybody?" Nukabot asks.

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango continues to stare. He looks through the hole, at the reactor. That prickly feeling returns. And with it, a peculiar warmth.

He notices, while staring, that one of the metallic braces, which normally support the reactor shield, is missing.

Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

You're probably wondering what happened to Cryo? Well, I'm sending some spybots over there now... with the power out, the usual cameras are offline.

...

Ah, here we are. He seems to be in an Internal Security office.

written by Jam on Sep 13, 2011 01:20

I try to find a spot on Nukabot, and climb on...

Otherwise, I just follow behind.

written by Speeder on Sep 13, 2011 01:42

"We should have asked for more places for us in Nukabot..."

Although getting Nukabot back already make me happy enough!

I wonder if we will get Massacrebot back..."

written by Malkom on Sep 13, 2011 01:49

Mick-R follows along with the group, his thoughts wandering...

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 13, 2011 13:27

I look further, with nothing else to do than to oversee that the clones are doing what they are.

written by 4616599 on Sep 13, 2011 15:09

I look at L4-O, rather surprised.

"Erm. Sure. Take the seat."

I try to find room at the back, and look for Rapt-G. "Sorry-another thing, sir. Can I also be Agent Provocateur?"

written by Gligar on Sep 13, 2011 17:56

Outside Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y finds a spot on Nukabot. (The team did it before, they'll do it again, it seems.) He ends up hanging off the side, opposite to Azir-R.

Speed-Y notes that perhaps they should have asked for a larger forkbot... oh well. At least they got Nukabot back in one piece.

He idly wonders if they could get Massacrebot back, but realises that that would involve time travel and having to meet his former self, not to mention having to dodge a nuclear explosion... assuming that time travel exists outside of the vidshows, that is...

Mick-R doesn't climb onto Nukabot. He hangs back a little, and keeps quiet. Almost as if he wanted to be alone.

Joris-R suddenly realises that L4-O is staring at him, and surrenders the seat. He tries to move back, but there isn't really any room.

He then calls back to Rapt-G, asking if he could be the Agent Provocateur as well. "Sorry, only one duty per Troubleshooter." He holds up the sign again.

"Well?" asks Nukabot. "Shall we go?"

Reactor shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango continues to not do anything. He hasn't been told to move, after all.

Around him, other volunteers are moving, some getting close to the hole.

Through the hole, clones can be seen running around the reactor gantry, some wearing radiation suits, some not.

The air is prickly again.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 13, 2011 21:09

"Onward then, I suppose! I'll just follow on foot for now. Nukabot appears to be in fully functional order, which is great."

I look again.

"I even think the bloodstains got cleaned. Impressive!"

If the group starts moving I follow along on foot.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 13, 2011 21:24

I keep watching, and feel that prickly feeling that is typical of something with plenty of radiation.

Prickly... Like being poked with a brush.

written by Jam on Sep 13, 2011 22:44

"Hey Joris-R! Been quite a while, hasn't it... Oh, you wanted to be Agent Provocateur? So that's what the other thing you were saying was..."

I continue hanging from Nukabot's side, in case we start moving...

written by Gligar on Sep 13, 2011 23:22

Outside Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

L4-O decides not to take the seat after all, instead opting to walk alongside.

Jam-Y greets Joris-R, and comments on their previous "conversation".

Nukabot asks, "So... where are we going? Or are we just staying here?"

Reactor shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango continues doing nothing.

He watches the clones on the reactor gantry, as they try to restore the metal brace, and the shield, to where it should be.

The air continues to be prickly. It's not as bad as... that time. Then again, nothing could compare to that. This isn't all that bad, now Mango comes to think of it...

written by Speeder on Sep 13, 2011 23:30

I look at L4, then at Joris.

"L4, you are equipment officer, equipment officer is supposed to operate the bots... And in the previous mission you did that in a excellent fashion, even with broken leg. So, can you please do you know, your job?"

I look at Joris, and smile as he moves out the seat.

Then I look at Nukabot.

"Erm, you are seemly driverless. I do not think people would enjoy you going around without a driver."

written by Malkom on Sep 13, 2011 23:30

Mick-R's personality starts to reassert itself as he steps onto Nukabot. "You! Bot! Get us out of here, on the double!" He tries to get into the driver's seat. "I'll drive."

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 14, 2011 00:00

I'm not so sure I like Mick's not so happy tone.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 14, 2011 00:44

I try to take the drivers seat first.

"Excuse me, I'm the equipment officer..."

Either way, I give Nukabot directions where we need to go:

"We're going to Outfitting first I think. Um... not sure where that is, I'm sure Speed-Y knows."

written by Jam on Sep 14, 2011 02:12

I grab the back of Mick-R's jumpsuit as he tries to climb into the driver's seat...

"Hey, hang on a secondcycle, L4-O's the Equipment Officer, he's the one who should drive Nukabot! You the... uh... Wait, what MBD does Mick-R have again?"

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 14, 2011 11:54

Prickly... No. More like... fuzzy.

I continue watching.

written by 4616599 on Sep 14, 2011 15:33

I look mildly annoyed at Rapt-G's denial, and the argument over driving for a moment.

I then attempt a smile again.

"Okay, Team Leader, where to?"

written by Gligar on Sep 14, 2011 18:27

Outside Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y reminds L4-O that, as Equipment Officer, it's his job to drive the bot. Not only that, but he did an excellent job of driving last time. So shouldn't he be, you know, driving?

He notices that Joris-R has moved and smiles. Of course, that means that Nukabot is currently driverless, and as such, it's best if it stays here for a moment.

Mick-R decides that actually, he'd like to drive. Rather bluntly, he orders Nukabot to get moving, and tries to get into the operator's seat.

He finds himself stopped by both L4-O and Jam-Y, who both remind him that L4-O is driving. In addition, Jam-Y has hold of Mick-R's jumpsuit. L4-O shoves Mick-R out of the way and takes the seat again. He tells Nukabot that they're heading for Outfitting, but that he's not quite sure where that is. Perhaps Speed-Y knows?

Jam-Y starts telling Mick-R his MBD, but seems to be having trouble remembering it. He thinks back... oh yes! Mick-R's the Hygiene Officer.

Azir-R watches Mick-R, with a hint of disapproval in his eyes.

Joris-R looks a little unhappy for a moment. Perhaps the argument over their driver is getting to him. Or maybe it's Rapt-G's refusal. Whichever one it is, it passes quickly.

He puts on a smile, and asks Speed-Y for their destination.

Nukabot suggests, "Perhaps I should head back to the lift." It starts moving, slowly at first, looking for an intersection so it can turn.

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango continues to diligently hold position as the clones below struggle to get the shield back into place.

The reactor begins glowing a slightly brighter shade of GREEN that seems to sap Mango's energy.

And the energy of a few others, it seems. Someone behind Mango collapses, falling onto him.

written by Speeder on Sep 14, 2011 18:33

I nod and say.

"To the lift!"

I look to everyone that is wondering where to...

"We have to go to G Level, Delta Subsector, to the PLC Warehouse there."

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 14, 2011 19:35

I hold on as we move.

written by Malkom on Sep 14, 2011 20:17

"<Censored>!"

written by Gligar on Sep 14, 2011 22:44

Outside Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y agrees with Nukabot's suggestion. For the benefit of everyone else, he adds that they will be travelling to the PLC Warehouse in Delta Subsector.

Azir-R holds on as best he can. It's kind of difficult. And it doesn't help that Mick-R is distracting him with his treasonous levels of unhappiness... see, he just unleashed an expletive.

Nukabot reaches the end of the corridor, where there is a concourse. It begins its turn.

written by Speeder on Sep 14, 2011 23:01

"I do not remember who is happiness officer... Can you please work on Mick, before we need Loyalty officer to work on Mick?"

written by Jam on Sep 14, 2011 23:04

I look at Mick-R, then look around...

"Hmm... Mick-R seems rather unhappy, which means the Happiness Officer isn't doing his job... Right, Azir-R?"

written by Malkom on Sep 15, 2011 00:52

Mick-R remembers what happened the last time he didn't look happy...

"I'm happy, I'm happy!" He pushes his face into a grin.

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 15, 2011 04:00

"I don't remember officially being declared the happiness officer, though I did inquire about it. Your statement, Jam, is good enough for me."

Then I turn to Mick.

"Being happy does not mean smiling when we get upset, I don't want to see that treasonous attitude surface again."

All this of course, while hanging on to the nukabot.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 15, 2011 07:35

I keep a lookout for any suspicious clones.

I also note how Nukabot is performing while driving.

I ALSO note some of the equipment of my companions, making sure that seems all in order.

I also also keep an eye on where we're going.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 15, 2011 13:13

It takes me a moment to realise that something has actually hit me.

Green, glow... What the?

I try to crawl up from whatever it is that has ended up falling on me, and look over at what it is.

written by Gligar on Sep 15, 2011 17:52

Concourse O2, Alpha Subsector

Nukabot continues its turn, narrowly avoiding a table.

[717]

Speed-Y can't remember who is Happiness Officer, but issues an order to see to Mick-R anyway.

Jam-Y also notices Mick-R. Clearly, that's due to the Happiness Officer (who, he remembers, is Azir-R) not doing his job.

Mick-R claims to be happy, and does the thing where he forces his face into a smile using his hands.

Azir-R hadn't officially been told that he was happiness Officer, but Jam-Y's statement is sufficient.

He doesn't buy Mick-R's attempt to make himself smile. That's not what being happy means. He tells Mick-R to make sure that it doesn't happen again.

Hopefully, they'll get to Outfitting soon, so he can get his MBD kit. In the meantime, he continues holding on to Nukabot.

L4-O monitors how Nukabot is operating, noting that it is operating within its standard parameters. Power levels are nominal.

He also has a look at whatever equipment he can see. That isn't a lot, but it seems to be in good condition.

As he's doing that, Nukabot finishes its turn and returns to the corridor.

Outside Briefing Room 17, O Level, Alpha Subsector

Finally, L4-O keeps an eye on the corridor, looking for any potential obstacles or other suspicious things.

Nothing too problematic, just a scrubot.

It keeps ahead of Nukabot all the way to the checkpoint.

Reactor shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep subsector

Mango doesn't react to be fallen onto... for a moment.

Soon, though, he tries to move out of the way. Something falls off him to the floor.

Looking back, he can see that it was one of the other volunteers. He now seems to be dead.

written by Malkom on Sep 15, 2011 18:24

Mick-R takes away his hands and tries to keep smiling, with some success...

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 15, 2011 20:27

"That's progress if anything. Keep practicing."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 15, 2011 21:06

I'm taken quite aback at the body.

"Oh my..."

I move away from the exposed reactor. Slightly.

written by Jam on Sep 15, 2011 21:36

"Oh, Mick-R's smiling again... Back up to mandatory happiness levels, I see. Good job, Azir-R!"

I try to look towards where we are headed, and if we are getting any closer to our destination.

"Hmm... I wonder what ever happened to Mango-R... Last I saw him, he was being shot by about 10 lasers at once... I wonder if he's recloned yet... He's probably INFRARED now after that incident..."

written by Malkom on Sep 15, 2011 21:42

Mick-R makes an unintelligible grumbling noise and hunches over his PDC so it's hard to look at the screen.

written by Gligar on Sep 15, 2011 23:25

Internal Security Checkpoint, O level, between Alpha and Central Subsectors

Nukabot enters the checkpoint, and stops to allow everyone to present their ME Cards.

Mick-R experiments with smiling while not using his hands. It almost works. That's good enough, right?

Azir-R thinks so. He tells Mick-R to keep practicing.

Jam-Y also thinks so. He notices that they're back at the checkpoint.

Mick-R grumples and hunches over his PDC, trying to not let anyone see it.

Jam-Y wonders what happened to Mango-R (as he knew him). Perhaps he's recloned? He's probably INFRARED after that.

Reactor Shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Indeed he is. He's also worried about this body that fell into him.

He tries to move away from the hole a little.

The air still feels prickly. But it's strange... he doesn't feel as bad as before...

written by Speeder on Sep 15, 2011 23:53

I present my ME card, and wait so we can proceed.

Upon seeing Azir first success, I smile.

"Good job! I will buy a B3 for you later."

written by Malkom on Sep 16, 2011 02:25

Mick-R hunches some more, glancing suspiciously at the other Troubleshooters as he taps something into his PDC.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 16, 2011 06:38

I'm too busy presenting my ME card to notice what Mick-R is doing.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 16, 2011 12:52

Okay, this is getting a bit weird now. Can I go back yet?

The feeling isn't bad as before, which seems to suggest that something is adapting to the radiation. Or perhaps my body is failing, and the nerves were the first to go.

Doesn't seem like it though. After all, my body seems to be functioning correctly despite the prickling sensation in the air.

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 16, 2011 15:55

I don't have a good vantage point to see what Mick is doing.

I instead present my ME card when there's a chance.

written by 4616599 on Sep 16, 2011 18:44

I try to squeeze into a more sheltered spot.

I too present my card...

written by Gligar on Sep 16, 2011 18:53

Internal Security Checkpoint, O level, between Alpha and Central Subsectors

Speed-Y presents his ME card to the guards, and waits for everyone else do the same.

He congratulates Azir-R on his first success as Happiness Officer, and promises to buy him a B3 later.

Mick-R doesn't present his ME card. He's too busy doing something with his PDC. I can't see it from here. He glances at his fellow Troubleshooters occasionally, but doesn't seem to realise that he needs to present his ME card.

L4-O fails to notice Mick-R. That's because he's also presenting his ME card for inspection.

Azir-R can't see Mick-R very well from where he is. He presents his ME card with the others.

Lucas-R is also busy with his ME card.

"And the rest of you," the guard prompts. "Let's see'em."

Reactor Shielding Chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango ponders how he's feeling. Does the lower severity mean that he's adapting? Or is his body beginning to shut down? No... he doesn't think so.

Through the hole, he can see that technicians have finally been able to put the supports back in place.

written by Malkom on Sep 16, 2011 18:58

Mick-R sticks out his ME card while tapping data into his PDC with his other hand.

written by Speeder on Sep 16, 2011 19:29

I look at Jam, then at Mick.

"Show to Jam, the loyalty officer your PDC. I am suspecting you are doing something treasonous, AND DO NOT ATTEMPT TO CLOSE WHATEVER YOU ARE DOING!!!"

I then think a bit, trying to remember one of the Friend Computer endocrinations that junior citizens are taught.

"Between privacy and security, security is always more important! Because privacy, may hide mutants, traitors, and commies."

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 16, 2011 19:47

I thank Speedy and Jam for the encouragements, and when the guards get testy with.. not Mick again.. < sigh >

Since he looks distracted, I motion with my hands for Joris, Speedy, or someone closes to find out what he's doing.

written by 4616599 on Sep 16, 2011 20:23

I purse my lips a bit, and wait for my card to pass inspection.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 16, 2011 20:58

I get startled by Speed-Y's sudden shouting and see if I can see what Mick-R is doing from my position.

written by Jam on Sep 16, 2011 23:32

I stick out my ME card...

"Hang on Speed-Y, sir... I'll be right with you..."

"..."

written by Gligar on Sep 16, 2011 23:37

Internal Security Checkpoint, O level, between Alpha and Central Subsectors

Joris-R hands over his ME card. He tries to get himself into a better position on Nukabot. There... that should do it.

Mick-R hands over his ME Card. While still fiddling with his PDC.

Speed-Y notices, and demands that he show it to Jam-Y. Right now. He thinks back, and adds what he can remember of the Security Over Privacy doctrine.⁶³⁵

Azir-R thanks the YELLOWS for their encouragements, and then sighs as Mick-R causes trouble. He motions that someone should look at his PDC.

John-R hands over his ME card, and also sighs. He glares at Mick-R.

Joris-R waits for the guard to finish with his ME card. But it looks like he's also distracted by Mick-R's shenanigans.

A little startled by Speed-Y's sudden outburst, L4-O looks round, trying to get a look at Mick-R's PDC. But Mick-R is in a place he can't see.

Lucas-R cranes his neck, trying to get a look as well. "It... looks like he's looking at a Tech Services site," he says.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 17, 2011 03:51

I make sure not to go crazy and start doing things the way clones do whenever there is something to panic about.

It's probably the fact that they're sealing the leak of radiation... I think.

I get up, if I haven't done it already.

written by Malkom on Sep 17, 2011 04:06

"Whatever," Mick-R grumbles, shoving the PDC under Jam's nose with more force than should be needed. His voice starts to rise: "Have an eyeful... officer. Have you ever even considered the kind of hampering people like you put on the advancement of technology?! You and your 'ooh, it's treason, it's terrible' vatcrappy nonsense! We'd be WAY more advanced without people like you around!" He is not smiling anymore, have you noticed? In fact he's worked himself up into a pretty good rage. "Go on, keep simpering and whining about treason while good people work hard to spread technology! You aren't even doing anything to help, let alone making yourself useful!!" He's yelling at the top of his lungs! "WHYYYYY!?"

⁶³⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: I like that, Speeder, take a Perversity point 😊)

[719]

written by Lightning4 on Sep 17, 2011 07:19

I hold my hand up and quietly mouth things to myself while counting fingers in seemingly increasing value.

"Five..."

I stop momentarily and think.

"No wait. Six. Six counts of treason from that little tirade... of varying severity, of course."

written by Speeder on Sep 17, 2011 17:13

I facepalm.

"I think I do not kicked him hard enough last time. Also I think he has personal level problems with Jam, considering last time he tried to shoot Jam..."

I wait, with expectation, wanting to know what Jam will do.

written by 4616599 on Sep 17, 2011 19:03

"I'll leave this to the happiness officer...and Jam-Y, I guess, hearing Speeder."

written by Jam on Sep 17, 2011 21:38

I glare angrily at Mick-R...

"Get that out of my face, I already know what you were doing on your PDC! You're intentionally acting suspicious, like you're trying to attract attention to yourself. Why are you wasting my time?!"

And why are you throwing a fit at me when I haven't even done anything? Do you want to be terminated?"

I take out my laser pistol, and aim it at Mick-R's head.

written by Gligar on Sep 17, 2011 21:41

Reactor Shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango tries to remain calm.

Another clone falls over.

That reminds him that he's still on the floor. He stands up.

Below, the technicians continue their work. They're almost done now.

Internal Security Checkpoint, O Level, between Alpha and Central Subsectors

Jam-Y hands over his ME card and tells Speed-Y he'll be right with him. He concentrates.

Mick-R grumbles, and shoves his PDC right into Jam-Y's face before launching into a tirade about clones like him are holding back the progress of technology. He gets treasonously unhappy about it.

L4-O remains surprisingly calm. He simply holds up a hand and counts. As it happens, he's counting treason. Five... no, six counts of treason in that rant alone. At least.

Speed-Y facepalms. Again. He thinks that he might not have used enough force last time. Also, Mick-R seems to have a problem with Jam-Y, considering past events.

Joris-R decides to leave things to Jam-Y and Azir-R.

And what does Jam-Y do? He snaps at Mick-R to get that thing out of his face. Jam-Y already know what he was doing. It's almost as if Mick-R wants to be terminated, the way he's acting... and wasting Jam-Y's time, while he's at it.

Jam-Y pulls out his laser pistol, aiming right between Mick-R's eyes.

The guards don't. "Alright, that's enough! You'd better explain yourself RIGHT NOW citizen!"

Two of them grab Mick-R. The other four point their laser pistols at him. Rather noisily.

written by Malkom on Sep 18, 2011 00:32

Mick-R turns his considerable ranting powers on the guards, screaming a few furious sentences before he has to stop for breath.

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 18, 2011 04:54

Treasonous levels of unhappiness to boot, this is a disaster.

"I think you've got this, Jam, it seems less a happiness issue now, and more a serious issue of loyalty to the team.."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 18, 2011 05:59

I just sit back and watch mildly amused now.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 18, 2011 11:59

I feel a bit dazed as I check to see if any of my limbs have dropped off.

I plan to ask later about my radiation levels and if they're at safe amounts. But for the time being, I go back to looking at the affected area, this time blinking more often, and not simply staring... I also try not to make direct eye contact with the area.

written by 4616599 on Sep 18, 2011 13:59

"Right! Stay where you are!"

I perfunctorily point a boot at him.

written by Jam on Sep 18, 2011 18:03

"Why are you being unloyal? Explain yourself!"

I continue aiming my laser pistol at Mick-R...

written by Gligar on Sep 18, 2011 21:08

Internal Security Checkpoint, O Level, between Central and Alpha Subsectors

Mick-R directs his anger at the guards. You know, the ones who have laser pistols pointed at him.

One of them fires. His shot hits Mick-R in the foot, just as Mick-R catches his breath.

Azir-R just gives up. It's looking less like happiness and more like disloyalty. That's Jam-Y's responsibility, is it not?

L4-O watches. At least he seems happy.

Joris-R demands that Mick-R stay where he is, and points a boot at him. A boot? Really? What is he going to do, throw it at him? Stomp him as if he were a [REDACTED]?

Jam-Y demands that Mick-R explain himself.

And to cap it all off, Team Epsilon's PDCs start ringing. It's that ringtone that says, "This call is Very Important, you had better answer it now..."

Reactor Shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Feeling a little dazed, Mango does a quick check of his body. Two arms, two legs, ten fingers... yep, looks fine!

He continues watching the hole, being careful, thin time, to blink. And to not look directly at the reactor.

As he watches, the section of shield is slid back into place.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 18, 2011 21:45

I continue watching in the same manner that I am now, seeing as it hasn't caused a catastrophe as of yet.

written by Malkom on Sep 18, 2011 22:13

Mick-R answers his PDC reflexively, without thinking, and immediately wishes he hadn't.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 18, 2011 23:07

I check my PDC too, this must be important!

written by Jam on Sep 18, 2011 23:53

I answer my PDC, as quickly as possible!

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 19, 2011 03:08

I answer my PDC while watching Mick.

written by 4616599 on Sep 19, 2011 07:32

I too answer it

written by Speeder on Sep 19, 2011 12:55

I look sad that I will not watch Mick oblivion, and get my PDC and hear the message.

written by Gligar on Sep 19, 2011 17:15

Reactor Shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango keeps watching as the shield's locks are applied.

Finally, the repair is complete.

A moment later, an announcement comes over the PA. "Twenty minutecycles remaining."

Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Central and Alpha subsectors

Everyone reaches for their PDCs.

The message turns out to be from Friend Computer. "Troubleshooters, report! Standard metrics indicate that you should be at Outfitting at this time! Why have -" The message is cut off.

And not only that, but the lights suddenly go out.

written by Malkom on Sep 19, 2011 17:27⁶³⁶

"Oh cr*p!"

Mick-R's survival instincts take over, and he yanks out his laser pistol, trying to get away from the guards in the sudden darkness. If successful he turns on any flashlight function on his PDC, or gets a flashlight, and shines it around.

written by Speeder on Sep 19, 2011 17:31

I see if the PDC is still working, and if the P2P network of it is still working too...

Then I ignore Mick and whatnot, and see more pressing matters, I attempt to ask "monitor guy" if the power cut shut down the compnode again, and if true, if we are to remain in our course, or do something else.

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 19, 2011 18:22

As I see (faintly) that Mick runs off, I announce: "This treasonous clone is getting away, there he goes." I point off in the direction he's heading.

Then, quieter "Why do we keep letting him be part of the team? He causes nothing but constant trouble?"

I check the functionality of my PDC, and await orders from the team leader.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 19, 2011 18:30

I see if Nukabot has headlamps. If I find a button in the darkness, I turn it on, otherwise, I ask Nukabot to turn them on.

"I have the feeling this is what we need to be investigating... we need to get in and out of Outfitting fast..."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 19, 2011 20:12

Oh, just twenty minutecycles remaining? I thought there would be a long way to go!

I continue doing my duties with a grin on my face.

written by Jam on Sep 19, 2011 23:04

I look around in surprise as the lights suddenly fail... Wait, what's that? Is Mick-R trying to escape?

"Trying to escape, Mick-R?! You can't hide from me! I know exactly where you are..."

I aim my laser pistol towards Mick-R if I can, and fire at him.

⁶³⁶ Malkom: (OOC: This is where it gets fun! 😊)

written by Gligar on Sep 20, 2011 00:09

Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Central and Alpha subsectors (thermal imaging)

Oh good, this camera's working. Let's see...

Mick-R reverts to survival... and tries to flee.

He ducks under the guards' weapons, and heads for where he thinks a door is.

He tries to find a light source... and finds that his PDC isn't functioning.

Speed-Y checks his own PDC... which also isn't functioning.

Azir-R announces that Mick-R is trying to escape (wait, he can see in the dark?) and points where he thinks Mick-R is.

He grumbles and checks his own PDC. It's also not working.

L4-O checks Nukabot... or tries to. It is, dark, after all. He presses what he thinks is the headlights button... to find that Nukabot seems to also be non-functional.

This could be a problem. Perhaps it's related to the problem they've been assigned to investigate. If so, they need to get to Outfitting now.

Jam-Y reacts with surprise, and announces to Mick-R that it's pointless to run. He knows exactly where he is.

He concentrates... and shoots.

His YELLOW laser shines brilliantly in the dark.

It hits Mick-R in the shoulder, causing him to drop his PDC. It looks like he won't be able to use that arm.

And his laser isn't the only one. John-R joins in the fun.

The RED beam also shines, but misses.

The guards yell, "Stay where you are, traitor!" One adds a BLUE beam to the mix, hitting the same arm. The pain causes Mick-R to fall to the ground.

The lights, PDCs, and Nukabot flicker briefly but do not manage to come on.

Reactor shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango continues watching the shield, remembering to blink. He's noticeably happier now that he's nearing the end of his reactor shielding duty.

written by Speeder on Sep 20, 2011 00:22

"Ok, we got hit by a electromagnetic attack.

This is serious business now team, we are NOT going anymore to research a defect, but a clear terrorist attack. Stay alert, and leave Mick for the IntSec, we have more pressing matters now."

I think a bit and state.

"Ok, outfitting probably cannot hand us anything while they are out of power, but we still need to get there, and hope a high clearance citizen went there to clear things manually for us."

I ask to noone in particular, but I hope a IntSec will reply.

"How we get to G level, Delta Subsector, without using elevators that might be without power?"

written by Jam on Sep 20, 2011 01:50

"Terrorists? Oh no! We've got to hurry!"

I start running back to the others...

"So, if Nukabot isn't working, are we going to have to run the whole way? And how will we see where we have to go—clang thud"

The rather sickening sound of skull colliding with metal is followed by the sound of a body falling onto synthcrete, then silence...

written by Malkom on Sep 20, 2011 02:45

Mick-R looks around frantically. "No please, don't shoot! I can help, I'm a really good technician! I can help you correct your problems. I swear I'll not betray you!" He clutches his arm, wincing. "Look, terminate me after if you want; but terminate me now and I won't use my skills in your assistance."

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 20, 2011 03:40

I ignore Mick's pleas, I've heard this song and dance before.

I ignore the fact that I was seeing fairly well in the dark and hope everyone else gingerly ignores it as well.

Then again, both Jam, Joris, and the Intsec could see him so maybe it's not that unusual. (ignoring that they probably fired in the direction Jam's shot went).

"Yes we need to get to outfitting, enough with these distractions."

Then I hear Jam bang his head and fall down.

"Damn it that's the last thing we need."

I Wheel my way over to where I "heard" him fall and offer aid.

written by Speeder on Sep 20, 2011 11:32

"Or terminate him now, and probably with this EMP attack he will not reclone, and that way we get rid of him permanently!"

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 20, 2011 11:38

Well, this has certainly been an eventful cycle...

I look, blink, breathe, and look again.

Goodness knows who knows what the cause of all this is. After all, things like that aren't meant to do that.

written by 4616599 on Sep 20, 2011 15:40

I crouch down onto Nukabot, searching around for any light sources.

Annoyed, I knock on my PDC's cover.

written by Gligar on Sep 20, 2011 17:58Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Central and Alpha subsectors (thermal imaging)

Speed-Y surmises that someone used an EMP against them. That's bad.

He orders that Mick-R be left with IntSec. They have other things to worry about.

Things such as getting to Outfitting... would PLC even be operating with no power?

How do they even get there without lifts?

Jam-Y agrees that they have to hurry! But are they going to have to run?

He begins running back to the group, and ends up colliding with Nukabot. Thud.⁶³⁷

Mick-R pleads for the team to not terminate him. He says that he is a good technician, and can help them. But only if they don't terminate him.

Azir-R isn't listening. He's heard that sort of thing before. He also agrees that they need to get to Outfitting fast.

He tries to locate Jam-Y. But all he ends up doing is colliding with something clone-shaped.

Speed-Y suggests they terminate Mick-R for treason. Hopefully, he won't reclone.

Joris-R fruitlessly looks for some light sources. In mild annoyance, he taps the back of his PDC, rather sharply.

Almost as if in answer, with a beep and a flicker of indicator lights, Nukabot begins to reboot. Not only that, but PDCs begin working again.

The main lights remain off, though.

One of the guards is caught unawares by the sudden light, and almost jumps out of his skin.

The guard with everyone's ME cards hands them back. "Well, it looks like someone's got their work cut out for them. So get going. We'll just detain this little traitor here."

Suddenly, a voice comes over the PA. "Attention, citizens, this is Tech Services. We apologise for the inconvenience. There has been a commie disturbance, causing a temporary loss of some services. We're working to get everything back to normal. If you see anything abnormal, don't hesitate to report it. Thank you for your co-operation."

Reactor shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango puzzles over recent events. They definitely shouldn't have happened.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 20, 2011 18:06

"You back with us Nukabot? Any damage from that?"

⁶³⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: That... could be interesting... Have a Perversity Point for that.)

I access my PDC and see if there's any of the message we were receiving prior to the blackout.

written by Speeder on Sep 20, 2011 18:28

"I hope if that pulse fried anything on Nukabot, to be the asimov again... since Nukabot loyalty is unquestionable, thus they are redundant."

I check if my PDC is already, and attempt to send that message again to "monitor guy".

I take back my ME card.

As I notice Jam on the ground, I facepalm again... In fact my forehead is probably faintly red now.

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 20, 2011 18:44

I use my PDC to cast some light, and find Jam.

"Non-Treasonous team member here is hurt!"

written by Malkom on Sep 20, 2011 20:34

Mick-R becomes incoherent from the extreme pain in his arm and starts gabbling, slowly at first then faster and faster. He also begins to run around randomly in the only slightly less penetrating darkness...

...plowing into one of the Intsec clones. "Vattechcrappity wakkawakka! Googoo!" He tries to hug the IntSec. Now, who's betting he doesn't get a laser in the head for that? ...nobody? Dang, I was hoping to win some credits there. Anyway, the Tech Services announcement apparently took some time to process, but here's a reaction: "Oooo techytech servies!" He makes a feeble thumbs-up sign (if he's still alive) before teetering and fainting...

I'm willing to bet he looked pretty ridiculous doing that.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 20, 2011 21:38

I finish up on whatever duties remain for me to do that are either optional, or obligatory on my part.

written by Gligar on Sep 20, 2011 23:24Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Central and Alpha subsectors

L4-O asks Nukabot if it's operational, and if anything is damaged. "I am still performing self-tests," the forkbot replies, "but initial indications are that nothing is damaged. However, I am at a loss to explain what just happened. One moment I am fully functional, the next I am powering up for a cold boot. Does anyone have an explanation?"

Speed-Y hopes that if there is any damage, it is limited to the asimov circuits. He seems to think that Nukabot does not need them.

The guards think otherwise. "What did you just say, citizen? That sounded a little... suspicious."

Speed-Y checks his PDC, and tries to make a call... strange, he forgot the number...

He then notices Jam-Y, illuminated by Azir-R's own PDC, and facepalms. Again. He seems to be really good at that.

Azir-R explains that Jam-Y is hurt. Obviously.

Mick-R... seems to be broken. His babbling and attempts to hug a guard are met with truncheons. "QUIET, you!"

crack

"Oh, your head did not just break my truncheon! That's a 50-credit fine for you! One more from you and it'll be the termination centre!"

But Mick-R keeps going with more drivel. Apparently, he's too broken to notice.

"THAT DOES IT!"

Mick-R is dragged off, through the door into Central Subsector.

Termination Centre, O Level, Central Subsector

As it happens, the termination centre is almost right outside the checkpoint. The centre consists of a desk, near which is a waiting area that's currently empty. Behind the desk are several booths which sort of resemble cloning tanks, but very obviously have the opposite purpose: instead of creating a clone, they destroy one.

Mick-R is placed in one. He slumps to the floor, having passed out.

Two guards remain at the booth. The other two head to the desk, presumably to file paperwork.

Lights on the booth flicker on. A sinister-looking thing above Mick-R begins to hum.

Reactor Shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango moves to another section of the shield, as directed. Not long now...

written by Jam on Sep 21, 2011 00:19

I continue being unconscious... A rather large bruise starts to form on my forehead...

written by Malkom on Sep 21, 2011 02:07

Mick-R stirs for just a moment, trying to make a thumbs-up sign before passing out again. He doesn't even notice the sinister equipment over his head.

If he did, he'd probably be happy to be terminated by the latest tech!

written by Lightning4 on Sep 21, 2011 07:13

"Speed-Y thinks maybe it was an EMP blast. Possibly commie in origin... it hit everything here. No lights, PDCs, anything..."

I see that Mick-R is gone.

"Well, the problem with him seems to be sorted out now. I suppose we should start moving again as soon as Nukabot finishes self tests..."

written by Speeder on Sep 21, 2011 11:31

I turn to the guard that found my comment suspicious.

"Oh, during the last mission, his asimov circuits got fried, yet Nukabot remained loyal to the team and performing admirably.

Of course, during post-mission repairs, those circuits got repaired...

But between for example the circuits that control the motor, or power distribution, and asimov, I would say that asimov is in lower priority IN THIS BOT, of course, that already proved itself reliable without them."

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 21, 2011 12:01

No one is assisting Jam, but I lack any medical training, and I am unsure how long we'd have to wait for a docbot in this current crisis.

"Hey wasn't someone taking medical courses with Jam recently? Might want to come here and help him out.

At least help lift him up onto Nukabot."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 21, 2011 12:56

I think to myself, as I watch, blink and breathe.

Hmm...

No... Probably not. I haven't heard a thing from Headgrabber. At least, not recently.

Though 'recently' is a sort of subjective sort of thing, isn't it?

written by Gligar on Sep 21, 2011 18:51

Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Central and Alpha subsectors

Jam-Y continues being unconscious. A rather ugly bruise starts to form on his forehead.

L4-O relays Speed-Y's suspicions to Nukabot. He's about to mention Mick-R before he notices that he's already been taken away. He suggests that the team get moving once Nukabot is done with its tests.

Speed-Y explains to the remaining guard that Nukabot has proved to be loyal even without the asimovs. "Well, I don't believe it. All bots need asimovs, or else they go on a rampage. It happens every time. But even then, they're touchy... I heard there's one scrubot who keeps trying to watch Mandatory Team Troubleshooter... of course, it lacks the memory capacity and crashes whenever it does. Waste of time."

Azir-R draws attention back to Jam-Y. No-one is helping him... wasn't there someclone taking medical training along with him?

Finally, Nukabot beeps. "Self-test complete. No errors detected."

Termination Centre, O level, Central Subsector

The sinister-looking thing begins to glow.

Mick-R twitches slightly, as if he's trying to lift his arms. But he's cut off by the sinister-looking thing, which, rather rudely, opens up and emits a wide beam of superheated plasma, which engulfs Mick-R. He doesn't even have time to scream as his body is disintegrated.

Mick-R's skeleton remains within the beam for a few seconds after the rest of him is dust, before disintegrating itself.

Leaving nothing but a pair of smoking boots. Some things never change.

The beam shuts off.

Reactor Shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango spends the next few minutecycles thinking. He hasn't had a visit from a certain mutant recently...

written by Speeder on Sep 21, 2011 19:35

Upon mention of that certain bot, I start to laugh out loud.

"Oh, I KNOW this bot... I do not think I have permission to explain EXACTLY what happened to him, but let's say that it was originally a Idea bot, and that it was changed to seemly now, a scrubot, as punishment. Thus it still want to do idea bot stuff, but lack capacity to do so... I liked that punishment... Even when punishing bots, Friend Computer is that awesome and great."

I look at Nukabot.

"Great! Now I think we can move out... after..."

I look at Jam.

Then I keep looking at Jam.

"What we do now? With him?"

written by Malkom on Sep 21, 2011 21:47⁶³⁸

Mick-R's clothing remainders, sadly, fail to do anything useful or even mildly interesting.

written by Jam on Sep 21, 2011 23:27

I (perhaps) start to stir a bit, and raise a hand to my head...

"Uugh..."

Then stop suddenly, and open my eyes... I stare at my hand for a while, then start inspecting my wrist...

written by Gligar on Sep 21, 2011 23:30

Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Central and Alpha subsectors

Speed-Y knows the bot the guard's referring to. You remember it, right? It used to be an idea bot? Apparently, it still thinks it's an idea bot or something... Speed-Y compliments Friend Computer for that decision.

(Or maybe it really likes Mandatory Team Troubleshooter. Insofar as a bot can like anything. Maybe it just keeps pressing the Like button.)

He then looks at Jam-Y... what should they do with him?

As if in answer, Jam-Y stirs somewhat. Groggily, he stares at his hand for a bit, before moving on to his wrist. They look like a hand and a wrist.

⁶³⁸ MALKOM: (OOC: Smoking boots, great! 😊)

Reactor Shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

A klaxon sounds One of the techs announces, "That's the end of the volunteer period. To those who volunteered, or who were volunteered, thank you."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 22, 2011 08:16

I notice Jam seems a bit woozy.

"Um... besides the blackout. Not sure, what happened? I wasn't paying attention what with Mick-R and all..."

written by Speeder on Sep 22, 2011 11:12

I look at Jam, then after a while I say.

"I think you hit your head in something, probably Nukabot. It made a loud metallic thud."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 22, 2011 12:13

I snap out so quickly, I don't think I even realise that I snapped out of that odd thinking pattern.

Ah... Time to get going...

With one last look and blink, I turn and exit the chamber.

written by Gligar on Sep 22, 2011 17:16

Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Central and Alpha subsectors

L4-O tells Jam-Y that, apart from the blackout, he was too preoccupied with Mick-R to notice anything else.

Speed-Y adds that Jam-Y probably hit his head on something metallic, probably Nukabot.

"So," the bot asks, "are we continuing?"

Reactor shielding chamber, I sublevel, Deep subsector

Mango takes one final look at the shield, and heads for the door with the rest.

Reactor shielding entryway, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

As he exits the chamber, Mango notes that the lifdt isn't here. Someone seems to have called it. It's ascending.

written by Speeder on Sep 22, 2011 17:20

"As soon Jam can move, we go."

written by 4616599 on Sep 22, 2011 19:26

I wait for Jam-Y.

"Need any support? I've spare boots."⁶³⁹ written by Jam on Sep 22, 2011 21:28⁶⁴⁰

I try to stand up...

"I think I'm okay, sir... My head hurts though, and I've got a strange feeling I'm forgetting something important..."

⁶³⁹ MALKOM: (OOC: When d'you think Mick-R will reclone?)

⁶⁴⁰ JAM: (OOC: It seems the phone company in my area is having serious problems, as I am completely unable to connect to the internet from my house... I'm not sure how long it will take to fix that, so I might miss a few turns...)

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 22, 2011 21:50

I call the lift if it hasn't been called yet, and wait patiently for it to arrive.

written by Gligar on Sep 22, 2011 23:35

Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Central and Alpha subsectors

Speed-Y says that they'll get underway when Jam-Y is ready.

Joris-R offers Jam-Y support, in the form of boots. As if those would help.

Jam-Y tries to get up. He's a bit unsteady, but he manages it.

He reports that his head hurts, and that he might be forgetting something...

...did he just address Joris-R as 'sir'?

Reactor shielding entryway, I sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango goes to call the lift to find that someclone has beaten him to it.

He doesn't have long to wait, though, as the lift soon arrives. Clones begin to pile in.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

A terminal fires up and displays a cloning request.

Not long after, a clone begins to form in one of the facility's tanks.⁶⁴¹

written by Jam on Sep 23, 2011 01:10

"Why's everything so dark... And who's that?"

I point to Azir-R...

Then I look down at my arm, or more specifically, at the YELLOW jumpsuit covering it...

"AH! What? Why am I wearing a YELLOW jumpsuit?! No wait! I'm not committing treason! The commies snuck it on me while I wasn't looking, I swear! Look, I'm taking it off right now! Don't shoot me!!"

I take off the jumpsuit as fast as I can, and back a steps away from it...⁶⁴²

⁶⁴¹ MALKOM: (OOC: twiddles virta-thumbs, makes up a poem...)

*Clone in the clonin' tank,
Got some money in the bank?
Needjer credits, wantcher credits,
Give them to me now!*

*Thief at the cloning tanks!
Set off the lasers, cranks!
Zap zap! Zap zap! Got our traitor now!*

)

⁶⁴² JAM: (ooc: Also, nice poem Malkom 😊)

written by Speeder on Sep 23, 2011 01:50

I look at Jam, baffled.

"Ok, put your jumpsuit back, you are Jam-Y, I repeat, Jam-YELLOW Seemly after hitting your head, you forgot some stuff. Also, it is important to you know, that you are loyalty officer."

Then I sigh and say.

"How I hate accidental brainscrubs. They tend to make people forget their trust level too, that is problematic."

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 23, 2011 01:58

"Yeah, and I'm your happiness officer. I expect a certain level of happiness from someone who just (re)learned they've been promoted to yellow clearance!"

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 23, 2011 06:58

I pile in along with the rest of the clones into the lift, and then just listen to what everyone else has to say about things, whether it be news, gossip, or technical aspects of things or electricity. I move if necessary, and when I arrive at the right floor, I step off and continue on my way.

I wonder if they ever got around to fixing the problem with the lighting...

written by Lightning4 on Sep 23, 2011 15:18

I put on my poker face and just... watch Jam-Y.

"Umm. Hit your head harder than you think?"

written by Gligar on Sep 23, 2011 18:36

Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Central and Alpha subsectors

Jam-Y looks at Azir-R, but doesn't recognise him. He asks why it's so dark.

Then he realises that he's wearing a YELLOW jumpsuit. And... it's clear now. He's suffering form amnesia from that clonk on the head. He probably thinks he's still RED... and that place his last memory at partway through the previous mission.

Panicking, he claims that he's not committing treason, and that the commies put the jumpsuit on him. He starts taking off the jumpsuit.

Speed-Y tells him to put it back on. After all, he, Jam-Y, is YELLOW. He's also the Loyalty Officer. Speed-Y then sighs. He hates accidental brainscrubs, they're so problematic.

Azir-R chimes in that, as Happiness Officer, he expects Jam-Y to be happy about being YELLOW.

John-R also chimes in. "I don't know if you remember, sir, but you're also a mutant. Registered, of course."

L4-O tries to assume a neutral expression and asks whether Jam-Y hit his head a bit harder than he thought.⁶⁴³

⁶⁴³ GLIGAR: (OOC: I sense fun on the horizon! +1pp to Jam.)

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

The clone continues to form. It's now recognisable as Mick-R-NRK-2.

A lift

Mango hits the button for A Level. Other clones also reach over and press buttons.

As the lift rises, Mango listens in to what everyone else is saying.

A couple of clones are worried that they might have picked up mutations or something from all the radiation. Another clone snaps that the whole "radiation equals mutation" is a lie, before being shushed by a fourth.

written by Jam on Sep 24, 2011 02:39

I look at the band on my wrist...

"Oh, so I did get registered after all..."

"..."

"I MEAN... uh... Oh, I'm a mutant? When did that happen? What kind am I? Can I blast clone's minds? Can I make things fly? Can I set things on fire?"

You know, that's the last thing I remember... Being set on fire. Oh, there was a warbot too. I guess I must have died, and been recloned... So, we're still headed to the compnode right? How much did I forget? An hourcycle? Two? And I somehow registered my mutation and got promoted in that time?"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 24, 2011 03:39

"The compnode? Th-..."

I think for a moment.

"I don't actually know how long ago that was. Over a weekcycle at least!"

I look at Jam-Y and think for a moment.

"Hey wait woah. You knew you were a mutant even when we were going to the compnode?"

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 24, 2011 03:45

I think I'm going to stay out of this bit.

written by Gligar on Sep 24, 2011 18:20

Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Central and Alpha subsectors

Jam-Y looks at his armband. Then... he slips up. He doesn't seem surprised at being registered... but realises a bit too late.

Even when he corrects himself, he doesn't sound very sincere. Though he seems to have forgotten his mutation.

His thoughts about his mutation turn to his last memory. He says that he last remembers being incinerated on the way to the compnode, and remembers a warbot. He suspects that he's only lost an hourcycle or two of memories, which was apparently enough to register and get promoted.

L4-O corrects him. It wasn't an hourcycle... more like a weekcycle or more, though he doesn't know for sure.

Then he notices Jam-Y's slip-up, and questions him about it.

Azir-R keeps his mouth shut. The whole compnode thing is a bit before his time, after all.

John-R has also noticed the slip-up. "So you knew already, did you, sir?"

Nukabot also speaks up. "Hey, citizens! Are we getting moving or not?"

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R's clone begins twitching as memories are downloaded into it.

Presently, it stops.

The tank begins to drain.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 24, 2011 19:12

"I think we can probably discuss this on the trip... let's go, guys."

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 24, 2011 22:00

Was just gonna say "Lets 'walk' and talk, but you beat me to it."

I grab onto Nukabot in the same spot.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 25, 2011 12:05

I decide not to contribute to the most likely treasonous discussion, and continue to wait in the lift.

Of course, I try to estimate how quickly the lift is passing floors, and forming an estimate till I arrive.

written by 4616599 on Sep 25, 2011 15:41

"You're Jam-Y, sir. Does the name Rapt-G sound familiar to you?"

written by Jam on Sep 25, 2011 17:21

"I missed a whole weekcycle? Wow... So, I'm guessing we made it to the compnode alright, and got FC restarted?"

I look towards L4-O.

"Of course I didn't know I was a mutant! That'd be treasonous, right! But too bad I didn't have it while we were trying to get to the compnode... I could have used it to make the commies trust me and belie—"

I stop suddenly, as I realize I wasn't told yet what my mutant power is...

"Uh... I mean... Okay, fine, yeah, I knew I was a mutant the whole time... I've been thinking I should register, and it looks like I did decide to reveal I had a mutation..."

written by Gligar on Sep 25, 2011 18:41

Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Central and Alpha subsectors

L4-O suggests that they continue the conversation en-route. They've delayed enough.

Azir-R agrees, and gets into position. And not a moment too soon, as the bot starts moving almost immediately.

Corridors, O Level, Central Subsector

As they traverse the corridors, Joris-R asks Jam-Y if he remembers Rapt-G. But Jam-Y is more interested in the fact that he's lost an entire weekcycle. He asks about the outcome of the previous mission, before returning to the subject of his mutation. He claims that he didn't know back then... a shame, since he could have made the connection — er... actually, he knew all along. He'd been planning to register, honest.

The group soon comes to the lift they used to get down from P Level.

A lift

Meanwhile, many levels below, another lift, containing Mango-NHG and the other volunteers, is rising.

Mango himself keeps quiet while the discussion continues. He watches the level indicator, and tries to work out how long it'll be before they get to A Level.

Actually, it shouldn't be too long now. The lift stops at D Sublevel, and allows some clones to disembark before rising again.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

The cloning tank containing Mick-R-NRK-2 finishes draining. Mick-R himself is released from the equipment holding him, causing him to drop to the base of the tank.

The tank itself does not open.

From somewhere outside, a red light can be seen.

written by Speeder on Sep 25, 2011 22:42⁶⁴⁴

I just keep looking at Jam, with a face of... of... I do not even know.

But I hold my place as the bot moves.

written by Malkom on Sep 26, 2011 00:47

Mick-R's eyes flutter open and he sees the red light. Almost instantly he begins to hyperventilate (red lights are always a sign of failing technology, right? And if you're inside a machine, and you see a red light, well...) It takes some strength of will to calm down enough to look at the machinery, trying to figure out if there's any buttons or levers or emergency switches or anything that he can interact with.

⁶⁴⁴ SPEEDER: (OOC: I forgot to tell you people I was going on a trip in a place without even phones or cellphones)

Failing that, he tries to see if there's a way to take it apart. Maybe I can do some sort of manual override or something!

written by Jam on Sep 26, 2011 02:28

I stare at Speed-Y for a while, and try to decipher his unreadable expression.

After looking at him for a while, I give up, and turn to Joris-R instead...

"Um... Rapt-G? I don't think I've heard that name before. It seems kinda familiar though..."

I think for a while...

"Oh, I know! It was... no wait, that was Derek-G..."

I think a bit more, and seem a bit troubled that I can't remember who Joris-R is talking about. After a while, I give up.

"Well, anyway, what did I miss this last weekcycle? Surely we're not still on the same mission, right?"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 26, 2011 07:46

"Oh no, definitely not. We have a new mission to investigate power disturbances. In fact, an EMP attack happened not too long ago..."

I stop for a moment to check if the lift is there, then tell Nukabot to proceed if it is.

"I think we're going to... G level was it? Delta Subsector?" I shrug.

I turn back to Jam and resume speaking to him.

"As for what you missed this last weekcycle or so, not much. The bunker has been appropriated for our use as our own HQ, and we all got jobs. I dunno what everyone else does, but I'm in the Armed Forces and now even lead a squad!"

I smile.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 26, 2011 09:50

I don't think I've been checked for mutations yet... They'll probably expect me to check up...

I continue waiting as the lift progresses on its way up, trying to remember if I could be checked at A level, or if it was another level...

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 26, 2011 13:56

I try to the best of my ability to avoid hitting things.

written by Gligar on Sep 26, 2011 19:56

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Impact with the base of the cloning tank causes Mick-R to awaken. He momentarily panics (but the light's his clearance, surely? 😊 That means it must be good, right? 😊) before trying to find a way out. There are no controls on the inside of the tank, and no obvious way of opening it.

He tries to find a way to force it open, but quickly realises that the only way the tank will open is from the outside. He recalls, from the dim recesses of his Complex Orientation

Indoctrination back in the crèche, that this is a design feature, meant to protect cloning technicians from berserk mutants.

Outside, a RED clone can be seen, checking tanks. Apparently, she is looking for the source of the red light.

Corridor, outside lift, Central Subsector

Speed-Y's expression is... well, it's certainly an expression.

Jam-Y tries to decipher Speed-Y's expression for a while, but gives up.

To Joris-R, he says that he doesn't remember Rapt-G. He does remember a Derek-G, though.

He thinks for a bit more, before asking what's happened in the last weekcycle. They can't still be on the same mission, surely?

L4-O assures him that they're not. He briefly outlines their current mission, and their current destination.

"Delta Subsector... that would be... this way." Nukabot continues past the lift, seemingly headed for the Hub.

L4-O then briefly tells Jam-Y about what else has happened.

Azir-R just holds on.

A lift

Mango reflects on the fact that he hasn't been checked for mutations. Perhaps he should get that sorted at some point. Can he do it on the way?

He tries to think of how he could get tested. There are mutant scanning machines at many IntSec checkpoints, he realises.

He doesn't have time to think of any more options before the lift arrives at A Level.

written by Malkom on Sep 26, 2011 22:42

Gotta make the biggest noise possible! Mick-R gathers himself back then heaves his whole body at the cloning tank's wall, trying to get noticed. He instantly yells in pain as his head slams into the barrier.

written by Speeder on Sep 26, 2011 22:48

"I wonder where we would be without Nukabot..."

I look at Jam again.

"Well... you lost the part, where you ate awesome YELLOW stuff with me on breakfast, including FRUITS, like BANANA!!!!"

written by Gligar on Sep 26, 2011 23:16

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R tries to get the RED clone's attention. How does he do this? He throws himself against the side of the tank. Which, judging from his reaction, really hurts. But hey, it made some noise, and made the RED clone look.

She notices Mick-R in the clone tank. "Oh! Hold on a minute. I'll be right over once I've seen to this light... oh! That's you. Hang in there."

She disappears into the gloom, reappearing a moment later with a crowbar. But she doesn't use it yet. Instead, she grabs something on the side of the tank and pulls it.

Whatever it is, it made the hatch move slightly, but not enough. She tries again.

Corridors, O Level, Central Subsector

Nukabot carries on. Speed-Y wonders where they'd be without the bot. Probably still in the previous mission.

He then reminds Jam-Y of the breakfasts they've eaten together. Including such things as bananas!

written by Jam on Sep 26, 2011 23:21

I respond to Speed-Y.

"Too bad... Whatever a banana is, it sounds tasty! I hope my memory comes back soon... I mean, it'll come back, right? Right?!"

I start to look a bit nervous.

"Uh, well anyway, how'd the end of the mission go? Did we get to the compnode, and terminate a bunch of commies? I didn't miss it while I was recloning, did I?"

written by Speeder on Sep 26, 2011 23:25

I shake my head.

"We did rebooted the compnode, then we had to get rid of commies on the reactor, they were trying to blow it up to free mutants or something like that, and then we had to defuse the bomb, unfortunately that was not really possible, and I had to terminate myself... Unfortunately this also terminated Massacrebot."

I look sad...

Then I comment.

"But if you ask me, it is unlike the commies to free the mutants, I REALLY think a mutant was in fact controlling the commies."

written by Malkom on Sep 27, 2011 00:10

Mick-R doesn't notice. He slumps down in the cloning tank, holding his head. Ugh! Everything's s-spinning! He feels faint.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 27, 2011 11:26

I exit the lift, and continue onwards, all the while keeping both eyes looking for a IntSec checkpoint. If I see one, I head towards it.

With these recent events, they're sure to be around somewhere...

written by Lightning4 on Sep 27, 2011 17:44

I look at Jam.

"You alone killed like, ten or twenty commies... a whole bunch on some sleeping commies after you spiked some TeaSir..."

I think back to O sublevel.

"Then yeah, the nuke... we tried to all get to the bomb range but that simply wasn't possible."

I shudder.

"Too many mutants..."

"Eventually Speed-Y went on ahead in Massacrebot. The rest of us eventually left once it was clear that we couldn't hold out any longer against those mutants. You weren't with us though, you were already off registering your mutation."

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 27, 2011 19:43

I listen to these stories intently if I can hear them clearly

written by 4616599 on Sep 28, 2011 15:53

I relax, a weird look forming on my face, almost like I had a controller a tad busy in 'reality'.

written by Gligar on Sep 28, 2011 16:14

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Jam-Y can't remember the bananas, but they sound tasty. He hopes he gets his memories back soon...

He asks about the end of the mission.

Speed-Y tells him that they sorted out the compnode, and then went to the reactor to clean up there. And since the commies had a bomb with them, they had to see to that, a feat which cost the lives of Speed-Y... and Massacrebot.

Speed-Y believes that it is strange for commies to be attempting to free mutants. They had to be under mutant control somehow.

L4-O reminds Jam-Y of his little trick with the TeaSir, which allowed him to terminate quite a few commies at the reactor.

He then thinks back to the bomb... they had to go to O Sublevel to sort it out. They ran into a lot of mutants down there. Speed-Y made a run for it and made it to the bomb range in time. But of course Jam-Y was registering his mutation at that point.

Azir-R listens to these stories with interest. This is good stuff.

Soon, Nukabot comes up against yet another checkpoint.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R doesn't notice what the clone outside is doing, and slumps against the floor of the tank, holding his head. The clone gasps, and grabs her crowbar, jamming it in where the hatch would open. She gives it a heave, and finally manages to get the tank open somewhat. "Are you alright, citizen?"

A level, Epsilon Subsector

Mango goes looking for a checkpoint. There must be one somewhere.

He finds that one has been installed just outside on the roadway.

written by Malkom on Sep 28, 2011 16:33

"I... oh crud... ugh no."

Mick-R blinks, struggling to remain conscious.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 28, 2011 18:23

I sigh and present my ME cards and such.

"Maybe this checkpoint will go smoother than the rest. I won't hold my breath..."

written by Speeder on Sep 28, 2011 18:28

I keep looking at the checkpoint...

"Say, are the readers working at least?"

I look to see how much power returned.

But following protocol, I present my ME card anyway.

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 28, 2011 20:14

I present my ME card.

"It should go smoother, since Mick isn't here.."

written by Gligar on Sep 28, 2011 21:08

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R tries to remain awake...

The clone replies, "Oh dear... looks like I'll have to call a docbot... She opens the tank fully. "But then, what can you do when power goes berserk?"

Internal Security checkpoint, O Level, between Central and Delta Subsectors

L4-O presents his ME card. A guard takes it, and scans it. "Oh good... those are back up. Now all we need are the lights... will someone get onto Power Services?!"

Speed-Y looks around. Apart from the lights, he can't see anything else that is still down... then again, there's not much to see here. He also presents his ME card, which is scanned.

Azir-R does likewise, reflecting that things should go a little smoother without Mick-R.

written by Malkom on Sep 28, 2011 21:49

Mick-R blinks woozily and slumps back against the tank wall with a groan. His eyes slide shut... looks like he managed to get himself knocked out.

written by Jam on Sep 28, 2011 22:56

I also present my ME card.

"I wonder who caused the power outage, and why... Well, we'll probably know soon enough."

written by Gligar on Sep 29, 2011 16:25

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Speaking of Mick-R... he passes out.

The other clone sighs, and pulls out her PDC. "I need a docbot to Cloning Station 14, immediately! But I'm not paying for yet another one."

Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Central and Delta Subsectors

Jam-Y also hands over his ME card. He's followed by John-R. The two cards are scanned and returned. "Anyone else?"

written by Malkom on Sep 29, 2011 16:33

Mick-R remains unconscious like a pro.

written by Speeder on Sep 29, 2011 16:52

I look at the others...

"Common people, we have to get to outfitting to then get to Power Services, those lights out are OUR job to fix! Commooooon, hand out those ME cards!"

written by 4616599 on Sep 29, 2011 17:00

I take my card out

written by Gligar on Sep 29, 2011 19:09

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R remains passed out.

The clone comes off the PDC and sighs... looks like there's a delay. She looks at the slimy Mick-R, and at her jumpsuit... she's just had this cleaned!...and grabs Mick-R and pulls him out of the tank. Sigh.

Internal Security checkpoint, O level, between Central and Delta Subsectors

Speed-Y looks at the rest of the team. What are they waiting for? They've got places to go, things to do. They've got to see to these lights! And the sooner they get through the checkpoint, the sooner they can get going!

Joris-R hands over his card, as does Lucas-R. The cards, once again, are scanned.

Roadway

Mango seems to have spaced out. One of the clones at the checkpoint is looking at him suspiciously.

written by Speeder on Sep 29, 2011 19:43

"Everyone is scanned?"

I check if I have my ME card on me, and then wait Joris to press the gas or Nukabot to move out on its own.

"I hate the lack of lights, everything looks infrared, I have no idea if we are in a allowed area or not, or the clearance of people nearby..."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 29, 2011 21:02

"Well, Nukabot's headlamps are available."

If they aren't on, I turn them and see if I can spot anything of note in the corridor ahead.

"If everyone's scanned, let's go then."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 30, 2011 05:29

Ah... There's one. Of many.

I go over and present myself, being very polite and all.

"Um... Excuse me, if this isn't too disruptive, I was wondering if you could get me checked for mutations."

written by Azirphaeli on Sep 30, 2011 13:12

"I handed mine over, so i should be good"

I continue holding onto nukabot.

written by Gligar on Sep 30, 2011 17:59

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R remains passed out. Still.

The clone gets back on the PDC. She seems to be looking up something.

She smiles...

"Ah yes... he hasn't signed for his clone yet..."

Internal Security Checkpoint, O level, between Central and Delta Subsectors

Speed-Y asks if everyone's card has been scanned. He checks if he has his, and realises that the guard still has it.

In fact, the guard's done with the cards, and passes them back.

Speed-Y waits to get going. He dislikes darkness, since he can't tell what clearance anything is.

L4-O reminds him that they have Nukabot's headlights. Which are already on.

L4-O looks ahead into Delta Subsector. There are few clones milling about, seemingly installing some sort of emergency lighting. But surely that's not right... these "emergency lights" seem to consist of short black rods with a burning string poking out one end. And the light they're putting out is rather dim.

L4-O suggests that they make a move.

Azir-R keeps holding onto Nukabot.

"If that is everything," Nukabot says, "let us move." And it starts up again, heading into Delta Subsector.

Internal Security Checkpoint, Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango approaches the checkpoint and speaks to one of the guards. He asks whether it would be possible to be scanned for mutations.

"What do you think we're doing here? Head counting? You'll get scanned when it's your turn, not before. Can't you see the queue?"

And indeed there is a queue. Most of them seem to be coming from the other side, heading towards the domescraper. And of course, there is just the one scanner.

written by Malkom on Sep 30, 2011 18:38

Mick-R is still passed out. No QuickWake mutations here!

written by Gligar on Sep 30, 2011 21:50

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R is still passed out when the docbot arrives. "What is the nature of the medical emergency?"

The clone replies, "We have a clone here who knocked himself out in the cloning tank."

"What? How in the complex did he manage that? Who is he, anyway? And who is paying?"

"I'll go look. And he's paying. Not just for this, mind." The clone rushes off.

The docbot starts looking at Mick-R.

O Level, Delta Subsector

Nukabot continues, heading down the corridor while those other cones continue installing their "emergency lights". It's off that they don't seem to be wearing Tech Services badges...

But eventually, the team comes to a RED concourse. It's a bit brighter here, due to the big vidscreen, which is currently playing a news report.

written by Malkom on Sep 30, 2011 22:16

Mick-R chooses this moment to stir a little and moan.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 30, 2011 23:09

"Strange method of lightning those clones have chosen... wonder what's going on..."

I turn my attention to the news report.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 01, 2011 06:18

"Oh... Full apologies then."

I go and wait in the queue, glancing at what timecycle of the day it is.

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 01, 2011 14:25

I too watch the screen.

written by Jam on Oct 01, 2011 17:31⁶⁴⁵

"Odd... What are those clones doing..."

written by Gligar on Oct 01, 2011 18:31

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R moans as the docbot completes its inspection. "Citizen, can you hear me? What are your symptoms? What is the square root of 76.48?"

The other cone returns, and says, "I found this guy's ME Card in the Incoming pile. It says his name's Mick-R-NRK-2."

Concourse O2, Delta Subsector

L4-O comments on the "emergency lighting" before turning his attention to the vidscreen. On the screen, a newsreader is talking about the recent takeover, and the more recent power glitches, and is reporting on possible reasons. These range from "mutants made them do it" to "it's a plot to overthrow The Computer by cutting off the High Programmers".

Jam-Y is more interested in the clones in the corridor, though. He watches one of them as he installs a bracket for one of these "emergency lights". He almost seems to have no idea what he's doing. I mean look a- wait a minute, did that clone just catch fire? Twice, even?

The clone runs around screaming...⁶⁴⁶

Internal Security Checkpoint, Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango joins the queue. As he waits, he tries to ascertain the current timecycle. After a moment, he notices a clock in the checkpoint, reading 09:20. Is that all it is?

written by Malkom on Oct 01, 2011 20:12

Mick-R blinks blearily at the docbot, trying to focus. "Got... my head... tank..." He pauses, squinting at the 'bot. "Hey. You're not Nukabot!"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 01, 2011 20:25

"Another takeover huh. Well, looks like we've got stuff to shoot!"

I take out and load Turbo since it seems we'll need it at some point.

written by Jam on Oct 01, 2011 23:18

"Ah! What the..."

I stare at the burning clone, trying to work out what happened...

"There's a—a fire-making mutant somewhere nearby!"

I look at Speed-Y...

"Sir, I was just trying to get inside the head of that clone over there, and he set on fire! He must know something, and the mutants are trying to cover it up! It might even be multiple mutants! And, how did they know I was targeting him, unless... Unless there was a telepathic mutant like me with them too!"

I start chanting advertising jingles...

⁶⁴⁵ JAM: (ooc: Sorry, I've been a bit busy lately)

⁶⁴⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: [DFSR] gains a Perversity Point.)

"We should get out of here, fast!"

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 02, 2011 11:04

Eh... Just that few hourcycles...?

I'd think that would have been a little longer.

While continuing to focus upon the queue, I think of my options for some breakfast that I didn't have yet. I wonder if they'd still be serving those meals at this time.

Perhaps they're setting up the lunchcycle meals, or not. I can't be sure thanks to a lack of memory.

Then again, if I check positive at this checkpoint, perhaps I won't have to consider a meal after all.

I smile about it, since that means if nothing is there, I don't have to worry, and if I do, I'd be doing the right thing.

written by Speeder on Oct 02, 2011 13:47

I look at Jam, kinda scared.

Then I look around to see if any anti-fire measures are working.

If I do not see any, or no firefighters, I suggest someone should terminate the flaming guy for mercy, and security... You know, running flaming people tend to put lots of things on fire...

Wait, he is running toward WHAT?

written by 4616599 on Oct 02, 2011 14:36

I take out my spare jumpsuit and hop off Nukabot.

"Don't worry, citizens! I'll take care of this!"

I attempt to keep my distance from the clone, but still fling the jumpsuit on him, wrapping and beating him as much as possible.

written by Gligar on Oct 02, 2011 20:29

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Thinking that it's Nukabot, Mick-R blearily tries to answer the docbot... something about his head... but then realises his mistake. "No, citizen, I am not 'Nukabot', whatever that is. I am the docbot called out to see to you after you somehow knocked yourself out. And may I add, this is the first time I have dealt with a clone knocking themselves out inside their cloning tank. Are you not aware that the standard procedure is simply to knock?"

The docbot adds, "You seems to have gained a concussion, as well as Chronic Unhappiness Syndrome. Please wait while I formulate a suitable treatment, and calculate the price."

The clone adds, "Speaking of price... are you aware that, since you haven't yet signed your clone release form, your clone remains property of Tech Services? And are you aware that, since you now have a concussion, you have damaged Tech Services property (and thus, also Computer Property?) I'll have to fine you for that." She swipes Mick-R's card through an Me Card reader.

Concourse O2, Delta Subsector

Interpreting the news report as indication of a second takeover, L4-O loads Turbo.

Jam-Y reacts to the clone being set on fire. There must be a fire mutant nearby! They must be trying to terminate that clone because he knows something!

And the best part? He was only trying to figure out what the clone was doing! That must mean that they knew when he was using his power! Therefore, there must be a psionic mutant, too! They need to get out of there, fast!

Speed-Y looks on, troubled. Then he looks over at the burning clone. Fire suppression systems seem to be offline, and nobody seems to be doing anything about the clo- no, wait, never mind, some of the clone's colleagues are trying to put him out. Without too much success. And they're also being set on fire...

...wait a minute where are they going

Not Central Subsector...

Joris-R jumps off Nukabot and heads after them. He's got his spare jumpsuit in hand, and it looks like he's trying to throw it onto the original burning clone. It's kind of difficult when there are other burning clones in the way...

Unbeknownst to him, his jumpsuit catches fire from the burning clones.

Internal Security Checkpoint, Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango thinks. He hasn't had breakfast yet... would they still be serving it? If he remembers correctly, it should have been Soylent flavour Hot Fun and B3 Plain today.

Then again, if he tests positive, maybe it wouldn't matter...

The queue moves in front of him. Somewhere up front, a harsh buzzer sounds, followed by a high-pitched zap.

written by Malkom on Oct 02, 2011 21:22

"Just a minute now!" Mick-R shakes his head to clear it, and accomplishes the opposite. "Look here, Nukabot, you don't need to concern yourself with fines. You're a bot, for The Computer's sake! You don't have a credit balance! Slime in the vats, the things I hear these days..." He holds his head. "Computer help me, everything's spinning. Is it the End of All Tech?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 02, 2011 23:24

I sigh and facepalm before Speed-Y has a chance to do so himself.

I think for a moment then rustle through my cone rifle shells. Maybe there's, for whatever reason, a water-based shell that could work for putting out fires!

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 03, 2011 01:11

That's probably for communists... Probably.

I glance at whatever the result of that was.

written by Speeder on Oct 03, 2011 02:22

Since L4 stole my facepalm, I just watch, dumbfounded.

Then... I watch a little more.

"Soooo... we usually CAUSE fires, we are not good in putting them out... Someone has any idea?"

written by 4616599 on Oct 03, 2011 06:21

I continue batting away.

Then I notice my jumpsuit has caught fire.

"Ow! Hot! Hot!" I rip my jumpsuit off, and attempt to pour B3 on myself.

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 03, 2011 13:13

Is B3 Flammable?

Oh look at that, Joris had the idea already, nevermind.

written by Gligar on Oct 03, 2011 19:36

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

It still seems that Mick-R thinks he's talking to Nukabot.

He says that "Nukabot" shouldn't worry about fines, since, after all, it doesn't have a credit balance. He can't believe that a bot would say anything like that. Sigh... He holds his head.

"Once again," the docbot replies, "I am not 'Nukabot'. I am Docbot J-458645/C6. Second, though it is true that I do not have a credit balance, I am authorised to collect payment on behalf of others, such as Medical Services. Third, I have formulated your treatment. Prepare to receive treatment."

It extends a manipulator, on which is... not a chainsaw, for a change. Instead, the manipulator sports a syringe containing a swirly, translucent RED-and-gold liquid.

A rather large syringe.

It closes on Mick-R, adding, "I regret that my chainsaw is currently non-functional, therefore, I must resort to cruder methods."

Concourse O2, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y doesn't get a chance to facepalm at the scene before him, because L4-O gets to it first.

But L4-O doesn't hold it for long. Instead, he rummages through his cone rifle shells, and, thinking back to that training session, tries to find one containing water or fire-suppressant. Unfortunately, he doesn't seem to have one. No wait, there is an oxygen-suppressant shell with a proximity fuse...

Speed-Y just stands there, dumbfounded. After a moment, he notes that, although they're good at starting fires, they're not so good at putting them out. Does anyone have any ideas?

Oblivious, Joris-R continues trying to get the the original burning clone.

Then, he finally realises that he's on fire.

He takes off his jumpsuit... and realises that the fire has spread to his skin. He reaches for one of his cans of B3.

Now... I'm not sure if you remember, but... this came up before. Here, I'll jog your memory:

Gligar said:

As it turns out, pouring a can of B3 onto a fire does help put it out... but when that fire is so close to a living clone, there are... complications. For example, if the fire were to spread to the clone, and the B3 poured on it, the burning sensation experienced by the clone intensifies greatly. Indeed, a clone who was previously unaware that they were on fire might be floored by the intense pain that they now feel when the B3 and the fire interact. The precise chemical interactions going on here are fascinating to chemical engineers, but are unfortunately of too high a clearance for me to go into here.

I'm sure that there is little difference in relative pain levels when the clone is aware that he's on fire...

Azir-R suggests the B3, but sees that Joris-R already thought of it. I wonder if he was aware of the complications of B3 and fire. Well, he is now.

Internal Security checkpoint, Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango tries to peek ahead to see what caused the buzzer.

It turns out to have come from the scanner. It seems to have detected, and subsequently vaporised, an unregistered mutant. There is now a scrubot at the scanner, cleaning up the resultant ash, and the obligatory smoking boots.

It is soon finished and the next clone steps up. It won't be long before it's Mango's turn.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 03, 2011 19:46

"FIRE IN THE HOLE! EVERYONE ON FIRE GET TOGETHER AND HOLD YOUR BREATH!"

I unload Turbo's current shell, and swap it for the oxygen suppressant.

If it's "safe" to do so, I fire right into the crowd of burning clones.

I hold my breath too in case we're too close to the shell going off.

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 03, 2011 20:08

I hold my breath as well, better to be safe than sorry they say!

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 03, 2011 22:42

I stare at the scanner for a bit, and decide this isn't the best way through, considering that there wasn't a safe way to determine without wasting another clone.

I decide to make my way out, in search of a location that can give me a check without the additional termination part...

written by Speeder on Oct 03, 2011 22:42

"Joris, hold your breath even if you are on fire!!!"

Then I hold my breath.

written by Gligar on Oct 04, 2011 00:59

Concourse O2, Delta Subsector

L4-O yells to the burning clones to hold their breath! He then unloads Turbo and replaces the shell with the oxygen suppressor. And finally, after sizing up the situation, he aims Turbo and lets it speak!

And speak it does. With a mighty crack, the shell shoots towards the burning clones...

...and falls to the floor.

Erm.

L4-O holds his breath, too. He doesn't know the shell's blast radius, after all. Or even if it's worked. Azir-R does likewise.

Speed-Y yells to Joris-R to hold his breath before doing the same.

Endless seconds tick by with no signs of life from the shell. The burning clones remain burning.

Internal Security checkpoint, Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango decides that getting scanned probably isn't worth getting terminated, and decides to try to find somewhere else.

He attempts to leave the queue, but finds himself staring down the barrel of a laser rifle. "And where do you think you are going? You asked for a scan, didn't you? That means you're going to get scanned!"

The clone in front of Mango steps into the scanner. The machine beeps, and announces "Please wait..."

A band of light runs up and down the clone for a few moments, before the machine emits a pleasing tone. "Subject is clean."

Concourse O2, Delta Subsector

That shell still just sits there as everyone hol-

CRACK

It breaks open, releasing some sort of grey powder, which turned black as everyone watches.

Slowly, very slowly, the fire starts going out.

Exactly how long can everyone hold their breaths?

written by Malkom on Oct 04, 2011 01:06

"Oh my word, this is getting really insane." Mick-R stares at the docbot like it's gone crazy. "What in Alpha Complex are you doing with that, Nukabot?! And who authorised you to collect credit for Technical Services? Really, this is too much! Who let out the clowns?!"

written by Speeder on Oct 04, 2011 01:21

After a while, if I am having difficulty holding my breath, I grab hold of the nearest clone and attempt to exchange air with him...

You know, the outgoing air still has oxygen...

written by Jam on Oct 04, 2011 01:40

I breathe while I can, and try to stay out of range of the powder and its effects.

If I can't breathe, I hold my breath and stop moving, to conserve oxygen...

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 04, 2011 01:56

Assuming the oxygen-less-ness has reached me, I keep holding my breath right now and hope that the effect dissipates.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 04, 2011 02:23

I use some of my remaining air to attempt to speak, without inhaling.

"Nukabot get us away please." I attempt to say, then I close my mouth and resume holding what breath I have left.

written by 4616599 on Oct 04, 2011 08:46

I shut my eyes, and cup the empty B3 can over my mouth as an improvised air tank.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 04, 2011 12:03

I nearly blank out as I pass through the scanner, but remain conscious as I end up passing through. I'm not sure where it ends, but I keep on walking.

written by Gligar on Oct 04, 2011 19:24

Concourse O2, Delta Subsector

Slowly, the fires continue to be extinguished... as does the life on one of the burning clones, who, it seems, forgot to hold his breath. Joris-R watches, trying to use what's left of his B3 can as an air mask. However, it seems that empty B3 cans work about as well as laser pistol barrels when it comes to attempting to use them as air masks (that is to say, not at all... well, maybe a tiny bit better... but remember that the oxygen has been suppressed...) and, as such, Joris-R finds himself unable to breathe.

Other clones continue to hold their breath, although that's getting difficult now. Speed-Y looks around for someone with which to exchange air, but any possible candidates are on the other side of the concourse.

Jam-Y tries to breathe, and finds that he can't. He stops moving, and holds what breath he has.

Azir-R doesn't even try to breathe, he just holds it.

L4-O... doesn't. He still tries not to inhale, but manages to order Nukabot to get them out of here. "For a moment, I began to calculate the possibility that that order would never be given," it says. "However, I am not exactly proficient at such calculations..." It begins to move.

It's a good thing that the team's moving now. It looks like Lucas-R has a few problems... I don't think he's all that good at holding his breath...

And... oh. Neither is John-R, it seems.

Nukabot leaves the concourse and heads off into a corridor.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R continues acting as though "Nukabot" is crazy, and demands to know who let out the clowns.

The other clone looks confused. "What's a clown?"

The docbot raises a manipulator, covering its sensors for a moment before responding, "Perhaps you are ignoring me. Or perhaps you are simply unaware of what is happening. Either way, additional treatment will be required. After I do this - " the docbot jabs Mick-R with the syringe and injects its contents into him, " - and after you go and take a chemical shower."

Internal Security checkpoint, Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Mick-R steps forward. It's his turn. He almost blacks out as he enters the scanner. "Please wait..."

The bright beam of light shoots out at him, scanning him, looking for anything...

It keeps looking...

It keeps scanning...

Hasn't it finished yet?

Wow, how long does this take?

"<pleasant tone> Subject is clean."

Mango walks off, exiting the checkpoint, seemingly not interested in the result.

Unseen by him, a spybot follows him.

written by Speeder on Oct 04, 2011 19:38

If I notice we are in a place where I can finally speak, I comment.

"Thankfully Nukabot does not need oxygen to work... YAY for bots without internal combustion engine! YAY for bots without hydrogen cells! YAY for Nuclear bot!!!"

I look absurdly happy (even if I cannot speak, in that case I look absurdly happy holding my breath).

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 04, 2011 20:00

I hold my breath as nukabot moves us to a safe location, hanging onto it all the way.

Finally, if we are safe, I note Speedy's increased happiness levels. Then again, I note mine as well. Not being dead seems to do that to you.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 04, 2011 21:08

I hold my breath as long as I am able, then finally start trying to breathe when I can't hold it anymore.

I spend the remaining time trying to catch my breath again.

written by Jam on Oct 04, 2011 23:21

If I'm on Nukabot, and we've seemed to have moved to a location with oxygen, I start to breathe, being cautious at first...

After I've recovered (if I do) I look towards where we came from for any clones still unable to breathe, and make sure we didn't leave any of the team behind.

written by Gligar on Oct 05, 2011 00:50

Corridor 04, Delta Subsector

Nukabot continues on. Speed-Y, for one, is grateful that the bot does not require oxygen. Also, he breathes. Yep, there's oxygen here.

Azir-R holds his breath a little longer as he assesses Speed-Y's happiness. Satisfied that it's of sufficient magnitude, he turns to himself. He's also happy to be alive. And breathing.

L4-O finally can't hold his breath any longer, and starts breathing again. It takes him a while to get his breath back.

Jam-Y is still on top of Nukabot. Cautiously, he tests the air. Ahh... oxygen!

It takes him a moment to get his breath back. A long moment. Long enough that he fails to notice that John-R is missing, and that Lucas-R fell off Nukabot not long ago, and can be heard coughing heavily behind them.

written by Speeder on Oct 05, 2011 00:57

Noticing the missing clones, I do not look so happy anymore.

"Ok, we lost John and Lucas, we need to find them, specially John, we do not want a mind mutant with brain damage for lack of oxygen... Much less I am into fetching him on a cloning station."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 05, 2011 01:56

I cough slightly then get off of Nukabot.

"I have an idea, Nukabot, go find unconscious clones and use your forks to bring them back... we're counting on you. Speed is essential..."

"It goes without saying, everyone off Nukabot for a moment."

I listen to the nearby coughing.

"I can hear someone coughing nearby. Someclone who is fast should go get them. I would, but..."

I look down at my leg which is still in a cast.

"I'm nowhere near speedy..."

written by Speeder on Oct 05, 2011 02:02

I jump off Nukabot and go fetch whoever is coughing nearby, that I presume is Lucas.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 05, 2011 11:47

I continue on my way, then realise I've passed through it. I go on, trying not to lose all rational thought as I do.

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 05, 2011 13:14

I let go of Nukabot to let it do its thing.

Yeah, same here, I like mobility.

written by Malkom on Oct 05, 2011 16:59⁶⁴⁷

Mick-R says something incoherent - "...not...go...clowns..." - and finally blacks out.

Again.

written by 4616599 on Oct 05, 2011 17:48

I gasp and flail around. Then my face brightens into a mild sneer.

"At least mutants can't exploit us if we're unconscious..."

I slump forward, and black out.

written by Gligar on Oct 05, 2011 20:10

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y realises that there are a couple missing. He suggests that they go and find them, especially John-R - the thought of a psionic mutant with brain damage is not a pleasant one. And neither is the thought of going to fetch him from a cloning station. (Who said you had to do that, though? Certainly not The Computer...)

L4-O gets off Nukabot, coughing a bit. He has an idea: what if Nukabot went back to find them? It doesn't need oxygen, after all, and can bring them back with its forks.

He then hears the coughing nearby. That's probably one of their clones, though he isn't sure which one. Someone should get over there fast. (He's ruled out though. His leg's still in a cast.)

Speed-Y jumps of Nukabot and goes to investigate. He thinks it might be Lucas-R. And, as it turns out, he's correct. He seems to be having trouble breathing, and might have inhaled some of the powder stuff.

Azir-R lets go of Nukabot, allowing it to go and rescue people. It passes Speed-Y and Lucas-R, heading back towards the concourse, soon finding John-R. It begins to lower its forks.

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango (not anyone else) carries on. He doesn't even seem to realise that he's passed through the checkpoint until a little further down the roadway. The dust/smoke cloud that perpetually obscures the Industrial Subsectors seems to grow as he approaches.

⁶⁴⁷ MALKOM: (OOC: Uh... I think you got my name mixed with Mango's in the scanning part of the update before last?)

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R passes out. Again/

Only to jerk wide awake when the injection kicks in. It kind of feels like his entire body is having a toothache. But a happy toothache, somehow. (At least it isn't committing treason... unlike some entities.)

"I believe I reminded you to go and take a chemical shower," the docbot says. "As you have no doubt noticed, the injection included a component to counteract your seemingly-frequent black-outs. I have already added it to your bill.

"Now, if you will excuse me, I need to formulate the second injection."

Concourse O2, Delta Subsector

Joris-R flails a little as he runs out of air... and then sneers before passing out.

The sound of a forkbot approaches.

Followed by Joris-R's inert form beginning to float in the air...

written by Malkom on Oct 06, 2011 01:07

Mick-R looks unsteadily at the docbot... it seems that its injection has made him a little tipsy. "I shay! Wut a whundervull neegle you've got there shur!" He extends a tentative finger and pokes at the syringe.

Then some deepset, instinctive love of all that glitters kicks in, and he tries to capture it! Grab! Pull! "YOOOW!"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 06, 2011 07:40

"Hmm... we might need to perform resuscitation on some of those clones... I don't recall if I learned how or not..."

I make a mental check to see if I actually know how to perform it or not. Perhaps I learned it as a part of the Armed Forces training courses?

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 06, 2011 10:50

Huh. Dust... or smoke.

I venture onwards, with caution.

written by Speeder on Oct 06, 2011 11:12

I see if I remember how to pull a heimlich manuever, if not, I drag Lucas to Jam.

"Jam, Lucas seemly inhaled some powder from the shell, do that medical thing made to people cough out stuff."

written by Gligar on Oct 06, 2011 19:31

Cloning station, somewhere near the sector

Seemingly intoxicated by the injection, Mick-R refuses to go and take a shower. Instead, he becomes fascinated by the docbot's syringe. He pokes it with a finger. It pricks him, but he doesn't notice. Then, he grabs it, and this time, he does notice. Blood seeps onto the syringe.

"Citizen Mick-R!" the docbot protests. "Stop this at once. You have been told, repeatedly, to take a shower, and yet, you have failed to do so. It is recommended that you do so. Is that not correct, citizen Stella-R?"

"That's correct," the clone, presumably Stella-R, replies. "In your current state, you would fail a hygiene inspection. And you know what they say about hygiene. So get going, or I'll have to take you to the showers. And we charge extra for that."

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

L4-O thinks that they'll need to perform resuscitation on some clones. And, although he dimly recalls attending a training course about it, he's not entirely sure he remembers how to do it...

Speed-Y tries to remember if he knows how to do that thing where you force a blockage out of someone's airway. Ah yes! That's it.

Roadway, near Industrial Sectors

Mango slows down a little. It is possible that he believes that the smoke emanating from the Industrial Subsectors is a problem. Or perhaps he didn't really notice it before. It's always been there, but perhaps he just blanked it out.

written by Malkom on Oct 06, 2011 19:33

Grumbling, Mick-R gives the docbot's syringe a final, dissatisfied tug and stumbles towards the first thing that he sees that looks even remotely like a shower, giving clumsy salutes.

written by Speeder on Oct 06, 2011 19:49

I thus attempt to make Lucas cough out all the powder.. or some of it... or something...

written by Lightning4 on Oct 07, 2011 00:02

I wait for Nukabot to return with the unconscious clones. Meanwhile, I try to assist Speed-Y to the best of my (limited) ability.

written by Jam on Oct 07, 2011 01:42

"Oh no! Lucas-R!"

I run over to him and use any medical knowledge I can remember to save him...

written by Gligar on Oct 07, 2011 18:05

Cloning station, somewhere near the sector

Mick-R gives the syringe one last tug before shambling off towards a door. As it happens, he did pick the right one, but that's probably because of the big SHOWERS label on the door.

Stella-R sighs. If it's not one thing, it's another.

Chemical Showers

Mick-R continues his shamble. He is dimly aware that some of the cubicles are currently in use, but is able to manoeuvre his way into an empty one. Let's hope he remembers to wear the mask and keep his eyes closed.

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

Now that Lucas-R has been brought back, Speed-Y gets to work, trying to get Lucas-R to cough up that dust. So... grab him like this, place fists there... and... now!

Lucas-R lets out a BIG cough, releasing a small cloud of powder. And judging from the colour change, it's not inert.

Then he collapses.

But Speed-Y isn't the only clone with medical knowledge. L4-O is also here, and he gets to work... or at least he would if Jam-Y weren't in the way, also trying to help... and also failing because Speed-Y is in the way...

While that's going on, Nukabot returns with John-R, and heads back out.

Concourse O2, Delta Subsector

Joris-R's inert form continues being floaty. (He'd better get that seen to before our mutual friend takes an interest.)

It begins to float towards an exit.

From that exit, the sound of a bot approaches. Specifically, Nukabot. It sees Joris-R wafting towards it. "Well, that is certainly interesting," it observes.

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

L4-O's PDC suddenly plays its "message received" tone.

written by Speeder on Oct 07, 2011 18:22

I start pulling Lucas away from the not inert powder and I try to not inhale it myself. If others attempt to help, I let them...

written by Lightning4 on Oct 07, 2011 19:12

I back away from Lucas-R and the dust, and consult with my PDC.

A concerned look crosses my face and I tap in a reply.

"Erm... that's weird. Nukabot just sent me a message. Apparently, Joris-R is floating. And moving towards Nukabot."

"I told Nukabot to keep its distance. It'll come back this way if Joris-R continues to come closer. But if you have any other orders for Nukabot, let me know..."

After relaying the information, I start checking John-R's vitals.

written by Malkom on Oct 07, 2011 19:34

Mick-R looks around. Wasn't there something he was supposed to do first, something he should wear or something... oh, blast it, his head hurts too much. Wait! There! That looks like he could wear it!

He grabs it and tries to fumble it on, probably without much success owing to his, er, state of mind...

written by Gligar on Oct 07, 2011 23:02

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y starts dragging Lucas-R clear of the remaining powder. There's not as much of it this time, so he doesn't need to go far.

While he's doing that, L4-O steps back and check his PDC. After a moment, a concerned look crosses his face as he enters a reply. To Speed-Y, he adds that the message came from Nukabot, of all places. Apparently, Joris-R is floating towards it. He's told the bot to keep its distance, but if Speed-Y wants anything else, he should tell him.

With that, he turns his attention to John-R. His breathing is shallow, and he's unconscious.

Concourse O2, Delta Subsector

As ordered, Nukabot backs away. But Joris-R continues to float towards it, forcing it back into the corridor.

As he leaves the affected area, Joris-R's breathing becomes more regular and deeper. Rather quickly, if you ask me.

Chemical showers

Mick-R suddenly remembers that he should be wearing something... like that, maybe?

He grabs the nearest thing and tries to jam it over his head.

The thing turns out to be a small towel. And in the process of grabbing it, Mick-R inadvertently pressed the Start button.

As such, the door closes, and the cubicle begins filling with chemical solution.

written by Speeder on Oct 07, 2011 23:17

I look at John, then I say.

"Ok, time to make John cough out the powder."

I wait for someone to do it, and check Lucas.

"Are you alright?"

written by Malkom on Oct 08, 2011 00:10

Is this bad? Mick-R wonders, shoving the towel hard over his mouth and squeezing his eyes closed. Am I about to die? Maybe I'm about to die. Crap... oh well, at least this stuff has a pleasant tingle to it... almost like B3... hmm, a nice B3 sounds good... He imagines yelling to a vendobot, "VENDOBOT! A can of B3!"

He doesn't notice that he actually did yell that out loud.

written by 4616599 on Oct 08, 2011 07:06

"Mmmmmf! Nmmm! Mmmmmmmmmmmf! ..."

written by Gligar on Oct 08, 2011 17:52

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y has a quick look at John-R. Looks like he'll need the same thing doing to him. He then turns to Lucas-R, who seems to have recovered somewhat. He's still coughing, but not as bad. He gives Speed-Y the thumbs-up. "I'll be alright, I guess..."

L4-O's PDC goes off again.

Concourse O2, Delta Subsector

That might be because Joris-R is awake. He's still floating around... in fact, he's just launched himself at Nukabot. It's almost as if he's trying to sit in the operator's chair.

But the way he's squirming, and the way he's moaning... I'm not sure he's in control.

Chemical Showers

Mick-R seems unhappy. He tries to cover his mouth with the towel and close his eyes.

That works... for a few secondcycles. It would have worked for longer, but he suddenly decides that he wants a B3! In fact, he loudly demands one, causing the towel to fall away from his mouth.

The result of this is that he ends up fully immersed in a cubicle full of cleaning chemicals, without a mask. And without oxygen. And with a mouth full of chemicals.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 08, 2011 18:43

"Huh?"

I look back down at my PDC.

"Um... that's not good."

I quickly tap out a reply.

"Not good at all. It seems Joris-R is trying to take control of Nukabot. And is squirming and moaning..."

"I think Zombie Joris is back among us..."

written by Jam on Oct 08, 2011 20:07

I go over to John-R and try to revive him.

"John-R! Don't die!"

written by Gligar on Oct 09, 2011 00:20

Roadway, near Industrial Subsectors

Mango finally returns to the Industrial Subsectors. He's just coming up to the checkpoint now.

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

L4-O checks his PDC... and his face falls. He tells people that Joris-R is attempting to take control of Nukabot... and it looks like it's actually Zombie Joris!

Jam-Y turns his attention to John-R. He gets to work trying to save him. But John-R's condition gets no better.

Further down the corridor, Nukabot is doing its best to keep clear of Joris-R, who is still floating after the bot.

Joris-R almost reaches the operator's seat at one point... only to start shaking, as if something inside is fighting to get out.

written by Malkom on Oct 09, 2011 02:12

Oh crap, I'm gonna die! Mick-R is reflexively vomiting, trying to jam his eyes closed, and trying to shove his hand through the chemicals for some sort of emergency stop button. All at the same time. Oh, and he tries to hold his breath too.

What a way to go.

written by Speeder on Oct 09, 2011 02:21

I leave Jam taking care of John.

"Do that maneuver to make him cough up the powder, then revive him."

I run off toward... floaty Joris!

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 09, 2011 07:25

I put myself back into control of myself, almost noticing that I'm moving automatically. I notice the checkpoint.

Oh... Another one?

I continue on my path towards it, if I need to.

written by 4616599 on Oct 09, 2011 13:38

I contort my face in panic. Or attempt to

"Mmmf! I'm not doingmff thismff! Noooooommmmf!"

written by Gligar on Oct 09, 2011 18:34

Chemical showers

In his cubicle, Mick-R is panicking. He's simultaneously trying to get the chemicals out of his mouth, keep his eyes closed, and look for a stop button. But there is no stop button. And the chemicals keep coming.

Soon, the cubicle is full of the chemicals.

It doesn't stay that way, though. The cubicle begins to drain away, leaving Mick-R feeling like there's a fire in his throat.

But it doesn't stay that way, either, as the cubicle begins to fill up again - this time, with water.

Does Mick-R get to breathe? Probably...

Corridor 04, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y tells Jam-Y to keep working on John-R, and runs off to confront Joris-R.

He quickly finds him. He's still trying to get into Nukabot... only now, he seems to be panicking. He tries to speak, to tell the world that he's not doing it, but it comes out as so much gurgling...

Internal Security Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Mango notices the checkpoint, and enters it.

Oddly, this one is unattended right now. There is only a scanner.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 09, 2011 18:46

I hear the distant commotion of Nukabot and grab my blaster.

I follow behind Speed-Y. I keep my distance from Joris-R, and prepare to shoot if I have to.

written by Speeder on Oct 09, 2011 19:52

I make a hold fire signal by putting my hand up and closing the fist.

Then I keep watching...

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 09, 2011 20:52

I pass through the checkpoint, and through the scanner.

written by Gligar on Oct 09, 2011 23:28

Corridor 04, Delta Subsector

L4-O hears the commotion, and, blaster at the ready, rushes over to join Speed-Y, who motions for him to hold his fire. Apparently, Speed-Y just wants to watch for a moment.

As he watches, Joris-R continues to try to gain access to Nukabot while making a frownyface. He actually succeeds in grabbing hold of the bot this time.

Of course, Nukabot has been ordered to keep its distance. As such, it continues backing up. But Joris-R holds on.

Just as Nukabot reaches the two Troubleshooters, our mutual friend chooses now as a perfect time to speak. "Troubleshooters, report! Why is there a floating clone holding on to a forkbot? This does not seem to be related to your mission..."

Internal Security Checkpoint, Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Mango heads through the checkpoint. The scanner beeps as he passes through but does not seem to do anything else.

written by Malkom on Oct 10, 2011 00:10

Mick-R probably tried to gulp some air in while the water went up, and now closes his eyes and mouth and holds onto himself.

written by Speeder on Oct 10, 2011 00:18

I reply quickly.

"Administration Computer, my Friend... I have no idea. But I am on my way to figure it out. Also I must say that the emergency light system cause lots of fire... We put it out with a oxygen consuming cone shell..."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 10, 2011 00:51 Industrial Subsectors

"Friend Computer! This... clone is trying to access our forkbot. I'm not sure what is wrong with him, it's almost as though he were a zombie. Again."

"I've ordered Nukabot to keep its distance. I'm ready to shoot if I have to... we're trying to ascertain the clone's motives..."

written by Jam on Oct 10, 2011 01:15

I try to do that manuever to make John-R cough up the powder, as Speed-Y instructed.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 10, 2011 10:59

Beep. Does that mean I'm registering positive?

I look back, but decide it really isn't worth pursuing the matter any further.

Probably... Unlikely.

I continue to walk.

written by 4616599 on Oct 10, 2011 18:01

I do my best to yell madly

written by Gligar on Oct 10, 2011 18:32

Chemical showers

As it happens, he did get some air. Not sure how much.

Now he's just trying to keep himself alive as the water rises, and fills the cubicle...

...and stays there.

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y tells our mutual friend that he's not sure what's going on, but is trying to find out. He also reports that the "emergency lighting" is causing fires.

"Citizen, I am not aware of any emergency lighting systems that cause fire. Perhaps you are mistaken."

L4-O tells The Computer that Joris-R is attempting to access their forkbot, and is acting almost like a zombie...

He's told the bot to keep its distance, but he's ready to shoot if need be.

"A zombie? Again? Wow.

"However, that would not explain why he is floating in the air. Can you think of an explanation for that?"

A laser turret pops out of the ceiling, and trains itself on Joris-R.

As for Joris-R himself, he makes a sudden yell.

Meanwhile, Jam-Y is doing his best to perform that manoeuvre on John-R. But although he seems to be doing everything right, John-R just isn't responding...

Mango leaves the checkpoint. It immediately becomes apparent that the lighting seems to still be out.

written by Speeder on Oct 10, 2011 18:36

Since Friend Computer decided to terminate friend Joris by itself, I just watch, although still curious, and wondering what is happening to him, I attempt to understand everything he said, and note anything strange...

I mean, beside floating.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 10, 2011 19:24

"Erm... not aware? Well then, I guess we need to be investigating those clones... and those emergency lights. They've been setting them up in this sector."

"As for Joris-R, Friend Computer... your guess is honestly better than mine. Could be mutants at work... and judging from that a powerful one indeed. Maybe it's why we keep seeing so many zombies... assuming he is one."

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 10, 2011 20:38

"Hmm."

I look into the lighting. Or rather, the lack of functional lighting.

It still seems to be out...

written by Malkom on Oct 10, 2011 20:48

Mick thrashes frantically in the shockingly {cold|hot} water.

written by Jam on Oct 10, 2011 22:23

"John-R! John-R!"

I continue working...

"Breathe!"⁶⁴⁸

written by Gligar on Oct 11, 2011 01:06

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y notices the laser turret, and decides to say nothing more. Instead, he starts watching Joris-R, trying to figure out what he's saying, and seeing if he does anything unusual. Except for floating. That's kind of a given.

He comes to the realisation that, perhaps, Joris-R is trying to communicate the fact that he might not be the one doing this?

L4-O muses that if Friend Computer isn't aware of the "emergency lighting", then the lighting is something that needs to be investigated, along with the clones who are installing it.

Going back to the subject of Joris-R... our mutual friend's suggestion is the better one. It could indeed be the work of mutants... and powerful ones at that. Which could explain the recent appearance of zombies. Assuming that Joris-R is a zombie, of course.

⁶⁴⁸ SPEEDER: (OOC: I think the water is shockingly ambient temperature...)

"As I understand it," The Computer replies, "there are two questions that must be answered here. Is Joris-R an unregistered mutant? Or is he a zombie? Either way, I predict that the outcome will be the same.

"Perhaps Joris-R could help us here."

Meanwhile, Jam-Y continues working on John-R. Having been unsuccessful so far, he tries something else... anything to try to get him to breathe.

Nothing seems to be working.

Chemical showers

It seems that Mick-R's air is running out again. That is, if his current actions are anything to go by: he seems to be thrashing about, as if he is desperately trying to break out of the cubicle.

Or perhaps he is deliberately, and treasonously, trying to run out of air. If this is the case, he is not far off now.

Industrial Subsector B

Mango heads back into Building 3. Apparently, he wants to check the lighting for himself.

It turns out that he doesn't have to. Looking at the building's notice board, he notices a new message, right under the one he placed there when he volunteered for reactor shielding duty. It says that so far, two repair teams have attempted to repair the apparent fault to the power distribution systems, but as yet, there has been no luck. This might have something to do with the fact that both teams were terminated, apparently by commie mutant traitors. The message finishes off by saying that a third team, this one backed up by Troubleshooters, is due Real Soon Now.

written by Malkom on Oct 11, 2011 01:51

Mick-R's thrashes are become more and more fra--

written by Speeder on Oct 11, 2011 02:15

I end commenting.

"Computer, it looks like Joris want to communicate that whatever is happening to him is involuntary. I think a mutant is attacking him, or a commie using a new unknown device. I hope it is the second option, that way we can capture the mutant, reverse engineer the device, and create interesting methods of transportation. So I humbly suggest that Joris is not to be terminated yet, until the source of this... anomaly... can be found."

Then I look to the rest of the team nearby.

"Neither Jam or John is here to see if it is a psionic mutant working. I guess we will have to restrain Joris to prevent whatever is launching him on Nukabot from stealing Nukabot... losing that bot once is already more than enough."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 11, 2011 06:34

Since Speed-Y said all that is needed to be said, I simply watch Joris-R, Nukabot, and the laser turret.

I look around to see if there are any of those fire-based emergency lights. If I find one, I carefully approach it and examine it from a distance.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 11, 2011 12:57

I stare silently at the message that is on the notice board, then make a remark in a bland tone to myself.

"Real Soon Now, huh..."

I decide to head up to my dorm.

I suppose that is a judgement, though considering how long I've been at the reactor for, I wonder: why are they not here yet?

More worryingly, are there CMTs wandering around here?

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 11, 2011 13:33⁶⁴⁹

... I continue to watch the unfolding scene with a mix of confusion and disbelief.

written by 4616599 on Oct 11, 2011 17:25

I point at my head and yelp. Or attempt to.

written by Gligar on Oct 11, 2011 19:41

Chemical showers

Mick-R thrashes for a moment, and is still.

It seems that he didn't survive long enough to see the water begin to drain.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Unaware of what has just transpired, the docbot continues working on its treatment. It seems to be mixing some medications together.

Stella-R watches it work for a moment, before being distracted by an alarm from somewhere in the station. She goes to investigate.

"Oh, you have got to be kidding me..."

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

With L4-O and Azir-R watching the scene, Speed-Y relays his findings to our mutual friend: that Joris-R is telling them that he is being controlled. He suggests that it is either a powerful mutant, or a communist with some new kind of mind control device. If it is the latter, they could bring him in for questioning, and reverse engineer the device. That would have cool results, he believes.

Either way, he suggests that Joris-R (who, right now, is trying to move his arm, as if to point at something) not be terminated, at least not yet.

Looking at the test of the team, he adds that, since their registered mutants are otherwise occupied right now, they have no way of knowing whether there is a mutant at work here. As such, he concludes that their only choice is to restrain Joris-R in order to prevent him taking control of Nukabot.

⁶⁴⁹ AZIRPHELII: (OOO sorry for the delay, was not around the past couple days.. so, I guess...)

By now, Joris-R has managed to point at his own head. He seems to be trying to make some noise.

The Computer answers, "It seems that Joris-R is once again trying to attract attention to himself. He seems to be pointing to his own head. Perhaps there is something wrong with it? If this is the case, then I am sure that a laser beam to the head would cure it. Failing that, I would suggest that he be restrained until the conclusion of your mission, and handed over to Internal security after debriefing. In addition, he is not to be permitted to self-terminate. After all, self-termination is treason. Thank you for your co-operation."

With that, Friend Computer falls silent. The laser turret does not retract, though.

L4-O has a quick look around, searching for one of those "emergency lights". Finding one attached to the wall, he inspects it. It appears to consist of a black rod of some waxlyke substance, formed around some kind of string. Some of the string can be seen sticking out of the top of the rod, and has been lit.

Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

Mango reads the notice, in a bland manner, before deciding to head for his dorm. Of course, his dorm is located in Building 2, so he has enough time to think about the message.

He wonders why the third repair team is not here yet, considering how long he has been at the reactor. More importantly, he wonders about the presence of CMTs in the subsector.

written by Speeder on Oct 11, 2011 19:50

I attempt to knock Joris out, and see if he falls on the ground again.

written by Malkom on Oct 11, 2011 20:21

--il, but they keep up. A bit. Then, once he thunks into the floor, his eyes open slightly...

written by Jam on Oct 11, 2011 20:52

I give up on John-R, and go over to Speed-Y to report...

"John-R isn't waking up! I'm not sure if he's even ali—hang on, why's Joris-R floating?"

I look around nervously...

"So those mutants following us have a Telekinesis mutant with them too? Just how many mutants are there?!"

"Wait, is Joris-R trying to say something? Here Joris-R, I'll relay a message..."

I concentrate on Joris-R...

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 11, 2011 20:54

Laser's seem a bit drastic, and I can't imagine my copious amounts of B3 can help here, I hope Speedy has this under control..

written by Lightning4 on Oct 11, 2011 21:52

I listen to Jam-Y and remark,

"Maybe Joris-R is the telekinetic mutant. sir..."

While Jam-Y and Speed-Y deal with Joris-R, i walk a short distance and survey the area for anything else of suspicion. I look for any more clones setting up these emergency lights, or anything that might have been used to set them up. Or anything suspicious and treasonous, really...

written by Gligar on Oct 12, 2011 00:02

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y decides to take care of Joris-R himself - by knocking him senseless. Or at least, he tries to. Joris-R is able to float out of range of his fists.

Jam-Y gives up on trying to revive John-R, and joins Speed-Y and company. He reports his lack of progress to Speed-Y before noticing Joris-R floating there. This must mean that there is a telekinetic mutant with those who are following them!

He then gets an idea, and offers to relay a message. He concentrates.

Azir-R just keeps watching. He believes that lasers might be a little bit too drastic in this case, and his B3 might not be of use either. Unless someone becomes thirsty? In that case, the B3 would be the best choice.

L4-O has another suggestion. Perhaps the telekinetic mutant is Joris-R.

He decides to allow the YELLOWs to continue dealing with Joris-R, while he continues investigating the "emergency lighting". Specifically, he looks for more clones who look like they might be setting up more lights. He finds some at the far end of the corridor. They seems to be attaching brackets to the corridor's clearance stripe with quick-drying adhesive. The brackets seem to have a place for those waxlyke rods.

Chemical shower

The body of Mick-R hits the floor of the cubicle, just as the door opens. It opens its eyes, but there is no further sign of life. It seems that there will be no post-termination activity for this clone. Good.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

As it happens, the alarm was due to a cloning tank activating. There is already a clone forming inside it. This is all normal and would usually not be a cause for concern. However, in this case, the clone is Mick-R-NRK-3, the successor of the clone who just wasted his clone body in the shower.

And Stella-R seems to dislike this situation. After all, Mick-R-NRK-2 had never been released from the cloning station. She returns to the docbot and informs it of this. "That is just great, citizen. Now what am I to do with this treatment? And who will pay for this?"

"Like I said, Mick-R will be paying. Just like he'll be paying for his waste of Computer Property."

written by Malkom on Oct 12, 2011 00:05

Greeeat. Now I've got to pay.

written by Jam on Oct 12, 2011 02:19

"Uh... Something's interfering with my power! Something very powerful... It must be the mutants!"

I move closer to Joris-R, and try harder...

written by Lightning4 on Oct 12, 2011 04:25

I walk swiftly towards the clones and speak loudly.

"Hey! You guys. What are you doing in this corridor with those things? Explain!"

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 12, 2011 11:50

I head on to Building 2, and then my assigned dorm.

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 12, 2011 16:10

I wheel after L4 as backup.

written by 4616599 on Oct 12, 2011 16:28

I attempt to gaze in L4-O's direction, and start jabbering and blabbering wildly.

After a while, I try to reach Jam-Y.

written by Gligar on Oct 12, 2011 19:41

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R's latest clone continues to form. The tank is being supervised by Stella-R and the docbot, who are currently discussing the finer points of... well, how idiotic and un-Fun some clones can be. Stella-R believes that Mick-R's death in the showers represents the shortest time between clone decantings she has ever seen. The docbot claims to have seen a shorter one, back before cheap, efficient cloning was developed, when an entire pack of backup clones had to be prepared in advance. Back then, it only took a sharp object in the decanting area, and some poor clone would end up losing half of his clone family...

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

Jam-Y reports that something's blocking him! He moves closer, and tries again...

...only to be thrown back violently by some unseen force!

L4-O heads towards the clones he spotted. Behind him, Azir-R decides to back him up, and wheels over towards him.

L4-O challenges the clones, demanding to know what they are doing. One of them answers, "Surely you've noticed how dark it is all of a sudden? These things happen when technology breaks down. We're simply here to provide emergency lights." He gestures to the rods.

Joris-R gazes over at L4-O with his eyes glazed over. His incoherent gurglings now sound painful. After stating in that direction, he tries looking in the vague direction of Jam-Y.

Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango enters, and makes his way towards the lift. The place seems empty at this hourcycle, as many clones have left for workcycle. On the way to the lift, he notes that some of the "emergency lights" seem to have melted away into a pile of waxlike substance.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 12, 2011 22:38

My tone softens a little.

"Well, yes. However, Friend Computer is entirely unaware of any plans to utilize any fire-based emergency lighting. Naturally, this seemed suspicious to me. As well as dangerous..."

I nervously glance at one of the nearby lights, then back at the cones.

"Who ordered these set up? I need to know that these weren't set up because of prior knowledge that there was going to be a blackout in the first place."

written by Jam on Oct 12, 2011 22:41

"Ah!"

I try to stand back up.

"I— it— uh—"

I give a terrified look towards Joris-R.

written by Gligar on Oct 13, 2011 00:33

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

At last, Mick-R's latest clone is ready to decant.

And this time, the tank opens normally, without setting off any alarms.

Unfortunately, it seems that the tank had not yet quite finished draining before dropping Mick-R onto the floor of the station.

Stella-R sighs. "I thought you were in the shower," she says.

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

Jam-Y picks himself up off the floor. He gibbers for a moment, and looks at JorisR, frightened about something.

Over with the "emergency lights", L4-O speaks a little more calmly. He agrees that it's dark, but points out the Friend Computer is unaware of the lights they are installing. He glances at one nervously before asking for the name of the clone who ordered them set up, and whether it was known that there would be a blackout.

"Er... I was told to put them up by... er... John-G-SMT-4. He told me that it was the best kind to use. I didn't know that there would be a blackout or anything."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 13, 2011 01:42

"Hm. A GREEN, well... I can't really go around questioning those. Thanks for the information... proceed, I guess..."

I start walking back to the group, but stop for a moment. I glance behind me momentarily at the clones and the lights, then proceed.

written by Speeder on Oct 13, 2011 11:08

After finally collecting my thoughts...

I decide to raging to knock out Joris, and I start chasing him around and trying to hit his head.

"GET KNOCKED OUT VATCRAP!!!"

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 13, 2011 12:15

I wheel back with L4, but I let him know I am not entirely convinced they are telling the truth.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 13, 2011 12:41

A new question forms in my mind as I wander to the lift.

I wonder if the situation's been addressed formally? Perhaps that's what this team here-real-soon is for...

written by Gligar on Oct 13, 2011 18:22

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

On hearing that the lights are being installed by order of a GREEN clone, L4-O backs down. He can't exactly interrogate a GREEN, after all. He thanks the clone and starts walking away.

A moment later, he turns back, glancing at the lights, and the clones. They have returned to installing the lights. All except one, who is typing something into his PDC.

L4-O turns around again, and heads back to the team. Azir-R follows him, and tells him that he is not convinced by the clone's explanation.

As the two return to Speed-Y, they see the YELLOW yelling at Joris-R while trying to knock him out! Joris-R tries to dodge, but is unable to evade the anger-fuelled YELLOW's punch, and falls to the ground, out cold!

Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As he heads towards the lift, Mango wonders if the lighting situation has had an official response. Perhaps the new team is the response.

He arrives at the lift, finding it empty. He presses the button and heads up.

written by Speeder on Oct 13, 2011 19:04

I now look unhappy.

"Ok, bad news is, this was REALLY a mutant, not a cool device..."

Good news is, that mutant, unlike Headgrabber and more like several more... huh... normal... or... typical or... whatever abnormal skilled people, cannot retain its hold on a brain that is not working."

I keep watching it.

"Ok, someone put him on Nukabot, maybe on the top of the ceiling, we will find if that mutant can re-track him when he wakes up."

I look around to see where Nukabot is.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 13, 2011 20:19

I hum to myself a little tune as the lift goes up.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 13, 2011 21:03

I comment to Azir-R, "I don't trust them either, but if a GREEN is involved, we'll need some more information before we go throwing around accusations of treason."

I notice Joris-R is finally under control.

"Well, it seems you have this under control, sirs. While you were dealing with this, I was off investigating those emergency lights and the clones installing them."

I glance in that direction one more time, suspicious as ever.

"They say they were told by a John-G-SMT-4 to put them up. They claim no prior knowledge of a blackout, and claim to have been told these lights were the best option for emergency lighting."

"Naturally, I'm still suspicious."

written by Gligar on Oct 14, 2011 01:09

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y looks like he has fallen below mandatory minimum happiness level. Why? Because there really is a mutant controlling Joris-R. On the plus side, though, it seems that this mutant can't control an unconscious clone, unlike a certain F-class mutant...

He keeps watching Joris-R. Joris-R does not move.

He then orders that he be placed on Nukabot, say, on the roof. Lucas-R moves to comply.

Speed-Y then realises that the confrontation with (the mutant controlling) Joris-R has caused him to become slightly separated from Nukabot. It's just over there.

L4-O admits to Azir-R that he isn't convinced, either. However, there is a GREEN clone involved. They will need to tread carefully and gain some more information first.

He then speaks to Speed-Y, now that Joris-R is under control. He tells him what he has learned, and confirms that he is suspicious.

Cloning station, somewhere int he sector

"Well?" Stella-R asks. "Are you going to just stand there and let the cloning tank recycle you? Or would you rather not have to answer for the destruction of two items of Computer Property, namely, your previous clone, and that one?"

A lift, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango hums to himself as he waits.

Soon, the lift arrives at the right level, and he gets off. It looks like a scrubot is making its rounds again.

written by Speeder on Oct 14, 2011 11:13

I become happy again as I see Nukabot, I hop on him, on my usual place, happily.

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 14, 2011 13:07

I grab onto nukabot, also in the usual spot.

written by Malkom on Oct 14, 2011 16:13

Mick-R blinks blearily up at her and then stumbles towards the first unoccupied jumpsuit he sees. He starts putting it on or trying to.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 14, 2011 18:12

"Hopefully the other clones didn't die. Although at this point they're probably dead now if they didn't get away."

I try to check if I can peek down the corridor I launched the oxygen suppressant in. Safely, even.

"Shame about John-R though..."

written by Gligar on Oct 14, 2011 20:41

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y's anger dies down when he sees Nukabot, and he walks over to it. Seeing that his spot is unoccupied, he hops on board.

Azir-R also seems happy as he grabs onto his usual anchor. It's nice to see that thee Happiness Officer is demonstrating happiness as it should be.

L4-O hopes that the other clones in the concourse didn't die, though with the amount of time that has passed, it is certainly possible. He heads back and has a quick look. Unfortunately, it looks like they didn't get away in time. Oh well, at least the powder seems to have gone inert.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Apparently disorientated from his rapid progression from Prime to 2 to 3, Mick-R blinks at Stella-R and stumbles in the direction of the nearest jumpsuit.

Apparently, he has forgotten that he just decanted and hasn't had a shower yet. And since his last clone didn't live long enough for its memories to be backed up, there's really no reason for him to not notice.

Stella-R isn't done yet, though. "Woah, where do you think you're going? We still have the matter of your destruction of Computer Property to deal with, namely the death of your previous clone before it was even released."

written by Malkom on Oct 14, 2011 20:59

Mick-R swings around towards her, pointing an accusing finger and getting ready to start talking indignantly...

...then, as if for the first time, notices the green glob on the end of his finger. "What's this?" He takes his other finger and pokes the glob cautiously for a moment before his attention goes back to Stella. "Previous clone? What previous clone?"

written by Jam on Oct 14, 2011 22:49⁶⁵⁰

I look at Speed-Y.

"How did you know there was a mutant controlling Joris-R? How could you have known that?"

written by Speeder on Oct 15, 2011 00:19

I look at Jam.

"It is obvious... Only two things came to my mind to make someone FLOAT, or mutant, or tech... If it shut down with him being knocked out, it is mutant, obviously some tech would not need a functioning brain to make someone levitate."

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 15, 2011 02:36

I enter, and take a look at my belongings.

Hmm. Pretty dark.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 15, 2011 07:18

I get back onto Nukabot.

"So... do we just leave the corpses where they lie? And another thing... John-R will have to find his way back to us."

"...Again."

I glance at John-R's body.

"Unless he's still revivable. I think the powder is inert now. But I doubt it and we risk a zombie if he did die..."

written by Speeder on Oct 15, 2011 11:30

"No, do not revive him, at this point we are risking a brain damaged mutant that use the brain as weapon..."

Who knows what might happen... Mass brain melting anyone?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 15, 2011 18:09

I shake my head.

"At the rate we keep killing him off we're going to need to spot him more clones soon."

written by Jam on Oct 15, 2011 19:27

"How do you know he's even dead?"

I walk up to John-R, and try to check if he's alive.

⁶⁵⁰ JAM: (ooc: Sorry, I've been rather busy lately...)

written by Gligar on Oct 15, 2011 20:16*Cloning station, somewhere in the sector*

Mick-R is about to give Stella-R a piece of his mind, even going to the point of pointing a finger at here... before he notices that said finger is covered in tank goo.

He doesn't recognise it, though. He pokes at it, and finds that it is slippery and rather icky.

He notices that Stella-R mentioned a previous clone... but he doesn't remember one. He asks her about the clone. She says, "Your previous clone. You decanted here only a few minutecycles ago, and then proceeded to knock yourself out against the tank. Then the docbot here injected you to counteract the damage, then you went to the shower and died. Go see for yourself. After we deal with your previous clone's paperwork and the costs of prematurely killing said clone and the docbot fees."

Elsewhere in the facility, another cloning tank starts up.

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

Jam-Y looks over at Speed-Y. How did he know that there was a mutant controlling Joris-R? How could he know?

Speed-Y states that it's obvious. There are only two things, those being mutant powers and technology, that can cause a clone to float like that. Since he fell to the floor when he was knocked out, technology can be ruled out.

L4-O takes Nukabot's operator's seat, and wonders aloud what they should do with the corpses. Just leave them where they are? He adds that John-R will have to find his way to them... again. Then again, couldn't they just revive the John-R they have? He doesn't think it would work, though, and he doesn't think they should risk accidentally creating a zombie.

Speed-Y disapproves of the idea. After all, John-R is a mutant, and he doesn't want to risk creating a brain-damaged mind-melter.

L4-O shakes his head. At the rate they're burning through John-R's clones, they'll need to get him some more soon.

Jam-Y has a thought. (That could be dangerous.) Is John-R even dead? He goes over to check. Hmmm... yep, he's dead.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Now that he's back at his dormitory, Mango has a quick look around. It's still pretty dark in here, and there's no clone else in here at this timecycle. Only a scrubot doing its rounds. It seems to be trying to hum the Mandatory Team Troubleshooter theme, but keeps slipping up and starting again.

written by Malkom on Oct 15, 2011 21:01

"Now look here, missy, how do I know you aren't trying to cheat me out of my hard-earned money? There's too many bloody frauds around these days." Shaking his head, Mick-R walks towards the chemical showers to get this stupid goo off of himself.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 15, 2011 21:40

"Well, I guess we should get moving again then. We have everyone who's alive?"

I look around momentarily.

"Onward. In whatever direction we were going, anyway. Nukabot probably still remembers."

written by Jam on Oct 15, 2011 21:47

I climb onto Nukabot.

"Too bad I never got John-R's mental fingerprint... I could have tracked him with that... It would have been kinda obvious I was a mutant though..."

"Oh, I forgot, back around the time we met John-R, I went into one of those commie's minds, and—oh, nevermind, I've probably already told you and forgot..."

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 15, 2011 23:12

"Hmm... Mandatory Team Troubleshooter... I don't think I've seen that running in a while."

I check for a portable light source that might do me some good in this darkness...

written by Gligar on Oct 16, 2011 18:44*Cloning station, somewhere in the sector*

Before he heads to the showers, Mal-er, I mean Mick-R demands to know how he can be sure Stella-R isn't just trying to "cheat [him] out of [his] hard-earned money", station that there are "too many frauds" these days.

Stella-R simply replies, "Your previous clone is on record. As are the regulations which you clearly haven't been keeping up-to-date with."

But Mick-R has already entered the showers.

At the other cloning tank, the clone inside has now gained enough features to be recognisable as John-R.

Chemical showers

Mick-R steps inside, noting that many of the cubicles are not in use.

As he looks around, he sees... himself. Dead on the floor, having fallen out of a cubicle.

Corridor O4, Delta Subsector

L4-O thinks that it is now time to get going again. He checks to see if the rest of the team is on board. Only Jam-Y is not, and even he is climbing into position right now.

L4-O directs Nukabot to keep moving. "For a moment, it almost appeared as if you would not ask," the bot replies, and starts up once more.

As Nukabot moves down the corridor, Jam-Y thinks that it is a shame that he never obtained John-R's mental fingerprint.

[747]

Then again, that would have no doubt revealed him to John-R as a mutant.

He then remembers a time when he scanned a communist's mind, but he probably already told them about that.

Nukabot comes to an intersection and turns right, into what turns out to be a lift hall.

As it does, Joris-R blearily opens his eyes...

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

On hearing the scrubot's attempted humming, Mango wonders... he hasn't seen that in a while... he thinks that it hasn't been on lately. Of course, that is probably because he hasn't had access to a vidscreen lately. If he had, he would probably have noticed the competitions that they are running.

No matter. He has more important issues to deal with right now, such as lighting. He looks around for a portable light source. Hmm... perhaps he could dismount one of the "emergency lights"?

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 16, 2011 20:16

I consider the "emergency lights" but decide otherwise.

"Hmm. Someone else will probably need them to see anything in here..."

I decide to think about what I could be doing to utilise the time effectively.

written by Speeder on Oct 16, 2011 20:24

I keep looking to Joris, to see if he will attempt to float again.

written by Malkom on Oct 16, 2011 21:15

Mick-R freezes, staring down at himself with a funny expression on his face. Like he's trying to remember something, I guess. After a few moments he heaves a heavy, defeated sigh and enters an empty cubicle, mumbling "...I guess it wasn't a fraud." A few moments after that he adds, "Damn."

He makes sure to do everything very carefully, and not use the cubicle his clone fell out of - it must be malfunctioning. He also makes note of any number or identifying feature it has, so he can write a technical-malfunction report.

written by Gligar on Oct 16, 2011 22:19

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to leave the "emergency lights" alone. Someone else probably needs it. Even though there is no-one else in the dormitory right now.

He wonders what else he could do to pass the time. Well... aside from returning to workcycle, he could always grab a coffeelyke, or see if the communal vidscreen room is open... or... can he think of anything else? Surely there's something else for an INFRARED to do...

Lift hall, O level, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y notices Joris-R waking up, and starts watching him. He doesn't move, as far as he can see.

Nukabot comes to a halt. "Okay, citizens. Here is the lift hall. If someone will call the lift, we can get to... what level was it again?"

Chemical showers

It seems that Stella-R was telling the truth, much to Mick-R's annoyance. He tries to remember...

...no. Nothing's coming to mind.

Sighing heavily, he enters a cubicle. No, not the one his previous self used. He notes that that particular cubicle is marked with the number 26.

Once in his cubicle, he makes sure to wear the oxygen mask (this time) before pressing the START button. Once again, the cubicle locks, and begins to fill with the cleaning chemicals.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

John-R's cloning tank completes its cycle, and deposits John-R on the floor of the decanting area.

written by Malkom on Oct 17, 2011 01:03

I hope this one won't malfunction too. Mick-R waits it out, feeling hot, prickly and bothered.

written by Speeder on Oct 17, 2011 04:06

I keep a eye on Joris, but I go FAST to the lift, call it, and return FAST back to my place.

Still eyeing Joris.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 17, 2011 06:53

"G level I believe? I hope Speed-Y remembers."

I watch Joris-R too.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 17, 2011 10:21

I make my mind up to go take a coffeelyke, and then head on over to the communal vidscreen room.

"Perhaps they're showing Mandatory Team Troubleshooter..."

written by 4616599 on Oct 17, 2011 15:17

I clutch my head and look confused.

"Nooo! Get away from me!"

written by Gligar on Oct 17, 2011 19:31

Chemical showers

Mick-R still feels grumpy as he waits for the cycle to finish. He hopes that the cubicle won't malfunction.

As the chemicals begin to drain and be replaced by water, he can hear what sounds suspiciously like John-R laughing at something outside the cubicle.

Lift hall, O level, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y hops off Nukabot and hits the lift call button, before hopping back on, and manages to almost succeed at not taking his eyes off Joris-R in the process.

While being a little more successful at not taking his eyes off Joris-R, L4-O reminds Nukabot that they are going to... G Level, is it? Speed-Y should know.

As the lift makes its way up here, Joris-R suddenly grabs his head and moans, demanding that someone get away from him.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango considers his options. Coffeelyke, or vidscreen? Why can't he do both? Coffeelyke first, though.

With that decided, he heads over to the cafeteria. It's still open at this hourcycle.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 17, 2011 20:15

I wait in the queue if there is one already, else I go up to order coffeelyke from the cafeteria.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 17, 2011 20:20

I look at Joris-R confused.

"Are you okay now? Can you hear me?"

written by 4616599 on Oct 17, 2011 22:22

I look desperate.

"Shut up! Shut up, you!"

I start pounding my head on Nukabot.

written by Gligar on Oct 18, 2011 00:16

Chemical showers

Mick-R's shower continues its cycle. Quite soon, the water completely fills the cubicle. This time, it remains only long enough for Mick-R to realise how cold it is - surprisingly so. After it is drained, the drying fans make themselves known.

Lift hall, O level, Delta Subsector

L4-O looks at Joris-R, clearly confused. Is he alright? Can Joris-R even hear him?

The answer remains inconclusive. Joris-R begins bashing his head against Nukabot, telling someone to shut up. Lucas-R looks alarmed.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

To Mango's surprise, there is no queue right now. There are only a couple of clones seated in the dining area enjoying what appears to be coffeelyke.

Mango goes over to the serving hatch and orders some. After a few moments, he gets a cup for a couple of credits.

written by Speeder on Oct 18, 2011 00:22

I just keep watching, puzzled.

"Ok, known ourself out, this way I do not have to spend energy doing it myself..."

written by Malkom on Oct 18, 2011 01:57

Mick-R mumbles angry stuff into the mask and shivers until the drying fans start, at which point he starts feeling quite chipper...

...until he that laughter he heard. "Probably laughing at some bloody story that clone made up to cover up for the malfunction. I'll have to write that into my report."

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 18, 2011 10:50

I take my cup and head on over towards the only other clones here.

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 18, 2011 13:29

What a trooper, Joris is pretty good at taking matters into his own hands, as it were.

written by 4616599 on Oct 18, 2011 16:00

"Get him out!" I demand loudly and frantically. I pound my head on Nukabot again, clearly desperate

written by Lightning4 on Oct 18, 2011 17:43

"Who? Get who out? Can you hear me?"

I look concerned.

written by Gligar on Oct 18, 2011 20:32

Lift hall, O level, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y allows Joris-R continue knocking himself out. After all, it saves him having to do it. Well, again.

Azir-R believes that Joris-R is pretty good at being proactive and lets him continue banging his head against Nukaqbot.

Nukabot notes that banging one's head against a bot will not damage the bot. "It may, however, damage the clone banging his head against the bot. As such, this action is not recommended... unless the clone is possessed by a mutant or something."

Joris-R now demands that "he" be gotten out. He sounds rather desperate.

L4-O asks who "he" is, and wonders again if Joris-R can hear him.

Lucas-R climbs up and leans up next to Joris-R. "HEY! LISTEN!"

Joris-R manages to open a wound on his head, and blood drips.

There is suddenly a ding. No, not a ring-for-service bell ding, a "the lift has arrived" ding. They're different, after all. It's probably not a good idea to confuse them.

Chemical shower

Mick-R continues being below mandatory minimum happiness level. If he continues, he'll cross the boundary between insubordination and treason. Who knows? He might get to trial one of those new drug dispensers.

He mutters enough that he fails to notice that the fans have already started up.

As the fans dry him, his mind processes the laughing. He assumes that it's connected to a story made up by Stella-R, and decides to write it into his report.

Finally, the fans shut off.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango collects his cup and joins the other clones. One of them looks up as he approaches, and grins. "Hey, clone! What's up?"

written by Malkom on Oct 18, 2011 23:47

Mick-R takes a deep breath, willing a smile onto his face, and steps out of the cubicle. Once outside, he goes looking for a jumpsuit.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 19, 2011 10:02

At the sight of the grin, I smile back. It actually feels like this clone just radiates happiness.

"Oh hey! Just a little issue with shielding duty over at the reactors. It isn't much."⁶⁵¹

written by Lightning4 on Oct 19, 2011 15:25

"Let's get this sorted in the lift."

Once we're in the lift I turn my attention back to Joris-R.

"You know, might be a good idea to sing some loyal tunes if there's a super powerful mutant trying to pick off our team..."

I start humming a B3 jingle. Loudly.

written by 4616599 on Oct 19, 2011 16:46

"Ohhhh." I groan.

"That's right, Mutants looove B3..."

"B3.....it's the FUN bouncy thing! B3! B3!"

written by Speeder on Oct 19, 2011 16:53

I blink and keep looking at Joris.

"So, I will have to ask Jam to explode Joris head again?"

I look to Jam.

"And yes, you can do that, you can make someone think so hard that their brain catch on fire, kinda like a fake pyrokinesys... oh wait... a infrared caught on fire while you was reading its mind, and you did not remembered that you had that capacity... ok, I hope no higher up figure that, and I hope you all do not say a word about it... I have no proof, and do not want a trustworthy friend getting terminated for a suspected thing..."

⁶⁵¹ SPEEDER: (OOC: I am kinda waiting for joris, ever since the turn was posted... humm...)

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 19, 2011 18:45

I sing the B3 theme along with the rest of the singing team. So concentrated on singing I am, that I "do not" hear Speedy talking about suspicious activities and exploding heads.

Better if I didn't hear that anyways.

written by Gligar on Oct 19, 2011 20:47

Chemical Showers

Mick-R pauses for a moment to regain his composure before stepping out of the cubicle and back into the cloning station. Walking out of the shower room, he can see that his old self is now being carried out by a pair of jackobots. They're probably taking the body to a crematorbot, or more likely, the food vats.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R begins looking for jumpsuits, and does not need to search for long. He finds a rack of them not far from the showers.

Stella-R and the docbot are also present. Stella-R notices him first, and says, "I see that you managed to survive this time. Good. Now we can deal with your charges and forms." She brandishes a sheaf of forms that looks to be more than twice as thick as usual. Surely Mick-R will be thrilled to fill out more paperwork.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango finds himself grinning along with the other clones as he mentions the recent "minor issue" with reactor shielding duty. "Glad to hear it!" the clone replies. "I heard there were some commies down there at some point. Good thing there aren't any more, right?"

Lift hall, O level, Delta Subsector

L4-O suggests that they sort everything out in the lift.

A lift

Nukabot takes the hint, and drives itself on board.

L4-O isn't finished, however. It is clear that there is a mutant involved somehow, possibly trying to eliminate the team, so he suggests that they deploy loyalty tunes again. Tunes such as the B3 jingle, which he proceeds to hum. Loudly. And off-key. Lucas-R joins in.

Joris-R seems to have heard him this time, and agrees. Apparently, mutants love B3. I can think of at least one who is thinking about B3 right now.

Speed-Y doesn't join in just yet. He is still staring at Joris-R. Perhaps he will need Jam-Y to fry Joris-R's brain once again.

Oh yes... he tells Jam-Y that he can do that. But... wasn't there that INFRARED who caught fire when Jam-Y tries to scan him? He decides not to dwell on the issue, and hopes that no-one else does, either.

Azir-R is apparently too interested in singing the B3 jingle to notice any talk about suspicious activity.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 19, 2011 21:28

My humming gets even worse somehow while I get somewhat distracted by shooting Joris-R a rather confused look.

I pause for a moment to say "Well... I guess there are some mutants that do like it. But not treasonous commie ones!... I hope."

I resume my humming.

written by Speeder on Oct 19, 2011 21:43

I start humming the jingle about how the population should kill suspect mutants because being mutant is being a traitor.

written by Malkom on Oct 19, 2011 22:12

Mick-R looks crestfallen. "I guess that new autofiller device I invented got zapped with my Prime," he mutters angrily, grabbing the sheaf and heading off towards a table or other flat surface, where he starts filling out the forms.

written by Gligar on Oct 19, 2011 23:58

A lift

L4-O's humming deteriorates as he gets distracted by Joris-R. He agrees that there are probably some mutants who like B3. Hopefully, those mutants are not commies or traitors. He goes back to humming.

Speed-Y now starts humming, but not the B3 jingle. Instead, he picks Mash The Mutant! You know, the one that reminds you that suspected mutants should be taken out?

Nukabot asks, "Is anyclone going to press the button?"

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R yet again falls below minimum mandatory happiness level. He claims to have invented a device that automatically fills out forms, but supposes that it no longer exists. He then goes to fill them out. Without bothering to put on a jumpsuit first. Stella-R just shakes her head. She comments, "You know, I think my boss told me about some clone who was unhappy all the time... I think that guy got erased..."

She doesn't need to say any more, because our mutual friend decides to speak up. "Citizen Mick-R! I see that you seem to have trouble with the simple faxct that Happiness is Mandatory! Would you like to explain yourself?"

written by Malkom on Oct 20, 2011 01:30

Mick-R clenches his teeth inwardly but forces a smile onto his face. "Oh, I'm happy enough," he says lightly, setting down the forms and going towards a rack of jumpsuits.

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 20, 2011 04:27

I keep up with the B3 jingle but then, mutants.. I like that too.

At some point, I mix them up swapping lyrics. I think something about crushing cans of b3 or was it drinking the best mutant power ever?

Hope no one heard that, carry on carry on.

"Hey, Speedy, where are we going?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 20, 2011 08:37

I hop off Nukabot to press the G-level button, then get back on.

I go back to eying Joris-R. My humming quiets down and eventually fades entirely.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 20, 2011 11:21

"It certainly is! Much less disruptions to the daycycles of most clones, isn't it?"

I continue to smile, then take a sip of my coffeelyke.

written by 4616599 on Oct 20, 2011 15:41

I clutch at my head again.

"You hear that, you crazy mutants? B3 is great!"

I smile crazily

written by Speeder on Oct 20, 2011 15:51

I keep looking at Joris, hoping he will get better.

written by Gligar on Oct 20, 2011 20:23

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R claims that he is "happy enough" before going to get a jumpsuit.

"I cave problems with your statement, citizen. First, the term 'happy enough' is undefined. Second, you seemed to be complaining about perceived faults with Technical Services equipment while showering. Complaints of any sort are a sign of unhappiness. And this is just for your present clone. What do you have to say to that, citizen?"

Stells-R chimes in. "Friend Computer, I'd like to add that this clone seemed to be unhappy about being fined for damaging Computer Property, namely, his previous clone, which was still under the jurisdiction of Technical Services at the time."

"So noted, citizen. A preliminary verdict is being formulated. Would you like to say anything, Mick-R?"

A lift

Azir-R keeps singing along with everyone's humming... but then seems to get confused, and starts mixing in the mutant jingle with the B3 one.

While he's doing that, L4-O takes the time to hit the button for G level. Going down!

Azir-R realises what he's singing after a while, and looks around to see if anyone noticed. (Did they?)

Joris-R probably didn't. He addresses the "crazy mutants", telling them that B3 is great while clutching his head. Suddenly, his head aches a lot, as if it's being squeezed in a vice!

Speed-Y looks on, hoping that Joris-R's condition will improve.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango agrees, adding that the lack of communists means less disruption to most clones' daycycles, right?

"That's right," the other less-smiling clone answers. While Mango takes a sip of coffeelyke, he adds. "Without commies around, showing loyalty to Friend Computer won't get you terminated. Like what happened to me a weekcycle ago! If I ever see a commie, I'm avenging my Prime!"

written by Malkom on Oct 20, 2011 20:57

Mick-R tries smiling some more. "I simply wish to ensure that everything's working smoothly," he says, much more sincerely this time. "Technical malfunctions are totally unacceptable. They MUST be STAMPED OUT!" Looking quite cheerful at this, he starts pulling on a jumpsuit.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 20, 2011 21:13

Rather than hum something, I fiddle with my PDC to see if it has a music-playing function. If I find one, I play the "Anthem of Friend Computer", of course, since that's logically one of the most loyal songs available!

I crank up the volume a bit so Joris-R can't block it out.

written by Jam on Oct 20, 2011 23:30⁶⁵²

"Huh... What?"

I look around, confused...

"Did I miss something?"

I notice Joris-R clutching his bleeding head, and screaming...

"Oh, vatcrap... Well, I guess I should do something..."

...

"Um, er... Die mutants!"

written by Gligar on Oct 21, 2011 00:57

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

As he pulls on a jumpsuit, Mick-R explains that he just wants things to run smoothly. He cannot tolerate technical malfunctions. They must be stamped out.

"Are you suggesting," our mutual friend asks, "that Technical Services are incapable of maintaining the machinery of Alpha Complex? It sounds to me as if you are. An Official Reprimand, code N, has been entered into your permanent record, and you have been fined 30 credits. Further transgressions will be dealt with more severely. Please ensure that you do not incur them. Thank you for your co-operation."

Once The Computer falls silent, Stella-R adds, "Now, what was that about technical faults?"

A lift

L4-O stops humming. Instead, he pulls out his PDC and searches for a music function. Finding it, he attempts to make it play the Anthem of Friend Computer at high volume. After all, it must be one of the most loyal songs available!

⁶⁵² JAM: (ooc: Well, I hopefully should be less busy now... Sorry I missed so many turns...)

After he enters his request, words appear on the PDC's screen:

1 playlist found:

1. advertisement 10285738903.cma
2. anthem of friend computer.cma

Playing file 1 of 2

And the PDC begins to play an advertisement for a reconditioned bot showroom.

Jam-Y looks confused, as if he'd zoned out for a moment.

He notices Joris-R in obvious pain, and announces that he should do something about it.

However, he cannot remember how to proceed, and ends up simply yelling at mutants to go away. Even though he is one.

written by Speeder on Oct 21, 2011 01:01

I keep looking at Jam

"Are you like... Huh... Ok?"

written by Malkom on Oct 21, 2011 01:59

Mick-R looks uncomprehendingly at her. "What do you mean?! It's totally obvious that something must have malfunctioned in the shower cubicle my second clone chose. You do know that making up wild stories about it doesn't change the cold hard truth, right?" He gets his jumpsuit on and tweaks at it a bit before heading towards the forms, grabbing something to sit on and starting to fill them out.

Did you notice that he sometimes mutters under his breath as he works? Well, he's doing it now. "That Computer could have realized I was trying to help, blast it. Tech Services are great and all, but they could still use some assistance from people who really know what science is about."

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 21, 2011 02:20

"Bad, unregistered mutants should go away" I gingerly correct Jam

written by Lightning4 on Oct 21, 2011 07:10

Worried, I loot at Joris-R and Jam-Y and wait for my PDC to begin playing the loyal song.

I nervously begin humming a vidshow tune while I wait for the PDC to chime in with my song.

written by 4616599 on Oct 21, 2011 17:42

I start yelling again, and try digging in my backpack for B3. If I do find any I dunk myself in it.

written by Jam on Oct 21, 2011 17:58

"Oh, right... Die unregistered mutants!"

written by Gligar on Oct 21, 2011 20:47*A lift*

Speed-Y looks at Jam-Y, wondering if he is alright.

Azir-R gently corrects Jam-Y, saying that only unregistered mutants need to die.

L4-O worriedly looks at Jam-Y and Joris-R, and waits impatiently for the music to start. In the meantime, he hums the Tella-O-MLY Adventure Hour theme tune. That new season should be starting soon...

Joris-R starts yelling again, and digs around for a B3... aha! There are those cans of B3 Plain from last weekcycle! He empties one over himself, causing much of the B3 to drip down onto L4-O. The worst part is that it doesn't seem to help... in fact, the pain only seems to get worse... almost as if his brain is trying to escape through his ears...

Jam-Y corrects himself.

Hey! What do you know? That ad has finished, allowing L4-O's music to play.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R demands to know what Stella-R means. Clearly something malfunctioned, and no amount of covering things up is going to change that.

Before he turns away to fill out his forms, he notices Stella-R drumming her fingers against a cloning tank. "Look, just finish your paperwork," she sighs.

written by Speeder on Oct 21, 2011 21:45

"Oh, that ad is, special, to me. I will see if I have music on my own PDC too! Maybe YELLOW PDC has more pre-loaded ads and mandatory Friend Computer music."

I take out my PDC and start to fiddle with it.

written by 4616599 on Oct 22, 2011 07:30

"B3..." I yell, my face a grinning wreck "...is so easy to get!"

I scrabble around for my other can of B3 and gulp it down.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 22, 2011 09:03

I frown and wipe the B3 off of me as best as I can.

I turn up the volume on my PDC significantly now that the ad is over. I watch Joris-R and Jam-Y for any... changes in behavior.

written by Jam on Oct 22, 2011 16:26

"B3! B3! Yum yum! But unregistered mutants don't get B3!"

I climb over to Joris-R, and try to take the B3 from him...

written by Gligar on Oct 22, 2011 20:30*A lift*

Speed-Y seems to have liked the ad. Apparently, he found it to be special.

He checks his PDC, looking for music, or other ads. He discovers that there is quite a large selection available at YELLOW Clearance.

Meanwhile Joris-R has suddenly announced that B3 is easy to get, and, apparently to make a point, he grabs another of his cans and drinks it.

L4-O wipes off as much of the B3 off himself as he can, before increasing the volume on the loyalty tune. That done, he begins watching Jam-Y and Joris-R, to see if there are any... effects.

Jam-Y seems more interested in the B3. As he says, unregistered mutants don't get any. Apparently, this means that Joris-R can't have it, either, judging by the fact that he's trying to grab the can from Joris-R's hands.

The lift shudders to a halt, and opens its doors.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 23, 2011 01:42

I take another sip of my coffeelyke while I listen to the response.

"I guess a similar thing happened to me as well, maybe a few weekcycles ago..."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 23, 2011 08:32

"Onward... to Outfitting!"

I say loudly over my music in hopes Nukabot will hear.

I try to consult my PDC for more specific directions if Nukabot doesn't seem to know.

written by Jam on Oct 23, 2011 15:27

"Yay! Outfitting!" I yell as I hear L4-O.

Then I go back to trying to take Joris-R's B3...

written by 4616599 on Oct 23, 2011 17:31

I insist on finishing my B3.

"Stop grabbing me! Stop grabbing me!"

written by Gligar on Oct 23, 2011 20:56*Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B*

Mango sips his coffeelyke, agreeing with the clone. He states that something similar may have happened to him at some point. "I'm glad I'm not the only one," the clone replies. "What happened, in your case?" The other happier clone just sits, enjoying his coffeelyke, and listening.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

While Mick-R slog his way through all his paperwork, John-R emerges from the showers, heading for the jumpsuits.

Stella-R notices him. "Can I have your name, please?"

"John-R-SMR-... er, 4, I think..." he replies.

"Ah, yes. Your ME card and forms are on the desk. Shout of you need anything. I have to deal with this other clone here." She rolls her eyes.

I run toward the can to fetch it and return to Joris (and also hop back on Nukabot).

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 24, 2011 20:19

"I was, well, trying to go from a warehouse to another location, and I was ambushed on the way. I had a laser pistol with me at the time, which served me well. Pity the first one I shot got in the way as I was trying to shoot the other..."

written by Jam on Oct 24, 2011 23:36

"AAAAAAAAAAAA!!! NOT THE B3!!"

I dive for the can of B3.

" NOOOOOO!!!"

written by Gligar on Oct 25, 2011 00:26

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Apparently distraught over losing his B3, Joris-R starts screaming his head off. Almost literally, as the effort causes him to collapse onto the roof of Nukabot.

Speed-Y states that he'd also be upset over a dropped can of B3, and hops off to fetch it.

He finds that Jam-Y is also heading towards it, a little more enthusiastically. The two hit the can at the same time, and bounce back.

The can begins to rumble...⁶⁵³

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R is finally done with his forms. Phew...

Of course, Stella-R is still away, looking for things, so he probably has the time to check a couple of them over.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 25, 2011 01:07

Since my PDC is probably done playing the song by now, I reset the volume to normal levels and put it away.

I sigh and look on in confusion as the team devolves into chaos. Again.

written by Speeder on Oct 25, 2011 01:18

I look at the can.

"RUUUN!!!"

And I run from the can of B3.

"The worst part of weaponizable food is when you DO NOT WANT to use it as weapon."

written by Jam on Oct 25, 2011 12:03

I hear Speed-Y tell me to run, and start running full speed in a random direction...

"Ahhhh! Run! Run!"

⁶⁵³ GLIGAR: (OOC: I'm going to give both Speeder and Jam 1pp for that 😊)

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 25, 2011 14:24

I like to imagine that when i look at the rumbling can, it does that kind of zoom where the can appears to zoom closer, but the backround appears to zoom further away.

Then I turn and wheel furiously away.^{654 655}

written by Gligar on Oct 25, 2011 18:25

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

L4-0 puts his PDC away again, now that the music as finished. He remembers to set the volume back to normal, though. That done, he sighs. The team's descending into chaps again.

For example, both Speed-Y and Jam-Y are running away screaming. The downside of having exploding B3 is... well, it explodes.

Even as he wheels himself away (in a calmer manner than that of his superiors) he can't help thinking of how this would be depicted in a vidshow: the camera would seem to zoom in on the can but have the background move further away...

Joris-R doesn't seem to react. Is he even alive?

Lucas-R tries not to scream as he runs.

And after all that? The can continues to remain intact.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Stella-R returns, holding a PDC, a laser pistol, and a YELLOW armband. "It looks like we only have one of each, I'm afraid," she tells John-R. "Since you asked, you get the first pick." She turns to Mick-R. "Are you finished with those?"

From somewhere in the station, an alarm is heard. Stella-R sighs. "Oh no, not again..."

Cafeteria, Buildong 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango goes into a little more detail about his encounter with commies, saying that he would have got another one had the first he shot not got in the way.

The less-smiley clone replies, "My encounter was... not exactly the most glamorous. I get woken up by commies, and then they start asking for converts. I refused and tried to get away... I probably lasted less than ten minutecycles."

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 25, 2011 19:00

Hmm.. this is sadly anticlimactic.

written by Speeder on Oct 25, 2011 19:41

After I am quite away from the can of B3, I stop and catch my breath, when I notice it does not exploded, I keep watching it, to see if it will explode.

"Ok, who has the courage to pick-up that B3 and return it to Joris?"

⁶⁵⁴ SPEEDER: (OOC: this? <http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=61Ggln3kWjw&feature=related>)

⁶⁵⁵ AZIRPHELII: (OOC: exactly! Except it's a can of B3 and it's rumbling)

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 25, 2011 20:33

"Ah."

I sip more of my coffeelyke, and continue to listen.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 25, 2011 20:55

I look at Joris-R and cautiously poke him with the butt of Turbo.

"Um... you still in there?"

written by Gligar on Oct 25, 2011 23:44

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Azir-R thinks that the unexploded can is... anticlimactic.

An out-of-breath Speed-Y looks back at the can. Seeing that it's still intact, he starts watching it to see if it decides to show any signs of possibly exploding soon. While he's doing that, he asks if anyone's going to pick that up and return it. Instead of, you know, ordering someone to do that.

L4-O doesn't seem ready to pick up the can, but he goes go and investigate Joris-R, poking him with the butt of Turbo. He asks is there is anyone in there.

There is no reply.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

John-R glances over at Mick-R, who does not say anything. Seeing this, he replies to Stella-R. "Seeing as though he's not said anything, I'll take the lot."

"Yeah," Stella-R replies, "you'll probably need them." She hands over the PDC, laser pistol, and armband. "Oh, and these." She also hands over both of their ME cards. "You, if you'll excuse me..." She heads off towards the alarm.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango sips his coffeelyke and continues to listen.

"The next thing I know, I'm in a cloning station surrounded by more commies! Apparently, they'd been terminated by someone... probably some Troubleshooters or something..."

written by Jam on Oct 26, 2011 00:00

I also watch the B3, not sure whether to grab it or not...

written by Malkom on Oct 26, 2011 00:31

"Give me that." Mick-R scribbles his name on the last form and reaches for his ME card. "Now."

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 26, 2011 03:00

{Somewhere, somehow, I sense someone is unhappy}

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 26, 2011 10:31

I listen, continuing to consume my coffeelyke. It looks like I'm suddenly paying more attention upon the mentioning of troubleshooters.

"Troubleshooters, you say?"

written by Speeder on Oct 26, 2011 10:52

After a while staring the can of B3, I snap.

"Higyene officer, go get it!"

Then I look around.

"Oh, he is dead."

Then I stare the can a bit more.

"Ok... I will get it..."

I walk carefully toward the can.

written by Gligar on Oct 26, 2011 18:27

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Jam-Y keeps an eye on that B3 can. Maybe he should, you know, pick it up? He is... unsure.

Azir-R looks troubled. It is almost as if he can sense something. Like, say, someclone being unhappy. Perhaps he'd better consider registering that mutation Speed-Y continues to stare at the can for a while before making a decision.

He orders the Hygiene Officer to pick it up.

Unfortunately, he soon realises that, since the Hygiene Officer is Mick-R, the team currently dors not have access to such an officer.

Therefore, he decides to pick it up himself.

Slowly, he walks towards it.

It continues to rumble.

Gingerly, he picks it up.

It continues to rumble.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Apparently angry over John-R having his ME card, Mick-R demands that John-R hand it over. John-R complies, but says, "You know, I don't like your tone of voice. If I were the Happiness Officer or the Loyalty Officer, I'd be concerned about it. Maybe I should tell them. Or should I wait until we get back to the team?"

Meanwhile, Stella-R is investigating the alarm. It seems that another cloning tank failed to open. But luckily, the clone within has the presence of mind to simply knock on the inside of the tank when she approaches, instead of throwing his whole body against it like other clones I could mention.

You're probably wondering about the identity of the clone, right? It's quite simple, really, given the evidence you've seen lately. For those who may have missed it, it's Joris-R.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango continues sipping his coffeelyke. He doesn't have much left now.

But it seems that he does have a lot of interest in the conversation, now that Troubleshooters have been mentioned. The happy clone is saying, "Yeah, I heard that they assembled a team right under the noses of the commies! Right there, in the domescraper..."

written by Malkom on Oct 26, 2011 18:29

Mick-R tries to snatch his card back. His face is getting red; good thing he isn't an INFRARED or he might get in trouble for having a face of a color beyond his clearance. "Look, just give it here, okay?"

written by Speeder on Oct 26, 2011 18:38

I look around for a vent, trash can, or whatever, and put the can CAREFULLY there, and then I run away.

written by 4616599 on Oct 26, 2011 19:35

I wave at the rest, looking slightly confused.

What just happened? How did I end up here? I mouth.

written by Jam on Oct 26, 2011 20:00

I watch Speed-Y, and back away when he sets down the can...

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 26, 2011 20:10

I finish off what remains of the coffeelyke.

"I think I remember seeing them. They were barely managing. Considering what they were up against, I'd say it went pretty well for them."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 26, 2011 22:40

I close my eyes and crouch as Speed-Y deals with the can, anticipating an explosion.

I peek to see if everything is alright after sufficient time has passed.

written by Gligar on Oct 27, 2011 00:38

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

Mick-R snarls to John-R to just give him the card already, even as he's snatching said card away from him. John-R just sighs and dials a number on the PDC. "Those are treasonous levels of unhappiness there, I think. And, since I'm the communications and recording officer..."

In his cloning tank, Joris-R mouths words, asking what happened.

He doesn't have to wait long for a reply. Stella-R quickly has the tank open. "It looks like you were terminated," she says.

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

As carefully as he can, Speed-Y locates a trash receptacle. Slowly, as Jam-Y watches, he moves over to it and lowers the can into it.

Then he legs it. Jam-Y also backs away, and L4-O does his best to take cover, closing his eyes in the process.

BANG

The trash receptacle is ripped apart, and Speed-Y is knocked to the floor by the blast. He aches all over, and probably broke a couple of bones somewhere.

Jam-Y is also knocked to the floor, and aches.

Lucas-R cringes away from the blast, and apparently suffers minor injuries.

There is silence for a moment.

Then, the sound of a PDC ringing. It's coming from Speed-Y.

The sound of the PDC encourages L4-O. He opens one eye and tentatively looks around, taking in the scene.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango finishes off his coffeelyke, and tells the others that he remembers seeing the Troubleshooters. According to him, the team just barely managed to survive, but, under the circumstances, they seemed to be doing well.

The happy clone replies, "Of course they did well! They're the best, aren't they? I mean, why would they be sent in if they weren't?"

written by Speeder on Oct 27, 2011 01:04

I pick it up.

"OUCH!!! B3 exploded Speed-Y here, how can I help?"

written by Malkom on Oct 27, 2011 01:24

Mick-R grumpily tucks the card into his jumpsuit. "You're looking treasonously happy about it," he complains, still trying to finish off any paperwork.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 27, 2011 07:56

"Well, looks like Speed-Y is still with us, that's great. Lucas-R? Jam-Y? You guys okay?"

I begin checking the first aid kit (assuming one is still around) for first aid essentials for blast damage.

written by 4616599 on Oct 27, 2011 16:23

I rub my head.

"The last thing I remember was this strange sensation. Come to think about it, I don't even know where I was then. I think there was a question being raised there... Anyway, I'll be off to the showers...wait, that guy looks very familiar..."

written by Gligar on Oct 27, 2011 20:06

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Even though he's in some pain from his injuries, Speed-Y soldiers on. He starts by answering his PDC.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

It turns out to be John-R. "Hello sir, John-R here. I'm in a cloning station somewhere. Mick-R and Joris-R are both with me - Joris-R just decanted, actually."

Behind him, Mick-R complains that John-R sounds "treasonously happy".

This causes Stella-R to laugh. "Treasonously happy?! How is that even possible?! Treasonously unhappy I can understand - I'm seeing a good example of it right now - but treasonously happy?!"

John-R also laughs. To Speed-Y, he adds, "I don't know if you heard, sir, but Mick-R just accused me of being 'treasonously happy'... Can you ask Azir-R if he knows anything about that?"

Joris-R thinks. He remembers... the last thing he remembers... a strange sensation... Where? He does not know. There was a question as well...

He starts heading to the showers, then realises that one of the other clones seems familiar to him...

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

While Speed-Y is on the PDC, L4-O checks the team. Speed-Y is clearly okay... what about everyone else?

Lucas-R coughs. "I'm okay... I think..."

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 27, 2011 20:15

"Indeed. Of course they'd have to be well at what they did."

I try not to count in my mind the amount of times that 'team' has blundered.

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 27, 2011 22:26

I wheel over to a Speedy as he looks to be in some pain.

"Hey I have some left over visomorpain. Here"

I hand it to him.

"It's only Infrared strength, but it's better than nothing."

written by Speeder on Oct 27, 2011 22:59

I wince a bit, then I take the visomorpain and swallow it.

"Hey Azir, Mike accused John of being treasonously happy, is that actually possible?"

I speak back on the PDC.

"If he thinks you are too happy, probably he is unhappy... Is Mick unhappy?"

written by Malkom on Oct 27, 2011 23:25

Mick-R stands up and walks towards the door.⁶⁵⁶

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 28, 2011 00:50

"Huh? Treasonously... happy?"

"No, there's no such thing. There's happily treasonous, which would be a state of elation due to performing an act of treason. That, however, is not a crime, though the prior treasonous act certainly is.

No I believe John is fine and what Mick may suffering from is commonly known as 'making stuff up' and possibly 'being a total downer, like for real'. So there's that.

"Um, tell Josh to tell Mick that I had a premonition he was seriously unhappy and repercussions will be had and stuff and things."

Offhand I'll remark "I hope we can get to outfitting soon, they can maybe hook me up with something to deal with Mick as I suspect he's going to be an ongoing problem."

written by Gligar on Oct 28, 2011 01:36

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango agrees. The team had to be good at what they did.

Inwardly, though, he isn't so sure.

Suddenly, a buzzer sounds. "Breakfastcycle for Shift Group C is due to start. Breakfastcycle for Shift Group C is due to start."

From the corridor comes the sound of clones approaching. Rather a lot of clones.

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Azir-R wheels over to Speed-Y, since he seems to be in pain. He still has some visomorpain left, which he offers to the YELLOW. As he says, it is INFRARED, but it should be effective.

Speed-Y takes it. It is indeed effective, even if that is due to it raising his happiness level to the point where the pain is not a concern. Or perhaps there is something else at work.

Speed-Y then passes on John-R's message, asking if it is possible to be treasonously happy, before getting back to the PDC. He suggests to John-R that Mick-R might be un happy and asks him to confirm this.

Cloning station, somewhere in the sector

John-R replies, "He certainly seems unhappy to me. The cloning tech here has also noticed." He looks over at Mick-R... only to realise that he isn't there. It appears that he decided to simply leave, leaving behind his stack of forms.

Joris-R seems to have spaced out.

Corridor G3, Gamma Subsector

According to a sign in the corridor outside the cloning station, this is the new location of Mick-R.

Aside from the sign, he notices that the clearance stripe isn't actually a clearance stripe at all. Instead, there are several thin different-coloured light strips running the length of the corridor where the stripe would be. The ORANGE strip is currently lit.

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Azir-R replies that it is not possible to be treasonously happy. It is, however, possible to be happily treasonous -

⁶⁵⁶ SPEEDER: (OOC: Mick! Mick! not Mike! >.<)

the state of being happy while committing treasonous acts – which isn't treasonous... well, apart from the whole "committing treasonous acts" thing. But that doesn't seem to be in play here. Azir-R believes that John-R is fine. Mick-R, however, is being unhappy and making things up to try and cover himself.

He asks that John-R be told to tell Mick-R that Azir-R somehow knew that he was unhappy, and that there will be repercussions at some point. At least, there will be as soon as he can get to Outfitting. He hopes that they arrive soon, since he believes that Mick-R will continue to be a problem.

He seems to have completely failed to notice the big PLC Warehouse citizen access doors on one side of the concourse.

written by Malkom on Oct 28, 2011 02:11

"Oh, vatcrap..." Mick-R looks up and down the corridor without actually going into it. Once he's done that, he heads back into the cloning area.

written by Speeder on Oct 28, 2011 10:04

I see if I can still stand, and then walk, and then hop back on Nukabot without pain and also without damaging my body.

"John, Azir said there are... huh... people that are happy for committing treasonous acts, but this seemly does not apply here, it is just that Mick is unhappy and is pulling stuff out of thin air. Azir asked you to tell him he will deal with Mick unhappiness as soon as he can."

"Ok, if everyone here is fine, we should go to PLC warehouse."

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 28, 2011 11:44

"Hmm."

I watch, listen, and wait.

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 28, 2011 17:16

I grab on to Nukabot, to the warehouse then.

written by Gligar on Oct 28, 2011 20:30

Corridor G3, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R glances at the strip and stops. Looking up and down the corridor, he notices several clones, mostly ORANGE with a few YELLOW clones interspersed among them, walking along the corridor. As he looks, a YELLOW strip on the wall begins to blink. This causes some of the ORANGE clones to start moving faster, heading towards various exits.

Mick-R decides to wait it out in the cloning station.

Cloning Station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

When he re-enters, Mick-R sees that John-R is still on the PDC. Joris-R seems to have come round and is once again heading for the showers. Just before he gets there, a scrubot enters from the corridor. It is also heading for the showers, or so it seems.

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Tentatively, Speed-Y attempts to walk back towards Nukabot. His meat leg* explodes into pain when he does, causing him to collapse again. It seems to be broken.

Regardless, he continues his PDC conversation with John-R. He tells him about Azir-R's conclusion regarding "treasonously happy" and Mick-R's antics. He also relays Azir-R's message to Mick-R.

That done, he recommends that the team head into the warehouse.

Azir-R seems happy with that, and grabs onto Nukabot again.

Cloning station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

John-R replies, "Will do, sir." Looking around, he sees that Mick-R has returned, and heads over. "Ah, there you are. Speed-Y said to tell you that Azir-R doesn't buy your whole 'treasonously happy' thing, and thinks that you're being treasonously unhappy. He'll deal with it personally later."

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to wait and see what's going on. The other tow, however, stand up. "Better not use up space in here, eh? Well, see you round!"

As they head to the door, clones, clones, and yet more clones enter through it. Perhaps two hundred or more. They begin to line up at the serving hatch.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 28, 2011 20:43

I attempt to help Speed-Y onto Nukabot so we can continue into the warehouse.

written by Jam on Oct 28, 2011 23:45

I also try to help Speed-Y onto Nukabot.

"Are you okay, sir? That leg doesn't look too good..."

written by Gligar on Oct 29, 2011 00:34

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Both L4-O and Speed-Y move to help their Team Leader get back onto Nukabot. Jam-Y asks if he's okay, as that leg looks bad.

Nukabot seems to have a problem. "Er... I hesitate to bring this up, but I am not certain that I am authorised to use the citizen's entrance."

written by Malkom on Oct 29, 2011 02:15

"Tell her she's welcome to try," snaps Mick-R, still feeling out of sorts. "By the way, can I use your PDC for a moment?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 29, 2011 06:01

"Well... I guess we can go in without Nukabot. Or just go in anyway, if Speed-Y gives the order..."

I get off Nukabot but await a response.

* He has a robotic leg, remember?

written by Speeder on Oct 29, 2011 10:51

I think a bit, then I say.

"Ok, drive close to the citizen entrance, then we go in, in the normal way. Sorta, I think I will have to go hopping."

I look at Azir.

"Our team has a problem with legs..."

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 29, 2011 14:58

"If you need this wheelchair, sir, I've been practicing getting around without it."

I get up and hop around a bit as a demo, unless Nukabot is moving after all, in which case I don't yet till it stops

written by 4616599 on Oct 29, 2011 18:38

I look around, and fill up any forms. I still can't quite remember what exactly happened...

written by Gligar on Oct 29, 2011 20:13

Cloning station, G level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R angrily snaps that "she" is welcome to try, before asking for the PDC.

John-R replies, "I'm still using it. So, no."

As if to prove his point, he speaks into it. "Sir, Mick-R just said that Azir-R is welcome to try. Also, can you verify that Azir-R is, in fact, male?"

Having completed his shower, Joris-R steps out, looking for forms. He's still unsure quite what happened. He is certain, however, that someone looking exactly the same as Mick-R left a corpse in there.

He is also certain that it is not a good idea to watch a scrubot dissolve a corpse.

Stella-R notices him, and tells him, "Are you looking for forms? I'll have them ready by the time you find yourself a jumpsuit."

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

L4-O suggests that they could enter the warehouse without Nukabot if necessary. Of course, it's Speed-Y's call, but he anticipates the order by getting off the bot.

Speed-Y agrees, directing Nukabot to drive closer to the entrance. As the bot complies, he observes that the team seems to have a problem with legs.

Azir-R offers him the wheelchair, saying that he's had practice with getting around without it.

As Nukabot stops at the door, Azir-R gets up and hops around a bit, in an attempt to demonstrate his claim. Of course, there's not much room to do so, and he ends up bashing in to the wall a couple of times.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 29, 2011 21:19

I snicker at Nukabot's remark.

"It would appear so. At this rate, I'll be the most mobile among us again."

"Granted, my broken leg was er... cough kind of my fault"

I get off Nukabot if I have room to do so, and go inside the entrance first.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 29, 2011 21:36

I decide to leave. Or at the least, try not to get in the way of the crowd as I attempt to do so.

written by Speeder on Oct 29, 2011 22:05

I start to laugh as I hear John words.

"Azir, Mick asked if you are really male, he thinks you are female. Also, no thanks, keep the wheelchair, I will ask for some docbot help... I wonder if I have some special treatment considering I am YELLOW."

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 29, 2011 22:26

"Ok, fine, seems I am not quite as good as I thought."

I hop back into the chair.

"Also, I'll do everyone the favor of not visually confirming it, but yes, I am a male. Tell Mick to stop trying to distract us from his treasonous behavior."

written by Gligar on Oct 30, 2011 00:46

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

L4-O laughs a little. He agrees about the leg thing. If this carries on, he'll end up being the most mobile clone here, despite his injuries kind of being his own fault.

L4-O gets off Nukabot and heads into the warehouse.

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

L4-O finds himself in an INFRARED entryway. The place has room for over a hundred and fifty clones to wait in line. More could probably were it not for the BLUE Queue Enforcement Officers glaring about the room. As L4-O watches, a RED clone attempts to push in front of a group of INFRAREDS, only to be lasered by a Queue Enforcement Officer.

At the far end of the entryway, L4-O can see four service hatches, of which two are currently staffed.

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Back in the concourse, Speed-Y also laughs. Apparently, Mick-R thinks that Azir-R is female for some reason. He asks Azir-R to confirm that he is not. E also allows Azir-R to keep using the wheelchair, saying that he can always find a docbot later.

Azir-R returns to the wheelchair - apparently, he is not as agile as he thought - and, choosing not to demonstrate it visually, states that he is indeed male. He also requests that Mick-R be told not to distract them from his own treasonous behaviour.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to leave, and stands up to head for the door. However, the door is still crammed with clones entering the cafeteria.

He starts waiting.

written by 4616599 on Oct 30, 2011 13:19

I look around for a jumpsuit.

"You know, I feel like I've been brainscrubbed. Has anything strange happened recently?"

written by Speeder on Oct 30, 2011 16:15

"John, Azir told he is male, and that Mick behavior is only to distract us from his treasonous behavior. I have to get to the PLC warehouse now, please, keep a eye on Mick and bring him here, so Azir can take care of him."

I turn off the PDC connection, and hop (with the metal leg), toward the PLC warehouse.

I also request a docbot on the PLC warehouse for broken leg and assorted explosion injuries.

written by Malkom on Oct 30, 2011 17:35

Mick-R stomps off to watch those clearance stripes for a while.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 30, 2011 20:32

Oh dear.

I attempt to facepalm, or some similar gesture.

written by Gligar on Oct 30, 2011 21:12

Cloning Station, G Level, Delta Subsector

As he looks for a jumpsuit, Joris-R mentions that he thinks he's been brainscrubbed, and asks if anything strange has happened recently. Stella-R replies, "Hmmm... I think my boss said something about a MemoMax Liveware Overwrite... but I guess I'm not supposed to talk about that. Beyond that... what's your last memory?"

Joris-R does eventually find the rack of jumpsuits. There is one remaining RED jumpsuit, which he takes.

Meanwhile, Mick-R stomps off to the corridor again, to watch the clearance strips.

John-R finishes off his PDC conversation with Speed-Y. "Will do, sir. We'll see you shortly."

He hangs up, and goes to join Mick-R. "Speed-Y just told me that not only is Azir-R male, but that he believes that you're acting treasonously. I'm to keep an eye on you on the way back. And... one other thing. If you put one foot out of line, I'll shoot you. Or blast your mind, whichever I feel like."

As he's saying that, the lighted strip has changed from the GREEN to the YELLOW. Now, the RED strip is blinking.

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y hangs up his own PDC before hopping towards the warehouse.

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

As he joins L4-O by the entryway door, Speed-Y gets out his PDC again, about to call for a docbot. It turns out, however, that he doesn't need to, as one is apparently waiting in the entryway. It spots Speed-Y and trundles over. "May I be of assistance?" it asks.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango looks at the jammed entrance, and facepalms. (Isn't that Speed-Y's signature move? 😊)

Luckily, it clears itself up, causing clones to spill out into the cafeteria.

As they do so, a gap opens up, potentially large enough to fit through.

written by Speeder on Oct 30, 2011 21:44

I look at the docbot.

"A dropped can of B3 exploded, and it broke my leg... at least... Can you fix my leg and all other injuries in my team related to that B3 explosion please?"

written by Malkom on Oct 30, 2011 23:44

Mick-R says nothing for a few moments, then: "You're the same clearance as me, remember that. You can't give orders, and I'll not obey any except given directly from a confirmed higher-clearance clone." He doesn't look at John-R, but keeps his eyes riveted on the strips. "Hopefully you're good at navigation." He starts humming a B3 jingle, over and over and over and over and over and over... and over...

written by 4616599 on Oct 31, 2011 03:16

"I don't know. It seems very fuzzy. I think I was in a forkbot, with a clone that looked just like me strapped on top."

Meanwhile, I look around for forms

written by Lightning4 on Oct 31, 2011 08:16

I sigh and judge how long the line is.

"Hm... I don't suppose Troubleshooter Teams get priority treatment... eh, probably not."

I frown and move towards the line.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 31, 2011 12:27

I dash over to the gap, and attempt to push through, hoping that I'll get there and be able to fit.

written by Azirphaeli on Oct 31, 2011 16:37

I follow the team as they wait in line, thrilling!

written by Gligar on Oct 31, 2011 22:40

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y tells the docbot about the exploding B3 can, and asks for treatment for his team.

The docbot responds with, "Please wait. I am ascertaining the extent of your injuries, and your credit rating."

L4-O looks at the queue. There are probably thirty clones present. Naturally, they don't seem to be moving.

At the near end of the queue, he can see a small machine, marked, FOR YOUR CONVENIENCE, PLEASE TAKE A NUMBER. He can't quite see the numbers from here, but they seem to be in the millions.

L4-O briefly wonders if Troubleshooters get special treatment, before realising that they probably don't. He joins the queue.

Azir-R joins the queue along with him, showing enthusiasm about the queue.

Corridor G3, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R doesn't take his eyes off the clearance strip. He reminds John-R that they are both the same clearance, and that John-R cannot issue an order to him. John-R will only obey the orders of a citizen of higher clearance. Finally, he hopes that John-R is good at navigation.

While he waits, he starts humming a B3 jingle. Repeatedly. It quickly becomes annoying. To him as well.

John-R raises his voice. "Maybe I can't give you an order, but Speed-Y can. And, as far as I can see, his orders to return to the team apply to I>you as well. Therefore, I suggest that you comply. Unless, of course, you would prefer to be labelled as a deserter."

Finally, the clearance strips settle on RED Clearance.

Cloning Station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Joris-R says that he is not quite sure. It's fuzzy, but he believes that he was inside a forkbot, with a clone that looks like him strapped to the top. He continues looking for forms.

Stella-R has them. "Huh... my boss said something about... hang on, you're Joris-R-DNK, aren't you?" She hands him the forms while she waits for her answer.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango backs up, and runs, aiming for the gap.

And, even though he ends up bashing against a couple of clones in the process, he makes it.

It's a pity about the landing on the other side.

written by Speeder on Oct 31, 2011 22:44

I wait pleasingly, my weight resting on the metal leg of course.

"Hey Mr. Docbot, you know if YELLOW people, or troubleshooter teams in urgent missions can somehow override that queue?"

written by Gligar on Nov 01, 2011 01:11

PLC Main Warehouse, G Level, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y waits, happily. While he does, he asks the docbot if it knows whether he could somehow skip ahead in the queue. The docbot looks at a nearby Queue Enforcement Officer, who is looking, no, glaring, at Speed-Y, and replies, "I would advise against it, citizen."

After a moment, it adds, "Calculations complete. You are eligible for treatment," and prepares a syringe.

written by 4616599 on Nov 01, 2011 04:49

I look a bit suspicious.

"Your boss knows me? Yes, I'm Joris-R-DNK"

written by Malkom on Nov 01, 2011 05:10

"Get going, why don't you? And remember, I have no way of authenticating your 'orders'." Mick-R waits for the other clone to lead him to the Troubleshooters, like one of those parasitic microbots you see in the vidshows.

written by Speeder on Nov 01, 2011 10:09

I notice the... glaring of destruction, and reply.

"Wait wait... I have no intention of doing anything wrong, I am asking because our task is fix those power problems and make sure they won't happen again, that is very import, don't you think? I was only asking if there are some priority rules there or something like that. I do not know much about PLC rules, I am from Tech Services."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 01, 2011 10:13

I do absolutely nothing of note while waiting in the line. Besides looking extremely bored.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 01, 2011 12:34

"Ow."

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 01, 2011 17:30

Likewise, I let time pass.

written by Gligar on Nov 01, 2011 20:42

Cloning station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Joris-R is suspicious. Why does her boss know who he is? Regardless, he confirms his name.

"That's right," she replies. "He says he's worked with you before in some Troubleshooter mission. He didn't go into detail, only that zombies were involved. I suppose I'm not cleared for any more. Now, are you going to fill out those forms?"

Corridor G3, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R continues to completely ignore this whole “happiness” thing as he tells John-R to get going, and that he can’t verify his orders.

John-R turns to him. “All right, but it almost sounds like you’re trying to issue orders to me now. Remember, we’re the same clearance.” He starts heading down the corridor.

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

L4-O does nothing of interest. He’s starting to get bored.

Azir-R joins him in doing nothing.

Speed-Y, on the other hand, is busy talking. He explains that he does not intend to break any rules. He simply wants to know if there are any procedures for priority missions.

The Queue Enforcement Officer continues to glare at him. “Yeah, there is a procedure,” he snarls. “It’s called get in line.”

The queue moves forward. The team passes the PLEASE TAKE A NUMBER machine.

Corridor, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango hurts. A lot.

But strangely, he doesn’t seem to be actually injured at all. He picks himself up, and investigates the corridor.

From what he can see, this part of the corridor is INFRARED, running into what appears to be a higher-clearance section further down – he can’t really tell what clearance in this light. Accessible to him are three exits. As with many exits, they are only marked with numbers – in this case, they are 48, 49, and 50.

written by Speeder on Nov 01, 2011 21:32

I look to see if the docbot is following us, and hop around to keep up with the line.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 01, 2011 21:53

I snag a number.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 01, 2011 23:45

I grab a number too if I didn't already do so. Then I go back to waiting.

written by Jam on Nov 02, 2011 00:57

I get into line, and wait...

written by Gligar on Nov 02, 2011 01:57

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

As he tries to keep up with the queue, Speed-Y looks around, checking to see if the docbot is keeping up with him. As it happens, it is, and it seems to have finished preparing its syringe. “Please hold still, citizen.”

It injects the syringe into Speed-Y’s meat leg, causing Speed-Y to lose all sensation in the leg. After this, it prepares more things, notably bandages and splints.

L4-O and Azir-R both grab numbers. L4-O finds that he has the number 4,229,801. Azir-R ends up with 4,229,803.

Jam-Y keeps up with them. He doesn’t snag a number, though.

The queue decides to stall again.

written by Malkom on Nov 02, 2011 02:36

Mick-R follows his guide, trying to school his face to smile.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 02, 2011 07:02

I roll my eyes and see what number is currently being served, if available.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 02, 2011 12:58

I dust myself off.

48, 49, 50... How interesting.

I decide to head through exit 49.

written by Gligar on Nov 02, 2011 13:37

Corridor G3, Gamma Subsector

John-R and Mick-R continue their journey to meet up with the rest of the team. It looks like Mick-R is trying to do something unfamiliar to him, and not quite succeeding: smiling. It may well be true what our mutual friend always says to Junior Citizens: frown, and your face will stick like that...

In the time it takes for the queue to move forward in the PLC warehouse, they come across the checkpoint separating Gamma and Delta Subsectors, and pass through.

PLC Main Warehouse, G Level, Delta Subsector

As the queue moves forward, L4-O looks to the front of the queue, and sees that the current number is 3,652,901... no, 902.

The docbot begins applying splints and bandages to Speed-Y’s meat leg.

Cloning station, G level, Gamma Subsector

Joris-R begins filling out his forms, though he can’t shake the feeling of suspiciousness.

Corridor, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango eventually chooses to take exit 49. It’s open, and leads to a narrow INFRARED corridor, at the end of which is the main lift. There are three other exits, as well as some stragglers heading for the cafeteria.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 02, 2011 14:35

Well, this is going to be quite the wait.

written by Speeder on Nov 02, 2011 15:38

I see if I can reach for a number or not (and without pissing off the queue guy).

If I can, I snag it, if not, I wait for docbot to finish.

written by 4616599 on Nov 02, 2011 17:11

"Hmm...I don't...who's he?"

written by Gligar on Nov 02, 2011 19:29

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Azir-R prepares to wait some more.

Speed-Y reaches back towards the number machine, and is able to snag the number 4,230,115. And even though the Queue Enforcement Officer continues to glare at him, he remains alive.

The docbot, however, does not seem to like him doing that. "Remain still please, citizen!"

The queue moves forward again. The "Now Serving" display now reads 3,821,887... 888... 889...

Time passes.

925... 930... 935...

Corridor, G Level, Delta Subsector

John-R and Mick-R continue towards the warehouse.

Cloning Station, G Level, Delta Subsector

As he fills out his forms, Joris-R still doesn't really believe Stella-R's claim. He asks for her boss' name.

"Who is he? He's Speed-Y-DOF."

written by Speeder on Nov 02, 2011 19:40

I end remaing still so docbot can finish its work.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 02, 2011 20:10

I remain so bored that I do absolutely nothing except stare at the number going up.

I try to ascertain exactly what interval of time passes between each number, approximate it, and determine exactly how soon our numbers should arrive.

Though being in the Armed Forces, a group not well known for using math... well, my methods are rather imprecise.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 02, 2011 20:12

I see L4 staring intently at the numbers. I watch them too.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 02, 2011 20:20

I attempt to return to my dorm, via the lift, or any of those exits.

written by Jam on Nov 02, 2011 23:02

I suddenly realize I haven't yet taken a number, so I go and take one...

written by Gligar on Nov 03, 2011 01:22

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y decides to comply with the docbot, and stops moving. The docbot continues to work.

L4-O stares at the number. 3,821,950... 951... 952...

He tries a little calculation, attempting to see roughly how long it takes for the number to go up, so he could perhaps work out when their numbers would be up. Frustratingly, the number steadfastly refuses to follow any sort of rhythm he can recognise. At times, it increments almost every secondcycle, and at others, it could take a few minutecycles.

L4-O then decides to assume that the number increases once a minutecycle... that would mean that... from now (3,822,021) until his own number (4,229,801) would be...

...18.6 yearcycles?!

Azir-R also stares at the number. 3,822,075...

Jam-Y realises that he doesn't have a number, and attempts to go and get one. He's met by a Queue Enforcement Officer, who lets him know, in no uncertain terms, that he is not to budge from his position in the queue. All without saying anything.

3,822,118. No, wait... 3,824,118...

Something seems to be happening to the Now Serving display. Apparently, its bot brain is getting bored with just counting up when ordered.

A lift, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to head back to his dormitory. He presses the button.

But the lift doesn't move.

This does not deter him. He starts checking exits.

Annoyingly, the first few he tries are all locked.

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Mick-R and John-R finally reach the concourse, outside the PLC Main Warehouse.

The aftermath of the B3 explosion is still evident here. However, it is now being attended by a squad of scrubots, who are attempting to clean up the mess.

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

3,825,503.

written by Speeder on Nov 03, 2011 01:48

After a while I ask the docbot.

"I will be able to use my splinted leg? Or I will have to hop around for some weeks?"

written by Jam on Nov 03, 2011 02:23

I look at the counter...

"I almost wish I had a certain treasonous mutation right now... Too bad it's treasonous though..."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 03, 2011 07:18

I look at the count and lower my voice.

"Weird. Wonder if someone higher up is pulling some strings... can't say that I'm complaining. I don't really want to wait here for eighteen yearcycles."

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 03, 2011 11:20

I persist, sure that there's an exit I can access.

written by Gligar on Nov 03, 2011 13:46

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

As the number continues to increase (now 3,828,295), Speed-Y asks if he can use his leg. "I would say that you are safe to do so."

Jam-Y looks at the number (3,831,281). He kind of wishes that he had some sort of mutation... too bad that it is treasonous.

L4-O also looks at the number (3,834,304). As he does, he sees one clone at the head of the line rush to one of the serving windows in a panic, only to be turned away. L4-O wonders about the number (3,836,435). Is someone pulling some strings?

Behind them, John-R and Mick-R enter the warehouse.

For once, the queue actually moves.

Corridors, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango keeps trying doors. He eventually finds one that is open, and reveals a stairwell.

written by Speeder on Nov 03, 2011 13:50

I look puzzled at the jumping numbers.

I comment, nearly whispering, with the nearest team member.

"The numbers are going... FAST, I wonder, if someone is changing them, and if that person is trying to hide the fact by randomly advancing instead of just skipping to our number... or I hope, the target is our number..."

I test my leg.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 03, 2011 15:23

Oh my, it's like we're traveling through time or something. It's kind of exciting if you think about it.

(Azir seems to think he lives in a vidshow)

He concentrates on the number and tries to make it move closer to his. Hell why not?

written by Lightning4 on Nov 03, 2011 17:50

I look around and spot John-R.

I wave.

I go back to watching the numbers tick up.

written by 4616599 on Nov 03, 2011 18:04

"Oh, him...I don't quite remember zombies though...it's like part of my memory got slowed down or something...though I do remember we're on a mission of sorts. Can't tell you the details, of course. Even if I could remember them."

written by Gligar on Nov 03, 2011 19:33

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

3,838,281. The number keeps increasing. 3,839,950.

Speed-Y looks puzzled. He too wonders if someone is deliberately changing the numbers. If so, whoever is doing it must be trying to hide any tampering by advancing randomly instead of just setting the number to something near theirs.

If their numbers are even the target.

3,852,970.

While he waits, Speed-Y tests his meat leg. It's still a but numb, but seems to hold weight.

Azir-R seems kind of excited about the number. It's almost as if he's in a vidshow or something.

He starts glaring at the display, as if he could change it.

3,863,504.

L4-O looks around to give his eyes a break from all that staring. He notices John-R, and waves . John-R waves back.

Then he returns to glaring at the number.

3,875,449.

The queue moves forward again.

3,889,900.

Cloning station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Joris-R is familiar with Speed-Y. He doesn't remember zombies, though... it almost feels like his mind was slowed down or something. He knows that he's on a mission, but can't remember any details.

"Odd," Stella-R notes.

It looks like he's finished with the forms. He hands them back. Stella-R takes them and heads back to her desk, looking for something. "Hmmm... if you decanted here, why don't we have... oh, there they are." "Something" turns out to be a package containing Joris-R's ME card and a PDC.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 03, 2011 19:41

I relax for a bit, still enjoying this unusual turn of events.

"Boy i sure hope it doesn't skip right over us." I offhandedly comment.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 03, 2011 20:15

I examine the main function of the stairwell, if it goes up, down, or both.

written by Jam on Nov 03, 2011 20:54

I worry a bit... I really should have gotten a number... Maybe it'll be okay...

I mention to the rest of the team that I didn't pick up a number.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 03, 2011 21:02

Once John-R arrives, I speak to him.

"Er... sorry about earlier. We might try to spot you an extra set of clones if you don't already have one... though to be honest I don't know how much they even are."

I notice Mick-R and frown, but go back to simultaneously listening to John-R and watching the number.

written by Speeder on Nov 03, 2011 22:29

I look at Jam, puzzled.

"Just to be sure, go to the end of the line with John and Mick and wait for your turn to get a number..."

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 04, 2011 00:19

I see L4 frown, and then see the target of his gaze.

"Good grief his unhappiness is so constant it's damn near contagious" I mutter.

written by Malkom on Nov 04, 2011 00:45⁶⁵⁷

I notice the number.

Then I notice the number change. My eyes get wide.

"That's just wrong! And they told me Tech Services were taking care of things around here! I can't believe this!"

I watch it a bit more. Then I feel unable to contain myself and round on the team. "Anyone have a multitool? No? A screwdriver? Something! Anything!" I look slightly frenzied. "Give me something to fix this with! PLEASE!"

written by Gligar on Nov 04, 2011 01:50

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Azir-R finds the situation with the number (3,898,548) to be quite enjoyable. He makes a comment to the effect that he hopes that it doesn't pass them entirely.

Jam-Y remembers that he doesn't have a number, and starts to worry. He mentions the fact to the rest of the team.

3,904,291.

L4-O notices John-R, and apologises for what happened earlier. He suggests that the team might buy him another six-pack⁶⁵⁸, although he isn't really sure about the cost. "Thanks, sir. I hear that extra clone packs are kind of expensive, so... you can imagine that I appreciate it." He grins.

⁶⁵⁷ MALKOM: (OOC: Slipping into first person narrative! Uh...)

⁶⁵⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: a 6-Up? 🤪)

written by Gligar on Nov 02, 2011 02:33

Probably should have opened this a while ago. Let's hope it gets more than three posts.

This thread is primarily intended for long OOC comments, and questions and such. Shorter comments can be interspersed with IC text in the main thread.

And yes, this thread will be archived along with the other.

written by Speeder on Nov 02, 2011 15:39

Whohoooo awesome!

Now can you stop breaking our legs please?

(also my pose before catching the can about looking at the can, was to see if it was still rumbling... unfortunately you only informed me that it was still rumbling AFTER I picked it up 🤪)

written by Gligar on Nov 02, 2011 17:07

Speeder said:

(also my pose before catching the can about looking at the can, was to see if it was still rumbling... unfortunately you only informed me that it was still rumbling AFTER I picked it up 🤪)

Ambiguity is fun, isn't it? 🤪

But then L4-O notices Mick-R, and frowns as he looks at the number again. 3,917,229.

Speed-Y looks at Jam-Y, and suggests that he join John-R and Mick-R at the back of the line, and get a number that way.

Azir-R picks up on L4-O's unhappiness... and notices Mick-R. It's like Mick-R is contagious or something...

3,924,889.

Speaking of Mick-R, he's just noticed the number (3,930,401). He freaks out at how rapidly it's changing, and demands tools to repair it.

A Queue Enforcement Officer takes notice, and levels his laser rifle at him. "Don't even think about it."

3,936,251.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango looks at the stairwell. It continues down for another couple of levels before it fades into the darkness, and continues up in a similar manner.

written by Jam on Nov 04, 2011 02:10

I try to go to the back of the line and get a number, and join John-R and Mick-R if I can...

written by Lightning4 on Nov 04, 2011 02:11

I glance at the Queue Enforcement Officer and make sure I'm well away from Mick-R. As far as possible in my position in the queue, anyway.

written by Malkom on Nov 04, 2011 02:16

"Now look here, Mr. Officer, you can see as well as I can that there's something wrong with that number!"

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 04, 2011 03:21

If I hear Mick I chime in with "What's wrong with the number, looks like a perfectly fine and respectable number to me."

written by 4616599 on Nov 04, 2011 07:49

I look at the PDC.

"Um..do you have Speed-Y's number?"

written by Gligar on Nov 04, 2011 15:06

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Jam-Y decides to follow Speed-Y's advice, and attempts to head to the back of the queue. This time, the Queue Enforcement Officer does not notice (then again, he is dealing with Mick-R). However, Jam-Y is still unable to get to the back, due to there being not enough space to get there. The Queue Enforcement Officer is in the way.

[766]

3,950,441.

The queue moves.

L4-O surreptitiously moves as far as he can away from Mick-R. That isn't very far, but it's something, right?

Mick-R attempts to reason with the officer, saying that the number clearly needs repair. "Show me your repair orders! Show me your Tech services credentials! Oh wait, you don't have any, do you! Any more from you and I shoot!"

Azir-R comments that he can't see anything wrong with the number. It looks perfectly fine to him.

3,965,801.

Cloning Station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Joris-R checks the PDC, and asks if Stella-R has Speed-Y's number. "I don't think I have."

written by Speeder on Nov 04, 2011 15:11

I look at Mick.

"Tell me that the cloning station where you came from is near, so we can kill you repeatedly until you run out of clones please?"

I will be VERY happy to see Mick-R-3 here!"

written by 4616599 on Nov 04, 2011 18:21

"Okay..."

I pick up the PDC, and see if I can do a search for it, which I then call.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 04, 2011 18:50

I decide to consult with my PDC about the price of extra clonepacks.

written by Jam on Nov 04, 2011 19:16

"Oh no! Look! That clone just cut in front of that other clone!"

I point towards the front of the line...

written by Gligar on Nov 04, 2011 20:32

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y asks Micxk-R whether the cloning station he used is close by... so that he can continue terminating him. He'd really like to see Mick-R-3.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 02, 2011 17:29

Broken legs are fun! Especially when you do them to yourself.

☺

written by Speeder on Nov 02, 2011 19:06

You know, jumping from a elevator shaft sounded cool when you did it...

Now LANDING from that jump, does not sound so cool.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 02, 2011 19:25

Yeah. Would've been more epic if it was an escape maneuver.

And if the lift had been going down instead of up. ☺

written by Speeder on Nov 02, 2011 20:19

How you stop the escape maneuver?

written by Malkom on Nov 02, 2011 21:21

I want there to be some kind of immense, complex robot or something somewhere in the mission, so Mick can go '🙏' and worship it or something. ☺

written by Gligar on Nov 03, 2011 01:26

The chance of that happening is some function of the number of perversity points people want to spend on it. ☺

John-R tells him, "Actually, sir, I think that this might well be Mick-R-3. While showering, I saw what looked suspiciously like a dead Mick-R in one of the cubicles." He isn't entirely successful at suppressing a grin. "Although the cloning station is not too far away, it's only a couple of corridors away."

3,980,980.

The queue moves again. Not too far now...

While he waits, L4-O checks his PDC, attempting to access the Cloning Services site to find out the cost of an extra clonepack. He discovers that the current cost is around 6,000 credits.

4,005,218.

Attempting to distract the Queue Enforcement Officer, Jam-Y blindly points towards the front of the queue, alleging that there is a queue-jumper there. The officer looks at him, and then in the direction he is pointing.

As it happens, there is a queue-jumper there: a mischievous-looking clone with something odd in his hands.

The officer leaps into action, pushing past everyone to reach the offender. He then proceeds to aim, and shoot.

Wha-? Missed?!

4,020,659.

Cloning station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

It seems that Joris-R still wants Speed-Y's PDC number. And since Stella-R does not have it, he decides to look it up.

It takes the PDC a while to respond, but it does come up with a number. He decides to give it a call.

written by Speeder on Nov 04, 2011 20:44

I nod and comment.

"G level... Hey! It is where I work! I wonder how my apprentice Stella is doing."

Then I start laughing, I try to not too, resulting into those farting sounds.

"So, someone managed to die in the shower? Heh Mick? That is absolutely HILARIOUS!"

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 05, 2011 00:31

I decide to proceed up the stairs, rather than go down.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 05, 2011 08:25

I check my PDC for my current balance.

"It seems a clone pack costs about 6000 credits. Quite a bit, but maybe if we pool our money..."

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 05, 2011 13:36

(I make a mental note that it seems the only time Mick's presence can cause happiness is death)

written by Gligar on Nov 05, 2011 13:58

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y nods, and realises that it sounds like it's the station he works at. He wonders how Stella-R is doing.

He fails to suppress laughter when he hears about the unfortunate clone dying in the shower, especially since it seems to have been Mick-R.

Meanwhile, the number continues to make its erratic way upwards. 4,016,229.

L4-O reads his PDC's display, and reports that a clonepack costs about 6,000 credits. Maybe they could pool resources? He checks his own balance. 557 credits.

Azir-R notices that Mick-R's death seems to be the only thing about him that pleases people.

The queue moves again, leaving the queue-jumper at the head of the line. But not for long, hopefully. The Queue Enforcement Officer fires again, this time scoring a hit to the chest.

4,021,695.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango heads up. It doesn't look like this stairwell gets much use, though it seems that someone did install "emergency lights" in here. They're starting to burn out, though.

He reaches the top after five levels.

written by 4616599 on Nov 05, 2011 17:58

"I'd reckon this should be the correct Speed-Y..."

I continue waiting.

written by Malkom on Nov 05, 2011 18:39

My face twists unpleasantly. "Shut up." I turn towards the head of the queue. "We're Troubleshooters, and there's trouble - a queue jumper. Let's shoot it!" I sound slightly cheered up by this prospect, and try to borrow a laser pistol from someone and fire at the jumper.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 05, 2011 19:19

I glance up at the head of the line and reply to Mick-R.

"Sounds like a plan. You go first. I'm sure you can borrow a weapon from that Queue Enforcement Officer."

written by Gligar on Nov 05, 2011 20:09

Cloning station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Joris-R waits for some kind of response from his PDC. Surely this should be the right Speed-Y...

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Having been distracted from the number (4,035,229 if you're interested) Mick-R angrily tells everyone to shut up (Happiness Officer, please take note) before turning to the head of the queue, where the queue-jumper has collapsed to the floor. The Queue Enforcement Officer would shoot again, but needs to change his rifle's barrel. Mick-R exclaims that they're Troubleshooters, so why don't they get to it?

One small problem: he doesn't have a weapon. And neither do many of the clones in the queue, it seems, as they politely decline to give him anything when he tries to borrow one.

L4-O says that it sounds like a plan and suggests that Mick-R ask the Queue Enforcement Officer for a weapon.

Speed-Y's PDC begins to ring.

4,051,358.

written by Jam on Nov 05, 2011 21:26

I quickly take a number, and step in line next to John-R and Mick-R...

written by Speeder on Nov 06, 2011 03:03

I take the PDC.

"Speed-Y here."

I actually look slightly amused at Mick's actions, although obviously it is the expectation of how he will die now that is the amusing thing.

written by 4616599 on Nov 06, 2011 10:05

I blabber into the PDC anyway

"Speed-Y? Sorry, my memory's very foggy. Where are you?"

written by Gligar on Nov 06, 2011 13:37

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

With the Queue Enforcement Officer busy, Jam-Y can grab a number and join Mick-R and John-R. He gets 4,231,150.

Meanwhile, the 'Now Serving' number keeps going. 4,063,391.

Speed-Y answers his PDC. He looks visibly amused at the prospect of Mick-R dying a horrible death. (Again.)

The officer fires at the queue-jumper again, this time killing him.

Cloning Station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Stella-R hears yet another alarm, sighs, and heads off to deal with it.

Meanwhile, Joris-R has finally got through to Speed-Y. He explains that his memory is fuzzy, and asks where the team is.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 06, 2011 13:58

I watch the unfolding events. Being I am not the equipment officer giving Mick a gun seems like something a bit beyond my scope.

As happiness officer, I note his treasonous levels of unhappiness, but, we are so close to supplies. Just a bit of a wait and then I can do something about it. Hopefully. Assuming he's not dead by then.

written by Malkom on Nov 06, 2011 18:35

I swear and grab a number while the officer's back is turned.

written by Gligar on Nov 06, 2011 19:33

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Azir-R watches Mick-R. As he is not the Equipment Officer, he decides not to offer Mick-R a weapon. Doing so is not part off his job as a Happiness Officer, after all.

What is his job, however, is watching happiness levels in the team. For example, Mick-R's happiness level is treasonously low. Assuming that he does not die first, all Azir-R needs to do is wait until he gets his supplies before dealing with him.

And that shouldn't be long, right? See, the number is now 4,092,554.

Mick-R swears, and grabs the number 4,231,990.

The Queue Enforcement Officer hears him, and turns around. "What did you just say?!"

The queue moves forward again. Also, 4,105,210.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 06, 2011 20:57

I start watching the number intently, ready to move when my number is called.

"Allmost there..."

written by Speeder on Nov 06, 2011 22:33

I am still looking at Mick, amused.

"Oh, hello Joris, we are at the PLC Main Warehouse on G level. Your head got better? Want us to unstrap you from the ceiling of the nukabot?"

written by Jam on Nov 07, 2011 01:23

I look at the display. then look back at my number...

"Hmm..."

written by Malkom on Nov 07, 2011 01:41

"Just making a few gratuitous comedy sound effects, sir!" I follow the queue, and if I see anyone bend over I make a gratuitous comedy sound effect that you can probably guess. To be specific, I cause my lips to vibrate rapidly while exhaling, creating a sort of... well, try it yourself.

written by 4616599 on Nov 07, 2011 06:00

"Uh, ok..."

I look around for directions.

"Right...unstrap me. Just throw it away or something. I can't even remember how, err, I got there."

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 07, 2011 10:32

I stare at the doorway for a while, then head on through, provided there is one.

written by Speeder on Nov 07, 2011 11:46

I look puzzled.

"What do you mean? Throw it away? It is you? Or... wait, you died? Are you at a cloning station?"

written by Gligar on Nov 07, 2011 13:33

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

L4-O keeps watching the number. 4,135,008.

The queue moves, leaving L4-O at the head of the queue.

Speed-Y keeps looking at Mick-R while on the PDC. He tells Joris-R of their location, and asks if they should unstrap him from the top of Nukabot. He is unaware that Joris-R in fact died up there.

Jam-Y looks at the number as well. 4,154,304.

Mick-R claims to be making gratuitous sound effects. Hygiene station humour, more like, and the sort a Junior Citizen would make, at that. The last thing you'd expect from a Hygiene Officer such as Mick-R.

The Queue Enforcement Officer just rolls his eyes and turns his attention back to the queue.

4,171,898.

Cloning Station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Joris-R tells Speed-Y to go ahead. Perhaps they should just throw "it" away. He doesn't know how he got there anyway.

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y is confused. What does Joris-R mean, "throw it away"? Isn't that him? Ohhh... hold on, he must have died. That means that Joris-R is at a cloning station, right?

4,198,990.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Having stared long enough to affirm that, yes, there is a door here, Mango goes through it.

Corridor, Level 7, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

He finds himself in one of the dormitory corridors. Unfortunately, from the numbers, it seems that his dormitory is not on this level.

written by Speeder on Nov 07, 2011 14:23

I look at the number and then at my own ticket.

written by Malkom on Nov 07, 2011 18:10

I move on with the queue, staring at the number and bumping into the clone ahead of me. All the while, I mumble technical stuff under my breath. I might just be trying to sound impressive of course...

written by 4616599 on Nov 07, 2011 18:46

"Yes sir, apparently. Can't quite remember how though... anyway, found myself here, with a Stella-R that seems to know you. I also saw a Mick-R on the floor, being dissolved by a scrubot I believe."

"I'm not sure exactly where this cloning station is. I'd like to rejoin you soon, sir. Erm, is Ex-Joris 3 carrying anything?"

written by Speeder on Nov 07, 2011 18:48

Upon mention of Mick I start to laugh again.

"So Mick, you REALLY died on the cloning station."

I reply to Joris.

"Well... You are near us, you are in the level G cloning station, it is just a fast walk to here. Also, tell Stella to keep stuff running while I am out, we, you included, are in a mission to do Troubleshooting and Tech Services job at the same time to fix the power."

written by Gligar on Nov 07, 2011 20:00

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Still on the PDC, Speed-Y glances at the number again (4,210,980) and his own number (4,230,115).

Meanwhile, Mick-R mutters under his breath. He gets some funny looks from others in the queue.

Wait a minute, did he just reference [DELETED FOR SECURITY REASONS]?

Cloning station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Joris-R confirms Speed-Y's query, though he is not sure why he is here. He mentions Stella-R, saying that she seems to know Speed-Y. He then mentions that he saw Mick-R's corpse in the shower*.

He adds that he is not sure where the cloning station is, but wants to rejoin the team. He asks if his previous clone was carrying anything.

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y laughs at the mention of Mick-R. So he did die in the shower.

He tells Joris-R that he is close, only a short walk away. He relays a message to Stella-R to keep things running while he is out - they have a mission to complete.

4,222,698.

* You know, I could have sworn it had been carried away by some jackobots...

...oh here we are... it seems that they could not find the food vats and just brought it back.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 07, 2011 20:19

I get ready to move up when my number is called. Any second now...

I get a little anxious.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 07, 2011 23:21

I am not far being L4, so I watch intently.

written by Jam on Nov 08, 2011 00:08

I continue to watch the number display...

written by Gligar on Nov 08, 2011 01:08

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

The Number is the subject of much scrutiny right now. Now fewer than three of the team are watching it with Cryo-like intensity.

And it changes...

4,229,802.

written by Speeder on Nov 08, 2011 01:38

I watch it so hard that...

I dunno.

Then I start laughing again at Mick.

written by Jam on Nov 08, 2011 02:37

I continue watching the number display, just in case it decides to go backwards or something... I wouldn't want to miss that!

written by Lightning4 on Nov 08, 2011 03:43

I look at my ticket. Then the number. Then my ticket.

Confusion crosses my face.

"What."

"Erm... do I go up now? Or... hmm..."

I cautiously make my way forward to a window, assuming nobody is pointing any guns at me.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 08, 2011 04:41

well I must be... nextish..

written by Gligar on Nov 08, 2011 16:55

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y keeps watching The Number. For once, it doesn't change.

Satisfied at that, he continues laughing at Mick-R.

Jam-Y also keeps watching. Who knows, it might go backwards!

L4-O stops watching. He's looking at his ticket, and at the number, back at his ticket...

You see, the number stopped one after his ticket. Now, most clones in that situation would probably panic, or scream, or something. Not L4-O. Instead, he's merely confused. Does he go up to the window, or...?

He takes the chance, and steps up, half-expecting to be shot by a Queue Enforcement Officer or something.

Instead, he simply sees a PLC clerk fiddling with something behind the counter. "Can I help you?" he asks in a strange accent.

Azir-R keeps waiting.

Sure enough, the number changes. 4,229,803...hey, it seems to have fixed itself!

No wait... it looks like it wants to change again...

written by Lightning4 on Nov 08, 2011 18:02

"Er, it would seem my number has either been called or skipped, I guess."

"Either way I'm here to be outfitted for a Troubleshooter mission. Team Epsilon."

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 08, 2011 18:17

Whoop!, I hurry forward while it shows my number.

written by 4616599 on Nov 08, 2011 18:28

"Thanks! I'll be there in a minutecycle, sir..."

I turn to Stella-R.

"Speed-Y says to keep things running, we're busy. Oh, by the way, how near is the PLC warehouse?"

written by Gligar on Nov 08, 2011 21:15

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

L4-O explains that his number has either been passed or called, and mentions that Team Epsilon has arrived.

The clerk scratches his nose for a moment before responding, "Do you have your team's Equipment Requisition Forms?"

Azir-R also moves forward to another window. The clerk at his window also asks, "Can I help you?"

Cloning station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Joris-R thanks Speed-Y.

Stella-R re-emerges from among the cloning tanks. It seems that yet another tank decided to sticl closed. The clone she is taking to the showers seems a little dazed.

Joris-R interrupts her, and relays Speed-Y's message before asking about the PLC warehouse. Specifically, how far away it is.

"Thanks. Tell him I'll do just that. Also... can you tell him that we have a Code X23 situation here?"

"And as for the warehouse... it's only a couple of minutecycles away."

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 08, 2011 22:06

"Yes, I am with Team Epsilon. I need supplies regularly designated to the Happiness Officer. Gotta keep mandatory levels, you know..."

I merrily present my number, along with any documentation they ask for (that I have on me)/

written by Lightning4 on Nov 08, 2011 23:48

"Er... hold on."

I search myself for any documents related to that that I might or might not have.

If I don't find them, I turn in the direction of Speed-Y.

"I don't suppose you have our Equipment Requisition Forms on you?"

written by Malkom on Nov 09, 2011 01:03

I come up with the others and present my number as well. "That thing's BROKEN, in case you didn't know," I say. "I'm here to be outfitted too. Team Epsilon like everyone else." I thrust my ME card at the clerk. "Hope you don't want anything more, 'cause I haven't got none."

written by Gligar on Nov 09, 2011 01:23

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Azir-R explains that he's also with Team Epsilon, and requests his assigned equipment.

Like the other clerk, this one asks for Equipment Requisition Forms.

L4-O checks to see if he has them. After rummaging through his cone rifle shells, triggers for same, blaster power packs, and other things, he discovers that he does not have them.

He turns to Speed-Y and asks if he has them.

Just in time to see Mick-R push in front of Speed-Y, Jam-Y, and a couple of other clones to get to a window.

Of course, since only two of the four windows are in use, he has no-one to speak to. He ends up just yelling out that the number is broken, and tha -

He is interrupted by a rifle shot from the Queue Enforcement Officer, hitting him in the [REDACTED]. He collapses to the floor in pain.

Hey, at least it wasn't his legs this time.

written by Malkom on Nov 09, 2011 01:26

I struggle to remain conscious against the pain shooting through my [crackle] [bzzt].

I decide it's easier not too.

This here floor certainly makes a very.... nice..... pill...ow.....

...and here's a pillar, of sorts, with a red... thing... stuck on the foot... part..... of it..... wonder if I can sleep on it.....ZZZZZZZZ.....wonder why the end..... had the name of those.... jumpsuit makers..... written on it...ZZZZZZZZ...

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 09, 2011 01:43

I don't even notice as Mick falls to the floor. Unfazed.

"Hey, Speedy, I need those forms as well!"

written by Speeder on Nov 09, 2011 01:51

I start searching to see if I have the forms, until Mick get shot in the [REDACTED] causing another burst of laughter.

written by Gligar on Nov 09, 2011 14:06

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Mick-R doesn't even try to remain conscious. It's odd, though, that he would choose to pass out right there, almost on top of Azir-R...

...who was in the middle of asking Speed-Y for the forms. He tries to fail to notice as the injured clone falls onto him. And succeeds quite nicely.

Of course, there is now the added complication of the Queue Enforcement Officer bearing down on them with his laser rifle.

After a quick rummage, Speed-Y pulls out the Equipment Requisition Form - just one, apparently. This causes him to belatedly notice that Mick-R has been shot. It doesn't take too long to register before Speed-Y collapses into laughter.

One of the clerks rolls his eyes. "When you're ready..."

written by Speeder on Nov 09, 2011 15:19

I hand the form to L4 (since he is the equipment officer...) and remain laughing.

I turn to the queue officer.

"Great shot! Great shot! You are awesome! I wish you was not busy, I would love to have you as troubleshooter, I am sure you would shoot trouble in the most FUN way as possible, and make everyone happy, only by shooting, Oh, maybe this is why you are BLUE."

written by 4616599 on Nov 09, 2011 17:06

Since it appears that Speed-Y hasn't hung up yet...

"Hi, Stella-R says we have a Code X23."

Suddenly I frown a bit.

"You know, I think I know why the Computer doesn't trust...uh, never mind sir..."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 09, 2011 17:21

I present the form to the clerk.

"I guess everything is on this then. I dunno if you're going to fill it out for my entire team or just me..."

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 09, 2011 19:58

I decide to head back, since I don't really have any business on this level. Or my dorm.

written by Gligar on Nov 09, 2011 20:04

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y hands the form to L4-O, and goes back to laughing. That was an awesome shot! Speed-Y tells the officer that he'd love to have him on the team. Well, if he weren't busy with the queue. Then again, he's BLUE. Perhaps that level of shot is to be expected from a BLUE.

The officer turns to him, glares, and replies, "I left the Troubleshooters long ago. Too many hosejobs. Too many commie 'team-mates'..."

L4-O hands over the form to the clerk, saying that he thinks everything should be on there. He isn't sure whether they'll issue just his equipment or all of it.

The clerk looks at it and stamps it. "Alright... shouldn't be too long..."

And heads off through a door.

Cloning station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Joris-R looks at his PDC. Odd... Speed-Y doesn't seem to have hung up yet...

He relays Stella-R's message, and adds that perhaps he understands why... no wait never mind...

I guess he mistrusts someone.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 09, 2011 20:56

I watch what happens over with L4, if Mick is hanging onto my chair I brush him off.

"So I guess he's handling everything then?" I wait for a response, and if it's favorable, I excuse myself and "step" (read: wheel over Mick) out of line so the next clone can be properly served, apologizing for the inconvenience as I do.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 10, 2011 00:01

I wait, with a perfect blend of patience versus impatience.

written by Speeder on Nov 10, 2011 00:11

I try to remember what Stella message means.

written by Jam on Nov 10, 2011 00:36

I continue staring at the number display...

Oh, I seem to be mumbling a bit too...

written by Gligar on Nov 10, 2011 01:21

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to head back down. His dorm isn't here and he has no business being here (or his dorm) anyway.

He soon finds himself on the cafeteria level again.

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Azir-R watches L4-O. He finally notices Mick-R, and pushes him off the chair.

As he does, the Queue Enforcement Officer approaches...
...only to be distracted by his PDC ringing. "Vat it," he mumbles, before shooting Mick-R again and heading out. The shock of being shot again is enough to force Mick-R awake.

Azir-R inquires whether L4-O will be handling everything. "Suits me," the clerk at his window replies. "Next!"

That done, Azir-R moves out of the way (running over Mick-R in the process... yet more pain, possibly some internal bleeding by now) and apologises for the inconvenience. Not to Mick-R, to the clerk.

L4-O keeps waiting for the clerk to return.

From behind the door, some faint voices can be heard: "...the whole crate?" "Well, I'd like to see them try..."

As he waits, Speed-Y tries to think. Code X23... Code X23... what did that mean again? Wasn't it something to do with doors?

Jam-Y continues to stare at the number. It seems to have settled into increasing by one at a time. 4,229,805.

He seems to be mumbling about something...

Somewhere in Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

CAMERA LINK RESTORED

Now... let's see if we can... ah, there he is.

You may remember that Cryo was last seen in an IntSec Office. Well, he seems to have moved to a storage closet, where he is currently asleep. I didn't know he was on scrubot duty...

He stirs, and looks for an exit. Luckily, there is just the one. No doubt he'll be inspecting it or something.

written by Speeder on Nov 10, 2011 02:12

"Thanks Joris, just show up here."

I turn off the connection and call Stella, or if I fail to do that, I call the cloning station itself.

written by Gligar on Nov 10, 2011 14:39

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Mick-R fails to do anything.

Speed-Y, on the other hand, is still on his PDC.

He tells Joris-R to make his way to the warehouse, and hangs up.

After that he does a search, looking for Stella-R's number... nope no luck.

Oh well, there's always the cloning station. He calls that instead.

Cloning Station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

From the main desk, another sound starts up.

It's the Computer terminal. A call is waiting.

But Stella-R is nowhere to be seen.

Shortly, though, her voice is heard. "Just give me a minute, will you?!"

written by 4616599 on Nov 10, 2011 15:07

"ME Card, ME Card, ME Card..."

I search around for a ME Card

written by Lightning4 on Nov 10, 2011 18:18

"Hm. I think maybe I'm getting the entire team's equipment.

Fitting, equipment officer and all... though I might need help carrying it all if it's heavy."

I shrug.

written by Speeder on Nov 10, 2011 19:17

I keep waiting on the PDC.

written by Gligar on Nov 10, 2011 19:33

Cloning station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Joris-R realises something: he hasn't picked up his ME Card yet. Now where did it go...?

Ah, there it is. It's still on the desk, in its packet.

Joris-R remedies that situation. As he does, Stella-R emerges from among the cloning tanks and deals with the terminal. "This is Cloning Station JHT-G-Gamma. Make it quick, we're kind of busy here."

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

It looks like L4-O will be getting the entire team's equipment. Appropriate, since he's the Equipment Officer, though he might need help with it all.

Not long after he finishes saying that, the clerk returns through the door, followed by a totebot carrying a large crate.

The clerk opens another door, leading into the entryway, allowing the totebot to head towards L4-O. "That crate contains your team's assigned equipment," the clerk tells L4-O. "I don't know what's in it, but everything should be in there. Totebot, you can put it down now."

The bot stops immediately. "Yeah, yeah... carry this... carry that... all I ever do is carry," it mumbles, before letting go of the crate. While it is still in the air.

It's a good thing that the crate doesn't have far to drop. It lands on the floor with a loud thud.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 10, 2011 19:53

Oh dear.

I size up the crate, could I possibly, and mostly comfortably, provide a means of transportation for it?

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 10, 2011 19:58

I walk down.

Maybe my dorm is down this way? How can I possibly forget?

written by Speeder on Nov 10, 2011 22:32

"Hello Stella!

I got your message. Please, check the hinges for lubrication, and then if needed disassemble, check, fix and assemble again all the locks. If you need help of ORANGE people, you can tell them that it is my orders that they help you."

As I hear the loud thud I look at the crate.

"Whoa... Good we have a forkbot, no?"

written by Jam on Nov 10, 2011 23:08

I look at the crate...

"Is that just for Azir-R?! Wow..."

written by Gligar on Nov 11, 2011 01:32

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

I believe I mentioned that the crate is... large.

This means that one clone couldn't possibly carry the thing, unless, say, they had some mutation such as Adrenaline Control, or, say, a wheelchair, but even then, they would be unable to see over the crate to see where they were going. But nothing could possibly happen if they were to try it, right? Right? 😊

Jam-Y seems to think that the whole crate is for Azir-R, for some reason.

Speed-Y hasn't noticed it yet. He is too busy talking to Stella-R on the PDC. He's giving her instructions on dealing with a Code X23. Apparently, this involves fixing hinges, and possibly locks. She is to get assistance from the ORANGE techs if needed.

Only then does he notice the big crate. It's a good thing, he says, that they have a forkbot.

Hey look, Mick-R seems to have woken up again.

Cloning Station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

While Joris-R apparently inspects his ME card, Stella-R continues on the terminal. "Oh, hi, sir! Yes, I'm kind of busy... okay, I'll check... it might be a problem with the active cloning tanks, though, but if that's what it takes..."

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

It seems that Mango has forgotten the location of his dormitory. Perhaps it's downstairs?

He goes down to check.

Hmmm... he's able to reach some offices, and the building foyer... but... no dormitories. It might be on a level he skipped over...

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 11, 2011 02:15

Now that I understand the full scale of the crate, I lose any silly notions of wheeling it around.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 11, 2011 02:24

"Hmm. That crate looks awfully heavy. I don't suppose we could have that bot come back and deliver it outside? We have a forkbot outside... unless it's allowed to come in here and get the crate..."

I size up the crate to see if multiple clones might be able to lift it.

written by Speeder on Nov 11, 2011 10:22

"See if you can find a... computer technician... you know how those are rare, right? Well, see if you can find one of those, or a electrician, and check if after the final decanting a signal is being sent to open the door. Maybe for some reason the doors are not being signalled to open. But check mechanical defects first, YOU KNOW what happen when you bother electricians and then computer technicians when the defect was mechanical..."

I shudder and mumble.

"That might happen when we are ran by a computer, thus computer failures are not much seem in a good light..."

I realize that maybe what I just mumbled is treasonous and shut up.

"Stella! I have to fix that power problem, maybe in fact is the power problem that is breaking the stuff in the cloning station. You know, being troubleshooter and tech services at the same time, mean get sent to fix stuff that probably got broken by commie fault."

written by Speeder on Nov 11, 2011 11:15

I suddenly have a idea.

"Hey, what if we check what is in the crate?"

Then I look around me.

"No, better do that in a less crowded place, WHO KNOWS what we are supposed to get."

written by Gligar on Nov 11, 2011 15:38

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Azir-R now realises that he couldn't carry the crate.

L4-O throws out some suggestions: either they could get to totebot to carry it out to Nukabot, have Nukabot come in to get it (assuming that it is permitted to enter), or perhaps they could carry the thing out to Nukabot themselves... looks like they could pull that off if they tried...

Speed-Y continues talking to Stella-R, telling her to find a software tech or a Power Services tech, to see if there is even a signal going to the doors. Either way, she is to check the hardware first, and make sure that it is not a hardware problem.

He mumbles something that my microphones aren't picking up, before continuing. He has to finish this mission. Perhaps the power failures are causing the problems in the cloning station.

After this, he looks at the crate. Perhaps they should see what's in it? Perhaps in a less crowded place. They don't know what they've been assigned, after all.

Cloning station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

"I agree, sir," Stella-R replies. "I'd rather not get Power Services involved in this any more than we need to. You know we'd never live it down if we had to call them. Especially after the reactor incident..."

written by Speeder on Nov 11, 2011 16:32

"Oh... the reactor incident... I wonder why my team always get assigned to fix stuff related to reactors or power... I am not Power Services... Oh in fact... I have to go Stella, now I need to get to Power Services to ask more about my troubleshooter mission."

I turn off the PDC.

"Ok, everyone taking that crate to Nukabot, also prepare to leave to Power Services... Someone here remember where it was? I am sure we got informed about it in the briefing."

written by 4616599 on Nov 11, 2011 18:26

I notice the stuck door just before I leave and decide to poke in.

"Hello! Are you alright? Who did this? Was it sabotage? ...Could it have been some mutant?"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 11, 2011 19:27

"Well, you heard the leader. Those of you able to help carry, over to the crate."

I assess whether I'm able to help carry well enough. Should be able to. I move over to the crate to help regardless.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 11, 2011 19:59

I can't really help, so I'll try to move slowly with the team and forge a clear path ahead.

written by Gligar on Nov 11, 2011 20:44

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y assumes that Stella-R is talking about his previous mission, and responds that he wonders why his team always gets assigned to fix power-related things when he is not Power Services...

Oh well, he has to go. He hangs up.

Now, the crate...

He orders his team to take it to Nukabot and prepare to leave for Power Services. Does anyone remember where it is?

L4-O backs up the order, asking the able-bodied members to move the crate. That would be Lucas-R, John-R, Jam-Y, and probably Speed-Y and himself...? Azir-R is in his wheelchair and can't help, but he can move ahead of them to try and make room. Mick-R is near death on the floor, so he can't help either...

Oh wait... Speed-Y just stepped on him...

Cloning station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Stella-R finishes her call and heads back among the cloning tanks. She still has those alarms to deal with. For no real reason, Joris-R tags along.

He notices a clone stuck in a tank, and asks if the clone knows anything. Could the mutants have caused this?

The clone flinches at the word 'mutant', and replies, "Those unclean freaks? I bed they did!"

written by Speeder on Nov 11, 2011 22:24

After I notice I stepped on Mick.

"Oh no... I my feet will get dirty..."

I see if none of my feet have blood or gibs on them, if they have, I attempt to clean them on Mick jumpsuit, and then I move on to near the box, figuring if I can somehow help.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 11, 2011 22:28

I attempt to help with the box as well. If everyone is in position, I help lift it so we can start progressing towards the door.

Of course... I check whether we can actually fit the crate through the door.

written by Jam on Nov 11, 2011 23:42

I also try to help with moving the box...

"Uh, Speed-Y, you just stepped on someone... Hmm... Good thing he isn't on the team, or we'd have to go find his next clone!"

written by Malkom on Nov 12, 2011 04:44

I suddenly start. "Ugh... whassamatter? Oh..."

I hurry up to the PLC window if possible. "I'm here to be outfitted," I say, trying to smile. "Troubleshooter Team Epsilon."⁶⁵⁹

written by 4616599 on Nov 12, 2011 10:26

I try tugging lightly at the door.

"Yep. Somehow I feel they can't be trusted. I've lost part of my memory...I think it was them!"

written by Gligar on Nov 12, 2011 13:45

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Belatedly, Speed-Y realises he just stepped in something. Checking his feet, he now sees that his robotic foot is covered in blood from Mick-R's crushed arm. He wipes it off on Mick-R's jumpsuit before getting ready with the crate.

⁶⁵⁹ SPEEDER: (OOC: departing for holiday trip, if I do not reply for a while, assume I concentrate in putting crate on forkbot, going to Power Services, and of course, laughing at Mick as necessary.

random info on the holiday: brazil declaration of republic day. Although I personally consider it a disgrace, since after it Brazil only went downhill)

He, L4-O, the REDs (but not Mick-R), and Jam-Y all begin lifting. Even with all five of them, it's tough going.

There is one saving grace: the doors are automatic. With Azir-R in front, they should be able to pass through.

Jam-Y, who seems to be trying to wipe Mick-R from his mind, says that it's a good thing that he's not on the team, or they'd have to go and find that guy's clone.

Speaking of that guy, would you believe that he's not dead yet? He tries to stand and finds that he cannot. But he is still close enough to the windows to try to claim his assigned equipment.

The clerk laughs. "What, you get special treatment, all of a sudden? Team Epsilon's equipment already got assigned. Speak to your Equipment Guy."

Cloning station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Joris-R tries pulling on the door. It doesn't budge.

He agrees with the clone that mutants can't be trusted. He cites the gaps in his memory, and is certain that they had something to do with it.

Stella-R pushes him aside. She has her crowbar out again. "I though you had a mission to go to."

She begins applying the crowbar to the door.

written by Jam on Nov 12, 2011 15:36⁶⁶⁰

"Oh, wait, he's not dead yet..."

Then I (presumably) hear the clerk telling Team Epsilon already got their equipment.

"Oh, I guess I don't need to stand in line any more..."

I think about walking up to the others, then I remember what happened to the last clone that skipped ahead in line...

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 12, 2011 15:50

If I pass Jam as we head out, I tell him to follow us, and that all our stuff is in this crate.

written by Malkom on Nov 12, 2011 18:57

I moan.

"Could you... get me a docbot..."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 12, 2011 21:14

I continue assisting with getting the crate out of the door.

"We have a little present for the team, Nukabot. Though we should take it somewhere safe before we start pillaging its contents."

⁶⁶⁰ JAM: (ooc: Remember, I lost my memory? Or did it suddenly come back? 😊)

written by Gligar on Nov 12, 2011 21:31

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Jam-Y (whose memories seem to be returning (but maybe he's deliberately forgetting certain details 😊)) realises that Mick-R isn't dead yet, but more or less ignores it.

He does hear the clerk tell Mick-R that the team's equipment was already assigned, and thinks about joining the team. (This despite briefly actually doing so to pick up the crate. Hmmm.) But there is the problem of the Queue Enforcement Officer.

Who seems to have gone elsewhere a few minutecycles ago.

As the crate group passes, Azir-R tells him that they have the equipment, and that he should tag along.

Soon, the group gets to the door.

Mick-R, on the other hand, is busy trying not to die. He asks the clerk to fetch a docbot. He is told, "There was a docbot here not long ago... maybe it is still here. Or would you prefer a medkit? It would probably be cheaper. I think we've got some in the back."

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Back in the concourse once again, L4-O sees that Nukabot is still here. Nice to see it wasn't stolen.

He also sees that Joris-R's corpse is also still here. Probably not a good thing.

He ignores it, though, and tells Nukabot that they have a present. They should get somewhere safe before opening it, though. "Where do you suggest?" the bot asks. "I presume that the bunker is out of the question."

Cloning station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Stella-R once again demonstrates her prowess with the crowbar, as she successfully opens yet another stuck cloning tank. The trapped clone steps out and looks around. There seems to be few people around... only themselves and an ORANGE tech among the tanks. The clone peers at the tech, looking for any telltale signs... nope. But you never can tell.

Joris-R doesn't seem to react.

written by Jam on Nov 13, 2011 04:19⁶⁶¹

I look at Mick-R a bit closer...

"Wait, have I met you somewhere?"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 13, 2011 10:40

I assist with getting the crate on Nukabot's forks.

"Erm... no clue. Are we commencing with our mission investigation? Perhaps we'll find somewhere along the way to stop."

⁶⁶¹ Jam: (ooc: Speaking of memory problems, I for some reason forgot I was helping with the crate... 😊)

[776]

"Or we can search for a large empty location nearby, if there is one. Or use a lift..."

I shrug.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 13, 2011 12:05

I head up again. Obviously something is getting at my mind if I'm forgetting the floor where my dorm is.

Ugh... This is getting somewhat frustrating...

written by Gligar on Nov 13, 2011 13:41

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Jam-Y looks back into the warehouse, his memory still spotty. Does he know Mick-R from somewhere? He certainly recognises him...

L4-O tells Nukabot that he doesn't know.

The crate slowly makes its way onto Nukabot's forks. There we go.

L4-O asks if they will be beginning their investigation? Maybe they could find somewhere along the way to sort out equipment. Either nearby or closer to the destination...

John-R asks, "Don't we need to pick up a repair team or something?"

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango climbs again. He is getting irritated about his memory failures.

Then again, how often does he have to take the stairs? Not often.

Hey, that level looks promising...

written by 4616599 on Nov 13, 2011 16:31

"Okay then, I guess I'm off. Beware any suspicious clones. Good daycycle!"

I look for the warehouse entrance.

written by Malkom on Nov 13, 2011 19:29

"Medkit, p-please... I don't think I've got many credits left..."

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 13, 2011 19:38

I check that level.

Come on. It's not surely that often that you take the stairwell about...

written by Gligar on Nov 13, 2011 20:28

Cloning station, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Joris-R wishes the two clones a good daycycle, gives the usual warning about suspicious clones, and heads out.

Corridor G3, G Level, Gamma Subsector

Or rather, he would.

He notices the clearance strip is currently in its YELLOW phase. Red is blinking, though, so it won't be long.

PLC Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Mick-R requests the medkit - he probably doesn't have that many credits left.

"Alright," says the clerk. "Wait here."

The clerk disappears through the door into the warehouse proper.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango looks at the promising level. Yes... this looks familiar...
...and there it is!

written by Malkom on Nov 14, 2011 05:08

I wait, trying not to pass out.

Do I succeed? Do I fail? Hmm... interesting question, eh?

written by Lightning4 on Nov 14, 2011 07:28

"Hmm. Well then, we're off to do that first. I believe Speed-Y knows the location?"

I examine the crate, to see if it has easy access or if we're going to need to pop the thing open with crowbars.

If it's easily accessed, I peek inside to get a rudimentary assessment of its contents.

written by 4616599 on Nov 14, 2011 14:36

I whistle and rub my jumpsuit and head, waiting. I cross when the strip turns red.

written by Gligar on Nov 14, 2011 16:03

PLC Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Mick-R waits... trying to stay awake...

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

L4-O comments that they'd better do that first. Perhaps Speed-Y knows the way?

He looks at the crate. It's your standard large woodlyke PLC crate with RED clearance markings. It's held together with the usual Convenient Non-Treasonous Crate Fastenings*, you know, the ones which are difficult to remove. It appears that something will be needed to open the crate... perhaps a crowbar? Does anyone have one? Or does someone want to go back in and get one? Remember the queue...

PLC Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

...and fails.

Corridor G3, Gamma Subsector

Joris-R waits.

Soon, the strip changes to RED, and he enters the corridor properly.

He soon passes through the corridor, and the IntSec checkpoint beyond, entering Delta Subsector.

* Not nails. Nails are INDIGO Clearance.

[777]

Corridor, G Level, Delta Subsector

The corridor clearly hasn't seen a scrubot recently, what with the discarded B3 cans and such. Not to mention the discarded pamphlets. Hasn't anyone heard of trash receptacles?

Then again, some of those look like secret society propaganda... looks like FCCC-P, Sierra Club, Communists... even some Anti-Mutant stuff there.

PLC Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

"Hey, citizen! Are you okay?"

The clerk has returned with the promised medkit. Well, that took a surprisingly short amount of time.

written by 4616599 on Nov 14, 2011 16:20

"Ha, Fringe stuff, really. Who would actually bother with these. I can see their motivations though. Not that I agree with most of them."

I look at the pamphlets, paying a bit more attention to the anti-mutant ones.

I smile and shake my head if I notice anyone watching me.

written by Malkom on Nov 14, 2011 17:51

I hope I wake up... maybe I will!

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 14, 2011 19:35

I go on through, so as to not waste any more time than what has been already. I look for my dorm, and enter it when I find it.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 14, 2011 21:54

"Hm. We're going to need a crowbar to get this thing open. And I'm not really willing to wait in line again..."

I get on Nukabot in my normal spot, waiting for the rest of the team to get back on as well.

Meanwhile, I also take out old, trusty Fred and assess whether it may be sufficient to get the crate open.

written by Gligar on Nov 14, 2011 22:21

Corridor, G Level, Delta Subsector

Joris-R dismisses the secret societies as 'fringe', and wonders who would bother with them. Though he can see their motivations, he disagrees with... most of them.⁶⁶²

He gives the leaflets a glance, and although I may be imagining things, it appears that his eye lingers over one particular one...

Speaking of lingering, this camera seems to have locked on to him. I could override, but...⁶⁶³

⁶⁶² GLIGAR: (OOC: how ironic 😊 4616599 gets a perversity point. [CENSORED]ore PP[FRAGMENT MISSING])

⁶⁶³ Gligar: (OOC: Another thing I need [REDACTED]: Treason Points! This situation looks worthy of one 🤪)

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Mick-R struggles, and blearily opens his eyes. It's really difficult.

"Ah, good!" the clerk replies. "I would hate for my efforts to have gone to waste in finding this." He is holding a medkit.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango finds his way in. The place is deserted at this hourcycle. Even the scrubot has left.

The "emergency lights" are still in place, though some have burned themselves out. Clearly, these lights are far less efficient than the ones they stand in for.

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

L4-O relays his observations regarding the necessity of a crowbar to the rest of the team, and adds that he does not want to re-enter the warehouse, before settling back into his usual position in Nukabot's operator's seat.

While he waits for the rest of the team to follow suit, he produces Fred, his knife, and looks at it. Is it up to the task of opening their crate? It has to be worth a shot, right?

Storage Room, Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

It seems that Cryo has indeed been, er, "inspecting the door". He is focused intently on the lock for some reason. Maybe there's a speck of dust on it.

He is interrupted when the door opens, revealing a RED supervisor. "What the - how in HEL did you get in here! Get back to work!"

written by Malkom on Nov 15, 2011 02:09

"H-help me? P-please..."

The world swims. I look nauseated.

written by Gligar on Nov 15, 2011 16:03

Corridor, G Level, Delta Subsector

Joris-R continues on. He soon reaches the concourse, where he sees the team (minus Mick-R) loading a big crate onto Nukabot.

Actually, it looks like they're just about finished.

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Unlike Mick-R. He's still on the floor, requesting help, trying not to vomit up whatever's in his stomach.

The clerk replies, "Well, it would hardly be good for trade if a customer was terminated even if he's a queue-jumper... and anyway, you still need to pay for this."

The clerk opens the door again, and comes out. "I've seen someone use one of these... I'm pretty certain I know what to do."

[778]

Storage Room, Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

Cryo doesn't respond.

The supervisor says, "Listen to me already! Get back to work!"

Wait a minutecycle, didn't I read someclone's profile the other daycycle? Someclone who thought he was an expert at everything and liked to 'inspect' stuff? That might be you... Cryo-BRN, right? In that case, you're reported AWOL. That means I have to escort you to a confession booth. Follow me."

The supervisor grabs Cryo and tries to move him.

written by Malkom on Nov 15, 2011 17:35

I look at him blearily. "I s-sure hope y-you do," I mumble. "At least it's t-t-technological if I d-die..."

The world spins and goes black.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 15, 2011 18:17

I look at see Joris-R alive again.

"Oh there you are. Erm. Sorry about your last clone."

"We're going to get moving now, we need to find the repair team we need for the mission... I think they were in Power Services in this sector.

"I don't suppose you know where that is in this sector, Nukabot?"

I consult my PDC if Nukabot doesn't know the location.

written by Gligar on Nov 15, 2011 21:37

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Mick-R hopes that he won't die... but even if he does, he seems at ease as he blacks out once again.

The clerk begins work. Do this, then attach this to there...

...

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

L4-O notices Joris-R, and apologises for his previous clone. He then informs him that they will be heading to pick up the repair team now. He believes that the team is currently in Power Services.

The only problem, of course, is that he is not entirely sure where Power Services is...

He asks Nukabot. "I am afraid that I do not know," the bot replies. "But, were you not given a piece of paper with the destination co-ordinates?"

Joris-R can't help but notice that nothing has been done about his previous clone, which is still fastened to the top of Nukabot. It doesn't look to have been touched at all.

PLC Main Warehouse Entry, G Level, Delta Subsector

...

Mick-R wakes up, in a euphoria. He's still injured, but at least he's HAPPY about it. And the pain? That's just fine.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 15, 2011 23:05

"Yes... Speed-Y has it, as I recall."

I ask Speed-Y to see the paper, and read off the locations list so we can get moving.

written by Gligar on Nov 16, 2011 00:34

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

L4-O mentions that Speed-Y has it.

He turns to the Team Leader. Could he show them the paper? Or perhaps read it out?

Speed-Y looks in his equipment. Ah! There it is. He shows the paper to L4-O, who reads it:

Paper said:

PLC MAIN WAREHOUSE, G LEVEL, DELTA SUBSECTOR

POWER SERVICES OFFICE 3, X LEVEL, ETA SUBSECTOR

And since they've just come from the warehouse...

Storage Room, Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

The supervisor grunts. Cryo is still fixated on his microscopic speck of dust on the lock.

The supervisor tries again, with more force.

This time, he's able to drag Cryo behind him. Cryo still doesn't seem to notice when he does, swivelling his head to look at the speck even as he passes.

Corridor, Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

The supervisor continues to drag Cryo down the corridor. It's slow going. You know how Cryo can be.

written by Malkom on Nov 16, 2011 00:41

I grin around at whoever I can see. "Oh, lovely! I'm getting hurt by technology, what could be better?!?!?" I seem to be totally sincere.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 16, 2011 03:33

"Well then... I guess we're off to Eta Subsector. Probably safer to get there from here then go to X level rather than go to X level in this sector and try to get across..."

"Onward then!"

written by Jam on Nov 16, 2011 03:34

I blink.

"Wha? Huh? Where were we going again?"

I try to recall...

"Right! We were going to... uh... the compnode! Yeah, that's it... We need to defuse the bomb there, that was set by that commie mutant traitor Ma— ma— uh, ma-something-R! Wait... That's not right, is it?"

written by Speeder on Nov 16, 2011 11:28⁶⁶⁴

I look at Jam, puzzled.

“No, we are going to...”

Then it clicks.

“Oh... you STILL do not remember stuff. That is a problem. As long you remember you are YELLOW and your medical skills we are fine... wait, you DO remember your medical skills, don't you?”

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 16, 2011 13:58

“I hope so, if Mick keeps catching up we are really going to need them.”

written by Gligar on Nov 16, 2011 14:34

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

L4-O announces the team's destination. He suggests that it might be better to head for Eta Subsector first before heading up to X Level.

Jam-Y tries to verify that, but his memory still hasn't fully returned. For instance, he still believes that the team's destination is the compnode.

But even his knowledge of that mission is fragmentary. He seems to have mixed it up with the subsequent mission to the reactor, where there was a bomb. You remember? The one set by the communists? Only he thinks that “Ma?????-R” was responsible.

I'm pretty sure that there was no such clone.

And he doesn't seem to be sure either.

Speed-Y starts to correct him, before realising what's going on. He reminds Jam-Y that he is YELLOW and has medical skills. He remembers those, right?

Azir-R hopes so. They'll be needed if Mick-R keeps catching up with them.

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Speaking of Mick-R, he's still lying on the floor, only now he's telling everyone how wonderful it is to be hurt by technology.

“Something like that,” the clerk replies. “Now, let me scan your ME card...” He passes a scanner over Mick-R. “...and that's everything.” He puts the medkit in Mick-R's hands.

written by Speeder on Nov 16, 2011 16:10

I hop back into place, then I look at Joris. I mean, the dead one.

“We should get rid of that and put the alive Joris in its place.”

Then I turn to Joris.

“By the way, you died because you dropped your can of B3 and got so shocked with that fact that you died, or I think that this is what happened, and I got my leg broken when the dropped can exploded, so please DO NOT drop your can of B3, they are AWESOME and DESERVE to be DRUNK. If you waste B3 again, I fear you will... die again somehow, probably screaming about how you lost B3 like the last time... or I think you was screaming because of the B3, because that was a scream of the screams.”

written by Lightning4 on Nov 16, 2011 18:02

“Shall we move then?”

I announce to Nukabot: “Let's move then.”

“If we spot a nice quiet place where we can check this crate, we could stop there.”

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 16, 2011 19:43

I grab on to Nikabot. Lets get this show on the road.

written by Gligar on Nov 16, 2011 22:13

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Speed-Y gets back into place.

It is then that he realises that they have a small problem, regarding the corpse of Joris-R's previous clone. Namely, the thing, and it's equipment, is still in place on top of Nukabot. It should be moved to allow the current Joris-R to take its place.

He also takes the time to tell Joris-R about what happened to his previous clone, namely, how it dies. According to Speed-Y, the former Joris-R dropped a can of B3. The shock of doing so is what caused it to die. It also caused some other complications among the team, notably, Speed-Y's meat leg was broken. It is important, he says, that Joris-R not let this happen again, as B3 is too important to just drop. Not to mention that Joris-R might die. Again. And there might be screaming involved.

L4-O suggests that they move, and tells Nukabot to do so. He adds that they can stop to check out their crate once they find a nice quiet place to do so.

Azir-R grabs on to Nukabot just as it begins, slowly, to move.

written by Malkom on Nov 17, 2011 06:51

I grin up at the clerk. “Now, seriously, how long is it going to take the awesome technology of Alpha Complex to seal up these wounds of mine? Or can I get up and go with my utterly useful and beneficial to the cause of technology (well, sometimes) team mates now? Or is there more you need to do, like cutting off my leg? In fact, cutting off my leg sounds like a rather interesting procedure...”

I look at the medkit. “Oh... you want me to use this awesome piece of amazing technology? Immediately! At once!”

I start trying to patch myself up with the medkit, if needed.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 17, 2011 07:03

“Oh... right”

⁶⁶⁴ SPEEDER: (OOC: ima back!)

I help in stripping the Joris-Corpse of its contents and getting it off of Nukabot.

written by 4616599 on Nov 17, 2011 07:08

I look confused.

“Uhh...screaming...B3...shock? Uhh...my memory of my last clone is a tad fuzzy. Did Jam-Y lose his memory too? I think so”

I glance at Jam-Y.

“A tad suspicious, don’t you think?”

I gingerly prod at ex-Joris.

written by Speeder on Nov 17, 2011 10:08

I nod.

“Well... First, somehow you got the skill to... float... Friend Computer disliked it, and tried to terminate you, but we convinced it to not do it, and we had to strap you on Nukabot so you could remain with us, since you floated involuntarily.

Then you wanted to drink B3, you got a can and all, and when you was going to drink, you dropped it, and started to scream like someone scream when losing the last B3 while wandering in one of those deactivated sectors that naturally have weather control off, and thus are very dry... You know, those places noone is supposed to go, but for some reason those places insist in being in the path from one side of the city to the other.”

I smile.

“I am glad that we keep getting missions in our home sector! We are slow in moving inside a single building... Yes, it is a bigass building, but a single building, but imagine how much time it would take for us to go from AAA to ZZZ.”

written by Gligar on Nov 17, 2011 14:08

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Mick-R HAPPILY wonders how long it will take for his wounds to be fixed. Or can he HAPPILY return to his team? Unless there was something else, like HAPPILY getting his leg cut off? Or how about he HAPPILY try to fix himself up?

He proceeds to try the latter. It becomes clear that he doesn’t really know what he’s doing.

The clerk suggests that he head off. “You’re only blocking the way here right now. And besides, you let your team get away.”

Corridors, G Level, Delta Subsector

Indeed, Nukabot has left the concourse, and is on its way to Eta Subsector.

En route, L4-O works to strip the dead Joris-R of its equipment. He is assisted by Lucas-R. Between them, they find an INFRARED jumpsuit worn Cryo-style as a backpack, along with a RED jumpsuit worn normally; a second RED jumpsuit for some reason, complete with boots; four cans of B3 Plain; the dead clone’s ME card; and a Series 1300 PDC.

The living Joris-R is confused. His memory is still fuzzy for some reason. He seems to recall, though, that Jam-Y also lost his memory. Something that he finds... suspicious.

As Nukabot turns a corner, he pokes his former clone. It fails to do anything.

Speed-Y takes the time to explain: For some reason, Joris-R gained the ability to, well, float. The team managed to convince Our Mutual Friend to spare him so they could take him with them. They strapped him to the roof of Nukabot to stop him from floating away (since he didn’t have any control over it). Then came the B3, during which time Joris-R began screaming like a clone who just dropped the last B3 in a sector with deactivated air conditioning. You know, one of those sectors that crops up from time to time, the ones where no clone is supposed to visit, but somehow ends up being on the path between Sectors ONE and TWO on your journey. And it’s definitely a good thing that they keep getting missions in their own sector, given how slow they keep moving...

Finally, the corpse is cut loose, and dumped in a corridor, just outside a security station, which Nukabot proceeds to pass through.

written by Speeder on Nov 17, 2011 16:53

If the B3 got dumped with the corpse, I freak out, otherwise, I do not freak out.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 17, 2011 20:01

Unusual. It’s awfully dark here. Perhaps whoever installed these weren’t really thinking that far into the future...

I try not to trip on anything on the ground as I move through to my dorm. I enter if possible.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 17, 2011 20:53

I look around for any empty rooms nearby that might be a good place to stop and inspect our gear.

written by Gligar on Nov 17, 2011 21:16

Corridors, G Level, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y almost panics as he sees that the corpse has been dumped.. The thing was carrying cans of B3! They could explode!

Oh wait... Lucas-R has them. That’s a relief.

As they keep moving, L4-O keeps looking for someplace to stop and check out their equipment. Perhaps the concourse coming up? It looks pretty empty right now.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango thinks that it’s odd for the “emergency lights” to be failing like this. Perhaps they haven’t thought too far ahead...?

As he (cautiously) enters the dorm, he hears a clone walking towards him from behind.

written by Jam on Nov 17, 2011 22:48 Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

"Er... Yeah, when did I lose my memory... I know I have this bruise on my forehead, maybe it's related?"

written by Speeder on Nov 17, 2011 23:59

"For some reason, you thought that your head could somehow penetrate Nukabot. But I guess you are not one of those ethereal mutants."

written by Gligar on Nov 18, 2011 00:25

Corridors, G Level, Epsilon Subsector

As Nukabot continues, Jam-Y wonders aloud how exactly he came to lose his memory. He knows that he has a bruise on his head, so he guesses that the two are related.

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y tells him that he somehow attempted to put his head through Nukabot. Since he failed, it is clear that he is not any sort of "ethereal" mutant. (Just where did he hear that word, anyway?)

Corridors, Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

Cryo has failed to respond to the supervisor, even as he is being dragged down the corridor. The supervisor sighs. "This is clearly treason," he says. "Let's see what Friend Computer has to say to you, eh? See? There's the booth right there."

The supervisor begins attempting to squeeze Cryo into a booth.

written by Malkom on Nov 18, 2011 04:22

"Sounds cool! In fact, it sounds so ubercool I'm gonna freeze to death!"

I wrench myself to my feet and (with a big, big, silly, silly grin on my face) hurry towards wherever the team went, searching myself for a PDC if I go.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 18, 2011 16:09

I give the room a quick look around.

"Hmm. Let's stop here. This looks quiet enough to crack into our crate of supplies."

Once Nukabot stops, I almost fly off of the drivers seat and start attempting to crack into the goodie crate with assistance from Fred.

written by Gligar on Nov 18, 2011 17:04

PLC Main Warehouse Entryway, G Level, Delta Subsector

Mick-R enthusiastically, and above all, HAPPILY, agrees. He's able to wrench himself to his feet - hey, he wobbles a bit! Cool! - and stumble out into the concourse.

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

As he tries to think where the team might have gone, he searches himself for a PDC. Unfortunately, he doesn't seem to have one.

Speaking of the team, they have stopped in another concourse in Epsilon Subsector. L4-O thinks that it is a good place to crack open that crate. He's even taking a crack at the crate himself, applying Fred to the Convenient Non-Treasonous Crate Fastenings.

After a moment, he finds that the fastenings do a very good job at fastening the crate together. Cryo would be proud! Although he'd be less than proud at how well a job Fred is doing. In only a minutecycle, one of the fastenings has been removed. Only eleven more to go!

Corridors, Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

The supervisor tries again. Cryo is still being less than co-operative, but he perseveres. Eventually, Cryo is fully inside and the door locks.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 18, 2011 17:39

I frown.

"I guess Fred's a better weapon than crowbar."

I sigh and get back to working on the crate.

"If anyone has anything that can help get this thing open, it'd be immensely helpful!"

written by Speeder on Nov 18, 2011 18:03

After getting bored⁶⁶⁵ with Fred speed, I decide to help.

I see if I can... kick the fastenings with my robotic leg, in a way to make them open without destroying everything.

written by Malkom on Nov 18, 2011 18:05

I ask to borrow a PDC off of a convenient INFRARED clone, and call the team, asking where they are (and I do all this with a big grin and chucking in random comments about how awesome this PDC technology is! Why, we can talk to ANYONE! Isn't it amazing?!)

written by Gligar on Nov 18, 2011 21:00

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

L4-O puts Fred away. It seems that it isn't a very good crowbar. As such, he asks for help with the crate.

Seemingly bored with waiting, Speed-Y decides to help... by using his robotic leg. He attempts to kick the fastenings...

...and learns, in the process, that his meat leg is still not fully healed. He collapses in pain.

But look on the bright side. He did manage to fall onto the crate, causing two of the fastenings to pop right off. Progress!

Now, it's Lucas-R's turn. He is able to open two more of the fastenings with the use of a little force.

So that's how you do it.

⁶⁶⁵ SPEEDER: (and oocly realizing that Gligar might make this last 11 turns...)

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Mick-R, it seems, would still like the use of a PDC. Unfortunately, there don't seem to be any clones here to borrow one from, certainly not INFRAREDS who wouldn't have a PDC anyway, since PDCs are RED Clearance. And besides, what would they be doing in a RED concourse?

written by Speeder on Nov 18, 2011 22:08

"YEAAAOUCH!"

But then I notice the crate opening.

"I AM AWESOME! THAT WAS ON PURPOSE!"

Then I notice Lucas doing it.

"But Lucas idea is smarter."

I stand on the ground, and I mean really stand, on booth feed, solidly, no leaving all the weight on injured leg.

"Ok, everyone do what Lucas did."

I do it too.

written by Gligar on Nov 19, 2011 01:14

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y hurts. But he notices that his little stunt actually did some good, and so naturally, that was his intention all along.

Then he sees that Lucas-R's idea also works, and suggests that everyone follow suit, since Lucas-R's idea is better.

Lucas-R grins as Speed-Y leads the way, opening two more of the fastenings.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 19, 2011 01:15

I nearly jump at the sound of steps, but decide that steps aren't that big of a deal to leap at in surprise. Instead, I attempt to move on into my area of the dorm, making a slow turn, so I'm essentially walking backwards, readying my arms should someone try any suspicious moves.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 19, 2011 01:18

I take a count of how many fastenings are left unopened, and assist in getting the crate open much like Lucas-R did.

If the crate can be opened, I pop the lid and survey the contents immediately, as my duty as Equipment Officer!

written by Jam on Nov 19, 2011 01:32

I try to copy Lucas's method to open the fastenings, and use it to try to open the fastenings...

written by Malkom on Nov 19, 2011 01:38

I see if I can find anyone around the concourse to tell me where the team went... if not, I choose an exit that looks likely (one leading to... Power Services? Is that where we were going?)

written by Gligar on Nov 19, 2011 14:19

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango tries to act normal. So someone's approaching from behind... that's normal, right?

Yep, normal.

Apparently, so is walking backwards.

Now that Mango can see the newcomer, he can see that said newcomer is carrying more of those "emergency lights", as well as another box.

The clone enters the dormitory and notices Mango. "Hi there, citizen! Emergency light replacement. Shouldn't take long."

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

L4-O looks at the fastenings. There are now six left to open.

He and Jam-Y work at opening more, and manage another four.

L4-O tries opening the crate one more time. It looks like it wants to open, but it is being stopped by the remaining two fastenings.

Concourse G3, Delta Subsector

Mick-R looks around again. There are a couple of YELLOW clones talking on their PDCs by what looks to be the only other door in the concourse besides the warehouse and the door Mick-R used earlier to get here.

Though he still wants to ask someone if they saw anything, Mick-R chooses not to interrupt the YELLOWS' PDC conversations and simply passes them, heading down the corridor.

written by Jam on Nov 19, 2011 21:40

I try to remove the last two fastenings with the same method.

written by Gligar on Nov 19, 2011 22:37

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

It falls to Jam-Y to attempt to remove the last two fastenings holding the crate closed.

It is difficult work.

The reason becomes remarkably clear once Jam-Y finally manages to remove them: once he is done, the crate immediately flies open in an explosion of little Packy-Foam pellets.

When the pellets settle (on just about everything in the concourse), a number of smaller boxes can be seen within the crate. Each one is labelled.

written by Jam on Nov 19, 2011 22:58

I jump in surprise, then once the Packy-Foam pellets settle, I look at the crate's contents...

Then, as I see more boxes, I facepalm...

"These better not have fasteners too!"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 20, 2011 00:51

I brush the pellets off of me, then look into the crate in excitement.

"Okay. Time for me to do my duties! Let's see what we have here... and what I need to distribute among the team!"

written by Gligar on Nov 20, 2011 01:19

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

At first, Jam-Y is surprised by the sudden explosion of Packy-Foam. However, he soon recovers, and inspects the crate's contents: the boxes. He expresses unhappiness at the crate's fasteners, and hopes that the boxes don't have them.

Luckily for him, the boxes are just of the plain cardboard variety.

As mentioned, they are labelled. One, for instance, is labelled WEAPONRY. Another is labelled HYGIENE OFFICER. A third - the largest - is labelled HAPPINESS OFFICER. There are more boxes, and they have similar labels.

L4-O also has a look, in his capacity as Equipment Officer. As he says, it's time for him to do his job!

written by Jam on Nov 20, 2011 03:25

I wait to receive my box, then inspect its contents...

written by Malkom on Nov 20, 2011 04:43

All this time I've been trying to get to my team, as fast as possible!

written by Lightning4 on Nov 20, 2011 07:04

"Okay, let's get started then."

I grab the box labelled WEAPONRY and set it aside.

"I'll go through that once everyone has their role equipment box..."

I then try to obtain the HAPPINESS OFFICER box and look around thinking for a moment.

"Ah right."

I hand it to Azir-R.

I get the HYGIENE OFFICER box and frown.

"Who was it again? Not that Mick-R guy I hope."

Either way, I put the box aside and look into the crate for more boxes.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 20, 2011 08:56

I stop going backwards, just so I don't end up hitting something which I may regret later. I reply to the clone's greeting.

"Oh, um... hi!"

written by Gligar on Nov 20, 2011 14:05

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Jam-Y eagerly waits for his box as he tries to ignore the Packy-Foam.

Of course, he has to wait for L4-O to begin handing them out.

Said clone begins by contemplating the WEAPONRY box. He puts it aside for later.

He then extracts the HAPPINESS OFFICER box from the Packy-Foam, and hands it to Azir-R.

Next is the HYGIENE OFFICER box...

... that's Mick-R's, isn't it.

And speak of the [REDACTED], look who just entered the concourse...

L4-O tries to ignore him by reaching for another box. He ends up with one labelled TEAM LEADER.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango stops moving, and tries to greet the clone cordially.

The clone replies, "Right, shouldn't be long..." and gets to work. He starts by the door, replacing burnt-out "emergency lights" with new ones.

written by Malkom on Nov 20, 2011 21:00

I grin round at everyone. "Hey! I need to be patched up, I guess! Be sure to use some of the world's super awesome technology!"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 20, 2011 23:29

"Ah! Here you go, Sir!"

I hand the box to Speed-Y and continue sorting the boxes to the appropriate roles.

written by Gligar on Nov 21, 2011 00:02

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Mick-R announces his presence, and asks to be patched up. Well, he is still quite heavily injured. What did you expect for a clone who not only jumps queues, but who is as unlucky as, well, as Mick-R? 😊

And naturally, he suggests that technology be used to patch him up. (What's wrong with good old-fashioned Science? 😊)

Meanwhile, L4-O is still sorting out boxes. After handing Speed-Y his box, he digs into the seemingly-never-ending Packy-Foam, uncovering two more: labelled LOYALTY OFFICER and FINANCIAL OFFICER respectively. And he still has the HYGIENE OFFICER box to hand over, too.

Lucas-R looks like he can't wait for his box.

Jam-Y also waits with happy anticipation.

While he waits, L4-O digs out yet another one, this one with a long label: COMMUNICATIONS AND RECORDING OFFICER.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 21, 2011 00:06⁶⁶⁶

I go nab my box and look through all the stuff.

written by Speeder on Nov 21, 2011 00:20

I open my box like if was a gift...

You know, those that sometimes some strange senior citizens hand to junior citizens claiming they had something to do with their DNA or something.

You know, that thing that is supposed to be treasonous, since all DNA is supposed to be engineered for each citizen by friend computer.

written by Malkom on Nov 21, 2011 00:56

"Come on, guys, don't be shy... technology is a wonderful thing, you know..."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 21, 2011 03:30

"Financial... that was Joris-R I believe?"

I give Joris-R his box.

I scratch my head looking at the various boxes.

"Erm... I think Jam-Y was Loyalty, right?"

I fish out and put the Communications Officer box on the ground near the crate.

"I'm not certain who that was, I need to brush up on the roles I guess."

I scratch my head and look at Lucas-R.

"Erm... and you, not sure what your role is."

I go back to digging through the crate to find more boxes.

written by Gligar on Nov 21, 2011 15:49

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Azir-R opens his box. Amongst yet more Packy-Foam, he finds: a Happiness Officer MBD Badge; a Troubleshooter Helmet; a set of RED reflec; a laser pistol fitted with a RED barrel; a standard 25 clone-day supply of medication; a supply of Pre-planned Spontaneous Activity (PSA) cards; a card listing signs of Sub-Standard Morale (SSM); three Portable Drug Dispensers (PDD) with six refills; and a PDD Control Unit.

Speed-Y is next. He treats the box as a gift, which, in a way, it is.

Inside the box, he finds his own MBD Badge, some YELLOW reflec, a laser pistol with a YELLOW barrel, and a Team Leader's Hat with a nice retro-reflective version of the Team Leader symbol. And... is there a blinky light on there?⁶⁶⁷ ⁶⁶⁷ GLIGAR: (OOO: Speeder is correct in saying that it's forbidden and treasonous. However, it is common knowledge that citizens of BLUE Clearance or higher can alter their medications...

⁶⁶⁶ Azirphaeli: (OOO Sorry for the delay)

Yes, that means that some drop their hormone suppressants entirely, and... experiment.)

Mick-R seems to ignore his box, and once again espouses the wonders of Technology. Again, not Science. What's wrong with Science?

L4-O continues sorting out boxes. Financial Officer... that was Joris-R, right? He hands over the box.

And Loyalty officer... that was Jam-Y, right? He hands that over, as well.

Now... Communications and Recording Officer... he can't remember who that was. He sets the box aside.

John-R steps forward. "That was me, sir." He takes the box, and opens it, revealing another badge, more reflec, another laser pistol, a Multicorder 1, some helmet-mount cameras (with lights), some microphones, and a Com 1.

L4-O looks at Lucas-R. What was he again? "I'm the Alertness Officer, sir," Lucas-R replies. "It's looking like I'll be busy." He smiles.

But L4-O has already gone back to boxes. Here's one for... hey, this is the EQUIPMENT OFFICER box! Then that other one must be the ALERTNESS OFFICER one.

But... what's this third one? Oh, EMERGENCY LIGHTS.

written by Speeder on Nov 21, 2011 16:41

I happily equip the YELLOW reflec, pocket the badge, disassemble the pistol, pocket the YELLOW barrel and check if my previous pistol is still there.

If it is, I hand my previous pistol to L4.

"I already have one pistol, and my aim is bad enough holding one pistol in two hands, you can imagine how much barrels I would spend shooting with two pistols... twice faster, and half the accuracy, thus a 200% increase in waste."

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 21, 2011 17:32

I stash the additional pistol (You'll never know...) and try on my new helmet, reflec, and badge. I also setup the dispensers in the most efficient way possible. Then I glance at Mick and grin.

I also look over these PSA cards, as I am not familiar with them/

written by 4616599 on Nov 21, 2011 18:12

"Ah,,,I'm financial officer? I can barely remember, somehow..."

I quickly dig through my box.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 21, 2011 18:16

I put my own box aside, happy to have found it.

I give Lucas-R his box, and then fish out the EMERGENCY LIGHTS box and put it aside.

I do a quick check to see if there are any remaining boxes. If there aren't, I start cracking into my own box first.

I notice Speed-Y trying to offer me something and take it.

"Thank you sir."

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 21, 2011 19:39

I decide to watch the process as the clone starts replacing the emergency lights, making note of tools, materials and procedure.

I then try to memorise all of what I observed just then. Not that I was planning to recite it, however.

written by Malkom on Nov 21, 2011 20:41

I sigh and try to reach for my box, but whatever is keeping me awake and HAPPY seems to be wearing off.

I totter.

"Ow... I seem to have a treasonous hea... head.... Uh..... headache..." I hold my head.

written by Speeder on Nov 21, 2011 21:30

"I can take your treasonous head out of your body if you want."

...

"Oh... headache... then I cannot do anything about it, sorry."

written by Gligar on Nov 21, 2011 22:30

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y sorts out his new equipment. First, he puts on the reflec. It's a better fit than RED or ORANGE reflec ever was.

Next, his badge. He puts that in a pocket. Perhaps he should be reminded of CPU Mandate... er, I forget the number. But it's the one which states that MBD badges must be worn at all times during a mission and must not be covered. Failure to comply is... well, you can probably guess.

Third, the laser pistol. He unloads the barrel and puts both into a pocket. This causes him to find his other laser pistol, barrel and all. He hands it over to L4-O, stating that his aim is not quite up to scratch with one pistol, so his aim with two would be terrible.

He doesn't seem to do anything about his hat. Remember, not using your assigned equipment suggests that Out Mutual Friend made an error somewhere...

Azir-R puts his second pistol away - you never know, after all - before turning his attention to the rest, including his reflec, which he puts on along with his helmet and badge. Pretty good fit.

Now suitably attired, Azir-R has a look at the dispensers. He quite quickly realises that the most efficient way to use them would be for an unhappy clone to wear them. Indeed, they seem designed for that very method of use, what with the straps and clamps, intended to allow a unit to be fastened onto a clone's back, and the dispenser port, which looks like it attaches to a helmet. And since the reloads just slot in, right there on the back of the dispenser, said unhappy clone would have a good reason to stick around, right? After all, there's no way he could reach the slot to reload the thing himself...

He looks at Mick-R, and smiles.

Finally, there are the PSA cards. Each one consists of instructions allowing the Happiness Officer to lead his team through a single activity. Each one seems to be a team-building exercise of some sort, ranging from physical exercise to loyalty songs to quizzes and such.

Joris-R seems surprised at being the Financial Officer - he can barely remember it. Regardless, though, he looks through his box. Along with his badge, reflec, laser pistol (fitted with a RED barrel), and helmet, he finds an ME card scanner; a memory card labelled "Financial Analysis: An App for Series 1300/1500/1700/1900 PDC"; and several forms (Authorisation to Carry Out Emergency Credit Checks Form; Authorisation to Initiate Mandatory Spending Sprees Form; and Authorisation to Administer Fines Form).

L4-O puts his own box aside. He can see to it after he's seen to all the other boxes. Speaking of which, Mick-R still hasn't claimed his.

L4-O hands Lucas-R his box. Lucas-R tears into it and admires his own badge, before sorting out his equipment, first putting on the helmet, pinning the badge to his jumpsuit, and putting away the extra laser pistol and extra reflec. Then, he looks at the rest: some pyrotechnic grenades (intended to imitate a variety of weapons discharges); a supply of Insta-Inflatable Targets (with Realistic Colour and Sound Effect*); and an Authorisation to Initiate Emergency Response Tests Form. He then puts them away, but not without grinning first.

That leaves L4-O with one box left (the EMERGENCY LIGHTS box) which he sets aside. Looking one more time, he finds no more boxes! Yay!

That means that he can open his box!

And what's in the box? Aside from the usual reflec, laser pistol, helmet and badge? Well, there are two things: a Standard Maintenance Supply Kit and a Multipurpose Tool Kit, fresh from R&D.

Who does that leave? Oh yes... Mick-R.

He goes to claim his box. But by this time, the drugs keeping him happy and alert seem to be losing their edge. He totters on his feet, and complains of a headache. (But still a happy headache. The drugs haven't worn off completely.) But he still manages to get to the box.

Perhaps more drugs are in order? Or maybe a medkit or something? Or both?

Speed-Y offers to remove Mick-R's treasonous head, before realising that he said headache. He can't so much with headaches, so he simply apologises.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to watch the clone do his work.

Let's start with the "emergency light" the clone is currently replacing. It has already burned itself out, making his job

* just the one, apparently.

simpler, since he doesn't need to worry about open flames. At least on this one. All he has to do is remove the melted remains of the black rod from its holder using a knife, pop a small disc onto the base of the holder, slide a new black rod into the holder, and then, using an ordinary lighter, light the string protruding from the top of the rod.

Then, he moves to the next one.

written by Speeder on Nov 21, 2011 23:14

After I am happy my hands are free, I take my badge from the pocket, and attach it in the most proud way as possible, and then I carefully align the helmet on my head.

"I am ready to go!"

I notice the equipment with L4.

"Awesome, you got some tools. If you ever need something with them, ask me. I know how to use most of them. Since I am not equipment officer, I think I am not supposed to fix things in our equipment unless I am really needed. Although I do expect that I will have to repair the power system."

written by Jam on Nov 22, 2011 00:24

I realize I've just been sitting here drooling as I imagine all the cool stuff that could be in the box... Maybe a laser pistol, or some B3, or some reflec, or a laser pistol, or some Algae Chips, or a flamethrower, or a laser pistol!

I eventually decide to actually open the box.

"Come on... Laser pistol... Laser pistol..."

written by Gligar on Nov 22, 2011 02:02

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

It seems that Speed-Y was simply waiting until now to wear his badge. That would make sense, I guess... but there are those out there who would insist that the badge is the first thing you should see to.

But now that that detail has been seen to, Speed-Y can concentrate on other things. Such as his hat. There! Isn't that better? And hey, I was right! There is a blinky light on the hat! How mandatory! Now the team will be able to find him no matter where he is! Isn't that great? Of course it is!

Now suitably attired, Speed-Y looks over at L4-O. Noting that he now has tools, Speed-Y tells him that he should ask Speed-Y if he needs any help with them. He is YELLOW, after all, and with Tech Services, and should know how to use them. Even if he's not technically supposed to repair anything... except maybe the power problem.

But isn't power the domain of Power Services?

I'm sure Speed-Y will figure something out.

Jam-Y seems to have done so. He has figured out that he isn't going to get his equipment by just standing there drooling. It would be more productive, he thinks, if he were to open his box.

Now, what could be inside? He hopes that there is a laser pistol!

And what does he find? A Loyalty Officer MBD Badge, a Troubleshooter Helmet, a Mk.II Indestructible Loyalty Transcript Recorder, A LASER PISTOL!!!, a set of YELLOW reflec, a supply of Emergency Loyalty Tests, and a supply of Spontaneous Demonstrations of Loyalty cards.

Now all we need is for Mick-R to take his equipment... I feel like a broken record.

written by Speeder on Nov 22, 2011 03:32

Since I notice only Mick-R is not opening his equipment.

"You, headache guy. Open that box, NOW, or I will remove your head for unsubordination, treason, lack of loyalty, and mercy."

written by Malkom on Nov 22, 2011 03:55

I look unsteadily at the others as the drugs' influence fades away.

"Ugh... Gimme a gun..."

The world blurs and goes black.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 22, 2011 08:48

I look pleased with my tools and such. I put them in place in my backpack and don my proper attire.

"I will remember that, Sir, thanks."

I happily turn towards the WEAPONS box.

"Okay. Weapons I suppose are also my job. Let's sort that out!"

I crack open the box and survey the contents.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 22, 2011 10:08

It appears to me that the process isn't all that difficult to get on with. But I avoid envying this clone, and just watch as the room gets slightly brighter as the emergency lights are lit one by one.

I attempt to get to my bunk in order to get some rest for a bit, before the next exciting thing happens.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 22, 2011 13:10

If I see Mich pass out I "Rush to his aid." By rush to his aid, that means installing one of the dispensers.

"I call this taking preventative measures."

written by Gligar on Nov 22, 2011 15:58

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Noticing that the only clone who has not yet opened his box is Mick-R, Speed-Y turns to glare at him, and <i8>order him to open the box. Failure to do so will result in decapitation for insubordination, treason, lack of loyalty, and... mercy? That is an odd choice for a charge, but hey, Speed-Y's the team leader...

Mick-R just grumbles, demanding a weapon before passing out. Still somewhat happily, though.

While L4-O gets kitted up, Azir-R moves to Mick-R and begins fitting a drug dispenser. He claims that this is what he calls preventative measures.

By now, L4-O is ready. He thanks Speed-Y, and opens the WEAPONS box. Amidst yet more Packy-Foam (where does that stuff come from?) he finds about a dozen laser pistol barrels, with clearances running from RED to YELLOW, and ten tasers (RED clearance, complete with 5m power cords).

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides that the tech's work is simple. How nice that must be.

Maybe he can get some rest before the next thing happens? Well, there's his bunk...

written by Speeder on Nov 22, 2011 16:17

I smile happily!

"Taser! That is FUN, wanna see how FUN it is?"

I nab one and shoot Mick.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 22, 2011 18:10

I pass out the laser pistol barrels based on clearance, keeping an ORANGE one or two for myself of course.

I also pass out the tasers, again keeping one.

I pass them out to conscious, not floor-bound clones, at any rate.

Once that's dealt with, I turn my eye to the emergency lighting box and check the contents.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 22, 2011 19:47

I move to my bunk, and lay down, positioning my feet at where I consider to be the front of the bunk, and my head to where I consider to be the back of the bunk.

I let my eyes close, and I think about the team that is supposed to be arriving soon. They seem awfully behind schedule.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 22, 2011 20:34

I hope Speedy's aim is good, and if Mick starts shaking violently I back off for a bit. Hopefully the dispenser isn't damaged during the 'attack.'

written by Gligar on Nov 22, 2011 21:29

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y seems overjoyed at the tasers, and takes one.

He decides that it would be FUN if he were to give a brief demonstration of what they can do - and hey, there's Mick-R, passed out on the floor!

Zzzzzzt!

Mick-R gets to feel how FUN being hit by the little electrodes, and then being zapped by the internal capacitor bank, can be. If he weren't already on the floor, he'd be... well, floored by it. It certainly wakes him up, though for how long is anyone's guess.*

Some lights on the drug dispenser blink erratically.

Azir-R backs away, not wanting to get tased.

A small RED light appears on Speed-Y's taser.

L4-O begins passing out the laser pistol barrels. It seems that there are just enough for each clone to receive one extra barrel, with a few left.

He doesn't bother to give one to Mick-R, since he hasn't opened his box yet.

He then moves on to the tasers. He gives one to each member of the team... except for Mick-R.

That seems to be everything... no, wait, the EMERGENCY LIGHTS box.

Opening it, L4-O finds several battery-powered emergency lights.

While he's doing that, Our Mutual Friend decides to speak up. "Citizens! Report! Why are you not on your way to Industrial Subsector B?"

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango lies on his bunk and tries to get some sleep. Idly, he wonders when the Troubleshooter team's supposed to be here. Aren't they already late?

written by Lightning4 on Nov 22, 2011 21:34

I get startled by Friend Computer's voice.

"We are, Friend Computer! We have just taken a moment so that I may distribute our equipment we retrieved from Outfitting."

"The... er, investigation we had regarding Joris-R and the strange emergency lighting just took a little longer than we expected."

I think, then take a moment to correct myself.

"Er... correction, we need to go to Power Services to get the repair team. But that's part of our mission..."

Meanwhile, I place the emergency lights in an accessible spot. I don't take one, remembering that I still have the torch from earlier.

written by Jam on Nov 23, 2011 01:44

"YAY! A LASER PISTOL!!"

I take the laser pistol and store it in an easily accessible pocket, after first making sure it has a barrel attached to it (perhaps the one that was just handed to me by L4-O?)

I then attach the badge to my jumpsuit, put on the Troubleshooter Helmet (noting what kind of helmet it is) and the YELLOW reflec, and put the recorder in another pocket.

* Perhaps he's still happy? Drugs seem to wear off at an accelerated rate as far as Mick-R is concerned... that could be classed as a mutation, don't you think?

Then I look at the Emergency Loyalty Tests and the Spontaneous Demonstrations of Loyalty cards, and try to figure out what I'm supposed to do with them...

written by Gligar on Nov 23, 2011 02:09

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

L4-O tells our mutual friend that they are indeed heading for their mission, they just took some time to deal with their equipment. Their problem with Joris-R took way longer than expected. Oh, and they still need to go to Power Services and get the repair team. He then puts the emergency lights somewhere.

"Your report is incomplete," The Computer replies. "My cameras are detecting an excess of Packy-Foam in the vicinity. I suspect that you might have something to do with it. Need I remind you that littering is treason? Loyalty Officer, what is your analysis?"

That's Jam-Y, who is currently looking through his stuff. He pockets the laser pistol, noting that it already has a nice YELLOW barrel attached, and then deals with both reflex and badge, followed by the transcripts recorder, which, he notes, is locked in its case, and is rather large, and won't fit in a pocket. It has a carry-strap, though. The key to the case is taped to the side.

Then, the helmet. It's just a regular helmet, featuring the Troubleshooter logo. There are attachment points for accessories such as, say, cameras.

Then, he looks at the tests and the cards. The tests are to be administered whenever he suspects a clone of being disloyal, and consist of a variety of questions. The Demonstrations of Loyalty cards are meant for him to direct clones to, well, demonstrate their loyalty, whenever the need arises.

written by Speeder on Nov 23, 2011 03:24

Since Friend Computer asked Jam, and not me, I do not reply.

I stop tasing Mick, and try to figure what the RED light means.

Then I retrieve the taser wires and whatnot, turn it off and pocket it, then I check how awake is Mick.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 23, 2011 10:22

I quietly sigh and look at all the packing foam. And a means of cleaning it up. Maybe stuff it all back into the crate...

I look at the crate, making sure it's empty, then start loading it up with my hands if need be.

written by Speeder on Nov 23, 2011 10:27

I go help L4.

written by Gligar on Nov 23, 2011 13:10

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y does not respond to The Computer. But then again, he is not the Loyalty Officer, is he? Instead, he begins resetting his taser, retrieving the electrodes and such. While doing so, he notes that Mick-R seems to be awake.

It is then that he notices the little light on the taser. It's near the little label that reads BATTERY EMPTY.

That done, he checks the crate. Apart from the Packy-Foam, it is empty. As such, he begins to clean up the Packy-Foam.

Hygiene Officer? Are you there? L4-O certainly is, and he is helping Speed-Y with the Packy-Foam.

Jam-Y does not respond.

written by Speeder on Nov 23, 2011 13:36

Since Jam does not reply.

"Friend Computer, I am sorry, I made a poor choice of Hygiene Officer, he insists in passing out or acting in a treasonous manner, we are trying to correct that, in fact I just woke him up with this device."

I show the Taser to the camera.

"After he passed out this time. But since he is failing to work, I will personally clean this up, and Equipment Officer will help me, since this mess was made while we checked the equipment and all. I am sure the Team as whole is Loyal, now Mick is... I mean... I would GREATLY enjoy if you zapped him a few times with some of your Loyalty Enforcing Turrets. Since collective efforts of the Team to make him happy, loyal and obedient is seemly not enough on him. He for some reason remembers me... of... of... I cannot remember... You know, my mind searches for a certain clone, not Cryo, but I just cannot remember."

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 23, 2011 13:50

If possible, I check the condition of the dispenser, I hope it's ok..

written by Gligar on Nov 23, 2011 21:32

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y finally decides to respond for his Loyalty Officer.

He claims responsibility for choosing Mick-R as the Hygiene Officer. Thus far, all he has done for the team is act treasonously or pass out. The latter of which, he adds, they

written by Speeder on Nov 21, 2011 16:39

Yay! I have TWO pistols, I can go Florentine Style Gunner =D

Not that this is good idea, but it sounds cool, no?

are attempting to correct. Just now, for instance, he woke up Mick-R with a taser, which he shows to Friend Computer.

However, Mick-R seems to be failing in his duty as a Hygiene Officer. (All he's doing right now, for instance, is lie on the floor, drooling and twitching.) As such, Speed-Y will personally deal with the Packy-Foam. L4-O, the Equipment Officer, will help him, since he was involved with the spread of the stuff.

He notes that the rest of the team is loyal. Speaking for the Loyalty Officer, he suggests that, since their collective efforts to keep him happy and loyal seem to have failed, Mick-R's loyalty should be adjusted. How? With laser turrets, of course! As he is, he reminds Speed-Y of... what was that clone's name? It wasn't Cryo, it was... it was... no, it's gone.

All this time, Azir-R has been checking the dispenser. As far as he can tell, it seems to be fine. The injectors, in particular, appear to be in excellent condition.

"It is regrettable," The Computer replies, "that some clones seem to be immune to the usual methods of re-education and loyalty adjustment. I, too, am reminded of another clone. However, that clone was removed from the permanent record. There is the possibility of treasonous re-insertion, but the chance of this is exceedingly low.

"I accept your admission of responsibility, and fine you 250 credits as penance. Finish cleaning up the Packy-Foam, and continue with your mission. And should Mick-R decide to act, please remind him of this. I see that he is fitted with a Portable Drug Dispenser. I suggest that it be used. Your co-operation is appreciated, citizen."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 23, 2011 22:24

I continue with scooping up the Packy-Foam and shoving it in the crate.

"Hmph. Was kind of hoping he wasn't on our team from what Jam-Y said but, I guess he still has memory problems."

I frown a little and get back to work.

written by Jam on Nov 23, 2011 22:28

"Ah!"

I realize too late that Friend Computer asked me a question... I start to talk, then decide otherwise, and just remain silent...

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 23, 2011 22:40

I trigger the dispenser, since it's working. This should help with the issue at least for another 2 minutes before he acts up again.

written by Malkom on Nov 21, 2011 20:42

Isn't there going to be some RED pistols for me and anyone else who wants them?

written by Lightning4 on Nov 21, 2011 21:03

Mind that we haven't even gotten into the weapons box yet. I'm sure there's even more stuff in there!

written by Gligar on Nov 24, 2011 01:05

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

L4-O continues with the Packy-Foam cleanup. He was kind of hoping, based on Jam-Y's observations, that Mick-R wasn't on their team. Sadly, it looks like Jam-Y's memory has not fully recovered.

Jam-Y, who seems to have been spacing out, snaps out of it, and belatedly realises that Friend Computer wanted to speak with him.

He's probably going to get into trouble for not replying. And he'll probably get into more trouble, since he decides not to say anything now, either.

Azir-R decides to give the drug dispenser a whirl. As such, he whips out the controller.

There's a small problem. You see, the controller has... a rather large number of buttons, none of which are labelled. He tentatively tries a button.

Lights on the controller come on, and the thing goes beep.

written by Malkom on Nov 24, 2011 03:19

I twitch a little, then look around and say the first thing that comes into my mind...

"Help!"

written by Jam on Nov 24, 2011 05:06

I process what Friend Computer said, and then what Mick-R said...

"Oh, you want to help too, Mick-R? Good job! Look guys, he's injured and barely conscious, and yet the first thing he thinks about is following Friend Computer's orders! That's loyalty!"

I pull Mick-R to his feet, and guide him towards any nearby Packy-Foam.

written by Malkom on Nov 24, 2011 05:22

"No, no no no!" As I'm pulled to my feet everything seems to go gray. I slump.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 24, 2011 08:10

Scoop. Plop. Scoop. Plop. Scoop. Plop.

I check to see how much foam is left.

And make sure I have all the non-empty boxes put away on Nukabot or on my own person if possible.

written by Speeder on Nov 24, 2011 10:16

Scoop... PLOFT. Scoop PLOFT that is the sound that packy foam makes.

"Good that Friend Computer did not decided to fine us in the last mission for littering... Because we DID a incredible mess, specially whatever crazy clone that blew up that huge hole in the old Troubleshooter Headquarters."

written by 4616599 on Nov 24, 2011 10:29

I laugh nervously and help to scoop up the foam.

I look at my forms. "I wonder if these can fine people for littering..."

written by Gligar on Nov 24, 2011 14:51

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Mick-R perks up a little, and looks around. He even speaks a little.

What he says is interpreted as an offer to help the team deal with the Packy-Foam,. Jam-Y praises him for this decision, and drags him to his feet, pointing him at a nice pile over there.

However, it seems that perhaps Mick-R didn't mean that he wanted to help... He slumps over a little. But he doesn't collapse. The effect is remarkably similar to... what was it now? Something you've seen recently?

Mick-R still does not open his box.

L4-O continues cleaning up the Packy-Foam. Looking around, he notices that there is still a considerable amount left to clean up.

He takes a break from the foam to make sure that in-use boxes are stowed properly. This includes Mick-R's equipment box, which sits unopened amidst a pile of foam. Or rather, did sit... it's now secured nicley on Nukabot.

Speed-Y also continues his work. He notes that it is a good thing they they were not fined for damages during the previous mission... that explosion in the old THQ left a rather big hole...

Joris-R laughs nervously, and starts helping with the foam. He also takes a moment to check his authorisation forms... could he use them to fine someone for littering? Hmmm... the fines form says something about fining clones whom he suspects of hoarding credits and/or not spending enough...

Corridor, Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

Cryo's confession booth opens, allowing a pile of ash on the seat to disperse into the air.

As is traditional, though, a pair of smoking boots remains, the last evidence of Cryo-BRN-4's existence.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 24, 2011 15:02

I try to remember if the box had instructions. If not, I point the controller at Mick and hit the button that jumps out at me the most as "This will do something good."

written by Jam on Nov 24, 2011 15:43

"Hey! Mick-R, wake up!"

I shake him vigorously...

written by 4616599 on Nov 24, 2011 16:46

My eyes go wide.

"I think something from the fuzzy part of my memory was somewhat similar...I don't know, I feel paranoid."

For some reason I look at Jam-Y suspiciously.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 24, 2011 19:40

I try to sleep, but seem to be not in the mindset to end up in the state of sleeping. I don't end up trying to scramble about to find the right position. I just lay there, eyes closed, and breathing.

Surely you can sleep? Can't you? Unless something else is about to happen...

written by Malkom on Nov 24, 2011 20:05

I feel a sudden stab of pain up from my legs through my midsection to my head; the world spins and goes nearly black. Argh! Too much pressure! Arrrrrrrrr.....

...

"Where am I?" I look blearily around: everything looks GREEN. "Wha... what happened? Have I got shot in the head or something? Did someone put treasonous lenses over my eyes?" I feel my eyes. And then, suddenly, I freak out. "Oh no! I'm in a GREEN zone! Treason! Treason! Treason! Treason!" I grope around for a weapon.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 24, 2011 20:21

I idly start wondering if Packy Foam is flammable...

I shake my head and continue scooping it up with my hands.

written by Gligar on Nov 25, 2011 01:19

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

While some clones continue cleaning up the Packy-Foam, Azir-R tries to study the control unit. He glances over at the box, trying to remember is there any sort of instructions. There are not, he remembers. The instructions are most likely beyond his security clearance.

All that is left is to simply try a random button... say, that one.

Another beep. Some lights on the dispenser change their configuration.

Meanwhile, Jam-Y has been trying to rouse Mick-R a little more fully, by shaking him.

Mick-R suddenly writhes in his arms...

...and suddenly tracks.

He seems to be unaware of where he is, thinking this to be a GREEN area. In fact, everything seems to be GREEN...

[791]

Yelling about treason, he fumbles about for a weapon, and STILL does not touch his equipment box.

Joris-R's eyes go wide,. He suddenly seems paranoid... He looks at Jam-Y, and suggests that something is... suspicious.

L4-O wonders... is Packy-Foam flammable? Well, there's a way to find out...

But no. He gets back to shifting the stuff by hand.

It's getting cleaned up quite nicely.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango just can't get to sleep. He seems to be thinking about recent events... and maybe future events.

Unseen by him, the tech seems to be fiddling with the nameless box he brought with him, connecting it to some of the "emergency lights"...

JHT Sector Central Cloning Station, Underneath Central Subsector

Among the cloning tanks, there is activity.

One particular tank is already active, and contains a fully-grown clone. The clone is Cryo-BRN-5.

The tank is already on the move towards the INFRARED decanting zone. In the meantime, Cryo has already woken up, and seems to be inspecting the glass tank cover.

Of course, through the tank goo, he can't really see it in as fine a detail as he would normally. But perhaps he wasn't supposed to wake up yet?

written by Lightning4 on Nov 25, 2011 09:15

I continue cleaning up the Packy-Foam so long as there is Packy-Foam left to clean up.

"So... what are we going to do with this crate full of Packy-Foam, and all these empty boxes? There must be somewhere to dispose of it nearby..."

"Or we can just take it with us."

I shrug.

"Maybe we can use it against commies. Somehow."

written by Speeder on Nov 25, 2011 10:11

I look at L4.

"Throwing at them is out of question... Unless..."

I get a bit of packy foam, take to a CLEAN area of the floor, switch my barrel for a RED one and shoot on the packy foam that I left on the floor.

written by Speeder on Nov 22, 2011 18:32

I noticed on the stats page that some players have lockers on their inventory...

What happened to my locker? ☺

And... whoa, summing all this equipment and the one I handed Azir, we have sufficient to arm a small army.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 22, 2011 19:38

Speeder said:

What happened to my locker? ☺

Well, at least you didn't end up with an empty inventory like I did. : P

written by Lightning4 on Nov 22, 2011 20:56

Speeder said:

I noticed on the stats page that some players have lockers on their inventory...

What happened to my locker? ☺

written by Jam on Nov 25, 2011 15:53

I look back at Joris-R...

"Well I went into your mind briefly before your last clone died, and um... stuff happened, and I ended up being thrown against a wall..."

I look closer at Joris-R...

"I'd really like to know what your thinking right now... Thinking treasonous thoughts, perhaps? How about you share them with us?"

written by Gligar on Nov 25, 2011 16:43

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

L4-O continues the cleanup operation. He wonders what they are going to do the the Packy-Foam and the boxes. Perhaps they could dispose of it nearby? Or take it with them,, and somehow use it against commies? Throw it at them, maybe?

Speed-Y thinks otherwise. Maybe... hmmm...

He grabs some of the foam and puts it into a pile, as far away from the rest of the Packy-Foam as he can. Then, he swaps out his laser pistol barrel for a RED one. Finally, he shoots his pile of Packy-Foam.

There is a brief flash of flame before the Packy-Foam begins to blacken and give off... a rather surprising amount of fumes for such a small amount of foam.

Jam-Y looks ar Joris-R, and tells him what happened the last time he tried to read Joris-R's mind; namely, he ended up being thrown against a wall.

He kind of wonders what Joris-R is thinking right now. Is it treasonous? Perhaps Joris-R would like to share his thoughts with everyone?

The Packy-Foam continues to give off fumes for a while, before burning itself out.

JHT Sector Central Cloning Station, Beneath Central Subsector

Cryo's cloning tank reaches the decanting zone, and begins to drain.

written by Speeder on Nov 25, 2011 17:02

"Nice... someone want to breath those fumes to figure what they do?"

I return to the team, backing away from the fumes.

written by Jam on Nov 25, 2011 17:31

I look over at the burnt Packy-Foam...

And... whoa, summing all this equipment and the one I handed Azir, we have sufficient to arm a small army.

Or to kill a small army.

I said nothing. Not giving Gligar any ideas of course. Though I have the feeling we're headed there anyway. ☺

written by Speeder on Nov 23, 2011 03:26

What is the point of arming if not to kill?

"I've got a volunteer right here!" I say to Speed-Y

I drag Mick-R over to the fumes (while trying not to breathe any myself). After I set him down nearby, I quickly leave the area...

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 25, 2011 20:06

"I am always a fan of improvised weapons. I bet we can use that stuff to seriously smoke out some commies."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 25, 2011 20:47

I help finish packing away the packy foam but pause to watch Mick-R's reaction to the fumes, if he makes it there.

written by Gligar on Nov 25, 2011 22:22

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y seems to like the idea of something giving off fumes... so much so that he asks for a volunteer to be exposed to them to see if they do anything... Not him, though. He hacks away, along with half of the team.

As Jam-Y points out, they already have a nice volunteer right there! Mick-R can do it. He pushes the injured clone towards the fumes before backing off himself.

There is a visible effect immediately: Mick-R begins coughing pretty bad.

Azir-R likes the idea of improvised weapons. Perhaps they could use this stuff to smoke out commies.

L4-O stops shovelling Packy-Foam to watch as Mick-R starts having difficulties breathing...

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Below Central Subsector

Cryo's cloning tank comes to rest about 1m above the deck of the decanting zone and opens up, depositing him on the floor.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 25, 2011 23:12

I rub my chin and watch Mick-R's reaction.

"Hmm. Looks like it could be a nice substitute for those VIOLET gas shells I was using before. Only problem is getting it to the enemy without putting ourselves in danger... hm."

I think.

"I wonder if we can make makeshift cone rifle shells out of them..."

written by Malkom on Nov 26, 2011 00:16

I writhe! I try to run away! "TREASO-hukkh hukkh hukkh-NNN TREASON hukkh."

There are some other stats page that Gligar is not updating in a while (since it lists Speed-Y-1 as current Speed-Y), but it shows we killed like 140 people already. The most prolific murderer... ahem, marksman, is L4.

I think I am in second place or something like that, but the difference is huge (L4 is like a walking weapon of mass destruction... oh wait, he HAD nukes in his backpack...)

written by Lightning4 on Nov 23, 2011 07:24

I... did not notice that page.

Stats page said:

Communists 126-127 0 1) Exploded by L4-O in an explosion involving slugthrower ammunition, laser barrels, and grenades

There's no kill quite like overkill.

Everything looks even more GREEN than before.

If I can, I grab a gun and wave it around frantically at everything. "Treason! Treason!"

written by Gligar on Nov 26, 2011 01:18

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

L4-O watches as Mick-R continues to cough, and now writhe a little. He thinks that this Packy-Foam might make a good alternative to those VIOLET gas shells he has been using... they'd certainly be cheaper, if more suspicious.

The only problem would be getting it close enough to the enemy without causing harm to the user...

He wonders if they could make cone rifle shells. He then remembers that it would be treason. There is always the "get a lower clearance clone to place the Packy-Foam" fallback...

Speaking of treason... Mick-R is yelling the word again. While trying to get away from the Packy-Foam. While trying to grab Lucas-R's laser pistol. "Hey! Get your own!" the RED yelps. "There's a nice box over there with stuff in it!"

Of course, Mick-R thinks that the box is GREEN...

He also thinks that the laser pistol he just stole from Lucas-R is GREEN, even as he waves it around...

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Below Central Subsector

Cryo hasn't moved from where he was deposited by the cloning tank. Perhaps he is inspecting the floor or something. It's made of that NearlySoft polymer that they use in medical bays.

He is interrupted by a voice. "Welcome back to the land of the living, CRYO-BRN-5! You are now on your FIFTH clone. To begin your journey towards re-integration into Alpha Complex society, please descend the stairs, seen to your left, and enter the chemical showers. You will receive further instructions when you get there."

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 26, 2011 02:07

I press another button on the controller for Mick.

"You know, if we just shoved these guys into Speedy's B3 Launcher... or even better, filled an empty can of b3 with them (which benefits the team cause that means someone gets to drink the b3 first, yum!) then launch that and then fire on the can..."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 26, 2011 12:14

Seeing Mick-R gone frantic, I take cover and pull out a laser pistol.

"Calm down, now! Don't make us hurt you. More."

I'm betting the bulk of my kills were from my Armed Forces mission down on O Sublevel.

And probably the fight we had there beforehand as a team.

written by Gligar on Nov 23, 2011 11:14

I'm not exactly done with that page yet. There's still quite a bit to go 😊

"Nothing in this room is treasonous. Other than the fact you are aiming a weapon at superior officers. Which is, in fact, treason."

I do a quick mental check.

"Okay, maybe there is treason in here. But it's you. Either way, nothing else."

written by Gligar on Nov 26, 2011 14:31

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Azir-R tries another button.

Immediately, Mick-R feels an intense pain in his laser arm.

Azir-R continues by suggesting that Packy-Foam could possibly be shoved into Speed-Y's B3 launcher (you remember, the thing he's building back at the bunker), or better yet, it could be packed into used B3 cans, which in turn could be fired from the launcher (and also means that someone gets to drink the B3 first!) and then someone could fire on the can.

While taking cover and aiming a laser pistol, L4-O speaks to Mick-R, asking him to calm down and not to make them hurt him any more than he is. No-one here is committing treason, except him. Well, L4-O's reasonably sure of that.

written by Jam on Nov 26, 2011 15:13

I notice Mick-R waving a laser pistol around, and decide to take cover myself...

"Put the laser pistol down, Mick-R!"

written by Speeder on Nov 26, 2011 20:04

I look at Azir.

"Except I did not finished it yet, I think that yes, we can put it in B3 can, set it on fire and throw it like a grenade... Or we can use some tape, tape lots of it to grenades..."

Seemly I am loving the ideas of throwing fuming packy-foam around.

written by Gligar on Nov 26, 2011 21:37

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Jam-Y joins L4-O in taking cover. He also tells Mick-R to put the pistol down.

Speed-Y reminds Azir-R that it's not yet finished. He agrees that the Packy-Foam could be stuffed into a B3 can. They could light it, and throw it like a grenade, or do other things, like tape it to a grenade... There are lots of pleasing possibilities when it comes to weaponising Packy-Foam.

written by Speeder on Nov 23, 2011 11:50

Heh, I went to see if the word overkill was used outside of popular culture... And it was.

In fact, a example of overkill on wikipedia is... Nuclear Landmine

It is a thing that I never imagined someone would attempt, but there are several projects...

Sometimes I wonder, if Paranoia is very based on reality 😊 Nuclear Landmines look like came straight from Paranoia XD

I hope this does not give ideas to Gligar...

Speaking of Packy-Foam, it looks like it's all been cleared up.⁶⁶⁸

written by Lightning4 on Nov 27, 2011 00:08

I listen in on the Packy-Foam conversation.

"I like those ideas. You should be in R&D!"

I stay in my cover.

written by Speeder on Nov 27, 2011 00:15

"Ok, lets depart, just leave ol'Crazy Mick there."

I see if we are not forgetting nothing behind and hop on Nukabot.

written by Gligar on Nov 27, 2011 01:26

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

L4-O listens in to the Packy-Foam conversation. He likes these ideas. Perhaps Speed-Y should be in R&D!

Speed-Y advises that they should get going, and just leave Mick-R behind.

He has a look around to see if they are leaving anything behind. Well, there is the crate of Packy-Foam, and the empty boxes...⁶⁶⁹

written by Speeder on Nov 27, 2011 01:53

I attempt to place the packy crate on the forks.

written by Jam on Nov 27, 2011 05:09

I attempt to place Mick-R on the forks.

(While trying not to breathe in the fumes, of course...)

written by Lightning4 on Nov 27, 2011 09:07

I shrug and quickly grab all the empty boxes and toss them into the crate, then assist with moving it onto the forks.

I then assume my place on Nukabot.

written by Gligar on Nov 27, 2011 13:42

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

While Speed-Y and L4-O both attempt to secure the crate and empty boxes, Jam-Y concerns himself with Mick-R, attempting to put him on Nukabot's forks, and ends up getting in the way of Speed-Y and L4-O. End result, nothing much gets done.

⁶⁶⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: gets ready to say it)

⁶⁶⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: is still ready to say it)

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Below Central Subsector

Cryo still hasn't moved.

The owner of the voice makes itself known: a jackobot. It repeats its last instruction while poking Cryo: "To begin your journey towards re-integration into Alpha Complex society, please descend the stairs, seen to your left, and enter the chemical showers. You will receive further instructions when you get there."

written by Speeder on Nov 27, 2011 14:56

"What is this thing here?"

I push Mick away with my hands, in a quite strong manner, and attempt again to put the crate on the forks.

written by 4616599 on Nov 27, 2011 17:30

I just watch nervously. I wonder if Mick-R is conscious.

Once they finish with Mick, I climb onto Nukabot. Perhaps at the rear.

"Apologies for not helping much. I'm just finding something about Mick-R weird...uncanny."

written by Malkom on Nov 27, 2011 19:15

My arm has been spasming. Finally I drop the pistol...

"Urgh..." I rub my eyes. Color returns. "Sorry... I.... I guess someone drugged my eyes or something... wait, we really were in a GREEN area, weren't we? That's treason isn't it?"

written by Jam on Nov 27, 2011 19:29

I let go of Mick-R.

"You've sure been acting stubborn lately... It's not like you get points for perversity or anything! You'd better shape up. This isn't a game, Mick-R! Real lives are at stake, including yours... You don't get to restart after you've lost your last clone... Once you run out, that's it!

And another thing... When a superior gives you an order, you follow it! No questions, no hesitation! Get this straight, the classic way we deal with traitors is to zap them with our laser pistols. You're lucky we're letting you off easy..."

I turn to Joris-R...

"And what's with all the paranoia coming from you? First me, then Mick-R? Now, I can understand why you wouldn't like Mick-R, but me too? I hope this is only a faze you're going through, and not permanent... Permanent paranoia, how absurd..."

After that, I turn to Speed-Y.

"I've completely forgotten where we're going... Power Services, was it? Where's that, the west end of some subsector or another?"

I notice that I'm feeling pretty upset, so I focus on raising my happiness to mandatory levels...⁶⁷⁰

⁶⁷⁰ JAM: (ooc: Yay! Count the references!)

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 27, 2011 19:55

I attempt to count, but realise at that stage that counting for no reason apparent might have the consequence of restlessness, and as such being in that state...

...Is not a good sign.

Whether or not I am foreshadowing, I attempt another try at sleeping.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 27, 2011 20:50

Well, now that people are settling down...

..or not, as I hear Jam's sudden outburst/

"Your happiness levels are dropping at a rapid pace, sir, I suspect that too much contact with Mick is to blame.

Need some help?"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 27, 2011 21:20

I again assist with the crate.

I look at Mick-R who seems to be coming around now.

"Don't forget your box of stuff if you didn't get it already. I don't want Friend Computer to think I made no effort to give you your box. That would be a failing as an Equipment Officer!"

written by Gligar on Nov 27, 2011 22:01

Concourse G2, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y pushes Mick-R out of the way and tries again with the Packy-Foam crate. This time, he is able to secure it.

Joris-R just keeps watching. He wonders if Mick-R is even conscious before finding a place at the rear of Nukabot.

He apologises for not helping, but he finds something... uncanny about how Mick-R is acting.

It seems that Mick-R is indeed conscious. He drops the pistol, which Lucas-R promptly retrieves. He guesses that someone drugged his eyes, before wondering if they actually did enter a GREEN area. Which would be treason...

Jam-Y has something to say about that. He tells Mick-R to get his act together, and reminds him that he doesn't have infinite clones. Furthermore, he reminds Mick-R that he is supposed to follow orders, and shoot traitors. He should be lucky they aren't shooting him.

And Joris-R... he seems to be acting altogether too paranoid for his liking. He hopes that this isn't going to be a new trend from him or something.

Finally... he isn't sure where they're going. Power Services? Probably somewhere to the west of some subsector?⁶⁷¹

Azir-R notices that Jam-Y's happiness levels are kind of worrying, and suggests that proximity to Mick-R is to blame. He offers help with the issue.

⁶⁷¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: I count at least [DFSR] references there. +1pp for the effort 😊)

Now that he is finished with the crate, L4-O looks over at Mick-R, and reminds him to not forget his box of equipment. He wouldn't want anyone to think that L4-O had neglected his duties as an Equipment Officer, now would he? Surely that would be insubordination?

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

It appears that the tech has finished with his maintenance of the "emergency lights". He looks into the gloom one last time and heads off.

Mango just can't get to sleep. Perhaps he's anticipating something? Perhaps it is an early warning sign that he possesses some sort of mutation? Or maybe there is a simpler solution: that he hasn't taken a Sleepy-Sleepy or something? (Then again, those are usually only issued at sleepcycle.)

He tries again.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Below Central Subsector

Cryo persists in not moving.

The bot speaks again. "You are reminded that loitering in the decanting zone is insubordination punishable by a fine of not less than fifteen credits. To avoid this fine, please head to the chemical showers, and wait for further instructions."

written by Malkom on Nov 28, 2011 01:23

I look gloomy, and rightly so. I grab my box and also try to get up to three spare RED lasers and three spare RED laser pistol barrels for each.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 28, 2011 06:45

I take my place on Nukabot.

"Well with the equipment finally sorted, we can now proceed."

I wait until everyone is in their place, then give Nukabot the order to move on.

written by 4616599 on Nov 28, 2011 08:41

"Well, sir, it's just that, you know, some of these disturbances could be due to stuff like..."

I stress my voice a bit.

"...treasonous mutant activity."

written by Speeder on Nov 28, 2011 14:00

I return to my place in nukabot.

And wonder if someone wanted to say something.

written by Malkom on Nov 24, 2011 20:09

Speeder said:

I hope this does not give ideas to Gligar...

Oh noes...

written by Gligar on Nov 28, 2011 15:51

Concourse G2, En Subsector

Mick-R looks unhappy. He seems to think that it's his right to do so. However, the camera that is now tracking him does not seem to think so.

Treason point to Malkom!

He gets his box, and sees about weapons. He quickly finds out that the WEAPONS box does not contain lasers, only barrels.

He turns to his equipment box... and opens it. Therein, amongst his mission equipment (a Hygiene Officer MBD Badge; a Troubleshooter helmet; RED reflex; an Authorisation to Issue Personal Hygiene Tests Form; an Authorisation to Organise an Emergency Cleaning Crew form; a Skin Core Sampler; ten Emergency Sanitation Kits; two 300ml bottles of MintFresh cleaning fluid; and several scrubbing brushes) he finds a laser pistol, complete with RED barrel.

L4-O seems to be keeping an eye on him, and apparently won't allow him to just take any of the barrels from the WEAPONS box. Meanwhile, he orders Nukabot to get moving.

As it does so, Joris-R states his opinion that some of the recent disturbances may be due to treasonous mutant activity.

Speed-Y, once he is back in his usual spot, looks around, wondering if someone was about to speak...

No... only an odd sense of satisfaction.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Below Central Subsector

"Very well," says the bot. "Your fine has been administered. Elevating to insubordination protocols."

The bot's tone changes, and its manipulator becomes electrified. "On your feet, vatslime! Vacate the decanting area immediately! If you do not comply, I am authorised to use force!"

written by Malkom on Nov 28, 2011 19:40

I blithely ignore the camera as I pluck out the laser pistol and wave it in time to a spy tune, whistled between my teeth.

I stop suddenly. Last time I did this... what happened last time I did this? Something bad. Wait. Or was it something good? I know it was fine... or something to do with being fine...

I give up and start whistling the spy tune again. Then stop.

[796]

"Something seems to be wrong with my memories... I feel a bit fuzzy..."

...

"Oh well." I start whistling again. I start to smile.

Everything's fine. Oh, yes.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 28, 2011 19:42

Attempt at sleep failing, I see just what else I can do instead of merely resting.

Let's see... ME card here... That's one, public terminals might make it two, and waiting upon the really late troubleshooters, that makes that three...

I check whether I've counted enough to sleep well, and do that if that seems to be the case. Else, I just get up.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 28, 2011 19:59

"I wonder how effective that B3 idea will be. And it doesn't actually have to be B3 cans..."

I think for a moment.

"I think the simplest weapon we could make is just a little container of the foam that can be lit on fire and tossed into a crowd. Should provide some nice smoke coverage, though I guess the thrower does risk a little inhalation... shame about our gas masks..."

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 28, 2011 20:40

As I ride along Nukabot I hear L4 and comment.

"Well, there is always the option of throwing, then blasting.

Imagine tossing one in the air towards a group of obvious (and proven) commies and then blasting the can with your lazer pistol as it's still in the air, smoking out the bad guys.

It'd be just like a vidshow!"

written by Gligar on Nov 28, 2011 21:18

Corridors, G Level, Epsilon Subsector

Mick-R tries to ignore the cameras and start whistling, airily waving his laser pistol around. He doesn't bother with the helmet or the reflec. Or the MBD badge. Imagine if he were shot by an IntSec officer because they didn't know he was a Hygiene Officer and a Troubleshooter...

He stops. Something bad happened last time he did that, didn't it? Only... he can't remember what it was...

He seems to be having problems with his memory... everything's a little fuzzy. Oh well. He continues whistling.

L4-O continues brainstorming. What if they could simply package the Packy-Foam into containers which could be lit on fire? Okay, someone would have to breathe in some of the fumes... but let's face it, that's far preferable to what happens with some weapons... I mean, there's no chance of this stuff being mutagenic or anything, right? Right?

Azir-R chimes in. They might not even need to light it first. They could use their laser pistols to do the job, right? Think of how cool that would be!

"Speaking of vidshows," John-R adds, "I'm going to need all of you to clip one of these cameras to your helmets. That way, I can get as much video as I can. You wouldn't want any of this to be lost, would you?"

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango thinks. If he can't sleep, what else is there? He has his ME Card... there is the Computer terminal... there is waiting for the Troubleshooters...

...he falls asleep thinking about that last one.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 28, 2011 21:34

I equip the camera. I then focus on Mick's erratic behavior for a bit, should be good on film for later.

Then I chime in, "Oh yeah, you guys need to throw these dispensers on."

written by Speeder on Nov 28, 2011 22:18

I nod to John, and take a camera and clip it to my helmet.

Then I look at Mick.

"Stop acting stupid or the loyalty officer will think you are trying to do something treasonous and will terminate you.

Or I will think you are a clone that is so stupid that is broken, and I will terminate that faulty clone."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 28, 2011 23:51

"No, I suppose that would be bad indeed."

I take a camera and clip it to my helmet as well.

written by Gligar on Nov 29, 2011 01:42

Corridors, G Level, Epsilon Subsector

Azir-R grabs a camera and fastens it to his helmet. He then stares at Mick-R. "That's good, Azir-R," John-R tells him. "Keep it up." He adjusts something on the Multicorder. "I should add that these cameras have lights fitted. I may require you to use them."

Azir-R then decides to see if anyone will take one of the remaining drug dispensers. Everyone seems to ignore him.

Speed-Y also takes a camera, and fixes it to his hat the best he can, before also looking at Mick-R. He tells him to get his act together. If he doesn't either Jam-Y will terminate him (for being a traitor) or he personally will do it (for being a defective clone).

L4-O agrees that losing footage would be bad, and takes a camera, also fitting it.

Lucas-R decides to be the fourth, just slightly ahead of John-R himself.

Would anyone else like a camera? Not taking a camera could be disastrous. And probably treason. Are you suggesting that The Computer provided you with surplus equipment? Why?

written by Jam on Nov 29, 2011 02:51

All the while, I'm watching the others...

"Hmm..."

Joris-R talking about treasonous mutant activity... Mick-R suddenly having memory problems... It's unlikely, but...

"Emergency loyalty check! Don't move Mick-R!"

I suddenly dash to Mick-R, and grab his head with both hands. I stare at him in an odd way...

written by Lightning4 on Nov 29, 2011 09:40

A look of concern crosses my face as I watch Jam-Y.

But, not enough concern that I don't figure out how to turn my camera's light on and off, when I need it!

written by 4616599 on Nov 29, 2011 10:18

I watch Jam-Y very carefully.

written by Gligar on Nov 29, 2011 13:56

Corridors, G Level, Epsilon Subsector

As Nukabot comes up to yet another checkpoint, Jam-Y starts suspecting something. Could it be? Joris-R suspecting mutant activity... /Mick-R having memory problems... surely...

He decides to administer an "emergency loyalty test", which largely consists of grabbing Mick-R's head and glaring at him.

L4-O notices this, and looks over, concerned. Idly, he fiddles with the camera. Ah! There's the light switch.

Joris-R also watches Jam-Y.

It takes a moment, but Jam-Y's expression gradually changes as his happiness level falls below the mandatory minimum... surely he couldn't have...

Nukabot passes through the checkpoint without incident.

written by Malkom on Nov 29, 2011 18:09

"Hey!"

I start singing loyalty and B3 jingles at the top of my voice! As fast as I can! With added salami and pepper!

written by Lightning4 on Nov 29, 2011 18:13

I play with the light a little before finally leaving it off. I go back to watching the path ahead for anything of interest.

written by 4616599 on Nov 29, 2011 18:39

I cringe, ducking down. I grab my laser pistol just in case and nervously hum loyalty jingles written by Mingamango181 on Nov 29, 2011 19:14

ZzZzZz...

I sleep on from that point of time, just sleeping...

written by Speeder on Nov 29, 2011 19:31⁶⁷²

I look amused at Mick and Jam

⁶⁷² SPEEDER: (OOC: yay, the ISP fixed their antenna... my connection is radio based...)

written by Gligar on Nov 29, 2011 21:41

Corridors, G Level, Zeta Subsector

Mick-R, it seems, does not like what Jam-Y is doing, and starts belting out B3 jingles as fast, and as loud, as he can.

Jam-Y looks like he wants to punch him, or probably shoot him with a laser pistol.

John-R is glaring at him. "Hey, Mick-R! Take a camera, already! And sort out your equipment"

L4-O looks on, concerned. He plays with his camera's light for a minutecycle or so, before switching it off.

Joris-R looks frightened. He grabs his laser pistol and starts humming.

Speed-Y doesn't look concerned, just amused, as he watches Jam-Y and Mick-R.

Nukabot keeps moving.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango keeps sleeping. Unseen by him, the box installed by the tech beeps, very quietly, and blinks a little RED light.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 29, 2011 21:54

Er...

written by Jam on Nov 29, 2011 23:27

"horrible... horrible..."

I start shaking, then start screaming at Mick-R.

"AHHHG! YOU VATSLIME! YOU'RE GONNA PAY! I'M GONNA TERMINATE YOU! TREASONOUS SCUM LIKE YOU DESERVE TO DIE!!"

I swing my fist at Mick-R's face.

"YOU DON'T DESERVE ANOTHER CLONE, YOU TREASONOUS VATSLIME! YOU SHOULD BE ERASED!"

I knee him in the gut, as hard as I can.

"DIE!"

I try to pin him against a wall.

"DIE!!"

Then I repeatedly punch him...

"DIE! DIE! DIE!!"

...until he's just barely alive.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 29, 2011 23:44

I watch in horror and amusement. Horrusement?

written by Gligar on Nov 30, 2011 01:45

Corridors, G Level, Zeta Subsector

Azir-R looks at Jam-Y's expression in apparent confusion.

Jam-Y's unhappiness continues to grow...

...and turns into rage!

written by Lightning4 on Nov 30, 2011 15:31

I look on in horror for a few more seconds before realizing Jam-Y is done and conversing with the group. I suddenly adopt a big smile.

“Um okay then. I’m sure you won’t find any other unhappiness here! None whatsoever!”

I hear John-R.

“PEF? Whazzat?”

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 30, 2011 16:47

“Good question...”

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 30, 2011 19:38

My limbs automatically try to make my body as comfortable as possible during this sleeping phase of mine. For a moment, I stir, but don’t attempt to wake up.

written by Gligar on Nov 30, 2011 21:51

Corridors, G Level, Zeta Subsector

L4-O keeps staring for a moment before his mind registers that Jam-Y is done. Then he begins grinning. He asserts that there should be no more unhappiness in the group. Right?

Then he realises that John-R spoke. He seems to be unfamiliar with PEF.

Azir-R doesn’t know, either.

John-R explains. “PEF... it’s a phenomenon where strong emotions contained within a mind can leak into the minds of psionic mutants who happen to scan it. I’m not sure if PEF itself stands for anything, though. It might be beyond my clearance.

In this case, Mick-R persisted in having treasonous levels of unhappiness. Jam-Y scanned him, causing some of it to leak out and negatively affect Jam-Y.”

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Below Central Subsector

The cloning tank continues its work even as it is moved towards a decanting zone.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango twitches in his sleep. It probably does not occur to him that his unscheduled sleepcycle will probably cause problems later.

The box continues to blink its light.

written by Azirphaeli on Nov 30, 2011 21:58

“Well, I guess it’s not his fault then. Let this be a lesson to clones watching...” and I make sure I am facing a camera and put on a very serious face... “that happiness is mandatory for a reason.”

written by Speeder on Nov 30, 2011 23:42

I look amused at John explanation.

“Interesting... I wonder if that can happen the other way... Jam, scan me... I am ABSURDLY HAPPY after what you did to Mick.”

I smile broadly.

“In fact, can you people retrieve his equipment and then dump his body for the scrubot following us?”

written by Cryoburner on Dec 01, 2011 00:14

I enter an unoccupied shower cubicle, and read aloud the instructions displayed on the laminated card presumably located there. I proceed to test how well the card is attached to the wall, then follow said instructions.

written by Gligar on Dec 01, 2011 01:42

Corridors, G Level, Zeta Subsector

Azir-R decides that this means that it wasn’t exactly his fault. He turns to a camera – specifically, the one on Lucas-R’s helmet – and says, in a serious voice, that this must be why Happiness Is Mandatory.

An amused Speed-Y wonders if it works “the other way”, with positive emotions. He decides to test it. And since he’s especially HAPPY after Mick-R’s demise (or so he says), he asks Jam-Y to scan him.

He also asks everyone else to retrieve Mick-R’s equipment, so that they can let the scrubot – yes, the one which is now almost close enough to begin cleaning Nukabot – take care of it.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Below Central Subsector

The cloning tank now visibly contains a clone, namely, Mick-R.

The tank slows, and comes to a halt at the decanting zone.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, INFRARED Chemical Shower, Below Central Subsector

For once, Cryo follows instructions!

He enters a cubicle, and begins reading the laminated card he finds there:

Card said:

INSTRUCTIONS

1) Remove oxygen mask from hook, and wear it as shown.

[A pictogram shows a clone wearing the mask on his face, with the mask’s straps going behind his head.]

2) Press START button. The door will close and lock.

3) The cubicle will fill with [DELETED FOR SECURITY REASONS]. Don’t worry, this is completely safe. IMPORTANT: Make sure to close your eyes during this step.

4) The cubicle will then drain, and fill with water.

[800]

5) The cubicle will then drain, and the [REDACTED] will commence.

6) The [REDACTED] will deactivate, and the door will open.

It's that easy!

He then picks and pokes at the card to see if it will come off. Nope... it doesn't look like it's coming off. This, he notices, is due to the Super[CENSORED] adhesive in use.

Finally, he follows the instructions, completing Steps 1 and 2.

written by Jam on Dec 01, 2011 01:47

"PEF? Hmm... Maybe... I just know I felt really really angry after I scanned Mick-R... He's the most unhappy clone I've ever scanned!"

I take the drug dispenser from Mick-R, then search him for anything else.

Okay, now that that's done... Speed-Y, you said you wanted me to scan you?

I stare at him...

written by Cryoburner on Dec 01, 2011 02:16

After making sure the mask is properly in place, I take a brief moment to inspect the lighting visible from here. I really should have done that from the start, since if there wasn't adequate lighting, I might have ran into something or become lost on my way to the showers.

I close my eyes once the cubicle begins filling with Tasty Gel Substance Treat, or whatever it is the cubicles fill with. As the cubical drains and before the rinse cycle begins, I take a moment to determine which flavor of Tasty Gel it is, before returning my mask to its non-tasting position.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 01, 2011 07:38

I go back to watching the path ahead of Nukabot for anything out of the ordinary. Like communists. Or zombies.

Or zombie communists.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 01, 2011 10:31

I yawn, but keep right on sleeping.

ZzzZzzzsZzzzSzs...

written by Gligar on Dec 01, 2011 14:17

Corridors, G Level, Zeta Subsector

Jam-Y doesn't know whether it's PEF. He only knows that he became really angry after he scanned Mick-R. Who, he says, was the unhappiest clone he ever scanned.

Not that he's scanned all that many clones.

He searches Mick-R's corpse, and finds, apart from the drug dispenser, an ME card, a medkit, a laser pistol, and his equipment box, containing the rest of his assigned equipment. Which he neglected to equip.

How odd that he would have a medkit but not use it...

Jam-Y realises that Speed-Y asked him to scan him, and does so. He quickly finds that Speed-Y is, indeed, happy.

Nukabot begins moving again. As it does, L4-O starts watching for anything out of the ordinary.

Also, the scrubot makes itself heard. "Hey, forkbot! Did you not say that you required a clean?"

Nukabot tries to ignore it.

Speed-Y starts taking Mick-R's equipment from Jam-Y to hand it to L4-O. They do not want that scrubot to catch up with them.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Below Central Subsector

It looks like the cloning tank is almost finished with Mick-R...

...ah, there we go.

As with Cryo, a voice tells him, "Welcome back to the land of the living, MICK-R-NRK-4! You are now on your FOURTH clone. To begin your journey towards re-integration into Alpha Complex society, please descend the stairs, seen to your right, and enter the chemical showers. You will receive further instructions when you get there."

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, INFRARED Chemical Shower, Below Central Subsector

Meanwhile, Cryo is still inspecting things.

Like his mask. He ensures that it is fastened correctly.

The, guess what he inspects? The lights!

Of course, this is kind of superfluous, since Cryo was able to navigate his way to the shower without so much as finding a shadow. As such, the lights must have been okay.

As for the cubicle, there is one light, mounted in the cubicle's floor. It lights everything brightly, except for the fact that he is in the way.

Then, he decides to... taste the chemical solution...

Look, Cryo, that is clearly not Tasty Fun Gel Treat, or whatever. They look nothing alike! And, as you just found out, chemical cleaning solution is Tongue Melty flavour. Because part of your tongue just melted off.

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 01, 2011 17:15

I hold on to Nukabot as we begin to move.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 01, 2011 18:06

"Yeah, maybe give the corpse a boot off. That'll give the scrubot something to do!"

I assist with the process of doing so. Or try to assist, anyway.

written by 4616599 on Dec 01, 2011 18:23

I stare at ex-Mick-R suspiciously.

I blink.

"You know, if I didn't know better, I'd say Jam-Y murdered him."

I smile.

"But of course, Jam's a loyal clone, isn't he?"

I help with the clearing of Mick-R. Singing half-heartedly.

"For he's a jolly loyal clone, yes he's a jolly loyal clone. For he's a jolly loyal mutant, for so says our Friend..."

written by Speeder on Dec 01, 2011 18:53

"Naaah... Mick was treasonous, he refused to obey a couple times and insisted in being unhappy on purpose."

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 01, 2011 20:04

"I already mentioned a few time's Mick's unhappiness is contagious, Jam just proved it."

written by Gligar on Dec 01, 2011 21:32

Corridors, G Level, Zeta Subsector

Azir-R holds on.

L4-O agrees that ex-Mick-R should be given the boot. It'll occupy the scrubot, at least.

He assists with this. Together with John-R and others, he is able to push the dead clone away. It falls in the path of the scrubot, with predictable results.

But Joris-R is still suspicious. As he points out, to an outside observer, it appeared as if Jam-Y simply murdered Mick-R. But Jam-Y is loyal.

And sure, he helped with the shifting of Mick-R, but his heart didn't seem to be into it. Sure, he sang, but in a mocking manner. It is still clear to him what really happened, in his eyes.

Speed-Y states that it was Mick-R who was the traitor, so he was terminated for treason. After all, look at what he's done: he disobeyed orders several times, and on top of that, he was chronically unhappy... a fact that Azir-R backs up. Azir-R adds that he had realised that Mick-R's unhappiness was contagious a while ago. Jam-Y's actions just proved it.

John-R chimes in, asking, "Does everyclone have a camera?"

Nukabot continues, passing through another checkpoint.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, INFRARED Chemical Shower, Below Central Subsector

The shower continues its cycle. In comparison to the Tongue-Melty tasting chemicals, the water seems to pass by in an instant.

Now, it is the turn of the fans.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 01, 2011 23:05

"Tongue Melty flavor! I thought they discontinued that after clone's tongues started melting off..."

I once again pull aside my oxygen mask and rinse my mouth out with water from the rinse cycle. I also note how the oxygen mask is connected to the wall, and test how securely it's attached. We wouldn't want it to disconnect during some clone's shower sequence, after all.

written by Jam on Dec 02, 2011 00:39

"Oh, wait, I don't have a camera!"

I go and take a camera.

"By the way Speed-Y, you seem to be much happier than Mick-R. Still, I don't think scanning you had as much of an effect on me as scanning Mick-R did..."

written by Gligar on Dec 02, 2011 01:16

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, INFRARED Chemical Shower, Below Central Subsector

While there's still some water around, Cryo uses it to wash out his mouth. The water tastes just like water.

Incidentally, it is odd trying to speak with half of your tongue melted away.

While the fans do their work in drying him, Cryo decides to test the mask's hose. He does this by pulling at it.

It promptly detaches itself from the wall of the cubicle.

Not long after that, the fans shut off, and the door opens.

Corridors, G Level, Eta Subsector

Jam-Y realises that he doesn't have a camera, and takes one.

He assures Speed-Y that he is much happier than Mick-R. Although it doesn't seem to have affected him as much.

Nukabot slows, as if it looking for something.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 02, 2011 07:33

I notice Nukabot slowing.

"What's the matter, Nukabot?"

I look around suspiciously, my hands drifting slowly towards my weapons.

written by Gligar on Dec 02, 2011 15:54

Corridors, G Level, Eta Subsector

As Nukabot slows, L4-O demands to know what is happening. "I am attempting to locate the lift hall," Nukabot replies. "Local bots are reporting a disturbance at Power Services."

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 02, 2011 17:55

"We really need to fix this power problem.."

written by Speeder on Dec 02, 2011 18:40

"Of course we need to fix it, if we do not fix it, we failed the mission, and I do not even want to know what happen to troubleshooters that fail the mission."

written by 4616599 on Dec 02, 2011 18:56

I take a camera, and examine it closely.

written by Gligar on Dec 02, 2011 21:19

Corridors, G Level, Eta Subsector

Azir-R states that the power problem needs to be fixed.

Speed-Y agrees, and adds that if they don't see to it, the mission will be a failure. And he doesn't want to find out what happens to Troubleshooters who fail.

Joris-R grabs a camera, and examines it. It's a small helmet-mount camera with a light attachment installed. There is a small antenna, suggesting that it transmits its output to a receiver somewhere.

Nukabot stops and turns. "The lift hall should be down there," it says.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 02, 2011 21:42

Still wearing the disconnected oxygen mask, I head out of the shower, looking for some suitable attire.

written by Gligar on Dec 03, 2011 01:55

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, INFRARED Chemical Showers, Below Central Subsector

Cryo leaves the shower, intending to find a jumpsuit.

He is still wearing the disconnected oxygen mask and hose.

The jackobot notices. "Citizen, you appear to have disconnected the oxygen mask. This should be impossible, therefore it is clear that you have damaged the shower. A fine of 50 credits has already been charged to your account. Now, please remove the oxygen mask."

written by Cryoburner on Dec 03, 2011 03:07

I remove the oxygen mask.

"Oh, I'm sorry, but I was just taking this to report it as defective. As for potentially damaging the shower, I was just following the directions listed on the card, as you directed. The card clearly doesn't mention anything about removing the mask from one's face after showering, so I took it with me. If you're saying the card was defective, I suppose I should also report the makers of the card, as well as anyone recommending following those directions. Would you mind helping me get this card off the wall?"

I once again glance around, looking for where clothing might be found.

written by Jam on Dec 03, 2011 03:49

I stare at the camera...

"Uh... What was I supposed to do with this again?"

written by Malkom on Dec 03, 2011 04:39

++ Connection status ++ PS:100% ++ MN:100% ++ VS:100% ++

++++ Finalizing Connection +++++

I blink. Then I hold up my hand, wiggle the fingers, and look at it back and front.

I jump.

"Everything seems to be in order." I head towards the chemical showers, barely noticing Cryo. I enter and perform the usual procedure.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 03, 2011 09:06

I look at Jam-Y a little confused, but look back down the path Nukabot is pointing towards.

"Onwards then..."

I draw out a laser pistol and keep it at the ready.

written by Gligar on Dec 03, 2011 14:34

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, INFRARED Chemical Showers, Below Central Subsector

Cryo removes the mask. He claims that he was only removing it due to it being defective, and then proves that he has no sense of initiative by pointing out "omissions" in the card's instructions. He then asks for help in removing the card.

"Make no attempt to remove the card," the jackobot answers. "The card has been certified as "acceptable" for INFRARED citizens such as yourself. Your claims to the contrary are a clear sign of unhappiness. An additional fine of 10 credits has been levied."

Cryo then looks around once more. The jackobot tells him, "Please hand me the oxygen mask, then follow me down the stairs."

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, RED Decanting Zone, Below Central Subsector

Mick-R performs some brief exercises to ascertain proper body function. He seems satisfied.

He heads down to the chemical showers.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, RED Chemical Showers, Below Central Subsector

He realises that this cloning station seems to be segregated by clearance. As such, there are no INFRARED citizens here. What a treat.

He enters a cubicle even before the jackobot, which is following him, can instruct him to do so.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, RED Chemical Shower, Below Central Subsector

Mick-R puts on the mask and presses START, before settling in. Idly, he glances at the laminated card:

Card said:

INSTRUCTIONS

1) Remove oxygen mask from hook, and wear it as shown.

[A pictogram shows a clone wearing the mask on his face, with the mask's straps going behind his head.]

2) Press START button. The door will close and lock.

3) The cubicle will fill with [DELETED FOR SECURITY REASONS]. Don't worry, this is completely safe. IMPORTANT: Make sure to close your eyes during this step. Do not attempt to consume the [DELETED FOR SECURITY REASONS].

4) The cubicle will then drain, and fill with water. Continue wearing the mask.

5) The cubicle will then drain, and the [REDACTED] will commence.

6) The [REDACTED] will deactivate, and the door will open.

7) Take off the mask and replace it on its hook.

It's that easy!

These instructions are classified Security Clearance RED. If you are an INFRARED, please exit the showers and locate the proper showers for your clearance.

Corridors, G Level, Eta Subsector

Jam-Y stares at his camera. He's not sure what to do with it. John-R tells him, "You clip it to your helmet, sir."

L4-O looks at Jam-Y, a little confused himself, before snapping out of it, and looking down the corridor which, according to Nukabot, leads to the lift hall. He instructs the bot to press on.

As it complies, he grabs his laser pistol.

Lift hall, G Level, Eta Subsector

The lift hall is covered in graffiti, most of it secret society propaganda and code signs, from the looks of it. Prominently featured are arrows pointing to one of the lifts.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 03, 2011 15:27

"Hmm... If you say so..."

I attach the oxygen mask to the Jackobot's face, or wherever it seems to fit best. I then follow behind him, presumably down the stairs, looking for any cafeterias along the way.

written by Jam on Dec 03, 2011 15:43

"Hmm... If you say so..."

I attach the camera to the helmet, or wherever it seems to fit best. I then follow behind the others, presumably down the corridor, looking for any lift halls along the way.

written by Malkom on Dec 03, 2011 16:41

I wait. Without moving or blinking or even doing very much thinking.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 03, 2011 20:24

"Eep. This feels like a very treasonous corridor."

I glance around quickly, just fast enough to look without being treason, but definitely not slow enough to look treasonously long at something. Maybe. Possibly.

written by Gligar on Dec 03, 2011 22:20

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, INFRARED Chemical Showers, Below Central Subsector

Cryo decides to comply... by attempting to fit the mask onto the jackobot's dome. Which the jackobot promptly shakes, causing the mast to fall off. It picks up the mask before heading out.

Cryo follows it.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Main Chamber, Below Central Subsector

Down a flight of steps in the main chamber, clearance INFRARED, but not segregated, so there are clones of several clearances here. Some of them look as though they would prefer to be elsewhere.

Cryo seems to want to be elsewhere. A cafeteria, for example. Unfortunately, there doesn't seem to be one.

The jackobot leads Cryo to a rack of jumpsuits. "Please take, and wear, a jumpsuit appropriate to your security clearance," it tells him. "Since you are INFRARED, this means that you may take a black jumpsuit. Be sure to wear it according to proper uniform regulations. Wearing a jumpsuit as if it were a backpack is not permitted."

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, RED Chemical Shower, Below Central Subsector

Mick-R does nothing as the shower continues its cycle.

Corridors, G Level, Eta Subsector

Seeing as he's lagging behind slightly, Jam-Y clips the camera to his helmet and follows Nukabot into the lift hall.

Lift hall, G Level, Eta Subsector

L4-O does not like the look of the lift hall. It's kind of treasonous.

He tries to balance looking with not looking at the graffiti.

He may or may not have been successful.

He does notice that the level indicators and call buttons seem to have been left untouched.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 04, 2011 01:53

"Of course I wouldn't wear a jumpsuit as a backpack! That's what the unassembled backpacks are for!"

I put on an infrared jumpsuit, and then proceed to test it by jumping in place a few times.

I then assemble two unassembled infrared backpacks, fitting one over my shoulders, and the other over the jackobot's shoulders, or wherever it seems to fit best. I place one infrared hammock inside my backpack.

written by Speeder on Dec 04, 2011 02:51

I attempt to figure what the arrows mean, what this lift has different from the others, or what secret society has the arrows pointing to that lift.

written by Jam on Dec 04, 2011 03:41

"Wow... That's a lot of treasonous stuff on that wall..."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 04, 2011 04:06

"Well, we need to go to X-level... so, let's see if there's a button."

I press the call button and get back on Nukabot to wait for the lift.

I look around for any indication of what levels the lift can visit.

written by 4616599 on Dec 04, 2011 13:25

I knock at the camera suspiciously, then put it on.

written by Gligar on Dec 04, 2011 14:04

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Main Chamber, Below Central Subsector

Cryo agrees that jumpsuits are not backpacks, and wears a jumpsuit properly.

Unfortunately, he only agrees in words. See, he claims that there are "unassembled backpacks" present. He attempts to obtain two.

The jackobot stops him. "Citizen, those are jumpsuits. See? The label says so. You were informed that wearing one as a backpack is not permitted. An additional fine of 10 credits has been deducted from your account."

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, RED Chemical Shower, Below Central Subsector

Meanwhile, Mick-R's shower has finished its cycle, and has opened its door.

Lift hall, G Level, Eta Subsector

Speed-Y tries to figure out the meaning of the arrows. The graffiti is pretty impenetrable, though, and offers little insight.

Jam-Y is surprised at the amount of treason present on the wall.

L4-O states that then need to get to X Level, and presses a call button.

Almost instantly, a lift opens.

Specifically, the one pointed to by the arrows.

L4-O would have to enter the lift to see its button panel.

Joris-R taps on his camera's lens suspiciously, and puts it on. John-R winces. "Please don't do that, Joris-R. You might smudge the lens. And then your feed would be ruined."

written by Jam on Dec 04, 2011 14:18

If the lift isn't already occupied, I enter it and wait for the others to follow...

written by Malkom on Dec 04, 2011 19:07

I step out of the shower and kit myself out in a RED jumpsuit. After this is done with, I solicit any nearby intelligent and/or pseudointelligent* entities for the forms I need to get out of here without committing treason.

written by Speeder on Dec 04, 2011 19:40

I enter the lift, hoping that it does not kidnap us, but ALSO hoping that it DOES kidnap us and take us to trouble.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 04, 2011 19:49

"Well, onward then, Nukabot."

I survey the lift.

"So long as there's room..."

written by Gligar on Dec 04, 2011 22:19

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Main Chamber, Below Central Subsector

While Cryo and the jackobot argue over jumpsuits, Mick-R descends the stairs from the RED showers.

Looking around, he spots Cryo - to him, just an INFRARED clone of no importance, and a rather dumb-looking one at that - and the jackobot over by the jumpsuits. He goes over there himself to get a RED jumpsuit.

As he is getting dressed, a second jackobot - the one he met at the decanting zone - trundles over. "Good," it says. "You appear to already be aware of the decanting procedure. When you are ready, please head over to a self-service terminal, and fill out the forms contained thereon."

Lift hall, G Level, Eta Subsector

Jam-Y looks at the lift. It is empty.

Well, except for the fact that it is covered in yet more graffiti.

He enters regardless of this.

As he turns to look back, he catches sight of the lift panel. Interestingly, the button for X Level is the centre of attention, with arrows pointing to it.

Speed-Y enters behind him, his emotions conflicted. On the one hand,, he does not want to be sent off-course by the lift... but on the other hand, he kind of does.

L4-O instructs Nukabot to enter. "It appears that space will be a little tight in there," it comments. But it enters anyway. And, true to Nukabot's words, there is very little space remaining inside the lift once the bot enters. It'll be interesting to get someone to press the button, for one.

* Search mask: remove entity <CRYO-R/0x543A5E553FF> from the entity results vector.

written by Speeder on Dec 04, 2011 22:32

I attempt to press X and get on Nukabot.

“Ok, this will probably send us of course, but probably this will send us to some treasonous problem that by the looks of the graffiti REALLY NEED some shooting. And we are trouble shooters, maybe they are the culprit of the power problems.”

written by Jam on Dec 05, 2011 00:16

“I wonder... Are those arrows for us, or were they for whoever is responsible for the problems at Power Services?”

written by Lightning4 on Dec 05, 2011 00:38

If Speed-Y fails, I attempt to press the X from my vantage point, doing my best to reach.

“Neither of those sound like good things.”

“I wonder if I’ll need something a little heavier than a laser pistol for this...”

I check my bag for any good anti-group cone rifle shells.

written by Gligar on Dec 05, 2011 01:16

A lift

Speed-Y stretches and strains to reach the button... but Nukabot is in the way, so L4-O hits it instead. Going up!

Over the surprisingly loud lift noises, Speed-Y comments that this lift might send them off-course to some other problem, but by the look of things, it’ll need shooting anyway. Perhaps the people who left the graffiti are also responsible for the power problems.

Jam-Y wonders about the arrows. Are they for them, or for those who caused the problems in the first place?

L4-O doesn’t like either suggestion. He decides to check his cone rifle shells, looking for anything to do with crowd control...

Hmmm... it looks like most of these are of the blow-things-up variety. Apart from that...

written by Speeder on Dec 05, 2011 02:00

“Azir, you have my YELLOW slugs don’t you? Maybe serious trouble will need to be shot, those will come in handy.”

I check my... revolver?

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 05, 2011 05:03

“Yeah I do, here you go.”

I rummage through the backpack and grab the yellow slugs for Speedy.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 05, 2011 06:41

I just take out my blaster instead. Surely that has good enough firepower for now...

written by Cryoburner on Dec 05, 2011 10:17

“Oh, those are jumpsuits, aren’t they... You know, they really do make them look awfully similar to unassembled backpacks. I can barely tell them apart, and I’m an expert at backpacks.”

I proceed to check for any tags on my jumpsuit to make sure that it is, in fact, a jumpsuit, and not an unassembled backpack. It might be treasonous to be walking around in a backpack, after all.

“Say... perhaps I could be put in charge of designing new tags for the complex’s jumpsuits to better distinguish them from backpacks. Just think of all the resources that could be saved if all current jumpsuits were disposed of and replaced with ones that read THIS IS NOT A BACKPACK across the reverse. Literally minutecycles upon minutecycles worth of tag checking would be saved.”

written by Jam on Dec 05, 2011 13:32

I take out a laser pistol...

written by Gligar on Dec 05, 2011 15:47

A lift

Speed-Y thinks... doesn’t Azir-R have that slugthrower ammunition? He still has that slugthrower, after all. He checks it, while Azir-R rummages through his backpack. Yep, that’s a “revolver” alright. It looks like there are two slugs still loaded.

Azir-R discovers that he does still have the slugs, and hands them over. There seems to be an assortment of types.

And doesn’t Azir-R still have those single-shot slugthrowers?

L4-O looks at his cone rifle shells again, and opts instead for his blaster. He hopes it has enough power.

Jam-Y opts for a laser pistol.

The lift continues to ascend.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Main chamber, Below Central Subsector

While Mick-R continues getting dressed (wow, he’s taking a while, isn’t he? 😊) Cryo continues arguing about the differences between jumpsuits and backpacks. He claims that they look too similar, and that he (and he once again claims to be an “expert” in something, this time backpacks) is finding it difficult to differentiate. He checks his jumpsuit for a label. There’s one right there, see? It reads STANDARD ISSUE JUMPSUIT (INFRARED), MANDATORY SIZE.

One thing is clear: Cryo might not truly be an expert in much, but he is an expert in covering up his lack of expertise by not letting others get a word in edgeways. The bot looks as disgruntled as it can while Cryo continues.

He suggests that he could be put in charge of designing new labels for jumpsuits. That way, time could be saved which could be used for other things.⁶⁷⁴

⁶⁷⁴ GLIGAR: (OOC: scribble scribble small smile)

The bot simply answers, "...If you have a problem with the jumpsuit design, please consider filling out a feedback form along with the rest of your forms. Forms can be found at any of the self-service terminals, situated in this chamber."

written by Speeder on Dec 05, 2011 15:54

I load the weapon with four more slugs (unless it is the rare eight shot variety... then I load it to the max)

And smile. Then I change to a new YELLOW barrel, to make sure my weapon has full charge.

I wonder if there are a way to know the charge of a old barrel...

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 05, 2011 16:25

"If anyone wants anything else, now's the chance." I announce, feeling only slightly confused as this seems like something the EQ officer should be doing. No bother..

Then I prepare my RED barrel onto my laser pistol. I also make sure cans of B3 are easily accessible, and wonder if we'll be deploying the packy-foam as well. This should be fun.

written by Malkom on Dec 05, 2011 19:19

I finish pulling on my jumpsuit and brush past Cryo towards a self service terminal. "Out of the way, you jerk! And leave those suits alone!"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 05, 2011 20:48

I raise an eyebrow at Azir-R, but ignore it and wait for the lift to open.

written by Gligar on Dec 05, 2011 21:58

A lift

Speed-Y fills the "revolver" to capacity (that's six, you'll recall) before fitting a nice fresh YELLOW barrel to his laser pistol. He realises that when he handed over a laser pistol to L4-O, he handed over the armed one...

He tries to recall how to check a barrel's charge level, and remembers the charge rings you find on it. Six coloured rings means a full barrel. Six black rings means that the barrel's had its rated six shots.

Azir-R says that is anyone wants anything else, they'd better act now. Even though that's the job of the Equipment Officer (who is currently raising his eyebrow).

He then checks his laser - full barrel, good - and his B3 - right there at the top of his backpack.

Finally, the lift groans to a halt. The doors open onto another lift hall.

And the power fault manifests itself again in the form of those open-flame "emergency lights", some of which are visible from the lift.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Main chamber, Below Central Subsector

Mick-R finishes with his jumpsuit, and, pushing past Cryo and telling him to leave the jumpsuits alone, heads to a terminal.

The terminal is powered on and waiting. A message on the screen asks him to scan his tongueprint to begin.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 05, 2011 23:16

"Ah, yes! Forms! I'm an... able to fill out forms."

I jump over to the terminal, to verify that my jumpsuit is indeed working. Once there, I fill out any standard forms, not bothering to examine them. I do examine the terminal interface though, and how one goes about interfacing with it, to make certain it is interfaced with correctly.

I also fill out a feedback form, detailing the trouble with jumpsuits and backpacks currently plaguing Alpha Complex, and my suggested solution. While I'm at it, I fill out another suggesting for cafeterias to be added to the Main Cloning Stations in each sector, and possibly in random storage rooms, in case the clones who are storing things get hungry.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 05, 2011 23:26

"Onward with caution, Nukabot."

I look around and see how dark it is.

"Think we'll need our camera lights on, John-R?"

written by Malkom on Dec 06, 2011 00:46

I take the time to fill out a feedback form detailing technical problems with the cloning station I was at the time before this. You know, how they have malfunctioning showers. I also say that the tech services coverage appears to be minimal and disgustingly incompetent in that area.

written by Gligar on Dec 06, 2011 01:37

A lift

L4-O tells Nukabot to proceed with caution.

It begins by backing out of the lift. As it's doing that, L$-O asks John-R if they'll need the lights. "I was just about to say, Sir," is the reply. "Yes, you'll need the lights for this one."

Nukabot begins to turn around, scraping the wall in the process. "Oops."

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Main chamber, Below Central Subsector

Cryo heads to a different terminal, attempting to jump there, but failing.

He looks at the terminal. It too has a prompt for him to scan his tongueprint. This is done using the provided tongueprint scanner below the screen, to the right of the keyboard.

Once that is done, he can fill out his forms electronically. He does so, and fills out a feedback form.

The terminal beeps, and displays:

Analysing forms.....done.

Problems detected:

* Sections [DELETED FOR SECURITY REASONS] not completed

Please consult a Cloning Technician for advice.
Do not attempt to leave the cloning station.

The jackobot, who tagged along with him, tells him, "It appears that you have not completed some sections of your forms. Please fill them out."

Meanwhile, Mick-R is also filling out forms, including a feedback form, wherein he leaves negative feedback for Tech Services.

His terminal also beeps.

Analysing forms.....done.

Problems detected:

* Feedback form shows extreme levels of unhappiness
* Feedback form contains keywords of special interest to Internal Security
* Tongueprint not scanned

Please scan your tongueprint, and wait for an Internal Security Offi(%&^%*^ OVERRIDE 0101010101

Internal Security has been notified. Please scan your tongueprint, and consult a Cloning Technician for advice.

written by Speeder on Dec 06, 2011 01:48

"Since we are obliged anyway to have tags and lights attached, thus ruining our stealth, lets just use all lights we can and make VERY OBVIOUS that we arrived."

I turn on the camera lights if they actually exist.

written by Malkom on Dec 06, 2011 01:51

I pull Cryo's face near to my console's tongueprint scanner.

"Hey! You! This thing needs to be inspected minutely! Go on, give it a lick, consoles that don't taste like Cold Fun are treason!"

Once the tongueprint situation has been resolved, I look for a screwdriver or other technical tools. "This thing seems to be defective! Me fix!"

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 06, 2011 02:10

I turn on my light, and keep alert.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 06, 2011 04:39

I turn on my light as well. I also turn on my torch for extra lighting power!

written by Cryoburner on Dec 06, 2011 05:06

"I'm sorry, but my tongue was recently injured in a licking accident involving a new flavor of Tasty Gel Substance Treat. I should avoid excessive licking to allow for adequate healing, so as to prevent permanent scarring that might make my tongueprint unreadable. That might be treasonous. Perhaps my friend here could provide you with a tongueprint, if your own tongue is missing, or otherwise non-functional."

I direct his attention over to the Jackobot, who looks interested in licking things. In the mean time, I closely examine the tongueprint scanner as suggested. I avoid licking it though.

written by Gligar on Dec 06, 2011 16:59Corridors, X Level, Eta Subsector

Speed-Y suggests that they might as well turn on all their lights, given that stealth has already been blown right out of the window. He leads by turning on his own.

The extra illumination, makes it clear that this corridor is ORANGE, and that there has been a firefight here. The walls are scored by laser fire, there are discarded laser barrels strewn across the floor, and most of all, there are dead clones at the intersection up ahead.

Azir-R and L4-O follow suit. L4-O also adds his torch into the mix. The more light, the better, right?

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Main chamber, Below Central Subsector

Mick-R looks around and spots Cryo. Grabbing him, he demands that he "inspect" and lick, the tongueprint scanner on his terminal. Cryo agrees to inspect the device but declines the offer to lick it, citing his recent tongue injury, and stating that he needs to let it heal. He suggests that if Mick-R's tongue is not sufficient, he consult the nearby jackobot, which states, "I regret that I am not equipped with a tongue.* I suggest that you supply your own tongueprint."

Cryo then inspects the device. It appears to have been cleaned recently. Several of its sensors seems to be depressed slightly out of line with the rest of them.

Mick-R looks around for tools which he could use to repair the terminal, but cannot find any. Everyclone knows that the storage bins are tongueprint coded, anyway. You'd need Tech Services clearance to open them.

written by 4616599 on Dec 06, 2011 17:26

"I'll watch the rear."

I duck behind Nukabot, laser pistol ready.

* * Hardly surprising, given the R&D experiment last yearcycle, wherein several bots were equipped with tongues to help them get through tongueprint locks. Nearby clones, which happened to include none other than the famous vidshow star Tella-O-MLY, were reported to be "creeped out" by the whole affair, and went on record as saying that bots with tongues was "just plain wrong". So the whole thing was scrapped.

written by Gligar on Dec 06, 2011 21:24

Corridors, X Level, Eta Subsector

Joris-R hops off Nukabot and ducks behind it.

It's still moving. This means that it trundles on, forcing him to practically run to keep up.

It reaches the intersection.

From Nukabot's left, there comes the sudden sound of laser fire.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 06, 2011 21:44

I enter.

Enter where?

written by Lightning4 on Dec 06, 2011 21:51

"Uh oh."

I hop off of Nukabot and take cover as well.

From my position, I try to investigate the dead clones, and determine whether they be loyal... or not so loyal.

Either way, I also see if they have anything useful that's... not currently being used.

written by Speeder on Dec 06, 2011 23:15

I just attempt to check where the laser is coming from, and where it is going, specially trying to figure if it is coming to us or not.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 07, 2011 00:59

"Well, it does say here that you should consult a cloning technician for advice. Maybe one of them could help you with your tongueprint."

I attempt to head back over to my own terminal to finish my forms. I look over them a little better this time to see what sections may have been missed, seeing as they were apparently updated from before, and fill them in as needed.

written by Jam on Dec 07, 2011 01:50

I listen to the laser fire, and prepare to start shooting!

Yay!

written by Gligar on Dec 07, 2011 02:06

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango seems to be dreaming. In his dream, he is back at Emergency Bunker C-3...

Meeting Hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango enters the meeting hall. Why? Who knows?

Before him are the Troubleshooters. They seem to be watching something on the vidscreen.

Corridor Intersection, X Level, Eta Subsector

L4-O hops off Nukabot and also takes cover.

From his new position, he looks at the deceased clones. They're all wearing the logo of Power Services, and are clutching laser pistols. Their barrels are spent. Other than the laser pistols, ME cards, and PDCs, they don't seem to have anything else with them.

Speed-Y tries to locate the laser noises. He eventually sees the source: a firefight is happening in a room down the corridor. A stray shot from an ORANGE laser barrel passes through the door and hits the wall opposite.

Jam-Y listens in, excited. He looks like he wants to join in the fight.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Main chamber, below Central Subsector

Cryo suggests to Mick-R that he consult a cloning tech for help with his tongueprint. After all, that's what his screen says.

Then he goes over to his own terminal. He goes back over the forms... ahh, those sections are the ones. He doesn't recognise them. He begins to fill out the new sections.

And finishes them. The terminal beeps.

Analysing forms.....done.

Thank you for taking the time to fill out a feedback form, Citizen. Your co-operation is appreciated.

Your ME Card is being dispensed now.

This concludes the forms section of your cloning process.

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 07, 2011 03:15

I wheel to cover, and try to get a better look at what's going on, at the same time. If the team moves in, I wheel after them.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 07, 2011 04:38

"Uh oh. I think we have some evil treasondoers ahead."

I look at the corpses again and frown.

written by Malkom on Dec 04, 2011 19:12

Remember that idea way back to do a Zap game over IRC?

I still think we should do that. It'd be awesome!

"I hope that wasn't the Power Services group we were supposed to bring with us."

I continue watching the hall, and try to take cover in a closer location.

written by Gligar on Dec 07, 2011 15:27

Corridor Intersection, X Level, Eta Subsector

Azir-R wheels into what he hopes is better cover. Looking down the corridor, he sees another ORANGE laser shot stray out of the door. Noise indicates that clones are approaching, or perhaps retreating from something further away.

L4-O thinks that they have some CMTs inbound.

Looking once more at the corpses, he hopes that they are not the Power Services team they were sent to fetch.

He keeps watching, then chooses to advance. He takes cover behind a deactivated vendobot and waits.

A moment later, clones emerge through the door, shooting at something in the room. One stops to change laser barrels.

They strongly resemble the corpses at the intersection.

written by Malkom on Dec 07, 2011 17:44

I swear and try to hack the console, because why not?

written by Gligar on Dec 07, 2011 21:34

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Main chamber, below Central Subsector

It would appear that Mick-R is trying to kill off his own clones.

Why do I say that? Well, he's only trying to hack the terminal..

With an INFRARED, two jackobots, and several cameras watching.

Of course, he doesn't really know what he's doing. But his intention is clear.

He is suddenly grabbed from behind, and something hits him hard in the back of the head. "Step away from the terminal, citizen. Now." Internal Security have arrived.

One of the jackobots says, "It would appear that your forms have not been processed, citizen. This means that your clone remains the property of Technical Services, and is not permitted to leave. I note that this is the second such occurrence."

I wonder how much attention Cryo is paying to all this?

written by Lightning4 on Dec 07, 2011 22:14

I stay behind cover and wait until some start trying to come our way, or at least until they're not under fire.

"Hold up! Loyal or foe!?"

written by Jam on Dec 07, 2011 22:39

I aim my laser pistol towards any clones that are approaching, just in case they are our enemies.

written by Gligar on Dec 08, 2011 03:03

Corridors, X level, Eta Subsector

L4-O waits as the clones get closer. They're still firing, and soon the identity of their attackers becomes apparent: five armoured clones... no wait, those are cyborgs! They're cyborged far more than just Speed-Y's leg.

John-R murmurs, "Copore Metal by the looks of it..."

Soon, the clones approach L4-O's position. L4-O demands that they identify themselves as loyal or foe. One almost jumps out of his skin before turning. "I'd ask you the same question -"

He's interrupted by one of his companions. "I'm out!"

" - but we don't really have time. You're a Troubleshooter, right? You got ammo?"

L4-O notices the Power Service logos on these clone's jumpsuits. And, now he can see them closer, they really do look like the corpses at the intersection. They recloned that fast?

Jam-Y keeps his laser trained at the newcomers.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 08, 2011 07:11

If my ME Card has dispensed, I take it, and look it over.

"This is a fine ME Card, don't you think?" I say to the Jackobot, unless of course, the ME Card is not fine, in which case I just stare at it for some time.

"Now let's see, what was I doing..."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 08, 2011 07:32

"You guys sure recloned fast. And yes, we're freshly kitted out."

I eye the cyborgs and think, then grin. I put away my blaster and take out Turbo, loading it up with whatever is explosive enough to obliterate those... things.

"Copore Metal? Who are they?..."

I shift my aim from the Power Services clones to the cyborgs, while trying to keep hidden for now. I watch the cyborgs carefully.

written by Gligar on Dec 08, 2011 16:04

JHT Sector Main Cloning station, Main chamber, below Central Subsector

...But Cryo doesn't seem to be interested in the INCREDIBLY OBVIOUS TRAITOR known as Mick-R, currently being wrestled away from the terminal by Internal Security. He's more interested in the ME Card that the other terminal just dispensed. It even has a nice picture of him on it.

Her shows it to the jackobot. "Yes, very nice, citizen, it replies.

Mick-R manages to break free of IntSec somehow.

(And before I forget:)

Treason point to Malkom!

One of the IntSec goons turns towards Cryo. "You! Tell me what you saw! What did this traitor do on the terminal?"

Corridors, X Level, Eta Subsector

L4-O confirms that the team has ammunition, and comments on how fast the Power Services clones reloaded. One replies, "I guess Tech Services isn't so useless after all. At least, when it tries."

L4-O looks at the approaching cyborgs. They aren't firing right now, but noises indicate that they seem to be reloading.

Perhaps, L4-O seems to think, it's time for Turbo! He smiles, and switches weapons.

He loads in a standard explosive shell, while noting that he is running low on triggers. As he's doing that, he quietly asks John-R about Copore Metal. "They think bots are better than humans, and want to be like them," is the reply.

Turning his attention back to the cyborgs, L4-O keeps watching. They seem to have stopped moving for now.

written by Speeder on Dec 08, 2011 17:03

I finally say something.

"Hey, I AM Tech Services. Anyway, we are a troubleshooter team supposed to help Power Services in fixing the power problems, we were to go to Power Services but something drew us here... I suppose you are the team that we are to help?"

I take my YELLOW revolver, and attempt to shoot one of the cyborgs, hoping that if I hit a metal part, it can at least put a dent on it.

While I do that, I attempt to use my Tech Services knowledge and the knowledge of how my own leg works, to figure what spots we should aim on them.

I smile seeing Turbo getting into action.

"Azir, help L4 with two cans of B3 and this barrel." I hand him my old YELLOW barrel.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 08, 2011 19:54

If Speed-Y starts firing, I open fire as well with Turbo.

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 08, 2011 20:42

I vigorously shake two cans of B3 (two fisting them, if you will) and toss them at the opposing forces where the teams fire is being directed.

I'm a bit concerned about arming my laser pistol with a barrel that is above my clearance so after the B3 does its job I fire with my RED barrel loaded and make my concerns known to Speedy re: clearance.

written by Malkom on Dec 08, 2011 20:48

++ Reinstating connection - status ++ PS:57% ++ VS:100% ++ MN: 100% ++

"Oh no..." I run away into the forest of cloning tanks.

written by Jam on Dec 08, 2011 22:37

"Interesting... Cyborgs?"

I look down at my laser pistol, then at the shiny metal of the cyborg clones... Somehow, I don't think the laser shots will be very effective... Oh well, it's worth a try anyway!

I fire a shot at closest cyborg, and try to aim for the fleshy parts.

written by Gligar on Dec 08, 2011 22:56

Corridors, X Level, Eta Subsector

Speed-Y obviously does not take kindly to the Power Services insult. He is part of Tech Services, after all. And judging from Lucas-R's reaction, he doesn't exactly like it, either.

Speed-Y adds that they were supposed to meet with Power Services to help with the power problem, but they ended up here. He wonders if the Power services clones are the team they're supposed to meet with.

"If you're team Epsilon, then allow me to say this: 'You're bloody late,'" the clone replies. "We've already died once waiting for you lot."

Speed-Y turns his attention to the cyborgs, deciding to use his "revolver". Experimentally, he fires at one of the cyborgs' bot parts, hoping to do some damage.

And BLAM! Good shot! One of the cyborgs loses his bot arm in a shower of sparks! Looks like he got lucky and hit a power distributor or something. But next time... hmm... given what he knows of his own leg, perhaps hitting the joints would work?

He decides on another course of action. He tells Azir-R to prep some B3 "grenades", and shoot it with a laser barrel which he provides.

Azir-R starts shaking up the B3, but politely declines the use of the barrel. He is concerned about the barrel's clearance (YELLOW) being higher than his own (RED). Instead, he simply throws the B3, and prepares to use his own laser pistol, with its RED barrel, with which he has no such concerns.

He ends up firing at the exact same time as L4-O!

His laser shot hits slightly before L4-O's cone rifle shell, causing the B3 to explode first, causing some pretty good damage to the cyborgs, before the shell hits.

BOOM

Everyone is thrown to the floor by the explosion. Parts of the corridor near by are rendered into flying pieces of synthcrete rubble*.

* Type F8, this time. Not that Cryo is there to notice.

One of the Power Services clones yells out, "Holy — ... I mean... Will you watch where you fire that thing?!"

But hey, look on the good side, those cyborgs seem to have lost most of their organic components...

Oh wait, there's one left... and it's still standing.

But Jam-Y is ready to fire. He lest loose with his laser pistol, aiming for an obvious fleshy bit. Zap! The cyborg lurches, and slumps down somewhat.

But still it approaches. It seems to be trying to ready a weapon.

JHT Sector Main Cloning station, Main chamber, below Central Subsector

Mick-R runs off, hoping to lose IntSec among the cloning tanks.

Treason point to Malkom!

The goons run after him.

Except for the one who is still waiting for an answer from Cryo.

written by Jam on Dec 08, 2011 23:31

I fire again, aiming for the weapon of the remaining cyborg...

written by Malkom on Dec 08, 2011 23:36

I curse and try to knock over one of the cloning tanks so as to cause an effect similar to that caused when you pile a line of empty B3 cans and knock the first one over. That is, a cascade knockdown effect.

I aim it at the goons.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 09, 2011 00:49

I get up and do a quick self-damage assessment, then attempt to aid Jam-Y with picking off the remaining cyborg with my blaster.

written by Gligar on Dec 09, 2011 02:04

Corridors, X Level, Eta Subsector

Jam-Y fires again, this time at the cyborg's weapon. He appears to be focusing on making this hit a good one... D'oh, he missed!

But then an odd thing happens. The cyborg's weapon begins emitting smoke. And... is that fire?

The cyborg doesn't seem particularly impressed by this. It lifts the weapon and prepares to run... or maybe shamle... forward to use it as a club, only to be met with a blast from L4-O's blaster, which hits the cyborg's bionic eye, causing it to explode. What's left doesn't live long.

L4-O realises that his body kind of hurts.

JHT Sector Main Cloning station, Main chamber, below Central Subsector

Mick-R stops mid-flight, and decides to try to knock over one of the cloning tanks. This despite the fact that they're much larger than he is, and really heavy.

And, as he soon realises, attached to a guide rail up above.

The tank still moves, though, pendulum fashion, in the vague direction of the goons, and knocks into another tank, which moves slightly, while the first tank makes its way back. And promptly knocks Mick-R to the floor.

The tromp tromp tromp of the goons approaches.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 09, 2011 02:40

"Oh, I think that clone may have been upset about the difficulty in determining the difference between a jumpsuit and a backpack. Also, I think he might not have a tongue. Or maybe he has lazy tongue syndrome. Is that a mutation? In any case, he wanted me to lick his tongueprint scanner for him. And then he started poking at the terminal in what appeared to be less-than-mandatory ways. Also, I think he might have broken a shower..."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 09, 2011 02:46

"Ow... maybe using Turbo at such close ranch isn't such a good idea..."

I check to see if anything is broken, or if I'm at least relatively okay this time.

So what did these cyborgs want with you? We saw some strange... treasonous graffiti down on G-level. It indicated something was going down on this level..."

I glance at the cyborg corpses while waiting for a response.

written by Malkom on Dec 09, 2011 03:04

"Oh, Computer damn it all!" I pick myself up and rush through the forest of tanks looking for an emergency exit, any exit!

If I see one, I try and get through it.

written by Speeder on Dec 09, 2011 15:20

I take the YELLOW barrel back.

"No, this was not to shoot, this barrel is spent, it was to throw it... Granted, the cone rifle and B3 already did a good damage, with this barrel probably we would end with another hole in the ceiling or the floor. Thus better not."

I look at the cyborgs.

"For some reason they are REALLY good at not dieing. Ok, what we will do then if we cannot use explosives, is try to rip their weapon limbs off, shooting joints or power distributors help a lot with that. Or you can kill the still fleshy parts of them."

I go see if the cyborgs have anything interesting in particular... From the point view of a troubleshooter of course, although finding parts by "accident" that I can steal and fit my leg or nukabot would be fun.

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 09, 2011 16:04

"Hmm.. I see, good point. I'll remember that for the future."

Now that things seem safer, I'll join Speedy in 'looting the bodies' and scavenging for useful stuff.

I'll direct this next bit to the power service clones that needed our help. "Any clue what's going on here?"

written by Gligar on Dec 09, 2011 17:26

JHT Sector Main Cloning station, Main chamber, below Central Subsector

Cryo answers the goon. He says that he believes that Mick-R might have been concerned about his own "jumpsuit/backpack confusion" thing. He adds that he either does not have a tongue, or has "lazy tongue syndrome". He wonders if that is some sort of mutation, though to him, it is more important that Mick-R tries to make him lick Mick-R's tongueprint scanner, before Mick-R went and did something "less than mandatory" to the terminal. Finally, he conveys his suspicion that Mick-R may have broken a shower.

The goon seems to think. "So... falsifying tongueprints, possibly tampering with a Computer Terminal, property damage... you should have reported this sooner! I'll need your name. And your ME Card."

Meanwhile, Mick-R has got to his feet again. He keeps running, looking for an exit.

Hey, there's a door!

But it's locked...

Corridors, X Level, Eta Subsector

L4-O decides that it is unwise to use Turbo at such a close range.

He checks himself over. He seems to have avoided any major damage.

He asks what the cyborgs wanted with Power Services. After all, the existence of graffiti down on G Level seemed to indicate that something was happening. One of the Power Services clones, a YELLOW, tells him that they aren't really sure either. "But it must have something to do with the power failure in Industrial Subsector B. You probably aren't aware, but there have been two other teams assigned to the fault. Neither of them made it."

The YELLOW thinks. "I suspect that we will see a great deal of resistance over there. Something is happening, and whatever it is, it has to do with this power fault."

L4-O glances over that the remains of the cyborgs. Some of the parts are sparking, but not doing anything else.

Speed-Y explains to Azir-R that the barrel was a spent one, and that Azir-R was to shoot it. It's probably a good thing that he didn't, though, given the amount of damage already done. The barrel may have been too much.

He looks at the cyborgs. Those things are tough. If they meet up with them again and can't use explosives, they should think about removing their cyborg limbs first. Either joints or power distributors can help with that. And, of course, they can always shoot fleshy components.

He goes over to see if anything is salvageable. But the only thing he gets for his troubles is a quantity of electric shocks from the damaged components. This elicits a laugh from the YELLOW Power Services clone.

On the plus side, though, there are some non-cyborg items available, namely a couple of laser rifle barrels. Both are RED.

Azir-R agrees with Speed-Y, and also goes and investigates the cyborgs. He is more successful at not getting shocked, but also cannot find any salvageable cyborg parts. However, he does find an ME Card, apparently belonging to Gran-R-SLO-2.

He then asks the Power Services team if they know what's going on. "Not beyond what's already been said."

written by Speeder on Dec 09, 2011 17:56

I hand the barrels to Azir.

"Put that in the backpack."

Then I wander back like if I got no electric shocks at all.

"Ok, do you think we should investigate more here, or we should already head to the Industrial Subsector? Clearly something is going on here, I only dunno what. I wonder why you were here fighting them, and why a elevator was prepared to send people here, maybe it is a trap."

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 09, 2011 18:19

I put the red barrels in the backpack for potential use later, either for use on a pistol or more fun with improvised explosives. If we meet more cyborgs, we may need more boom.

written by Jam on Dec 09, 2011 19:39

I walk over to the cyborgs.

"Hmm... I wonder if I can still sense their minds if they are half-robots..."

I decide to try cracking one of their skulls open, to see what their brains are made of.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 09, 2011 21:38

If I overhear Speed-Y, I respond.

"I don't know if there's much more we can find out here then, if the Power Services crew is right. It sounds like what we're up against has most of their operations there..."

I look away if Jam-Y succeeds in what he intends to do.

"Well, if we meet more of these guys there, this is going to be..."

"Fun..."

I sigh.

"I wish I had some more cone rifle triggers. I'm running low."

written by Gligar on Dec 09, 2011 22:19Corridors, X Level, Eta Subsector

Speed-Y gives the rifle barrels to Azir-R, who puts them away.

He then heads back to the team as if nothing happened, and wonders whether they should investigate things here before heading out. After all, the graffiti was prepared for whatever reason, and then there's the cyborgs, and then...

It might be a trap.

It's now Jam-Y's turn to investigate the cyborgs. Or rather, their brains. He wonders if he could still read them... and what they're made of. What's with the sudden obsession with brains, Jam-Y? Are you suddenly a zombie?

He tries to bash one against the synthcrete, trying to crack it open. Unfortunately, it works a little too well. The skull shatters completely, spreading bits of brain against the wall. L4-O looks away.

Definitely organic. Though, there seem to be unusual chips in there as well, and they definitely don't look like MemoMax chips*...

L4-O doubts that they would even find anything here. From what he hears, most of what is happening is at Industrial Subsector B. One thing he does know, however, is that their next meeting with cyborgs ought to be... fun..

Also, he notes that he is low on cone rifle triggers.

The YELLOW Power Services clone says, "Well... if that's everything, I suggest that we get going. We're already late as it is."

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 09, 2011 22:48

I look at what the others are looking at; the vidscreen.

I nearly speak, but figure that it would just be easier to wait and see what happens next.

written by Jam on Dec 09, 2011 23:06

"Ewww... Oh well, it looks like they still have organic brains..."

I look at my hands, which now probably have bits of brain on them in addition to dried blood...

"Er, HYGIENE OFFICER!"

I look around for the hygiene officer, then suddenly remember who that officer was...

"Oh yeah, I terminated him... That's right..."

written by Malkom on Dec 10, 2011 00:22

"Oh shit!" I rush some way off and start yelling and screaming my head off[†] until I hear the tramp of jackboots come near, then hurriedly (and as quietly as I can) rush towards where the equipment stands might be. I break out of the tank

* Although he wouldn't see one of those, given that they're usually situated at the back of the neck.

† not literally forest, try and grab a gun, the highest clearance I see, then duck back in.

written by Speeder on Dec 10, 2011 02:34

I agree with the Power Services team, and hop back on Nukabot.

written by Gligar on Dec 10, 2011 02:43Corridors, X Level, Eta Subsector

Jam-Y looks slightly disappointed when he sees that the cyborgs have organic brains.

Then he looks at his hands: covered in brain and blood, and yells for the Hygiene Officer... oh yeah, he killed him.

The YELLOW Power Services clone looks at him quizzically. "Anything we should know?"

Speed-Y agrees that they should get going, and hops onto Nukabot.

Hygiene Station, X level, Eta Subsector

A somewhat bewildered clone stumbles out of a cubicle. His name is King-R-APH-1. He seems to be wondering about the source of the explosion just now... and about this message he just received on his PDC, telling him that he's assigned to Team Epsilon...

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango continues to dream...

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango almost says something, but decides instead to just watch the vidscreen. It's currently playing some episode of Tella-O... he's not sure which.

One of the Troubleshooters - what was his name... John-R? - turns and notices him. "What's the matter?"

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, among the cloning tanks, below Central Subsector

Mick-R keeps running. As he does, he begins yelling.

This just gives the goons something to home in on.

But he's a little faster. He dashes out of the forest of tanks, towards an equipment rack.

Failing to notice Cryo and the other goon right there, and crashing into Cryo, causing him to fall to the ground.

The goon pulls out a truncheon. "Well well... what do we have here?"

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 10, 2011 03:49

I look around and try to gather any hygiene-related materials around me(if applicable).

I then peek out of the stall cautiously, making sure that I won't be present for any more explosions.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 10, 2011 06:55 Corridors, X Level, Eta Subsector

I make my way back to my normal spot on Nukabot.

"Well then. Shall we go? Industrial Subsector B, I take it?"

written by Speeder on Dec 10, 2011 07:46

I turn to the Power Services team.

"Oh, our Hygiene Officer seemly is unhappy with that, he keeps saying something about technology and is unhappy all the time. I think since the mission started he already died three times, one of them he somehow killed himself inside the shower of the cloning station."

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 10, 2011 10:59

My attention is drawn away from the vidscreen by what seems to be John-R. I speak quietly so as to not attract the attention of the others.

"I err... feel sort of out of place. You may or may not know that sort of feeling..."

I scratch the back of my head for a bit of time.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 10, 2011 12:13

"Ah! What is this!? Say, is that an unassembled backpack you're wearing?"

I grab onto Mick-R's jumpsuit (backpack?) and begin looking for a tag to determine whether or not he is out of dress code. In the mean time, I continue my conversation with Internal Security as best as I can.

"Yes, I would have reported it sooner, but I needed my ME Card first. Filing a report without an ME Card would be less efficient, after all."

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 10, 2011 15:19

I grab onto Nukabot, preparing to head out,

written by Jam on Dec 10, 2011 15:56

I turn to the YELLOW Power Services clone.

"Do you know where I could find a Hygiene Station?"

written by Gligar on Dec 10, 2011 18:03

Hygiene Station, X level, Eta Subsector

King-R King-R looks around for hygiene items... towels, brushes, cleaning fluid... that sort of thing. He grabs a bunch and returns to the stall, peeking out and hoping that there's not going to be an explosion.

From outside, he hears the sounds of clones walking past. And of a bot.

written by Speeder on Dec 08, 2011 16:57

I was talking about Nukabot with my dad (he suggested me to make a game that simulates a forklift)

Then I told him the entire story of Nukabot, even what Cryo did to it.

Then my father: "How?"

Me: "How what?"

My father: "How you damaged a forklift tire?"

Me: "Why?"

My father: "Forklifts have solid tires, you cannot pierce them and make the air go out."

Me: "Huh... huh... GLIGAAAAR?!?!?"

written by Gligar on Dec 08, 2011 17:09

21st century forklifts may have solid tyres, but that doesn't necessarily hold true for Alpha Complex forklifts. 😊

written by Speeder on Dec 08, 2011 17:20

Can we get solid tires upgrade? 😊

Seriously, with solid tires the thing can get shot all we want and still go on =D

L4-O gets into place on Nukabot, and suggests that they get going.

Nukabot starts up, slowly at first, then picking up speed. Azir-R also gets into position. The Power Services team walks alongside, and try to hide their amusement at everyone clinging onto a forkbot.

Speed-Y explains about how Mick-R is always unhappy, and going on about technology all the time. And dying. Including that time when he died in the cloning station. The YELLOW replies to the effect that he would be surprised in such a clone would even make it to the mission...

Jam-Y inquires about the location of a nearby Hygiene Station. "Yeah, we just passed one," the YELLOW replies. "It's back there."

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango is still dreaming...

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango says to John-R that he feels out of place. Perhaps John-R knows what he means...

"I kind of know what you mean," John-R replies. "Back when I first discovered I was a mutant, I felt like a freak! Can you believe that? But then I discovered that there were people like me, and that I could still fit in."

He pauses for a moment. "Perhaps the same is true for you?"

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, among the cloning tanks, below Central Subsector

Cryo notices - or thinks he notices - or rather, he thinks he fails to notice* - something about Mick-R's jumpsuit, and grabs hold of it, looking for a tag or something. The tag stubbornly refuses to be found.

To the goon, he explains that he wanted to find his ME Card before making a report. He claims that it makes things more efficient.

"You do have a point," the goon replies. "Now, since you're reporting in now, I'd like to ...inspect... your ME Card."

written by Malkom on Dec 10, 2011 18:14

I writhe out of Cryo's grip and try to run towards the equipment stands! Once I'm there, I grab a couple of high

* Of course, it could be just an excuse...

clearance (as high as possible) laser pistols, spin around and fire at the goon and Cryo.

written by 4616599 on Dec 10, 2011 19:07

I finally snap out of my daze.

"Well. That was unexpected. I must have lost focus, somehow."

I chase after them, reluctant to gaze at or step on the splattered cyborg bits for too long.

written by Jam on Dec 10, 2011 19:41

"Ok, I'm going to the Hygiene Station!"

I head towards where the YELLOW indicated, and attempt to go inside the station...

written by Gligar on Dec 10, 2011 21:42

Corridors, X Level, Eta Subsector

Now that he knows where the hygiene station is located, Jam-Y expresses his intent to visit it.

He walks over and enters.

Hygiene station, X level, Eta Subsector

He finds that there is a clone present, a RED Power Services clone. He seems to be monopolising the hygiene supplies for some reason. Perhaps he's frightened and/or confused due to the explosion. Or other things.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, among the cloning tanks, below Central Subsector

Mick-R attempts to get free of Cryo. But as we all know, Cryo has a one track mind. As well as an iron grip, it seems. Or maybe Mick-R is just feeling the effects of the blow to the head he received earlier. And the one he's receiving right now.

The goon spits at him. "No you don't! You and I are going to have a little talk later Right after I see your ME card," he adds to Cryo.

The other goons begin to make their way out of the forest of tanks.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 10, 2011 21:58

"That may or may not be true, considering..."

I stop there for some reason. The thought of Headgrabber for some reason makes me feel really sick.

"...I had a mutant hiding inside me."

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 10, 2011 23:00

I stumble nervously up to the clone that just entered the hygiene station and stammer, "Are you a member of team Epsilon? I'm-"

I then take notice to the red sticky bits on the clone's hands and grimace, starting to gag. Feeling faint, I spit out, "Hygiene officer" and fall to the ground, but not before placing one of the bottles of cleaning fluid into his hands.

written by Speeder on Dec 10, 2011 23:31

I just keep clinging on the forkbot.

"I think we will need a new hygiene officer... I for some reason have a feeling that Mick will not return... He more or less remember of ... of... I cannot remember again... Why there are a guy that resemble Mick and I cannot remember?"

Oh, probably leftover memories of a clone so treasonous that got erased. I wonder if Mick will end being erased too."

written by Malkom on Dec 11, 2011 01:39

++ Connection disrupted - status ++ PS:35% ++ MN:93% ++ VS:99% ++

I stagger, and black out almost immediately.

written by Gligar on Dec 11, 2011 02:43

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango... well, you get the idea.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango tells John-R that it might well be true, considering that Mango had a mutant inside him for a while.

John-R nods. "Headgrabber. But he's gone now, isn't he? And yet... you're still uneasy, aren't you?"

Corridors, X Level, Eta Subsector

As Nukabot keeps moving, Speed-Y observes that they may need a new hygiene officer. He has a feeling that Mick-R is not coming back. Like... that other guy... what was his name? Hre looked like Mick-R, and... he can't really remember. Perhaps it's leftover memory fragments of some clone who was erased... will that happen to Mick-R?

"Erased..." One of the other Power Services clones seems thoughtful. "There was that one clone a weekcycle ago who got erased... is that the one?"

Hygiene station, X level, Eta Subsector

King-R stumbles up to Jam-Y and asks if he's a member of Team Epsilon. He's about to introduce himself when he catches sight of Jam-Y's brain- and bloodstained hands, shoves a bottle of cleaning fluid into said hands, and faints.

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, among the cloning tanks, below Central Subsector

As his brain processes the fact that he's getting hit over the head, Mick-R passes out.

As he does so, the jumpsuit's label becomes visible. It's a jumpsuit after all, Cryo!

That makes it easier for the goons to grab him. The one speaking to Cryo still wants his ME card. "Thanks for your help, citizen." He doesn't particularly sound thankful. "I'm going to need you to accompany us back to the station. It's just protocol, so I can enter this onto your permanent record. And I still need to inspect your memory card. And... I think there may be a reward for you."

written by Jam on Dec 11, 2011 02:18

"Oh, yeah, I'm a member of Team Epsi—Hey, are you alright? You're looking kind of ill... Maybe you should lie dow—oh, nevermind..."

I look at the bottle the strange clone shoved into my hands right before he fainted... Hmm... Cleaning solution? Just what I needed!

After verifying it's safe to use, I attempt to use the cleaning fluid to clean my hands off...

written by Jam on Dec 11, 2011 02:57

I attempt to clean off my hands...

After that's done, I nudge the clone with my toe...

"Hey, wake up citizen!"

I look at him a bit closer, and suddenly grin...

"No, wait... Don't wake up yet, I've got an idea... Heh heh heh..."

written by Malkom on Dec 11, 2011 02:58

++ Connection status ++ PS:0% ++ MN:0% ++ VS:0% ++

I'm still out cold.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 11, 2011 03:08

I listen in to the erased clone conversation and add my opinion, which is just a shrug.

"Nukabot, just wait at the lift for now. Jam-Y is doing... something I guess."

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 11, 2011 03:47

I stir quietly and in slurred speech, I softly murmur, "Nooooooo, noooooowt the fuuuuuuses..."

I wear an expression of of disgust as my body goes limp once more.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 11, 2011 05:15

"Wow! I always wanted a jumpsuit verification reward, as long as I can remember, and that's been at least a weekcycle."

I hand my ME card over to the internal security officer, and follow him, if necessary.

written by 4616599 on Dec 11, 2011 11:44

I think aloud.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 09, 2011 02:56

Solid tires are ultraviolet clearance. He could put solid tires on the forkbot, but then you wouldn't be allowed to ride it.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 09, 2011 10:47

Unless we have specific clearance, of course.

"I'm not sure if I know the clone you're talking about. For some reason, the memory of my last clone seems corrupted. I wonder if it's connected?"

written by Gligar on Dec 11, 2011 17:02

Hygiene Station, X level, Eta Subsector

Jam-Y starts telling King-R that he's a member of Team Epsilon, but notices him pass out.

He looks at the bottle of cleaning solution he was given. According to the label, it's liquid soap, and is ORANGE Clearance. Should be safe, right? He decides to use it.

It does indeed to a decent job of cleaning his hands.

After he's finished, he nudges King-R with his foot, trying to wake him. King-R stirs, mumbling something about fuses before drifting off again. Jam-Y looks at him a little closer, and gets an idea...

Corridors, X Level, Eta Subsector

L4-O listens in on the conversation about erased clones, and shrugs.

He tells Nukabot to stop at the lift hall, since Jam-Y is off doing... whatever.

Soon enough, they get to the lift hall.

Joris-R isn't sure if he knows the clone they're talking about. Then again, his previous clone's memories seem to be corrupt... might it be related?

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Main chamber, below Central Subsector

Mick-R remains unconscious. Some of the goons manhandle him towards the exit.

Cryo is pleased to receive a reward, apparently for "jumpsuit verification", and hands his ME Card to the goon. The goon looks at it. "Alright... Cryo-BRN. Let's go."

Cryo follows him towards the exit.

written by Malkom on Dec 11, 2011 18:02

Everything stays black like a good little universe, except...

Except...

Something's wrong. Help! I can't move! I can't see! I can't talk!

written by Lightning4 on Dec 11, 2011 18:52

If the lift is still here, I try to see if there is a button for A level.

“Hopefully there’s an exterior connection in this sector... don’t really want to have to travel all the way back through a few subsectors to get out.”

written by Gligar on Dec 11, 2011 22:21

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Entryway, under Central Subsector

Mick-R remains unconscious.

He, the goons, and Cryo now stop for a moment. It seems that the Interactive Corridor Experience outside is busy right now. And it does not help that the group needs extra guided tiles.

Lift hall, X level

L4-O gets off Nukabot and checks the lift. It’s not here... someone seems to have called it down below.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 11, 2011 23:38

“Yeah. Something just seems to remain, nagging at me. I don’t know what it is that’s causing this uneasiness.”

written by Malkom on Dec 12, 2011 01:17

++ Found breakpoint; restoring connection ++

++ Warning: MemoMax corruption detected. Cleaning... ++

++ Connection finalized ++

I stir, groan and blink.

“Ugh... where in the Computer’s name am I?” I feel my arm. “Nice, I’m all healed up. What exactly happened to me back there? I think I must have gone a little crazy, perhaps from spontaneous temporary mental breakdown stemming from unusually extreme achluophobia... Where’s Nukabot?”

Then I notice that I’m being dragged along by IntSec. “Er... why am I being dragged along by Internal Security?”⁶⁷⁵

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 12, 2011 02:06

I gingerly wait for Jam to reconnect with the team and the action to continue

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 12, 2011 02:43

I open my eyes, groan, and try to get up.

“Hello, I’m King-R” I hold out my hand weakly, then withdraw it, thinking of all the germs I should be avoiding.

“I’m supposed to be your new Hygiene officer. I think...”

I don’t look so sure, and stop to ponder this for a moment.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 12, 2011 03:04

“Huh... I hope that’s not anyone dangerous...”

⁶⁷⁵ SPEEDER: (OOC: Speeder enters in pissed off mode after he wrote a turn yesterday for 10 minutes to the point of irritating his girlfriend, and see that it failed to send.

Since his girlfriend wants to get pissed again he will attend to her and not play this turn, he will post tomorrow)

“Let’s back away a bit, Nukabot.”

written by Cryoburner on Dec 12, 2011 12:29

I look around at where we are waiting... and wait.

written by Jam on Dec 12, 2011 13:32

“Oh, so that’s why you knew about Team Epsilon... I was wondering about that...”

I reach out to shake his hand, then look confused as he suddenly withdraws it...

“Uh, er, okay then... Well... Let’s get going!”

I turn, and lead the way back to the rest of the team.

written by Speeder on Dec 12, 2011 15:47

I look at everyone for a while, then I look at myself, then I check my revolver.

I then get slugs and replace the spent ones in the weapon.

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 12, 2011 16:15

I follow Jam-R, looking around at my surroundings, hoping they won’t be too gruesome for my squeamish self.⁶⁷⁶

written by Gligar on Dec 12, 2011 17:18⁶⁷⁷

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, Entryway, under Central Subsector

Ah, Mick-R is awake!

He seems at a loss as to what happened. He guesses that he might have flipped out due to “achluophobia”... why can’t he just say “fear of the dark” like everyone else?

How does he even know that word, anyway? It’s not exactly a RED Clearance word.

The goons seem to have noticed, as well. “Shut up!” one of them snarls. “You’re being brought in for treason!”

Meanwhile, Cryo is looking around at the entryway. The entryway is INFRARED for the most part... though the exit doors are RED. That’s fine, though. He’s being accompanied by clones of a higher clearance, after all.

In the entryway itself, he notices some chairs and tables (bolted to the floor), on which are some leaflets... things such as “Cloning and You: The Facts”, “The Troubleshooter Times” (three editions out of date), and “The Daily Briefing”, along with some propaganda posters that he doesn’t get much of a chance to look at, because the goons are on the move.

Outside Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

It would be wrong to call this space a corridor... because it isn’t. It is the entryway to the Interactive Corridor Experience, which seems to be a big empty space, mostly

⁶⁷⁶ GRANPIRE VIKING MAN: (OOC: it is OK to post twice, right?)

⁶⁷⁷ Gligar: (OOC: Yes, it’s fine.

Also, may I suggest to Speeder that he write up his posts in a text editor or something before trying to submit them? At least that way, you can hit “save” and come back to it later if you need to. 😊) consisting of a big empty shaft stretching down pretty far, further than Cryo can see. Across the walls of this chasm are what seems to be lighted spaces, and actual lights. Most of the lights seem to be off, though.

There are also several guided tiles waiting for them. Each looks to be big enough for two clones to stand comfortably. The goons begin to file onto the tiles. It ends up with Mick-R being yanked onto one tile by one goon, two more tiles with two goons each, and the final goon on a fourth. He beckons for Cryo to join him.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango explains that there's something nagging at him. He doesn't know what it is, but it's making him uneasy.

"That feeling that you don't belong, right?" John-R asks. "The feeling that you should be somewhere else? With other people?"

Lift hall, X level, Eta Subsector

Azir-R waits for Jam-Y to return.

Speed-Y checks his "revolver", and reloads.

L4-O has Nukabot back away from the lift. He hopes that it isn't anyone suspicious.

Well, whoever it is, the lift seems to have stopped.

Hygiene station, X level, Eta Subsector

King-R manages to get up again, and introduces himself to Jam-Y. He says that he isn't sure, but he's supposed to be the team's new Hygiene Officer.

But what about Mick-R?

No matter. Jam-Y relaxes a little - it explains why King-R knows about Team Epsilon - and goes to shake King-R's outstretched hand, but King-R withdraws it. Apparently, he's frightened of germs or something. Or maybe he's just frightened.

Jam-Y rebounds and suggests that they rejoin the team. He leads King-R out of the hygiene station.

Corridors, X level, Eta Subsector

Of course, the way to the lift hall involves going past the mound of corpses... which are now being cleaned up by scrubots, who are using their cleaning fluid to dissolve them...

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 12, 2011 17:24

Catching a small glimpse of the scrubots, I close my eyes and sprint past the corpses, plugging my nose and hoping I don't trip over any bodies.

written by Malkom on Dec 12, 2011 18:32

I frown. "Treason? What treason... you mean I did something treasonous while I was, er, crazy?" I try to think. "I do remember feeling quite... affectionate... towards you IntSec guards... actually, I may have tried to hug one of you." I look uncertain and disgusted at the same time. "Does that count as treason?"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 12, 2011 19:37

I continue watching the area of the lift. Cautiously!

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 12, 2011 20:08

I do the same.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 12, 2011 21:12

I hop onto the tile.

"Say, you think we should go back and grab some of those pamphlets? They wouldn't put them there if taking them wasn't mandatory, would they?"

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 12, 2011 21:22

"Somewhere else... Though I haven't seen anything quite like that."

written by Gligar on Dec 12, 2011 21:53

Corridors, X level, Eta Subsector

As soon as he spots the dissolving corpses, King-R squeezes his eyes shut and runs past them.

Jam-Y follows along behind, since he's more used to the sight.

Lift hall, X level, Eta Subsector

The two find themselves at the lift hall not long after. King-R is still shaking a little.

As far as the rest of the team is concerned, a frightened-looking RED clone just ran into the lift hall, followed by Jam-Y.

One of the ORANGE Power Services clones spots him and says, "Oh, King-R! Finally extracted yourself from the hygiene station, I see?"

The lift is still stopped at... wherever it is. The level indicator has gone blank.

Interactive Corridor Experience, below Central Subsector

Cryo hops onto the indicated tile. The group of tiles begins to move off, suspended by an artificial cloud of [REDACTED].

Cryo mentions the pamphlets to the goon, who thinks for a moment. "But we're already on our way," he counters. "By the time we got the tile to reverse, I might have forgotten about your reward."

The goon then pulls out his Com 1. He speaks into it. "Need one unit to investigate pamphlets at the in cloning station."

Over on another tile, Mick-R wonders what he did... he must have done something, right? He seems to recall something about one of the goons... did he hug him? Is that treason?

The goon just yells at him to shut up again.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango tells John-R that he's right, though he doesn't really know anywhere like that.

"Well, there aren't too many places like that," the mutant replies. "Except, maybe, the Underplex... or Outside. But those are both forbidden. You know that."

written by Malkom on Dec 12, 2011 21:55

"That's not very polite. But wow, this technology! Floating tiles! I heard they'd been trying for that for, like, ages! Wowzers! I wonder if the negated type-K force-field idea worked out..."

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 12, 2011 22:25

I attempt to regain my composure and stare at the lift for a few seconds.

Disinterested, I then attempt to check whether friend computer gave me any equipment when I was made a troubleshooter.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 12, 2011 23:27

"Blank? What's that mean?"

I get a little more nervous.

Then I realize I'm armed with a heavy weapon and calm down a little.

written by Gligar on Dec 13, 2011 00:28Interactive Corridor Experience, below Central Subsector

Mick-R thinks that the goons are not being very polite. But he loses interest in that, and becomes interested in the guided tiles. They're floating! How cool! He fawns over the technology involved, and wonders if some high-clearance project panned out. This earns him a slap across the face by the goon.

The tiles begin to float down and slightly towards the pit wall.

Lift hall, X level, Iota Subsector

King-R tries to calm down. He looks at the lift door for a moment.

But he loses interest, and checks his equipment. He finds that he has a shiny new laser pistol, complete with a full barrel.

L4-O isn't sure what the blank level indicator means, and gets nervous. But it passes when he remembers his weapons.

As everyone contemplates, the lift doors open.

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 13, 2011 00:52

Noticing the wariness of the other team members, my hand tenses on my newly discovered laser pistol.

I hope this won't lead to more stickiness,

written by Cryoburner on Dec 13, 2011 01:07

"Wow! These are great. Is this like a race? I wonder if they can go faster..."

I kneel down and examine the tile more closely. I look over its edge, and if reasonably safely possible peek at the underside. If it doesn't seem reasonably safely possible, I see if I can catch sight of the underside of another tile.

written by Malkom on Dec 13, 2011 02:15

I, too, attempt to look at the undersides of the tiles, ignoring the goons. Once I'm finished, I ask them, "How did I get here anyway, and what exactly have I done?"

written by Speeder on Dec 13, 2011 03:21

I look inside the lift before going anywhere near inside it... You know, the doors just opened, maybe the lift is missing the floor, and we all know what happen when you fall on a lift shaft, don't we?

written by Jam on Dec 13, 2011 03:45

"Oh, this clone here is King-R... He says he's going to be our new Hygiene Officer! Isn't that good news guys? But, I wonder what happened to Mick-R..."

I look to Speed-Y and Lucas-R

"You guys worked with Cloning Services, right? Any idea where Mick-R would have recloned at?"

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 13, 2011 05:19

"I do know that much."

I begin staring down at the ground.

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 13, 2011 14:07

"Really, a competent non-treasonous hygiene officer? I never thought I'd see the day. Excellent to meet you, good sir."

"As for Mick, I'd rather just kind of forget about him, remember, his unhappiness spreads like an airborne virus. Just thinking about him might reduce your mood to potentially treasonous levels."

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 13, 2011 14:36

At Azir's greeting, I nod to him, mumble a greeting, and at his words about Mick, I paste I smile on my face.

Also, I try not to think about said clone, and keep looking intently at the opening lift door.

written by Speeder on Dec 13, 2011 16:16

"King I would greet you better, but I have a lift to look inside."

written by Gligar on Dec 13, 2011 18:41Lift hall, X level, Iota Subsector

King-R looks a little tense. See how he has his hand in his laser pistol pocket? He must be reading everyone else's reactions to the lift or something...

Speed-Y is not too sure about the lift. Maybe the doors simply opened onto an open shaft or something? He has a look.

There is definitely a lift there.

Jam-Y introduces King-R to the rest of the team, and mentions that he is a Hygiene Officer. He still wonders about Mick-R, though.

He turns to Speed-Y and Lucas-R. Perhaps they have some idea where he may have recloned?

Lucas-R thinks. "It could be anywhere, sir," he replies. "It's usually close to the point of death, but it really depends on MemoMax load and other things I'm not cleared to know about."

Azir-R acts surprised at the thought of a loyal Hygiene Officer - then again, he only has the one to compare King-R with - and greets King-R.

He then reminds everyone about Mick-R's contagious unhappiness. It's probably better is everyone forgot about him.

King-R nods to Azir-R and tries not to think about Mick-R. Of course, when someone tells you not to think about something, what are you going to be thinking about?

Speed-Y would greet King-R better, but he's too preoccupied with the lift. It seems to be intact.

Interactive Corridor Experience, below Central Subsector

Cryo wonders what is below the tile. He tries to look at the unders- woah! That is not a good idea. That artificial cloud is doing something strange. Putting your head near it causes everything to go crazy for a moment.

Mick-R discovers the same thing.

However, Cryo can see the underside of another tile, floating up nearby. There's some kind of... something in the centre of its cloud, but he can't really make it out.

Mick-R asks how he got here and what he apparently did.

"From what I see," his goon replies, "you recloned and attempted to forge your forms by trying to force another clone to enter a tongueprint. And then there's your feedback.... And then, you resisted arrest while trying to gain access to high-clearance weapons. Now be quiet.."

The tiles slow, and come to rest adjacent to a landing platform.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango says he's aware of that, and starts looking at his feet.

"So what's the problem?" John-R asks. "You aren't seriously considering leaving the Complex, are you? You don't know what's out there! There might be nothing out there!"

By now, Speed-Y is facepalming.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 13, 2011 21:38

"There might be. There might."

I sigh.

"Besides, I don't quite think that people want me here."

written by Jam on Dec 13, 2011 22:40

I cautiously enter the lift.

"Well, I know a way to find Mick-R!The question is, do I really want to know?"

I open a B3, and start to drink it.

written by Speeder on Dec 13, 2011 22:43

I facepalm as Jam mentions Mick.

Then I remain in the nukabot, since I will get in the lift as it drives into it.

"I do not think we want to know where that person is... And if someone assigned a Hygiene Officer to us, it must mean that Mick is already demoted from that position at least... Maybe when we find him again, he will be wearing a black jumpsuit."

written by Gligar on Dec 14, 2011 00:08

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango claims that they might be something Outside...or in the Underplex... or whatever.

He adds that he isn't sure people want him around.

"Perhaps you did something to anger someone?" John-R suggests. "After all, you're INFRARED, aren't you? You were RED before. You must have done something..."

John-R pauses. "Perhaps you could do something else to counter it?"

Lift hall, X Level, Eta Subsector

Jam-Y cautiously enters the lift.

The lift decides to not do anything in response.

Jam-Y mentions that he knows a way to find Mick-R (which elicits a facepalm from Speed-Y). But he wonders if he even wants to know... To take his mind on it, he takes out a B3 and drinks it.

Speed-Y remains where he is. After all, Nukabot will enter, and he's on the bot. He adds that he's not sure they want to know either. And if they've been assigned another Hygiene Officer, that might mean that Mick-R won't be returning. Perhaps he'll be wearing black when they next find him.

One of the Power Services clones asks, "So... how are we all going to fit in there? How about we take another lift down?"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 14, 2011 00:53

"That might work, but someone armed should stay with you guys. We don't want you to die again, after all..."

"I volunteer. I'll take my place back on Nukabot when we meet back up."

I get off Nukabot, armed with my laser blaster, and join the Power Services group.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 14, 2011 01:30

"Counter? I think I could hardly counter that.

Whatever it was..."

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 14, 2011 02:22

I enter the lift and try to clean off Jam-Y's can of B3.

"After a battle like that, you wouldn't want to swallow something nasty!"

Hopefully, the cleaning fluid is safe for consumption.⁶⁷⁸

written by Jam on Dec 14, 2011 02:33

I decide to follow L4-O, and walk back out of the lift.

"I bet they'll be more shooting if I go with you guys! Shooting is FUN, especially if it's commie mutant traitors that are being shot!"

written by Cryoburner on Dec 14, 2011 04:25

I hop upon the landing, and see what exiting things there are to examine there. 🐱

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 14, 2011 13:55

I will stay on the lift with whoever chooses to stay. If no one does, I'll hop off.

written by 4616599 on Dec 14, 2011 15:33

"I think Nukabot also needs some escort. I'll continue on it."

written by Gligar on Dec 14, 2011 17:32

Lift hall, X Level, Eta Subsector

L4-O agrees that splitting up might work, but he wants there to be someone armed with them, just in case. Himself, for example.

He dismounts from Nukabot to join them.

King-R enters Nukabot's lift... and tries to clean Jam-Y's can of B3, stating that he doesn't want Jam-Y to swallow anything nasty.

Problem is, he doesn't dropped his supplies when he fainted, back in the hygiene station. And he doesn't seem to have noticed the box of supplies, clearly marked HYGIENE OFFICER, on Nukabot... Okay, they technically belong to Mick-R, but he's a hygiene officer as well...

⁶⁷⁸ GRANPIRE VIKING MAN: (OOO: I failed to realise that I may not be carrying the bottle of cleaning fluid still, after I became unconscious... 😊 I could have grabbed it with my keen hygiene-officer instincts?)

Jam-Y ignores him, and follows L4-O to join the Power Services team. He thinks that there might be shooting in that team's future, and that's FUN.

Azir-R looks like he wants to stay.

Joris-R mentions that he will also stay. Nukabot needs guarding, he says.

"Have fun, citizens," Nukabot says, before the doors close.

The YELLOW Power Services clone presses another call button.

Interactive Corridor Experience - Gamma Subsector, H Level landing

Cryo hops - literally - onto the landing, and looks around for things to examine.

As it happens, there is only an open door, through which the goons pass, dragging Mixk-R along with them.

Cryo's goon steps onto the landing behind him. "You, too. Let's go."

Neeting Hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango says that he isn't sure that whatever he did could ever be countered.

"How do you know?" John-R asks. "Because you were demoted? It's not like it's hard to get back to RED Clearance. You should know that. Just do something to make The Computer trust you again. I mean, there are always traitors out there. There are always clones doing suspicious things. Do you know of any?"

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 14, 2011 18:10

"Hello, Nukabot" I say awkwardly.

"I don't think we've been introduced. I'm King-R"

I try to smile.

Perhaps going down first wasn't such a good idea?

written by Speeder on Dec 14, 2011 18:27

"AWESOME!"

I look happy.

"I mean... sorry for the yell... Is that you are the first person that treats Nukabot properly, other people or were afraid of him, or hated him, or ignored him, and so on... Cryo and... the guy I cannot remember, come to my mind."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 14, 2011 18:56

I keep guard, keeping a close eye on the entrances to the lift hall. I keep my weapon ready to shoot, if need be!

written by Cryoburner on Dec 14, 2011 19:32

I go!

And examine whatever's beyond the door!

written by Malkom on Dec 14, 2011 20:07

I look confused. "Tongueprint? Clone? What are you talking about? I haven't been anywhere near a cloning station!" I peer at the guards for a moment. "I don't think you were the guards in the corridor anyway, the numbers are different. What in the Computer's name is going on here? Why would I need to fill out clone forms since I haven't been cloned yet?!"

written by Gligar on Dec 14, 2011 21:18

A lift, Eta Subsector

Somewhat awkwardly, King-R introduces himself to Nukabot. I suspect he isn't familiar with bots who aren't out to kill him or something

Needless to say, Nukabot is not out to kill him. It simply says, "At your service, citizen. Can someone press the button for A Level?"

Speed-Y is extremely happy at King-R's treatment of Nukabot. As he explains, most clones are afraid of it, or ignore it, or simply hate it. Cryo and... that other clone he can't quite remember... come to mind.

Lift hall, X level, Eta Subsector

L4-O looks around for signs of trouble. His gaze lingers on the lift hall's exit, waiting for anything that needs shooting.

The lift arrives without incident.

Corridor, H Level, Gamma Subsector

The goons, Mick-R, and Cryo head down the corridor. Cryo, of course, is inspecting everything he can see, including the hairline crack near the door, next to the clearance stripe (RED, but he's being accompanied, so that's okay).

Mick-R is dragged through a door, even as he protests that he doesn't know what's happening, and that he hasn't been re-cloned at all. "So how are you on your fourth clone?" one goon wants to know.

Cryo is led further down the corridor, into another room. There's a nice chair there.

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 14, 2011 21:57

I hit the button for A level, as instructed.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 14, 2011 21:59

"I don't know."

written by Jam on Dec 14, 2011 22:43

If there's no clone inside the lift, I walk inside and wait for the others.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 15, 2011 00:46

"Wow, that's a nice chair!"

I approach the chair, and examine it, but don't sit in it yet, in case it is beyond my clearance, or has someone else sitting in it already, or is on fire. I suppose examining it will answer such questions. I make sure to examine its underside as well, unless I determine it to be on fire, of course.

written by Gligar on Dec 15, 2011 01:19

A lift, Eta Subsector

Azir-R hits the button. Going down!

Lift hall, X level, Eta Subsector

Jam-Y looks into the other lift. It's empty. But it's at least there.

He enters the lift.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango says he doesn't know.

"Are you sure?" John-R asks. "Why don't you look again? Perhaps you saw something, but didn't consciously notice it."

On the vidscreen, a clone appears: the technician from before. "Like I said, look again."

Interview room, H level, Gamma Subsector

On noticing the chair, Cryo naturally tries to examine it. He notes that it's nice and black, not occupied, and not on fire. There is no way to examine the underside, since it's not possible to lift the thing to look at the base. Why? It's bolted to the floor.

Another clone enters behind him. "You're Cryo-BRN, right?"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 15, 2011 01:22

I join Jam-Y on the lift. I take a kind of guard-like position in the lift. If that's even possible.

written by Jam on Dec 15, 2011 02:13

"Okay!"

I wait for everyclone to enter the lift, and for someone to press the button for whatever floor we were going to...

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 15, 2011 02:20

I see if there's something in Nukabot's box of hygiene supplies to clean my teeth with. I can't remember the last time I cleaned them(I can't remember much of anything), and I need to do something to keep busy.

written by Malkom on Dec 15, 2011 03:49

I look even more confused. "Fourth clone? Computer take it, has there been some kind of time fissure or something like in those cheesy vidshows? I'm my first clone, aren't I? I was taken out of a dark corridor for... uh... hugging IntSec, I guess..."

I trail off as I notice the stern expressions of the guards. "Maybe I'm just mentally unstable."

written by Gligar on Dec 15, 2011 17:24

Another lift, Eta Subsector

L4-O joins Jam-Y on the lift, and waits for everyone else. He take up a position by the doors.

Jam-Y also waits, as the Power Services group file on board. One of them presses the button for A Level, and the lift begins to descend.

A lift, Eta Subsector

King-R notices the box of hygiene supplies at last. Looking through it, he finds a Hygiene Officer MBD Badge; a Troubleshooter helmet; RED reflec; an Authorisation to Issue Personal Hygiene Tests Form; an Authorisation to Organise an Emergency Cleaning Crew form; a Skin Core Sampler; ten Emergency Sanitation Kits; two 300ml bottles of MintFresh cleaning fluid; and several scrubbing brushes. It looks like someone went through there already and took something out.

He takes one of the Emergency Hygiene Kits, opens it, and starts cleaning his teeth. He isn't sure if he already did so todaycycle, and he might as well do something.

Interrogation room, H level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R continues to claim that he is still his Prime even as he is shoved into a chair. He wonders if there is any sort of weird time-related stuff going on.

"For the last time, SHUT UP!" one goon - right next to his ear - yells at him. Right before whacking him a few times in the head with his truncheon.

The last thing Mick-R sees before he passes out is another goon carrying a helmet covered in all sorts of spikes and needles.

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 15, 2011 17:53

I watch as our new Hygiene Officer becomes acquainted to his equipment.. And then brushes his teeth.

"Now that's taking the initiative.. I like that!"

I pull a PPSA Card out of my stack and see what it says, if it sounds fun I may have King and the other's run through it while we wait for the lift to descend and the rest of the team to meet up. Nothing passes the time like a fun activity!

written by Malkom on Dec 15, 2011 20:06

++ Connection error: unable to retain mental control ++

++ Received command: mmx -sm 0x44624EA5E5610F4 ++

++ Three missing MemoMax fragments found [3x1D, 3x1E, 3x1G] ++

++ Received command: mmx -u 0x44624EA5E5610F4 3x1D 3x1E 3x1G ++

++ Overriding MemoMax controls ++

++ Uploading memory fragments: 6% ++^{679 680}

written by Lightning4 on Dec 15, 2011 20:59

Since it's been a little while since my last semi-mandatory loyal tune whistling, I commence with one. Maybe something related to Algae Chips.

written by Gligar on Dec 15, 2011 22:03

Another lift, Eta Subsector

As the lift descends, L4-O begins whistling a tune... I think that's one of the algae chips jingles.

A lift, Eta Subsector

Azir-R likes King-R's initiative, and offers encouragement.

He pulls out a PPSA card and reads it. What he finds makes him smile: this card contains a bunch of trivia questions for Mandatory Team Troubleshooter! And it looks like they're from fairly recent episodes, as well.

Interrogation room, H level, Gamma Subsector

The helmet has been crammed onto Mick-R's inert head, and his body is twitching violently...

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

A monitor lights up with a message:

WARNING

MemoMax liveware overwrite detected for clone [Mick-R-NRK-4]

Running contingency protocols...

Overwrite aborted. Probability of damage to clone: 95%

Recommend MemoMax repatterning at next termination.⁶⁸¹

written by Malkom on Dec 15, 2011 22:26

++ Warning: unauthorized us^C

Memory restoration process failed: local-to-clone upload process killed by unauthorized user.

* RUN 0:46:khackrz

Disconnecting unauthorized user "ALPHA05215"... done.

Disconnecting unauthorized user "ALPHA.CLN.545"... done.

Closing ports... done.⁶⁸²

⁶⁷⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: No need.)

⁶⁸⁰ MALKOM: (OOC: cackle)

⁶⁸¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: 🤪)

⁶⁸² MALKOM: (ooc: lack of facial expression)

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 16, 2011 00:15

"Well guys, while we're waiting, lets play a little game shall we. It'll help us all get acquainted with each other, since a few of us in the lift right now are new to the team."

I look to King. "I assume we are all well versed in Mandatory Team Troubleshooter knowledge!"

I begin to play trivia with the members of the team on the lift.

written by Gligar on Dec 16, 2011 01:11

A lift, Eta Subsector

Azir-R announces that they'll be playing a trivia game. He hopes everyone's been paying attention to Mandatory Team Troubleshooter!

First question: What was the name of the first episode of this season?⁶⁸³

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 16, 2011 03:06

I put on the Hygiene officer MBD badge, with the hope that there isn't a problem with it not being originally mine.

I look worried and think for a moment.

"Could it be... 'My Brother is a Mutant!?'?"

written by Speeder on Dec 16, 2011 05:06

"No, I think it was... the death of Din-G-VEZ"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 16, 2011 05:17

I try to whistle and yawn at the same time, and fail horribly.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 16, 2011 05:45

"Oh, hello! You have a very nice chair here. And it's not on fire."

"Yes, at least that's what my ME Card says. It's a fine ME Card. You really should see it..."

I begin searching my pockets for my ME Card.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 16, 2011 06:59

I can't help but look up at the vidscreen, and observe.

"...That's..."

I try to piece who that technician is.

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 16, 2011 13:15

"Come on guys, it was 'T is for Traitor'. Speedy you are thinking of last year's finale."

written by Gligar on Dec 16, 2011 16:23

A lift, Eta Subsector

King-R takes the MBD badge and puts it on. He tries to think of the answer to Azir-R's question... was it My Brother is a Mutant?

Speed-Y disagrees, saying that it was The Death of Din-G-VEZ.

Azir-R says that it was neither. It was, in fact, T for Traitor. Din-G-VEZ was last yearcycle's finale.

John-R notices King-R dipping into the equipment, and tells him, "Don't forget your reflec and helmet. Oh, and your camera," he adds, holding up a camera.

The lift continues to descend. There are still plenty of questions on that card... I'm sure that your Happiness Officer will keep you occupied 😊

Another lift, Eta Subsector

L4-O tries to whistle and yawn at the same time, and fails miserably.

The lift suddenly shudders and comes to a halt.

Interview Room, H level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo turns to look at the newcomer, who has one of those plastered-on grins, and a nametag which reads, Hello, my name is Jeremy-Y-GPL-3, and I'm with CPU!.

He says that the chair is very nice, and not on fire. "I'm glad to hear it," the clone replies. "Please, sit down."

Cryo admits to his name... or at least, he admits that his ME Card says that that is his name. He says that the clone should see it, and hunts around for it. "I already have it," the clone replies, "and I agree, it is a very nice card. But you won't be needing it any more, since you are to be promoted!"

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango looks at the screen. It's showing the technician who installed those "emergency lights" in the dormitory, in the middle of doing just that. On the vidscreen, the odd box he was carrying is clearly visible.

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 16, 2011 18:38

I put on the reflec and helmet.

"Thank you, John-R, but I didn't see a camera in that equipment."

I check again.

"What's the next question, Azir-R?"

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 16, 2011 20:44

I get to the next question.

"In the episode 'vatscrap' the team stops a group of commies from adding what unusual ingredient into the food vats?"

written by Cryoburner on Dec 16, 2011 21:19

"Wow! Do I get to keep the chair?"

I sit down in the nice chair, and continue examining Jeremy-Y's name tag. The parts other than the words, of course.

⁶⁸³ GLIGAR: (OOC: Feel free to come up with your own references here 😊)

written by Gligar on Dec 16, 2011 21:40

A lift, Eta Subsector

King-R puts on the helmet and reflects, and thanks John-R. But he didn't see a camera there... He looks in the box again. John-R says, "No, I mean this camera. Clip it to your helmet. I've already issued them to the others."

King-R asks about the next question. Azir-R asks about the episode Vatscrap, wherein communists were trying to add a certain ingredient to the food vats. He wants to know what the ingredient is.

John-R appears to think. "Er, if I recall, that was... meganoxin, right?"

Lucas-R looks confused. "That's a combat drug," John-R tells him.

The lift keeps going.

Interview room, H level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo sits, and asks if he can keep the chair. "Unfortunately, that one's bolted to the floor. But you never know, there may be a chair in this for you!

"Anyway, you've been brought here because you're being promoted to Security Clearance RED, with all the duties and privileges associated with it. I see from your record that you were assigned to CPU, which is why I'm here. I'll be your supervisor from now on. I've got your new ME Card here."

While Jeremy-Y was saying that, Cryo(-R) had another look at that nametag. It's YELLOW, as befits a YELLOW Clearance citizen.

Interrogation room, H level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R opens his eyes. He isn't sure why he's here, or... well, anything past being assigned to JHT Sector a weekcycle ago. He vaguely remembers dying a bunch of times, but that's it.

written by Malkom on Dec 16, 2011 21:52

I look around, feel something on my head, panic, and try to push it off my head.

written by Speeder on Dec 16, 2011 22:42

"Of course, it was radioactive propaganda flyers!"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 16, 2011 23:23

"Huh. We're here already."

I get off the lift and look around. Once noticing the rest of the group isn't here yet, I check to make sure this is indeed A level.

written by Jam on Dec 16, 2011 23:36

"That was fast..."

Feeling suspicious, I aim my laser pistol toward the exit of the lift, and slowly walk out...

written by Gligar on Dec 17, 2011 01:48

Interrogation room, H level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R looks around. The room is RED Clearance, and there's an IntSec goon looking at him. Seeing him look around, the goon remarks, "Well, that was fast. You weren't supposed to wake up for another thirty minutecycles."

Mick-R realises that he's still wearing the helmet-thing, and tries to take it off. But apparently, the thing still has needles buried into his head. The goon tells him, "That'll come off when we know that we're done. Whenever that is, heh heh heh..."

A lift, Eta Subsector

Speed-Y states that it has to be radioactive propaganda flyers.

The lift continues to descend.

Another lift, Eta Subsector

L4-O remarks that they're there already. He seems to have expected it to take longer.

Apparently, so did Jam-Y.

Lift hall, F Level, Eta Subsector

Their suspicions are proved true when they exit, to be greeted by laser fire from two directions. It's a GREEN lift hall, but the shooters apparently do not care, considering that they seem to be using ORANGE lasers.

written by Speeder on Dec 17, 2011 02:03

"RETURN FIRE! SOMEONE CLOSE THE LIFT DOORS FFAAST!"

I try to aim to the point of origin of the orange lasers with the YELLOW gun and shoot back.

I see if I can reach the elevator controls myself, if I can, I press the "close doors" button, then the A level button, and then the "close doors" button again, if not...

Well, I just keep shooting.

written by Jam on Dec 17, 2011 02:18⁶⁸⁴

"RETURN FIRE! SOMEONE CLOSE THE LIFT DOORS FFAAST!"

I try to aim to the point of origin of the orange lasers with the YELLOW gun and shoot back.

I see if I can reach the elevator controls myself, if I can, I press the "close doors" button, then the A level button, and then the "close doors" button again, if not...

Well, I just keep shooting.⁶⁸⁵

⁶⁸⁴ JAM: (ooc: Er, you're not even on our lift, Speed... But, nice post... Mind if I borrow it? 😊)

⁶⁸⁵ SPEEDER: (ooc: I confused stuff... anyway, you can borrow it XD I will attend to the matters on my own lift!)

written by Speeder on Dec 17, 2011 02:57⁶⁸⁶

“So, I am correct? Wait... you did not said who was correct last time either!”

written by Lightning4 on Dec 17, 2011 05:13

I dash back into the lift and take cover inside of it.

I try to return fire as long as possible until the lift starts moving again.

“Blast it! I knew something was up...”

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 17, 2011 11:20

I’m silent, but can’t quite piece things together.

“You know, that technician was really doing a service, replacing lights. I suppose with an outage like that, action like that would be necessary...”

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 17, 2011 14:47

“It was neither of you, this time however, you are correct Speedy.”

I recall (and relay) in vivid detail how they assumed ingesting the propaganda would cause the information to reach the brains of citizens faster, and radiation was an unexpected twist.

written by Gligar on Dec 17, 2011 17:17

Lift hall, F level, Eta Subsector (and the Power Services lift)

Woah... I’m getting a little interference on the feeds here... I got this feed twice for a moment. But anyway.

Jam-Y orders that they return fire and fall back. As he does, he shoots back at... whoever it is. A yell from the shadows suggests that he hit someone.

Then he falls back and starts mashing lift buttons.

L4-O follows him, and starts shooting. There is another yell from the shadows.

He is still shooting as the doors close.

A last-second laser shot makes it through the doors and hits L4-O in the left eye, which bursts as its liquids begin to boil.

Finally, the lift starts to descend.

Team Epsilon’s lift, Eta Subsector

Speed-Y wants to know if he got it right. And did he forget to say which was the correct answer last time?

Azir-R points out that last time, neither of them got it. This time, Speed-Y got the right answer. He continues, relaying in detail the exact motives of the communists: they thought that by making people eat the propaganda, they’d remember it better. The radiation was co-incidental.

The lift continues to descend. Perhaps there is time for one more question?

⁶⁸⁶ SPEEDER: (I think the lifts should be Lift A and Lift B XD so I do not confuse A Lift and A (nother) Lift)

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango can’t piece it together. Surely the tech was doing a service by installing emergency lighting? Wouldn’t it be needed with the lights out?

“Well, yes,” John-R replies. “But did you ever hear of Tech Services issuing open-flame emergency lighting? Or... maybe it’s some... other group.

“But that’s not all. What about that box that he’s carrying? It doesn’t look very Tech Services-y, does it?”

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 17, 2011 17:02

“Darn those commies! I should have remembered that they would do something so stupid and traitorous.”

I put on the camera and thank John-R.

Then I ponder the absurdity of my statement, and of commies in general.

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 17, 2011 18:43

“Well, got another here.”

“What was the name of the episode where the team met a mutant with the unique power to change the color of jumpsuits.. causing much confusion”

written by Jam on Dec 17, 2011 18:52

“Whew... That was close... I wonder who those clo—huh?! L4-O?!!”

I run over to L4-O, and notice his eye seems to have exploded...

“Vatcrap! What happened?!”

I check if he’s still alive. If he is, I take out a first aid kit and try to stop his eye from bleeding.

written by Malkom on Dec 17, 2011 19:43

I stop trying to shove the helmet off and try to remember if I’m a mutant or not.

written by Gligar on Dec 17, 2011 21:36

Team Epsilon’s lift, Eta Subsector

King-R chides the commies for doing something like that. He takes the camera, thanking John-R, and clips it to his helmet.

Azir-R announces his third question: he asks about the name of an episode where the team met a mutant who could change the colour of jumpsuits. (Sounds like Chromativariation to me.)

The lift continues to descend. Soon, it stops.

Power Services lift

Jam-Y comments on how close that was, before noticing that L4-O has been shot.

He rushes over and checks if L4-O’s still alive. He seems to be... but his situation is serious, and his eye is completely ruined. As the lift continues down, Jam-Y tries to help L4-O with his first aid kits. He's able to stop the bleeding.

[827]

Interrogation room, H level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R relaxes... or, at least, he stops trying to escape. he tries to remember... is he a mutant or something?

Nothing comes to mind, and nothing seems to be happening when he concentrates... so he's probably not a mutant.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 17, 2011 22:03

I try to get back to reality.

Wait. Why am I on the floor? And why is my vision not as good?

written by Malkom on Dec 17, 2011 22:21

I repeat the words 'Heh, heh, heh' in my head while glancing around for any status monitors that might be reflecting my thoughts. I then try a B3 jingle.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 17, 2011 22:51

"...My sense of judgement comes from the service, not the means. Team Epsilon wasn't at all that successful in that endeavour, was it?

This on the other hand, actually seems to make sense, considering it's only had a few daycycles to do something. This may just merely be something in which this is required..."

I am certain that this is the case.

written by Jam on Dec 18, 2011 00:03

I continue patching up L4-O's eye...

written by Gligar on Dec 18, 2011 01:37

Power Services Lift, Eta Subsector

L4-O comes to his senses. He seems confused as to why he's on the floor with poor vision.

Then the pain from his missing left eye hits him.

Jam-Y continues to try to patch him up, but there's really not much more he can do.

The lift continues to descend.

Interrogation room, H level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R looks around, seeing if he can manipulate any brain sensors or anything that might be visible. However, if there are any, they are not in sight.

A sudden pain from his head indicates that the needles and such are retracting.

The goon tells him, "Looks like you're done. Now, you have a mission to attend to, don't you?"

Interview room, H level, Gamma Subsector

It seems that Jeremy-Y has been talking to Cryo-R about his new responsibilities. But Cryo may or may not have been listening, seeing as he's trying to inspect Jeremy-Y's nametag reeeeeeeeeeeeeeeeealy closely without leaving his chair.

"...Hey, Cryo-R, are you listening?" Jeremy-Y asks. "You'll have the opportunity to inspect things later. For now, we need to get you sorted."

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Mango is still adamant that he sees nothing wrong. He values service over method... something which he claims that Team Epsilon lacked.

"Service... you mean the ability to do the job? Like we actually DID?"

Mango seems to be ignoring him, confident that he is right.

"Oh... fine. Get lost in the Underplex or something then, for all I care. Because in your current state, you won't be able to get Outside. If you're still hoping to do that, I suggest you get yourself promoted. Because if you hadn't noticed, there are no exits around here."

written by Cryoburner on Dec 18, 2011 01:33

"That's swell! I've always wanted to be security clearance red! You're the best supervisor ever!"

I take any new ME Card offered to me, and examine it.

written by Speeder on Dec 18, 2011 01:56

"This I really cannot remember."

Then I smile.

"I am sure this is the correct awnser. The title I think refers to the guy that needed to look at his own jumpsuit to see what clearance he was, and of course, the mutation made this guy a very good traitor puppet, or something like that."

As the lift stops, I look around to see if it is safe, weapon in hand.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 18, 2011 02:58

"..."

I stare, silent, and then frown.

"Fine by me. You shouldn't be here anyway."

I turn, and walk out.

written by Malkom on Dec 18, 2011 03:10

I frown. "Mission? What mission?" As I wait for an answer, I gingerly moisten my lips.

written by Jam on Dec 18, 2011 03:36

"Oh, you're awake... How're you feeling?"

Seeing as L4-O's eye has stopped bleeding, I focus on making some sort of wrapping that will cover the missing eye (unless such a wrapping is already in place).

"You were shot in the eye, L4-O. It's a miracle you're still alive..."

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 18, 2011 04:05

"I know this one!" I yell.

"ROY-G-BIV!"

I then waltz confidently out of the lift, taking a look at my (hopefully safe) surroundings.

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 18, 2011 05:45

"Speedy you are thinking of this mutant's 2nd appearance on the show. Yes King, indeed it was "ROY-G-BIV" named after the mutant clone's designation."

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 18, 2011 05:46

Oh and certainly I put the card away as I see King head out and wheel over to inspect the area outside of the Lift.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 18, 2011 07:58

"Wh-AAAAAAAH! AAAAAAAAH! OWW! AAAAAAAAH!"

I notice my eye is missing and flail a little, screaming.

"BLAST IT ALL!"

I try to calm down a little, getting my actual priorities in line.

"I... don't know if I'm high enough clearance for a replacement. But... I'd look like a holofilm action hero if I had an eyepatch..."

I try to envision such a getup in my head. Or try to, anyway, past the pain. From the missing eye.

written by Speeder on Dec 18, 2011 12:05

"Sure sure... King is awesome! I like you! Unless you become TOO fixated in your job like Cryo, then you will be a problem."

written by Gligar on Dec 18, 2011 17:37

Team Epsilon's Lift, Eta Subsector

Speed-Y isn't sure of the answer to that one. He thinks that the title refers to that clone who needed to look at his jumpsuit to tell him what clearance he was. But that mutation made him a good puppet for treason. Or something.

He has a quick look around outside the lift. Seeing an empty RED lift hall, he relaxes a little.

Lucas-R answers, "Hey, was that Colour-Changing Creep?"

King-R disagrees, suggesting Roy-G-BIV instead, before walking out of the lift.

Azir-R follows them, telling them that King-R was correct. He looks around, and also notices that the lift hall seems free of trouble. It also seems to be on A Level, given the sign next to the lifts.

Speed-Y tells King-R that he is awesome... just as long as he doesn't end up like Cryo (though of course King-R hasn't heard of him) and become too obsessed in his work.

Power Services Lift, Eta Subsector

Meanwhile, in the other lift, Jam-Y asks L4-O how he's feeling, while he attempts to wrap L4-O's eye socket. It's difficult when L4-O is screaming his lungs out. But he perseveres.

L4-O calms down a little. He doesn't think he has the clearance for a replacement eye, but an eyepatch would be cool.

The lift continues to descend.

Interrogation Room, H Level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R inquires as to what his mission is.

"Something to do with Industrial Subsector B... I suggest that you get on over there."

Interview Room, H Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R reacts enthusiastically, stating that he's always wanted to be RED.

Jeremy-Y offers him his new ME Card, which he examines, naturally. It's a very nice Me Card, with his name, ID number, and even a picture. Also present are a smart chip and the "contactless" logo.

"Good," says Jeremy-Y. "Now that has been sorted, we can see about getting you a new jumpsuit."

Meeting hall, C Level, Industrial Subsector B

Mango stares at John-R before turning to leave, stating that John-R shouldn't be here.

"Says the INFRARED clone who entered a RED area..."

Mango heads for the concourse...

Underplex Access Junction 85-08, O Sublevel, Deep Sunsector

...only to find himself deep underground, in the dark. Strangely, he can see just fine.

The guardbot from his previous visit is here. "You have returned," it says.

written by 4616599 on Dec 18, 2011 18:37

I exit the lift.

"I really must watch Mandatory Team Troubleshooter more. Usually I just watch that CPU sitcom on the other channel. But colour altering mutants you say?!..."

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 18, 2011 19:24

"What happened to Cryo?" I ask Speed-Y. "Was he your last hygiene officer? I hope I haven't been too clean..."

written by Speeder on Dec 18, 2011 20:10

"No... He was... I have no idea, our theory is that he was a YELLOW CPU enforcer, and thus he seemingly knows ALL CPU mandates, and check every single object and procedure to see if it follows a CPU mandate... This even during battles, or dieing, or during a fire, and so on..."

written by Gligar on Dec 18, 2011 21:54Lift hall, A level, Eta Subsector Joris-R hops off Nukabot and exits the lift. He really must start watching more Mandatory Team Troubleshooter, he says. Normally, he watches the other channel.

Nukabot decides to follow him out of the lift, taking the rest of the team with it.

King-R looks a little troubled. He inquires about Cryo, wondering is he's being a little too thorough in his duties. Speed-Y assures him that Cryo wasn't the Hygiene Officer, only some CPU clone, possibly some former YELLOW enforcer with knowledge of every possible CPU Mandate. He would often try to examine things - items, procedures, even concepts - to see if they met CPU Mandates or not.

The other lift hasn't arrived quite yet, but it looks like it won't be long.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 18, 2011 22:01

"So I have..."

written by Cryoburner on Dec 19, 2011 00:22

"Wow! I always wanted a jumpsuit!"

I stand and begin stepping in place, ready to step somewhere.

written by Malkom on Dec 19, 2011 01:10

"But... but... but..."

I look around at the goons.

"Why am I here, and who are you guys?"

written by Gligar on Dec 19, 2011 01:13Underplex Access Junction 85-08, O Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango agrees that he is. The guardbot wants to know why.

Interview room, H Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R states that he always wanted a jumpsuit. (Doesn't he already have one? Oh well, it probably makes sense to Cryo, because, well, Cryo.) He then begins walking in place.

"That's good! It shouldn't be too long now..."

A moment later, a jackobot arrives, carrying a box. "Ah! Here we are."

Lift hall, A Level, Eta Subsector

The Power Services lift arrives, and opens its doors.

It seems that L4-O has been injured. Specifically, he's lying on the floor while Jam-Y puts the finishing touches to some sort of dressing over his left eye.

Interrogation room, H level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R looks around, still confused. He doesn't know where he is, or who the goons are.

One of them tells him, "You were brought in for treason, and have been brainscrubbed! This is one of our interrogation rooms!"

written by Malkom on Dec 19, 2011 01:37

I look unbalanced.

"Wait a minute. If that's true... how do I know you're telling the truth and I'm not some kind of pawn who was captured and brainscrubbed after being used in dozens of insidious cybernetics tests! I might have half a dozen chips in my head or worse, my neck!"

I reach behind myself to stroke to back of my neck, looking around at the goons as if I think they might try to stab something into me any moment now. Or worse, take me apart...

written by Jam on Dec 19, 2011 01:46

I look up at the rest of the team...

"L4-O's been shot in the eye! But he's still alive, luckily..."

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 19, 2011 03:01

"A wound!" I cry. "We wouldn't want it to get infected!"

I jump to Nukabot's supply box, take out the emergency sanitation kit, tear off L4's wound dressing, and apply some antibacterial ointment.

Then, I notice the charred bit of eye in his eye socket and ask if someone else could re-apply the wound dressing, backing away groggily.

written by Speeder on Dec 19, 2011 05:20

I look puzzled.

"How you get shot in the eye in the middle of a elevator ride? L4 as equipment officer does not know that it is unsafe to look at your own barrel when you are checking if it is working or not?"

written by Cryoburner on Dec 19, 2011 07:43

"A box!"

I examine the box.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 19, 2011 11:43

"Heh. No... even I wouldn't be that foolish..."

I try to get up, finished resting.

"Our lift was ambushed mid-transit, it stopped on some level above. I didn't get a look at who was attacking us, but we got away unharmed."

I wince in pain and hold the area where my eye was.

"Mostly unharmed."

written by Speeder on Dec 19, 2011 14:50

I look puzzled.

"How many you killed before getting shot? Usually you are good at killing lots of people first."

I think a bit more.

"A ambush... That is rather... Curious... I wonder who would ambush the Power Services team."

I turn to the Power Services guy.

"What your team have in special to attract this amount of trouble? How someone knew you were on the lift, and WHY your team, and not any other random Power Service clone that was attacked? What you know that other teams don't? What you can do, that other teams can't?"

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 19, 2011 15:28

I grab some painkillers and hand them to L4, he's going to need them.

written by Gligar on Dec 19, 2011 17:30

Interrogation Room, H level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R wonders how he can know that they're telling the truth. For all he knows, he could have been experimented on.

One of the goons grabs him. "That's a 100 credit fine for insubordination, citizen," he snarls. "And from the way you're reacting, it suggests that you're... volunteering to be a test subject.. Heh, what was it Rapt-G said? Anyone would do?"

Mick-R tries to feel the back of his neck, to see if there's anything there. Nope, only the bump that is the MemoMax chip's antenna. And that doesn't even penetrate the skin.

Lift hall, A level, Eta Subsector

Jam-Y looks up at the team, and tells them that L4-O was shot in the eye.

At the sight of the wound, King-R rushes into action, grabbing a sanitation kit, ripping off Jam-Y's dressing, and applying antiseptic stuff (that really stings) to L4-O's eye socket.

Then he realises what he's looking at, and backs away, though not before asking someone else to close the wound.

Speed-Y is puzzled. How could L4-O get shot in the eye like that? Surely he knows not to look directly into a laser barrel?

L4-O says that even he would not do that. Actually, the lift was ambushed mid-transit. They were attacked as they tries to exit the lift. He didn't see who it was, but at least they got away unharmed. Mostly.

Speed-Y is still puzzled. He wants to know how many L4-O killed before going down like that. This isn't like him.

But why would anyone ambush the Power Services team? Is there something that only they can do? Is there something that only they know? And how did their ambushers know they were there?

"My guess," the YELLOW clone replies, "is that we were the team who installed the power distribution board in the first place. But... there are boards like it everywhere. Not to mention that two other teams have been assigned to repair the exact same board. Both were wiped out... but why? The only thing I can think of is that someone is planning something at Industrial Subsector B. And they don't want us interfering."

Azir-R grabs some painkillers from his own supply, and offers them to L4-O.

Interview room, H level, Gamma Subsector

On seeing the box, Cryo naturally wants to examine it.

Hey, look at that! It even has his name on it!

Opening the box, Cryo-R finds a RED jumpsuit (labelled as such), and a nametag.

written by Speeder on Dec 19, 2011 18:45

I think a bit.

"So, someone is fiddling with the power distribution board...

Tell me, what exists in Industrial Subsector B? From the looks of what hunted us down first, if that place can manufacture robotic parts, someone is creating a cybernetic army... That would NOT be nice...

Although maybe less dangerous than the mutant army the commies tried to release last week..."

Then I start shuddering.

"Oh... I just imagined if someone got the idea to make a cybernetic mutant army... Ever thought of Headgrabber being also invulnerable even while sleeping because bullets and lasers ricochet off him?"

written by Malkom on Dec 19, 2011 20:36

I look panicked. "No, I'm not volunteering! Absolutely not!" To reinforce my point, I thrash. Wildly.

written by Gligar on Dec 19, 2011 21:54

Lift hall, A Level, Eta Subsector

Speed-Y things. Exactly what is there in Industrial Subsector B? From what he's seen, it might be bot parts... meaning that someone might be making a cybernetic army... not a pleasant thought, though probably better than, say, an army of mutants, frowny or otherwise...

...or an army of cybernetic mutants! Imagine Headgrabber in armour...

Better yet, don't.

The YELLOW clone replies, "Industrial Subsector B? They make all sorts of things there... ring-for-service bells, pens, glowsticks, servos... other things. All sorts of things.

"But who's Headgrabber?"

Interrogation room, H level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R vehemently refuses to volunteer for R&D testing, and begins to thrash around.

This earns him a punch in the chest from the goon. "Did you hear that, clones? We have a volunteer here! Can someone tell Rapt-G?"

A voice from the door replies, "Did someone call?"

Whoever it is holds up a sign that is visible from behind the goons. Three guesses as to what it says.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 19, 2011 22:19

I take a painkiller, thanking Azir-R.

"I'm not sure I wanted to stick around on that level with the ambush, and now I know for sure... looks like whoever was there was a better shot than most of the enemies we've faced."

"Though I'd think treasonous clones would at least have access to a higher clearance weapon than ORANGE... hmph, the one place my armor doesn't protect."

written by Jam on Dec 19, 2011 22:31

I facepalm as I see the dressing covering L4-O's eye has been ripped off.

"And I just finished that..."

I sigh, and begin to re-bandage the wound...

written by Malkom on Dec 19, 2011 23:42

I look at the sign, seeing if it has two dots, an equals sign, and a number three. If so, I look confused...

"I swear, I've seen that thing before somewhere!"

written by Speeder on Dec 19, 2011 23:43

"Well... information about him is kinda like UV clearance, but since I mention anyway, he is a F class mutant. Of course I won't explain more, because the clearance about him is so high that I do not even know what clearance the information about him is cleared... You love when that happen don't you? When something has so high clearance that the clearance is unknown to you? I think that this maybe happen even to UV citizens, and some things only Friend Computer can have in its database, and maybe whatever people that built him and thus know how to access that... I wonder if they have a clearance at all... If they have, I would name it GAMMA, that is beyond UV... but let's not dwell in that, I am again talking things that maybe are treasonous."

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 20, 2011 00:19

"Some clone told me to get lost. Interesting thing, unless he was tapping into my mind, of which course I'm sure is not surprising."

written by Gligar on Dec 20, 2011 01:35

Lift hall, A level, Eta Subsector

L4-O takes a painkiller and thanks Azir-R. He says that he didn't want to stick around at the ambush, and now he knows why. It seems that their assailants had much better aim than other foes they have encountered.

Although... shouldn't they have had access to better armaments than ORANGE lasers? He realises that they probably did have better, but were expecting the Power Services team to be alone.

Jam-Y facepalms (in full view of Speed-Y, even). He'd just finished that dressing! Oh well, he'll have to start again.

Speed-Y replies to the other YELLOW. Much of the information, he says, is high clearance, but he can say that Headgrabber is an F-Class Mutant. That's really all he can say. He isn't even sure that he's cleared to know what clearance the information is... could it be higher than ULTRAVIOLET? Could it be... GAMMA?

He'd better shut up. There's a camera looking at him. We can't be having rumours, now can we?...

Treason point to Speeder!

"F-class mutant? GAMMA? You've lost me. Oh well... never mind."

Interrogation room, H level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R looks at the sign. Sure enough, there is the colon, the equals, and the three. Though not in that order.

He looks confused. He's sure he's seen that sign before.

"And I'm sure I've seen you before," the signs owner replies. "Shouldn't you be on a mission now, instead of being my next test subject?"

"No matter. I'll just put it on your report." The sign appears again.

The goons begin to escort Mick-R out of the room, past the clone, who turns out to be - yes, it's Rapt-G.

Who, if he were writing this, would probably insert a rendition of the sign here.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08, O Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango explains that someone told him to get lost, and he ended up here. He suspects that the someone was tapping into his mind.

"That does not explain why exactly you are here," the guardbot counters. "You have the whole complex to be lost in, and you choose here."

written by Speeder on Dec 20, 2011 01:40

"F-class mutant means that is a very strong mutant and that its existence is treasonous, and that the only thing Friend Computer can do about a F-class mutant is erase it, not even termination is sufficient, as they might return F-class after decanting.

Many very strong loyal mutants struggle to avoid increasing their powers to the point of being a F-class.

It must suck when your very existence is treason..."

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 20, 2011 02:32

"I suspect a certain mutant has redirected me here. Of course, it won't be that easy to explain that, so I think you'd be better off asking John-R himself."

written by Jam on Dec 20, 2011 02:50

I suddenly look up at Speed-Y...

"GAH! TREASON!"

I dive at him and try to pin him to the ground...

"What are you talking about? Clearances above UV? That's absurd, and probably above your clearance, if it even exists! Hmm... The UV's wouldn't even be cleared to know about it... How would that even work..."

I trail off as I think about it, then I suddenly snap back to reality.

"WELL ANYWAY! You should explain yourself, and quickly!"

written by Speeder on Dec 20, 2011 04:35

I attempt to not get hit of course, my leg is not healed yet... I do not want it more hurt.

"What wait! I do not know if it is treason or not... And you are bringing up the subject again and wondering about it, you are being now treasonous yourself! Stop thinking about it!"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 20, 2011 06:06

I take the facepalming move this time. Well, I try to facepalm while avoiding putting my fingers anywhere near my missing eye.

I attempt to refasten the bandages over the eye socket.

"This is fun and all, but shouldn't we be moving on to Industrial Subsector B now. We should stop treason being committed there, instead of just spreading more of it here."

I frown.

"Not like we need any more of it here already..."

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 20, 2011 13:11

"I agree, we have a mission to attend to."

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 20, 2011 15:56

I glance at Speed-Y and Jam-Y on the ground and scoff.

Then I look to Azir-R and say, "Speaking of missions, do we know what that is yet? I'm afraid I wasn't yet informed."

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 18, 2011 06:05

That was a pretty good trivia question, Azir! 😊

written by Gligar on Dec 20, 2011 17:29

Lift hall, A level, Eta Subsector

Speed-Y explains about F-class mutants. He thinks that it must suck to have your very existence be treasonous.

Jam-Y realises what Speed-Y said a moment ago about clearances, and knocks him to the floor. What is Speed-Y talking about? Clearances above ULTRAVIOLET? How is that even possible?

He trails off as he tries to visualise how that would work, before coming back to reality, and demanding that Speed-Y explain himself.⁶⁸⁷

Speed-Y points out that he doesn't know if it's treason or not, and also that Jam-Y is bringing it up again by pointing out that it's treason... and thinking about it... and... that would mean that he's being treasonous as well! He should stop doing that.

It's L4-O's turn to facepalm (well, it would be if he wasn't trying to avoid touching his eye socket...). As he tries sorting out the bandages himself, he suggests that they start heading over to Industrial Subsector B. They should be stopping treason, not spreading it...

Azir-R agrees. After all, they have a mission to go to.

King-R asks about that. Nobody has told him what the mission is yet.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08, O Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango suggests that he might have been sent here by some mutant, and adds that the guardbot should probably contact John-R for more information.

"I do not believe that he will be of help," the guardbot replies. "After all, how could he affect what is happening to you right now? He does not seem to be as powerful as you suggest."

written by Malkom on Dec 20, 2011 18:26

I attack the guards.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 20, 2011 20:51

"...Who knows? My deranged mind seems to certainly hold that sort of opinion right now. Except that wasn't quite how I saw him when it came to first impressions."

I give a little sort of stretch to ease my limbs.

"Has there been any developments with this place?"

⁶⁸⁷ Gligar: (OOC: Nice to see that the Loyalty Officer is doing his job! +1pp.)

written by Gligar on Dec 20, 2011 22:26

Corridors, H level, Gamma Subsector

As he's being dragged through the corridors, with Rapt-G in tow, Mick-R decides to do something incredibly stupid, and attack the IntSec goons.

TWO Treason Points to Malkom!

He manages to knock one of the goons to the floor.

But there are four of them. And Rapt-G, who, if you'll remember, is a registered mutant.

As the four goons begin to wrestle Mick-R to the floor, Rapt-G holds out his hand, palm upwards, and concentrates. "I dislike having to use this," he tells Mick-R, "but it is clear that it is needed."

In Rapt-G's hand appears a ball of fire. "I warn you, if you attempt to escape again, you'll be burned alive."

Underplex Access Junction 85-08, O Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango doesn't really know. He currently thinks so, but that doesn't match his first impression.

He asks if anything has happened down here. The guardbot replies, "There was a decrease in the numbers of unidentified zombies and mutants approximately 3.4 daycycles ago."

written by Jam on Dec 20, 2011 22:26

I look at Speed-Y closely...

"Okay... Just be more careful in the future!"

I let him go, and go back to L4-O. There, I continue working on the bandages...

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 20, 2011 23:16

Somewhere, somehow, I feel like something incredibly awesome is about to happen.

Meanwhile, I wait for the team to continue on after tending to L4.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 21, 2011 00:12

Having finished verifying that what the box contains is in fact a red jumpsuit, I pull it out, and quickly swap it for what I'm currently wearing. I then carefully affix the nametag to the jumpsuit, examining it as I do so, particularly how it fastens to the outfit. I make sure it is oriented so that it is most efficiently readable while looking down at it.

Having done this, I proceed to assemble the unassembled infrared backpack that appeared from somewhere, place it on my shoulders, and tuck the empty box with my name on it inside.

"Now, let's go!"

I begin matching in place.

written by Malkom on Dec 21, 2011 00:59⁶⁸⁸

I look confused.

++ Received command: mmx ers -c 0x66466644535666 ++

++ Erasure complete ++

++ Note: disconnected 3 (three) unauthorized users from the system in the last 6.2 seconds ++

I look even more confused.

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 21, 2011 01:15

"Ummm... Excuse me, the mission?"

"Am I not cleared to know that information?" I ask worriedly.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 21, 2011 01:52

I let Jam-Y work, then proceed back to my spot on Nukabot.

"Hopefully we don't have to split up like that again..."

I look at King-R.

"I... guess there's no reason not to tell you. We're investigating a disturbance in Industrial Subsector B. Power fluctuations, hence the Power Services group. Almost certainly treasonous clones to... dispatch."

I frown.

"With extreme measures."

written by Gligar on Dec 21, 2011 02:18⁶⁸⁹

Lift hall, A Level, Eta Subsector

Jam-Y takes a good long look at Speed-Y.

And lets him go, with a warning.

Then he goes back to helping L4-O with his bandages. There, that should do it. Again.

Azir-R looks around. It is as if he can sense impending awesomeness... Then again, he works with vidshows. He's probably thinking of a trope or six right now.

He continues waiting for the team to get moving.

King-R asks about the mission again. He wonders if he isn't cleared for the information.

Now that he's free to do so, L4-O gets back onto Nukabot while he explains to King-R about the mission.

Interview room, H level, Gamma Subsector

Finally convinced that he is looking at a RED jumpsuit and not anything else, Cryo-R changes out his attire. He also

⁶⁸⁸ MALKOM: (OOC: Yay! Now I can make that Treason Point Sandwich I've been dreaming of 😊)

⁶⁸⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: I think you'll find that Treason Point Sandwiches taste of anger and fail, Malkom. With a dash of LOSE TWO PERVERSITY POINTS thrown in. Why? Because I thought I told you that pretending to be a hacker AND a clone wasn't necessary. And in any case, MemoMax does not work that way.)

Please do not anger me further. Failure to comply will result in your character being removed from play.)

looks at the name tag. It's RED, and reads, "Hello, my name is Cryo-R-BRN-5, and I'm with CPU!" Attached to the back is a safety pin, with which one might attach the name tag to a jumpsuit. Cryo-R does this.

Though the name tag ends up upside down.

He doesn't seem to notice, though. After all, he can read it.

Now that the jumpsuit is out of the way, Cryo-R can see moe of the box, specifically a Series 1300 PDC, and an apple.

An apple.

An APPLE!

Jeremy-Y notices and comments, "Ah yes! Some traditions are too good to throw away."

From outside, a commotion can be heard.

Corridors, H Level, Gamma Subsector

It's only Mick-R, the goons, and Rapt-G. Mick-R is staring at Rapt-G, looking confused and drooling a little. Rapt-G looks like he wants to get out that sign again, but instead muses, "Hmmm... perhaps I may need to test his next clone instead... Still let's see what we can do with him..."

The fire goes out, and the goons continue their journey.

JHT Sector Central Compnode, V Level, Central Subsector

Amongst the servers, a clone types at a terminal... He seems pleased with himself.

A noise makes him turn.

He finds himself staring right down the barrels of a pair of automatic nailguns.*

"You've got one minutecycle to explain how you haven't been erased yet."

written by Jam on Dec 21, 2011 03:06

Seeing as we're about ready to go, I get into position and follow behind Nukabot...

"Say, I wonder what ever happened to Mango-R... Last I saw, he was being skewered by about 15 lasers at once... I wonder if he was erased..."

written by Speeder on Dec 21, 2011 03:24

"Why you remember that when you cannot remember earlier things?"

I hop back on Nukabot.

"And I cannot remember WHY he was skewered by 15 lasers at once."

* These aren't your average construction tools, you know. Old Reckoning "nailguns" have nothing on these. And as a reminder: nails are Indigo Clearance.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 21, 2011 04:02

"An APPLE! I will love and cherish it forever. Perhaps someday I will get to visit an apple factory and fulfill my lifelong dream, but until then, I will have this apple to accompany me."

"And a PDC! I've always wanted a PDC, for as long as I can remember, anyway."

I proceed to assemble the unassembled infrared backpack, placing the box with apple inside into it. After examining the PDC, I place it into an accessible pocket of my jumpsuit, in case any PDC-related activities present themselves.

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 21, 2011 04:05

"Power? I know a thing or two about power!."

"That's what I was doing before I joined you all. Maybe I could help fix this is a somewhat less... messy way?" I say, glancing at L4-O's eye with distaste.

"Exactly what is the nature of this disturbance?" I ask.

written by 4616599 on Dec 21, 2011 11:44

I look mildly concerned, but silent. I climb back on Nukabot.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 21, 2011 12:24

I frown as King-R looks at me oddly.

"Not much else to tell. Power is out. Extreme likelihood of treasonous clones or groups of clones. Probably some kind of industrial sabotage while we're at it, I bet..."

"So... are we ready to go again? I feel like hurting something."

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 21, 2011 12:54

"Well then I say we move to where there's something other than us around to hurt, preferably something deserving!"

written by Gligar on Dec 21, 2011 17:26

Lift hall, A Level, Eta Subsector

Since it looks like the team might possibly be getting ready to move out, Jam-Y takes up a position behind Nukabot. He wonders whatever happened to that Mango-R... the last thing Jam-Y knows about him is that he was skewered by 15 or so different lasers...

Speed-Y thinks that it's strange that Jam-Y can remember that, but cannot remember other things, like half of their first mission... not that he can talk, since he can't remember why Mango-R was skewered. He takes his place on Nukabot.

King-R mentions that he knows about power, and suggests that he could help with that. In a clean way, of course. He glances at L4-O's bandages... ad also asks about the disturbance.

L4-O catches his eye and frowns. There's not really a lot he can say about the disturbance... power is out with a likelihood of treasonous groups... possibly industrial sabotage. That's about it.

He suggests that they get going, since he wants to hurt something.

Azir-R suggests that they move somewhere where there is something other than the team to hurt. Preferable somewhere with people who deserve to hurt.

Joris-R takes his place but keeps quiet.

Nukabot asks, "Is that everything?"

Interview room, H Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R, it seems, has quite a few lifelong dreams, and visiting an "apple factory" (i.e. the hydroponics bays) is one of them. In the meantime, he says, he will cherish this apple. Jeremy-Y suggests otherwise. "How about you... inspect the apple's taste for a while? It won't stay fresh forever."

But Cryo-R has moved on to the PDC... which, predictably, he always wanted. He puts it in a handy pocket.

As for the apple... he keeps that in the box... and then does the jumpsuit/backpack thing with the INFRARED jumpsuit despite the jumpsuit being labelled as such. Jeremy-Y, of course, tries to stop him. "Cryo-R, no! That is clearly a jumpsuit! Why don't you inspect the apple while you think about it?"

written by Malkom on Dec 21, 2011 18:53

I drool.

"Nice suit, mister... who are you again?"

written by Speeder on Dec 21, 2011 19:09

I turn to the Power Services team.

"Ready to roll out?"

written by Gligar on Dec 21, 2011 21:55

Corridors, H level, Gamma Subsector

It would appear that Mick-R has suffered some brain damage... not too surprising, given recent events.

He drools at Rapt-Y before complimenting him on his suit, and asking who he is. "I'm Rapt-G-JDI-7... remember? I'm your br-"

He is interrupted by his PDC, which he answers. "Hello?... Yes, this is Rapt-G-JDI... Y-yes, sir... I'm looking at him right now. He's drooling at me... A WHAT?!... I see, sir... Understood."

He puts away his PDC and looks back at Mick-R. "It seems that I have me test subject."

And yes, the sign comes out again.

Lift hall, A Level, Eta Subsector

Speed-Y turns to the Power Services team. Are they ready to roll out.

The team confers for a moment. "Oh yes, we're ready." "Definitely." "We've been ready."

written by Speeder on Dec 21, 2011 22:07

"Ok, L4 and Nukabot, to Industrial Subsector B."

Then I turn to Power Services.

"Hey, that is not the place that is VERY DIRTY with BLACK PARTICLES in the air ALL THE TIME?"

I turn to Mick.

"What we can do about it?"

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 21, 2011 23:01⁶⁹⁰

"Hmmm, I wonder whether there might be way for a hygiene officer to deal with these 'dirty black particles'..." I ponder aloud.

"It would be disastrous if these dirty black particles were dangerous, and the whole team was killed because of it."

Then I search the box of hygiene supplies frantically for some sort of oxygen masks, then notice that the Yellow power services clones aren't wearing any, so I decide against it.

I turn to the Power services clones and ask whether these black particles pose any sort of health risk.

written by Jam on Dec 21, 2011 23:57

"Oh, most of my memory has come back... Except for one part... There was a clone... I can't remember anything about him, but I think I knew him... Oh wait, he was on a vidscreen, that's right! I wonder if he was a newsclone..."

I watch as Speed-Y turns toward the general direction of Gamma Subsector, and says something...

"Who are you talking to? There's noclone there..."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 22, 2011 00:19

"You heard the leader, let's move!"

I keep my blaster at the ready for the approaching trip.

written by Gligar on Dec 22, 2011 01:03

Lift hall, A Level, Eta Subsector

Speed-Y gives the order to move out. "I was beginning to think that you would never ask," Nukabot replies, and starts moving. Everyone starts off behind it.

Speed-Y then thinks of something. Industrial Subsector B... isn't that the extremely dirty place where there are black particles in the air at all times?

He turns to ask the Hygiene Off... wait, why is he speaking in the general direction of Gamma Subsector? Is he trying to speak to Mick-R?

King-R is right here, though, and he's a Hygiene Officer as well. He wonders if he could deal with the particles. What if they were dangerous? What if the team died because of them?

⁶⁹⁰ GRANPIRE VIKING MAN: (OOC: Mick-R is in a completely different subsector, Speeder)

Corridors, A Level, Eta Subsector

He starts looking through the box of supplies for oxygen masks, but then notices that the Power Services team aren't wearing them, and changes his mind, and instead asks the Power Services team whether the particles cause a health risk. The YELLOW replies, "I believe that a risk assessment was taken a couple of yearcycles ago. If I recall, the report stated that the air quality was deemed acceptable for RED- and INFRARED-clearance citizens. Others, it mentioned, should wear masks or filtration equipment. I suspect that they will have spare equipment for us."

Jam-Y states that most of his memory has returned. There's just one thing: he can't remember the identity of a clone he saw on a vidscreen...

He also wonders why Speed-Y is speaking at Gamma Subsector. There's no-one in that direction.

L4-O urges the team to pick up the pace, and readies his blaster.

written by Speeder on Dec 22, 2011 01:07

I look confused for a while. Then I look at the Power Services people.

"Ok, so... are we supposed to hold our breath until we are inside whatever building has the masks?"

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 22, 2011 02:45

I return to supply box, searching frantically for anything I can use to breathe through.

Surely there's some sort of cleaning cloth I can breathe through, in case they don't give oxygen masks to us reds?

"Will there be spare equipment for us?" I say to the Yellows. "It can't hurt to be too sure, of course," I add, "Maybe the situation has worsened."

If I find any cleaning cloths, I hand them to Joris-R and Azir-R, as well as taking one for myself.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 22, 2011 03:03

"A jumpsuit? I'm pretty sure it's a PDC."

I pull out my PDC again to make sure, before returning it to the pocket.

"Ah, you do have a good point about the apple though."

I reach input my backpack, pull the apple out, and begin licking it.

"So, what's next on the agenda?"

written by Malkom on Dec 22, 2011 04:30

"Er... I'm a test subject? What exactly do you mean?"

I suddenly notice that I'm drooling. I try to clean it up.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 22, 2011 10:54

"Onward then, Nukabot."

I do a quick survey of the room and the path ahead from my position on Nukabot to see if everything is safe for us.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 22, 2011 11:51

"By what sort of amount has this changed?" I ask, "and if clearance allows, what cause?"

written by Jam on Dec 22, 2011 13:23

I follow behind Nukabot...

written by Gligar on Dec 22, 2011 17:46

Corridors, A Level, Eta Subsector

Speed-Y looks confused. Are they just expected to not breathe until they get their masks? The Power Services YELLOW clone admits that he does not know. "Actually, I've never needed to visit the Industrial Subsectors before."

King-R looks through the supply box again, looking for anything that could potentially be a mask of some sort. He soon realises that he'd have to raid the emergency sanitation kits for their cloths.

He asks whether there might be spare equipment for them. After all, the situation may have worsened, and it can't hurt to ask, right?

The YELLOW replies that it can't hurt to check. "If it came to it, you could always put in a call to PLC and request some gas masks. But then... that might suggest that Friend Computer didn't equip you properly, wouldn't it? You probably wouldn't want that on your permanent record."

As they continue, L4-O keeps scanning the path ahead, looking for danger. There are only a few clones around, and they don't seem that interested in the group.

The group makes one final turn, and emerges in what must be the space between subsectors. It looks like it's being used as an autocar and bot parking area.

Bot parking area, below Central Subsector

There doesn't appear to be a clearance designation... wait, yes there is. See those coloured stripes on the floor? Those designate where it is safe for clones to walk. Everywhere else is given over to bots Except for the area right in the middle, which is used as a Mobile Tile landing zone. Surrounding that are a number of vendors.

Looking up, past the cloud of Mobile Tiles passing between subsectors in the Interactive Corridor Experience, one can see the sector's main cloning station, attached to the underside of Central Subsector. It must be said that the cloning station itself seems to be an oddly symmetrical shape for a cloning station. There is a reason for that, but it is beyond your security clearance.

Interview room, H level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R looks puzzled. How could Jeremy-Y confuse a PDC for a jumpsuit? He looks at his PDC again. Yes, it's definitely a PDC.

But about the apple...

He pulls it out of the box, which is situated inside his second jumpsuit which he is illegally wearing as a backpack (causing Jeremy-Y to issue a CPU-Approved Facepalm Variant), and... licks it. He quickly realises that licking the skin of an apple is not going to tell him what the inside tastes like. And what about the texture, and how well it hold its shape when he chews it, and...?

"Very well, let's move on. We need to get you assigned to a new dormitory... if you'd like to follow me?"

Corridor, H Level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R looks confused. What does Rapt-G mean by "test subject"?

"Quite simply, it means that you will be helping me test out some new cyberware. With any luck, they should reverse your brain damage as well as make you more loyal, I hope", Rapt-G replies. "I promise that it won't hurt me a bit." He holds up the sign again.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08, O Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango inquires as to how much the population has been reduced, and how "The number has been greatly reduced. You are not cleared to know why or how."

written by Malkom on Dec 22, 2011 18:31

"Cyberware?" I try to think.

"That reminds me of... candy... lovely, shiny, RED candy... in seven different flavours... all inspired by Hot Fun..." I look dreamy.

"What flavor is the cyberware in, Greenie?"

written by Gligar on Dec 22, 2011 21:29

Corridors, H Level, Gamma Subsector

As Rapt-G, Mick-R, and the goons head towards a lift hall, Mick-R comments that the term "cyberware" reminds him of... candy? Sure, okay. He asks about the cyberware's flavour. "Flavour? Oh, So Happy flavour, I think."

The group arrives at the lift hall. Rapt-G hits a call button. With the sign, even.

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 22, 2011 21:38

I follow the team as I begin to worry about potential health hazards.

written by Jam on Dec 22, 2011 21:55

I continue following the others.

"Hey, cool! Is that the Interactive Corridor Experience? I've heard good things about that, but I've never actually experienced it myself. I'll have to try it sometime..."

written by Cryoburner on Dec 22, 2011 22:20

"That sounds great!"

I follow Jeremy-Y. While following him, I more closely visually inspect the apple.

written by Malkom on Dec 22, 2011 23:37

"So Happy flavour? Never heard of it. I'd best look it up!"

I hurry towards Rapt-G and hold out my hand. "Can I borrow your super-shiny PDC of awesome, sir? I need to look up the latest cyberware flavours!"

While waiting, I hop from one foot to the other.

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 23, 2011 00:53

I think about my situation for a second, then decide to wait and see if there are some extra gas masks when we arrive. If worse comes to worst, at least us reds have clearance for cleaning cloths.

"All I'm saying is, maybe these treasonous clones have made a false report. Maybe friend computer has been misinformed by these communists!"

written by Gligar on Dec 23, 2011 01:50

Bot Parking Area, below Central Subsector

The group continues on. Azir-R looks worried.

Jam-Y notices the Interactive Corridor Experience, and comments on it. He's ever had the opportunity to use it before, and hopes that he gets the chance. One of the Power Services ORANGES states that he's used it once before. "It's... quite an interesting experience, kind of like using a Transition, but it's all automated."

King-R thinks. It might be worth waiting to see if there are gas masks to use after all. And if not, there's always the cleaning cloths.

To the YELLOW, he adds that perhaps Friend Computer was misinformed?

"I hope not. But at the same time, I... er, that is, it's been a while since Friend Computer sent out firing squads, isn't it?" He looks a little nervous.

Interview Room, H Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R continues to not eat the apple. Instead, he eyes it closely. It's RED, and apple-shaped, and also covered in drool where he licked it.

He follows Jeremy-Y out of the room, down the corridor, and into a lift hall, where Rapt-G, Mick-R and the goons are already waiting for the lift.

Lift hall, H Level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R has his hand out, as he has just requested Rapt-G's PDC. Rapt-G replies, "If you were going to look up So Happy flavour, don't bother. It isn't out of testing yet." He holds up the sign again. "And anyway, shouldn't you have your own PDC?"

After a moment, the lift arrives.

written by Malkom on Dec 23, 2011 02:04

"My own PDC? My VERY OWN PDC?!"

Looking ecstatic, I dig in my pockets.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 23, 2011 02:18

"Indeed."

I pause to think about the connotations of this statistic, but don't voice it to the guardbot.

"Right then. May I enter?"

written by Jam on Dec 23, 2011 02:46

I continue walking along, and look at the different bots that are parked nearby...

"Too bad Massacrebot got blown up in that explosion... We should talk to Derek-G sometime, and see if he's working on another prototype... Maybe we could even test it in our next mission!"

I seem to look especially happy at the thought of Massacrebot being revived...

written by Cryoburner on Dec 23, 2011 04:05

"Hello, fellow lift passengers! Are you here to ride the lift with us? We're going to another level."

I shine the apple with my jumpsuit. If Jeremy-Y enters the lift, then I do so as well. Otherwise, I don't.

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 23, 2011 05:34

I relax a little as I see the Yellow's nervousness approach my own.

"I wonder if the particles are related to these disturbances" I wonder aloud, "and how long have the disturbances been happening? I hope this is a power-related problem rather than a treason-related one, but I suppose trouble is meant to be shot, after all."

"Trouble is so messy." I end with a sigh. "You know, I don't mind messes, I'd just prefer them not to be made of human flesh."

written by Speeder on Dec 23, 2011 06:03

"Well... I do not think my last body ended in a mess, TOO BAD, since this mean I cannot recover my previous Speeder's Spear or my nut launcher. Or massacrebot... I miss massacrebot... And now if we get it back, it is my turn to NOT use it, since this time, it is me that is with the broken leg."

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 23, 2011 13:08

"Lets now dwell on the past and things we miss. It reduces happiness levels. Lets instead focus on all the cool stuff we'll see/do/acquire in the near future."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 23, 2011 15:04

"I dunno if he'd let us use another prototype after what we did with the last one. I mean sure, saved the sector and all, but Massacrebot kind of evaporated..."

I shrug.

"At least I assume so. Not like I was there to witness the explosion or anything. What with all those mutants..."

I nod to Azir-R.

"Agreed. Let's go blast us some commies. Or whatever they are. Did we ever find out if they were commies yet?"

written by Gligar on Dec 23, 2011 17:26

Lift hall, H level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R looks ecstatic at the prospect of having his own PDC. He roots through his pockets, to find...

...nothing. Only his ME Card.

Cryo-R greets the newcomers and asks if they'll be using the same lift. Rapt-G tells him, "What do you think?" before holding up the sign again and entering the lift. The goons, and Mick-R, follow him.

Jeremy-Y steps in after them. Cryo is last, polishing the apple (and leaving drool marks on his jumpsuit) as he steps into the lift.

Rapt-G's lift, Gamma Subsector

As it happens, Jeremy-Y is closest to the controls. He asks Rapt-G, "Whwere were you headed, sir?"

"T Level, please."

Underplex Access Junction 85-08, O Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango thinks about what the guardbot just told him, then asks for permission to enter. "What business do you have in the Underplex?" the guardbot demands.

Bot Parking Area, below Central Subsector

As he walks, Jam-Y looks around at the various bots parked here. He can see different kinds of scrubots, docbots, forkbots... even a couple of combots are parked here.

He reflects on the destruction of Massacrebot, and wonders if Derek-G is working on another prototype. Perhaps they will get to test it. The prospect of testing another ArmourBot makes him happy again.

King-R relaxes a little as he sees that the YELLOW is about as nervous as he is. His thoughts again turn to the particles. Perhaps they are related to the disturbances... perhaps they are the cause? How long have the disturbances been happening, anyway? Hopefully, the disturbances are power-related rather than treason-related, but either way, they have a job to do.

But then, whichever it turns out to be, they'll end up causing a mess. It;s not that he minds messes, but he would much rather that the mess wasn't caused by cloneflesh.

Speed-Y tells him that his last death didn't leave a mess... but that's too bad, because he misses the cool things he had in his previous clone... the Spear(TM), the nut launcher... and Massacrebot. It's too bad that even if they get to test another, he'll have to sit it out due to his injuries.

Azir-R suggests that they instead look to the future. Dwelling on lost items is a sign of unhappiness.

L4-O isn't sure that Derek-G would let them test another prototype. After all, they did kind of cause the first to... go away. Or so he assumes... he wasn't exactly there to see it, what with all the mutants.

But he agrees with Azir-R. They should look forward to the mission instead of dwelling on the old one.

As the team heads out of the bot parking area, heading towards the roadway, one of the Power Services clones has a question.

Roadway, A level

"Er... can someone explain something? Exactly what was this Massacrebot? I know it was a prototype, but what was it?"

written by Speeder on Dec 23, 2011 17:48

"Well... It was a sort of combat bot that you weared, or entered... It mimicked the movements of the clone inside it, and it was scary, and it was powerful, and it could destroy commies easily. Also it was very resilient, the only thing that managed to destroy it was a nuclear blast... Unfortunately I was holding the nuke on the hand of the bot and trying to type on it with my own hand, thus this mean that both me and the bot got vaporized."

I smile happily.

"That thing, I named it Massacrebot, and the brain on it liked by the way, because shooting commies with it was a MASSACRE. Seriously, what more you can expect of a automatic slughthrower and a cone rifle as weapons in a nigh invulnerable thing?"

I still look very happy remembering of the bot friend.

"I miss its 'Yip Yip' when we exploded things."

written by Malkom on Dec 23, 2011 18:02

My face falls to extreme levels of unhappiness. "I don't have my own, Greenie, so how 'bout you lend me yours like a good chap?" I whine, sticking out my hand again.

After a few moments something else occurs to me...

"Say, Greenie, those are some cool clothes! Where can I get some lusciously green clothes like you?"

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 23, 2011 21:21

I frown and mutter, "Well even if your last death wasn't a mess, I bet Massacrebot caused lots of messes before he died."

"And you know how I feel about messes." I add with an even deeper frown.

I shudder at the prospect and ask about the Nut Launcher. What was that, anyway?

written by Jam on Dec 23, 2011 21:46

I notices King-R seems to be frowning...

"You look a bit unhappy right now... Remember, unhappiness is treasonous!"

I grin at him, the look towards Azir-R...

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 23, 2011 22:11

"See what did I say about dwelling on the past." Stop that right now and cheer up."

"You don't want to be the new Mick" I add

written by Gligar on Dec 23, 2011 22:43

Roadway, A level

Speed-Y explains about Massacrebot, about what it was, and how it got its name. Oh, how he misses those excited yips when it hit soemthing... Te thought of it all makes him happy.

"Sounds cool. But why d - actually, never mind. I'm probably going over my clearance."

King-R doesn't think so. Even though Speed-Y's death might have been clean, think of the mess Massacrebot made before it was wiped out... (Isn't that what scrubots are for?)

He then asks about the Nut Launcher. What was it?

Jam-Y points out that King-R looks unhappy about now. And unhappiness is treason. He looks over at Azir-R, who agrees, and tells the group to stop reminiscing.

Nukabot comes to a stop. It seems that a checkpoint, equipped with some sort of scanner, has been set up on the roadway.

Rapt-G's lift, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R becomes unhappy when he realises that he doesn't have a PDC. Once again, he asks for Rapt-G's. "I'm sorry, but this is a Series 1650. It's GREEN Clearanc-"

He's interrupted by Mick-R, who asks where he could get clothe like Rapt-G is wearing. "They, too, are GREEN Clearance. They come from a mall in AHK Sector, which is above your clearance. Sorry." He holds up the sign again, and glances at one of the goons. The goon nods silently.

The lift continues to ascend for a moment, before stopping. "That's our floor, Cryo-R," says Jeremy-Y, who steps out of the lift.

written by Jam on Dec 23, 2011 23:25

"Oh, a checkpoint!"

I pull out my ME card, and get in line for the checkpoint...

written by Lightning4 on Dec 24, 2011 00:22

I too get my ME card out and get ready to pass through the checkpoint.

written by Gligar on Dec 24, 2011 01:57

Roadway checkpoint, A level

Jam-Y and L4-O are the first to approach the checkpoint. They find that a small queue has formed. The clones seem to be waiting for the scanner to be rebooted.

One of the ORANGE Power Services clones approaches behind them. "What's the holdup?"

John-R is about to hop down off Nukabot when his Com 1 crackles to life. "Team Epsilon! Report!"

written by Speeder on Dec 24, 2011 02:33

I wait by John-R in nukabot, waiting for him to reply or hand me the Com 1.

While this does not happen I explain the nut launcher.

"It was two tubes with balloons attached to them, they could launch rudimentary projectiles. Kinda crude and underpowered, but still useful, and most importantly, FUN."

Then I turn to the Power Services guy.

"I think you want to know why it made Yip Yip, it is because the bot brain used was from a petbot... Now WHY it was a petbot, I have no idea."

written by Jam on Dec 24, 2011 04:40

I listen to the conversation with Friend Computer, if it occurs...

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 24, 2011 04:56

As I see the checkpoint coming up and Jam-Y and L4-O pull out their ME cards, I ask about ME cards.

"Should I not have an ME card?"

Then my attention is drawn to John-R's Com 1, and I become silent, just in case I am addressed.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 24, 2011 06:35

"Wow! Our very own floor!"

I step out of the lift, and onto our floor. I step on it a few times, examining it as I do so.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 24, 2011 07:54

I let someone else explain to Friend Computer this time. I simply keep quiet and listen to the conversation around me.^{691 692}

written by Gligar on Dec 24, 2011 17:05

Roadway checkpoint, A level

Speed-Y waits for John-R to reply. After a moment, he does: "Yes, Friend Computer! This is Team Epsilon. We're on our ⁶⁹¹ Jam: You know, I only just realized now that it was never said who was talking over the Com 1... For some reason, I assumed it was Friend Computer (probably because of the bold text).

⁶⁹² SPEEDER: (OOC: yes, you are well conditioned by gligar! Also, I think you meant to post that on OOC thread...)

written by Gligar on Dec 22, 2011 01:10

Recently, the post count has been consistently in the high teens. Yesterday, for instance, saw nineteen posts. The highest count is twenty, which we've hit a few times over the course of the game. My question to you, players, is: can we hit 21? 😊

written by Speeder on Dec 22, 2011 01:12

As more players join, I think that yes.

It would be easier if some old players returned though... (Megagun and Bensel I am looking to you).

written by Cryoburner on Dec 22, 2011 02:24

I think Megagun is still scrubbing the floor somewhere.

written by Speeder on Dec 22, 2011 02:35

Cryo I must say that I always laugh reading your poses.

way to Industrial Subsector B right now! We just have to go through this checkpoint."

John-R pauses, giving Speed-Y the time to explain about his nut launcher, and explain to the Power Services clone why Massacrebot used to say yip yip a lot. Even though he doesn't know the full reasoning.

Friend Computer tells John-R, "I am pleased to hear that. However, the fact remains that, by standard mission metrics, you should have arrived at your mission 1.29 hourcycles ago. Can you explain that?"

Jam-Y listens in but says nothing.

King-R wonders about ME Cards. Shouldn't he have one? He does! It's right there in his pocket. Now that that little dilemma is solved, he starts listening to the Com 1, just in case it concerns him.

L4-O decides to keep quiet as well.

Some beeps emanate from the scanner. It looks like the IntSec clones have got it working again. They motion for the queue to come forward.

Lift hall, P level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R steps off the lift, and immediately begins inspecting the floor. It seems optimal for the purpose of being walked on.

Jeremy-Y stops at the exit. "When you are ready..."

Rapt-G's lift

The lift stops once again. "T Level," it announces.

The goons begin to file off, taking Mick-R with them. Rapt-G takes up position in front, and the team starts moving.

written by Speeder on Dec 24, 2011 17:26

"Tell our mutual friend that we got attacked by Cyborgs. It may find that information interesting. Also tell it that someone stopped one of the elevators and tried to kill the Power Services team inside, thus meaning that somehow they KNEW that the team was inside that particular elevator."

written by Jam on Dec 24, 2011 17:44⁶⁹³

I continue listening...

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 24, 2011 19:11

I think about my momentary unconsciousness from earlier, and speak up.

⁶⁹³ JAM: (OOC: Yeah, that last post was meant for the OOC thread... Now that's the second time I've accidentally posted in the wrong thread... 😊)

And the way your character run in circles around people using his tongue is hilarious, he ALWAYS do the wrong thing and ALWAYS convince people that it was the right thing.

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 22, 2011 02:50

Amen to that. 😊

Although his poses aren't exactly the funniest part of the whole thing. 😊

"I'm afraid I fell unconscious for... only a few minutes after seeing Jam-Y's bloody hands. That might have contributed slightly to the delay. Other than that, I only joined the team recently, so I can't speak for anything before that."

Clearing my throat, I say, "I will try to... not faint anymore."

written by Jam on Dec 24, 2011 19:17

I turn to King-R.

"Really? It didn't seem longer than a minutecycle to me..."

written by Gligar on Dec 24, 2011 21:59

Roadway checkpoint, A level

As the team waits for the queue to clear, Speed-Y tells John-R to mention the cyborgs in his report. John-R nods, and replies into the Com. "We encountered a group of cyborgs during a lift ride, who seemingly wanted to kill the Power Services Team we're accompanying. We were able to get through them and continue on our way, but it raises the question: how did they know that we would be passing through?"

"Your report is incomplete," our mutual friend replies. "By standard projections, dispatching a group of cyborgs should only take ten minutecycles. This leaves 1.12 hourcycles unaccounted for. Your team is fined 100 credits each for tardiness. Can you explain the remaining 1.12 hourcycles?"

King-R believes that he might have been responsible for part of the delay. He points out that he fainted at the sight of Jam-Y's bloodstained hands earlier, and believes that he was out for several minutecycles. He'll try not to do that any more.

Jam-Y assures him that he was only out for a minutecycle or so.

The IntSec clones wave the team over to the checkpoint.

written by Jam on Dec 25, 2011 03:20

I walk up to the checkpoint, and offer the IntSec clone my ME card...

written by Lightning4 on Dec 25, 2011 03:24

"Well, mandatory equipment dispersal takes some amount of time. Though I doubt 1.12 hourcycles... umm... and I believe Friend Computer already contacted us then."

I simply shrug.

I liked that bit with the apple. I hope that you will one day live your dream of Visiting an apple factory, Cryo!

written by Malkom on Dec 22, 2011 04:32

I just wish I was as good as him... only differently... :)

written by Gligar on Dec 22, 2011 17:50

Sp apparently, Cryo is a cat or something... after all, he seems to feel the need to lick his food to death before eating it 🐱

written by Cryoburner on Dec 22, 2011 22:52

I thought we were discussing Megagun's scrubbing abilities. -.-

written by Malkom on Dec 25, 2011 03:57

I sigh and turn to the goons as they pull me off of the lift. "Say, can you look something up for me? No? How about you? No? Dang....."

I suddenly perk up.

"Say, Greenie! Once I've tried out your new cyberware flavor, I can get one of those wonderful round red things that other clone in red seemed to like so much."

And after another moment, I think of something.

"What's clearance, Greenie? Is it where I feel all clear-headed? Or when I manage to clear a screen or a room? How can something be above clearing a screen or room? Everyone does it at some point..."

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 25, 2011 05:34

Deciding that further delay will not benefit the team at all, I run up behind Jam-Y and take out my ME card, offering it to the IntSec clone after he is done processing him.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 25, 2011 11:51

"Merely to see if there is something more to this place... After all, a nuclear detonation, the fallout would pose a risk to the sectors above." I reply.

written by Speeder on Dec 25, 2011 12:51

I decide the best course of action is the same of Mick.

written by Gligar on Dec 25, 2011 18:25

Roadway checkpoint, A level

Jam-Y is the first to offer his ME Card to the guards. One of them scans it, and indicates that he should step through the scanner.

L4-O makes a suggestion to John-R, who relays this to our mutual friend. "Our Equipment Officer tells me that some of the time was taken up by sorting out our equipment. He does not believe that it took 1.12 hourcycles, though, Friend Computer."

King-R rushes up behind Jam-Y and gets out his ME Card. He waits for Jam-Y to step through the scanner.

Speed-Y follows suit.

Corridors, T Level, Gamma Subsector

Once again, Mick-R wants to look something up. Once again, he is rebuffed.

He looks sad for a moment, before remarking that he'd like an apple. "An apple? Whatever for?" The sign again.

He then speaks up again. He's forgotten what clearance is. "Clearance is what you don't have." The sign again.

The group stops at a door. "Ah, here we are." Rapt-G sticks his ME Card into a slot, and the door opens. "Bring him in, please.

"And just to remind you, my name is Rapt-G-JDI-7, not 'greenie'."

Underplex Access Junction 85-08, O Sublevel, Deep Subsector

Mango says that he just wants to see if there is anything more to the Underplex. He suggests that a nuclear detonation might be a threat.

The guardbot does not seem to be impressed, and points a weapon at Mango. "Invalid reason Potential subversion detected. Access denied. Vacate the access junction immediately."

written by Jam on Dec 25, 2011 22:43

"What kind of scanner is this?" I ask the guard.

I step through the scanner anyway, and try to judge its function while I'm walking through...

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 26, 2011 00:01

I leave.

written by Gligar on Dec 26, 2011 00:08

Roadway checkpoint, A level

Jam-Y inquires as to what kind of scanner it is. "I can't tell you, for reasons of security. Just get through the scanner already."

He does.

Beep.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08, O sublevel, Deep Subsector

Having failed to gain access to the Underplex, Mango leaves.

Deep Subsector lift

Instead of just... appearing elsewhere, he finds himself in the lift.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 26, 2011 00:15

I proceed through the checkpoint as well, presenting my ME card when needed, and going through the scanner when needed.

written by Jam on Dec 26, 2011 01:39

I look at the scanner, then at the guard...

"Was that a good beep or a bad beep?"

I look slightly nervous...

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 26, 2011 04:13

I present my ME card calmly and step into the scanner.

written by Speeder on Dec 26, 2011 12:56

I just step though the scanner on my turn, like if it was nothing important.

written by Gligar on Dec 26, 2011 16:25

Roadway checkpoint, A level

L4-O is the next to go through the checkpoint. Following Jam-Y's lead, he presents his ME Card for scanning before passing through the body scanner.

Beep.

The guards start looking at readouts on the scanner, and conferring amongst themselves.

Jam-Y looks nervously at the beeping scanner. Why is it beeping? Is that a good thing or a bad thing? The guards look at him, and back to their readouts.

King-R is next. He follows suit, presenting his ME Card and going through the scanner.

Beep.

The guards check their readouts again. An additional readout seems to have appeared.

Then, it's Speed-Y's turn. He also passes through the checkpoint, and walks through the scanner.

Beep.

written by Jam on Dec 26, 2011 16:34

I calm down once I notice the scanner is beeping for everyone. Then I decide drink the rest of the B3 I opened earlier, while I wait for my ME card to be returned and for the others to go through the scanner...

written by Malkom on Dec 26, 2011 19:25

I sigh. "Where can I buy some clearance then? At a mall? A supermarket, perhaps?" While waiting for something interesting to happen, I try to take off one of my shoes while still hopping along.

written by Gligar on Dec 26, 2011 22:07

Roadway checkpoint, A level

Jam-Y calms down a little. It looks like everyone on the team is being beeped at, including Lucas-R, who goes through next. Beep.

One of the goons starts handing back ME Cards, while the other keeps monitoring the scanner. Neither of them says anything, though from the looks on their faces, they don't like what they see.

While he waits for the team, Jam-Y finishes his can of B3.

Rapt-G's Lab, T Level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R wonders if it's possible to buy clearance.

This causes the goons – all of them – to level laser rifles at Mick-R’s head. One of them yells, “BUYING CLEARANCE?! WHAT ARE YOU SUGGESTING, THAT ALPHA COMPLEX IS CORRUPT?!?!?!?”

Mick-R tries to ignore them, and remove one boot for some off reason. He’s successful, though Rapt-G, who has been retrieving some sort of object from a storage locker, notices. He’s now accompanied by a docbot, which tells Mick-R, “Please keep your jumpsuit on at all times unless otherwise instructed. The first round of tests will not require you to remove any articles of clothing.”

Rapt-G adds, “Can you gentlemen move him onto the table over there?”

written by Malkom on Dec 26, 2011 22:27

I look puzzzzled.

“Alpha Complex?! What the heck is that? Some kind of neurotic disease?”

written by Lightning4 on Dec 27, 2011 01:20

I head back to Nukabot and get back on.

“Are we cleared to move on?”

written by Cryoburner on Dec 27, 2011 01:21

Having determined that our floor offers an optimal walking factor when combined with standard footwear, I decide it best to do so, and walk upon it toward Jeremy-Y, and through the exit.

written by Gligar on Dec 27, 2011 01:55⁶⁹⁴

JHT Sector Central Compnode, V Level, Central Subsector

The owner of the voice (do I really need to identify him?) stands over the remains of the intruder. “When I give an order, I expect it to be carried out... that means talk when I order it.”

“Now... let’s see... what’s the damage...?”

Rapt-G’s lab, T level, Gamma Subsector

Apparently, the damage is more severe than originally thought. Mick-R’s entire memory is gone. For instance, he has forgotten what Alpha Complex even is.

This does not go down well with the goons. “YOU’RE INSIDE IT!” one yells as he shoves Mick-R onto the indicated table.

“That will do,” Rapt-G tells them. “Can you hold him down, please? Good.”

He moves over to Mick-R. “Now,” he says, “I’m going to inject you with this.” He holds up a syringe. “It will help prepare what’s left of your brain for the tests and hopefully tell us exactly what damage was done. Do you understand?”

⁶⁹⁴ GLIGAR: (OOC: Attention: The rules in the first post have been updated. I strongly suggest that you familiarise yourself with the changes.)

JHT Sector Central Compnode, V Level, Central Subsector

“...it was actually successful? Is this how Leeroy-O ended up inside Mega-R’s mind?”

Of course, the fact that someone even got hold of an erased clone’s MemoMax data is troubling...”

Roadway checkpoint, A Level

L4-O hops back onto Nukabot. He asks if they’re clear to go.

One of the guards tells him, “Get going. Don’t clog up my checkpoint.”

Lift Hall, P Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R seems to have finished inspecting the floor, since he once again follows Jeremy-Y.

“Good,” the latter says. “Are you satisfied with the floor?”

Corridors, P Level, Gamma Subsector

The two begin walking to... wherever it is that Jeremy-Y is taking Cryo-R.

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 27, 2011 01:32

“I hope there isn’t a problem with hygiene...”

I wait nervously for the guards to speak up.

written by Speeder on Dec 27, 2011 01:48

I just look at the guards for a while.

written by Malkom on Dec 27, 2011 02:18

“Good Lord, really?” I look mildly surprised as I glance round the room (at least as much as possible while being held down. “This little room is awfully small for being a Complex, and awfully big for being an neurotic brain disease. Seriously, can someone tell me what’s going on here?”

written by Speeder on Dec 27, 2011 02:55⁶⁹⁵

I hop back onto Nukabot after getting back my ME card.

“Ok, you heard the man, Nukabot, you can start rolling as soon everyone is on board.”

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 27, 2011 04:41

I follow Speed-Y.

“Hmmm, from the way they looked at us back there, I would think that they are frustrated that we didn’t have whatever it was they were looking for.”

“What could they have been looking for?” I wonder aloud.

written by Speeder on Dec 27, 2011 10:09

“Probably unregistered mutants, or commies.”

I think a bit.

⁶⁹⁵ SPEEDER: (OOC: whoa, the new rules make my 1-UP even more important, YAY for being awesome =D

Ok, just kidding, let’s return to the game)

"Indeed, they were probably bored and wanted to shoot something, maybe they should get themselves back to be Troubleshooters, because as you will know soon, there are no boredom in shooting trouble, it is something very much FUN and active."

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 27, 2011 11:47

I look at at the buttons available in the lift, considering the last time I was here, there were buttons there.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 27, 2011 12:32

"Hmph. Okay then. Well then, Nukabot, let's get a move on again."

I go back to observing the road ahead for any threats.

written by Jam on Dec 27, 2011 15:21

I follow Nukabot again...

written by 4616599 on Dec 27, 2011 15:51

I snap out of my daze, passing through the scanner. I note when the beep occurs, paying careful attention to when any equipment or body parts pass through.

I then greet the guards and chase after the rest.

written by Gligar on Dec 27, 2011 17:13

Rapt-G's lab, T Level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R misunderstands the goon in a manner which seems deliberate. He seems to think that one room is too small for a complex, and too big for a brain disease. He wants to know what is going on.

One of the goons looks like he's about to shoot, but Rapt-G stops him. "There, I've injected those... so let's see..."

He goes over to a terminal and does something to it. This takes him a couple of minutecycles... apparently, he has to look something up. "...oh. It seems that your memory centre is almost completely fried. Your MemoMax chip can't find anything to relay, but then, from what I've heard about you, that's hardly surprising. It seems that someone tried to overwrite your memories through the chip, which is something that can only really be done to a blank brain. Since yours wasn't... it got damaged. And here you are, with no memory.

"That's where I come in. Instead of the implants I was going to use, I propose that we switch to another set of tests. The other tests will involve replacing the burnt-out sections of your brain with memory chips... that should allow you to remember things."

Roadway checkpoint, A level

King-R hopes that the beeps don't have anything to do with hygiene. He waits to see if the guards say anything else.

Speed-Y watches the guards. As soon as he receives his ME Card, he hurries back over to Nukabot, and tells it to get moving as soon as everyone is aboard. It looks like there are only a couple from the team left to process. After that, it's the Power Services team.

King-R thinks that the guards are unhappy because they didn't find what they were looking for... whatever that is.

Joris-R passes through the scanner. It beeps for him, as well. He notices that it is beeping as soon as his head crosses the scanner.

Speed-Y guesses that they may be looking for unregistered mutants, or perhaps signs of communism. He supposes that they might be bored, sitting there waiting for something to shoot. Perhaps they should consider being Troubleshooters again? Troubleshooting is certainly FUN...

As the stragglers return to Nukabot, L4-O also tells it to get going. It moves past the checkpoint.

Of course, the Power Services crew still need to go through the checkpoint.

Deep subsector lift

Mango inspects the panel. It contains the same buttons as before. Strange... he was probably half-expecting some miraculous GET ME OUT OF HERE button or something...

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 27, 2011 18:06

"I suppose they could be right," I reply to Speeder, "But I could have sworn they looked unhappy with us specifically. Oh well. Maybe they are just bored."

Then I watch the guards to see if they still don't like what they see after the power services clones go through the checkpoint.

written by Speeder on Dec 27, 2011 19:40

"Oh, wait... Nukabot, wait for the Power Services team to catch up with us... Our mission is to escort them basically... Leaving them behind sounds wrong..."

written by Jam on Dec 27, 2011 19:57

I suddenly remember something...

"Oh, King-R, I have Mick-R's old Hygiene Officer equipment. I guess you should be the one to have it, since you're the Hygiene Officer..."

I offer the box to him...

written by Speeder on Dec 27, 2011 20:00

I look at Jam

"Now your memory is being short again? He just checked that box for things that can be used as breathing mask, remember?"

written by Jam on Dec 27, 2011 22:03

"But... Huh?"

I look down at Mick-R's Equipment box...

"I've been carrying this box the whole time, and I'm sure it was Mick-R's... Look, it's even got his ME card in it! Then... What box did King-R check?"

I look confused.

written by Malkom on Dec 27, 2011 22:13

"Wait, wait! I just had a sort of flash of recollection!"

I wait for a long moment.

"Oh dang, I don't remember it anymore. What's an implant? And how many memory chips? Are you using the standard model or the Fraunz-R-TNK-3 type? Enhanced silicon, perhaps?"

...

"Wait, what's silicon again?"

written by Gligar on Dec 27, 2011 23:30

Roadway, A level

King-R voices his opinion that he thought that the guards were unhappy with the team specifically. But perhaps they're just bored.

He watches as the PowServ team is checked. The guards seem to act the same way towards them as well.

Speed-Y realises that they're going on ahead, and tells Nukabot to stop.

Jam-Y remembers that he has Mick-R's equipment. As Hygiene Officer, King-R should have it. He offers the box to King-R...

...but hang on! Isn't that the box that is currently sitting on Nukabot? Yes, there it is! Speed-Y points it out.

But it's also in Jam-Y's hands, complete with Mick-R's ME Card!

How can the same box be in two different places...?

Rapt-G's lab, T Level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R remembers something... but then promptly forgets it. And also the memory that would tell him what an implant is.

Maybe.

He asks about the memory chips, and about what type will be used... and then forgets what "silicon" is.

Which is a good thing, since that stuff about memory chips is beyond his clearance anyway!

Rapt-G just tells him to be quiet. "I'll take that as a yes, then." Since both of his hands are full, he doesn't bring out the sign this time. "Okay then. Docbot, can you prepare him for the procedure?"

"With pleasure," the docbot replies, obviously happy to get to work.

And of course, since it's a docbot, it revs up its chainsaw...

written by Malkom on Dec 28, 2011 00:27

"Oh God," I say before passing out.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 28, 2011 00:50

Almost disappointed, I push the button which will take me as far up as possible.

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 28, 2011 00:51

"UGH!"

"What did I brush my teeth with earlier!?"

I run over and check the contents of Mick-R's box, to ensure that they have similar supplies. You know, just to be sure I didn't scrub my teeth with flavored disinfectant.

written by Gligar on Dec 28, 2011 02:13

Rapt-G's lab, T Level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R passes out at the sound of the chainsaw.

That's probably a good idea, given that the docbot quickly approaches Mick-R's head and proceeds to cu5$E")%^&^$% CONNECTION TERMINATED

What in the compnode?!

Deep Subsector lift

Mango tries to ignore his disappointment by pressing the button for the topmost level. That would be X Level, up in Epsilon Subsector.

The lift rises.

Mango realises that he's never been up to X Level.

Roadway, A level

King-R panics. Just what did he brush his teeth with earlier?!

Frantically, he looks through Jam-Y's box... to find it identical to the one on Nukabot. No, not just identical. They're the same box. In two places at once.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 28, 2011 02:15

I continue watching the Power Services team, once they get back to Nukabot I tell Nukabot to proceed towards the Industrial Subsector.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 28, 2011 02:23

I close my eyes as the lift rises. I think quietly in my mind.

Is there not a way out of this place?

Am I doomed to an existence of being aware that I'm boxed in?

Is there no one who can help?

written by Jam on Dec 28, 2011 02:49

I notice the box that's sitting on top of Nukabot, and stare at it for a full ten secondcycles, mouth agape in shock...

Then I quickly look down at my own box...

"What in Alpha Complex is this?"

I run over to the other box.

"Why is there two boxes? And they look so similar, it's like they're the same box!"

I cautiously reach out and touch the other box, trying to verify it's real, and not just a figment of my imagination...

"Do you see that King-R? They're exactly the same! Not just similar, exactly the same! Is this the work of some sort of mutant? Hang on, I've got a list here somewhere..."

I take out a piece of paper from my pocket, and read through it...

"...no, no, no, there's nothing in here about object duplication! So, either we're dealing with a new mutation, or this is something else... Probably something really high clearance..."

written by Cryoburner on Dec 28, 2011 04:29

"Yes, that is a fine floor. It's very flat and floor-like."

I continue walking upon the floor with Jeremy-Y, and have a look around at our other surroundings, taking particular note of any hints pertaining to where we might be walking to, or whether there's a cafeteria nearby.

written by Gligar on Dec 28, 2011 15:08

Roadway, A level

While L4-O keeps watching the PowServ clones go through the checkpoint, Jam-Y finally realises the box problem.

He looks at his box. He looks at the other box. He even touches the other box. Yes, it's definitely there.

The question is, why? If it the work of some kind of mutation? Hew checks his list... no, it's not on there. Some high-clearance thing, then?

As he's pondering that, the PowServ clones return from the checkpoint. L4-O directs Nukabot to continue.

Deep subsector lift

Mango waits. He seems to be thinking treasonous thoughts. He's still adamant about trying to leave.

The lift continues to rise.

Corridors, P Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R tells Jeremy-Y that he;s happy with the floor, and looks around.

It seems that Jeremy-Y is leading him through an ORANGE area. To... that office there, apparently.

He can't see a cafeteria, though.

HPD&MC Office of Housing Assignment, P Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R follows Jeremy-Y into the office. His first impression is the huge size of the place - it is larger than might be suggested by the spacing of the doors outside. Rows upon rows of jet-black desks stretch back quite a distance, with clerks typing away on Computer terminals, or marching smartly between desks. The ceiling of the office is covered with pneumatic tubes for the message delivery system, which consists of a multitude of message pods shuttling to and fro via whatever complicated system this office uses.

But all of this pales in significance compared to the overwhelming silence that permeates the office. Absolutely no-one is talking, or even making any noise at all.

Those keyboards must be the special no-noise model.

Jeremy-Y looks at Cryo-R, motions for silence, and walks over to one of the marching clerks. He hands the clerk a piece of paper. The clerk nods, and walks over to a message tube. He produces a pod, places the piece of paper in the pod, and inserts it into a message tube.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 28, 2011 15:48

"Any of you have any idea what's up with that checkpoint. Something seemed... odd."

I look a little concerned, and I glance back at the checkpoint as we move away.

written by Jam on Dec 28, 2011 18:00

I take out a spanner and carefully place it in the box I'm holding...

Then I run after Nukabot and look in the other box, to see if a spanner has somehow appeared in that box...

written by Speeder on Dec 28, 2011 18:15

I pay attention to the results of the Jam experiment.

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 28, 2011 19:33⁶⁹⁶

I watch with great interest in the results of this experiment, the implications are extraordinary!

written by Malkom on Dec 28, 2011 20:47

Warning: cranial cavity breach initiated by <CHAINSAW/59e598fff835ef85938efab9853829v88539838fdfe f898teeeffefggaaacdc8a98c>

written by Gligar on Dec 28, 2011 21:12

Roadway, A level

L4-O voices his opinion that there was something... off about that checkpoint... He glances back. Some more clones are being scanned.

Jam-Y is more interested in this box-that-is-in-two-places-at-once. He decides to run a little experiment and, pulling out one of his spanners, places it in the box he is holding. This done, he runs up to the still-in-motion Nukabot and opens its box.

There is a spanner in the box.

He realises that both Speed-Y and Azir-R have been watching him.

⁶⁹⁶ AZIRPHAELI: (OOC: Sorry guys, been on xmas vacation... and I come back to a magic teleportation box, awesome!)

Rapt-G's lab, T level, Gamma Subsector

Hey, why isn't the link restored yet?! Don't make me go down there!

written by Malkom on Dec 28, 2011 21:54

Warning: cranial cavity rupture!

Warning: cranial cavity rupture!

Warning: cranial cavity rupture!

[snip]

Warning: cranial cavity rupture!

Warning: foreign objects detected in cranial cavity!

Warning: foreign activity detected in cranial cavity!

written by Jam on Dec 28, 2011 22:28⁶⁹⁷

I carefully take the spanner out of Nukabot's box...

"This wasn't in here before, was it?"

I check if the spanner I put in the box I'm holding is still there...

"Do you guys know what this means? This must be some sort of new R&D experimental box that can be in two places at once!"

I check how large the box is, and if it'd be big enough to hold, say, a Jam-Y-sized clone...

⁶⁹⁷ JAM: (ooc: What happened to Malkom's avatar? Is that some kind of bug with Postline, or is that supposed to happen?)

(ooc: Also, looks like Azir-R's prediction back on page 470 came true!
😊)

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 28, 2011 23:03

"Imagine the possibilities of this. Like, how great is the range on these things? Could we send small items to team members from sector to sector through our boxes. Also, can we see hands in the boxes? I mean, this is amazing!"

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 28, 2011 23:17

I open my eyes.

"I must be losing my mind or something."

written by Speeder on Dec 29, 2011 01:21

After a while looking at the boxes I comment.

"Nice, we can teleport stuff around now... I guess the box need to be closed to it work but... Hey, now if we ever need to split in two teams, we can hand stuff from one team to the other!"

I try to wonder what happened to result in a sort of quantum split of the box.

written by Gligar on Dec 29, 2011 02:03

Roadway, A level

Jam-Y removes the spanner from Nukabot's box. That wasn't there before, was it?

He checks his own box. The spanner is gone.

Jam-Y then announces his conclusion: they have somehow come into possession of an R&D experimental box capable of being in two places at once!

He looks at the box. It seems to be about 50cm on a side by about 70cm high. A clone might fit in there if he were small... which Jam-Y is not...

Rules (updated 27 December 2011)

- You are all playing this game. Yes, even you.
- Stats will be rolled up as and when they are needed. For the start, there will be no character sheets since nothing's been defined.
- There's are no time limits involved. I will post updates when I consider there to be enough material.
- Perversity points ~~will work as before~~: Players start with 10 and can win them for interesting posts. They can be spent to influence in-game events, such as to make something happen, or to help or hinder another player.
- Trolls, munchkins, minmaxers, etc. etc. are classed as Commie Mutant Traitors and will be erased.
- Those who haven't taken control of their character yet, and those who have been out of the game for a while, should send me a PM indicating that they wish to do so.
- Please avoid formatting your text in such a way that it is not visible. If you wish to send something to me alone, please send me a PM. Remember that the text of this thread is being backed up into a local file. Invisible text is included without its formatting.
- You should not assume that things will succeed (except for certain trivial things). For instance, if I don't mention an object, it probably doesn't exist. If I've mentioned it before and you've returned to its location, it might still be there, but it might have moved. Similarly, if someone's trying to punch you, for instance, don't just say "I dodge, and hit him back". Both of those thing require dice rolls on my end, and the dice might decide to hate you. (Dice have a mind of their own sometimes. It's best to appease them.) A better way of phrasing the example might be "I attempt to dodge. If I succeed, I try to return the punch."
- Don't wait for everyone else to post. If you want to post, do so. Do try not to post too many times per turn, though. Once or twice per turn is usually sufficient.
- If you run out of clones (or are otherwise uable to continue using your character), you are free to create another character. HOWEVER, the new character must be different. Don't just give me Old Citizen 2.0. Especially if your old character was erased.
- You may control one character at a time. Please do not attempt to create and/or control arbitrary NPCs without my consent.
- This is not a Zap game. Don't arbitrarily get yourself killed for no reason. Doing this a lot might be funny to you, but does not fit the tone of this game.

Azir-R encourages everyone to think of the possibilities of such a box. How long is its range, for example? Are such things as hands visible in the boxes?

Speed-Y thinks that the boxes are nice. If they ever need to split up, they can send items between subgroups... He tries to work out exactly how the box happened, but just ends up with a headache.

The Industrial Subsectors, or rather, the omnipresent clouds that hang over them, loom in the distance.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Inside, a clone, Mango-NHG, wakes from a... rather odd dream. He must be losing his mind, he reasons.

He dimly remembers the advice given to Junior Citizens about odd dreams: go find a confession booth.

written by Speeder on Dec 29, 2011 03:44⁶⁹⁸

I look at the box for a while, but upon realizing that it will probably melt my brain or my memomax chjp or something like that, I give up.

⁶⁹⁸ SPEEDER: (OOC: I will take a trip to my grandma home for her marriage anniversary... I dunno if I will be able to post... there are a computer there with internet, but there are also quite a competition for it...)

written by Jam on Dec 29, 2011 03:51

I look slightly disappointed that the box is too small to fit inside, but then I cheer up...

"Hey, I wonder what would happen if we put one of the boxes inside the other! Or would we be putting the box inside itself? That's confusing..."

I think about that problem, and the term "infinite recursion" dimly comes to mind. After that, I get a sudden headache, and I decide to just not think about the whole putting-the-box-inside-itself problem.

Instead, I stick my hand inside the box I'm carrying, and wiggle my fingers around...

"Okay, does anyone see a hand in the other box?"

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 29, 2011 04:29

I look in the box to report back on whether Jam's hand is in there,

written by Granpire viking man on Dec 29, 2011 06:10

"This is quite wonderful! I had no idea just how remarkable the box was."

“Strange, though. I don’t remember seeing Mick-R’s ME card inside the box when I looked in it to take some hygiene supplies. At what point was the box changed?”

written by Lightning4 on Dec 29, 2011 13:09

“That... does not sound like a good idea. Though maybe we can give it to some commies and tell THEM to put the box inside the other box, and see what happens...”

I examine the box(es) from my location too.

“Curious things. I wonder how that happened... I don’t recall there being more than one Hygiene box. Then again, maybe I miscounted... in which case I failed as an equipment officer...”

written by Gligar on Dec 29, 2011 17:44

Roadway, A level

Speed-Y keeps looking at the box(es) for a while longer, but eventually gives up. He doesn’t want to burn anything out after all.

Jam-Y looks disappointed that he wouldn’t fit inside, but cheers up quickly. He starts thinking about what would happen if they put one box inside the other, but also gets a headache from it. It would probably involve infinite recursion, or perhaps division by zero, or some other treasonous concept...

He ultimately decides on a simpler test. He sticks his hand in his box and wiggles it around. He asks if someone can see his hand in the other box.

Azir-R goes to have a look. Sure enough, Jam-Y’s hand is visible in the box.

King-R thinks that the box is wonderful.

But he doesn’t remember seeing Mick-R’s ME Card in Nukabot’s box. So... when did it change?

L4-O thinks that putting both boxes inside each other would be a bad idea. Perhaps they could trick some commies into doing it?

He looks at the boxes again. He just realises that he had failed to notice that there were two boxes. That must mean that he has failed as an Equipment Officer.

The Industrial Subsectors loom ever closer.

written by Jam on Dec 29, 2011 19:01

I look at L4-O...

“You know, technically there is only one Hygiene box, that somehow exists in two places at once... Hmm... I wonder what that would look like...”

I decide to find out, by sticking my head into the box and trying to look out...

written by Gligar on Dec 29, 2011 22:02

Roadway, A level

Jam-Y points out to L4-O that it’s really just the one box. In two places at once, granted, but still just the one box. He wonders what it looks like to...

And promptly sticks his head into his box... whoa, that’s an odd feeling. Jam-Y gets the impression that having one’s head in two places at once is... far from optimal. But he does get to see a sort of overlay effect when he turns his head to look outside the box.

written by Malkom on Dec 29, 2011 23:57

Warning: foreign sealant applied to cranial cavity breach.⁶⁹⁹

written by Gligar on Dec 30, 2011 01:12

Roadway, A level

The Industrial Subsectors get closer and closer.

After a minutecycle or so, Nukabot comes to a halt. It has reached yet another checkpoint, this time at the Industrial Subsectors themselves.

This is probably a good thing, since the team has now entered the black cloud of... whatever it is. It is noticeably harder to breathe than before.

HPD&MC Office of Housing Assignment, P Level, Gamma Subsector

Jeremy-Y and Cryo-R wait. Their forms seems to have passed through the overhead message system, landed on someone’s desk, entered into a Computer Terminal, and is apparently being processed by whatever subsystem handles housing reassignment requests. All in complete silence.

Rapt-G’s Lab, T Level, Gamma Subsector

Meanwhile, several levels above, a connection is restored! 😊

This is probably because Rapt-G is speaking to someone over his PDC.

Mick-R still has his head open. The docbot is in the process of installing some kind of data access port.

“Well, hurry up,” Rapt-G is saying. “These memory chips can’t handle the amount of memories that a clone generates over his lifetime. I need more. Get that external pack to me ASAP.”

written by Cryoburner on Dec 30, 2011 03:04

I more closely examine the series of tubes running throughout the room, paying particular attention to the ways in which they differ from a big truckbot, which theoretically could also be used to carry messages from one desk to another.

⁶⁹⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: Again with the assuming...

Also, you’re not an android. So I really don’t think you need that.)

written by Jam on Dec 30, 2011 04:13 Roadway checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors, A Level

“Woah... That’s weird... It’s like I’m in two places at once...”

I pull my head out of the box.

“That’s... Ohhh, I feel kinda... uh...”

I suddenly fall over...

“Hang on a sec, I’m okay... Just a bit dizzy...”

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 30, 2011 04:31

Hmmm... you know... I have an idea ⁷⁰⁰ hey Jam clear out. I wait for him to move and yell catch!

I throw, with adequate but not extensive force, a can of B3 into the box, angled so that it should pop back out heading gingerly towards Jam for him to catch and enjoy.

written by Malkom on Dec 30, 2011 04:32

I feel a vast eternity of nothingness. With no concept of spacetime, infinity == null. Yes no?

written by Lightning4 on Dec 30, 2011 05:49

I cough a bit.

“Let’s get inside. Maybe the air is better in there than out here.”

I present my ME card and do whatever is required of me at this checkpoint.

written by Gligar on Dec 30, 2011 15:04

HPD&MC Office of Housing Assignment, P Level, Gamma Subsector

While he waits, Cryo-R decides to examine the pneumatic tubes attached to the ceiling. The way they crisscross like that, allowing message pods to drop gently onto their destination desks with a minimum of noise and effort*, somehow reminds him of those big truckbots, which transfer important cargoes between sectors. Theoretically, one could be used to transport messages between desks, were it not for several important issues: 1) a big truckbot would not fit through the corridor leading to the office, much less the door they used to enter; 2) a big truckbot would not fit between desks, and would, in all probability, crush many of the desks as it tried to deliver its messages; 3) a big truckbot would generate an excessive amount of noise. In addition to being highly distracting, the noise would be out of place in an office which seems to strive for complete silence. Even the thought of speaking seems a bad idea here.

* It should be noted that message pods hardly ever drop onto the wrong desk. The routing system is efficient enough that the chance of that happening is less than [DELETED FOR SECURITY REASONS]%.
⁷⁰⁰ AZIRPHAELI: (OOO from an old Call of Cthulhu campaign where old man Roger Wilson found a similar box, and...)

Jam-Y pulls his head out of the box. The act of putting it in two places at once has left him rather dizzy and disoriented, so much so that he ends up collapsing to the floor.

Azir-R has an idea. Taking out a can of B3, he gently throws it, such that it should land in Nukabot’s box. And it does.

It then passes through the box and drops about 8cm to the floor, where it rolls a short distance, coming to rest near Jam-Y’s head. (He’s still on the floor, remember?)

L4-O coughs. he suggests that they get inside quickly.

He heads into the checkpoint and presents his ME Card. As it happens, there is just one guard on duty. He is wearing a filter mask.

“What is your business in the Industrial Subsectors?” he asks.

Rapt-G’s lab, T level, Gamma Subsector

It looks like the docbot is just finishing up, having installed the memory chips on hand.

But Rapt-G is still waiting on the delivery of the other chips. The question is, where will those fit, if not in Mick-R’s head?

written by Speeder on Dec 30, 2011 15:39

I get kinda unhappy and annoyed.

“This is not safe for YELLOW citizens, why I have to breath this thing?”

I try to do whatever things are required in the checkpoint the fast as possible.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 30, 2011 15:56

“We’re Troubleshooter Team Epsilon, here to investigate some sort of power disturbance in the sector. One very likely related to treasony treasonous treasondoer clones.”

I frown.

written by Malkom on Dec 30, 2011 18:59

There seems to be something wrong with the nothingness. It’s.... green? And hard. And chippy, like silicon. That’s not much like eternal nothingness.

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 30, 2011 19:56

I am still hung up on the box.

“Imagine is we gingerly placed one box in a commie headquarters... and then another we weigh down and plunge to the bottom of a huge reservoir tank. We can flood the commies out.”

written by Gligar on Dec 30, 2011 21:10

Roadway checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors, A Level

Speed-Y looks annoyed. He believes that the air is not safe for him to breathe here.

L4-O presents his ME Card to the guard, explains that they’re Team Epsilon, and that they’re here to investigate the power failures. The guard reacts. "I thought you'd be here ages ago," he says. "You'd better present yourselves to the main office in Building 1 of Subsector B. They may have more details for you... and you could probably get some breathers or something as well. Can I have the Team Leader's card?"

Eager to get inside, Speed-Y offers it to him. He scans the card. "Alright. I'm not keeping you."

Azir-R is still fixated on the box. He outlines a suggestion that could potentially flood a commie bunker. But then, how would you get the box back?

Rapt-G's lab, T level, Gamma Subsector

There is a knock on the door. Rapt-G opens it, revealing a deliverybot carrying a box. He takes the box, signs a big sheaf of papers, licks something like six tongueprint scanners, swipes his ME Card through a couple of slots, and closes the door, before finally opening the box.

It contains what appears to be a good number of memory chips.

written by Jam on Dec 30, 2011 21:17

"Hey, cool!"

I pick up the B3.

Then I listen to Azir-R's suggestion.

"The problem is, we need to find a commie headquarters first. Interesting idea though..."

I try to gently toss the B3 back through the box...

written by Malkom on Dec 30, 2011 21:27

The green chippiness recedes, to be replaced by a feverish dream...

Click click. I stare at the lines of code in front of me and feel cold. I'll never complete this hack in time! They're getting closer, closer, closer...

Wait...

If I put a JMP in here, vector... three... spaces forwards... that should do it. I have to shift the rest of the file another five bytes to accommodate the new instruction. Click on the icon, I reach for a key- wait, what's that noise...?

No... it can't be! I had another fifteen minutes! They promised me!

written by Cryoburner on Dec 31, 2011 01:58

Having determined that the tubes are likely an adequate solution to the problem of frequent desk-crushings, I have another look at the tube that carried Jeremy-Y's message, and see if I can visually follow the tube's path to determine which desk the message may have been sent to. Perhaps that clone needs assistance. If I can't determine where it went, I just look around for any clone who looks as though they could use assistance.

written by Gligar on Dec 31, 2011 02:21

Roadway checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors, A Level

Jam-Y seems to have recovered enough to appreciate Azir-R's experiment. His suggestion, however, carries the small problem that they would need to find a commie headquarters first.

He picks up the can of B3 and tries to return it in the same manner. It almost looks like fun.

That black stuff begins to settle on jumpsuits, boxes, B3, Nukabot...

HPD&MC Office of Housing Assignment, P Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R continues with his investigation of the overhead tubes. He is now trying to trace the path of Jeremy-Y's message through the network of crisscrossing tubes, to find the desk of the clone who is handling his housing reassignment. Let's see... it goes up there, makes a left there, then right through that junction, then straight through... no wait, it went left there... Or did it... hang on, that junction has seven right angles! He gives up, and just looks around. Wow, this office really is efficient. It looks as if everyclone knows how to do their jobs without needing help. Cryo-R kind of looks disappointed.

Another message makes its way through the tubes towards where Jeremy-Y and the clerk are waiting. It lands in the receptacle with a [no sound], where the clerk opens it, and hands the contents to Jeremy-Y. The YELLOW heads over to Cryo-R and indicates that he should follow.

Rapt-G's lab, T level, Gamma Subsector

We can now see how Rapt-G intends to interface these memory chips with the experimental chips inserted into Mick-R: by putting them into a special backpack. The backpack would presumably connect to that access port.

He instructs the docbot to wake Mick-R.

written by Jam on Dec 31, 2011 02:52

I notice the black stuff settling on everything, and notice we're right in front of the Industrial Subsectors.

"Oh, we're here! That was fast..."

written by Azirphaeli on Dec 31, 2011 03:31

Yeah, now lets try and get out of here asap.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 31, 2011 05:24

I think very quietly to myself.

Why do I have to think about all this? Why can't I just be someone else?

I decide to get up.

written by Malkom on Dec 31, 2011 05:46

Oh, Computer take it all, it's Intsec. With... nailguns? Oh gosh, that must be painful to have shoved through your eyeba-

I wake up sweating, to see a docbot pumping some kind of fluid into me.

"AAAH INTSEC WITH NAILGUNS! GET THE NAILGUN AWAY FROM ME, QUICKLY!"

I try to jerk away, and notice that I'm being held down. I scream.

Loudly.

Make that... very loudly.

Ow. I may have damaged my larynx.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 31, 2011 06:44

"Well, let's go then. Building 1, Subsector B, Nukabot!"

"Wherever that is..."

I cough a little and wipe some of the dust off of me.

written by Gligar on Dec 31, 2011 15:01

Roadway checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors, A Level

Noticing the black stuff settling on everything, Jam-Y realises that they must be here. Azir-R confirms, and suggests that they get inside.

L4-O agrees, and instructs Nukabot to proceed.

Okay... Subsector B seems to be that side... and then.... Building 1... which is that?

Oh right... a sign. It's that one.

Nukabot soon pulls up to the building's entrance.

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango gets off his bed. He seems to want to be someone else. Sadly, this is not an option.

It turns out that he is not alone in the dorm. Another clones stands by the door, waiting.

Rapt-G's lab, T level, Gamma Subsector

MickR wakes with a start. He seems to have been dreaming.

He babbles something about nailguns before screaming (when he realises that he's being held.)

"SHUT UP!" one of the goons yells, punching him in the stomach.

"It looks like your brain still works," Rapt-G says, uncovering his ears. "But you might want to save your breath. There are more tests coming. For instance, your memory capacity is now way below normal. If you co-operate, I'll let you test this backpack." He holds up the special backpack.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 31, 2011 16:38

I survey whether Nukabot will fit in the door. If so, I tell it to proceed. If not, I get off and go in myself.

Either way, once inside, I look around for the direction of the Main Office.

"Let's see... main office, main office... hm."

written by Jam on Dec 31, 2011 16:44

I follow along, and look around for anything treasonous that might be happening...

written by 4616599 on Dec 31, 2011 17:33

I seem to remember something.

I glance around.

"Why do I have the feeling there should be a crashed Transition around here?"

written by Gligar on Dec 31, 2011 21:20

Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O has a look at the building's entrance. It looks like a regular clone entrance, not suitable for large bots. As such, Nukabot won't fit through it.

He heads inside.

Jam-Y arrives not long after Nukabot, along with the PowServ team.

As he arrives, Joris-R can't help but think that there should be a wrecked Transition somewhere around here. But if there was, it has most likely been moved since the last time an "anti-mutant suit"-wearing clone tried to pass through here.

Foyer, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O enters, and breathes a sigh of relief at getting out of the worst of the black stuff. But even though most of the black stuff is staying outside, he finds it a little difficult to breathe.

The place is dark. Around the walls, L4-O can see more of those "emergency lights", illuminating a RED clearance stripe. On the far wall, a sign indicates the presence of the main office in one direction, and a dormitory in the other. Also present is a noticeboard.

written by Jam on Dec 31, 2011 22:32

I follow L4-O, since he seems like he knows where he's going...

"Hmm... Kinda dark in here..."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 01, 2012 00:59

I take a look at the notice board before I proceed into the direction of the Main Office.

"Yeah... not very easy to breathe in here either."

written by Speeder on Jan 01, 2012 13:48 Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

I get annoyed with the black stuff making my YELLOW jumpsuit look like infrared.

I shake them off the best I can, and then follow the team searching for the Office...

Actually following the sign when I find it.

written by Gligar on Jan 01, 2012 16:43

Foyer, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y enters Building 1, trailed by Speed-Y and the rest of the team. He notices how dark it is.

L4-O points out the air quality to him, and glances at the noticeboard. There are a few notices posted, mostly advising about quotas and workcycle changes. One catches his eye, though: a list of recent reactor shielding volunteers. One name on there is familiar: Mango-NHG. Apparently, he was scheduled to complete two duty sessions, one yesterday, and one today.

L4-O begins to follow the sign, followed by the rest. Speed-Y tries to brush some of the black stuff off from his jumpsuit.

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

The sign points down a corridor, leading past two more doors, and finally reaching what seems to be a reception area. There doesn't seem to be a receptionist on duty, though. Instead, several ORANGE clones seem to be holding an impromptu meeting, and are apparently discussing the power problem.

written by Malkom on Jan 01, 2012 18:18

"What's that? Are there nailguns in it? Or cyberware? Can I taste some of the cyberware? Or perhaps there's mushroom spores in it that grow fungus in my head and control my thoughts! No thank you!"

written by Jam on Jan 01, 2012 19:06

I listen in on the meeting...

written by Gligar on Jan 01, 2012 21:24

Rapt-G's lab, T Level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R wants to know what the backpack contains. He thinks it might be nailguns, or cyberware (which he wants to taste), or perhaps fungal spores that will latch on and take control of him...

"I have several questions about what you just asked," Rapt-G replies, "but we can save that for the confession booth. In fact, the backpack contains additional memory chips. The human brain is capable of storing many orders of magnitude more data than even the most complex bot brain. It would take an idea bot to fully store a MemoMax backup. As such, it takes far more computer chips than will fit into your head to make up for the amount that you lost during the aborted overwrite. If you accept my terms, you will be restored to full capacity again. Of course, if you don't, you might end up forgetting things. Like breathing."

Jam-Y listens in on the ORANGE meeting.

One clone is talking about the "emergency lights" being totally unlike anything that Tech Services has fielded before. She isn't sure that they're the right thing here. But one of her colleagues thinks otherwise. "They give off light, don't they?"

"That's not the point. Some of them are being set up close to the production lines in Building 3! And you've all read the reports about those lines... I just hope that team gets here."

None of them seem to have noticed the big group of clones who just entered.

written by Speeder on Jan 01, 2012 22:21

I approach them.

"Excuse me, I am the leader of Team Epsilon, in charge of escorting and assisting a Power Services team in fixing the problems. Can you help us?"

Also, is the production lines in Building 3 flammable? A accident with those emergency lights delayed us and also made very obvious what they can do..."

written by Jam on Jan 01, 2012 22:47

"Er... What accident? Is my memory going again?"

written by Gligar on Jan 02, 2012 01:25

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y speaks up for the team, introducing himself as the Team Leader for Team Epsilon. He tells them that they have a Power Services team with them.

He also asks about the production lines, wondering if they are flammable. He explains that they have encountered the "emergency lights" earlier, and ended up getting into an accident with them.

Jam-Y is confused. He doesn't remember an accident... perhaps his memory is playing up again?

"An accident?" asks the female ORANGE. "Could you explain the accident for us? Or rather, for the rest of the nonbelievers here? They seem to believe that the lights are far enough away from the lines to not cause any problems... but I've been in there, and I can tell you that yes, things can catch fire rather quickly.

"Now normally, that's not a problem, but with these lights..." She looks worried.

"And like I keep telling you, Joan-O, you shouldn't worry like this," her colleague interjects. "As long as no-one falls in to the machines, it'll be fine. We can't be having anyone spreading unhappiness, now can we?"

written by Speeder on Jan 02, 2012 02:07

"Well... Some clones while lighting the emergency lights entered in contact with them and suddenly got set on fire."

As we tried to bat the fire, the ones that did that ALSO got set on fire...

The clones on fire started to run around randomly in pain, and set other things on fire... The end result was lots of clones and things on fire.

The only way to end it, was a cone shell that removes oxygen from the place, unfortunately that also killed two of our own clones that were not on fire."

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 02, 2012 05:30

I listen earnestly to Speeder's story and comment, "I think it's important to notify other clones that running around spontaneously is not beneficial to them, and that it poses a health risk to other clones."

"This sort of behavior is illogical, and needs to be stopped, especially in cases of self-combustion," I explain, "Hopefully this will increase our chances of success."

written by Malkom on Jan 02, 2012 06:18

I look confused. "Terms? What's a term? Are they edible?"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 02, 2012 07:27

"And it also poses a threat to the property of Friend Computer... hence having to use that shell as we had no fire-suppressant equipment handy... alas, that shell would've been great against commies. Maybe I've got another one in here somewhere..."

"So, we're here and we hear there are problems regarding the power here?"

written by Cryoburner on Jan 02, 2012 10:29

I follow Jeremy-Y, giving a thumbs-up to the deskclones as I pass, in approval of their high levels of efficiency.

written by Gligar on Jan 02, 2012 16:37

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y explains about their previous encounter with the lights: some of the clone lighting them somehow lit themselves on fire. The fire somehow spread to clones who attempted to extinguish them. A lot of running around ensued, setting more things ablaze. They ultimately had to resort to using an oxygen suppression cone rifle shell. But even that had its problems, of the clones-dying variety.

King-R points out that running around screaming is not the proper way to handle being on fire, and states that it is a health risk to others. It is important to educate clones of this, especially in cases where being set on fire is likely to happen. Maybe it'll help them.

L4-O adds that, in addition to be a danger to clones, being on fire is also a danger to Computer Property. Which is one reason why they had to use that shell, as there was no fire suppression equipment handy. He would have preferred to use it against commies, though. Perhaps he has another one somewhere.

But enough of that. He inquires about the power problem. One of the other clones interrupts him. "Wait, how can you have a cone rifle? Aren't those BLUE? And isn't possession of cone rifle shells big-time terminate-you-if-you're-caught treason?"

Rapt-G's lab, T Level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R doesn't seem to understand what "terms" are. Are they something you eat?

Rapt-G facepalms. "Look, just say 'I agree', okay? Failing to agree is treason."

Corridors, P Level, Gamma Subsector

Waving to the deskclones, Cryo-R heads out, following Jeremy-Y.

Once they're out of the door, Jeremy-Y says, "Thank you for not speaking in there. The last clone who tries to speak... didn't emerge from the office. But anyway. You've been assigned accommodation several levels below, over in Alpha Subsector. We'll be heading down there so that you can claim a bunk, before heading to your place of work."

written by Speeder on Jan 02, 2012 17:17

I point to L4.

"He is with the Armed Forces when not working as Troubleshooter, and also have a special Cone Rifle brevet. We got permission for that on our last mission when it was the only decent weapon that we found... And since we made a great job, we could keep it."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 02, 2012 20:00

I smile.

"Yup! No treason here. And... I'm not sure if the punishment is that high. I know they're BLUE, but I thought the instant termination didn't start until at least INDIGO. I could be wrong though... still need to brush up on my weapons and clearance-infracton punishments."

I ponder over the matter, at least until I'm interrupted by mission-related conversation.

"Doesn't matter either way, since I'm cleared to use it and all..."

written by Malkom on Jan 02, 2012 20:28

"Well, could you tell me what treason is first?"

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 02, 2012 20:53

I look over at the new arrival, and take a brief overview of their appearance.

"Hi."

written by Jam on Jan 02, 2012 22:39

"Oh, I remember the oxygen-removing cone rifle shell..."

I smile, and walk up the one of the 'emergency lights'. I inspect it, without getting too close to the flame...

"Hmm..."

written by Gligar on Jan 02, 2012 23:32

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Gee, Speed-Y's doing an awful lot of explaining, isn't he?

This time, he talks about L4-O and his cone rifle, and how he came to acquire it. L4-O confirms, though he thought that the instant termination didn't kick in until INDIGO. Unless he's wrong, of course... he needs to brush up on that.

Though, as he says, it doesn't really matter, what with him being cleared for it.

"Have you got the brevet's number handy?" the clone asks. "You can never be sure with brevets. There are fakes going round."

As it turns out, Jam-Y remembers the cone rifle shell. He goes over to the nearest "emergency light", which happens to be near a door leading further into the office, and has a look at it. It seems to consist of a black rod of some waxy substance, with some kind of string sticking out of the top. The string is lit. This is attached to some sort of special metallic holder, which has been fixed to the wall.

Rapt-G's lab, T Level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R has one more question: what is treason?

Rapt-G facepalms again, extracts some sort of pill from his pocket, and eats it. "Asking too many questions is treason. Not co-operating with me is treason. Lots of things are treason. Treason is doing what is not allowed. Now, no more questions. Do you agree or not?"

Various clicks and things indicate that the IntSec clones have readied their weapons. Rapt-G adds, "If you don't agree, the guards will open fire."

Yay, the sign makes another appearance!

written by Cryoburner on Jan 03, 2012 00:20

"Oh, was I not supposed to talk back there? I thought everyone was just being quiet to help me concentrate on all the important things I was concentrating on. I, of course, wasn't talking as I was busy concentrating."

"Anyway, that sounds really important! We should head down right away!"

I hurry off in a direction where it seems a lift might be found. If I manage to locate one, I begin rapidly pressing its call button.

written by Jam on Jan 03, 2012 00:39

"You know... If I didn't know any better, I'd have thought that string was some sort of fuse or something..."

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 03, 2012 02:08

My eyes widen and I start to think of ways to blow out the fuse.

"Whatever you do, don't touch it! Better yet, don't even get near it. You know what happened to those other clones."

"Maybe we can blow on it, or spit on it. Who is the furthest spitter?"

written by Gligar on Jan 03, 2012 03:21

Corridors, P Level, Gamma Subsector

Apparently, Cryo-R wasn't even aware that he wasn't supposed to talk in there. He thought that everyone was being quiet for his benefit... Oh, well. It got the job done, right?

He agrees that going to the dormitory is important, and begins to head towards a lift - specifically, the one he remembers. Jeremy-Y follows along after him.

Lift hall, P Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo enters ahead of Jeremy-Y, and... er... "tests" the call button by mashing it.

Jeremy-Y enters, and notices. "Er... it's standard practice to only press the button once," he suggests. "After all, there are reports of liftbots deliberately running slow when they detect a clone mashing the call button."

Indeed, the lift does seem to be taking its time getting here...

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y looks critically at the burning string. If he didn't know any better, he would have thought it was a fuse or something...

King-R cautions everyclone to not approach it. He suggests that they could blow on it, or maybe spit on it... who can spit the furthest?

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango notices the other clone, and greets him.

"It's Mango-NHG, right?" asks the other clone. "I have a message for you."

The newcomer, a RED clone with PLC insignia on his jumpsuit, shows him a message packet, along with a form. "Just sign here, please."

written by Malkom on Jan 03, 2012 05:16

"I agree, and what does that mean?"

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 03, 2012 07:12

Knowing that I failed miserably at my last spitting contest, I wait for someone else to take initiative.

That, or find a better way to put out a burning fuse. Just how quickly is the fuse burning, anyway?

I decide to cautiously creep up to the fuse and inspect it from a distance that seems reasonably far enough not to catch fire.

Is it really even a fuse?

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 03, 2012 10:58

"Right," I reply.

I take the form and sign it.

Mango-NHG

I then take the message packet.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 03, 2012 12:53

I take out my brevet and pause for a moment to think whether that's something I should be doing or not.

If it is, then I proceed to show the brevet.

Once that is dealt with, I put it securely away.

written by Jam on Jan 03, 2012 13:05

I start panicking, and try to blow on the fuse to put it out...

written by Gligar on Jan 03, 2012 16:32

Rapt-G's lab, T Level, Gamma Subsector

Faced with such options, Mick-R agrees... and then asks what it means.

Rapt-G ignores the question. "Excellent! Now, put this on."

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

King-R remembers that he's not very good at spitting, and since noclone has come forward, he abandons that idea. He instead turns his attention to the string. It doesn't seem to be burning away all that fast... and you have to admit, it does give out light, if not as much as regular lights.

Perhaps it isn't even a fuse.

Jam-Y panics. To him, it's clearly a fuse... He tries to blow it out. It stubbornly doesn't want to go out.

L4-O takes out his brevet and studies it. Yes, there's the number... but is it alright to show it? Ah, yes... it says right there that it's okay to show it if requested. He does.

"Thanks," the clone replies. "It always pays to stay alert..."

"Now, on to other matters." The clone sorts through some papers, and finds something. "We started having power problems yesterdaycycle, around the time that the latest group of reactor shielding volunteers went to the reactor. Since then, the problems have spread from Building 2 to all three buildings in this subsector, and the three in Suubsector 1. From what you tell us, it seems that there are problems in the main domescraper as well?"

"Speaking of power," John-R puts in, "I'll have to ask everyone who hasn't turned their lights on to do so. Recent footage isn't very good."

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango confirms his name, and signs the form.

The deliveryclone thanks him. "Have a pleasant daycycle, citizen." He then heads out.

Mango looks at the packet. It's a standard message packet, with the Crash Priority logo. Which makes sense, since they're one of the main logistics firms hereabouts. There's a strip marked Open Here, but there is no clue as to who sent the message.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 03, 2012 16:59

I check to make sure my light is on, then proceed with the conversation.

"Yes, there's problems in the main domescraper too. Some levels had clones setting up the same emergency lights."

I think back.

"I questioned one of them... said a clone by the name of John-G issued the order to put them up. Not sure if there's any relevancy, probably just someclone wanting to keep the lights on."

"Anywhere you want us to start our search? The reactor, by the sounds of it?"

I turn to the Power Services group.

"Or perhaps you guys have an idea?"

written by Speeder on Jan 03, 2012 17:35

I think a bit.

"Is that the same team that Mango was part of?"

I point to the sign where Mango name is mentioned.

written by Malkom on Jan 03, 2012 18:49

I reach for it and try to pull it onto one of my feet.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 03, 2012 21:20

Seeing as there is no visible indication of the sender on the outside, I attempt to open the packet via pulling the strip.

I read the message if it's there, considering that the contents would be highly likely to be of importance as well.

"Hmm..."

written by Cryoburner on Jan 03, 2012 21:39

I stop pressing the button.

"Hmm... You would think the liftbots would move faster, assuming there were hundreds of clones in the lift hall, all waiting for a lift. Maybe it would be a good idea to consult a lift expert about this. I actually have a friend who is such an expert, albeit not a very good one."

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 03, 2012 21:51

"I'm at a loss, so I shall defer judgement to our leader."

written by Gligar on Jan 03, 2012 22:44

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O checks his light, turns it on, and continues. There are problems in the main domescraper, and the lights are being installed there as well. When questioned, one of the clones

If I remember right, the liftbots are currently out of commission. Oh well, I guess I'll have to wait for Power Services or something to get on it before I start making use of them again.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 04, 2012 12:47

Oblivious to what Jam-Y is doing, I reflect on the PowServ team.

"Hmm. It's a good an idea as anyway, I guess we could start there."

I finally notice Jam-Y doing... things.

"Or find Mango. Then go to Building 2."

"OH! I nearly forgot. I don't suppose you have air filters for us? It's not very friendly out there. Certainly not cleared for ORANGE and above..."

written by Jam on Jan 04, 2012 13:19

"Found him! He's... er... That way!"

I point.

"...in the next building over, a few levels up."

I look at the clones that suddenly backed away from me...

"What? I'm not going to explode or anything!"

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 04, 2012 13:24

"I appreciate your devotion and attention to everything you're doing, clones, BUT THERE'S A BURNING FUSE HERE!"

"DOES ANYONE HAVE A FIRE-RETARDANT? Or something?!"

I search frantically around the room for one. I don't care if it's a fuse, I'm putting this thing out.

written by Speeder on Jan 04, 2012 14:39

"If you quench that fire we will be in the dark, do not mess with it!"

And then I comment.

"And don't scream, it will make you breath that stuff faster... Or you forgot you are breathing some black stuff?"

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 04, 2012 16:31

"That fire is burning on a fuse!"

"Besides," I add, "L4 just turned on his light."

Then I continue searching for something liquid, or salt, or a cup, or anything else to maim the fire.

written by Gligar on Jan 04, 2012 16:56

Rapt-G's lab, T level, Gamma Subsector

After vocalising about his pain, Mick-R does what he does best: look confused.

But then he yells about nailguns and tries to run away.

He gets as far as the door before the guards open fire.

What th - they missed! See, he's out of the door already!

Rapt-G sighs. "Get him back here, please. I don't care if it's this clone or the nest one, but I'm getting test results, no matter what. He brings out the sign again. "Now..." He turns to the terminal, goes into data entry mode, and begins filling out a form:

```
Test code:      [[REDACTED] ]
Test subject:   [(17) Mick-R-NRK-4 ]
Test results:   [Inconclusive. Subject managed to escape the testing area. ]
Recommendations: [Issue an Official Reprimand for Mick-R-NRK-4. ] [Place "Unsatisfactory" mark on Mick-R-NRK's permanent record.]
```

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y hopes that Jam-Y has remembered how to control his powers... the last thing he wants is to accidentally fry someclone's mind, least of all Mango's.

He still can't remember why Mango was demoted...

L4-O thinks that the PowServ clones have a good idea. Perhaps they should head over there.

Noticing Jam-Y at work, he suggests that they could go find Mango first.

Oh wait! He just remembered! are there air filters available?

"Air filters?" asks Joan-O. "Do you mean masks? That's probably an idea. We might have some... I'm not sure." She heads off somewhere.

Jam-Y suddenly speaks up, and points in some direction. Apparently, Mango is over there. And from comments by the ORANGES, "over there" is Building 2.

Jam-Y adds that he's not going to explode or anything...

King-R is still concerned about the string., He insists, rather loudly, that they extinguish it first. He looks around for some way of extinguishing it, and finds... yes, a fire extinguisher. He attempts to use it, only to find that it's empty.

Speed-Y warns him that extinguishing it would only leave them in the dark. And, while he's at it, King-R shouldn't be yelling like that. Did he forget what he's breathing?

Dormitory 6, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango finishes reading the message and puts it back in the packet, before heading out of the dormitory. He recalls the lifts being out of commission, so he heads for the stairwell.

written by Malkom on Jan 04, 2012 20:57

I pound away as fast as I can, trying to grab a high-clearance clone's laser pistol and shoot him in the head with it if possible.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 04, 2012 21:09

I patiently wait for the clones to return. I shoot the confused, arched eyebrow look in the direction of King-R, but then go back to watching the area where the clone went.

written by Gligar on Jan 04, 2012 22:25

Corridors, P Level, Gamma Subsector

The guards pursue Mick-R as he runs.

He reaches a corner, turns... and attacks a guard, trying to get his weapon.

ZAP ZAP ZAP ZAP ZAP ZAP ZAP ZAP ZAP

Mick-R collapses to the floor with several laser wounds.

There's one good thing about it all: those chips can be reused in another project. Most likely, one that does not involve an unreasonable facsimile of an erased clone family. How unoriginal, Mick-R. Try something else next time.

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O waits for Joan-R to return while idly looking at King-R with an bemused expression.

He doesn't have to wait long. "Well, I have some good news and some bad news. The good news is, I did find some masks. The bad news is that there are only four of them."

written by Jam on Jan 04, 2012 22:49

"I don't think I'd be able to fry Mango's mind from such a distance... I'm not that powerful!"

With Mango found, I turn my attention back to the burning string...

"Oh, I've got an idea!"

I take a YELLOW B3, and start to drink it...

"We could put the fire out with some B3!"

...I continue drinking...

"..."

"You know, we aren't even sure the flame-on-a-string is a fuse... Maybe it's just a flame on a string?"

written by Speeder on Jan 04, 2012 22:55

After a while looking at Jam I say.

"Yes, this is obviously a light device with a flame on a string, it is right now very obsolete, and probably the information about how to make it is known only to Friend Computer and those it allow access to old reckoning files, but it has obviously the advantage of not being affected by electronic disruptions, thus it is quite useful... The fact it is rarely used might be related to its tendency to set stuff on fire when clones do not take the proper care near it, thinking it is only some chemical light instead of a real fire..."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 04, 2012 23:21

"Hm. Well, clearance gets priority I guess. Our two YELLOWS get them, and um..."

I glance over at the PowServ group to see if there are YELLOW clones among them, and how many.

written by Malkom on Jan 05, 2012 00:26

I feel like I'm dying. It's probably true...

"Curses! Foiled again!"

written by Gligar on Jan 05, 2012 01:33

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y claims that he is not powerful enough to fry Mango's mind from here.

With that seen to, he turns his attention back to the burning string. Perhaps they could use B3 to extinguish it? He grabs a YELLOW can and proceeds to drink it. And as it does, it occurs to him that the flame-on-a-string may not, in fact, be a fuse. Perhaps it is just... a flame on a string?

Speed-Y suggests that he might be right. The whole thing, with the rod, string and the flame it produces, may simply be an obsolete form of lighting system. So obsolete, in fact, that he suggests that few clones know how to produce it... perhaps only those whom Friend Computer trusts with access to certain ancient files dating back to the Old Reckoning... But in any case, they do have the advantage that they are unaffected by power fluctuations. There is the downside of the flame spreading to nearby materials if you get them too close, though, especially when handled by unknowledgeable clones. Perhaps that is why they are rarely used.

L4-O replies to Joan-R that clearance gets priority. This means that Speed-Y, Jam-Y, the PowServ YELLOW, and an ORANGE will get masks. The question is, who is the lucky ORANGE?

Corridors, T Level, Gamma Subsector

Mick-R manages to get out one more sentence before dying of his wounds.

Again.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 05, 2012 02:24

I shoot a doubtful look at Speed-Y, and reply, "I still think the 'lights' are too dangerous to be used."

I then whisper darkly to the others, "Also, what if they really do blow up when the fuse is gone? It might explain the power anomalies in this area. Maybe the commies have managed to sneak in illegal old reckoning technology into this sector and are using these emergency lights to blow up buildings in this sector!"

I glance again at the fuse - which I am determined it is - and think about my theory some more.

written by Jam on Jan 05, 2012 02:31

"That's a very interesting theory Speed-Y. It seems to make sense..."

Satisfied, I focus on the issue of who will get the ORANGE mask.

"Speed-Y, how about you pick a number between one and one million, and the clone that guesses closest gets the mask?"

written by Speeder on Jan 05, 2012 04:28

I look at the black stick again.

"I doubt it is explosive. If it was, we would be seeing VERY MASSIVE explosions... Considering its size, and how much of it is in use..."

I look at Jam, and then I nod and say.

"Good idea... Ok, I thought of a number! Now ORANGES, take your guesses."

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 05, 2012 11:00

I begin my way down through the stairway, walking carefully so I don't fall in the process. I note that I don't have many clones remaining.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 05, 2012 13:22

"Ooh. Fun. Ummmm."

I think long and hard.

"471,613!"

written by Gligar on Jan 05, 2012 13:52

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

King-R still believes that the light is, in fact, a fuse.

He argues that the lights exploding when they burn themselves out would explain the power failures. Perhaps the technology was smuggled in, and is being used to blow up buildings in the sector!

He continues thinking.

Jam-Y seems to prefer Speed-Y's idea. He turns to the problem of the fourth mask: who will get it? He proposes that Speed-Y think of a number for the ORANGES to guess. Whoever gets the closest gets the mask.

Speed-Y thinks of a number. He also looks at the black rod again. He doubts that it is an explosive. Given the number of them, any such explosion would be massive...

Oh, and he's thought of a number now! ORANGES, take it away.

L4-O guesses 471,613. One of the PowServ ORANGES guesses 309,586. Another guesses 958,298. A third goes the other way, and says that it's 1.

Lift hall, P Level, Gamma Subsector

Now that Cryo-R has finished mashing the button, the lift shows up in almost no time.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango starts heading downstairs. He discovers that more clones are using the stairwell than before. Understandable, I suppose.

written by Speeder on Jan 05, 2012 14:35

"I see.... I am very predictable, the guy that guessed 1 hit on the spot!"

I wait.

For...

Something.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 05, 2012 16:59

"Hello Lift! Are you having a pleasant day, today?"

I step into the lift.

"I think there might have been several hundred clones in the lift hall a moment ago. I don't see them now though."

I look out the door, glancing back and forth.

"I sure hope they didn't leave if they were waiting a lift. Perhaps I just thought I saw them though. It might have been a scrubot, or something. You shouldn't worry about it too much."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 05, 2012 19:59

"Aw. Oh well. Maybe some traitorous clones will have some masks we can... collect."

I look around.

"So uh... are we ready to go then?"

written by Gligar on Jan 05, 2012 21:48

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Apparently, Speed-Y's number was... 1! The ORANGE looks pleased to have got it right.

That done, Joan-O says, "Okay, now that's sorted, so one for each of the YELLOWS, and one to that ORANGE over there..." She hands out masks.

L4-O hopes that they will run into some masked traitors from whom they can... collect masks. He wonders if that's everything.

Joan-O replies, "I don't think there is anything else to cover... I'll let you get on with it."

Jeremy-Y's lift

Cryo-R enters first and greets the liftbot. He suggests that there might have been several hundred clones in the lift hall recently, though they aren't there now. "If that is the case," the liftbot answers, "then they will just have to wait their turn. I have never tried to fit several hundred clones inside myself all at once... it might be an interesting experiment somedaycycle. Heh heh heh.... er, I mean, where to, citizens?"

Jeremy-Y answers, "B Level, please."

The lift complies, and begins to descend.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 05, 2012 22:02

“Well then. Let’s get back outside and to Nukabot then? Building 2 is where we need to go, right?”

I start making my way back to Nukabot.

written by Speeder on Jan 05, 2012 22:07

I also follow my own team.

written by Jam on Jan 05, 2012 22:32

I follow everyone else...

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 06, 2012 01:23

I Follow

written by Gligar on Jan 06, 2012 01:38

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O suggests that they get back to Nukabot and head to Building 2. He demonstrates his eagerness to get underway by leading the way.

After a few moments, other clones follow him: Speed-Y, Jam-Y, Azir-R... and eventually, the rest of the team.

Outside Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Nukabot is where L4-O left it. It’s now covered in a thin layer of the black stuff, and doesn’t stand out as well as before.

From somewhere down the roadway comes the sound of bots passing through. Fairly largish ones, from the sound of things.

Cloning station, somewhere in JHT Sector

Okay, there aren’t too many places left that you’re cleared to know about where a cloning station could be hiding or are there... but, somehow, there is still another.

And, as you might imagine, a cloning tank has fired up, and is almost ready to disgorge its contents.

I’m sure Rapt-G would be interested to know that the clone is Mick-R. Who, I am sure, will no doubt play some merry tricks with the cloning system to get exactly the outcome he wants from this decanting.

I jest, of course. If this were the case, Mick-R would have been erased two clones ago.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 06, 2012 01:51

I take my place back on Nukabot and wait for the group to get back together.

“Building 2 then, Nukabot! Holding out okay out here? It’s... a bit smokey out here.”

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 06, 2012 01:58

I hold my breath, run out the door, and grab the aforementioned cleaning cloths, taking one for my self and breathing through it, then taking several others for the rest of our team and the power services team.

They are called emergency sanitation kits after all, aren’t they?

written by 4616599 on Jan 06, 2012 02:50

I groan, pushing myself away from the wall. Apparently being dazed in smoggy air isn’t quite a good thing.

I quickly run off after the team!

written by Speeder on Jan 06, 2012 03:26

I put my mask on, and then I become happy.

I happily hop back on nukabot, and clean whatever black stuff is within my reach.

written by Gligar on Jan 06, 2012 16:38

Outside Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O hops aboard Nukabot, and instructs it to get moving. He also asks about how well it is coping with the smoke and such. “I do not detect any problems so far,” it replies.

King-R holds his breath and runs after Nukabot. He opens The Box and raids the sanitation kits for their cloths, and starts handing them out*. It’s almost as if he thought they were given inadequate equipment. That sounds to me like he is saying that The Computer could make a mistake...

Joris-R realises that the team is heading out, and runs after them.

Happy that he has a mask, Speed-Y hops onto Nukabot, and tries to clean off some of the black stuff. But, as there is more of it all around that just wants to cling to Nukabot, the effort proves to be futile.

It doesn’t take long to get to Building 2, though.

Cloning station, somewhere in JHT Sector

Speaking of arrivals...

Mick-R’s cloning tank opens, spreading tank goo all over the floor, and dropping Mick-R right into a puddle of the stuff. It’s kind of cushiony.

As the goo begins to drain away, Mick-R tries to make sense of his somewhat conflicting memories... almost as if his lives have been taken up by completely different people...

Then it clicks. He’s just unstable, and should probably see a docbot.

Look, there’s one here now.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 06, 2012 17:03

I wipe away some of the soot off of myself and from the general area, then look around to make sure everyone is with us.

Once we arrive at Building 2, I get off Nukabot and take position near the door, waiting for the rest of the team to gather up.

* It’s true that they’re emergency kits, but it should be remembered that they are sanitation kits as well. What’s a sanitation kit without a cloth?

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 06, 2012 17:44

Letting out my breath, I exclaim, "I'm glad Friend Computer thought of our lung hygiene by giving us these cleaning cloths!" (Isn't hygiene, after all, what they were designed for?)

I cover my mouth and breathe deeply.

"I know the air was deemed suitable for reds, but as the team's hygiene officer, I think it's also important to protect the hygiene of our lungs."

I take off the cloth and taste a single particle of the stuff floating around, just to find out whether it tastes as filthy as it looks.

written by Malkom on Jan 06, 2012 18:47

"Hey, Dr. Bot!"

I stop, and remember that my arm, or someone else's arm - or was it their legs? - got sawed off by a docbot. I do not want that to happen to me.

"Could you sell me a B3?" I say as a way of preventing the docbot from thinking I want my extremities ripped off with a chainsaw.

written by Speeder on Jan 06, 2012 19:02

I give up seeing I cannot clean Nukabot.

I see if Nukabot fits Building 2, if not, I hop out of it, and stroll toward the entrance.

written by Gligar on Jan 06, 2012 21:28Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O also tries to clean up some of the black stuff, and also finds it futile. Looking around, he can see that the whole team is here. Good.

King-R justifies using cleaning cloths for masks by saying that he is using them for hygiene - specifically lung hygiene. He is pleased that Friend Computer provided them. Also, while he's thinking about it, King-R decides to taste one speck of the black stuff, to see if it tastes as awful as it looks. Unsurprisingly, it does.⁷⁰¹

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Once again, it seems that Nukabot will not fit inside the door...

At least not the people door.

In this case, there are two doors visible: the people door, and a larger door for vehicles. As Nukabot approaches the building, the larger door opens.

L4-O ignores it, and hops off, heading for the people door.

Speed-Y does not. He waits until Nukabot has entered the larger door before getting off.

John-R reaches up to wipe off his camera.

On the roadway, those bots seem to have stopped. Apparently, the smoke and such are beginning to affect their mechanisms.

Cloning station, somewhere in JHT Sector

Mick-R notices the docbot and hails it. But instead of requesting medical treatment, he asks for a B3. "I could certainly sell you a B3, but I would have to charge a handler's fee."

On one wall, a light illuminates, indicating that the chemical showers are in the process of resetting themselves.

Jeremy-Y's lift

The lift continues to descend. One of the indicator lights on the control panel flickers slightly.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 06, 2012 21:28

I agree with King, and while enjoying the benefits(?) of short shallow breaths, salvage for a cloth from the emergency kits and using it to filter the air if one exists still.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 06, 2012 21:39

I notice the larger door.

"Oh. Um. I guess it's not necessary to leave Nukabot behind this time."

I get back on Nukabot and look around.

"So, where is this thing we need to bring you guys to?"

written by Jam on Jan 06, 2012 22:11

I start to cough, and realize I haven't yet put my mask on... Actually, I don't think I ever even got my mask, did I?

Well, anyway, if I have my mask, I put it on, and if I don't have my mask, I ask for it, then put it on.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 06, 2012 22:38

I advance onwards, so as to leave the building I'm in right now.

written by Speeder on Jan 06, 2012 23:53

After we get inside the building, I take a careful look around.

Yes...

>|

or if alias is not supported.

>look

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 07, 2012 01:19

I walk at a leisurely pace up to the building, and follow Speeder into the building through the larger door.

When inside, I carefully fold up my cloth and put it into my jumpsuit pocket, since we will likely still have to return outside.

⁷⁰¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: A nice dodge there. +1pp.)

written by Gligar on Jan 07, 2012 02:18

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R agrees with King-R's decision and takes a cloth.

Having realised that there is a second entrance, L4-O rushes back in, as there is apparently no reason to abandon Nukabot this time. Looking around, though, he sees that perhaps he is mistaken, as the only other exit is slightly too small for Nukabot. He gets the impression that blasting a hole in the synthcrete isn't exactly going to be appreciated.

Regardless, he asks the Power Services clones where it is they are supposed to be going. "We're supposed to be headed for the power distribution board... I believe it's on the other side of the building."

Jam-Y coughs. He realises that this is because he hasn't put his mask on yet, and does so. He's been holding it since it was given to him back in Building 1.

Speed-Y also has a look around...

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Clearance: RED

The garage seems to be used for the maintenance of bots and vehicles, and is equipped with tools to assist with such maintenance. Apart from the main entrance, there is only one other exit, too small for a vehicle to access.

Nukabot is parked here, ready to go.

A scrubot sits deactivated in the corner.

King-R walks in, leisurely, through the vehicle entrance, folding up a cloth as he does.

>

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Having finally made his way down the stairwell, Mango decides to head out. As he does he can hear some familiar voices in the distance.

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Apparently ignoring them, Mango heads outside.

He becomes aware of bot noises from the roadway.

written by Jam on Jan 07, 2012 02:47

I look a bit disappointed that Nukabot won't be able to fit through the larger exit...

"Hmm... Does this mean we'll have to leave Nukabot behind?"

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 07, 2012 06:22

Noticing that Nukabot can't fit inside, I also look disappointed.

Then, calling out the door(so as to avoid breathing in particles), I ask the Power Services Clone, "If memory serves, aren't power distribution boards on the outside of the building? Those memories of my pre-troubleshooter days are quite hazy, though..."

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 07, 2012 10:46

Odd. What seems to be all the commotion?

Maybe it's the team that was sent.

I decide to go take a look at what it is that's causing the bot noises.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 07, 2012 11:55

I frown and get off Nukabot.

"Looks like it. Again. At least Nukabot won't get covered in much smoke this time..."

I go over to the door, and peek out of it to survey for anything dangerous. Or semi-dangerous. Or even things not dangerous at all, really.

written by Speeder on Jan 07, 2012 12:59

I smile happily, and go check the scrubot.

written by 4616599 on Jan 07, 2012 16:35

I too grab a cleaning cloth as a mask, and watch Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on Jan 07, 2012 16:41

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Looking at the door, Jam-Y starts looking disappointed. This'll mean that they'll have to leave Nukabot behind, doesn't it.

King-R also looks disappointed. Then a thought occurs to him... the last time he checked, power distribution boards were usually installed on the outside of buildings, right? "In some sectors, maybe," is the reply. "But it really all depends on where the reactor is situated. In our case, the reactor's below us. Far below us. So, according to CPU Mandate 214/694... no, 214/677... oh, forget it. The point is, the distribution board is inside here."

L4-O agrees that it looks like Nukabot will be staying behind. At least it won't be getting covered in black stuff.

While he goes to look at what's on the other side of the door, Speed-Y has a look at the scrubot. As mentioned, it is deactivated. Several sticky notes have been fixed to its chassis, explaining why it's sitting here:

Keeps running out of memory... suggest we get it upgraded

Keeps trying to watch vidshows, but crashes

Try a memwipe before spending money on this thing

Memwipe DENIED by order of [name illegible]

Corridor, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The corridor is mixed RED/INFRARED Clearance, with the INFRARED section at the far end, leading from a pair of doors to what seems to be the foyer. The RED section seems to only serve to keep the INFRAREDs from accessing the garage. The corridor is quiet right now, due to it being partway through a shift.

As with Building 1, those “emergency lights” are in evidence here.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

On hearing the bot noises, Mango goes to investigate.

He doesn't see any clones there, only bots: a cloningbot (capacity four), a hygienebot and a pair of jackobots. The cloningbot seems to have developed a fault with its treads.

The jackobots seem to be inspecting the damage done to the cloningbot. “Replacement motors may be required,” one observes.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 07, 2012 18:28

If the group proceeds through the corridor, I keep with them.

I look around on alert.

“Hate quiet places... you never know when something is going to come out and attack...”

written by Malkom on Jan 07, 2012 18:31

I try to buy a B3 from any vendobots. Let's see here...

$ /bin/adv/interp -c 'buy B3 from vendobot' -d http://0x44.com:5364/paranoia/ -q 1

written by Jam on Jan 07, 2012 19:46

I follow the others!

“Wouldn't it be easier to tell if someclone is going to attack you if it's quiet? You could hear it coming! I'd be more nervous in a noisy place...”

written by Gligar on Jan 07, 2012 21:28

Corridor, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The Power Services team follows L4-O into the corridor, and heads towards the foyer. “We should be able to get to the distribution board this way.”

L4-O follows them. He seems nervous... he apparently doesn't like quiet places. According to him, commies could jump out at them any minutcycle!

Jam-Y suggests the opposite: that quiet times are when you can listen for the inevitable commie attack.

For the moment, though, everything is calm.

Other members of the team follow along behind them.

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

More “emergency lights” have been set up here, as well. As might be imagined, the foyer here also contains a noticeboard. Unlike the other foyer, however, this one is INFRARED. Two other corridors lead off deeper into the building. From the signs, one leads to the main lift.

The Power Services clones head for the other.

L4-O becomes aware of an odd quiet beeping from somewhere in the foyer.

Cloning station, somewhere in JHT Sector

It seems that Mick-R wants a B3... but there is no vendobot in the decanting area. And besides, how would he pay for it? It's not like he decanted with a jumpsuit and ME Card, now is it?

The light on the wall goes out. Another illuminates, indicating that the showers are ready.

written by Speeder on Jan 07, 2012 21:22

I start laughing and kick the scrubot, but not strong enough to damage computer property.

“Hey friends, I found that crazy guy that overrode Megagun!”

I point to the scrubot.

I then look at the thing.

“Small complex huh?”

written by Jam on Jan 07, 2012 21:48

I suddenly seem to be sweating.

“Something's wrong... John-R, could you try blasting my mind for a secondcycle?”

I hold my laser pistol ready, and prepare myself for any attacks that might be incoming.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 07, 2012 23:40

I decide that the jackobots are doing well enough as they are, and continue on my way.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 08, 2012 00:26

“Wait. Guys. Shhh. A beeping.”

I look around nervously and try to locate the source of the beeping in the room, while trying to stay reasonably far from it.

written by Gligar on Jan 08, 2012 00:55

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Oblivious to the fact that his team has already gone on ahead, Speed-Y prods the scrubot with his foot, and laughs. He's found Leeroy!

He turns around to tell everyone... but they're not there.

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y suddenly breaks out in a sweat. He says that something is wrong, and asks John-R to attack... him.

He has his laser pistol ready, as if he is expecting an attack. But before John-R can do anything, L4-O tells them to shush, and listen... something is beeping.

He looks around, and notices a box he had missed before. It's a mystery why, since it has a light on it and everything. The light blinks along with the beeping.

Those aren't normal... are they?

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Mango decides not to interfere and instead heads towards... where exactly? Shouldn't it be near lunch already?

Jeremy-Y's lift

Speaking of lunch, I bet Cryo-R would like some. There's probably a cafeteria somewhere near his dorm. And it shouldn't take long to get there, since the lift has just stopped at B Level.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 08, 2012 01:26

"Um. Guys?"

I point towards the box and the blinking light.

"I've got a bad feeling about this." What is that?"

(Link? What link? You see no link in my message. That's clearance [DFSR]!)

written by Malkom on Jan 08, 2012 03:56

"Hey Doc, where can I get this slime off of me? Or wait, is this grime?"

I rub my head for a moment...

"Never mind. Just... where's the bathtub again?"

written by Cryoburner on Jan 08, 2012 05:07

As the lift arrives, I stare at the light that flickered and note whether it is still flickering, or if it will flicker again.

"Hmm... Did you notice that flicker? Flicker... flicker... Wait... time-critical tasks... The device!"

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 08, 2012 07:53

First, I shiver at the sight of the so-called "emergency lights"

I then glance from Jam-Y's eccentricities to the the blinking box-light.

I look confused for a moment, then decide that the two events must somehow be related.

"I think it might be wise to escort Jam-Y out of this room. I will do this."

"John-R, could you please keep your gun trained on Jam-Y? You know, just in case... He did say something like that himself."

I then try to push Jam-Y out of the room.

written by Speeder on Jan 08, 2012 14:31

I notice my team left without me, and I look unhappy.

Specially since I am the team leader, I never ordered the team to move on, did I?

Well, I attempt to catch up with the team.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 08, 2012 15:33

I watch the the situation with Jam intently, and don't notice Speedy's unhappiness since he's not with us just yet.

written by Jam on Jan 08, 2012 16:06

"John-R? That was an order..."

I jump as King-R tries to push me out of the room...

"GAH! TRAITOR!"

I aim my laser pistol at his forehead.

written by Gligar on Jan 08, 2012 16:54

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O notices that everyone seems to be ignoring him, and resorts to an old cliché to try to attract everyone's attention.

King-R notices. He decides that the box must have something to do with Jam-Y's behaviour, and suggests that he be removed from the room. He volunteers to do this himself, and, asking John-R to keep Jam-Y in his sights, tries to push Jam-Y somewhere else.

Lucas-R looks on in surprise, almost forgetting that he also has a laser pistol. He fumbles for it.

Jam-Y realises that John-R hasn't complied yet, and reminds him that he did give an or - wait, why is he being pushed? Traitor!

He whips out a laser pistol and points it at King-R.

Azir-R just watches.

John-R replies, "Yes, I know you gave me an order, but we got sidetracked before I could do anything. Alright, brace yourself."

He concentrates for a moment.

Jam-Y drops to the floor as he gets to experience what a Mental Blast feels like. Hint: it hurts.

Speed-Y arrives at a run, looking less than happy. Just as the YELLOW PowServ clone tess everyone, "Well, this isn't getting the board fixed. If it's alright with you, we'll go on ahead. You lot can drop by when you're done having fun."

Cloning station, somewhere in JHT Sector

Mick-R asks the docbot where he could get the tank goo cleaned off. No wait... never mind, he asks about a bathtub.

The docbot replies, "The chemical showers appear to be available." It indicates a door near the lights.

Jeremy-Y's lift

Cryo is still staring at the flickering indicator light. It's still flickering. Did Jeremy-Y notice?

"Hmmm, you seem to be right. Liftbot, what is the meaning behind this flickering light?"

"I am not aware of a flickering light," the liftbot replies.

Regardless, it is there. It reminds Cryo-R of time-critical tasks...and a "device".

"Oh well, we can investigate that another time. Right now, we have a dormitory to visit."

written by Cryoburner on Jan 08, 2012 17:51 Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

"Hmm... That seems reasonable. Will there be lunch?"

I step out the lift, keeping an eye trained on the flickering light as I do so. If it's a level indicator, I note which level it corresponds with. Once out of the lift, I have a look around at my new surroundings, and begin following Jeremy-Y to wherever it is Jeremy-Y is going.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 08, 2012 18:17

I cautiously approach the box, keeping an eye on it for any change in behaviour.

"If this thing's a bomb, what you guys are going to be doing might not matter for long..."

written by 4616599 on Jan 08, 2012 18:30

I watch L4-O carefully, while quickly retreating to the entrance.

"I'll...watch the door."

written by Jam on Jan 08, 2012 19:30

"AGRHGHGHGHGGH—OKAY! STOP! STOP!"

Assuming John-R has stopped, I take a few secondcycles to recover...

"Vatcrap... Wow, that really hurts! Well, that answered a question I had.. Thanks John-R, I'll make sure to mention your loyalty and unquestioning obedience to FC!"

I try to stand up...

written by Malkom on Jan 08, 2012 20:52

I wander gradually towards the door, and pull it open. That done, I go inside and look for a way to clean the goo off me.

On the way, I decide to give some of the goo a lick...

written by Speeder on Jan 08, 2012 21:42

"WHAT? THE TEAM MOVES FORWARD WITHOUT ME AND THEN START INFIGHTING? WHAT IS THAT?"

written by Gligar on Jan 08, 2012 21:46

Jeremy-Y's lift

Cryo-R finds Jeremy-Y's proposal to be reasonable. He asks if lunch is available. Jeremy-Y checks his PDC for the time, and replies, "It is getting close to lunch time. I'm sure that by the time we've visited your dorm, they'll be ready to serve. Come now." He walks out of the lift, with Cryo in tow.

But Cryo can't help but look at the flickering light again. It's the indicator light for X Level...

Corridor, B Level, Gamma Subsector

As Jeremy-Y and Cryo-R walk down the corridor, Cryo-R gets the feeling that he is being watched...

L4-O chooses to approach the box. It continues blinking at him, and beeping. He calls out that it might be a bomb, and if it is, everyone else's Fun won't matter for much longer.

Joris-R watches L4-O, while volunteering to watch the main door. He slowly heads in that direction.

Meanwhile Jam-Y writhes in pain. See, I told you that being mindblasted hurts. After a moment, he manages to call out to John-R, telling him to stop. John-R stops concentrating, leaving Jam-Y to catch his breath for a moment, and comment that his attack answered a question that Jam-Y had. At the very least, John-R is following orders.

Jam-Y gets to his feet, rather shakily.

The box continues to beep.

Speed-Y demands to know what is going on.

Cloning station, somewhere in JHT Sector

Mick-R wanders towards the door. Rather slowly I might add, but he does get there, and heads inside.

Chemical shower chamber, somewhere in JHT Sector

This shower room is unlike the others he has seen. For one, there are no cubicles, just conveyor belts with showerheads at intervals. It looks like he is to stand on a conveyor belt, which will take him through alternating chemical and water showers, while scrubbing himself with the provided brushes. The whole thing looks surprisingly like a decontamination setup.

But perhaps this should not be a surprise. Especially given the taste of the stuff... it's awful! Perhaps you're not supposed to eat it.

written by Jam on Jan 09, 2012 01:34

"Oh, I just asked John-R to blast me, and now I have a headache..."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 09, 2012 02:04

I continue to very cautiously approach the box. I assess its size, and try to assess how explosive it could be based on its size and what types of common (or uncommon) explosives could be used on something of that size.

If I get close enough, I try to get a good look around the area of the box and on all sides of it that I can.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 09, 2012 03:06

Still shocked, I let my hands drop to my sides and sigh in relief.

"Is pushing treason? I didn't think it was, I just wanted to push you away from that box... Hmmm, that box..."

"You know, I've never known anything that beeps to be very fun. But what if it's a gift? Can the box be opened?"

I run over and try to open the box eagerly.

written by Malkom on Jan 09, 2012 03:54

I take a couple of brushes, scrub my fingernails a bit, then start trying to shower, first putting on a mask if there is one.

written by Speeder on Jan 09, 2012 04:43

I see the commotion with the box, but I also see King going suicidal on it, so I back up a bit waiting to see what will happen first.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 09, 2012 05:08

I spin around and look back to see if anyone is watching me from behind. Is the lift is watching? He was flickering. Perhaps he was watching as well...

I then spin back around to look up ahead, to see anyone is watching there. Perhaps Jeremy-Y is watching! I did notice him watching things earlier...

written by Gligar on Jan 09, 2012 16:53

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y explains that he just asked John-R to mind-blast him. Now he has a headache.

L4-O continues sizing up the box. It doesn't seem very large, perhaps 15 x 15 x 10cm, with the aforementioned blinking light on the top. But that doesn't necessarily mean that it isn't a bomb... given the existence of tacnuke cone rifle shells, even a box that size has the potential to be a serious threat.

As he gets closer, he ascertains two things: 1) the box doesn't seem to have proximity triggers; and 2) the box has wires coming off it, though he can't see where they go.

King-R is still shocked but lets his hands fall. Apparently, he only wanted to punch Jam-Y away from the box. Speaking of which... what if the box is a gift? He goes over to open it.

Speed-Y backs off, his face an interesting mix of emotions.

As soon as King-R touches the box, the beeping changes its pitch, and the box releases a burst of BLUE gas right into King-R's face.

King-R suddenly goes numb...

Chemical shower chamber, somewhere in JHT Sector

Mick-R takes a couple of brushes, hops onto a conveyor belt and begins scrubbing.

There don't seem to be any oxygen masks but, given the open nature of the place, that might not be a concern.

I hope he remembers to keep his eyes closed during the chemical cycles.

Corridors, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R spins around. He cannot see anyone behind him, so there was probably no one behind him to watch him.

Was the lift watching? How would he even tell?

Is Jeremy-Y watching him? Seemingly not, given that he's in front of Cryo-R, and looking ahead of him.

Cryo-R continues on, until:

"Here we are. Dormitory JHT-26-B."

written by Malkom on Jan 09, 2012 18:08

I close my eyes unhappily, as a memory (of sorts) surfaces:

I'm typing into a computer terminal frantically; the terminal is hooked to a docbot with a big steel cable. As I try to turn the bot off, it revs up its chainsaw and approaches my legs...

I quickly open my eyes again, then close them as I see a fountain of RED chemicals suddenly start showering right in front of my nose. I try, somewhat unsuccessfully, to banish the maybe-memory of the docbot sawing my legs off.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 09, 2012 18:10

"EEP!"

I try to sprint away out of the proximity of the BLUE gas.

If there, I continue watching from a safer distance.

"I hope that's not the same stuff in my gas shells... though it's only BLUE... not VIOLET..."

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 09, 2012 18:36

"Naaaaaaaaw, naaaaaaawt BLUE!" I attempt to yell with a numbed tongue.

I do my best to cough up as much as I can of the gas.

"Whlaaat haaalve Aayyye Doooolne?"

written by 4616599 on Jan 09, 2012 19:17

I hear the commotion.

"Don't panic, King-R!"

I fire my stunner.

written by Speeder on Jan 09, 2012 19:47

I...

wait for it.

facepalm.

"Good that King is hygiene officer, not any other sort of officer that needs caution before doing things."

I attempt to see if I notice any pattern on the wires and where they go, but without inhaling the gas.

written by Jam on Jan 09, 2012 22:55

I look surprised as King-R gets sprayed in the face...

"Oh, vatcrap..."

I try to drag him away from the beeping box, while not breathing any of the BLUE stuff in...

written by Gligar on Jan 09, 2012 23:06

Chemical shower chamber, somewhere in JHT Sector

Mick-R closes his eyes, and seems to be having a flashback... From what I'm reading of his profile, he may need a brainscrub. No... make that a monthcycle of mandatory re-education.

Apparently, the flashback is unpleasant, judging by the way he opens his eyes. And then closes them... just slightly too late to avoid a chemical spray. Those chemicals must sting like crazy!

On the plus side, he doesn't have to reflect on his flashback any more.

Also on the plus side is the fact that he passes through the chemical spray rather quickly. The conveyor belt takes him to a hot water jet next.

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O runs! Is that enough to avoid the gas? Maybe...

He stops and turns back to watch King-R, hoping that this gas is not the same as is present inside his gas shells. Well, for one thing, this is BLUE and not VIOLET.

Wait... BLUE toxin... that sounds familiar...

King-R tries to yell, and cough up as much gas as he can. That might not be enough, though.

He wonders what he's done. Well, all things considered, he may well have killed himself. Maybe.

Jam-Y's face falls, and he rushes towards King-R to try to pull him away from the box...

Joris-R tells King-R not to panic, and reflexively fires his taser... right as his aim reaches Jam-Y. Zap! Jam-Y is floored. Needless to say, he doesn't manage to reach King-R.

Lucas-R suddenly yells, and jumps right at Joris-R, knocking him to the floor. "EXPLAIN YOURSELF!" he yells.

Speed-Y facepalms. (Were you expecting any other gesture?) It's a good thing King-R is the hygiene Officer...

He also looks at the box (though he does not approach, not that he knows what it can do). He pays attention to the wires. Unlike L4-O, he notices that the wires lead up to some of the "emergency lights"...

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 09, 2012 23:44

If I am not already on my stomach, I roll myself over and try to breathe the air that is closest to the floor, sucking the floor if I must.

Seeing that Lucas-R is becoming distracted and attacking Joris-R, I grunt in anger and call loudly for help.

Then, remembering Friend Computer's marvelous lung hygiene solution, I reach into my pocket with all the effort I have left and cover my mouth with it!

Not only is the cloth a good lung hygiene cloth, it's also a great anti-treason cloth. I don't have the clearance to breathe this gas!

written by Lightning4 on Jan 10, 2012 00:15

"BLUE toxin... that seems familiar somehow..."

I think harder on the matter.

I sigh and look at the gas. If King-R is accessible from the edge of it, I hold my breath and run up and attempt to pull him to safety.

written by Jam on Jan 10, 2012 00:47

I twitch and spasm and scream and accidentally pull laser pistol triggers and spasm and feel an incredible amount of pain and twitch and have a treasonous level of unhappiness and scream and do whatever else a tasered clone would do...

written by Cryoburner on Jan 10, 2012 01:15

"Dormitory JHT-26-B!?"

I look inside Dormitory JHT-26-B, and note whether anyone is watching from within.

written by Gligar on Jan 10, 2012 02:04

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R rolls over onto his stomach and tries to breathe normally. Noticing that Joris-R is otherwise occupied, he calls for someone else to help him, and pulls out his cloth again so he can breathe though it.

Or at least tries to. His numb fingers can't find his face...

L4-O thinks harder about the BLUE toxin. Why is it familiar? Wait! Wasn't there a BLUE biotoxin scanner on the way to Briefing? Lucas-R was taken away for decontamination, he recalls.

His musings are interrupted by King-R's insistent cries for help. Sighing, he goes over to lend a hand, pulling King-R over to a safer place.

Meanwhile Jam-Y has problems of his own. He seems to have temporarily lost control of his body... and as he twitches and writhes and screams, his laser pistol is set off! ZAP! ZAP! ZAP!

Strange... all three seem to be in the general direction of Joris-R... One shot singes Lucas-R's hair, but the enraged clone doesn't seem to notice. He's more interested in pinning Joris-R to the ground and pummeling him, while repeatedly asking what in the comnode he thinks he is doing.

Corridor, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R reacts as Jeremy-Y indicates the dormitory, and looks inside.

Dormitory JHT-26-B, B Level, Gamma Subsector

As it happens, there is a clone present. His name is Kris-R-QJT-1. He doesn't seem to be looking in the direction of the door, though. Perhaps he is looking for something. Or maybe he is dropping something off on his way to the cafeteria. Or something. Either way, he doesn't seem to be watching Cryo-R.

As for the dormitory itself... well, it is a RED dormitory, with six bunks, each with a number from 1 to 6. Beside each number is a nameplate, four of which have been filled in with names, identifying who has what bunk. Kris-R seems to have bunk 3. Bunks 2 and 5 are vacant.

Six lockers have been placed against the far wall, each, again with its number. Again, four have been labelled. Between lockers 3 and 4 is a door leading into another room, probably leading to a hygiene station or something.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 10, 2012 03:04

I make an attempt to see if this "safer area" is equipped with safer breathing conditions. In other words, I take a good deep breath.

If the breath doesn't seem to bring further numbness to my body, I try to sit up.

Also, if I am still clutching the sanitary cloth, I pocket it again.

written by Malkom on Jan 10, 2012 03:13

I facebrush.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 10, 2012 03:23

Good thing we all have those breathing masks, I think.

Meanwhile I wheel away from the box and the blue gas that burst out of it.

I do stay away from the seemingly psychotic Jam, making a note to address this when I think he won't kill me horribly.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 10, 2012 03:51

Getting the feeling that I won't get a response should I question Lucas-R right now. I take a moment to actually process all that is going around me, then sigh at the complete breakdown of order.

"HEY! CAN WE GET THINGS IN ORDER PLEASE?"

written by Kristos on Jan 10, 2012 04:18

I quickly finish a task on my PDC and turn around, facing the entering clones. "Hello, can I help you?"

written by Speeder on Jan 10, 2012 06:08

I look very, very, very unhappy...

"Sorry Power Services friends, usually my team do not infight like that."

I look to John, and then I ask.

"Ok, although the box with blue toxin is dangerous, we won't get far with a team imploding, care to help me stop the madness?"

I take out the YELLOW gun, and fire a warning shot in whatever spot of the ceiling it looks safe to hit, and then I yell.

"EVERYONE FIGHTING EACH OTHER, STOP RIGHT NOW! I KNOW YOU ARE CRAZY TO SHOOT TROUBLE, BUT WE WON'T GET FAR THIS WAY!"

written by 4616599 on Jan 10, 2012 09:58

"Agh!" I struggle around.

"We're all a bit nervous here, aren't we? Is it really a big issue if I misfired? Isn't a taser something you'd usually use to control a situation- isn't that what our Friend advocates?"

"Why, I was meaning to help King-R! Let's say the gas had managed to partially paralyse him. Perhaps a jolt would shock him any from the gas before it could harm him further..."

I stare at Jam-Y nervously.

"You know, I'd be more worried about Jam-Y. In case you didn't notice that mutant just singed your hair!"

written by Gligar on Jan 10, 2012 16:25

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Ignoring the unfolding chaos around him, King-R tries to figure out if the air in his new location is safe to breathe. He does this by breathing.

It is a good thing, then, that he is now out of the rapidly-spreading BLUE cloud, since he doesn't seem to be getting any worse. He tries to sit up, a task which is difficult when you can't feel anything. But he manages it, and manages to pocket his cloth again.

Azir-R gets out of the way of both the box and the ensuing mayhem. He makes a mental note to speak to Jam-Y later.

L4-O looks around, not quite able to believe what is happening. It is important, he realises, that everyone come to their senses, and proceeds to yell for order.

Speed-Y tells the Power Services clones that this doesn't usually happen, only to realise that they have already moved on to go and find the distribution board.

He looks around, and notices that John-R has yet to explode in spontaneous violence. He asks for his assistance in getting the team back into its usual coherent state. John-R nods, and fiddles with his Multicorder. He doesn't yet say anything, because Speed-Y has taken out his "revolver" and fired a shot into the ceiling.

Speed-Y then proceeds to add his own yelling. He says that although the team is ready to shoot trouble, they're not going to get anywhere.

Joris-R claims that they're all nervous, and suggests that one misfire shouldn't be much of an issue. And besides, he was trying to help King-R... perhaps a jolt might have overcome the paralysis.

He adds to Lucas-R that Jam-Y just singed his hair.

Lucas-R looks like he wants to continue pummelling Joris-R into paste. Instead, he just replies, "Yes, because you shot him. But what it is to you? A little misfire shouldn't be a cause for concern..."

"...unless it happens to target a clone two clearances above you," John-R interrupts. "Which, by the way, I have on tape, thanks to your cameras. I'm sure Rapt-G would love to pick it apart during Debriefing. After all, your 'misfire' not only hit a YELLOW, but it hit the team's Loyalty Officer. Does anyone else find that suspicious? The Loyalty Officer, perhaps? I hate to have to do his job for him, but it seems that I have to right now.

"And what does it mean to you that he is a mutant? Does that mean that he is any less trustworthy than, say, Speed-Y? The two are the same clearance! As a registered mutant myself, I find myself unable to let that one slide. I take that as an insult, citizen. And again, I have it right here.

"So... would you like to explain yourself, for the record? Or should I just call Friend Computer right now?"

He has his hands full with his Multicorder, and now the Com 1 that he displays with his other hand, but Joris-R knows full well that he doesn't need a laser pistol to attack him.

Dormitory JHT-26-b, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R looks up from his PDC. I can't see the screen from here, so I can't see what he was doing. No matter. He notices two CPU clones with nametags - one, a YELLOW, is Jeremy-Y, and the RED, whose nametag is upside-down for some reason, is Cryo-R. He asks if he can help.

"Ah, hello, citizen," Jeremy-Y answers. "I was just showing Cryo-R here to the dormitory. He's just been promoted from INFRARED, and has been assigned to this dormitory. I see that there is more than one vacant bunk in here? So Cryo-R has a choice! How nice."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 10, 2012 17:04

"Not to go against protocol, but do you guys think we could sort out the treason issue somewhere where there isn't a rapidly expanding cloud of BLUE toxin?"

I glance back at it, staying away from it as best as I can.

"Although maybe Friend Computer would know about this stuff... hm..."

written by Malkom on Jan 10, 2012 17:26

Malkom said:

I facebrush.

If not done already, I do this.

written by Speeder on Jan 10, 2012 18:06

"Joris, I am suspecting you are a anti-mutant! You were acting strange, attacked Jam and used Mutant as a way to insult him! It is obvious that you are attempting to eliminate a famous mutant that you can handle so you get credit in your organization!"

I turn to John

"In fact, L4 also has a very good idea, call Friend Computer please, we need to both handle the treason and ask him about the BLUE toxin... the wires on the box are connected to the emergency lights, it may be a trap to us."

written by 4616599 on Jan 10, 2012 18:25

"Let's not get... too paranoid. I seem to recall Jam-Y claiming to set my mind on fire before. Does that make him anti-non-mutant?"

"But since we're on the topic of treason- why, Jam-Y tried using lethal force against King-R and me! What I did- misfire a taser- seems rather small in comparison, eh?"

written by Speeder on Jan 10, 2012 18:35

"He set your head on fire because I told him to do so, because you were acting treasonous.

And your misfire looked more like on purpose...

So, if you are not a anti-mutant, this is about revenge then?"

written by Kristos on Jan 10, 2012 19:43

"Yes, and the lockers are just right over here."

I point to the lockers.

"I was just finishing a note before heading to the cafeteria."

"Oh, and do know that bunk 2 makes strange sounds if you don't lie perfectly still. It is the least popular in this room."

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 10, 2012 20:31

I also make a mental note that everyone who was in the elevator with us enjoying the teambuilding exercises is currently not being treasonous. Food for thought.

written by Gligar on Jan 10, 2012 21:40

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O suggests that, given the rapidly expanding cloud of BLUE toxin, they should deal with treason elsewhere. Although... perhaps our mutual friend might know about the toxin.

Speed-Y airs his suspicion that Joris-R may be an Anti-Mutant. After all, he has been acting strange, attacking a registered mutant and insulting him. Speed-Y suspects that he may be trying to eliminate Jam-Y to gain favour in the organisation.

He adds that L4-O has a good idea, and instructs John-R to place the call. Perhaps they can solve both problems that way.

While John-R sets about getting The Computer's attention, Joris-R suggests that they not get too paranoid. (Is that even possible?) He remembers that Jam-Y once claimed to have set his mind on fire for some reason, and suggests that this makes Jam-Y an "anti-non-mutant"... and after all, he just tries to use lethal force against him! To Joris-R, this is more serious than a simple taser misfire.

Speed-Y explains that Jam-Y setting Joris-R's head on fire was ordered by him. Joris-R was acting treasonous at the time, and needed to be put down. And as for the misfire, it looked too much like a deliberate attack to Speed-Y. Therefore, something is up: either Joris-R is Anti-Mutant, or he is out for revenge.

Azir-R notes that the traitors evident here are those clones who did not participate in the group activity in the lift...

After a moment's pause, Friend Computer finally answers. "Team Epsilon! Report!"

Chemical shower chamber, somewhere in JHT Sector

Mick-R continues brushing, and focuses on the face.

He doesn't have long left in the cycle... just one last chemical wash, and one rinse cycle...

Dormitory JHT-26-B, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R points out the lockers, and adds that he was just finishing writing a note on his PDC before heading for lunch. OH, and watch out for bunk 2, it tends to make noise when a clone sleeps in it, unless they're being perfectly still. It's not exactly the most popular bunk.

written by Malkom on Jan 10, 2012 21:44

I wait.

written by Speeder on Jan 10, 2012 21:45

"Friend Computer, we have a incident here with BLUE gas, a box with wires attached to emergency lights released that gas when the hygiene officer suddenly decided to approach the box.

I am aware that IntSec was searching for that earlier, I am requesting information to know at least what the gas do, so we can properly handle our hygiene officer, and then the box.

Also one clone here is acting in a suspicious manner, firing at the loyalty officer, using the word 'mutant' as a offense, and then using at his defense the method that our loyalty officer used to terminate his last treasonous clone."

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 10, 2012 22:09

I nod at everything that Speeder said, then try to very warily stand to my feet.

While I listen for Friend computer's response, I take a look at the box after having released the gas, as well as the wires around it.

written by Jam on Jan 10, 2012 22:16⁷⁰²

I remove any wires from the taser that might be imbedded in my skin (if I can), and point an accusing finger at Joris-R.

"He shot me, and called me a mutant! Oh, wait, I am a mutant... Well, he still shot me, probably because I'm a mutant!"

I also look to Speed-Y.

"I'm famous?"

(Or, if I'm still being zapped, I just continue to jerk and spasm uncontrollably...)

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 10, 2012 22:33

I clear my throat.

"I think it's also important to remember that Joris-R was trying to shoot at me, or at least, that's what he said he was trying to do. I can't think of a good reason to shoot at me when I'm downed."

Looking at Joris-R, I add, "Besides, who said anything about paralysis? I was numb, for anyone who cares, and I still am, somewhat."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 11, 2012 01:27

I notice that Speed-Y has mostly said everything I already wanted to say, and simply keep quiet and listen to Friend Computer... from a safe point, anyway.

written by Gligar on Jan 11, 2012 01:44⁷⁰³

Chemical Shower Chamber, somewhere in JHT Sector

Mick-R waits out the rest of the cycle.

Finally, with one last drying cycle, it finishes, and he steps off the conveyor belt.

As he does, a door opens in front of him, leading into still a third room.

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B⁷⁰⁴

Speed-Y explains to our mutual friend about the gas, and how their Hygiene Officer got hit by some of it. He realises that it is the same gas that Internal Security were testing for earlier todaycycle, and asks for more information about it.

He adds that he has a clone acting suspiciously. Said clone attacked and insulted their Loyalty Officer.

King-R wobbles to his feet. He decides to have another look at the box, trying to take extra care this time not to disturb it. Unfortunately, he finds it almost impossible to walk with no feeling in his legs, and ends up falling over.

Jam-Y pulls off the taser's electrodes, and points at Joris-R, exclaiming that he shot him and called him a mutant (because he is). Perhaps the two are related. To Speed-Y, he asks about his own fame...

⁷⁰² JAM: (OOC: Er, is the taser still zapping me?)

⁷⁰³ GLIGAR: (OOC: 25 posts! 🐱)

⁷⁰⁴ GLIGAR: (OOC: yes, the taser is finished zapping you, Jam)

King-R gets to his feet once again, and points out that Joris-R was going to shoot at him as well. What's the point, when he was already downed? And anyway, why did Joris-R assume that he was paralysed? He wasn't. He's only numb...

The Computer appears to process the team's reports.

"I am interested to hear about the gas dispensers. This answers one open question about why they were stolen, while leaving open many others. As for the gas itself, details are Security Clearance BLUE.

"Now, regarding your accusation of treason against Joris-R-DNK. It seems to me that he attacked the team's Loyalty Officer, Jam-Y-JYR, simply because he is a mutant. As Jam-Y is a registered mutant, this is not simply a matter of stamping out treason as it would be if he were not registered. It becomes a matter of a RED Clearance clone attacking a YELLOW Clearance clone over a matter which ceased to be treason when he registered. Therefore, there is another factor at play here. Perhaps Joris-R would like to elaborate, and explain just why he attacked a YELLOW Clearance clone. Retaliation for terminating a previous member of your clone family, apparently for treason, is not acceptable as a valid reason. Surely the Loyalty Officer can see this."

written by Speeder on Jan 11, 2012 01:50

Although I know it is stupid to argue with Friend Computer...

"Ok, details are clearance BLUE, can at least you tell me what to do with the gassed hygiene officer? Even if your reply is to take him to a BLUE clone?"

written by Cryoburner on Jan 11, 2012 02:40⁷⁰⁵

"Hmm... Would you say the sounds it makes are 'suspicious'? Like a bunk eating a clone, perhaps?"

I look at bunk 2, and poke at it suspiciously.

I then look at bunk 5, and poke at it somewhat less suspiciously.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 11, 2012 04:07

I poke myself in the arm, just to see if I'm still numb.

"What if this gas makes me feel no pain? Wouldn't that be great?"

I grin brightly at that possibility. That is, if my poke wasn't met with any sensation.

Then, I take another look towards the box, taking care to steady myself on anything or anyone stable nearby.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 11, 2012 04:09⁷⁰⁶

"And what are we to do with the dispenser? It's currently um... dispensing. And the gas is starting to spread through ⁷⁰⁵ CRYOBURNER: (Was anyone else a little disappointed that Speed-Y's shot into the ceiling to restore order wasn't immediately followed by the sound of a clone crying out in pain? 😊)

⁷⁰⁶ LIGHTNING4: (Slightly. 😊)

this foyer... I hope it doesn't spread through this entire subsector. Or, Computer forbid, the entire complex!

written by Kristos on Jan 11, 2012 04:43

"I do not know. Though I would be interested to know. The bunk has never been occupied while I was present." After typing another quick note in my PDC (this one about Cryo-R), I add, "You seem to be the analyzing type of clone. That is good for feedback. Our Mutual Friend likes mandatory non-treasonous feedback."

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 11, 2012 08:38

I ponder just where it was that the cafeteria was, so that I might have an alright lunchcycle, considering that the crowds really can get in the way...

I start off for the nearest cafeteria.

written by Jam on Jan 11, 2012 14:14

I smile.

"Of course, Friend Computer!"

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 11, 2012 14:18

"I owe you a B3 if you make it out of this one King."

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 11, 2012 14:27

I raise an eyebrow at Azir-R. "I don't feel like I'm dying, I just feel very, very numb."

"Actually, I'm curious if I could ever taste a B3 again."

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 11, 2012 15:45

That's good that you don't feel like you are dying... however, I find issues trusting things I know nothing about.

written by 4616599 on Jan 11, 2012 15:51

"Well, let's put aside the whole misfire fact for now. It's possible that I may have, due to the heightened state of panic earlier, accidentally been inclined to fire at what I considered was a highly suspicious clone. Bear in mind that a taser is an immobilising weapon but not a terminating weapon- something you'd use to control a potentially treasonous situation."

"And speaking of a potentially treasonous weapon- I must point that Jam-Y has occasionally acted... rather twitchy. He appeared to panic upon entering this room for instance, refusing to tell us why- instead, he nearly killed King-R and had to be mind blasted by John-R. And I thank John-R for that."

"Also, he reacted to what could have easily been an accidental taser misfire by shooting at me. Three times. Despite the fact that Lucas-R, our sprightly PLC companion, was already pinning me down and effectively rendering me harmless- not that I was much of a threat in the first place. Despite the fact that he could, had he misfired- a very real possibility when your aim is twitching- have shot Lucas-R instead!"

written by Gligar on Jan 11, 2012 17:37

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y wonders aloud what to do about King-R, given that the details of the gas are BLUE. "Please have the affected clone contact Medical Services for assistance. In the mean time, he should try not to die."

King-R pokes himself in the arm. It looks like either the arm or his finger is still numb. Probably both. He wonders if the gas would make him feel no pain? That would be great!

He tries once again to have another look at the box. Ha manages to get closer to it but doesn't see anything else of note.

L4-O asks what to do about the box, given that it is emitting gas. "I am sorry, but you are not cleared for that information."

Jam-Y assures Friend Computer that he does know.

Azir-R admits to King-R that he owes him a B3. Assuming that King-R comes out of this alive.

King-R replies that he doesn't feel like dying, he... just can't feel anything.

Azir-R replies that, although that is a good sign, he can't exactly trust what is going on, since he knows nothing about the gas.

Joris-R counters the accusations of treason with some of his own. Naturally, they are aimed at Jam-Y. First, he claims that Jam-Y acted twitchy for reasons that he wouldn't go into. Then, he claims that Jam-Y tries to kill King-R, and had to be stopped by John-R, something for which he claims to be grateful. He adds that Jam-Y reacted to Joris-R's taser blast by almost terminating their "PLC" clone, Lucas-R.

Before Lucas-R can correct him and remind him that he's Tech Services, John-R interrupts. "Wait wait wait... I think I might be able to help here. I suspect that Jam-Y might have been concerned about someone (perhaps some powerful mutant), or something (perhaps that box) trying to nullify his power, and asked for my assistance. The threat of imminent attack can render a clone even more paranoid than usual. Perhaps he overreacts.

"It's true that he aimed a laser pistol at King-R, but remember the clearance difference. A YELLOW tells you do do something, you do it... and I admit that I was a little slow at responding to Jam-Y's order there. But then, I allowed myself to get sidetracked.

"Anyway, the box turned out to not be a psionic nullifier, or whatever. Jam-Y noticed King-R go down, and tried to help... only to be shot - 'accidentally', you claim - with a taser. I take it you've never been shot by one? Well, I have, and I can assure you, your muscles will spasm like that. If you're holding something with a trigger, you could find yourself pulling the trigger without even realising it. He may not have been aware that Lucas-R was in the way at the time."

"And while I'm at it... your attempt to apprehend Jam-Y, as he was trying to help King-R, may well have jeopardised King-R's chances at survival. After all, he might be alright now, but he might drop dead any momentcycle. What if he'd been pulled clear earlier?"

"Thank you, citizens," The Computer replies. "I am now processing. Stand by."

Dormitory JHT-27-B, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R wonders if the sounds made by the bunk might be considered suspicious, as it it were eating a clone or something. He pokes at the offending bunk, causing it to creak loudly.

He then pokes bunk 5. There is only the sound of the used packing material in the mattress as it rubs against itself.

Kris-R admits that he doesn't know, since the bunk has remained unoccupied while he's been here. But he'd be interested to find out.

He pulls out his PDC again, and makes a couple of notes. He likes Cryo-R's analytical style. It's good for feedback. Friend Computer likes good feedback.

written by Malkom on Jan 11, 2012 18:08

I try to finish the shower and leave the shower area, and then get myself a nice, shiny RED jumpsuit.

written by Speeder on Jan 11, 2012 18:10

"Friend computer usually does not have to warn that he is processing... Or he is with a heavy workload right now, or we confused him and he is trying to untangle our story."

I stand by.

Although watching to see how much the gas will expand and on wether the box is beeping or not, and wheter it is releasing more gas or not.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 11, 2012 18:18

"Why does everyone assume that I'm going to die?" I ask everyone, with a worried look, "I just said I don't feel like I'm about to drop dead!"

"In fact, aside from this bizarre numbing and a little wobbliness in my legs, I feel quite fine!"

"Anyway, I think it is troubling that Joris-R changed his story. First, he said that he misfired while he was trying to shoot me, and now he says he "may" have been trying to fire at Jam-Y. I think both possibilities are a little troubling."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 11, 2012 18:48

I continue watching the status of the gas and the box, for any more anomalous behavior.

I look at King-R as he speaks.

"Well, it IS a mysterious BLUE toxin of which we know nothing. Though, I guess maybe it could be harmless? Lucas-R apparently had some in his system?..."

I think, then turn to Lucas-R.

"Do you know anything about this BLUE toxin? If so, please explain."

written by Gligar on Jan 11, 2012 21:49

Chemical shower chamber, somewhere in JHT Sector

Now that he is finished with the shower sequence, Mick-R heads through the door, down a flight of stairs on the other side, and into:

Clone Processing, somewhere in JHT Sector

Clone Processing, of course, is just a fancy name for "make sure the clone is ready to go, and do the forms and such". In this case, there is a single clone present at a desk near yet another door.. He seems to be practically drowning in forms, though, and hasn't seen Mick-R.

Near the desk are three vendobots. One seems to be for food and beverages, another seems to contain equipment, and the third seems to actually be an ME Card dispenser. All three have tongueprint scanners.

Closer to Mick-R are the equipment racks. There is one for jumpsuits, and one for PDCs. A sign nearby reminds Mick-R to only take one of each, and to make sure that they are appropriate for his clearance.

Mick-R starts with a nice RED jumpsuit.

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango pushes open the door on his way to the cafeteria, to find Team Epsilon.

Speed-Y is explaining that Friend Computer usually does not need to take time to process. Perhaps it is busy, or confused?

He looks over at the box. It seems to have stopped dispensing gas, and the cloud seems to be dissipating.

A worried King-R asks why everyone seems to think he's going to die, when he feels fine (except for his numbness). He adds that he has noticed that Joris-R changed his story slightly, concerning the taser shot. He doesn't like either story.

L4-O looks over from the box to King-R. He explains that the gas is an unknown (to them) BLUE toxin and may have adverse effects. Then again, it may well be harmless. Didn't Lucas-R have some in his system? Does he know anything about it?

"What?" Lucas-R replies. "I don't know anything about it. I don't know why that scanner read positive either."

The Computer interrupts. "Processing has been completed. I find that both Jam-Y and Joris-R are partly at fault for this incident. Jam-Y is fined 100 credits and has been placed on probation. He is at attend meetings with his Mutant Liaison Officer on a daily basis.

"Joris-R has been found guilty of hate-crimes and possible secret society membership. He is sentenced to termination. Termination is to take place within the next hourcycle.

"In addition, Speed-Y has been fined 50 credits for failure to keep order within the team.

"I have one further query: what progress has been made regarding the source of the power disruption?"

Nobody has yet noticed Mango.

written by Speeder on Jan 11, 2012 22:25

"The Power Services team is checking the distribution boards on this building.

And then..."

I see Mango going to the cafeteria.

"Friend Computer, I am seeing my ex-teammember Mango here, I cannot remember why he was demoted, can you explain to me the reason, and tell me if I can get him on the team again? He was a decent troubleshooter before his demotion."

I then look at Joris.

"Also, there are a cloning station nearby? I do not want to terminate Joris now if this mean it will delay more our mission."

written by Malkom on Jan 11, 2012 23:13

I pull on the jumpsuit, pick up a PDC, and figure out if I can take video and/or stream video to someone else's PDC. I then see if I can pull up a map of the Complex area I'm in.

While I'm at it, I look around for a strap or a length of cord, even though there probably isn't any here.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 11, 2012 23:42

I almost panic at that very moment.

This... isn't... good.

I walk on without responding, looking, staring almost at where I'm going.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 11, 2012 23:59

"Hmm... Bunk 5 seems somewhat less likely to eat me. I will go with that one."

I head over to the lockers and check if there is anything interesting inside. I make sure to check all of them.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 12, 2012 00:08

"As for the source... oh dear. The power services group left without us didn't they... we should catch up quickly."

If they have indeed left, I check to make sure I know which way they went.

"If I may be excused, Friend Computer? They need a guard. We were just momentarily... waylaid by that BLUE stuff."

If I get permission, I run off in the direction the PowServ team went, weapon in hand.

written by Jam on Jan 12, 2012 00:56

I look to John-R.

"Wow... That explanation is almost exactly the one I was going to give... It's like you can read my mind or something... Or maybe you just know what I'm going through. Well, thanks anyway!"

Then, I respond to Friend Computer.

"Understood, Friend Computer! "

Then I realize I just got fined and put on probation for no reason... And Joris-R is the one to blame for that!

"I can make sure Joris-R's termination takes place within the next minutecycle if you'd like, Friend Computer!"

I aim my laser pistol at Joris-R, and verify there are shots left in it...

written by Kristos on Jan 12, 2012 01:49

I glance toward Cryo as he investigates (or attempts to investigate) all of the lockers and think to myself, "A very analytical clone. I wonder if it is possible to be too analytical." The thought becomes vocalized as a snicker.

If Jeremy-Y is still present I turn to him and say, "Is there anything else I can do for you sir?"

written by Gligar on Jan 12, 2012 02:15

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y explains that the PowServ team is checking out the distribution board right now.

He is about to say more when he spots Mango at the door. He instead asks about why Mango was demoted, and whether there was a chance of getting him back on the team. Mango takes the opportunity to slip through the foyer and continue his journey. Apparently, he doesn't want to associate with the Troubleshooters.

"If you are referring to Mango-NHG, he was demoted for attempting to terminate this sector's High Programmer. As such, I do not trust him. If he wishes to prove his loyalty once again, he is free to do so. Until then, he will remain INFRARED."

Speed-Y then asks about the nearest cloning station. "There is a nearby cloning station. He will have to make his way back from there."

L4-O realizes that the PowServ team left without them. He checks to see if he remembers... yes, they went that way. He asks for permission to follow them. "I suggest that you check up on the Power Services team. They may have additional information by now."

L4-O barely takes the time to check his weapons before running off.

Jam-Y praises John-R's explanation, saying that it was surprisingly accurate, almost as if John-R read his mind. Or maybe he just knows what Jam-Y is going through. John-R just smiles.

Jam-Y then responds to our mutual friend, offering to effect the termination right now, if given the word.

He checks his laser pistol. One shot left.

"Very well. Carry out the termination. If there is nothing more, that will be all."

Corridor 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O pursues the PowServ team... or at least, he looks for them.

He passes into an ORANGE section of corridor, when voices from a nearby door catch his attention.

"...saying that the board was sabotaged?"

"Yes, it looks like it. Whoever did it wasn't very thorough, though."

"Can we repair it?"

"Absolutely."

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango continues onward, until he reaches the place where he remembers the cafeteria to be. There are a few clones already here.

Clone Processing, somewhere in JHT Sector

Mick-R puts on his jumpsuit and grabs a PDC. Looking through its functions, he determines that he can take video, but can't stream it anywhere. He pulls up a map, and is able to discern that he is in Iota Subsector.

He is less successful at finding a length of cord or similar item, though.

The clone at the desk seems to be trying to clear a little space to see around all his paperwork. "Is there someone there?"

Dormitory JHT-27-B, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Due to its low likelihood of eating him, Cryo-R chooses bunk 5.

He heads over to the lockers and tries to open them. He quickly discovers that he can only open lockers 2 and 5. A note inside locker 2 explains why: the lockers are tongueprint coded. When a clone is assigned to a bunk, he should register his tongueprint into the corresponding locker's lock. Registering the wrong locker is insubordination, and will also cause confusion when other clones attempt to open their lockers.

Kris-R notices Cryo looking at the lockers and laughs quietly. He asks Jeremy-Y is there is anything else he can do. "Yes... once Cryo has sorted out his locker, could you direct us to the cafeteria?"

written by Speeder on Jan 12, 2012 02:44

"Ok, you are the loyalty officer, terminating treasonous clones in the team is your task."

I check my weapons, check how much partially spent barrels I have, and check if I am running out of any ammo.

"I suggest you all do the same.

Also, we will ignore that box, and chase the Power Services team, we cannot do anything about it now."

written by Malkom on Jan 12, 2012 03:09

I squat down behind the desk, raise the PDC's edge above the papers, and say "QUESTION EVALUATED TO POSITIVE RESULT" in a mechanical voice.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 12, 2012 03:17

"Gah! Please try not to make a mess!" I turn my head away from Joris-R, so as to avoid the sight of his brains in any other place then they presently are.

While still looking away, I ask, "You know, after all this stuff, you don't think it's maybe good a idea for me to have my own laser pistol? Not that I'm complaining... I do hate the mess... If only there was some sort of weapon that didn't make a bloody mess while I um... Shoot trouble."

Then I wince in anticipation for Jam-Y's blaster shot.

written by Speeder on Jan 12, 2012 03:45

"Sure... ask the equipment officer, that is L4 that just ran away, but when we catch up with him, just ask!

Or ask Azir, maybe he has some in the backpack."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 12, 2012 05:23

I peek inside the door to make sure it's actually the PowServ team inside, then enter.

"Sounds like you found what you set out to repair. Sabotage, I hear? Not surprised to learn about that..."

"Friend Computer believes you may have additional information for us by now?"

written by 4616599 on Jan 12, 2012 06:56

I suddenly dive behind the box!

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 12, 2012 14:06

As advised, I checked my ammo supplies (including b3) and how many shots are left for the equipped barrel.

I also check for an extra blaster for King.. though I am unsure I have one.

written by Gligar on Jan 12, 2012 17:36

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y tells Jam-Y to go ahead, saying that terminating traitorous team members is the Loyalty Officer's job.

He then checks his weaponry. He finds that he has three shots remaining on his current barrel. And with five more YELLOW barrels, two RED ones, and 25 slugs, he should be set. He recommends that everyone else check their ammunition.

King-R insists that they not make a mess when they terminate him, and looks away.

He than asks about getting weapons of his own, as he does not have one. He seems to have forgotten that he actually does have one: a laser pistol complete with a RED barrel.

Speed-Y tells him to ask L4-O when they catch up with him. Or perhaps he could see of Azir-R has one for him.

When he believes that no-one is looking, Joris-R attempts to dive behind the box. But, as it turns out, there is not enough space for him to fit, causing the box to emit another dose of BLUE toxin, which hits Joris-R dead on.

Azir-R also checks his equipment. He finds that he has a laser pistol fitted with a fresh RED barrel with one spare in a pocket of his jumpsuit. In another pocket, he has a taser. In his backpack are more laser pistols and barrels of varying clearances, as well as three YELLOW single-shot slugthrowers. Also present are nine cans of B3.

Sadly, he has no blasters.

Clone processing, somewhere in JHT sector

Mick-R decides to have some fun, and pretends to be a bot by sticking his PDC up near the stacks of forms such that it might appear to be a camera, and responds mechanically. Or as mechanically as he can.

The clone reacts. "A bot? Here? Oh well, have you seen a clone decant recently? There's supposed to be one arriving any minutecycle now."

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O peeks in, to see the PowServ team clustered around a large panel which takes up most of one wall, filled with circuitry and what appear to be fuses and circuit breakers. That must be the power distribution board. Even to L4-O's untrained eye, there appears to be damage. Some of the circuit breakers appear to have been torn off and smashed, for instance, and even one of the larger fuses seems to have been removed - or perhaps it's a spare, since L4-O can't make out where it's supposed to go. If the cylindrical thing on the floor is even a fuse.

He asks if the team has any more information for them, as Friend Computer suggested that they might. "Actually, yes," the YELLOW replies. "It shouldn't take too long to repair the damage. What troubles me is that anyone had access to this room in the first place. Perhaps you should check the security records?"

written by Malkom on Jan 12, 2012 17:59

"PROCESSING QUERY... ERROR: UNABLE TO ACCESS CLONE DECANT DATABASE."

If there's a button on my PDC I can secretly press to snap a photo, I do so.

"ARE YOU SURE YOU HAVE CLEARANCE, CITIZEN?"

When and if the clone comes around for a better look, I jump out and yell BOO at him!

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 12, 2012 18:32 Corridor B4, B Level, Gamma Subsector

"Well King, if you don't have a pistol, I've got a spare RED one for you."

I toss it at him nonchalantly, along with a RED barrel.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 12, 2012 19:25 Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

I take the note inside locker 2. I then have a look inside the doorway between lockers 3 and 4.

"Hey, did someone say something about a cafeteria? That sounds like a place where lunch might be."

written by Kristos on Jan 12, 2012 19:50 Corridor 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

"Yes, Cryo-R, you are correct. Be sure on the next applicable survey to record any anomalies such as cafeterias not serving lunch, as that is not fun and is therefore treasonous. Friend Computer does not like treason."

I then direct the two clones to the nearest cafeteria.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 12, 2012 19:53

"Security records... got it. I just need to um, know where that is... I would assume a security office I guess...?"

If I don't get a response, I step out and try to look for it myself.

written by Gligar on Jan 12, 2012 22:14

Clone processing, somewhere in Iota Subsector

Mick-R continues his game, claiming that he can't access the clone database. He asks if the clone has clearance while attempting to take a picture of the clone.

Ka-click!

"What do you mean, do I have clearance? I work here. Of course I do. Go and verify it physically if yo-

"...wait a minute, is that a PDC? You aren't a bot, are you?"

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R tosses a laser pistol, complete with barrel, to King-R.

The new cloud of BLUE toxin begins to spread, mingling with what remains of the old one. Joris-R begins to feel the effects... in addition to being numb, he finds it difficult to move at all...

Dormitory JHT-27-B, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R decides to take the note. But what if some other clone is assigned to the dormitory? His kleptomania now satisfied, he checks out the door, which turns out to lead to a hygiene station.

He realises that someone mentioned the cafeteria, which arouses his interest. There might be lunch there!

Kris-R agrees. A cafeteria is a good place to find lunch. Any instances of cafeterias not serving lunch should be reported on the next appropriate survey.

With that, he heads out of the room, beckoning the other two to follow.

Kris-R heads towards what should hopefully be a cafeteria. He passes straight through a junction with a YELLOW corridor without stopping.

L4-O assumes that security records would be kept in a security office. But... where would that be? The PowServ clones don't seem to know. It appears that he must try to find it himself.

Corridor 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Hmmm... it doesn't seem to be here...

written by Jam on Jan 12, 2012 22:21

I look at Joris-R, and back away from the BLUE gas.

"What are you trying to do, get yourself terminated?"

I take a step closer to him.

"Though, I guess I can understand why you don't like mutants... It must have been rough having Headgrabber in your head. Say, he's not still there, is he? Oh well, he won't be there for long..."

I walk up to Joris-R and fire my laser pistol at his head. Then I back away again...

written by Gligar on Jan 13, 2012 01:21

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y looks over at Joris-R. Is he trying to get himself killed? He guesses that it's understandable why he doesn't like mutants, though: Headgrabber. Is he still there? Not that it matters.

He steps forward, and shoots, right between the eyes. ZAP.

If King-R were watching, he would be pleased to notice that no brainstuff was spilled from the cavity. In fact, the only evidence that Joris-R was just shot in the head with a laser is the neat hole in his forehead, which now has smoke coming out of it. And possibly a wisp of smoke from Jam-Y's now-spent laser pistol barrel.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 13, 2012 02:13

I glance towards Azir-R and do my best to catch the pistol and barrel.

"Wow! I get two pistols? Can I do that?"

I grin hopefully.

Then, glancing in the direction of the ZAP, I see notice that Joris-R's death wasn't so messy

"Hurray!"

My grin widens even further.

written by Jam on Jan 13, 2012 02:44

I also grin.

"That was a nice clean shot!"

written by Speeder on Jan 13, 2012 03:14

"Oh no... I just had the idea of make him manipulate that box, since he seemed so eager, maybe he could win the right to be not terminated..."

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 13, 2012 03:17

I raise a numb eyebrow at Speed-Y.

"Are you suggesting we ignore the words of FRIEND COMPUTER? It said, quite clearly, that he was to be terminated. It didn't mention anything about winning back his clone..."

written by Speeder on Jan 13, 2012 03:19

"He is to terminated, in a hourcycle... Not necessarily now."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 13, 2012 03:21

Weapon in hand, I continue wandering around the corridors of the Industrial subsector, looking for the security office, someclone that knows where it is, or a sign leading to it.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 13, 2012 04:49

"Sure, you can fire both at once like in the vidshows"

written by Gligar on Jan 13, 2012 16:54

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R looks over at Azir-R, notices that he's throwing things, and catches the laser pistol and barrel. Realising (finally) that he already has a laser pistol, he (happily) wonders aloud if he can use both at once, before looking over at the aftermath of Jam-Y's laser shot. Noticing that it was a nice clean shot, he grins even wider.

Jam-Y also seems happy at the results.

Speed-Y, on the other hand, seems to be less happy about it... they could have used him to investigate the box in more detail...

King-R points out that our mutual friend requested that he be terminated. Was Speed-Y suggesting that they ignore that order?

Actually, no, as Speed-Y points out that he was to be terminated within the hourcycle. Not necessarily right away.

Azir-r assures King-R that he can use both laser pistols at once if he wants.

Corridors, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O continues searching for the security office. Heading back through the foyer to the other corridor... no, not there... heading back and taking the foyer's third exit... hmmm... there are the stairs, and the lift - and hey, the cafeteria - but... no security office. It must not be on this level.

Corridors, B level, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R leads Jeremy-Y and Cryo-R through another corridor, takes a turn... to find that the expected corridor seems to have had its clearance changed since five minutecycles ago.

Hmmm...

written by Lightning4 on Jan 13, 2012 18:21

"Ooh. Cafeteria. I'm a little hungry... but the mission... hmph."

I press on, up the stairs. I continue my search there.

written by Gligar on Jan 13, 2012 21:23

Corridors, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Though he admits that he is hungry, L4-O presses on. He needs to find that security office.

Stairwell, Industrial Subsector B

From above, L4-O can hear the sounds of clones heading down the stairwell. Lunchtime must have just begun.

Corridors, Level 2, Industrial Subsector B

And L4-O begins the search anew.

He doesn't need to look for long, before he finds the security office at the end of a corridor.

written by Jam on Jan 13, 2012 21:59

"So, should we go find L4-O then?"

I try to carefully drag Joris-R's body away from the box without setting it off, so that if a scrubot comes to clean up, it won't accidentally melt the box.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 13, 2012 22:26

"I guess that would be a good idea."

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 13, 2012 23:03

I move on, and examine the options that I have.

written by Speeder on Jan 13, 2012 23:44

"Ok, so noone will attempt to check your equipment? Alright..."

Let's go find L4 then."

written by Kristos on Jan 14, 2012 00:17

I pause at look at what clearance the corridor is. Then I turn around to be sure the other two clones are still with me.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 14, 2012 00:38

I make my way into the security office and have a look around inside, seeing if there's anyone present to question.

written by Gligar on Jan 14, 2012 01:48

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y asks if they should go and find L4-O while dragging the corpse of Joris-R out of the way of the box. Azir-R agrees that it would be a good idea, while John-R points out that he headed down the third corridor.

Speed-Y agrees, and gives the order to move out.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Having managed to avoid running into L4-O, even though he passed through here, Mango considers his options. Either, he could enter the cafeteria and get some food – he is hungry, after all, and aren't they serving algae pizza todaycycle? – or he could go and find the vidscreen room, and wait for the next serving. Although, by then, he'd be expected at workcycle, and after missing one and a half shifts because of reactor shielding duty, he can't afford to be late.

Or perhaps he could try to find food elsewhere...

Security Office, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O enters the office, to find one clone on duty. He is sitting at the security station with his back to L4-O. Visible on the station's many vidscreens is... not a lot, actually. Maybe the monitors are on the wrong setting, or something.

Also present is a Computer Terminal, which is currently logged on.

Corridor B1, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R checks the corridor. It's empty, but is now BLUE Clearance. It was RED five minutecycles ago, he's sure of it...

Looking back, he can see Jeremy-Y and Cryo-R coming up behind him.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 14, 2012 02:19

I clear my throat to get the clone's attention and introduce myself.

"Troubleshooter Team Epsilon here! I'm here on to inquire as to how a clone may have been able to gain access to the power room of this subsector? I was told to have the security records checked."

written by Cryoburner on Jan 14, 2012 02:21

I examine the blue corridor more closely, particularly how its clearance is marked, as well as whether Kris-R is in the blue corridor. If I am in the blue corridor myself, I make a point of stepping out of it, specifically to someplace less blue, and preferably more cafeteria-like.

written by Malkom on Jan 14, 2012 06:01

I introduce a loud noise into the clerk's field of auditory perception, patterning it after the word BOO. I make a point of jumping out, and scattering the papers...

"Oh no! So sorry!"

I grab some and start stacking them up again, using this as an excuse to look at them as I do so.

written by Jam on Jan 14, 2012 16:17

I search Joris-R's pockets and grab all of his stuff, so that I can give most of it to his next clone.

Then I try to follow in the direction L4-O went...

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 14, 2012 17:03

I pocket my two pistols and smile.

Then, I follow Jam-R in pursuit of L4-O.

written by Gligar on Jan 14, 2012 17:57

Security Office, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O clears his throat, causing the clone to turn his chair to face L4-O. He turns out to be a clone in a YELLOW jumpsuit that seems to be slightly too small for him.

L4-O asks about how a clone could have gained access to the power room, and mentions that he wants to check the security records.

"What makes you think that I'll just tell you? How do I know that you're not some commie traitor? Huh? Tell me!"

Corridor B1, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R looks at the BLUE corridor, noting that the clearance stripe appears to have been freshly painted. None of the three are physically in the BLUE corridor, which is probably a good thing considering the visible cameras: all are pointing in their direction.

Clone processing, somewhere in Iota Subsector

Mick-R makes a loud noise at the clone, and "accidentally" knocks over some of the papers. This causes the clone to freak out. "Noooooooooooo! My filing system! No don't touch them!"

For Mick-R has picked up some of the dropped papers and is trying to read them. the first: a report about cloning tank efficiency, clearance GREEN.

The clone tries to take them out of Mick-R's hands. "What exactly did you want, anyway? Are you the clone that just decanted?"

Cloning chamber, somewhere in Iota Subsector

Speaking of cloning, another clone is forming in one of the tanks...

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y decides to take Joris-R's equipment, but runs into a small problem: he doesn't have the space.

That's right, he seems to have found the limit regarding how much you can cram into a jumpsuit's pockets. And remember that he's already carrying Mick-R's things.

As such, he leaves Joris-R's stuff behind and goes to look for L4-O.

King-R grins and follows him.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Heading down the corridor, they come to the cafeteria, which no seems to be open. L4-O doesn't seem to be in there.

A short distance away, a familiar-looking INFRARED appears to be staring at nothing.

written by Speeder on Jan 14, 2012 19:42

I attempt to carry Joris jumpsuit with his equipment, without the body.

Then I follow the team, wether I can, or not, carry the things of Joris.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 14, 2012 21:11

"Hm."

I think for a moment, then start whistling the most loyal tune I can think of. Maybe "Friend Computer is our Friend."

"Is that sufficient, or will I have to go into food jingles too? I know a lot of them and I'm certain no traitors would know that many!"

I add:

"Ooor, you could also ask Friend Computer yourself if I'm supposed to be here. Friend Computer sent me here, after all. That will get you the truth."

written by Kristos on Jan 14, 2012 21:58

"I do not remember this corridor having BLUE clearance before. The cafeteria is just over that way. [I point.] Friend Computer must have a wonderful new idea for the complex! We'll have to take another route."

First I get a good look completely around me, seeing if anything else appears different. Then I put my hand over my face and concentrate.

written by Gligar on Jan 14, 2012 22:25

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Seeing Jam-Y fail to take anything, Speed-Y decides that it would be easier to simply strip Joris-R's corpse and take everything, jumpsuit and all. It's bulky, since Joris-R was also wearing reflec. but Speed-Y somehow manages to carry everything.

Once he's satisfied that none of that stuff is going to be left behind, Speed-Y accompanies the rest of the team down Corridor 3.

Security Office, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O decides that the best way to prove that he is not a commie traitor is to whistle. Specifically, he whistles "Friend Computer is my Friend". When he's done, he asks if he should start on advertising jingles.

"I don't like the tone of your voice, citizen," the YELLOW replies in a low voice. "Remember who you're talking to." In a more normal tone, he adds, "I'm sure you could recite jingles all daycycle. How about you skip that? I'm convinced. At least for now. Now, what was your question again?"

Corridor B1, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R states that he doesn't remember that corridor being BLUE before... it must be a new plan that Friend Computer has for the Complex. As for the cafeteria, it's over that way - that is, down the BLUE corridor. But there must be anther way round... He puts his hand to his face and appears to think for a moment.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 14, 2012 22:30

I decide to take my chances with the cafeteria, since I do need to be at the highest performance possible before my workcycle comes...

During it too.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 14, 2012 22:35

"Ah sorry if I came off like that. Just there's been some strange goings on lately in this sector. The PowServ team is here, and wishes to know about the security records for the power room. Specifically, who has been inside lately."

I look around the room a little bit while waiting for a reply.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 15, 2012 02:01

"Hrm... Maybe we should go back and ask the lift. He seems to be the type to do a lot of traveling, so he might know another route to the cafeteria, or where the next closest cafeteria might be. Maybe he'll even escort us there!"

I begin wandering in the direction of the lift.

written by Kristos on Jan 15, 2012 02:08

I look back up. "Do either of you know the best low clearance way to the cafeteria from here?" Without waiting for a reply I begin walking back the way I came.

written by Gligar on Jan 15, 2012 02:42

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The familiar looking clone snaps out of it, and heads into the cafeteria.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango enters, having decided to risk it. He is hungry, after all.

He joins the queue. Everyone seems to ignore him.

Security office, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O apologises, and restates his question regarding who has been inside the power room.

"Ah, right," the YELLOW answers. "Let's see then, shall we?" He turns to the Computer terminal and begins entering a query.

Meanwhile, L4-O can't resist looking round. The place is seemingly set up for three clones, but there's only the one here, making it pretty empty. The most prominent feature, the security station, takes up most of one wall. It consists of a number of vidscreens, which would show camera feeds if there was enough light for it. Perhaps there's a low-light setting or something, but it doesn't seem to be in use.

Corridor B1, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R wonders if they should return to the lift. Perhaps the lift has encountered the cafeteria in its travels. Maybe it could even take them there.

Kris-R seems to be stumped. He asks if either of the other two have any idea how to get to the cafeteria, and starts heading back the way they came.

written by Speeder on Jan 15, 2012 03:35

I look around the corridor to see if L4 or the PowerServices team or Mango is around or inside any room connected to it (unless it has like 300 rooms... then it is a problem...)

written by Jam on Jan 15, 2012 03:55

I also look around for L4-O, or the Power Services team...

In the middle of my searching, I suddenly stop and look over at where the familiar-looking clone was...

"Wait, that was Mango, wasn't it?"

I walk quickly into the cafeteria and try to find Mango (or L4-O, or the Power Services team) there.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 15, 2012 05:00

I decide to stay and wait with Speeder.

"So, this Mango-clone? What's he like? What's his clearance, by the way? It seems people only refer to him as Mango..."

"You know, if ever we do get our team back together, it might be a good idea to take me to a MedBay. Maybe we'll see one on the way?"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 15, 2012 06:28

I look around a bit more before focusing my gaze back on the clone. I patiently wait for the information I require.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 15, 2012 09:51

I wait nice and patiently in the queue as I prepare for the lunchcycle.

They'll be after me in a moment...

I sigh silently.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 15, 2012 15:07

Since I am not familiar with the clone we are looking for, I wait with the team.

written by Gligar on Jan 15, 2012 17:30

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y starts looking around, to see what he can find.

The first thing he finds is the cafeteria, with that familiar-looking clone standing in line.

The second thing is a stairwell. It leads up.

While he's doing that, Jam-Y is also searching. He realises why that clone looks familiar... might it be Mango? He enters the cafeteria.

King-R decides to stay with Speed-Y, and asks about Mango. Who is he? What clearance is he? It's strange to not hear a clearance mentioned...

He also suggests that they find a medical bay once this is over.

Azir-R also waits. He isn't really sure about Mango either. After all, they only met briefly during Debriefing that one time...

Security office, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While he waits, L4-O continues looking around. He quickly realises that there isn't much else to see.

After a moment, the security station attracts his attention again. The vidscreens suddenly flicker to life, displaying... well, what you'd expect.

One of them shows the power room, with the PowServ team working on something - possibly a replacement circuit breaker.

The YELLOW suddenly speaks. "Hmmm... why can I not get a list of names? Surely they can't have...?"

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango tries to remain calm as he waits to be served.

Behind him, at the entrance, Jam-Y looks around, and notices him. Mango doesn't turn around or do anything, so he doesn't notice.

After what seems like an age, it's Mango's turn to be served. The servingclone hands him a tray. Yep, it's algae pizza and B3 Plain todaycycle.

written by Jam on Jan 15, 2012 17:43

I suddenly notice how hungry I'm feeling, and decide to get into line...

I try to figure out what clearance of food they're serving, how much it will cost, and if it'd be okay for a troubleshooter like me to have some, since I don't actually live or work in the subsector.

I also pass the time by trying to talk to the clone or clones directly in front of me, and ask them if they know anything about the recent power disturbances, and who might have caused it. (I also note their clearances, and look for name tags)

Also, I try to keep an eye on Mango while I'm waiting...

written by Lightning4 on Jan 15, 2012 18:58

Concern crosses my face.

"Hm? That doesn't sound good at all."

I continue watching the screens, and listen to any further comment by the YELLOW.

written by Speeder on Jan 15, 2012 19:15

Since I see Jam doing something, I do not attract Mango attention yet.

I turn to the teammembers around me and speak softly, with intention of not being heard from the line.

"This guy is Mango."

I point to him.

"He was a great troubleshooter, then a F class mutant invaded his mind, and since then he is acting strange, even after we seemly removed that mutant... And now seemly even after being terminated by Friend Computer itself."

written by Malkom on Jan 15, 2012 20:21

I nod vigorously, and try to help with putting the papers back in order. "Can't you see a good prank when it looks you in the eye and pulls a hat over your boots?" I grumble a bit.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 15, 2012 21:03

"Hmmm, very interesting... What makes you think he's still acting strange? Is he avoiding us?"

"Is he a clone without a clearance? Or does no one know it since he left the team?"

written by Gligar on Jan 15, 2012 22:44

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Realising how hungry he is, Jam-Y gets in line. Looking ahead, he can see serving windows for INFRARED, RED, and ORANGE clones. He guesses that it would be okay for him to eat here, but what about payment? Ah, there's a sign stating that visitors should present their ME Card at the window.

While he waits, he asks some of the clones in the queue if they know anything about the power disturbances. But all anyone really knows is that the failure happened suddenly, in the middle of a work shift yesterdaycycle. Or was it the day before? Clones are having difficulty remembering. There are no nametags on any of the clones here, but Jam-Y can see that there are INFRARED clones, as well as RED. The ORANGES must not have got here yet.

Up ahead, Mango has his food, but seems to be holding up the line while he stares at it.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y decides to remain where he is and not attract Mango's attention. Jam-Y can do that if need be.

Instead, he speaks quietly to the rest of the team, pointing out Mango and explaining that he was a Troubleshooter...

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 13, 2012 14:50

Is there a rule about posting too many times per turn? I thought I'd read that in the last game, one shouldn't post more than once or twice, but does this apply here?

written by Speeder on Jan 13, 2012 15:28

Well... just be sensible 😊

Usually in two posts you post everything you want, but I think Gligar might allow three if they are short enough, not only in what you wrote, but also what your character did...

Suppose each turn takes a minute or two at most, thus if you write a epic scene, I think gligar will not like.

until Headgrabber invaded his mind. Since then, he's been acting strange. Even after termination.

King-R asks what makes him think that he's still acting that way... is he avoiding them? And does he have no clearance or something? "He does - he's INFRARED," Lucas-R tells him. "He was RED, but got demoted when he was terminated. Is it even possible to have no clearance...?"

Security room, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O looks concerned, and says that the YELLOW's problem can't be good. He keeps watching the vidscreens.

One of them shifts to the cafeteria, and shows the queue of clones waiting to be served. It looks like Jam-Y is hungry, since he's joined the queue, and is speaking to clones about something.

The YELLOW speaks again. "Looks like that's all I can do right now... but why can't I get those names? Normally, I can cross-reference ID numbers with the citizen database, but it looks like I'm locked out this time. So all I can give you is the ID list."

Clone processing, somewhere in Iota Subsector

Mick-R again tries to help with putting the papers back where they were, and explains that he was just fooling around, but the clone again tells him not to touch the papers. "I had these in a specific order, and it's going to take weekcycles to repair the damage you made!" He turns and, from the middle of a stack of papers, pulls out some forms. "Just fill these out, get your ME Card from the machine and get going, will you?"

Cloning chamber, somewhere in Iota Subsector

The clone, now complete, is now identifiable as Joris-R-DNK-5. He twitches as his memories are downloaded into his body.

Finally, it's complete, and Joris-R drops down onto the floor accompanied by a whole load of tank goo.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 15, 2012 23:00

I finish clouding my mind full of worry and paranoia, and move along, making sure that I've done everything necessary in regards to the food before I go and sit down somewhere, preferably somewhere crowded.

written by Speeder on Jan 15, 2012 23:17

I turn to Lucas

"Loyal clones must have a clearance, if you have your clearance stripped from you completely, it means that you did something to make the Computer erase you, but while being very good in evading that fate. I think Headgrabber and some other strong class F mutants got their clearance stripped from them, since they are not supposed to be allowed anywhere, and yet are too hard to capture and erase."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 15, 2012 23:19

"Hm. Well, I guess that will have to do. I'm sure we'll be able to do something with it."

I take the list if presented to me.

"Thanks. I guess I should get this back to the PowServ team then."

If there's no further need of me, I make my way back out into the corridor, and proceed back downstairs to where the PowServ team is.

written by Jam on Jan 16, 2012 02:00

I watch Mango-R leave from the front of the line, and note where he's sitting at...

Then I continue waiting in line, with a slightly bored look on my face...

"So... What do you clones do over here in the Industrial Subsector?"

I listen to their reply.

"Ah, that sounds fun... As I'm sure you've guessed, I've been assigned to investigate the recent power disturbances... My team and I are—well, I probably shouldn't go into too much detail, you never know who could be a traitor... Hey, that reminds me of a clone I knew a while back... Maybe you've heard of him, his name is Mango?"

Again, I pause so they can reply. And, of course, I note their replies...

"He used to be a troubleshooter, you know. Nice guy, except for when he was—er, something beyond your security clearance... Well, to make a long story short, he kinda went a little crazy, and ended up—oh, I think that's above your clearance too, sorry. Well, just know that what he did was bad enough that he got about ten or so lasers shot through him at once, and most of them were ULTRAVIOLET clearance. Oh, and he also got demoted to INFRARED..."

I grin, and check how far the line has progressed while I was talking...

written by Gligar on Jan 16, 2012 02:30

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Having stared at his food long enough to make anyone paranoid, including himself, Mango goes to sit down. He looks around, and finds a seat right in the middle of a bunch of clones, all of whom ignore him.

He's watched by Jam-Y, though. Jam-Y, who is talking to other clones, asking about what they do. They reply that they're involved with the manufacture and testing of ring-for-service bells. Jam-Y then starts talking about how he's on a mission, before he claims to be reminded of Mango. He asks if any of the clones know him. "Mango...

yeah, I think I've seen him. He does impact testing in Building 3. He's a bit of a loner," one clone, an INFRARED, replies. Jam-Y fills him in on some of Mango's past. "Well... that's certainly interesting."

Jam-Y glances down the line. It looks to be the INFRARED's turn. Not long until he gets some food.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y tells Lucas-R that all loyal clones need to have clearance. Having no clearance means that you have been erased and officially don't exist... sort of like F-Class Mutants, he believes. Perhaps, he suggests, Headgrabber and Co. were erased, but escaped due to their powers.

Security office, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O decides that the list of IDs will have to do. He waits while the terminal to print out the search results - rather loudly, I might add - and or the YELLOW to hand them over. He then thanks the YELLOW and heads out, and back downstairs.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

He arrives back on Level 1 to find Team Epsilon, minus Jam-Y, waiting around outside the cafeteria.

written by Malkom on Jan 16, 2012 02:35

"Oh, alright..."

I start filling the papers out on a convenient surface with a convenient pen.

"I still say you can't take a good prank," I mutter under my breath.

written by Jam on Jan 16, 2012 04:02

"Oh, looks like we're almost up... Well, it was nice chatting with you guys!"

I prepare to receive my food ("Yes, ORANGE is fine"), and step out of line once I do... I look around for a place to sit, by Mango if possible, then if that's not an option, by that INFRARED that knew Mango, and if that's not an option, in a random seat of appropriate clearance...

written by Lightning4 on Jan 16, 2012 04:14

I walk over to the group.

"Oh. Good to see you guys have gotten everything in order. The PowServ team wanted me to check on the security records for the power room, I'm just delivering this to them."

I show the papers.

I point in the direction of the power room, if I can.

"Power room is that way, somewhere. I'll get this to them, and if they don't need me, I'll come back here... I'm kind of hungry!"

I proceed onward to the power room.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 16, 2012 04:15

"Ah, well, that's a relief. At least a little thing like death isn't enough to make you a non-person."

"Then again, friend computer doesn't have clearance, so maybe you'd get to hang out with It if you had no clearance."

I smile warmly at this possibility.

"Can Infrareds even be troubleshooters? Will Mango be allowed to join us again?"

written by Speeder on Jan 16, 2012 06:07

"Lucas joined us as infrared and got promoted to RED when he proved himself.

Also, yes, all machines, including Friend Computer itself, are not included in the clearance system, it is assumed they all can ignore clearance, and the only things off-limits to them, are whatever they are programmed to not do.

Friend Computer itself has restraints like that, it cannot for example, become a communist, probably not even a normal high-programmer can change that, I am pretty sure the original designers of The Computer made sure that if by chance it happened to exist a treasonous UV clone, it would not be able to force the city itself to become treasonous.

Of course, this mean we can trust that Friend Computer is always right and always loyal."

written by Cryoburner on Jan 16, 2012 10:36

I continue wandering in the direction of the lift. This corridor sure is long. If I ever reach the lift, I press its call button once.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 16, 2012 10:41

I take a look at the food that I've received.

This looks good. Quite good actually.

I begin to consume the food.

written by Gligar on Jan 16, 2012 17:00

Clone processing, somewhere in Iota Subsector

Mick-R takes his forms and finds a surface to write on. That turns out to be the surface of one of the vendobots. He mutters about the clone not being able to see a decent prank. "What did you just say?" the clone demands.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Noticing that he's almost at the front, Jam-Y finishes his conversation. It's soon his turn, and he goes to the ORANGE window. He presents his ME Card as instructed and receives some Soylent ORANGE and matching B3.

That done, he goes to find somewhere to sit. There is nowhere available near Mango, since the other INFRARED just took the last available seat there. Instead, he just finds an empty table and sits there.

Meanwhile, Mango has decided that todaycycle's food looks quite appetising. He begins eating, which confirms his thoughts.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O rejoins the team and fills them in on what he's been doing with regards to the security station. He shows them the list he received, and points in the general direction of the power room. He says that he will be taking the list to the PowServ clones, to see what they can do with it. And then he'll come back, since he's hungry.

Then he heads off again.

King-R is relieved that death isn't enough to make a clone an unperson.

Then he wonders about clearance again. Would having no clearance give a clone the opportunity to hang out with Friend Computer? And can INFRAREDS be Troubleshooters?

Speed-Y points out that Lucas-R was INFRARED when he joined them. He adds that bots (and yes, Our Mutual Friend) do not have clearance. Instead, they have pre-programmed limits as to what they cannot do. Even, he guesses, Friend Computer: presumably, it can't become communist. He guesses that not even a High Programmer could change that. It must be hard-coded deep into the system or something. However it's done, it means that he can always rely on The Computer being trustworthy.

Corridor B3, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R continues wandering back to the lift. Kris-R, it seems, is trying to find an alternate route to the cafeteria, but Cryo-R is convinced that the lift will help them. He finally finds the appropriate door and enters the lift hall.

Lift hall, B Level, Gamma Subsector

He presses the call button. Once.

The lift's doors immediately open.

written by Speeder on Jan 16, 2012 17:10

"It must be a interesting scene, a high programmer attempts to input a communist program in his Computer Workstation, and immediately some turrets probably beyond UV clearance, in case that high programmer is wearing reflec, show up and shoot him.

And I do not doubt that his next clone will be demoted too..."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 16, 2012 17:35

I momentarily wonder whether the team was paying attention to me, but dismiss the thoughts.

I proceed back to the PowServ team. If I arrive, I present the list.

"Unfortunately, the clone running the station couldn't get names to match these IDs. Maybe we can still get something out of it?"

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 16, 2012 18:05

I turn to Speed-Y

"I wouldn't speculate too much about that. You might say something by mistake that is beyond my clearance level, or even yours. Maybe there actually are turrets beyond UV clearance, and then we'd all need brainscrubs, and the Computer knows we don't have time for that..."

I tap my foot impatiently.

"Can we please find the others?"

written by Speeder on Jan 16, 2012 18:58

I nod.

"I agree... let's not dwell too much on that, I only said that, because it is pretty obvious that Friend Computer have defense systems that go beyond any citizen on the complex, otherwise its own existence would be pointless..."

written by Gligar on Jan 16, 2012 22:15

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y continues with his thoughts. He describes a scene where a High Programmer attempts to input a communist program into his terminal, only to be terminated by turrent of an even higher clearance.

There he goes, speculating about clearances beyond ULTRAVIOLET again...

Treason point to Speeder!

King-R suggests that he not speculate. Such thoughts might be beyond his clearance, or maybe beyond Speed-Y's clearance. Assuming that those turrets even exist, they'd all need brainscrubs, and they don't have time for that. Can they go find the others now?

Speed-Y agrees to stop, saying that he only said what he said to point out that he believes that Our Mutual Friend has defences of its own, untouchable by clones.

written by Jam on Jan 16, 2012 23:00

I eat my food quickly, and drink my B3. While I'm doing that, I try to watch Mango and that other INFRARED, in case they're doing anything interesting...

written by Speeder on Jan 16, 2012 23:27

I go buy a B3, of highest clearance available to me, and if possible also a algae pack or hotfun or whatever else I can eat fast.

But I do that observing Mango, and waiting for L4 to show up again.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 16, 2012 23:47

I continue eating, and am almost enjoying it.

Except I sense that that I'm being watched. Somehow, I suspect all cycles in regards to food will be like this.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 17, 2012 00:12

I proceed onward to where the PowServ team was, not pausing for anything of course! Maybe. Unless there's something really interesting in my way.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 17, 2012 01:28⁷⁰⁷

I buy the most inexpensive item on the menu, and the most inexpensive type of B3.

"It's not as if I can taste anything!" I explain to the others.

written by Gligar on Jan 17, 2012 02:28

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y eats up as fast as he can, while keeping an eye on Mango, who is eating what looks like algae pizza. Looks like he's almost finished.

And it looks like the rest of Team Epsilon is drifting in this direction while they wait for L4-O. Speed-Y waits for his turn, and then buys some Soylent ORANGE and B3 Tastes Like Something Orange. He grabs a seat near Jam-Y and also watches Mango. He might want to be a little more subtle about it, because clones have this odd feeling when they're being watched intently. I'm sure Speed-Y knows what I mean.

King-R also buys food, although he chooses a Vita-Yum Meal Substitute Bar and some B3 Plain. After all, he can't really taste anything anyway.

John-R gets some Hot Fun and, yes, some B3.

Lucas-R instead chooses the algae pizza. I guess he's feeling nostalgic or something.

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O arrives. He notices that the PowServ team are still working on that circuit breaker, or whatever it is.

Cloning station, somewhere in Iota Subsector

Joris-R hasn't moved from where the cloning tank deposited him. He is now being poked by the docbot. "Citizen, are you alright?"

Clone processing, somewhere in Iota Subsector

Mick-R is still filling in his forms. He's almost done now.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 17, 2012 02:29

"Hello Lift! Heading to lunch, I see? Maybe we could go together, seeing as I'm about ready myself. I could escort you there, of course. Any place in particular you'd like to go? How about that one cafeteria near here... You know the one I'm talking about... That one with the red-clearance clones in it?"

I glance back toward the door to see whether Jeremy-Y or Kristos-R happened to follow me here. In case they want to buy us lunch or something.

⁷⁰⁷ GRANPIRE VIKING MAN: (OOC: Where is Joris-R?)

written by Kristos on Jan 17, 2012 03:04

I turn back and quickly head to the lift.

"Cryo-R, where are you going? I found another route to the cafeteria. Follow me!"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 17, 2012 03:17

"I'm back! Unfortunately, the clone at the security office couldn't get the names to match the IDs on this list, but he was able to print this out for me."

I present the list.

"Hopefully it's still of use?"

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 17, 2012 03:30

I chew in silence for a while.

"You know, this is the weirdest feeling ever. I don't taste my food, and it's sliding down my throat, and I can't even feel it. I could be chewing my tongue off for all I know."

I appear shocked at this, and touch my tongue, just to be sure that it's still there. Realizing that I can't feel it with numb fingers, I open my mouth and ask Speed-Y if my tongue is still there. In that order.

written by Speeder on Jan 17, 2012 04:43

I give a puzzled look to King, but I look if his tongue is in there.

"Whatever that gas do, it is really bizarre..."

I tell him the results of checking on his tongue.

Then I decide that I am not of the sort that like to wait, and approach Mango (my food and drink in hand).

"Why you are avoiding us? What happened to you since you left the team in the O level? You saw something THAT scary that motivate you to behave the way you are behaving?"

Of course, the way I pop behind him might startle him, but... I cannot do anything about it.

written by Jam on Jan 17, 2012 09:13

I see that Speed-Y is going over to Mango, and follow him...

I also restrain Mango if he tries to run...

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 17, 2012 09:38

I finish off whatever remains of my food, not sure at the noise surrounding me. Probably the noise from everyone that seems to be there.

I stand up from my seat.

written by 4616599 on Jan 17, 2012 10:50

My head suddenly darts up.

"Jam-Y! I mean, I'm fine, thanks."

I look around. "Is this place near Industrial Subsector B?"⁷⁰⁸

written by Speeder on Jan 17, 2012 16:53

I actually poke Mango and wait to see if he will look at us.

I turn to Jam.

"I think he is still Headgrabbed, otherwise why ignore and flee from us?"

written by Gligar on Jan 17, 2012 19:32

Lift hall, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R chats with the lift, asking it if it is going to lunch. If so, he and his friends would like tyo join it. Is the lift going to the cafeteria with the RED-Clearance clones?

The lift doesn't get a chance to answer, as Kris-R (and Jeremy-Y) catch up with him. Kris-R asks what Cryo-R is doing. Whatever it is, it isn't necessary, as Kris-R has found another route to the cafeteria.

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O announces his presence, and tells the YELLOW about the list. He hopes that they can do something with it, even though he was only able to get ID numbers.

"We should be able to cope," the YELLOW answers. "It's actually possible to read ID numbers and get some information from them yourself. For instance, the first three letters are a sector code. See if you can pick out anything you recognise."

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R eats in silence for a while. He realises that, even though he can sort of feel that he is eating properly, he might be chewing his own tongue off for all he knows.

He reaches up and tries to feel for himself, but realises that he still can't feel it, so asks Speed-Y to tell him if his tongue is intact or not.

Speed-Y looks puzzled, but agrees to have a look. Sure enough, King-R's tongue is there, although it's kind of bleeding. After notifying King-R of this, he heads over to near where Mango is sitting. He demands to know why Mango started to avoid them after that incident in O Sublevel. What did he see down there?

Even though Speed-Y's appearance seems to have shocked other diners nearby, who have stopped eating and are now looking over at Speed-Y and Mango, the latter still refuses to acknowledge Speed-Y's presence. Instead he simply finishes eating and stands. He can't leave, though, since Speed-Y is right where he needs to go. Turning in another direction, her finds his path blocked again, this time by Jam-Y.

But is he aware of them in any sense other than "there is a clone in my way?" Speed-Y decides to test this by poking Mango to see if he responds. To Jam-Y, he adds that he believes that there is still a presence inside Mango's mind. Why else would he ignore them like this?

⁷⁰⁸ LIGHTNING4: (Hello page 500!)

Cloning chamber, somewhere in Iota Subsector

Joris-R finally responds. He's a little confused for a moment - he still believes that he is in the foyer of Building 2 - before he comes back to reality. He asks if he's near Industrial Subsector B. "You are in Iota Subsector," the docbot replies. "Iota Subsector is approximately halfway between the main domescraper and the Industrial Subsectors."

Clone processing, somewhere in Iota Subsector

And that's Mick-R done with his forms. All he needs now is his ME Card. Well, the machines is right there. All he needs to do is provide his tongueprint to receive his card.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 17, 2012 20:01

"That's a good idea."

I get right on it, and start reading the list for any sector codes I recognize.

written by Malkom on Jan 17, 2012 21:04

I grimace, tongueprint the vendor, and take an ME card. If done, I then head out, looking for a handy vendobot; if I see one I immediately buy something cheap, sweet and lickable to get rid of the disgusting taste of the tongueprint scanner.

written by Kristos on Jan 17, 2012 21:43

With a wink to Jeremy-Y, I say "Good-bye lift! Maybe we can enjoy a meal with you some other time."

I then head down the corridor and to the left. Hopefully both clones are following me this time.

written by Jam on Jan 17, 2012 22:09

I turn to Speed-Y.

"I dunno... Last I saw, I'm pretty sure Headgrabber was in Joris-R's head. Though, that might have been his last clone, I can't really remember..."

I look at Mango-R...

"I could just go in and check, but I'm feeling a bit tired right now..."

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 17, 2012 22:28

I frown just a moment and remain silent.

Just leave me be...

written by Gligar on Jan 17, 2012 22:29

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O decides that that's a good idea, and starts looking through the list himself. Most of the sector codes he doesn't recognise. But there are a few JHTs (as you might imagine), a couple of GUNs, an NHG, a JYR, a couple of DOFs, and a QKW.

Clone processing, somewhere in Iota Subsector

Mick-R looks distastefully at the tongue scanner, and licks it. This causes the machine to dispense an ME Card. Good.

Since he quickly departs the processing chamber, he doesn't see a small manipulator emerge from the machine holding a cleaning cloth, and begin to clean the scanner...

Corridor F3, Iota Subsector

Not that Mick-R is out of there, he finds himself in yet another maze of corridors. They may even be twisty and little, but all that concerns Mick-R is that he is cleared to be here (the corridor is INFRARED) and the presence of a vendobot not too far from the cloning station. He goes to it and purchases a B3 Plain for one credit, and proceeds to consume it.

Corridor B3, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R lightly decides to say goodbye to the lift, while winking at Jeremy-Y. The lift doesn't reply.

Kris-R starts heading back down the corridor, and waits for the other two at the first junction. It looks like he wants to turn left.

Jeremy-Y turns to Cryo-R. "Let us get moving," he suggests. "We wouldn't want to miss lunch."

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y tells Speed-Y that as far as he is aware, Headgrabber was in Joris-R, having jumped from Mango at some point. He could go in and check, but he's feeling a bit tired right now.

written by Malkom on Jan 17, 2012 22:34

"Aaaaah, the foul taste of tongueprint scanner is gone. Now, what was I supposed to be doing again?"

I frown, sip the last of my B3, and decide to fiddle with my PDC, absently pulling up the call function and dialing in a number. I only realize that I'm calling some sort of leader - team leader? Department leader? Cable leader? Wait... how can I call a cable leader?

Oh well. Maybe this leader guy will know what I'm supposed to be doing.

While waiting, I amble aimably through the maze of twisty little corridors. Strangely, they all seem to be alike. Yes indeed.

> n,n,n,e,n,w,n,ne,se,s,look

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 17, 2012 22:41

I attempt to walk out.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 17, 2012 22:48

"Hm. There are a few I recognize here. Some JHTs, a couple of GUNs, a NHG, a JYR... a couple of DOFs... and hey, a QKW."

I pause and think.

"Oh wait. Think that one might be me."

"A few clones from our team are from those sectors. But I don't know if they would've been here... hm."

"Any way we can get more information from these specific IDs? I wonder if any of these will narrow it down a little."

written by Speeder on Jan 17, 2012 23:20

I blink, and does not move from where I am.

"Seriously, I suspect you are still with something wrong going in your head... Or you hate us now?"

I turn to Jam.

"What we should do about him? And yes, Joris was headgrabbed too I think, but I dunno if it was headgrabber himself."

written by Jam on Jan 18, 2012 00:47

I block Mango's path, and watch him for any sign of a reaction.

"Don't you remember us?"

I look over at Speed-Y.

"Maybe he's been brainscrubbed..."

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 18, 2012 01:27

I watch Jam-Y and Speed-Y from a few paces away.

"You know, I was an Infrared just a few hours ago, and from the little I can remember, memory was a little hazy, and I couldn't exactly think clearly. I don't know why... Anyway, maybe Mango just needs a bit more... specific reminder of how he knew you?"

"Maybe like some kind of momento?"

written by Gligar on Jan 18, 2012 02:53

Corridor F3, Iota Subsector

Mick-R sets off, seemingly following some sort of directions. While he's at it, he idly places a call on his PDC.

He eventually realises that he's arrived at his destination: a pair of lifts.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango attempts to walk out of the cafeteria, only to be blocked by Jam-Y.

Speed-Y tells him that he suspects that something is still wrong with him. Or maybe he just dislikes them. He asks Jam-Y what they should do with him, and mentions that Joris-R was indeed affected by a Headgrabber-like mutant, though he is unsure if it it's Headgrabber himself.

Jam-Y asks Mango if he remembers them.

Or maybe he was brainscrubbed...

King-R suggests that he may simply be having issues with memory due to being INFRARED. In his own experience, for instance, he has found that even recent INFRARED memories tend to be blurry and indistinct. Perhaps Mango needs a more specific jolt to his memory?

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O reports his findings, and notes that the QKW might have been him.

Though some of the sector codes do match clones from his team, he does not think that they actually accessed the power room at all. He asks if there's a way of getting more information.

"Hmmm... sector codes from your team? Why don't you check their ID codes against the list? You could check against their ME Cards if you had a card scanner."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 18, 2012 03:14

"Hrm. I'm not sure if we have one of those."

I check my tool kit to see if there's one in there.

If I don't find one, I resume speaking.

"I don't know if there was one in our standard equipment. Maybe? I just handed the boxes out, didn't really see exactly who got what special tools. If we don't have one, where might we get one?"

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 18, 2012 10:16

I want to go past. I don't want them after me. Here to push me into this moment, away from what I feel I should be.

I feel quite a bit depressed, and just stand there, trying to avoid eye contact.

written by Jam on Jan 18, 2012 12:10

"Is it just me, or does Mango look a bit depressed?"

written by Cryoburner on Jan 18, 2012 14:32

I whisper somewhat loudly to the lift,

"I get impression that he might not want you to eat with us. You don't suppose he has something against lifts, do you?"

I look in the direction of the corridor to see if I can see Kris-R looking as though he has something against lifts.

"I suppose you could still come with us, though I'm not so sure he'll be paying for your lunch."

I begin wandering toward Kris-R and presumably a cafeteria, glancing back to see if the lift is following.

written by 4616599 on Jan 18, 2012 15:19

I grin.

"Is there Transition rental near here?"

written by Gligar on Jan 18, 2012 16:31

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O isn't sure if they have a card scanner. He checks his equipment to see if he has one. Nope... it doesn't look like it. He adds that he isn't sure if there is one in their equipment... he didn't check each individual box, after all. He asks where he might get one.

"Hmmm... if you don't have one, you could order one from PLC. I don't know how much they would charge, but it's worth a try. Or... hmmm. Do you have a Financial Officer?"

One of the other PowServ clones announces, "We're almost done, sir. All we need to do is install this..."

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango just stands there, looking depressed. And unhappy. Jam-Y spots it.

John-R looks at Mango quizzically. "Are you sure he doesn't remember us? Is there even anything in there?"

Speed-Y's PDC rings.

Cloning chamber, F Level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R grins, and asks if there is a Transition rental near here. "There is indeed, citizen," the docbot replies. "I believe that the office is on A Level, near the Internal Security checkpoint."

On the wall, a light illuminates, indicating that the showers are ready for use.

Corridor B3, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R tells the lift that they won't be able to have lunch together after all.

Looking back at Kris-R, he can see that both he and KJeremy-Y are waiting for him to accompany them.

Well... maybe the lift could accompany them, though Kris-R or Jeremy-Y may not be able to pay for its lunch, Cryo-R tells it.

As if a lift could even enter a cafeteria.

But Cryo-R seems to be expecting it to do so. As he walks towards the other two, he looks back at the lift, to see that it hasn't moved.

If he were equipped to access the bot communication channel, he would be able to hear it muttering to itself about stupid fleshbags...

written by Speeder on Jan 18, 2012 17:31

I facepalm...

And move away from Mango, rather frustrated.

Then I notice my PDC, I hand my food to Jam (no one touches my B3), and answer the PDC.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 18, 2012 17:35

"We do. Or... well, we did. I think that was Joris-R? Who was um, kind of scheduled to be terminated very soon, if it hasn't already happened."

I watch them continue working on the panel.

"I can either go off now to find my team, or I can just wait until you're done and we can start solving the mystery together?"

I shrug.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 18, 2012 17:52

"Jam-Y! Maybe Mango would remember you if you brought him to see Nukabot! Nukabot seems like a memorable bot!"

"Of course, we should see what Speed-Y thinks first."

written by Kristos on Jan 18, 2012 19:11

I continue on route to the cafeteria.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 18, 2012 21:51

I try to leave. Their presence...

It just plain hurts.

written by Gligar on Jan 18, 2012 22:24

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y facepalms and moves away a little. Why won't Mango respond?

Oh hey, his PDC is ringing. That's a good excuse... He answers it.

It's Mick-R.

King-R suggests taking Mango to see Nukabot. Surely he'd remember that.

Mango... tries to leave again.

He soon finds that other clones are crowded round. Maybe they want to see him respond too?

John-R frowns, and thinks.

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O replies in the affirmative. Oh wait, he was terminated, wasn't he? Or has he been, yet?

He offers to go find the team now. Or he could wait until PowServ are done, and they could go together.

The YELLOW replies, "We can wait if you'd prefer."

The YELLOW goes back to working with his team. They install the replacement circuit breaker.

The first thing that happens is... that the lights don't come on.

The YELLOW looks confused. "That should be the light circuit..."

Second: Beep. Beep. Beep.

The YELLOW gasps...

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Beep. Beep. Beep.

Corridor B2, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R continues along his new route. Another left... and a right... then another left... and there's the BLUE corridor. Only this time, he's on the other side.

written by Jam on Jan 18, 2012 22:55

I look up in alarm...

"Wait, what's that beeping? Where's it coming from?"

I attempt to find the source of the beeping.

"Also, make sure Mango doesn't leave yet, guys..."

written by Speeder on Jan 18, 2012 22:56

As I hear the sound, I try to remember if the BLUE is denser than air or not...

In case it is not denser (and thus will rise), I start to scream.

"EVERYBODY TO THE GROUND, AND DO NOT BREATHE BLUE GAS!!!"

I do not even bother to turn off the PDC, I turn to Jam.

"Handle the situation here, I do not want a panic killing everyone trampled."

I pocket the PDC, finish the B3 (of course), and run taking out the YELLOW gun...

I run toward those stairs I saw on the same corridor as the cafeteria, looking for the Power Services team.

written by Kristos on Jan 18, 2012 23:16

"See? Wasn't that easy and non-treasonous?"

I smile as we step into the cafeteria (or step closer).

written by Lightning4 on Jan 18, 2012 23:33

"Um. Is that a good beeping or a bad beeping? Or a very bad beeping that is about to kill us all if we don't sprint out of here ASAP?"

I get ready to run at a moments notice. If the PowServ team shows indication of running too, I gun it out the door and in the direction of the exit.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 18, 2012 23:37

I run frantically after Speed-Y, opting not to pull out my pistols, since the sounds are only beeps, and I can run faster without them.

"Where are you headed?" I yell to Speed-Y.

"Darn, I forgot to wash my hands!" I mutter. "I need to remember to stop by Nukabot so I can get some cleaning fluid."

written by Gligar on Jan 19, 2012 02:51

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y looks up, and tries to find the source of the beeping.

Other clones notice the beeping, and start looking around in alarm...

But Jam-Y spots it first. It's coming from a box, of the same sort as the one in the foyer...

He asks someone to make sure that Mango does not leave yet.

Speed-Y has not noticed the box, but has been reminded of the box in the foyer. He yells for everyone to get down while he tries to remember if the gas is heavier than air or not. He... isn't really sure, but he thinks that it is not.

He tells Jam-Y to handle the situation here, and runs out, shoving his PDC into his pocket and grabbing his "revolver". And telling Jam-Y to look after his food. (OOC: forgot about that...)

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y dashes for the stairs, looking for the PowServ team.

He becomes aware that he can hear beeping from here as well.

He realises that King-R has followed him, and is asking where he is going. But King-R realises that he hasn't washed his hands, and makes a note to get supplies from Nukabot.

Speed-Y realises that he did not hang up his PDC. Mick-R will most likely have heard what is happening here.

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O wonders about the beeping. Is it good, bad, or get-out-of-here-NOW-bad?

He watches the PowServ team...

...who are looking nervously for the source of the beeping.

The find it: another box. The same type.

They may not have had a good look at the one in the foyer, but that doesn't mean that they can't scam.

L4-O follows them.

Corridor 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

They make it as far as the corridor before one of them realises that there is also a box here, as well.

It too is beeping.

But not for long. The beeping becomes constant, and the box emits its toxic payload.

As do other boxes, around the subsector.

Around Industrial Subsector B

Now suddenly unable to feel anything, clones fall to the floor where they stand. Some fall down stairs, breaking bones. Others end up taking a plunge down several levels of testing chambers, and suffering fatal injuries. A few just... stop breathing.

The team can see some of it. Even those who took precautions were taken unawares by how sudden it all was. Let's just hope that some clones escaped the horror of biotoxin.

Corridor B2, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R states how easy that was. No lift needed. For the cafeteria is right there!

He steps inside.

Cafeteria, B Level, Gamma Subsector

It's a pretty nice cafeteria, as well. Each table is within viewing distance of a vidscreen mounted on one wall, which is currently displaying a news bulletin about something or other. Already, the place is about half full. There is a small queue shared between the two serving windows, which seems to be going by quite quickly. Clones seem to get their food in as little as a few minutecycles.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 19, 2012 03:03

I notice that something is quite wrong.

Quite.

I make for the nearest place with air, ignoring all requests to stay still.

written by Malkom on Jan 19, 2012 03:24

I speak into my PDC. "Say, sounds like you have a technological disturbance here. What's going on? And what am I supposed to do? I thought I had something to do, but I can't remember what it was..."

Just then, someone yells into my ear to get down. I fling myself down, reflexively.

>dodge

I yell into my PDC. "HEY! WHAT IN THE NAME OF THE MOST COMPLEX PROGRAM CONTAINED IN THE COMPUTER IS GOING ON?!?!?!?!?!?!?!?!?!?!"

written by Speeder on Jan 19, 2012 03:41

As Mick yells into the PDC, I am diving for the ground to dodge the blue gas as I can, hoping that King will follow suit (although he is already gassed anyway).

I hope the breathing mask against pollution also helps against the gas.

I take the PDC and say.

"Industrial Subsector B under attack by a BLUE chemical, please find a BLUE clone, and tell him that, he will know what to do."

I turn the call off, and attempt to call a certain person I've met before, person that probably has nothing to do with this, but might still want to help.

written by Malkom on Jan 19, 2012 04:17

I look in consternation at my PDC, shake it, then clip it to my belt before stepping into the elevator (might as well start here...) and saying, "Take me to the nearest BLUE clone, would you?"

While waiting, I lean against the elevator walls and hum a tune.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 19, 2012 04:24

Seeing as I'm already affected by the gas, I don't bother dropping to the ground. Instead, I look around the corridor for a BLUE clone, preferably one that is still living. If I don't spot one, I run into the cafeteria.

"I only hope this BLUE will actually know what to do... How does Speed-Y even know this, anyway?" I mutter as my eyes scan the room for a BLUE.

written by Kristos on Jan 19, 2012 04:27

I go to the back of the queue.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 19, 2012 06:15

Assuming I'm still conscious (and alive), I try my best to hold my breath and get to the sector exit. I spend the whole time hoping the garage also did not contain one of those boxes, or that I at least get to the room with the already-discharged box.

written by 4616599 on Jan 19, 2012 08:57

Thanking the docbot, I grab a mask and head for the showers.

written by Jam on Jan 19, 2012 13:31

"Augh!"

I panic, and try to cover any exposed skin...

I also start yelling...

"STAY CALM! THE GAS WILL NOT KILL YOU immediately! DO NOT PANIC!"

written by Cryoburner on Jan 19, 2012 16:05

"Wow! A cafeteria!"

I make my way over to the queue, and begin looking around to see if there are any lifts here. I then look back toward the cafeteria's entrance, to see whether the lift has followed us.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 19, 2012 18:30

Despite the shouts to stay calm I highly doubt too many clones are not diving for cover. I know I am.

written by Gligar on Jan 19, 2012 20:07

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango once again decides to try to leave. He quickly discovers how difficult it is to do so without being able to feel his legs. To his credit, though, he does manage to stumble his way to the door before falling to the ground.

Mick-R's lift, Iota Subsector

Still on the PDC, Mick-R notes that they might have a probe - GET DOWN!

He does.

But there is nothing obvious here to harm him.

He yells down the PDC for an explanation.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Even as he's being yelled at by some insubordinate RED Troubleshooter, Speed-Y is diving to the ground in an attempt to avoid as much gas as he can. He hopes that King-R will do the same. He puts on his mask again, hoping that it will protect him from more than just smoke.

He orders Mick-R to find a BLUE clone and report that the subsector is under attack by some sort of BLUE toxin. Hopefully, the BLUE will know what to do.

Then he hangs up, and tries to place another call...

Meanwhile, King-R decides not to hit the deck. Instead, he starts looking for a BLUE clone as well. First, the corridor. Nope, no BLUE clones are evident. He heads back into the cafeteria.

Mick-R's lift, Iota Subsector

Mick-R shakes his PDC in frustration before putting it away. He then steps into the lift and instructs it to take him to the nearest BLUE clone.

"I will try my best, citizen," the lift tells him, and begins to descend.

While he waits, Mick-R hums a tune.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While narrowly avoiding tripping over Mango, King-R starts looking for a BLUE in the cafeteria. But there doesn't appear to be one present. But how does Speed-Y know that a BLUE will know what to do?

While trying to cover what exposed skin he has, Jam-Y yells for everyone not to panic, since the gas is not ^{immediately} fatal. Despite that, though, several clones do try to take cover from the gas. Clones such as Azir-R, for instance.

Cafeteria, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R, Cryo-R and Jeremy-Y join the queue for food. Of course, Cryo-R has to look around to ascertain whether a lift is present. There isn't one. Why would there be?

He also looks back at the door as if expecting the lift from before to have somehow torn itself from its lift shaft and followed them. Needless to say, it has not. I doubt that lifts eat lunch, anyway.

Corridor 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O tries to hold his breath, and picks his way through the fallen PowServ clones, trying to get to an exit.

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Or at least, somewhere less toxin-y.

Unfortunately, it seems that the foyer's box still had enough toxin to create a cloud almost the size of the room. He keeps running.

Cloning chamber, F Level, Iota Subsector

Thanking, the docbot, Joris-R looks around for a mask. There doesn't seem to be one.

Chemical shower chamber, F Level, Iota Subsector

When he gets to the shower, the reason becomes clear. Instead of the self-contained cubicles used in the rest of the sector, this shower uses a conveyor belt to move a clone beneath several showerheads, some of which are water, the others are the chemical solution. At the far end is a set of drying fans. Brushes are available to allow clones to scrub themselves.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 19, 2012 20:26

I push forward to the best of my ability, until I can go no more.

So close to the exit... can I make it?

written by Malkom on Jan 19, 2012 22:08

I decide to try and call up some cool music on my PDC.

If successful, I snap my fingers along with the beat...

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 19, 2012 22:34

Feeling quite numb in the legs, I see if I can position myself upright and try to avoid breathing as much of whatever it is. I also look for any air pockets that haven't been filled with the gas yet, and take refuge there if possible.

written by Jam on Jan 20, 2012 01:32

I try to figure out how the gas is affecting me...

"Okay, does anyone have anything that could be used to cover that gas dispenser?"

I also make sure my mask is securely over my face...

written by Gligar on Jan 20, 2012 01:55

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O keeps trying. He simply must get to the exit. He gets within reaching distance, when his lungs start complaining at him. They need air! Reflexively, he takes a deep breath, and inhales a big gulp of BLUE toxin. His legs fail him, and he falls to the ground.

Mick-R's Lift, Iota Subsector

To pass the time, Mick-R has a look at music on his PDC. Let's see... what's available. Ah, that one looks good, and it's only 0.1 credits! He plays it.

Of course, it's not that easy. He first has to listen to the ad. It's something about Transition rentals on A Level.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango manages to pull himself into a sitting position, and tries not to breathe much. It's kind of difficult. Looking around, he notices that the place is pretty saturated with gas now.

Jam-Y thinks about the gas. It seems to be killing his sense of touch, and it's kind of difficult to move his head much. Is he wearing his mask? It seems not... he'd better correct that... ah, there he goes.

He asks if someone has something that could be placed over the box. An INFRARED produces a small towel. She seems to want to speak but can't manage to do so... indeed, it seems she's also having problems with movement...

written by Lightning4 on Jan 20, 2012 04:42

I try to keep struggling. I attempt to crawl out of the door and into hopeful safety. Or at least try to get close to Nukabot.

"Help..."

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 20, 2012 10:43

I try to conserve my breath. But I don't feel that I'm going to be getting any air any time soon.

Panicpanicpanicpanicpanicpanicpanicpanic

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 20, 2012 13:15

If I am not covering my face with the cloth, I certainly am now.

written by Speeder on Jan 20, 2012 14:09

I wonder if my call is working and if the mask is working too (and if the gas looks denser, or lighter, than the air).

written by Jam on Jan 20, 2012 15:13

"Okay, it's getting hard to move..." I say to myself.

I feel a bit nervous, but try to look calm, like I know what I'm doing. I point to the side of the room that doesn't have the box.

"Everyclone move to that side of the room, as far away from the box as possible! Breathe through the inside of your jumpsuit! And close the door to the cafeteria!"

I look around at all the clones, and try to see if they are listening to me... I also look for any registered mutant bands...

"Okay, if there are any Uncanny Luck mutants here, now would be the time to start using your powers! If there are any Cryokinesis mutants here, focus your powers on that box... I don't care if you're registered or not, I'm sure Friend Computer will forgive you if you save a room full of clones from whatever this stuff is!"

I take out my list of known mutations, and read through it...

written by Gligar on Jan 20, 2012 16:39

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O still keeps going. Now limited to crawling, he continues... towards the door...

And reaches it!

He pushes with all his remaining strength, and manages to open the door and get out.

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Once through the door, however, L4-O's strength fades, and he passes out.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango keeps trying to not breathe the gas, but he really needs to breathe... and it's beginning to show...

Speaking of clones with problems, it looks like Lucas-R is also showing signs of distress. But he realises that he can cover his mouth, and does so.

Azir-R also realises that his mouth is not covered, and uses his cloth to do so.

Jam-Y tries to remain calm. He starts giving orders: everyone should move to the other side of the room, the door should be closed, and mutants should step forward to help out... he's looking for Uncanny Luck and Cryokinesis, in particular... and he doesn't care if they're registered or not.

One clone does step forward, a RED registered mutant. "I have Uncanny Luck, sir. I don't know if I can control it, though..." As clones continue to move, he heads over to the box.

A couple more clones look uncertain, as if they're pondering a big decision...

A few more just lie there, not moving.

As his orders are carried out, Jam-Y pulls out that list of mutations, and browses through it.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y realises that his call isn't getting through...

He also realises that he's still able to move, even through the numbness. The mask must be working.

Cafeteria, B Level, Gamma Subsector

The queue moves. It is now Kris-R's turn to order food.

Mick-R's lift, Iota Subsector

The ad finishes playing, giving way to Mick-R's music selection.

Just as the lift stops and opens its doors.

written by Malkom on Jan 20, 2012 17:15

"Devious! Unhappy lift."

I allow the music to play while strolling through the doors and towards any available BLUE clones. "Hey there! I'm not sure why, but there's some kind of emergency involving something that needs a BLUE clone. Some leader guy told me! You can call him." I recite the guy's number in time to the music.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 20, 2012 17:32

I spend this time to reflect on the inside of my eyelids.

Or I would, anyway.

Instead, I just lie there, undoubtedly getting covered in soot.

written by Kristos on Jan 20, 2012 18:59

I look to see what food is available.

written by Jam on Jan 20, 2012 19:57

I look at the RED mutant.

“Excellent! Let’s hope you can control your powers! Good luck!”

Then I look at my list again, and begin to name any mutations that seem like they would be even a bit useful...

“Object Phasing, Radioactivity, uh... Toxic Metabolism, Pharmaceutical Metabolism, Deep Thought, Detect Mutant Power, uh... Mechanical Intuition, Biological Intuition, Chemical Intuition, Mind Sense, Push Mutant Powers, Telekinesis, Teleport Object...”

I look up.

“If you have any of these powers, step forward now!”

I look around at the clones in the room, and notice some seem uncertain, as if they are actually mutants but won’t admit it...

“I see some of you are a bit uncertain! If you admit you’re a mutant and end up saving the lives of a room full of clones, I’m sure Friend Computer will reward your bravery, honesty, and loyalty! Probably with credits, possibly with a promotion! Registration isn’t very difficult, either, and once you’re registered Friend Computer will be able to protect you! Isn’t that right, John-R?”

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 20, 2012 20:11

I try to move away from the source of the gas, as the other clones are.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 20, 2012 21:48

I stop moving.

I still try to get some air though.

written by Gligar on Jan 20, 2012 22:45

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O remains unconscious. But at least he’s out of the toxins. Right?

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y wishes the RED luck in controlling his powers, before looking at his list again. He extracts from it a shorter list of mutations which might possibly be of use, which he reads out and asks for. Noticing the hesitation of certain clones, he assures them that if they act now and admit that they’re mutants, he’s sure that Our Mutual Friend will reward them. He adds that registration is easy and comes with its own benefits. He asks John-R to back him up. “That’s right, Sir... but... looking at some of these clones’ expressions, you’ve probably confused them with that list. They might not even know the proper names for their mutations. If they are mutants, that is.”

Azir-R tries to comply with Jam-Y’s order to move away, and manages to do so. He does have to avoid another falling clone, though, who either ran out of air or got affected a little too much by the gas.

Mango is torn between not moving and trying to find some non-toxic air...

But he can’t take it any more. He takes a breath...

Two clones, both INFRARED, seem to have made a decision. One admits to having Toxic Metabolism, and a second says that she is able to move things with her mind, though she doesn’t know what it’s called. A third looks at them angrily and opens his mouth to speak, but ends up taking another lungful of gas and keeling over.

A Level, Iota Subsector

Still listening to his music, Mick-R begins wandering, looking for a BLUE clone. He soon finds one – apparently a CPU official of some kind – and tells him that there is some sort of emergency involving something BLUE. Mick-R doesn’t know the details, but says that “some leader guy” does. “You’ll need to tell me more. Where is this supposed emergency? Who is this leader guy of yours? And why hasn’t this been reported through official channels?” He sighs. “Alright... lets see what this is all about.” He pulls out his PDC, and makes a call.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y is continuing to try to make his call, when his PDC suddenly rings.

Cafeteria, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Kris looks at the menu. It looks like todaycycle’s choices are Soylent RED or Hot Fun, with either B3 Extra Classic or TeaSir.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 21, 2012 00:11

I continue lying there until I either come around, or someone rescues me, or something else happens entirely.

written by Kristos on Jan 21, 2012 00:42

I order Soylent RED with TeaSir and, after receiving my meal, find a seat.

written by Gligar on Jan 21, 2012 01:37

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O continues to not do much for a moment, before coming round.

He’s still numb, and it’s difficult to move, but he at least has some energy.

Cafeteria, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R orders some Soylent RED and some TeaSir for 10 credits and goes to sit at an empty table nearby.

Cryo-R is up next.

written by Malkom on Jan 21, 2012 02:04

“Thanks! I’ll make sure to mention it to our friend, the Leader Guy. Perhaps he will reward you as well as rewarding me!”

I stroll amiably off, keeping time with the music, and look around for someone to buy one of those classy laser pistols off of...

written by Jam on Jan 21, 2012 02:08

I look at John-R.

“Good point... Okay, can anyone else here absorb toxins, move things with their minds, freeze things in ice, emit radiation, or somehow know how a machine or a drug or toxin works just by looking at it? What about making things be not-solid, or boosting other mutants powers, or teleporting things, or speaking to other clones with your mind?”

I also look towards the Toxic Metabolism INFRARED.

“Do you think you could absorb some of the toxin in the air? Or, even better, see if you can suck the toxin out of some of the unconscious clones here! Maybe we can still save them...”

I continue thinking about what to do...

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 21, 2012 02:20

I cough and hack, possibly to get some toxin out of me.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 21, 2012 03:11

I start trying to reflexively purge my lungs of the toxin, even though it's probably replacing it with the sooty air.

At least that's preferable to the toxin.

If I manage to stabilize, I try to sit up and check where I manage to get to, and see what's going on around me.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 21, 2012 04:22

“Phew, sorry chief” I apologize to the fallen clone as I climb over him.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 21, 2012 07:02

Dismissing the notion of finding a BLUE clone, I head back to the group.

“Does anyone know where the gas all came from? It couldn't have all come from that box that got me, could it?”

“Because I do seem to be still standing, and not having any difficulty breathing. If there's something I can do, please tell me. Maybe blasting that flashing box?” I add, tapping my laser pistols.

written by 4616599 on Jan 21, 2012 07:07

I continue scrubbing myself.

“Wow, this makes showers Fun!” I tell the docbot.

written by Gligar on Jan 21, 2012 17:42

Corridors, A Level, Iota Subsector

Mick-R thanks the BLUE and starts to leave. “Hold it, citizen! I haven't finished with you yet!”

But Mick-R ignores him, and goes looking for a place to purchase a laser pistol.

There doesn't appear to be a vendor, but... doesn't PLC have a delivery service?

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y decides that John-R might be right, and rephrases his list. This gets a response from a couple more clones - one claims to have what sounds like Cryokinesis, and the other seems to have Mechanical Intuition. As they step forward, a couple more pass out through lack of air.

Before they can do anything, though, John-R interrupts. “Hang on, hang on, can we have some more light on those clones? This gas seems to be doing something odd to the helmet lights.”

Jam-Y looks towards the Toxic Metabolism mutant. (“No, not that one!” John-R admonishes.) He tells him to try to remove some of the toxins from the air... or perhaps from some of the affected (and now not moving as much) clones. He agrees to try, and seems to concentrate while taking deep breaths.

Jam-Y continues thinking.

Mango starts coughing heavily, trying to get some of the toxin out of him. But there's just more toxin around him...

Azir-R apologises to the fallen clone and keeps moving. It's getting difficult to breathe, though.

King-R approaches from the door and asks where all the gas came from. Surely not from the box in the foyer?

He points out that he is still standing, and apart from being numb, is otherwise okay. He asks if there is something he can do, say, shooting at the box in here? He does have two laser pistols, after all.

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O also tries to cough up some of the toxin. In his case, though, it gets replaced by the omnipresent smoke which, while unpleasant, is still preferable to BLUE toxin.

He manages to sit up, and realises that he is outside the building. From somewhere off in the distance, he can hear other clones coughing, as if they have also been caught up in BLUE toxi. Surely those boxes can't be in the rest of the Industrial Subsectors?

Chemical shower chamber, F level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R has been scrubbing himself during his shower cycle. He announces that scrubbing makes showering fun, but there is no-one there to hear him. It seems that the docbot did not follow him.

Soon, though, the drying cycle begins.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 21, 2012 19:13

I cough and hack some more, and attempt to get back on my feet if I can.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 21, 2012 20:09

“Wow! Lunch!”

I look over today's menu, taking special note of what material it is made of, and whether it is attached to anything.

"I will have the Hot Fun and a B3 Extra Classic. And perhaps some TeaSir... and maybe some Soylent Red..."

"Oh, I also have to pick up lunch for a friend! I think he might be stuck in a lift shaft or something. I'm not sure what he likes, so one of everything should be fine."

written by Gligar on Jan 21, 2012 22:20

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O continues coughing up what gas he can. Soon, he's able to get to his feet.

Noises from the vicinity of Building 1 attract his attention.

Cafeteria, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R notices the menu, and, of course, examines it. It turns out that the menu is "written" on a vidscreen, which is attached to the wall.

He then orders... everything on the menu. Twice.

"I'm sorry, citizen," replies the servingclone, "but regulations prohibit me from supplying more than one mealpack and one drink per clone. The last time someclone was allowed to take more than one, he exploded. That's also why we don't supply WaferThin™ mints any more." He gives Cryo-R a packet of Hot Fun and a B3. "That'll be 10 credits, please."

written by Kristos on Jan 22, 2012 02:38

I greet any clones that might be near me and begin eating my food. Chances are I know some of them.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 22, 2012 02:39

I have a look at the packet of hot fun to see whether it requires any additional preparation.

"Hmm... I suppose that will work. But what about my friend? I think he may be stuck in a lift shaft, and growing hungry. Might it be a good idea to at least bring him a B3 or something?"

written by Gligar on Jan 22, 2012 03:15

Cafeteria, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R spots a couple of clones from his dormitory, and greets them before starting to eat. They say hi in return.

Cryo-R looks at the packet of Hot Fun. Judging from the steam being given off through the small holes in its packaging, it has already been adequately heated.

He asks about his "friend" in the lift shaft. The servingclone replies that he can't help. "Perhaps he should have thought about that if he was planning to get stuck in a lift shaft. Now, can you pay up and move along? You're holding up the YELLOW citizen."

written by Jam on Jan 22, 2012 03:27

I look towards the Cryokinesis clone.

"See if you can freeze the parts of the box that are releasing the gas!"

Then I look towards the Mechanical Intuition clone.

"Once we get the gas dispenser shut off, I want you to go and see if you can figure out how it works..."

After that, I walk over John-R.

"What are you seeing?"

I look at the helmet lights.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 22, 2012 03:41

"Hm?"

I start moving slowly towards Building 1. I gain some speed if I am able, otherwise, I keep to a slow pace.

written by Granpire viking man on Jan 22, 2012 08:03

I fire one shot at said box.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 22, 2012 10:58

I try to stay awake as best I can, but know that I won't be able to much longer.

written by 4616599 on Jan 22, 2012 17:12

After the drying cycle finishes, I exit and start filling up forms.

written by Gligar on Jan 22, 2012 17:20

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y tells the Cryokinesis mutant to try to freeze parts of the box related to releasing gas. To the Mechanical Intuition clone, he adds that he wants to find out how these boxes work.

"Please remain calm, citizens," our mutual friend intones. "Everything is under control."

While they're trying to do that, Jam-Y goes over to John-R and asks what he's seeing. "Well, part of the problem is that there's not enough light. None of the team are looking at these mutants, so I can't get them on camera. Normally, I'd only need one of the lights, but with this gas, I need two or more just to get a good picture. I need everyone to work with me here."

Jam-Y looks at the lights. They seem plenty bright enough to him, but then again, he's no Cryo-R. He doesn't know about Adequate(tm) lighting, does he?

Mango concentrates on not passing out. King-R doesn't make it any easier when he decides to shoot the box anyway.

He shoots once. But that's enough to cause the box to explode in a shower of sparks, burnt electronics, and yet more gas.

A muddy brown gas, this time.

Nearby clones - including three of the mutants - are hit by a full dose, and fall to the floor, their skins turning an interesting shade of BLUE-GREEN.

Other clones feel a... burning...

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O is intrigued by the sounds, and goes to investigate. Rather slowly.

It seems that some clones have pulled up in a vehiclebot, and are approaching Building 1. They seem to be wearing gas masks, and are armed with laser rifles.

Other vehiclebots seem to be approaching, as if they're heading towards other buildings.

Clone processing, F level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R enters from the chemical showers. He notices the clone at the desk, still trying to frantically restack forms after Mick-R disrupted his filing system.

The clone notices Joris-R approaching. "Can you get yourself dressed first? I need time here. Some clones just don't realise how important all this stuff is."

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y's PDC is still ringing.

But Speed-Y seems to be too busy to answer it. There's an older INFRARED trying to attract his attention, gesticulating wildly towards the power room. Speed-Y seems to be having trouble fighting him off.

written by Jam on Jan 22, 2012 17:50

I look at the exploded box in horror...

"KING-R! WHAT DID YOU JUST DO?!"

I back away from the exploded box, and try to see who the affected mutants are.

"HOW ARE WE SUPPOSED TO STOP THE GAS IF YOU BLOW THE BOX UP!?"

I check if anything is on fire, since I feel a burning feeling...

written by Lightning4 on Jan 22, 2012 18:37

I decide it would be in my best interest to wait outside of Building 2 for the clones to attack.

I idly wonder if they're Armed Forces, and any squads I know of.

I make my way back to just outside the door of Building 2. I continue coughing a bit more while there, if there's anything left to cough up.

I also check my status to see if the toxin has affected me in any serious way.

written by Gligar on Jan 22, 2012 21:59

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y takes a moment to take in the horror of it all, before yelling at King-R. How are they supposed to stop the gas if he goes around blowing up the box?

Also, is he on fire? No, but... it burns...

Also, what about those mutants? The registered Toxic Metabolism clone seems to have fared the worst... half his face has melted off. The other two - the Cryokinesis and the Mechanical Intuition - have less of their faces melted off. But none of the three seem to be doing much of anything... including breathing.

And to think that this was caused in part by a squeamish Hygiene Officer.

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O decides to wait and see if these clones will attack. He tries to see if they're Armed Forces... but no. They don't seem to be acting right. Surely there'd be a clone doing a lot of shouting, with the rest packing lots of weapons? But no. Apart from the aforementioned laser rifles, there are no weapons in evidence.

At least none that L4-O can recognise.

The clones enter Building 1.

The other two vehiclebots continue to approach. One is almost at Building 2. It seems to be headed for the garage.

While watching this, L4-O does a quick damage assessment regarding the gas, and how it has affected him. Hmmmm... it seems to be harder to breathe than when he was out here before. His limbs feel stiff. And there's the aforementioned numbness.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 22, 2012 22:28

I think for a moment, and get an idea!

I try to hide out of sight and pull out my PDC.

I attempt to contact Nukabot and notify it of the clones about to come in, and to keep an eye on their behavior to try to determine their organization and if they're hostile.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 22, 2012 23:51

I attempt to get out.

There has to be something I can do...

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 22, 2012 23:59

With this new funtstic gas, I double time it.. or try to at any rate

written by Gligar on Jan 23, 2012 02:14

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O watches the approaching vehiclebots... Aha! He ducks into a convenient cranny formed by a couple of the building's supports, pulls out his PDC, and sends a message...

He glances out. The vehiclebot arrives, and, as advertised, enters the garage, out of sight from L4-O.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango manages to get out of the cafeteria, finding himself in the corridor beyond.

Meanwhile Azir-R is still trying to reach a part of the room that is nowhere near the exploded box. That ends up being near to Jam-Y. But it's not far enough away to negate the burning that continues to eat away at the remaining clones (two more of whom have already succumbed.)

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango takes in the scene: BLUE smoke, with Speed-Y trying to avoid it, except that his PDC is going off and he's being harassed by an INFRARED.

And passes out...

written by Cryoburner on Jan 23, 2012 01:57

I pay up and move along, finding a seat near Kris-R if possible. I then open my Hot Fun and examine it, noting the levels to which it is hot and/or fun.

written by Kristos on Jan 23, 2012 06:06

I introduce Cryo-R and the other clones to each other.

"This is Cryo-R. He's new to our dormitory. He seems to specialize in... inspecting things."

I then perhaps tell Cryo-R a bit about the two clones from our dormitory.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 23, 2012 08:48

I worriedly stare at my PDC, waiting for a reply. I peek out occasionally to check if anyone is coming in my direction.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 23, 2012 10:58

Consciousness is lost.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 23, 2012 15:15

If I have anymore pain meds, I pop one to help ease the burning and the misery as I crawl to perceived safety.

written by Gligar on Jan 23, 2012 16:51

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O watches his PDC...

Finally, it vibrates at him. It's a message from Nukabot:

The newcomers you mentioned have arrived. They appear to be trying to reactivate the scrubot.

Cancel that. They are breaking out gas grenades. One is saying that their Plan, whatever that might be, will have to proceed without some component. Apparently, someclone failed to secretly install a component on the power distribution board. Said clone will be punished, it seems.

written by Kristos on Jan 20, 2012 19:21

I figured this is worth a remention:

Chemical showers

The water level continues to rise, but as it does, a click is heard from the door.

Jam-R seems to be having problems with his eyes. Apparently his ability to distinguish colours has been messed up. I'm sure he'll be okay, eventually.

Jam-R

I open the door and burst out. I stare in confusion at the ULTRAVIOLET clone that is standing outside the door. I bow.

"Thank you, O mighty High Programmer! I knew Friend Computer, in it's wisdom, would send someone to save me! Though I didn't expect it would send an ULTRAVIOLET citizen! I'm honored to be in your presence!"

Another clone is asking about a cloningbot which arrived just after you left the garage. She is being told to ignore it.

Oh... more details about the Plan... it partly involves "mopping up the survivors", whatever that means, to give them targets for the grenades.

The other vehiclebot continues past without incident.

Cafeteria, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R finally decides that he has sufficiently examined everything over by the serving window, pays up, and sits near Kris-R, where he proceeds to further examine the Hot Fun. It has already been established that it is hot, so he opens it to see how fun it is. Of course,, the best way to do that is to eat it, so he proceeds to start performing that action. It seems to meet the accepted levels of Fun.

While he's doing that, Kris-R takes care of a few introductions: he points out Cryo-R to his dorm mates, Steve-R and Tom-R, and explains to Cryo-R that both work in PLC. Steve-R's injury record seems to be notably high, but he continues doing his job to an acceptable fashion.

Over at the service window, it's Jeremy-Y's turn.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R pulls out a painkiller and consumes it. Her hopes that it will help against... whatever this burning is. That done, he crawls towards the door, and opens it to get out of the room.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 23, 2012 19:17

I immediately relay messages to both Jam-Y and Speed-Y detailing this:

There are clones entering the buildings. They are saying something about 'mopping up the survivors' through the use of some kind of gas grenade. They may be hostile, and they also were discussing something about a secret component on the power distribution board not getting installed. Either way, take this information as you will.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 23, 2012 21:40

Now that I am outside I assess the situation here, looking for dangerous clones, potential problems, and a place to rest and recover.

I look at the face of the High Programmer, and see Mango's face, but somehow fail to recognize him.

"You seem familiar somehow... If I may ask, sir, have we met before?"

I notice a YELLOW clone typing at the terminal. I gasp as I realize that it's Kristos.

"Oh, Kristos-Y, sir! Congratulations on the promotion!"

written by Jam on Jan 23, 2012 22:11

I continue to feel the burning, and decide it's not safe here anymore...

"Okay guys, it's not safe here! Let's try to get outside the building!"

I walk towards the door to the cafeteria...

written by Gligar on Jan 23, 2012 22:24

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O sends a PDC message to both Speed-Y and Jam-Y.

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y gives the order to get out of the cafeteria, and leads the way himself.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

He arrives outside to find Azir-R crawling around, looking for trouble. He seems to have forgotten to get his wheelchair. Also present are Speed-Y, who is trying to avoid the gas while being harassed by both an INFRARED and his ringing PDC. The INFRARED seems to be gesticulating in the direction of the power room, though his movements seem to be rather stiff.

Also in the corridor, slumped against the wall, is an unconscious Mango.

Jam-Y's PDC suddenly vibrates at him.

And if that weren't enough, a faint vibration, as of clones headed this way, can be felt through the floor.

written by Jam on Jan 23, 2012 23:28

"Hmm?"

I check my PDC and read L4-O's message...

"Oh, this is bad... This is very bad... Clones are coming to terminate us with gas grenades!"

I notice an INFRARED seems to be trying to convey something important to Speed-Y...

"What are you trying to say, citizen?"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 23, 2012 23:38

I wait for a little bit, look around to make sure it's safe again, then if it's safe, continue with one last PDC message back to Nukabot:

I look back at Lucas, and gasp in surprise when I notice that he's wearing a BLUE jumpsuit. (ooc: he's wearing a jumpsuit, right?)

"What? Why is everyone getting big promotions all of the sudden?"

I scream in horror as I look down at my own jumpsuit and notice it's INFRARED!

"What happened? You would think that I would remember being demoted..."

I panic as I realize that I'm kneeling on a ORANGE floor, and standing in front of a ULTRAVIOLET citizen.

"Sir! I'm sorry, sir! I didn't realize that the floor was ORANGE, sir!"

I (again) scream in horror as I notice a BLUE laser pistol in my pocket. I immediately take it and drop it on the floor. I take out another laser pistol, and sigh in relief as I notice it's INFRARED. Then I realize that there's no such thing as an INFRARED laser pistol! I

Thanks for the information. You should probably get yourself out of the garage and park somewhere nearby that's hidden, as soon as it's safe to get out. We don't need you getting taken off by whoever these clones are.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 24, 2012 00:24

I respond to the other clones at the table...

"Oh, hello there! I just got back from a busy week of inspecting ring-for-service bells, among other things. It was something of a vacation awarded to me by the computer for being great."

I continue munching on my Hot Fun as I examine my container of B3 in greater detail.

written by Gligar on Jan 24, 2012 01:36

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y reads L4-O's message, and tells everyone that clones are coming...

He then notices the INFRARED, and asks what's wrong. "Sir... cough there's dead clones... in Corridor 1... cough outside the power place... but..." The clone doubles over and gives in to a coughing fit.

John-R emerges from the cafeteria, with a couple of the INFRAREDS in tow. All three of them are clearly burned by something, their skin turned almost the colour of... of... pre-soylent?

Speed-Y's PDC continues to ring.

The vibrations become footsteps. Heavy ones. Muffled explosions can be heard.

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O tells Nukabot to get somewhere safe as soon as it is safe to do so.

Cafeteria, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R greets Steve-R and Tom-R, and claims that he just came back from a "vacation" inspecting bells. Steve-R looks at Cryo-R. "Oh... kay? That's a kind of weird vacation..."

But Cryo-R isn't listening. He's trying to somehow make the can of B3 somehow sprout more detail. Needless to say, it does not. However, he doesn't have much time to contemplate this, as an announcement from Our Mutual Friend interrupts him.

"Attention, Cryo-R-BRN, Kris-R-QJT, and Mick-R-NRK! You have been chosen for a fun mission of utmost importance! Please report to the M[static] Hall, clutch my head in confusion, and lay on the floor. I conclude that I must be asleep. I wait for this horribly confusing nightmare to end.

[static] Level, Emergency Bun[static]-3 for your briefing, before 13:00. Remember, tardiness is treason. Thank you for your co-operation."

Somewhere on A Level, Iota Subsector

Looks like Mick-R heard it, too. He's been running around, trying to find another vendor, with little success.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 24, 2012 04:07

"Oh wow! Looks like we get to go to the mall level for an emergency bun briefing!"

"Om-nom-nom-nom..."

I dump the remaining Hot Fun in my mouth as I stand, chewing chewingly. I pocket the B3, seeing as I probably don't have time to drink it right now.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 24, 2012 08:27

I get back up and start peeking out of my hiding spot. If there are no more vehiclebots coming, I cautiously start approaching the garage entrance.

written by Jam on Jan 24, 2012 13:34

"There's dead clones everywhere! But what else were you going to say?"

I look in the direction of the footsteps, and take out my laser pistol.

"Speed-Y, your PDC is ringing..."

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 24, 2012 16:13

I cough a lot trying to clear the gas and mad stuff from my lungs. Then I try to get up and balance myself against a wall. As I notice the sounds of footsteps, I ready my pistol.

written by Gligar on Jan 24, 2012 17:18

Cafeteria, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R reacts to the mission alert, although, as you might expect, he gets the details wrong, since to him listening isn't the same as examining, and examining is really the only thing he's good at.* He finishes off his Hot Fun and grabs the can of B3 for later consumption.

Kris-R doesn't seem to react.

Steve-R and Tom-R do react, though. "Well, lucky you, you've got a mission!" "We still ahven't been called forward... but!msurethatthatmeansthatourmissionwillbeextrafun!"

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O peeks out of his hiding place. It looks clear, so he moves, slowly creeping round the building towards the garage.

On his way, he notices Nukabot, as it moves round the building to someplace behind it.

* You might even say that he's an expert at it...

But not of anything else.

He eventually reaches the garage, to find it empty of clones. And of gas, for that matter.

But not empty of bots. Leeroy the scrubot still sits deactivated in the corner, and the cloningbot mentioned by Nukabot is present. Along with a hygienebot and a couple of others... it's almost like a portable cloning station!

As L4-O watches, the cloningbot fires up...

Cafeteria, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y tells the INFRARED that there are dead bodies everywhere, and wants to know what else the INFRARED was going to say. The INFRARED doesn't respond, since he's still coughing.

Though not for long. He apparently runs out of breath and collapses.

John-R appears from the cafeteria, with Lucas-R in tow. "Sir... I'm not sure that any of them in there are going to survive... if there are any still alive that is..."

As Azir-R continues coughing, the footsteps get closer.

As Mango regains consciousness, the owners of the footsteps make themselves known:

More cyborgs.

written by 4616599 on Jan 24, 2012 17:31

I look for a jumpsuit and put it on. I also take my ME Card.

I then take another jumpsuit.

"This might come in useful."

Looking for a PDC, I mumble. "Okay, I'll have to contact the rest. I hope Jam-Y is being useful and not traitorous or anything. They're probably just trooping around examining things in any case."

written by Kristos on Jan 24, 2012 18:15

"Oh! Kris-R. That is me! Thanks fellows... this will be fun."

I turn to Cryo-R.

"Do you know a Mick-R?"

I finish drinking the last bit of TeaSir and, if Soylent RED is resealable, pocket it. If I do not have a laser pistol I set about getting one.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 24, 2012 19:32

I continue watching the cloning tank, to see if I can see who it might be from my vantage point.

I ready my blaster.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 24, 2012 20:19

If I see the cyborgs, my pistol is definitely readied.

written by Gligar on Jan 24, 2012 22:14

Clone Processing, F level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R takes a jumpsuit and wears it. He also grabs a PDC and his ME Card.

He attempts to take a second jumpsuit, but is stopped by the clone, who seems to materialise behind him. "No, citizen! The rules are clear: only one jumpsuit per clone!"

The clone returns to his desk, and the piles of paperwork. "Now... forms... here we go." He hands a pile of forms to Joris-R, and tells him to fill them out.

Cafeteria, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R realises that his name has been called, and finishes his TeaSir. Getting to his feet, he seals his Soylent RED packet, still with about half of his lunch remaining, and pockets it, asking if Cryo-R knows Mick-R.

Outside the garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O watches the cloning tank, blaster at the ready. Inside, he can see a clone forming. It doesn't look like anyone he knows.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As the cyborgs come into view, Azir-R fires!

And manages to miss everything... oh well.

The lead cyborg notices the Troubleshooters and assorted INFRAREDS and throws a grenade.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 24, 2012 22:24

I blink, and attempt to sit up.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 24, 2012 22:28

Initiate dodging via pushing myself off the wall and tumbling out of the way of the grenade.

If I survive, while on the ground I aim and fire again.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 24, 2012 22:37

I peek behind me to see if anyone is coming, then into the garage to see if there was anyone around that I didn't notice before.

If there's nobody around I creep in and start approaching the cloningbot. I look for any evidence of who this clone may be... and his affiliation.

written by Jam on Jan 24, 2012 23:51

"Oh vatcrap..." I say as I see a grenade flying our way.

I try to dodge away from the grenade, and fire back with my laser pistol, aiming for any fleshy parts.

written by Gligar on Jan 25, 2012 02:34

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The gas has left him pretty weak and stiff, but Mango manages to sit up and look around. Just in time to see a grenade flying towards him.

Azir-R sees it too, and pushes him out of the way. His laser pistol speaks again, and scores a direct hit on the lead cyborg's left arm, destroying a servo.

Jam-Y sees it too, and pushes him out of the way. His laser pistol speaks, and scores a hit on the same cyborg, hitting the flesh part of the same arm, rendering it useless.

The grenade doesn't go off. Instead, it beeps.

The lead cyborg mutters something under his breath, something about not trusting "them" to get things right.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O approaches the cloningbot a little closer, crossing over into the garage itself. He can now tell that the clone is female, but, again, it's not anyone he can recognise.

Soon, the cloningbot completes its cycle. "Stand clear, please," it says, in an oddly soothing tone of voice. After a moment, the tank drains and opens, releasing the confused-looking clone into the garage. "Wh - why am I in here? The last thing I remember was... some sort of gas box?"

written by Jam on Jan 25, 2012 03:49

I look worried.

"That's right, L4-O said the cyborgs would be bringing gas grenades..."

I think about how to solve this problem, and end up solving another problem... I grin, and start laughing...

"Friend Computer is so smart! It knew what we were going to be fighting against, and gave us the perfect weapon!"

I take out my taser, walk towards the cyborg, and fire into a fleshy part. I try not to miss...

written by Lightning4 on Jan 25, 2012 08:24

"What's that? A... gas box? If you could identify yourself and clarify..."

I keep a watch out for any incoming clones.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 25, 2012 15:37

How close am I to this grenade?

Feeling like a real action hero now, if it's close I will grab it and toss it back behind the cyborgs of the cyborgs, then I will try to fire at it as it arcs over them.

If it's fairly far away, out of range of me swiveling/rolling towards in a time effective manner, I'll just roll further away and fire again.

written by Gligar on Jan 25, 2012 17:17

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y remembers L4-O's message, and thinks about what to do about the situation. Then he realises that he was assigned the perfect weapon! It's like The Computer knew or something!

Pulling out his taser, he creeps towards one of the cyborgs, and fires! The cyborg's implants start arcing, immobilising him and obviously causing a lot of pain

Azir-R is more concerned about the grenade. It may just be lying there not five metres away, but it's still beeping and could go off any moment. He decides to take action, and pounces on it, grabs it, and throws it back. He also attempts to shoot at it, but for some reason, his laser pistol isn't going off.

The grenade continues to beep, causing yet more mumbling from the cyborgs.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O asks the clone for more details. She replies that her name is Alice-R-NOL, and that the "gas box" must have been installed in the testing area when the lights went out. She had thought it was suspicious, but had been unable to report it. And then it goes off... and she ends up here. But why here, of all places? And is there a shower?

The cloningbot explains: "Myself and my fellow bots were passing through the Industrial Subsectors when some of my servos began to fail. I diverted into the garage so that I could be repaired. However, it turns out that our services were needed. The hygienebot is right there, citizen."

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 25, 2012 17:54

"What..?"

I check my the barrel on my pistol while trying to scoot towards cover (that isn't in a gas choked room).

written by Cryoburner on Jan 25, 2012 18:50

"Mick-R? Wasn't that the clone who did the jingle for MintFresh cleaning fluid that lead to that complex-wide shortage they were talking about? You know, Why My Fluid is So Minty? Hmm... MintFresh..."

I glance around the cafeteria for any MintFresh cleaning fluid that might be present.

"We should probably be going though. We wouldn't want to keep the computer waiting. What if there's lunch at the briefing!"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 25, 2012 18:52

"Hm. Then I guess you might not be with our... friends in here. Those gas boxes have been going off all throughout this sector."

I frown.

"Still a bit... suspicious though..."

If I can see the corridors connecting to the garage, I check to see if the gas is starting to or has already dissipated. I then focus my attention back on the clone.

written by Kristos on Jan 25, 2012 19:58

"I did not quite understand what location we are supposed to be approaching... It is an Emergency Bunker 3 for sure. Perhaps your friend (the lift) will be able to help us find it?" I begin walking in the direction of the lift.

written by Speeder on Jan 25, 2012 21:33

I suddenly grab the PDC and answer with the muffled voice because of the mask.

"Wello?"⁷⁰⁹

written by Gligar on Jan 25, 2012 22:34

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R looks down at his laser pistol and tries to figure out what's wrong with it. Hmm... the barrel seems to have worked its way loose. He tightens it up again while trying to find some decent cover... ah, the stairwell...

Speed-Y finally snaps out of his trance or whatever and answers his PDC.

It turns out that there's a BLUE clone on the line by the name of Smith-B-FDS. He is demanding to know why a RED clone suddenly showed up and told him that the Industrial Subsectors were under attack before vanishing on him.

One of the cyborgs notices the grenade and begins to back off, but it is too late.

The grenade unleashes yet another cloud of gas. But this gas stays low. Hmm.

The new gas curls around the feet of the cyborgs, seemingly looking for... whatever. Cyborg parts? Probably not, given how it's corroding them. The cyborgs ignore it, though, and ready their laser rifles again.

Cafeteria, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R seems to think that Mick-R was involved in the making of some MintFresh commercial... something about the jingle causing a complex-wide shortage or something. "Huh? No... you're probably thinking of Mike-R-NRK", Steve-R corrects him. "He was in HPD&MC until the MintFresh incident, when he was transferred to... something way deep, I think..."

Kris-R didn't catch the exact location of their briefing. He thinks it's somewhere called Emergency Bunker 3, but doesn't know where that is. Cryo-R ignores him, and looks for some MintFresh cleaning fluid. There doesn't seem to be any on display.

Kris-R suggests that the lift might know where the bunker is, and heads for the cafeteria's door.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O guesses that perhaps Alice-R isn't with their "friends", and tells her that the gas boxes have been going off everywhere. "What? That... doesn't sound good..."

As if on cue, Friend Computer speaks up again. "Please remain calm, citizens. Everything is under control."

⁷⁰⁹ SPEEDER: (ooc: my dad tried to move the router location, and that involved cutting wires and whatnot, and somehow he did some shit and the modem resetted... and the ISP force us to not know anything about the modem, this happened in a municipal holiday, and my internet only got fixed today... I am not too happy about it 😞)

L4-O can't shake his suspicion, though. He glances towards the door to the corridor, and notes that the gas doesn't seem to have dissipated yet. Actually, there's a fresh brown tinge to it.

written by Speeder on Jan 25, 2012 23:14

"Hello! I am Speed-Y the leader of Troubleshooter Team Epsilon. "

I take my breath... or rather, I try, with all the gas and the mask and whatnot... I also give a light punch in the wall to see if my hand is numb or not.

"The Industrial Subsector B is under attack, seemly it was booby trapped to make a BLUE gas spread inside it. I asked Friend Computer for information, but it refused, because the gas is BLUE, I wonder if you can do something, even if is only give us whatever information that we can have on how to handle it... Also I would really like to know if some cyborgs were related to the BLUE gas theft..."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 25, 2012 23:33

"Hmph... well, not going that way, that's for sure."

I shake my head and frown.

"So, do you know anything else about what's going on? What these gas boxes are? Where were you before it went off? Anything at all will be of great help."

written by Jam on Jan 26, 2012 00:23

I check the clearance of their laser rifles, and back away. Too bad I only get one shot with the taser... (or do I?)

Time to get my laser pistol back out... Or, even better, a grenade!

written by Gligar on Jan 26, 2012 03:09

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Over the PDC, Speed-Y starts telling Smith-B the particulars of the attack, and asks for any information that he could give. He also asks whether cyborgs were involved with the toxin theft. "How would I know any of that?" Smith-B replies. "I don't know anything about bioweapons. And if it's BLUE, then I couldn't tell you anyway. You're not cleared for it. And... wait, did you say cyborgs? That means Copore Metal... but I heard that it was Pro Tech... surely they can't - "

The call suddenly dissolves into static.

Jam-Y looks at the cyborgs' laser rifles. He gets ample opportunity to check their clearance, since the cyborgs suddenly start firing! One clips Speed-Y's reflex with an ORANGE beam, which leaves a burn mark and probably some nasty scars. No pain, though, since, as his punch test revealed, he's numb.

A second fires a GREEN beam, seemingly trying to hit Azir-R, but not exactly succeeding.

A third hits the coughing INFRARED in a comical place, causing him to collapse in an equally-comical pose. I wonder if I need censor pixels for that one...

Jam-Y backs away, and fishes in his pockets. It's a pity he doesn't have a grenade. He does have a can of YELLOW B3, though...

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O continues with his questions, asking if Alice-R knows anything else. "Nnnno... I don't know anything about these boxes. Only that they were installed in a lot of places, like in Building 3, where I was when this thing started. Can I at least use the hygienebot now?"

written by Speeder on Jan 26, 2012 03:27

I get annoyed, VERY annoyed, and when I annoyed, I DO WANT to kill.

"Do not interrupt me!"

Remember that weapon already in my non-PDC hand? (that did not fired when I punched the wall it seems...)

I fire it toward the cyborgs

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 26, 2012 03:29

I fire back in a not-so-well disguised effort to teach them how to aim. Since parts are corroding, I'll aim for those weakened bits.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 26, 2012 06:15

"Mike-R? That might have been it. Oh, I really should be going though. I wouldn't want to be late for lunch!"

I wander toward the cafeteria exit, waving goodbye to all my friends...

"Goodbye Steve-R, perhaps one day we will meet again. Goodbye Tom-R, I will never forget all the great times we had together, like that time when we had lunch together, and I ate Hot Fun, and you sat at the table. Goodbye Jeremy-Y, I will always cherish that moment when that jackobot gave me a box with an apple inside, and you were in the room. Goodbye servingclone, you served the best food I ever had in this cafeteria, even if my other friend starved to death in a cold, dark lift shaft because of you."

I make sure to wave to any other clones who look my way, in case I happen to know them from somewhere, before heading out into the corridor, and toward the lift.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 26, 2012 06:42

"Oh. Sorry, that's fine. So... Building 3 too then. This isn't good at all."

I look to see if I can see the vehiclebots the clones were using to get in here. While Alice-R is using the hygienebot, I search those if they're available.

written by 4616599 on Jan 26, 2012 06:48

I start filling up forms.

"Wow! Look at the mess here. I think I know a clone that could supply filing systems." I lightly mumble,

written by Jam on Jan 26, 2012 13:53

"Argh! I though I had a grenade here somewhere... Oh well..."

I aim my laser pistol at the face of the cyborg with the highest clearance weapon, and fire.

written by Gligar on Jan 26, 2012 18:06

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks at the cyborgs with a far-below-minimum-happiness expression on his face. He does not like to be interrupted. They'll pay for that.

The observant among you may have noticed that he still has a weapon in his other hand. It didn't go off when he punched the wall, probably because it's not malfunctioning.

What, did you seriously think laser pistols malfunction 5% of the time? Are you suggesting that Friend Computer would allow such imperfect weaponry to be made, and distributed to an unsuspecting populace? Are you? Are you?! Who started that rumour anyway? Why hasn't it been reported yet? Why haven't you reported the spread of the rumour, citizen? Are you in league with the cyborgs?!

If so, then you're probably right there, being shot by Speed-Y's laser pistol. He is shooting, after all. He intends to kill, and he is good at it. See, he just hit a cyborg in the chest.

It's a pity that it didn't really do much, other than leave a scorch mark.

No wait... that's the one behind the one he shot! Apparently, the beam went through one! It probably hasn't realised that it's dead yet, though.

Azir-R also shoots. Apparently, he wants to show the cyborgs how it's done or something. And this time, he pulls off a nice clean hit to a cyborg's corroding foot. Said foot explodes in a shower of sparks, can knock the cyborg into the gas, face first.

Jam-Y expresses frustration at not having a grenade, but oh well. He does at least have a laser pistol, which he shoots at one of the cyborgs, which turns out to be the one with a fresh scorch mark on his chest. Jam-Y's shot is a little more successful, and scores a direct hit in the vicinity of the cyborg's heart. He falls to the ground and begins to corrode/decompose.

John-R concentrates briefly, but soon just shakes his head. He can't get through the cybernetics, it seems.

Lucas-R also shoots, though he manages to miss... no wait, he hit the one at the back of the group!

Cafeteria, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R agrees that it might have been Mike-R, and wanders towards the exit and Kris-R, while waving to clones, and saying goodbye. It's almost as if he thinks he'll never return... oh well, at least he seems happy.

Jeremy-Y shrugs. He'll have to remember to catch up with Cryo-R after the mission.

"Sir," Steve-R asks him, "what is it with that clone? He's kind of odd..."

"Well, I'll tell you what you're cleared to hear..."

Corridors, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R and Cryo-R soon reach the lift, to find that it's been called away.

Clone processing, F level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R fills out his forms, and notes that he knows a clone who could do something about filing.

The forms done, he looks up.

The clone is still busy sorting out his forms, and may not have heard him.

And... surely these cameras aren't defective, are they? I could swear that his eyes seem to be glowing...

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O gives her the go-ahead, and looks for the vehiclebots the cyborgs used. He can see one of them from here: it's just outside the garage.

He goes to investigate.

Behind him, it seems that the gas is beginning to dissipate.

Outside the garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O reaches the vehiclebot, which seems to be an autocar. It's locked tight.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 26, 2012 18:25

"Pity, all these cyborg enhancements and none of them can help you guys make a steady shot." I say above the noise of laser fire, including another shot from me.

written by Speeder on Jan 26, 2012 18:46

I notice the... melting cyborgs.

"People, I think we should go the other way, even if we are having fun killing these guys, I do not want to melt, and even if it melts only cyborg parts, something I doubt, I DO have a cyborg part."

I start to retreat in the opposite direction of the gas, and I also... shoot more.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 26, 2012 19:28

I contemplate using more... violent means to gain access to the autocar. I look for any good weak points that I might exploit to get in.

If I fail to find any, I frown and look at the autocar and say "Open says me!"

Not expecting that to work, and failing any other option, I start checking my toolkit for a tool that might get me in.

written by Gligar on Jan 26, 2012 22:00

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R fires again. It's a pity that the cyborgs' enhancements don't seem to be doing anything for their ability to aim. His, on the other hand... seem to have improved a little.

He hits another cyborg... though he ends up hitting a reflec-shielded arm servo.

Said cyborg advances slightly.

Speed-Y notices the effects of the new gas, or at least its corrosive qualities, and suggests that they head the other way. He reminds everyone that he also has a cyborg limb, and he wouldn't want that to be damaged.

He leads the way, heading towards Azir-R and the stairwell. He also shoots again, narrowly missing the advancing cyborg. Who returns fire.

And... there must be something wrong with his aiming, since he aims in completely the wrong direction, managing to hit Mango in the chest.

Outside the garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O considers his options for gaining access to the cyborgs' autocar. First on his list: weak points. He spots a fairly large one in the shape of the rear item compartment, which seems to be quite dented. He could probably get in through there. Probably. Assuming that he had some sort of tool to open it.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 26, 2012 22:50

I give a parting shot to this clearly formidable cyborg and us the stairway as leverage to get on my feet (foot) and hop after the team.

written by Jam on Jan 26, 2012 22:58

I fire at an exposed part of another cyborg, then follow Speed-Y...

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 26, 2012 23:36

I cough.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 27, 2012 01:09

"We should call the lift!"

I press the button to call the lift.

Twice.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 27, 2012 01:38

"Hm."

I search my toolkit or my person for anything I could pry open that compartment with.

If I find one, I get cracking!

written by Speeder on Jan 27, 2012 01:40

I keep getting away and shooting back... Aiming at the same cyborg that is bothering Azir. I leave the crap aim cyborg alone.

written by Gligar on Jan 27, 2012 02:50

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As the team prepares to exit the corridor, more shots are fired on both sides.

Azir-R fires at the advancing cyborg, though he causes no damage.

Jam-Y shoots at one of the other cyborgs, and causes some sparking. He runs after Speed-Y.

Speed-Y pulls off one last shot, hitting the advancing cyborg, and makes it spark some more, before leading the team into the stairwell.

John-R fires off another shot, also hitting the advancing cyborg.

The cyborg stops. Apparently, the team has caused enough damage to cause problems.

It turns towards the door to the cafeteria. It's about to open the door when it is forced open from the inside... by the Toxic Metabolism mutant. But... didn't he collapse (and probably die)?

Lucas-R tries to shoot, but it fails. He gives up and runs.

Mango... coughs.

But... where's King-R?

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The stairwell seems to be deserted. Apparently, clones are choosing to stay put instead of trying to flee.

Or maybe there are none alive...

Corridors, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R thinks that it would be a good idea to call the lift, and does.

He presses the button twice.

He gets the impression that perhaps the lift is unhappy about that.

Outside the garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O looks in his toolkit. He finds a big screwdriver that he could probably use to pry open the compartment, and proceeds to attempt to do so.

The compartment door moves, but stubbornly refuses to open.

written by Jam on Jan 27, 2012 03:18

My eyes widen as I see the Toxic Metabolism mutant.

"You're still alive?!"

I check the state of his face, and wonder how he managed to survive...

written by Lightning4 on Jan 27, 2012 04:21

I frown and give it as much force as I possibly can.

"Come on! Open!"

If I fail that, I try to give the compartment a swift kick in pure annoyance.

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 27, 2012 04:31

I hop/hobble (hopple?) after the team, missing my wheel chair.

written by Kristos on Jan 27, 2012 06:11

I wait for the lift. When it arrives, I request to be brought to the level of the probable Emergency Bunker 3.

“Our Mutual Friend has ordered us to a mission briefing there at 13:00!”

Then I check the time on my PDC and write a note:

Mssn bfng at Emrg Bnkr 3, 1300. Cryo-R-BRN, Kris-R-QJT, Mick-R-NRK. :)

written by Speeder on Jan 27, 2012 07:49

I look at Azir.

“What happened to your wheelchair?”

I look to Jam.

“Who was supposed to be dead? You saw something before getting to the staircase?”

I turn to King... King?

“Where are King-R? I remember he following me out of the cafeteria...”

I continue to whatever place the staircase go.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 27, 2012 08:12

(What if the lift never arrives?)

I contemplate the possibility of the lift never arriving.

“You think he’s okay, right? The Lift, that is. I somehow get the impression that he might be unhappy about something, perhaps about not getting lunch...”

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 27, 2012 13:08

“I had to move faster through a panicking gas-clouded room than the wheelchair would allow.

written by 4616599 on Jan 27, 2012 15:24

I finish with the forms.

“Are your eyes okay, sir?”

I flash the clone a suspicious look.

written by Gligar on Jan 27, 2012 17:51

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y looks at the mutant and wonders how he survived.

Then he sees the clone’s face. It’s half melted.

Azir-R does his best to hobble back into the stairwell. This is noticed by Speed-Y, who wonders what happened to his wheelchair. He replies that he had to move faster than the wheelchair could manage in a gas- and clone-packed cafeteria.

Speed-Y turns to Jam-Y and asks who was supposed to be dead. Clearly, he hasn’t seen the mutant yet.

He then notices the absence of King-R... wait, wasn’t he following them out of the cafeteria?

Ohhh... there he is, still in the corridor. He’s staring at the mutant, oblivious to the fact the the cyborgs are approaching. The lead cyborg just threw a grenade into the cafeteria.

Speed-Y seemingly ignores it and heads up the stairwell.

It looks like it goes up for several levels. Where does Speed-Y want to go?

Outside the garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Using his screwdriver, L4-O attempts to force the compartment open. But the lock, it seems, is defeating him.

In frustration, he tries kicking it. And the thing pops open!

Back in the garage, it seems that the cloningbot has started itself up again.

Corridors, B Level, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R wonders if the lift will ever arrive. Perhaps (since he still wants lunch, even if he’s just finished eating lunch) the lift is upset at not getting lunch...

The lift arrives not long after he finishes saying that. Kris-R enters, and asks about ‘Emergency Bunker 3’.

“I am aware of something with a name similar to that,” the lift admits. “However, getting there requires nontrivial amounts of walking. That is something you must do on your own. I will take you as close as I can go.”

King-R makes a note in his PDC, noting as he does that it is 12:40 right now.

Clone processing, F Level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R hands back his completed forms. He notices the clones eyes, and looks on suspiciously.

He isn’t sure if it’s a trick of the light or whatever.

But the clone looks up at him, and the effect goes away. “Oh... thanks. I think that covers everything.”

written by Cryoburner on Jan 27, 2012 18:21

“Hello lift! It’s great to see you’re okay! Did you get lunch yet?”

I step into the lift.

“Say, I vaguely remember something about an emergency bunker. Emergency Bunker... B-3, I think it was. The one we’re looking for is apparently on the mall level though.”

written by Lightning4 on Jan 27, 2012 19:13

I smile happily that I finally got it open.

I start searching the autocar. If necessary, I start making my way inside while trying to take care not to somehow lock myself inside.

written by Kristos on Jan 27, 2012 20:51

Hoping the lift does not alter its destination after Cryo-R’s information, I wait for the lift to arrive at the target floor.

[907]

"Can you give directions to that bunker from where you will take us?"

written by Gligar on Jan 27, 2012 22:26

Kris-R's lift, Gamma Subsector

NOTE: due to communist sabotage, the previous post referred to King-R being present in the lift. This is clearly false.

In reality, there are only two clones present: Cryo-R and Kris-R. The former asks the liftbot whether it has had lunch yet (sigh). The liftbot replies that it is incapable of eating anything.

Cryo-R then mentions that he vaguely remembers something about an Emergency Bunker... B-3, was it? But the one they're looking for is on the mall level...

"You must be mistaken, citizen," the liftbot tells him. "There is no mall level."

Kris-R ignores him, and asks the liftbot for directions to the bunker. "I am not entirely certain where it is. However, it is reachable from the central bot parking area."

The lift comes to a halt, and opens its doors.

Outside the garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Pleased that he got the compartment open, L4-O searches the autocar.

There doesn't appear to be anything inside the storage compartment except for a discarded Hot Fun wrapper. However, he finds that he can access the main cab by wiggling through an opening in the compartment, and between two seats. After doing so, he discovers what looks to be a pair of message packets.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 27, 2012 23:09

"Aha! Here we go..."

I quickly grab the message packets and start reading their contents.

I also make sure my camera is still on and in working order, and allow it to see the messages clearly as well.

Assuming there's anything there to read, anyway.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 28, 2012 01:47

"Ahh, incapable of eating... So you must be full then. Well, it's good to hear you managed to find lunch!"

"Oh look! We're here! This must be the mall level!"

I step out into the mall level.

written by Gligar on Jan 28, 2012 02:22

Cyborgs' autocar, outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O looks happy at finding the message packets, and immediately begins reading through them. Most of the contents are the usual advertising and reminders to use a confession booth/report suspicious activity/register your mutation. One sheet, however, catches his attention. It is an Information Request Refusal form for something called the Reanimator Project. Apparently, the request was refused because the project involved reanimating deceased clones...

Someone has written a note on the form: Found it.

Kris-R's lift, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R assumes that the lift can't eat because it is full, and therefore must have obtained lunch from someplace. He has ignored the lift's comment that there is no mall level, and also assumed that they have been sent to the mall level. He disembarks, to find a RED corridor with three doors.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 28, 2012 02:23

Is it worth trying to move?

Probably not.

Horrible aim, by the way.

written by Kristos on Jan 28, 2012 03:26

"Cryo-R, tell me what you see behind the right-most door. We need to find the Emergency Bunker."

I open the left-most door and peer through it. Then I open the middle door and peer through it.

written by Speeder on Jan 28, 2012 04:21

I stop on the next floor...

[I] see if there are dangerous gases here, and if not, I instruct the team to setup a ambush here, by mostly kneeling looking at the door and pointing the guns there.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 28, 2012 05:27

"Oooh. This looks positively treasonous. Interesting. I wonder..."

I think for a moment, then decide to start getting on my way.

I give the autocar one last look for anything else of use and take such items. I then try to make my way back out of the autocar through the way I came in.

Once out, I make my way back to the garage to check on the status of the clone(s).

written by 4616599 on Jan 28, 2012 15:22

"Sure. Have a good daycycle!"

I smile weakly, and exit the room with eyes still fixed on him. I dive floorwards if anything sudden happens.

written by Gligar on Jan 28, 2012 17:38

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides not to move. Given his injuries, that's probably a good idea.

Maybe.

The half-melted Toxic Metabolism mutant lurches into the corridor, and looks around. He doesn't notice Mango yet.

The cafeteria door closes again... before being yanked open from the inside.

Corridor A2, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R asks Cryo-R to check one of the doors, while he checks the other two. One is locked, while the other looks like it leads to a currently-unmanned IntSec checkpoint. Beyond the checkpoint, there seems to be some kind of big, mostly-empty space.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y stops at Level 2, and looks for dangerous gasses. It looks like there is only the BLUE gas to worry about, and even that's beginning to dissipate.

Speed-Y gives instructions to the team to set up an ambush at the door.

Cyborgs' autocar, outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O decides that the form looks treasonous, and thinks for a moment. It would probably be better if he got moving, so he looks around one last time, finds nothing else, and heads back out through the compartment.

Heading back to the garage, L4-O can see that the cloningbot has decanted two more clones, and is ready to reset for another cycle. Meanwhile it looks like Alice-R has found some jumpsuits carried by a third bot, and is getting changed.

Clone processing, F level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R wishes the clone a good daycycle, and exits, while keeping his eyes on him. The clones gores back to his paperwork, turning his back to Joris-R.

Corridor F3, Iota Subsector

Joris-R manages to reach the corridor without incident.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 28, 2012 18:56

Once I reach the garage, I question the two other clones using a similar batch as the first.

"What are your names? Where were you when you... expired? Doing what? And do you know anything about what's going on at all?"

I await responses.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 28, 2012 19:44

I open the right-most door and peer through it.

If it does not open, I knock instead.

"Hello!"

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 28, 2012 21:35

"Will do"

I get into a decent position for an ambush.

written by Jam on Jan 28, 2012 22:43

I pull Toxic Metabolism guy up the stairs, and try to figure out where Speed-Y went...

"Speed-Y?"

written by Gligar on Jan 28, 2012 23:16

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O asks the two clones the same questions he asked Alice-R. The two clones are confused, but respond that they are Joe-JHT and Rob-R-JHT. Both were involved in an incident involving gas in the cafeteria. While there, a YELLOW asked for mutant volunteers to help combat the gas. Rob-R stepped forward due to being a registered Uncanny Luck mutant. He adds that Joe was initially uncertain due to be unregistered - it seems that he didn't know what his mutation was called, but it ended up being Toxic Metabolism. Then... something happened, and they ended up in here. That's all they really know.

Alice-R's eyes go wide when she realises that there's an unregistered mutant in the room. "You've got some explaining to do, citizen," she states.

Corridor A2, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R opens the door. It leads to what appears to be a debriefing room of some kind. It's empty and dark right now.

Starwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R acknowledges the order, and complies.

Presently, Jam-Y appears, dragging the Toxic Metabolism mutant. (Joe? Isn't he in the garage...?) Said mutant looks around blankly, before looking Jam-Y straight in the eye...

written by Lightning4 on Jan 29, 2012 01:24

"Hmm. A YELLOW in the cafeteria. Wonder if it was my team here..."

I check the direction of the corridor again to see if the gas is starting to dissipate.

"Wish I had a gas mask..."

written by Kristos on Jan 29, 2012 01:36

"Hey, there's a big open space in here. Maybe we should go this way..."

I wait for Cryo-R to respond as I keep an eye out for clones or bots.

written by Gligar on Jan 29, 2012 02:14

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O wonders if the YELLOW in the cafeteria was with his team, before looking at the corridor. The gas does seem to be dissipating somewhat.

He wishes he had a gas-mask.

[909]

The sound of... walking? Shuffling? Something approaching... can be heard from the corridor.

Corridor A2, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R points out the open space to Cryo-R, and suggests that they might need to go that way.

He waits for Cryo-R to respond.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 29, 2012 03:03

I ready my blaster.

"Who goes there? Loyal or treasonous?"

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 29, 2012 03:11

I wait for something to happen.

Anything that might seem important could count as something...

written by Cryoburner on Jan 29, 2012 03:14

"Hey, there's an empty and dark room of some kind in here. Maybe we could find some ventilation ducts that will happen to lead us to our destination... "

I wait for Kris-R to respond as I keep an eye out for any light switches near the door that could illuminate any ventilation ducts in the room.

written by Gligar on Jan 29, 2012 17:46

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O demands that whoever is coming identify themselves.

The only answer is a kind of moan.

Followed by a clone appearing round the corner. His face seems half-melted, as does one of his legs.

I can imagine what King-R would think of this.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Of course, he doesn't need to imagine, since he can see a similar clone emerge from the cafeteria with his own eyes. The cyborgs seem satisfied with what they see, and move on past the cafeteria, to places further down the corridor.

Mango waits for something to happen. He doesn't have long to wait before something does happen: the clone approaches King-R and grabs him.

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

A similar thing happens here: the Toxic Metabolism clone grabs Jam-Y. He looks hungry. You know, like Cryo-R always seems to be...

Corridor A2, Gamma Subsector

Not to mention the fact that he always likes to go places that aren't where he's supposed to go. Though maybe, in his eyes, it's all part of some big game...

Take right now, for instance. He has fixated on the debriefing room, and insists that there may be an air dust there to help them get to the bunker. He even looks for a light switch, though he doesn't find one. What does King-R have to say about this? I do not know.

A level, Iota Subsector

Mick-R doesn't seem to have responded to his latest mission alert. And, given the fact [REDACTED], I think that it's safe to say that he seems to have a problem with "[REDACTED]".

written by Lightning4 on Jan 29, 2012 18:40

"Well then, looks like there's that Reanimator project..."

I try to unload as many blaster shots into the 'clone' as I can, while trying to keep my distance from it.

written by Jam on Jan 29, 2012 19:43

I look at Toxic Metabolism guy...

"Something the matter?"

Sensing that something isn't quite right, I try to break free of the clone's grip...

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 29, 2012 19:52

I attempt to stand, feeling that if there was any help on its way, it would not have found me.

written by Gligar on Jan 29, 2012 22:07

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Looks like L4-O has his answer... and it seemingly has to do with the Reanimator Project!

He opens fire with his blaster.

He's able to fire five times in rapid succession. But out of those shots, he only hits twice. Not that those two hits don't have an effect: L4-O is able to knock off the "clone's" left arm.

He/it doesn't seem to notice, though, and keeps going...

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y tries to break free of the clone's grip. It's difficult - almost as if he were trying to break free of a locked bot manipulator - but he's able to do so.

Something doesn't seem right...

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango stumbles for a moment before forcing himself to his feet.

This is apparently noticed by the half-melted clone, who drops King-R and turns towards Mango, a hungry look in what is left of its eyes...

written by Lightning4 on Jan 29, 2012 23:21

"Idea..."

After seeing what happened to the arm of the clone. I try to aim for the legs of the 'clone' and unleash another barrage of shots with my blaster.

[910]

I continue to try and keep my distance from the 'clone'.
yummy jam!

written by Jam on Jan 30, 2012 00:22

"Ah! You're supposed to be dead!"

I think about shooting the zombie-clone, but decide I don't want to waste the shots.

Instead, I search for one of those Emergency Lights, and see if I can detach it from the wall and set the clone on fire.

written by Gligar on Jan 30, 2012 02:20

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

A light fixture goes on in L4-O's mind. Sadly, it can't be examined (take that, Cryo-R!), but I'm sure it gives L4-O enough illumination to realise that he can aim at the "clone's" legs. Like so. He lets loose with another five-shot burst. This one's a little better, hitting the mark three times, and removing one leg. As you might imagine, the "clone" falls into its face...

...and continues dragging itself forward with its remaining arm.

Joe looks on in horror. "Wh... what..."

The other clone seems to have ducked into the hygienebot.

Alice-R seems to have also noticed the "clone", and seems to have forgotten about Joe. She doesn't seem to know what to say either.

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y recoils in shock. This clone is supposed to be dead!

Frantically, he looks for an "emergency light". There's one. With all his strength, he tries to pull it from the wall... and pop, it comes out of its holder. Now armed with a source of fire, he puts it to good use trying to ignite the "clone". He's able to set its jumpsuit on fire in a few places.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 30, 2012 03:56

Now that it should be easier to keep my distance, I focus my attention on aiming true with a (hopefully) final barrage straight into the head of the "clone".

"When I shoot you, you're supposed to..."

<hopefully, firing>

"STOP! MOVING!"

written by Jam on Jan 30, 2012 13:25

"There! Now hurry up and die!"

I walk away, in the direction I thought Speed-Y went.

written by Kristos on Jan 30, 2012 15:51

I go over and look into the room Cryo-R is at.

"This doesn't appear to lead anywhere. Though I'm sure it would be Fun, we don't have time to crawl through ventilation ducts. It is almost 13:00! Come on, let's go through this other doorway."

I begin walking through the other doorway with or without Cryo-R, doing my best to not upset Our Mutual Friend.

written by Gligar on Jan 30, 2012 17:31

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O is unhappy that the fact that this "clone" is still moving. But at least it isn't moving at fast... perhaps another barrage? He lets loose again, this time adding in a demand for it to stop moving. Again, three hits, right to the head, and two misses.

The head collapses in on itself.

But the "clone" doesn't seem to notice, and continues on.

For a moment.

Then it stops, collapsing to the floor.

Joe speaks up again. "Can... can someone just tell me what happened? Or am I not cleared for it? Ow... is it hot in here or something?"

"No, actually it's kind of cold. And it's probably beyond your clearance," Alice-R tells him. "Then again, it's probably beyond my clearance as well... just what is going on?"

While she is talking, the hygienebot finishes up, and Rob-R steps out, looking for a jumpsuit. It looks like Alice-R left the other bot open, though, so it isn't like they're difficult to find.

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y is also dealing with his "clone"... as he watches, the fire from its jumpsuit spreads a little further, now covering some of its skin.

Suddenly, the fire flares up, and the clone begins to burn furiously.

Satisfied, Jam-Y walks away, heading over to where Speed-Y and the rest have prepared to open the door to Level 2.

Corridor A2, Gamma Subsector

Kris-R heads over to look at the debriefing room. He doesn't think that there is anything there that will help them get to their destination. Instead, he believes that his door is the best way to get there. And as he points out, they're running short on time, so they can't afford to dither over air ducts.

Without waiting for an answer, Kris-R heads for the big open space.

Bot Parking area, below Central Subsector

What he sees surprises him. This seems to be the otherwise-unused space between subsectors. Far above, he can see some building that is possibly Central Subsector or something. Heading to and from it is the Interactive Corridor Experience, with its Mobile Tiles carrying clones to and from various exits in the subsectors themselves, and a lit area up ahead comprised of a number of PLC vendors.

[911]

The rest of the space is filled with numerous bots of all types. Leading between them in various convoluted paths are coloured stripes, indicating where clones of various clearances may walk.

As might be imagined, there are exits at ground level, too. One of them, off to the left, seems larger than the rest.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 30, 2012 17:54

"Well, the lighting in this room is clearly inadequate for locating ventilation ducts. We'll need to find some additional light sources. Maybe there's some in the mall."

I follow Kris-R into the mall, noting any light stores located there.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 30, 2012 20:05

I struggle to get away, not easily able to move with issues involving being shot.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 30, 2012 22:07

I smile and blow on the end of my blaster before putting it away, even if there's no smoke wafting from it... though after usage like that...

"Zombies. Pretty sure that was one. That's all I can say, because I'm pretty sure the specifics are above my team's clearance. Though I think it has something to do with this... Reanimator Project."

I check the clearance of the Information Request Form, or clearances stated.

"Wasn't hard to put two and two together, anyway. I don't know anymore, and knowing any more is probably treasonous anyway unless Friend Computer clears us to know it."

I scrutinize the corridor again, to see if there are any more of those things coming, or any of the clones that originally invaded. I also see if the gas has safely dissipated enough for me to travel onward yet.

written by Jam on Jan 30, 2012 23:39

"Speed-Y! There are zombies here! That clone we just met with the half-melted face was one of them! Why would they be here?"

I look around nervously for any more zombies...

written by Gligar on Jan 30, 2012 23:49

Corridor A2, Gamma Subsector

Cryo-R chooses to follow Kris-R into the bot parking area, not because he believes it will get him to his destination, but because he thinks that it's a mall and he wants a light source so he can find those ducts...

What would a RED Clearance clone want in a mall, anyway?

Bot parking area, below Central Subsector

Cryo-R finds Kris-R walking in some direction, and follows him. He seems to be looking for a light vendor. Sadly, the only vendors present are in the Interactive Corridor Experience landing area, and seem to be related to bot rental and food.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to try to get away, not an easy task when you're injured from being shot. But his assailant is even slower, enabling him to keep ahead. He heads in the general direction of the foyer...

Only to find another... well, you already know by now. It seems to have been one of the PowServ team at one point. Now, it doesn't seem to know much about power.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Now that he's done shooting, L4-O can't resist blowing at the end of his blaster... well, it is a bit hot, I guess.

He briefly explains his analysis of what's going on, and adds that he isn't even sure that his team is cleared to know all the details.. He checks the refusal form he found in the autocar, but even that doesn't mention any security clearance, save that the intended recipient was Clearance GREEN.

He looks again at the corridor. The immediate surroundings look clear, but there is movement nearer the foyer. On the plus side, though, the gas has dissipated to the point where he can barely see it.

Joe notices that the hygienebot is free, and decides to use it. Meanwhile, the cloningbot fires up again.

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y has figured out the problem as well... in part, and tells Speed-Y.

Now understandably nervous, he looks around for more, but can't see any. Really, though, he knows that they're like commies. They could be anywhere.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 31, 2012 01:30

I examine the bot vendor, noting whether it happens to vend any bots with lights on them.

written by Speeder on Jan 31, 2012 02:14

I look at Jam, my face first thinking, then very frightened.

"Jam, JAM, I KNOW WHAT THE BLUE GAS IS!!!"

I attempt to see how much resistance the gas puts if I start to move a limb fast on it, like trying to see if it is truly a gas, or something like dust.

"Jam, remember Lucas had to be decontaminated? And he had no symptoms?

This 'gas', the numbing part is probably a side-effect after altering your nervous system, this is a nanomachine cloud, this is the thing that created that problem with zombie Cryo and others!"

I look even more worried and terrified.

"Jam, they are transforming EVERYONE in cyber-zombies, this gas will turn THE ENTIRE SUBSECTOR to be a army of clones with electronical nervous system that can remotely controlled! They are building a instantaneous robotic army!"

I look for a camera.

"Blast it, it won't help me, I do not have the clearance."

I turn to Jam.

"Jam, we NEED to find a high clearance clone that smart enough to understand our problem here, we CANNOT let the robotic army leave this building, and thus, most importantly, we NEED to keep loyal clones alive, because as soon as they die, they will become a weapon, if everyone die, the traitors win, we cannot kill the zombies, because they are machine, we can only keep people from becoming zombies... We need to find the highest concentration of clones of this building and protect them, not the cafeteria of course, that we obviously already lost, in fact, we need to get away, soon there will be all those clones of the cafeteria trying to stop us and whatever else Friend Computer send of reinforcements... something that is unlikely to happen, since it might not want the reinforcements to become zombies too..."

written by Gligar on Jan 31, 2012 03:01

Bot parking area, below Central Subsector

Still convinced that he needs to access the air ducts, Cryo-R approaches the bot vendors. He notices that there are four booths, all staffed by actual clones. The booths are decorated with pictures of bots, though he can't tell what types they are, or even if they have lights.

Kris-R keeps heading for the exit.

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y turns to Jam-Y. It seems that he has formulated an explanation for the gas.

He supposes that it is a nanomachine cloud. He tests this by waving his hand around and seeing if it resists his movement. He's not entirely sure if it does or not.

He adds that the numbness must be the first stage of the process, where the nanomachines begin altering the body as they see fit. When the host dies, they take over and reanimate the dead clone as a techno-zombie. Given what he's seen, he believes that said zombies could be controlled remotely... and that could mean that an army is being raised here. An army of the undead.

He looks for a camera before realising that he lacks the clearance.

He then outlines his plan: find a high-clearance clone that can deal with it properly. In the meantime, they are to find as many living clones as they can and protect them. The dead, he adds, must not leave the building. The last thing they want is more dead. Which includes them. Meaning that they have to get away from the cafeteria.⁷¹⁰

written by Jam on Jan 31, 2012 03:12

I take a step backwards...

"Thats... Thats..."

I shiver, and my face pales.

"That's terrible! It makes perfect sense though! But... A robot-zombie army... What a horrible thought!"

I take a secondcycle to imagine what that would be like, and it's clear from the look of horror on my face that I'm not liking it.

"So, you want me to find the highest concentration of living non-zombie clones in the entire building? Or should I start with finding the highest clearance clone, which would involve me getting the names of every clone in range? You're gonna have to choose between one or the other, unless you can find me a source of mutant energy..."

written by Cryoburner on Jan 31, 2012 03:41

Noticing Kris-R wandering off again, I decide to see where he's headed. Maybe he's found where to get lights. A bot with lights would work, but fitting him through the air ducts afterward might prove troublesome.

In any case, I run over to where Kris-R is headed, continuing my search for lights.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 31, 2012 03:44

"I don't know if that was sufficient, but what else I do know is that there's something going on in this Industrial Sector. Though um, that's rather obvious at this point. I'm sure it has something to do with the recent power fluctuations throughout the sector, as well as those clones that came in on those vehiclebots outside."

"I would recommend maybe trying to get to the main domescraper for now, to safety."

A worried look crosses my face.

"Unless... they've been hit too? I sure hope not."

"I need to find my team. I hope they're still alive."

I give the garage a sweep for any useful equipment that will help me in the building. Hopefully something including a gas mask, or at least some kind of cloth I can put over my face to inhibit gas inhalation.

written by Speeder on Jan 31, 2012 05:28

I look at Jam for a while.

"In fact, I do not thought of using your powers... But indeed, they might help..."

I think a bit.

⁷¹⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC: +1pp to Speeder, there. That's a nice explanation 😊)

"We cannot just check names to see if a clone will help, it does not matter if we find a UV clone that is unwilling to help for whatever reason... But we can surely find the nearest group of alive clones and rush there to attempt to protect them... And somehow get reinforcements from somewhere inside this building."

I look at the camera again, and other cameras, and wires in the walls, and seams in the ceiling.

"I wonder if somewhere on this building we can too hijack the turrets, that would be really convenient, like we did once in the our bunker."

written by Malkom on Jan 31, 2012 06:05⁷¹¹

I look around, ascertain my location, and then call up the Leader Guy again. "Hey! This's Mick-R, whassup? And how can I find you guys? I think it's time for some fun, and beside it seems like I had something to do that was related to you. Can't remember what it was..."

I think a bit.

"Maybe something about hairstyling?"

written by 4616599 on Jan 31, 2012 09:00

Exiting the cloning station, I look for a lift, and press the button for A Level.

"I wonder what happened to my stuff?" I wonder aloud. "It's not like we needed to do any shooting there, anyway..."

written by Azirphaeli on Jan 31, 2012 16:24

I let the terrible implications of an army of remote controlled zombie-robot cyborgs really sink in...

"This is really not good. If it's true that we can control turrets in this sector that will surely help. Any idea where to begin with that?"

written by Gligar on Jan 31, 2012 18:03

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y looks genuinely horrified at the thought of a zombie army, and especially at the thought of a robot zombie army. He asks Speed-Y whether he should search for the largest concentration of living clones, or for the highest clearance clone he can. He says that he can do either one. Doing both would require an external source of mutant energy.

It turns out that Speed-Y hadn't thought about using Jam-Y's powers, but he admits that they would be handy. He rules out trying to find a high-clearance clone that way, but they could certainly use it to find a concentration of clones. And maybe to get reinforcements.

He looks, once again, at the cameras... and the wires leading across the ceiling... and seams in the ceiling denoting where the laser turrets live... It'd be great if they could get control over them, much like they did at the bunker that time...

His thoughts are interrupted by his PDC ringing. Again.

Corridors, A Level, Iota Subsector

It's Mick-R, who doesn't seem to realise that he's expected at another mission briefing. He asks Speed-Y how he can find the team, since he wants to have some more fun with them. Only problem is, he can't remember what the mission is...

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R seems to have forgotten that he's the Happiness Officer, probably because he's concentrating on how horrible a zombie army would be. He does, however, agree that controlling the turrets would be a good thing. He just doesn't have any idea how they'd set about doing it.

Bot parking area, below Central Subsector

Noticing, a little belatedly, that Kris-R is heading off without him, Cryo-R runs to join him, under the impression that, perhaps, Kris-R knows of a way to get to somewhere that sells lights. I'll say this for Cryo: once he has an idea, he never lets go... even if it's the wrong idea.

Roadway, near Epsilon Subsector

The two find themselves looking at a roadway. Nearby, heading away from the domescraper, a checkpoint can be seen, with one of those body scanners that goes beep when you step through it.

In the other direction, the roadway terminates at what appears to be a loading bay, or perhaps a warehouse. The big door is open, allowing access. There doesn't seem to be anyone around, though.

Stenciled on the synthcrete near the open door is the legend C-3.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O continues, saying that he does know that something is happening in the building. Obviously. He guesses that it has to do with the recent power fluctuations, and with the clones who arrived with the vehiclebots outside.

He recommends trying to escape the Industrial Subsectors and head for the safety of the main domescraper. Unless... surely they can't be experiencing the same thing?

Anyway, he needs to find his team... if they're still alive.

Looking around one last time, he spots another storage unit, nestling between Leeroy the scrubot and the wall. Inside, he finds a variety of supplies including a thick cloth, normally used for cleaning bots.

Corridors, F Level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R snaps out of his momentary trance and starts walking around, looking for a lift. Finding it, he heads down to A Level.

⁷¹¹ MALKOM: ooc: I will try to post every update again. I hope.)

Joris-R's lift, Iota Subsector

As the lift descends, he wonders what happened to his equipment. Though, it's not like he'll have to shoot anything during the mission, right? Right?

written by Speeder on Jan 31, 2012 18:33

I take the PDC.

"Hello, who is there? Speed-Y here."

written by Speeder on Jan 31, 2012 18:36⁷¹²

After hearing that it is Mick.

"Mick-R? Well, we are at Industrial Subsector B... Hey, you was the technology fanatic, no? Well, seemly the building is flooded with nanomachines that convert dead people into zombies. I think the old mission to just fix the power no longer apply, can you... do some research or something? I really need to know how to deal with the nanomachine, otherwise known as 'stolen BLUE gas' ... "

written by Lightning4 on Jan 31, 2012 18:51

I grab the cloth and place it over my face. Though first, I check whether I can actually breathe enough with it.

Either way, should the gas finally be dissipated I... wait. I stop in my tracks, and put the cloth away for now.

"Oh. I guess I could uh, call them."

I take out my PDC and ring up Speed-Y, or Jam-Y if I don't get a response from the former right away. (or if the line happens to be busy...)

written by Kristos on Jan 31, 2012 19:06

"C-3. That sounds applicable."

I go through the large door and look around.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 31, 2012 19:40

I sigh, now changing course as I hobble along.

"This would be easier if that hadn't shot me." I mumble under my breath.

written by Malkom on Jan 31, 2012 20:10

"Tech fanatic? No, you want M... M... Mal... Molcam... who was it again? Oh, forget it. But nanomachines sound very entertaining! Maybe I can film someone being zombified, how cool'd that be? Quick, directions!"

After I get the directions, I hang up and head off down a corridor, whistling merrily and buying a couple of candylyke sticks for a few credits if I pass a vendobot. I don't eat them; instead I push them into my jumpsuit pocket so just the tips show.

If possible for cheap, I also buy a tin of RED paint, varnish, or other spread-on article.

written by Jam on Jan 31, 2012 21:50

I start breathing heavily...

"Okay... There's a large concentration of clones on Level 3, but I can't tell if they're zombies or not..."

I seem to be sweating a bit...

"I've got no energy left. It looks like my Mind Sensing is done for a while... Maybe John-R knows how to—hang on, where is John-R?"

I look around for John-R.

written by Speeder on Jan 31, 2012 22:34

I look at Jam.

"Alright, no need to over exert yourself, let's check, heavy weapons in hand of course... Damn, where is L4 when I need him?"

I think a bit.

"Say, you remember if to get to Nukabot, and thus whatever equipment maybe we left on it, including that box, we have to cross that gas that melt stuff?"

I think more.

"If the gas will block us, we will go to Level 3 with whatever we are armed here, if not, we will go to Nukabot, see if any teammember is there and also equipment."

written by Gligar on Feb 01, 2012 00:21

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y answers his PDC. As he does, it also plays the 'new message received' tone.

But he doesn't worry about that for now. Instead, he turn his attention to Mick-R, telling him that they're in Industrial Subsector B. Wait... Mick-R was the tech fanboy, right? Then... could he do some research for them? Perhaps look up how to deal with this gas?

Corridors, A Level, Iota Subsector

Mick-R claims that he is not s tech fanatic, and attempts to say that they're thinking of... what was his name now? Not that it matters. Perhaps nanomachines might be fun, though.

He then proceeds to think that he is a cameraman, and says that he wants to get the zombification process on film. He then asks for directions.

While he waits for them, he looks for some vendors. First, some of those candylyke sticks. Those are readily available. Paint, though... ah, there's the problem. You see, paint is Clearance BLUE, and the vendobot refuses to give him any, instead choosing to inform Internal Security that he tried to buy some. And his second choice, varnish, seems to be Clearance YELLOW. He does note, however, that SuperGum, a type of adhesive, is Clearance RED.

Over in another corridor, Joris-R's lift arrives.

⁷¹² SPEEDER: (OOC: that is what happen when you reply before reading the entire turn post... lol)

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y reports that he's found a lot of clones on Level 3... though he can't tell what they are because he's out of energy. Perhaps John-R knows how to... wait, where is he anyway?

"I'm right here," John-R replies from near the door. "You were about to ask me something?"

Just then, Jam-Y's PDC rings.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

It's L4-O. He's checked out that cloth... it seems that he can breathe through it. He was about to use it, but has realised that the gas has dissipated. Now he's called up Jam-Y, since Speed-Y wasn't available. Apparently, he'd forgotten about his PDC...

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y tells Jam-Y not to over-exert himself, and thinks. They should field their heavy weapons and check out Level 3... but where is L4-O? Okay, perhaps they should go find Nukabot and kit up before heading upstairs. But what about that gas? If it will block them, then they'll just have to go with what they have, otherwise, they regroup at Nukabot.

Roadway, near Epsilon Subsector

Kris-R decides that C-3 is applicable, and enters.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

He enters, to find a RED loading dock, which is large enough to take up part of B Level as well. There's even an observation platform up there. Down here, though, are a few empty pallets, a portable cloning tank, and some tyre tracks indicating that a vehiclebot of some sort was here recently. Light fixtures, the door close button, and such are of an older type that is not in general use any more.

There are also two smaller doors to the north and east. The northern door is open.

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango keeps trying to escape. It'd be easier if he hadn't been shot.

Behind him, more shamblers appear from the cafeteria. He decides to duck down Corridor 2.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 01, 2012 00:48

If Jam-Y answers, I get into my report.

"You guys still okay? I'm down in the garage with some freshly cloned... clones. The gas got triggered when the PowServ team was doing something with the power grid, I barely made it out of the building... I guess the PowServ team didn't make it out..."

I also found something about this situation. It has something to do with something called the Reanimator Project. The clones that came into this building had the information in their autocar..."

I take a moment to actually breathe.

"You guys are... uh, not zombies are you?"

written by Jam on Feb 01, 2012 02:44

I answer the PDC.

"Hello? Oh, hey L4-O! Hang on a sec..."

I try to put L4-O on speakerphone, so that we all can hear him. If I'm unsuccessful, I just listen myself to what L4-O has to say...

After L4-O goes through his report, I respond.

"Nope, we're still among the living! I met a zombie though, Joe, and set him on fire... Speed-Y had an interesting theory about the gas. It is actually a cloud of nanomachines, and the cyborgs are trying to make an army of robot-zombie clones! Isn't that a terrible thought?"

I look over to John-R.

"John-R, do you know of any ways to recharge whatever energy makes up mutant powers, besides waiting?"

written by Cryoburner on Feb 01, 2012 03:21

"A warehouse! Of course!"

I enter the warehouse, keeping a lookout for any lights. Unfortunately, those on the ceiling are a bit too high to be reached, and not quite as portable as might be ideal.

"Hmm... I'm sure they have more somewhere. Let's look!"

I head through the doorway to the north, pulling Kris-R along with me.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 01, 2012 04:53

Assuming contact has been established properly, I continue to converse with Jam-Y.

"Well that's good that you're okay. And that theory... matches up pretty well with what I've seen down here. "

"And... did you say Joe? There's a Joe down here that recently re-cloned. Says something about being a Toxic Metabolism mutant, if it's the same clone you're talking about. There's a few other clones down here in the garage because a cloningbot and hygienebot pulled in."

"Now that contact has actually been established, I need a plan of action. I was planning on continuing into the corridor, but should I stay here in the garage and keep this exit secure? Or do you have other plans?"

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 01, 2012 10:24

I keep close to the wall, leaning on it with a hand so I don't have to put so much effort into staying upright.

I keep avoiding the rather disfigured... clones. They don't seem much like the clones I've seen though.

written by 4616599 on Feb 01, 2012 10:32

I exit the lift and look for the Transitions Rental.

written by Gligar on Feb 01, 2012 17:39

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Once Jam-Y answers his PDC, L4-O tells him that clones are... well, cloning down here, thanks to the cloningbot that arrived. (Speaking of which, guess who just popped out of the cloningbot? The YELLOW PowServ clone.) He adds that the gas was triggered when the PowServ team finished their work at the board. While he made it out, it's clear that the PowServ team did not.

He also reports what he found regarding the Reanimator Project. Wait... is he talking to clones or zombies?

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Once he's put his PDC into speakerphone mode, Jam-Y assures L4-O that they're not zombies. He did set one on fire, though - a clone named Joe. He summarises Speed-Y's theory about the gas, and proceeds to ask John-R about ways to recharge mutant power. "There... aren't too many ways, sir. Certain drugs can do it... none of which I really know anything about. There's that rumour that pep pills can do it. Other than that... there's just waiting."

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O agrees with Speed-Y's theory, and tells about the Joe that decanted recently, wondering if they're the same. He adds that he needs a plan of action. Should he rejoin the team or try to hold the fort in the garage? Or something else?

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R looks at the lights. It's clear that he still wants to take them to that room in Gamma Subsector to see what's there. In the meantime, he can always drag Kris-R through the north door to see what's there...

Corridor A2 East, Emergency Bunker C-3

Through there, he finds the east end of Corridor A2. He may not remember, but it's possible that he's been here before. Or at least, somewhere in this general vicinity.

At present, the corridor is INFRARED, with one other door, seemingly to a dormitory. A sign on the door indicates that it is undergoing a change of clearance, to be completed Real Soon Now. Meanwhile, to the west, another corridor intersects this one.

Corridor 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango presses on down the corridor. He can hear sounds indicative of zombies from rooms to either side of him... and voices from directly ahead... where the corridor changes from INFRARED to RED.

Corridors, A Level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R walks, looking for the promised Transitions Rental office. Sure enough, he finds it, right next to the IntSec office.

written by Speeder on Feb 01, 2012 18:24

Since I heard the conversation on the speakerphone...

I shout back on it to make sure L4 hears me, but not too loud.

"Good to know you are alive L4, this mean there are no zombie walking around with a cone rifle..."

I look VERY pleased and happy.

"Ok, L4, we need to do two things basically, first, is preventing most deaths as possible, specially of people that would turn in dangerous zombies, like ourselves... Ever though of what happen if John or Jam became a zombie? It would be brains melting everywhere..."

Also, we need to prevent the gas, and any infected people, even alive people, from leaving the building. Since you are already on the garate, take care of this task, we will either attempt to reach you, so we can use the cone rifle to fight zombies, or if we find that this is not possible, we will go to level 3 and hope the people there are NOT zombies...

This is because I have the idea that we should find the biggest concentration of non-zombie clones, and escort them to safety, to prevent a army of zombies to arise, and Jam said that there are a big concentration on level 3, but he does not know if they are zombies or not."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 01, 2012 19:01

I offer some advice of my own:

"Well, sounds like a plan. And if I may offer some advice, I did fight one of those things. Zombies seem to be rather... fragile, it only took a few blaster shots to a limb to entirely remove it. You can completely cripple them with some good leg shots. Then the head is easy pickings."

I think.

"Though I guess you could always go for the head if you can. Probably has the same effect. Though, this is if all zombies are like the one I fought down here."

written by Cryoburner on Feb 01, 2012 19:15

So long as the door to the dormitory itself is within my clearance, I open it and look inside.

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 01, 2012 19:59

I press through, heading for the least zombified area.

I don't really care who it is that is talking.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 01, 2012 21:10

I listen to the ream discuss the plan of action and will prepare to aid them in anyway. I also try and cheer up, thing can be worse, right? I am sure one day I'll get my wheelchair back.

written by Gligar on Feb 01, 2012 22:31

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y speaks up, hoping that Jam-Y's PDC can pick up his voice. He is pleased that L4-O is still alive, since it means that there is no zombie walking around with a cone rifle.

He adds that they have two tasks: 1) to prevent as many deaths as possible; 2) to make sure that this gas, and the zombies, do not leave. Since L4-O is in the garage, he's in a good position to do that. If they can reach him and get access to the cone rifle, then they will do so. Otherwise, they will head up to Level 3 without it, and hope that the clones up there aren't zombies.

Azir-R listens in, trying to force a smile onto his face. Happiness may be Mandatory, but sometimes, it needs a little helping hand. Perhaps the Happiness Officer can help there? Oh wait...

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O agrees to that plan, and suggests that anyone wishing to terminate a zombie aim for the legs first. That way, the head can be targeted at everyone's leisure. Though it probably doesn't matter in any case.

As he's speaking, Mango staggers through the door into the garage, and gawks at the presence of the clones, and the cloningbot, and the hygienebot, and the other bots... Alice-R is about to say something before Joe stops her. "No wait, he's alive!"

Well, just barely.

The YELLOW speaks up while he's waiting for the hygienebot. "May I suggest that you Troubleshooters worry about more than just this building? There is the rest of the subsector, if I am not mistaken."

Alice-R agrees. "That's right. I'm from Building 3... if what's happening here is any indication, there will be all sorts of Fun happening over there. Lots of INFRAREDs at work."

Corridor A2, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R can't resist opening the door to the dormitory and peeking in. He notices that the bunks are gone. From the floor mountings there used to be bunks for 40 INFRARED clones in there. The lockers appear to have been sealed with Plasti-Seal ready for transportation to somewhere else. And to cap it all off, someone seems to have started changing the clearance stripe to YELLOW.

Around the sector

Friend Computer makes another announcement. "Attention, Cryo-R-BRN, Kris-R-QJT, and Mick-R-NRK! Your briefing is due to start. Please ensure that you reach your briefing room on time. Remember, tardiness is treason. Thank you for your co-operation."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 01, 2012 22:43

I sigh, and nod at the YELLOW PowServ clone, and relay his statement:

"Hm, the YELLOW PowServ clone here has a good point. Other buildings in this sector are under attack, we need to find a way of securing those. But we don't have the manpower to handle all three Industrial buildings... hmm... I wonder if I can pull in my Armed Forces squad, and maybe get some others along with. We're going to need all the help we can get."

I look at Mango, recognizing him.

"Well, look who showed up. Mango seems to still be among the living... barely."

"Anyway... if I may make a suggestion as well, we should maybe try to get as many able clones with weapons as we can and surround all the Industrial buildings. This way we can contain zombies. We can send small teams in to the buildings proper to clear out hostiles and rescue survivors... so as soon as you locate the survivors on level 3, I recommend getting out so we can mobilize the plan."

written by Cryoburner on Feb 01, 2012 23:20

"We must hurry and acquire lights, so that we can somehow find our way to the briefing! Let's go!"

I proceed to the intersecting corridor, taking the change of clearance sign with me as I go. I take Kris-R as well, in case I need someone to help carry lights.

written by Malkom on Feb 02, 2012 00:56

I grumble, and start off in a random direction or, if I have directions, towards the team.

Then I hear the announcement, swear, and try to call up directions with my PDC.

written by Gligar on Feb 02, 2012 02:09

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O nods at the YELLOW, and relays to the rest of the team. They need to find a way to secure the other buildings, as well. Problem is, they don't have the manpower. Hmm... could he pull in his Armed Forces squad? Or perhaps they could arm the local citizens or something.

He notices Mango, though he doesn't pay him much attention.

Continuing, he makes the suggestion that the team arms as many clones as they can find and get out of the building. That way, they can send teams into the other buildings and clear them out as needed. The zombies can then be dealt with. Somehow.

Corridor A2, Emergency Bunker C-3

Still obsessed, Cryo-R decides that they still need to find lights. Kris-R seems to have fallen into a trance or something, so he doesn't respond. In the end, Cryo-R decides to pull him along.

But not before attempting to take the notice. He soon realises that it's stuck to the door, probably with SuperGum. Oh well. He heads to the intersection anyway.

Corridor A1/A2 Intersection, Emergency Bunker C-3

The intersection, like both corridors, is INFRARED. From here it is possible to look down both corridors. There are doors lining both, but from this angle, only the hygiene station on A1, and the stairwell past the hygiene station, are clearly recognisable.

Corridors, A Level, Iota Subsector

Mick-R, realising that he has to go places, and also realising that he's being ignored, starts walking off.

Then he realises that Our Mutual Friend just spoke to him, and displays that he is in desperate need of a happy pill. He proceeds to check his PDC for directions... but to where? The Industrial Subsectors? Those are down the roadway. As for this new briefing, it's down the roadway in the other direction.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R seems to have dozed off and has failed to realise that there are zombies in the corridor with him. They, on the other hand, are aware of him. They approach... pretty quickly, actually.

written by Gligar on Feb 02, 2012 17:13

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The hygienebot beeps politely, indicating that it is ready, and allowing the YELLOW to use it.

While he does, the cloningbot fires up once again.

From the corridor come the sounds of things approaching.

"Please remain calm, citizens. Everything is under control." Though, from the way Alice-R jumps, you might be forgiven in thinking that she doesn't believe it.

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y realises that he left his PDC connected to Mick-R.

He also realises that something is coming, not only on Level 2, but from the stairwell.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 02, 2012 17:16

"This is the part where we ambush them, right?"

I prepare to respond to the immediate threat of danger.

written by Speeder on Feb 02, 2012 17:45

I take my PDC, and turn it off, then I shout.

"Incoming!"

I check how many shots I have left, and if more than 2, I aim at the stairwell.

"I wish we had more incendiary weapons... oh wait..."

I walk nearer the Joe on flames.

"If you are not a zombie, dodge this!"

I carefully (since my leg is still broken) attempt to support myself on the wall and whatnot, and then push (with the metal foot) the flaming joe to the staircase...

written by Jam on Feb 02, 2012 18:39

I watch Speed-Y, and check how zombie Joe is doing...⁷¹³

written by Lightning4 on Feb 02, 2012 19:31

"Hello? Hm. Sounds like you guys might be busy... Tell you what, I'll just get on with my plan, it seems like the best idea. Call me if we need a change of plans."

I hang up my PDC and make... the call, a call attempt to Friend Computer.

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 02, 2012 20:16

I'm not sure who they are, but those clones seem to be not fully affected from whatever it was.

I try to conserve some strength...

written by Gligar on Feb 02, 2012 21:34

Stairwell, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R expresses his wish to ambush someone soon, and gets ready.

Speed-Y decides to try to solve the problem of being attacked from both sides, as well as the problem of not having incendiary weapons, with one simple action: he pushes the burning Zombie Joe down the stairs, even as it attempts to push itself to its feet. If whoever is coming is human, they'll have to dodge.

Jam-Y watches, and follows the zombie a little. He can see it rolling down the stairs, and collide with a second zombie, who is pushed to the ground. Both try to untangle themselves but end up just spreading the fire.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

A zombie reaches King-R... and just goes right past? That can't be right. I thought they... OH! Of course!

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O realises that Jam-Y and co. seem to be busy all of a sudden, and hangs up. He'll carry out his plan. He prepares to make another call... one to The Computer itself.

The PDC dials...

Mango isn't sure who these clones are, but they seem to not be as affected by whatever is happening. He tries to take it easy. But it's difficult to remain awake...

written by Speeder on Feb 02, 2012 22:08

With that problem solved, I smile happily, and start to go to the other direction again.

⁷¹³ SPEEDER: (ooc: my last shouting is to the stairwell... only to make clear Speed-Y is not nuts 🤪 and is not evil to hit a alive person with a flaming zombie)

written by Cryoburner on Feb 02, 2012 22:58

I prod at Kris-R, noting that he's been strangely inattentive during the last few minutes. I suppose I could stuff his jumpsuit with lights and use him as a sort of clone-backpack, in any case.

"A stairwell! I'll bet they keep the lights up there!"

I head into the stairwell, climbing stairs as needed, and continuing to pull along Kris-R.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 02, 2012 23:28

"Yeah that was easy." I hop after the team.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 02, 2012 23:35

While I wait for a response on my PDC, I address the YELLOW, if he can hear me.

"Sorry you uh, died. Not much I could've done to help there, since I was supposed to protect you guys and all. Wonder where the rest of the PowServ team is, and if any made it somewhere safe... Team Epsilon still seems to be mostly intact."

written by Jam on Feb 03, 2012 00:33

I smile as I watch the burning zombies...

After a while, I turn back and follow Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on Feb 03, 2012 02:32

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y is happy that that worked, and starts heading up to Level 3.

Azir-R follows, also happy.

Jam-Y watches the zombies burn. They manage to scramble back into the corridor, where they collapse in a heap on the floor. Satisfied, Jam-Y heads back to the team, who are beginning to ascend.

Behind them, another group of zombies begins to ascend from Level 1... to be joined by another group from Level 2...

Corridor A1/A2 intersection, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R notices Kris-R's strange idleness, and pokes him. Seeing no reply, he begins dragging the inert clone towards the stairwell, and eventually, up it.

Stairwell, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R begins the climb, with Kris-R in tow. It appears that the stairwell goes up for two levels.

There's a lot of dust here. Perhaps the scrubots lost their War On Dust at some point around here.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector b

The PDC, and L4-O, begin waiting for a connection.

While he waits, L4-O apologises for the YELLOW's death, claiming responsibility since he was supposed to protect them. He hopes that the rest of the team survived. He knows that Team Epsilon seems reasonably intact.

The YELLOW replies, "Well, I'm not entirely sure what happened, only that repairing the circuit breaker did not restore the lights as it should. Meaning that there are further power problems, meaning that our work is not yet complete. As for your being responsible... you can be sure of this going on your permanent record."

The YELLOW continues with the hygienebot. As he does, the cloning bot disgorges another two clones... members of the PowServ team.

And while that is happening, there is more company, in the form of a group of zombies from the corridor...

And finally, the PDC gets a connection. "Yes, citizen?"

written by Speeder on Feb 03, 2012 03:11

I get to level 3, preped to shoot anything that might be zombie there. Or cyborg.

I see how close are the zombies getting to us.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 03, 2012 05:20

I notice the zombies.

"Aww vatcrap, not now..."

I try to juggle blasting off the zombies while speaking loudly into my PDC.

"Okay I need to make this fast. Friend Computer, I am speaking on behalf of Team Epsilon, reporting a Code-Three Zed, potential Code-Four. We have insufficient manpower to contain all of these and if I may make a request, can we get some Armed Forces squads over here? Possibly my own squad?"

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 03, 2012 09:41

I take slow breaths, trying to take things slowly. As I do so, I gaze over the area, looking for a medkit. Maybe I'll be lucky this time.

written by Kristos on Feb 03, 2012 16:56

"...huh... wha.. OH! my... Sorry. I... phase out sometimes. I hope I didn't do anything treaso... Oh! Did you find the briefing room? Great! ...ouch!"

I begin ascending the stairs on foot because the steady bump-bump of being dragged up them is lowering my level of happiness.

written by Gligar on Feb 03, 2012 17:34

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Arriving at Level 3, Speed-Y checks behind the door. The way ahead seems clear.

Looking back past the team, he can see the zombies approaching. They're half-way between Levels 2 and 3 now.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O only now realises that he has company. He starts shooting wildly while declaring a Code 3-Zed, or maybe a Code 4, to Our Mutual Friend, and requests Armed Forces backup... preferably, his own squad. Of course, since his concentration is not on firing, his aim is all over the place.

“There is no need for a Code 3-Zed,” The Computer responds. “Please remain calm. Records indicate that you have sufficient firepower to handle the current - interrupt. Please clarify. Did you specify Code 3-Zed, citizen?”

Meanwhile, the YELLOW has finished with the hygienebot, allowing one of the other PowServ clones to use it while he looks for a jumpsuit. And, of course, the cloningbot starts up again.

Mango looks for a medkit to try to treat his wounds, and finds one attached to a cabinet. It's up high, though.

Stairwell, Emergency Bunker C-3

Kris-R snaps out of it, and realises that he's being dragged. He wonders if he did anything treasonous while he was out, but is interrupted by the fact that he's being bumped against each and every step on the way up, which is making him unhappy. He decides to start walking.

Corridor C1 North, Emergency Bunker C-3

The two eventually come to the top of the stairwell, and exit onto the bunker's topmost corridor. Immediately, they find two doors, one to the south and one to the west. Both are RED, and closed. The corridor continues round a corner to the east.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 03, 2012 17:43

Thinking quickly, I try to toss a couple of my laser pistols to nearby clones, not caring for clearance at the moment.

“Here! Use this!”

“Yes! A Code 3-Zed. They're everywhere in these buildings! Code 4-Zed likely without containment! All three Industrial Buildings are compromised! Potential sector-wide overrun!”

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 03, 2012 18:26

“Well, now's a good a time as any..”

I violently shake a b3, mourn for a moment the passing of another can of b3 to senseless violence, and then throw it down hard near the zombies.

Remembering the issue of fire+b3 == PAIN I silently hope the zombies can still feel.

written by Speeder on Feb 03, 2012 19:01

I too hope that Azir can of B3 work, and just to be sure I shoot the zombie legs to stall them (instead of killing them, since that would not work anyway)

I then check if the stairwell actually has a door! You know, those that we can close, and that zombies without legs cannot reach the handle!

written by Jam on Feb 03, 2012 21:43

I see the can of B3 sail through the air, and decide I should run up the stairwell as fast as I can...

“AHHHH!”

written by Gligar on Feb 03, 2012 22:37Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O decides to arm some of the decanting citizens, and hands out his three ORANGE laser pistols. A couple of clones hesitate, meaning that the others get the pistols.

That done, he confirms to Friend Computer that, yes, he said Code 3-Zed. He also believes that, without containment, the situation could escalate to a Code 4-Zed... perhaps even a sector-wide outbreak.

“This is troubling news, citizen, and requires further investigation. Please stand by.”

The clones with the laser pistols have been firing during this, and have managed three shots each. This has had the effect of slowing down the zombies, that's a certainty, but the problem is, they're just not doing enough damage.

Stairwell, Level 3, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R decides that it's a good time to put those throwing skills to good use. Grabbing a can of B3 from his backpack, he begins shaking it...

Speed-Y notices him, and starts shooting at the zombies' legs to stall them. He shoots three times with his laser pistol, missing once, but is able to stall the zombies at least a little.

By now, Azir-R is ready to throw, and does! Nice throw!

Jam-Y realises what's happening, and runs up the stairs, screaming. He has a little too much experience of B3 grenades, it seems 😊

And it's a hit! If those zombies were alive, they'd be suffering from multiple injuries, possible internal bleeding, as well as being on fire. As it is, they're still more or less ambulatory, albeit with a few less organs than before. But, as we learned earlier, B3 + fire = lots of pain. And, even though they're zombies, they can still feel. Somewhat. Not as much as a living clone, but it's enough. The zombies eventually come to a halt. Though, that might have something to do with the fact that they're burning up, and now can't use their legs any more...

written by Cryoburner on Feb 03, 2012 22:59

I open the door to the west!

written by Lightning4 on Feb 04, 2012 00:19

I take the momentary pause to assess the zombie positions. If they're far enough away from the clones and myself, I take out Turbo.

“Everyone get back! I'm going explosive on this!”

I load it up with some kind of explosive shell if I have one, and once no clones are nearby I try to fire it into the middle of the zombie pack.

written by Gligar on Feb 04, 2012 02:22

Corridor C1 North, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R's curiosity/need to inspect every nook and cranny gets the better of him, and he tries to open the western door. It's locked.

What, did you expect every door to be unlocked, ready for some random kleptomaniac to enter and try to take everything that's not glued down? 😊😊

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O looks at the zombies. They're a bit close... maybe he could risk it?

While the other clones are firing (and running out of ammo), L4-O decides that it's time to take drastic measures. And by drastic measures, I mean a high explosive cone rifle shell fired from Turbo. He warns everyone to get back. Everyone looks round, and... does.

He fires.

The explosion is probably loud enough to be heard from half the building away.

But it does make a lot of the zombies... go away.

There are still a few left in the pack, though. Mind you, they're on fire, but they're not going to let that get in the way of their goal, which I'm sure you can guess.

That cone rifle shell also causes some of the clones to be knocked to the floor by the blast.

written by Jam on Feb 04, 2012 03:05

I stop for a second cycle.

"Did you guys hear something?"

I listen a bit longer, and, not hearing anything, continue trying to get to Level 3.

written by Speeder on Feb 04, 2012 04:49

I leave behind my spent yellow barrel... you know, near those flaming zombies, and also run up to level 3 corridor, while seeing if I left more YELLOW barrels in my pockets somewhere.

written by Speeder on Feb 04, 2012 04:52⁷¹⁴

"I think so... Seemly L4 is busy, or someone else decided to repeat that show on the old troubleshooter headquarters that blasted a hole in the sector external wall even..."

written by Kristos on Feb 04, 2012 05:37

I continue down the corridor, around the corner with complete and possibly misleading confidence that such is the route to the briefing room.

⁷¹⁴ SPEEDER: (OOC: erm... I replied without seeing Gligar last post! Ima blind)

written by Lightning4 on Feb 04, 2012 05:40

"Whoa. Might've been a bit... too strong there. Sorry all."

I shake some sense back into my head and put Turbo away, opting again for my blaster.

"Not many left at least."

I attempt to shoot whichever zombie is closest to a clone. Preferably in the head.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 04, 2012 12:36

"Hmm... It looks like we'll need a key."

I continue down the corridor and around the corner, in search of a key.

written by Gligar on Feb 04, 2012 16:40

Stairwell, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y thinks he heard something... perhaps an explosion?

Speed-Y is too busy unloading his laser pistol to comment. Leaving the spent one near the burning zombies, he walks back to the group, checking his pockets. He finds that he has five YELLOW barrels left, along with two RED ones.

Then he realises what Jam-Y is talking about. He comments that it's probably L4-O keeping himself busy. That, or someone wanted to emulate that big explosion in the old Troubleshooter HQ...

Corridor C1 North, Emergency Bunker C-3

Confident that he can find the briefing room, Kris-R heads round the corner, and further down the corridor. He's followed by Cryo-R, who, it seems, has changed his priorities. Now he wants a key for the locked room.

Corridor C1 Central, Emergency Bunker C-3

The corridor continues round yet another corner ahead, past another three doors (two on the left, one on the right). The furthest door on the left (labelled DORMITORY 2) is ORANGE Clearance, the other two are RED (MEDICAL and CLONING STATION), as is the corridor.

From the door labels, it's probably safe to say that the briefing room is further ahead.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O picks himself up off the floor, and apologises for the blast. It was probably a bot too powerful. But hey, look on the bright side, it did clear out most of the zombies.

He puts Turbo away again, and retrieves his blaster. It's cooled down somewhat from his earlier shooting frenzy. As he's lining up to fire, a zombie, now on fire, obliges by walking right into his line of fire, right towards Mango...

He fires.

Nothing happens.

The zombie continues to approach.

Meanwhile, the cloningbot and hygienebot are continuing to see use, as more clones are decanted, wash themselves, and look for jumpsuits. There is the box contained by the other bot, but its supply is running low.

written by 4616599 on Feb 04, 2012 16:48

Snapping out of my daze again, I greet the clone/bot in charge of Transitions rental and enquire on availability.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 04, 2012 19:09

"Blast it..."

I try to replicate my earlier success by unleashing a barrage of shots straight into the zombie's head.

"Everyone keep away from these things! Who knows what they'll do to you!"

written by Gligar on Feb 04, 2012 22:18

Transition Rentals, A Level, Iota Subsector

Snapping out of his daze, Joris-R enters, passing the inert form of Mick-R, and greets the clone behind the counter, and asks if there is a Transition available. "Certainly, citizen! We have two available right now. It's 25 credits per daycycle."

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O tries to recreate his earlier success by randomly blasting zombies in the head.

He's able to get off two shots before his blaster starts blinking a light at him.

Both shots hit their mark. And a zombie does indeed go down... just not the one approaching Mango. It gets within reach, and grabs Mango's head...

You know, I can't get over the feeling that I've seen this before 😊

written by Jam on Feb 04, 2012 22:34

I continue trying to get to Level 3, unless I'm already in it, in which case I try to leave the stairwell...

written by Speeder on Feb 04, 2012 22:44

I do the same as Jam! I mean, the same action, not exactly imitate him... Or rather, in fact I DO imitate him, just for some amusement.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 05, 2012 01:34

"Keep an eye out for any doors marked KEYS. That room back there is locked, so logic dictates that it probably contains what we are searching for."

I continue down the corridor, looking for any keys, or doors marked KEYS.

written by Gligar on Feb 05, 2012 02:37

Stairwell, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y takes the plunge, and steps out into the corridor.

Of course, it would help if someone hadn't left a discarded B3 can in the way. He ends up tripping over it, and almost falls flat on his face.

Speed-Y follows him, and thinks it's hilarious to mimic Jam-Y's actions. He tries to copy Jam-Y's trip but ends up actually falling.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The two YELLOWS find an INFRARED corridor. A sign indicates that there are dormitories ahead.

But, more importantly, a group of zombies are visible, milling about near a door.

Corridor C1 Central, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R suggests that they look for a door marked KEYS. After all, he does want to get into that room. He then heads round the corner, to find...

Corridor C1 North, Emergency Bunker C-3

...the north end of the corridor. There are two more doors in the corridor itself: another dormitory, and MAINTENANCE. The corridor ends at a concourse.

written by Speeder on Feb 05, 2012 02:41

I curse, grab the B3 can and thrown down the stairwell too.

Then I turn to the door.

"Jam, I suspect we will be forced to visit a cloning tank..."

I look at the zombies and try to figure if they are coming in, or out of the dormitory.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 05, 2012 03:48

"Vatcrap!"

I try to swap out my blaster power pack for a fresh one, so I can resume blasting that zombie trying to get Mango.

If I do it quickly enough, I immediately try to unleash some more shots at that zombie.

written by Jam on Feb 05, 2012 04:35

I angle my emergency light towards the zombies by the door.

"Not if I can help it we're not! We just need to find the zombie's weak points..."

I wave my emergency light in a threatening matter.

"They don't seem to feel pain like we do... It also seems like they can take a lot of damage before they stop... Just look at those zombies that have been following us! How long have they been burning now, and they had a B3 blow up next to them too! They must have some weak point!"

written by Kristos on Feb 05, 2012 05:04

Rather dryly I say "I do not think that is a KEY priority right now," speaking almost as if I do not realize the pun that just rolled off my lips.

I enter the concourse and take a look around. Hello concourse.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 05, 2012 05:30⁷¹⁵

I too watch the zombies, and will prepare to take action if need be.

I am not sure what Speedy was insinuating re: the cloning tanks, but if he means we're going to need recloning, I have no intention of letting that happen.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 05, 2012 06:04

"That's a good point... What if the door marked KEYS is locked? I'll bet we could get into that room through the ventilation system though. Our priority should be to find a suitable air vent, that looks as though it might lead into that room, or perhaps into a room with a door marked KEYS."

I enter the concourse and have a look around, noting any air vents present. Or interesting doors, I suppose.

written by 4616599 on Feb 05, 2012 09:54

"Oh, that's good- I'd like one. Just charge it to my ME Card." I hold it out.

I notice Mick-R at the doorway. "Hmm. Is that clone fine?"

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 05, 2012 09:56

I attempt to reach for the medkit, slowly edging for it...

written by Gligar on Feb 05, 2012 17:39

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y picks himself, and the B3 can, up off the floor. He pops his head back through into the stairwell and throws the can downstairs, where it bounces off a zombie head. He notes that some of them seem to be disintegrating due to the fire.

Looking the other way, towards the door, he sees the zombies up there as well, trying to figure out how to open the door and get to whatever's inside, and comments that they might end up visiting a cloning tank soon...

Jam-Y doesn't intend to let that happen. He shines his "emergency light" at them, waving it in a manner he believes to be menacing. The nearest zombies recoil in apparent fright. Or whatever it is zombies use instead of fright.

As he mentions, they simply need to find these zombies' weak points. They must have weak points... they're extremely resilient, they don't feel pain like clones do (much), and even fire doesn't seem to affect them all that much.

It occurs to him that maybe they just aren't using enough.

Azir-R watches as the zombies seem to process something. It eventually dawns on them that trying to open the door isn't as rewarding as attacking these Troubleshooters right here...

Garage, building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O realises the problem: the power pack is drained. While Mango continues trying to reach the medkit (and just manages to touch the thing), and the zombies continue to advance, and the one attacking Mango starts pulling at Mango's head, and the rest of the clones begin looking for large spanners, hammers, and other such improvised weapons, he busies himself by replacing it. Annoyingly, though, the new power pack decides to be stubborn and not click into place properly...

Corridor C1 South, Emergency Bunker C-3

Kris-R cracks an awful pun about their priorities, and enters the concourse. He's followed, of course, by Cryo-R, who has realised that the KEYS room (assuming that such a room even exists) might be locked, and has returned to his previous thoughts about air ducts.

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

It's actually not a very big concourse. It seems to exist solely to house the vendobots which are installed either side of a set of double doors to the north, which are currently open, and lead on to some sort of meeting hall. A GREEN clone at the other end, near the large vidscreen, hasn't yet noticed their presence.

Other features of the concourse include a RED clearance stripe, another door marked CONTROL ROOM and a staircase leading up. And an air vent which is clearly too small to enter.

Transition Rentals, A Level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R decides to rent a Transition, and presents his ME Card as payment. The salesclone takes it and scans it. "Excellent, citizen... Joris-R. The Transition should be here shortly. Now, if I can get you to fill out some forms for me..."

written by Speeder on Feb 05, 2012 18:20

"Oh, I thought they were coming FROM the dormitory, the fact that they are coming IN the dormitory is good, it means we won't end in a cloning tank after all!"

I start shooting the zombies, the closest ones first, in the legs, maybe the ones behind will trip as the first ones fall.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 05, 2012 19:43

"Grrrrr."

Just as stubborn as the power pack, I keep trying to get it into place harder and harder.

If I finally succeed, I get right into shooting!

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 05, 2012 20:18

I aim for heads and fire.

written by Kristos on Feb 05, 2012 22:50

Again, dryly, "Keep your conDUCT together, we are approaching a GREEN clone."

⁷¹⁵ AZIRPHAELI: (OOC Didn't notice the new page)

I walk up to the clone and, with respect, speak, "Greetings, sir/[madam]. I am Kris-R and this is my recent companion, Cryo-R. We have been summoned to a mission by our Mutual Friend. Is this the debriefing room?" as I gesture towards the meeting hall.

written by Gligar on Feb 05, 2012 23:07

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y relaxes a little. He thought that the zombies were coming out of the door, not trying to get in... oh well, less talky, more shooty! From no fewer than four clones, actually. Speed-Y and John-R end up going for legs, to knock down their targets and hopefully slow the rest down, while Azir-R and Lucas-R focus on headshots.

Out of the three shots each that the four manage to pull off, enough hit their mark that three of the zombies fall to the ground, which nicely immobilises another three, who trip and fall over them. That leaves four more...

From somewhere comes the sound of a squealing barrel.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Blaster power packs may be stubborn, but L4-O proves that he can be just as stubborn as he rams the pack into its connector. Before he can start firing, though, one of the zombies reaches him... only to be struck from behind by Joe with a huge screwdriver. Similar things are happening elsewhere in the garage... the one attacking Mango is itself attacked by a spanner-wielding Alice-R, for instance. Whether this will help Mango remains to be seen.

But back to L4-O. With his blaster sorted, he opens fire, unleashing a volley of shots into the zombie right in front of him. As with the other one, he's able to knock a leg off.

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Kris-R cracks another bad pun and walks into the meeting hall.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

He walks past the stacked chairs, and the chairs arranged in rows to sit on, and heads right up to the GREEN and introduces himself and Cryo-R. He asks if this is the debriefing room.

"Well, it can't be a debriefing room if there's nothing to debrief you about, can it?" she replies. "You probably mean briefing room. Yes, this is the briefing room. You're a couple of minutecycles late. And where's Mick-R?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 05, 2012 23:12

"Thanks for the assist, Joe."

I back away from the crippled zombie, and take the opportunity to try to obliterate the head.

written by Jam on Feb 06, 2012 00:07

I try to set one of the zombies on fire, unless someone throws a barrel towards the zombies, in which case I run for cover...

written by Cryoburner on Feb 06, 2012 01:07

I stare blankly for a few seconds following Kris-R's statement, then enter the meeting hall.

"Oh, hello! Sorry if we're slightly late, but we had some issues with the KEYS room. As for Mike-R... I think someone said he was sent off somewhere. You don't suppose he had the key, do you?"

I then have a quick look around the meeting hall, noting any lunches that may be present.

"Say, this place seems vaguely familiar..."

written by Speeder on Feb 06, 2012 02:08

I check my barrel, and ask John and Lucas to do the same...

And hope Azir will check his.

In case my barrel is the faulty one, I throw it... Since seemly it is not, since I just changed it, I fire on the remaining zombie legs if possible.

written by Gligar on Feb 06, 2012 02:39

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O thanks Joe, and unleashes another volley of blasts into the zombie. Out of five blasts, three hit their mark, with predictable results. Scratch one zombie.

The one who was harassing Mango seems to have gone down as well.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y attempts to use his "emergency light" to ignite one zombie... but then there's the squealing barrel. Speed-Y issues orders to look for it, and checks his own barrel. Nope, that seems good, so he fires off another three... somehow missing with each one.

He's joined by John-R, whose barrel seems okay as well. He's a little more successful.

The actual owner of the squealing barrel? Lucas-R. He realises, fiddles with the barrel to get it unstuck, and throws it. Jam-Y backs off.

The barrel continues to squeal.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R enters behind Kris-R, and apologises for being late due to the KEYS room. "What KEYS room?" asks the GREEN. "There is no KEYS room."

Cryo-R again confuses Mick-R with Mike-R and tells the GREEN that he was sent off somewhere. Apparently, so does the GREEN. "I guess I'll have to contact him, then, won't I? And probably fine him, as well..."

She pulls out a PDC, and makes a call...

Transition Rentals, A Level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R is filling out paperwork when he hears the sound of a PDC ringing.

written by Speeder on Feb 06, 2012 03:00

“Ok, please DO NOT shoot that barrel, if it explodes, let it explode with minimal force, I do not want it to blast open the doors of the corridor, this time, the doors that lock us out are our friend.”

While I talk, I shoot more, kneecap hunting.

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 06, 2012 06:46

I attempt to grab the medkit, and then attempt to retreat to a safer distance.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 06, 2012 06:54

“Good work all, if we can hold out until Friend Computer sends reinforcements... I’ll see to it that Friend Computer knows about this assistance.”

I do a quick zombie assessment. If there’s still more zombies, I get right into shooting them more.

written by Jam on Feb 06, 2012 13:34

I attempt to set a zombie on fire, without getting too close to the squealing barrel.

written by Kristos on Feb 06, 2012 16:21

“My apologies, ma’am.”

written by 4616599 on Feb 06, 2012 17:48

I look at Mick-R again, and prod him.

I then glance at his PDC's display.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 06, 2012 18:01

I resist the urge to shoot the barrel, due to speedy's advice, and instead get away from it.

Once I feel safer, more headshots.

written by Gligar on Feb 06, 2012 18:18⁷¹⁶

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y tells everyone not to shoot the squealing barrel, since he wants to minimise the explosion, and not blow open any doors or anything. Meanwhile, he gets right back to shooting.

He attempts to pull off another three-shot burst. However, he has forgotten one rather crucial detail:

He’s already used up his six shots.

The first shot is a miss. The second time he goes to fire, the whole thing explodes!

You can imagine the devastation this makes to the team.

Actually, you don’t have to imagine, do you? Remember what happened with Jam-Y that time, back when he was Jam-R? Like that, only a lot worse. Specifically, it has the effect of sending shrapnel into the whole team, as well as throwing them all over the place. And to cap it all off, the other barrel also explodes, doing even more damage.

⁷¹⁶ GLIGAR: (OOO: Well, this was certainly an interesting turn, filled with Fun, wasn't it?)

Just when Jam-Y was about to burn a zombie... well, there’s no need for that now, is there?

Lucas-R is the first one to come round. Looks like he’s sustained multiple fractures, and is having trouble breathing. He begins to check the test of the team:

First, Speed-Y. He might still be conscious, but either way, he’s not moving right now. He might be suffering from internal bleeding.

Second, Jam-Y. He’s lying on top of what remains of the zombie. and seems to have got off lightly. He’s only unconscious.

Third, Azir-R. He’s broken an arm and is unconscious.

Fourth, John-R. He’s also suffering from fractures, possible internal bleeding, and not being conscious. But the worst part? His Multicorder is broken.

Treason point to Speeder!

Lucas-R puss himself back over to Speed-Y, and tries to rouse him. “Sir, it’s not without respect that I say this, but... stupid! You’ve failed to demonstrate proper alertness! Do I have to start issuing alertness tests every five secondcycles?”

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango once again tries to grab the medkit. The zombie is still latched on, though, despite the efforts of two clones trying to remove the deathgrip it has on Mango’s head. He keeps trying, attempting to edge away while he does. Of course, the further away he gets, the harder the zombie grabs. It feels like he’ll lose his head if he tries that again.

On the plus side, it looks like a freshly-decanted PowServ clone noticed his plight and removed the medkit for him.

Meanwhile, L4-O resumes shooting. He starts with the one troubling Mango. One shot later, and the zombie lets go, having apparently realised that something is wrong.

The “something”, of course, is that its head now has a big hold in it, causing brainstuff to leak out.

It takes a few secondcycles for it to realise that this means that it should no longer be functioning. Those nanomachines are dedicated little critters.

Meeting room, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Kris-R apologises. But the GREEN is still on her PDC, waiting. “Why won’t he answer?” she mutters.

Transition Rentals, A Level, Iota Subsector

It seems that Joris-R is thinking the same thing. He prods Mick-R, but there is no response. Finally, he takes a look at Mick-R’s PDC. It shows that there is a clone calling, buy the name of Susan-G-PDL-3.^{717 718} ⁷¹⁷ SPEEDER: (OOO: I am totally lost...

I changed my barrel on page 518, then I tripped, then I threw a B3 can on the stairwell, then I made 3 shots, then I checked my barrel for squealing, wondering if it was its fault somehow, something that would not make sense since I had just changed it ,and then I shot 3 times

written by Lightning4 on Feb 06, 2012 19:32

"Was that the last one?"

I give the room a check for any moving zombies, and give my blaster a short break. ⁷¹⁹ written by Azirphaeli on Feb 06, 2012 20:03⁷²⁰

I lie around unconscious ..^{721 722 723 724}

written by Gligar on Feb 06, 2012 21:24⁷²⁵

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R keeps being unconscious while Lucas-R tries to rouse Speed-Y. It looks like he was successful, as Speed-Y looks at him, confused. Did he shoot four shots, or seven? He can't quite remember...

Well, my logs show...

Wait a minute. This log here says seven (which I'm sure Cryo-R would verify), but this other one says four...

Computer, give me the checksums for these logs, please...

Aha! Tampering.

So... I'm going to assume that this first log is the accurate one. I'm not sure what you guys saw, but I definitely saw him shoot seven times.

again...

And it explodes?

What?

the limit is 3 or 6?)

⁷¹⁸ SPEEDER: (OOC: In fact I did not even finished reading the turn, I will wait for Gligar reply first).

⁷¹⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: Then you tried to shoot again, Speeder...)

⁷²⁰ AZIRPHAEELI: (OOC: If he changed the barrel on 318, then he only shot 3 rounds before this last turn, that makes a total of six shots)

(OOC So... assuming the ruling stands and we all got injured)

⁷²¹ AZIRPHAEELI: (OOC And if we didn't, I'll reply reacting to the new results)

⁷²² SPEEDER: (OOC: I can only count six shots since I last changed the barrel, this turn included... I am not understanding where I shot more than 6)

⁷²³ GLIGAR: (OOC: There is actually a reason for this, which you will discover in due time, assuming you have the correct security clearance by then.

☺)

⁷²⁴ CRYOBURNER: (

OOC: Three shots...

Speeder said:

I start shooting the zombies, the closest ones first, in the legs, maybe the ones behind will trip as the first ones fall.

Three more shots...

Speeder said:

In case my barrel is the faulty one, I throw it... Since seemly it is not, since I just changed it, I fire on the remaina zombie legs if possible.

More shots... : P

Speeder said:

While I talk, I shoot more, kneecap hunting.

)

⁷²⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: See? Cryo-R's inspection skills are good for more than for just light fixtures! ☺)

Also, to remind everyone, arguing with the GM is treason [👎]

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O asks whether that was the last one.

Nope... there is still one more.

Meeting room, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Susan-G waits for Mick-R to answer his PDC. She's getting rather irritated now.

written by Speeder on Feb 06, 2012 21:46⁷²⁶

I just look around dumbfounded.

"Oh crap..."

I check if the doors are intact.

Then I attempt to figure if I am dieing or not.

"I think that maybe I am dieing after this stupid mistake... This mean a YELLOW zombie running around with YELLOW weapons... Can someone suggest how we prevent zombies from using our equipment in case we die here?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 06, 2012 22:27

If the other clones don't already have it under control with their weapons, I start firing at that zombie too.

"How many of things are we going to have to kill... I hope that's all that's coming this way..."

written by Jam on Feb 06, 2012 22:28

I attempt to wake up...

"Oh, vatcrap, what happened?"

I look over at Lucas-R...

"Lucas, you're bleeding! Hang on, I think I've got a few first aid kits here..."

I try to take them out.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 06, 2012 23:14

I remain knocked out, blissfully unaware of what happened or why.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 06, 2012 23:24

After some brief random thoughts about barrels, seemingly unrelated to anything, I notice that the green clone here appears somewhat irritated.

"You look like you might be upset about something. Perhaps you haven't had lunch yet. If you'd like, I could get you something from the concourse."

I wander over near the door and peek out into the concourse, noting what manner of lunches the vendbots there may provide.

⁷²⁶ SPEEDER: (OOC: Oh... I see... :/ I was sure I did not shot more ☺) written by Gligar on Feb 07, 2012 02:45⁷²⁷

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks confused for a moment, before realising what just happened. Realising the potential disaster he just unleashed, he looks at the doors. Surprisingly, considering that two laser barrels just exploded near them, the doors don't seem to have been damaged all that much.

He then checks himself. It's difficult to breathe, and, as mentioned, he has broken several bones. Things don't look good. Which means that he's probably on the verge of death. And you know what that means.

But he seems to be thinking about that. He wonders if there is a way of preventing a potential Zombie Speed-Y from using his equipment. "Well cough there is that box that Jam-Y has," Lucas-R suggests.

Speaking of Jam-Y, he just woke up. Looking at Lucas-R, he notes that he is bleeding, and tries to reach his own first aid kits. It's painful, but he's able to get to them and dump them on the floor.

Azir-R remains unconscious, though it seems that he is stirring.

John-R awakes with a start. "Wh-ow! What happened?" He checks the Multicorder. "Oh no... we've lost the Multicorder! Oh wait, the barrel!" He glares at Speed-Y. "I'll be bringing this up at Debriefing, sir. You've caused me to be unable to do my job."

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O prepares to fire at the remaining zombie. But to do that, he'd have to fire through the rest of the clones, most of whom have various blunt instruments and are bashing at the thing.

Meeting room, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R notes Susan-G's irritation and suggests that she might not have had lunch yet. Ignoring the vendobots visible to one side, he heads to the room's exit, to see what the vendobots there have, only to discover that he can't view them properly from the door. "I've already eaten," Susan-G tells him. "Sit down."

She eventually gives up, and hangs up her PDC. "Looks like he's not answering. I'm sure the fine for ignoring a GREEN has already been deducted from his account... and I wouldn't be surprised if he were terminated for refusing a mission.

"So, shall we get started?"

Transition Rentals, A Level, Iota Subsector

Mick-R's PDC suddenly stops ringing. "Citizen Mick-R," Our Mutual friend announces, "you have failed to answer a call from a GREEN citizen. Please explain yourself."

⁷²⁷ Gligar: (OOC: 27!) 😊

written by Speeder on Feb 07, 2012 02:52

I look at John.

"I know, but this will also cause a massive mission failure if our equipment falls in wrong hands, John, dial to the team near Nukabot, and tell them to retrieve my equipment from the teleport box."

I turn to Jam.

"Fast, stuff my things in the box... while you do that, I will attempt to clear the way from here to our team near Nukabot."

I actually remove my jumpsuit and drop it on the ground the best I can, then I grab a single fresh YELLOW barrel, a emergency light, and turn to the stairwell.

"SPEED'S SECOND BLAZING GLORY!"

I move the fast as I can to the stairwell (opening the door again if needed), and seek the zombies that were following us, and if I find them, I try to set the barrel on fire.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 07, 2012 03:03

"Yes, we should get started."

Noticing the vendobots inside the room, I sit down on the floor in front of one, and begin examining their contents.

written by Kristos on Feb 07, 2012 04:20

I grab Cryo-R by the arm and drag him into a chair.

"You can study the vendobot after the mission is complete. Maybe. Please listen to Susan-G."

I sit and give attention, wondering at the amazing foresight Our Mutual Friend must possess to see a purpose for Cryo-R in this mission.

Aaaand... my stomach growls.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 07, 2012 05:15

Since the clones seemingly are handling the situation, I give my blaster a check over to make sure it's still in operating condition. I then give it a break from combat by putting it away.

I try to safely get closer to the zombie though, if it somehow hasn't died quite yet.

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 07, 2012 13:25⁷²⁸

If I still have any control over my body, and I'm not a zombie(I'm a little confused on this point), I attempt to look at the where the zombies walked past me.

"I'm just a recipe for disaster, aren't I?"

This is what I say in the case that I discover I am alive and fully in control of my body. If that's not the case, well, I don't suppose there is another option. Follow the zombies, perhaps?

⁷²⁸ GRANPIRE VIKING MAN: (OOC: I was away for academic reasons, catching up on late work, and got out of the habit of posting turns. I'm back now, and I apologize for any inconvenience.)

written by Jam on Feb 07, 2012 13:32 Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

I take Speed-Y's stuff, and attempt to make it fit in the box, putting it in one-by-one if I have to...

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 07, 2012 15:47

I wake up and immediately feel the pain in my arm.

"Aargh, wh-what happened. Everything hurts.."

I, using the arm that doesn't feel like pure pain, attempt to rummage through my supplies for any medication... and a B3, cause.. oww..

written by 4616599 on Feb 07, 2012 17:11

I begin shaking Mick-R, then I notice Friend Computer.

"Good daycycle, mutual friend!" Smiling, I retreat back to the counter and check on progress.

written by Gligar on Feb 07, 2012 17:51

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y is aware that John-R can't do his job now. But he's also aware that allowing a zombie to gain access to the team's equipment would cause them all to be unable to do their jobs.

He begins undressing, leaving his equipment on the floor. He pulls an "emergency light" from the wall (ow) and a YELLOW laser barrel (ow) from his pile of equipment (ow), and does his best to run back to the stairwell, yelling a battlecry.

As soon as he leaves, Jam-Y begins to cram Speed-Y's equipment (all of it, including Joris-R's old equipment) into his half of The Box. At the same time, John-R pulls out his PDC (ow), checks that it's still working (it is) and calls up L4-O.

Azir-R wakes up and wonders what happened, and why everything hurts. He (ow) roots through (ow) his stuff (ow) and finds the packet of visomorpain and a B3. Ow.

Did I mention ow?

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y continues down the stairs, but trips and ends up running into a bunch of zombies. They immediately start tearing into him, but not before he can set fire to the barrel...

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Now that he's not busy shooting, L4-O takes the time to look at his blaster and check that it's okay. It's getting hot again from the shooting, but it seems to have not been damaged. He puts it away.

That done, he goes over to have a look at the remaining zombie... well, what's left of it. Its arms and legs have already been removed. He doesn't get a better look, since his PDC chooses that exact time to ring.

And the cloningbot chooses that exact time to fire up yet again.

King-R wakes up, disoriented. It's not often that he just falls asleep while standing up. He realises that he's still alive despite the presence of zombies at the far end of the corridor, near what looks like some sort of large lift. He voices his opinion that he might be a recipe for disaster.

The zombies hear him, and turn back towards him...

From the stairwell comes the sound of an explosion.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R agrees that they should get started, and sits down.

Right in front of a vendobot. Apparently, he wants to inspect it.

Kris-R has other ideas, yanks Cryo-R to his feet before he can begin his inspection, and drags him towards a chair. Perhaps Cryo-R could begin his inspection after the mission. Perhaps.

He takes a seat himself, and begins listening to Susan-G:

"Very good. You're probably aware of the recent aborted communist takeover of the sector. It appears that they may be attempting to make a second attempt. Only this time, they seem to be attacking our supply lines to undermine our attempts to fight back."

She does something to her PDC, and an image appears on the vidscreen. "This is the laser barrel production facility in JHY Sector. Recently, it was sabotaged, though we are not yet clear as to how badly. Your mission will be to go and investigate the extent of the sabotage, and identify any possible culprits. Are there any questions so far?"

Transition Rentals, A Level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R gives up on poking and moves to shaking for a moment, before hearing out mutual friend. He lets go, greets The Computer, and goes back to his paperwork. It looks like he's almost finished.

"Greetings, Joris-R," The Computer responds. "Do you have anything that you wish to add regarding Mick-R's apparent failure to answer his PDC?"

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 07, 2012 18:40

I take the medicine and drink the B3. If I then see the medical supplies that were placed on the floor I writhe over to them and try to fix myself up as best I can (and also take more pain killers if they are available).

I also curse the fact that this is the 2nd major injury I've suffered from an exploding barrel. Correction, another clones exploding barrel.

When done, if it's in range, I try to change the barrel on my own weapon. It may be my last stand and I am not going down without a fight.

written by Kristos on Feb 07, 2012 18:48

"What equipment will we be provided to facilitate the mission?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 07, 2012 19:38

I answer my PDC.

"Hello? Who is this, I'm expecting a call from Friend Computer very soon so..."

I await a reply.

written by Speeder on Feb 07, 2012 19:46

Speed-Y-2 explodes.

Speed-Y-3 somehow is SMILING inside the cloning tank already, you know, that pleasure and pride smile.

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 07, 2012 20:10

I decide to not pull at the thing clinging on my head.

written by Gligar on Feb 07, 2012 22:20

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R takes the visomorpain and B3 before looking over at Jam-Y's medkits. He takes one and starts using it to try to patch himself up. It's difficult when you're in this much pain, though., but he can at least ease his own pain. This is the second time he's been the victim of someone else's exploding laser barrels now.

He retrieves his own weapon from where it fell and changes the barrel. Probably for the best, even though it still had three shots left... you never know.

Apparently,. L4-O has answered his PDC, since John-R says, "Hello, sir, it's John-R. Just to tell you that we're sending Speed-Y's stuff through the Box... can you check to see if it's there, and get it ready for him? He, er... went off to blow up some zombies."

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Indeed, the cloningbot is busy right now. If there were a window on the thing, I could probably tell you that there is a smiling clone inside... but as it is, I can't. It'll probably open in a few moments, anyway.

Meanwhile, Mango has decided to stop trying to get away from the zombie that is grabbing him... even though said zombie has ceased functioning. There are now four clones trying to remove the unmoving hands from the sides of Mango's head... it's probably very unpleasant given what he's been through.

But hey... at least the medkit is now within reach.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Kris-R asks about equipment. "I'm expecting a deliverybot any secondcycle with your mission's equipment, Kris-R. I'm not at liberty to discuss equipment until it arrives.

"You'll also need to choose a Mandatory Bonus Duty each. There is an additional box of equipment for each duty. Meaning that we'll have one left over, since someone hasn't turned up."

written by Cryoburner on Feb 07, 2012 22:39

"Yes, yes. Very true, very true."

I watch the green clone, appearing extremely attentive, while slowly inching my chair in the direction of the vendobots.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 07, 2012 22:41

"Oh, thanks for the heads up. That must be him decloning here now. Hope he got a lot of them."

"I can't check the box right away, I sent Nukabot off to make sure those clones wouldn't try to steal it. But now that we're holding the garage, I guess I can ask Nukabot to come back. It's just nearby."

If that's all, I take the opportunity to fire off a quick message to Nukabot.

The Garage is secure right now, you can come back.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 07, 2012 23:55

I prepare to shoot down any zombies that I see, headshots preferred, if they are coming my way.

If there's time, I get out my PDC and check to see if it's still functioning.

written by Gligar on Feb 08, 2012 02:09

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R responds... but is it my imagination, or is he not actually paying attention? Instead, he seems to be trying to edge his chair towards the vendobots.

Susan-G doesn't seem to have noticed, probably because a deliverybot just entered. "I have a delivery for Team Sigma," it announces.

"Ah, excellent," Susan-G replies. "That's you guys," she adds to Kris-R and Cryo-R. "For this mission, you will be designated Team Sigma. Now, please choose your Mandatory Bonus Duty."

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O thanks John-R. He guesses that Speed-Y is recloning right now, and adds that he'll need to call Nukabot back to check the Box, since he sent it to hide.

The cloningbot opens up, revealing that it was indeed cloning Speed-Y.

John-R thanks L4-O, and hangs up, allowing L4-O to send a message to Nukabot.

Corridor 1, Level 3, building 2, Industrial Subsector B

John-R reports to the team. "L4-O says that Speed-Y is probably recloning right now. He'll check Nukabot when it returns, since he sent it away to protect it."

Now that he's feeling a bit better, Azir-R gets ready to shoot more zombies. He also takes the time to check his PDC, which seems to be working, though the battery casing has worked its way loose.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 08, 2012 02:19

That might cause problems..

I try and force the battery casing back in place if possible... though if it feels like my actions are going to cause further damage I'll just treat it with care.

I focus my attention on my surroundings.

written by Jam on Feb 08, 2012 03:17

I try to stand up, and survey the area for any more zombies to burn...

I also take out my Mk.II Indestructible Loyalty Transcript Recorder, and prepare to make a note.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 08, 2012 04:23

I put my PDC away, but remain ready to answer in case our Mutual Friend contacts me again.

I take the momentary breather to check all the exits to the garage, and see if there are any zombies or other clones potentially incoming.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 08, 2012 05:08

"Yes, that sounds excellent. Very excellent."

I continue slowly sliding my chair closer to vendobots. While doing so, I glance over at them to see what products they contain, before returning my attention to the Green clone, perhaps even more attentively than before.

written by Speeder on Feb 08, 2012 12:18

I step out of the tank with a pleased face, I cough a little, and then I stretch my arms, my legs (both existing and not broken!), and check if all my muscles are there and working.

"Good to feel whole again! Although I liked my cyborg foot..."

I wonder how many zombies I killed!"

I look where I am, and then I see L4 and people armed with spanners and whatnot, this make me look for a screwdriver, a tube slightly larger than its handle, and tape, so I can make Speeder's Spear 2.0⁷²⁹

written by Gligar on Feb 08, 2012 17:36

Corridor 1, Level 3, building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R seems troubled by his PDC's battery casing, and tries to fix it. It seems to have warped slightly, bet he's able to get it back on.

For a moment.

Then it pops back again.

⁷²⁹ CRYOBURNER: (Unfortunately, you were miscloned, and have no muscles in your arms or legs.)

Pocketing the device again, he starts being alert. He notices Lucas-R looking at one of his alertness devices... probably one of the Insta-Inflatable Targets.

Jam-Y manages to pull himself to his feet by bracing himself against the wall. Once there, he looks around, but finds the corridor devoid of zombies. Perhaps looking a little disappointed, he pulls out a piece of his own equipment: the Loyalty Transcripts Recorder. He'll be pleased to know that the casing is undamaged. (Well, it is called indestructible.) He opens it with the supplied key to find a small tape recorder.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O takes a look around. Hey, Speed-Y's up and around. He seems pleased to have both legs again.

Turning his attention to the doors, L4-O notices that the coast seems clear for the moment. Both the outer door and the inner one. Well, unless you count Nukabot, which is trundling in through the outer door, covered in soot and comnode-knows-what.

Speed-Y does a few exercises, checking to see if his body is up to scratch. Hmmm... yes, all muscles seem to be working as far as he can tell. That done, he looks around, noticing the other bots - the hygienebot, the bot with the jumpsuits, Leeroy, and Nukabot. He also notices that everyone seems to be armed with some sort of tool, and that the reason for that is evident: zombie remains everywhere (including parts on one still clinging to Mango's head). Feeling a little left out, he looks for a screwdriver or something. There's one over here, as well as some other stuff...

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R again shows that he's not really listening, and again tries to edge closer to the vendobots.

This time, Susan-G notices. "Hey, Cryo-R!" Are you even listening? Or did you want to inspect the B3 vendobots? I'm sure you'll get ample opportunity to do so after the mission. Right now, I need you to choose a Mandatory Bonus Duty."

written by 4616599 on Feb 08, 2012 18:04

"Well, he was standing there for quite some time. However, I have noticed many clones, myself included, going into odd dazes at times. I cannot possibly think of why this would happen."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 08, 2012 19:30

"Over here, sir." I direct Speed-Y's attention to Nukabot.

Once Nukabot stops, I get to examining the Quantum box to see if his stuff went through all right. If so, I hand it to him, unless he starts getting it himself.

If I find (or recognize) the ME card reader, I take it, lower my voice, and say:

"Oh hey. I needed one of these, I have a list of ID codes that need to be scanned. We need to know who has been going in that power room..."

written by Speeder on Feb 08, 2012 19:34

After I finish the spear, I go grab my stuff.

"Hey L4, you found anything on the power room? The Power Services tried to fix it?"

I wonder how tattered is the old YELLOW jumpsuit, and I check if there are any new YELLOW jumpsuit available.

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 08, 2012 20:12

I reach for the medkit.

It feels odd, having hands on your head...

written by Kristos on Feb 08, 2012 20:15

I look to see what the Mandatory Bonus Duties are.

written by Gligar on Feb 08, 2012 22:19

Transition Rentals, A Level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R explains that Mick-R has been standing like that for a while now. He's noticed this from time to time, where clones will just... zone out for whatever reason.

The Computer replies, "I see. Do you have any ideas why this might be?"

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O points Speed-Y over to Nukabot, and goes over there himself, to check if Speed-Y's equipment is there. As it happens, it is, so he starts passing that over. As he does, he finds the FINANCIAL OFFICER box in amongst Joris-R's stuff. Inside it, he finds the ME Card scanner, and takes it. It looks like it needs to interface with something to be useful, though.

Speed-Y finishes up making a new version of his Spear and grabs his equipment from L4-O. He inquires about what L4-O found in the power room while he checks his old jumpsuit. It's kind of damaged and tattered from the explosions. Looking over at the jumpsuit bot, he sees a single YELLOW one.

He then realises that he's still covered in tank goo.

Mango grabs the medkit. He still has those hands on his head, something he should probably correct. Since they're not really attached to anything any more other than some severed arms, it should probably be easier.

Meeting Hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Kris-R goes over to the deliverybot and has a look at the MBD boxes. It seems that it has delivered boxes for a TEAM LEADER, a LOYALTY OFFICER and a HYGIENE OFFICER.

written by Speeder on Feb 08, 2012 22:28

I notice I am dripping goo everywhere.

"Humm... I think the hygiene officer might be unhappy."

I go use the hygiene bot, after placing all my stuff somewhere nice, like a table or something near Nukabot.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 08, 2012 23:23

"The PowServ team was engaging in repairs. Turns out it was sabotage. I have the list of clones who have been in that room right here, but don't quite know how to extract the data."

I look at both the list and the reader, and puzzle over it for a few seconds.

"They tried to repair it, then came the beeping. Then came the gas. We ran for the exit but it looks like I was the only one that made it... You can ask them for more specifics, they're here with us."

I point in the direction of the PowServ clones.

written by Jam on Feb 08, 2012 23:43

I try to start the recorder recording...

"Speed-Y managed to blow up his laser pistol barrel, causing serious injury to the team, and lowering the happiness of the team considerably... He also self-terminated, though that was because he was near death and had a theory that nanobots would infect him and take control of his body. I would suggest that is treasonous thinking, but since we seem to be surrounded by a small army of zombies, it seems to be the most likely explanation."

I stop the recording, and seal the recorder back up in it's case. Then I realize I never heard Speed-Y explode, and carefully check on him, while keeping as much of my body shielded as possible.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 08, 2012 23:50

"Oh, don't worry! You have my full and undivided attention. I think my chair may be sliding though."

I take a moment to note how far my chair has slid, and slide it back and forth a few times in place to test whether its friction levels are optimal.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 09, 2012 01:40

I cover Jam as he investigates.

written by Gligar on Feb 09, 2012 02:23

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y decides to do something about his gooiness. He doesn't want to incur the wrath of the Hygiene Officer, after all. (Where is he, anyway? Oh yes.) Specifically, he places his equipment, Spear 2.0 and all, on a small table near Nukabot, and goes to use the hygienebot.

