While he's doing that, L4-O elaborates about what happened in the power room. He mentions that he has a list of clones who accessed the room recently, but it's in a form he can't decipher. He takes a moment to look at it, and at the scanner. It's designed for ME Cards, but perhaps...?

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y starts up the recorder and dictates a note. Then, stopping the recorder and stowing it again, he realises that he didn't actually hear Speed-Y exploding, and decides to investigate. Azir-R covers him.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y peers down the stairs.

There is considerable damage to the stairwell around Level 2, though it might be possible to navigate between the broken masonry and splattered body parts, most of which are difficult to recognise.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R claims that the chair moved on its own. "These chairs don't move on their own... wait. Did you seriously give a Junior Citizen answer to that question?" Susan-G asks, and sighs. "I could hear the chair moving. And I wouldn't call a loud screech a slide. Alright, fine. Since you seem to want a B3, I'll buy you one of you go over to your friend and pick a Mandatory Bonus Duty with him. I'll send you the tab later."

Cryo-R checks the chair. It does indeed make a loud noise when he scrapes it across the floor. He must not have noticed in his attempt to get to the vendobots. But he only managed to move it something like 40cm anyway...

written by Jam on Feb 09, 2012 03:21

"Okay, he definitely exploded..."

I walk back to the others, and decide to check how injured I am...

"Lucas-R, how is everyone doing? What damage did Speed-Y cause with that barrel?"

written by Speeder on Feb 09, 2012 03:46

I see if the bot finish fast, since I have matters to attend... But I try to talk any time is possible (like before putting on appropriate face equipment or face-reaching fluids, and after that).

"Alright, this bothers me, it makes me know some things, but also create questions, like, why trigger the gas with the power room? Or if that was their intention, the sabotage intention was cripple the power, create a trap so we tripped the gas, or they never finished a automated trigger? What they needed to wait for to just not gas the building when they could?"

I look thoughtful all the time I cannot speak, also I give several glances at the ME-card reader, like if trying to figure a way to abuse it to read manual numbers.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 09, 2012 04:47

I don't have far to go, but "return" with Jam.

"So, with Speed-Y gone, we need someone senior to direct the team."

"What's our next move?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 09, 2012 06:57

I assist Speed-Y in figuring out how to extract some useful information from the paper.

"Oh right. I remember that I was told to look at the sector codes. There's a few familiar sectors here, lining up with people from our team or that we know. But I'd have to scan their ME cards with this to confirm... and it's going to be kind of difficult to get everyone together. I don't think anyone from our team has even been here so it's probably a coincidence."

"There must be something else we can do with this list. If we could just compile it backwards we can find out who's been there that way..."

As a test, I try to give my own ME card a scan, then check it against the list.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 09, 2012 15:10

"Oh, wow! I could sure use a B3. I could put it next to my other B3, in case I happen to need two B3s at once for some reason."

I get up, and slide my chair back to its original position. I then head over to the boxes, and proceed to shake each of them a few times in an attempt to ascertain their contents. Or at least, what their contents sound like.

written by Gligar on Feb 09, 2012 17:40

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y and Azir-R return to the team. Jam-Y asks for a status report.

"That explosion seems to have caused injuries to almost everyone, sir, and destroys John-R's Multicorder. As for the rest, I don't know."

Azir-R states that, since Speed-Y isn't with them any more, they need someone to lead them. Does Jam-Y have any ideas about what to do next?

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While the bot attends to him, Speed-Y continues talking. He has a few questions... for instance, why was the gas hooked up to the power? Was it as a trap, to make the repair team (and, by extension, them) trigger it? Or perhaps they had intended an automated trigger which didn't get installed?

He also glances at the ME Card reader. It seems to have been designed to connect to something, since, by itself, it doesn't have any sort of readout. Hmm... it's part of the Financial Officer's kit, so...?

L4-O adds that ME Card numbers include a sector code. His list includes sever codes he knows from their team or other people, but he'd need to scan their ME Cards. And that would be difficult.

As a test, he tries to scan his own ME Card. The scanner beeps, but, as mentioned, there is no readout, so it can't display anything. If he had something connected to it, then perhaps he could get a readout...

Meeting Hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R decides to comply, and returns his chair to where it was before heading over.

Once there, he gives each of the boxes a shake. "That will not be of use," the deliverybot tells him, "due to the Packy-Foam used to fill in any gaps in the boxes. There is nowhere for the contents to move to make any noise."

written by Speeder on Feb 09, 2012 17:47

After the bot allows me to speak again I say.

"Hey L4, see on our belongings if we can fit that scanner to something there, fi not, try to attach it to my PDC, being a YELLOW PDC it might have the needed port to interface with that scanner, maybe even a two-way port, so we can also input data on it."

I am obviously in a hurry to get the hygiene done so I can do things, you know, stuff.

written by 4616599 on Feb 09, 2012 17:53

"Odd. I just zoned out myself. I think it's like Communist interference, but I wouldn't be sure. It's almost like there's another clone somewhere controlling my body!"

I laugh.

"I'm really not being very useful, am I? I don't even have my mission equipment currently..."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 09, 2012 19:33

"Oh. Um. Right. That'd be smarter."

I search the Financial Officer items for a screen or something that goes with this reader. If I find it, I attach it and try my ME card again.

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 09, 2012 19:40

I attempt to gently pry the hands off my head. I don't force it too hard, if possible.

Regardless of the outcome, I open up the medkit, seeing what I can do about that wound...

written by Kristos on Feb 09, 2012 19:46

"Team Sigma..."

Smiling, I grab the box for the HYGIENE OFFICER...

...and hand it to Cryo-R. Then I take the box for TEAM LEADER...

...even if Cryo-R is holding it.

written by Jam on Feb 09, 2012 22:08

"I guess we should try to get inside the dormitory, now that the zombies around it have been taken care of. But let's get everyclone's injuries treated first..."

I examine Azir-R, and try to figure out where he's injured, and how badly.

written by Gligar on Feb 09, 2012 22:34

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As the hygienebot finishes its work, Speed-Y suggests that L4-O find something to attach to the ME Card reader. He adds that is there is nothing else, they can use Speed-Y's PDC, as it's higher clearance and probably has the right connector.

L4-O rather sheepishly agrees, and searches through the Financial Officer kit to see if he can find something. He eventually finds Joris-R's old PDC (which seems to have the correct data port) and a memory card, marked as having a "Financial Analysis" app.

He connects the PDC and tries to scan his card again. But the PDC seems to be having problems... something about missing drivers.

Meanwhile, Mango is trying to remove those hands from his head. It's difficult, since they refuse to appreciably move, but he's able to wrench them off. That done, he sets about patching himself up with the medkit.

Transition Rentals, A Level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R says that it is possible that Communist interference might be involved. Though he isn't sure... for all he knows, he could be controlled by someone else...

He realises that he probably isn't being very useful. After all, he doesn't even have his equipment with him.

As he's saying that, a Transition floats into the office.

The Computer replies, "You may be more helpful than you realise. Communist interference sounds likely, though we cannot rule out the possibility of external control. Thank you for your co-operation, citizen."

The Computer falls silent.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

With Cryo-R doing everything but what he was told, it falls to Kris-R to decide on MBDs. He grabs the HYGIENE OFFICER box, and hands it to Cryo-R, before claiming the TEAM LEADER box for himself.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y suggests that they attempt to enter the dormitory. But not before seeing to everyone's injuries.

He has a look at Azir-R. He has a broken arm, though it doesn't seem to be hurting him.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 10, 2012 01:55

I frown and try to troubleshoot the problem... not in the Troubleshooter way of "troubleshooting", anyway.

If that doesn't work, I see if I can see Speed-Y's PDC and if it has the right port.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 10, 2012 02:12

I pick up the LOYALTY OFFICER box as well.

"Maybe we should take both. Hygiene is important and all, but being loyal is probably important too. What if a member of the team, let's say Kris-R, were to become unloyal? Having a clean traitor around might be better than a dirty traitor, but it would probably be better to not have any traitors at all."

written by Gligar on Feb 10, 2012 02:26

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O tries to figure out the problem. He's eventually able to discover that the PDC needs additional software to be able to use the ME Card scanner. Of course, the only additional software he has is the "Financial Analysis" app. Well, the two did come together...

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R tries to take the LOYALTY OFFICER box as well, reasoning that hygiene and loyalty are of equal importance. Susan-G has something to say about that. "That's probably a good idea. There's a problem with it, though: Our Mutual Friend says that you're only allowed to have one MBD, so I'm afraid you're going to have to choose. Which would you prefer, Loyalty Officer or Hygiene Officer?"

"I'm fine with Kris-R taking the Team Leader duty, though. Don't forget to take the general equipment box."

written by Kristos on Feb 10, 2012 05:13

I grab a general equipment box as well, (casually) noting the size and material of the boxes, wondering what wonderful mission-aiding items might reside therein.

"Thank you, Susan-G. Is there any further briefing?"

Then I wait for Cryo-R to make his momentous decision.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 10, 2012 06:14

I try fiddling with the software and the scanner some more. And seeing if it now somehow works.

If all else fails, I see if there's possibly extra software I can obtain via download.

written by Speeder on Feb 10, 2012 11:07

After I am free from the hygiene station I go fetch a new jumpsuit, but when I reach the rack, I look back at my old jumpsuit.

"For some reason, that tattered jumpsuit look... better... like if it has a history, remembrance."

I do not even get a YELLOW jumpsuit, I just stroll back to my things, and wear the old jumpsuit again... I leave Joris stuff though...

Also I try to figure how to attach the spear to my back again.

written by Jam on Feb 10, 2012 13:32

I try to figure out if I know how to treat Azir-R, and if I have the right equipment...

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 10, 2012 14:39

While Jam is looking into my injuries I try and be as helpful as possible. Three limbs is manageable but two is pretty rough.

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 10, 2012 15:40

I run towards the stairwell where I heard the explosion a few moments ago. If the zombies are in my path, I try to fire a way through a few of them to head up the stairs.

written by Gligar on Feb 10, 2012 17:52

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Kris-R grabs the general equipment box, and also gives it as brief inspection. Nothing too intense, though, just enough to determine that it's a large cardboard box, same as the others, filled with Packy-Foam and whatever equipment the Packy-Foam is supporting. He can't wait to find out what the equipment is.

In the meantime, he asks Susan-G if there is anything else to the briefing. "Yes, there is," she replies. "Though we are uncertain as to the extent of the sabotage, it is believed that recent shipments of laser barrels may be faulty. The two may be related. Maintain vigilance during the mission.

"But before you reach the factory... there is one other thing. JHY Sector R&D have informed us that they have a device that may be of assistance. They have asked you to report to them to pick it up, use it during the mission, and report on its effectiveness. No further information is available regarding the device.

"Are there any further questions?"

Cryo-R has still not chosen his Mandatory Bonus Duty.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O fiddles with the Financial Analysis app, seeing if he can use it to get the ME Card scanner working. Aha! There we go. It looks like many of the functions are restricted due to it being used on Joris-R's old PDC, but he's able to get it to read his ME Card and display his name, as well as his credit balance (850.4).

Meanwhile, Speed-Y has finished with the hygienebot, and is ready to get dressed again. However, he decides not to get a fresh jumpsuit, reasoning that his old one has some history behind it. He also leaves Joris-R's equipment behind to save having to carry it.

That just leaves the problem of how to carry his new spear... perhaps he could strap it to his back or something? But he'd need straps for that... hmmm... will those tie-downs over there work, he wonders...

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y begins tending to Azir-R. He's helped by Azir-R himself, who decides that it's better to co-operate and get three working limbs than to not co-operate and have to put up with two. There is enough material to make a splint, so Jam-Y sets about doing that.

From the stairwell comes the sound of someone approaching fast.

Stairwell, near LLevel 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As it happens, it's King-R, who is trying not to look at the mess caused by the earlier explosion.

written by Speeder on Feb 10, 2012 18:00

After some consideration I see if I can make a way to use the tie-downs and other objects around the garage to make some straps that I can easily snap the spear on them or remove...

If I cannot make the snapping part, I just make a sliding version then, although that is not fast for combat...

I turn to L4.

"So, there are a function there to manually input a ME number?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 10, 2012 19:17

"I don't know yet. But at least we can read ME cards now."

I start checking for a way of inputting ME numbers manually to retrieve data.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 10, 2012 19:31

"Well, here's someone who certainly dodged this bullet, so to speak."

With my good hand, I motion to the carnage.

written by Gligar on Feb 10, 2012 22:59

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y works, making himself a place to put his spear... hmm... it looks like an E-Z-Snap fitting is out of the question, so a sliding sheath will have to do.

That done, he turns his attention the the ME Card scanner. Does it have an option to manually input an ME Card number?

L4-O doesn't know, but is happy that he got the scanner working. He looks to see if he can find such an option. And would you look at that? There is such an option!

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As King-R reaches the still-open door to Level 3, Azir-R notices, and announces that King-R dodged a figurative bullet here.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 11, 2012 00:13

"Hm. This could take a while... might need to do this when we're somewhere safer."

As a test, I manually input the DOF codes.

If it works, I state the two names.

written by Speeder on Feb 11, 2012 00:19

I smile and say.

"Ok, go for it, attempt to input the ME card from your list that come from my sector for example."

written by Gligar on Feb 11, 2012 02:24

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O decides to give the manual input a test. Running the rest through the app will take time, and will probably have to wait until they're in a safer place.

He starts with the DOF codes. (While he's doing that, Speed-Y suggests that he test it with Speed-Y's sector. Which is DOF. Go figure.) The app returns with the names Jeb-O-DOF-2 (415 cr) and Ran-R-DOF-4 (87 cr).

written by Speeder on Feb 11, 2012 03:17

"Your list has someone of very high clearance? I wonder what happen when you input that, I do not suppose a RED financial officer is supposed to see the balance of any BLUE, INDIGO, VIOLET or ULTRAVIOLET citizen..."

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 11, 2012 06:01

Looking around at the destruction, I grimace.

"Who did this? Where are the rest of the team?"

"And are you sure you're treating that wound with proper hygiene? Maybe I should go get some cleaning materials from Nukabot?"

I take a closer look at Azir-R's hygiene situation.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 11, 2012 06:35

"Looks like the DOF clones are nobody we really know. Jeb-O and Ran-R. So that confirms you haven't been in the power room anytime recently."

I listen to Speed-Y's concerns.

"Hrm. Good question. And I don't know if anyone on this list has high clearance or not."

I check the list again to see if it's in there in some recognizable form, then shrug and reply back,

"Might be a risk we'll have to take. If we find a very high clearance clone has been in that power room, the treason from looking up his data should be massively outweighed if that clone happens to be the traitorous one in the first place!"

I give the reader one more test, this time with a known(?) ID.

I input the QKW into the reader and check the result.

written by Jam on Feb 11, 2012 16:05

I continue tending to Azir-R, though I also take a secondcycle to say hello to King-R.

written by Gligar on Feb 11, 2012 16:43

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y asks if the list contains any IDs of citizens of high clearance? He guesses that a RED Financial Officer is not exactly supposed to see the credit balance of someone of such high clearance.

L4-O reports that the DOF clones aren't anyone they know. Which lets Speed-Y off the hook, at least. As for the possible clearance problem, he can't really tell. He's not sure whether the IDs can visibly tell him. He has a look, but it seems that there is no visible indication. He'll just have to chance it. If there is such a clone on the list, then hopefully the treason of accessing his data will be outweighed by that of sabotaging the power room.

He gives the reader one more test: the QKW ID. Sure enough, it returns L4-O's data again.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Industrial Subsector B

King-R looks around at the remains of the carnage, and demands to know what happened, and who started it.

He also demands to know whether Jam-Y is observing proper hygiene protocols while treating Azir-R. He suggests that they obtain proper supplies from Nukabot, and has a look himself. It seems that Azir-R is kind of dirty, actually, though Jam-Y is doing his best to clean him up.

Jam-Y looks up from his work to say hi.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 11, 2012 20:55

"I wonder when Friend Computer is going to report back. I told Friend Computer about how the situation escalated here... Code Three-Zed. Friend Computer hasn't replied back though..."

I check my PDC, but if there's nothing yet, I put it away.

I put the reader and the list safely in my backpack for now, to use later.

written by Gligar on Feb 11, 2012 22:11

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O wonders when Friend Computer is going to get back to him regarding his last call... he reported the current situation as a Code 3-Zed. Ah well, it's generally not a good idea to rush these things.

He checks his PDC. Seeing that there is still no reply, he puts it away, and also pockets the scanner and the list for later use.

So... what next?

His PDC ringing, that's what!

written by Cryoburner on Feb 12, 2012 00:40

After staring at the boxes for a few (brief?) moments, I respond...

"How about I take the loyalty one, and the delivery bot takes the hygiene one? That seems about fair, as he looks like a pretty clean guy."

I hand the HYGIENE OFFICER box to the delivery bot if he's still here.

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 12, 2012 00:42

I take it slow with the patching self up situation, making sure that all injuries have been sufficiently treated.

written by Gligar on Feb 12, 2012 02:29

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R seems to have finally made his decision. He takes the LOYALTY OFFICER box for himself and gives the HYGIENE OFFICER box back to the deliverybot.

Susan-G smiles. "Thank you, Cryo-R. Now that's settled, we can get back to the briefing proper."

The deliverybot says, "If I am no longer required, I will return this box to PLC."

"That sounds like a good idea, deliverybot, since it seems that the box is no longer required."

"Very well." The deliverybot rolls out of the door, muttering something about needing maintenance on its treads.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O's PDC continues to ring.

Mango ignores it and concentrates on fixing his own injuries. Problem is, he seems to have used up the medkit in doing so. He'll have to put up with a few unpatched cuts.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 12, 2012 02:34

I answer my PDC.

"Hello? Friend Computer?"

I await a reply.

written by Speeder on Feb 12, 2012 12:27

I look puzzled with L4 using a PDC to talk with Friend Computer.

I start to mutter something about terminals and cameras, then I turn my attention to see what everyone is doing.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 12, 2012 14:17

I wait patiently for Jam to complete his work.

written by Jam on Feb 12, 2012 14:26

I also wait patiently for Jam to complete his work.

Oh wait, what am I doing staring off into space? Uh, er, where was I? Oh right, tie this, bandage that...

written by Gligar on Feb 12, 2012 17:18

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O answers his PDC. As he has guessed, it is Friend Computer on the line. Speed-Y looks on, amused that L4-O would use a PDC to contact Our Mutual Friend instead of, say, a terminal or a camera.

Our Friend is saying, "Greetings, citizen! You will be pleased to learn that, due to the Code 3-Zed situation, the Industrial Subsectors are now under lockdown.

No clone may enter or leave on pain of termination by the Armed Forces units who are currently en-route to surround the Subsectors. The lockdown will be lifted when the Code 3-Zed situation has been resolved. Thank you for your co-operation."

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R waits for Jam-Y to finish his work.

But Jam-Y seems to have zoned out for a moment. He snaps out of it and finishes up with ther last bandage... there we go.

Around Industrial Subsectors A and B

Our Mutual Friend makes an announcement. "Attention, citizens! A Code 3-Zed situation is currently in progress. The exact details are beyond your security clearance. Please remain calm, and do not attempt to leave the Industrial Subsectors. Please co-operate with any Troubleshooter, Power Services, and Armed Forces personnel present, and above all, remain calm. There is nothing to worry about. Thank you for your co-operation."

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Susan-G continues. "You'll be travelling by transbot todaycycle. The designated station is past Kappa Subsector, down the roadway. You'll need some form of transport to get there, though. I'll leave the details of that to you.

"Remember that you'll need tickets to use the TransTube, as well as the authorisation papers I have here.

"I think that covers everything. Are there any more questions?"

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 12, 2012 19:39

I decide to look around, taking in the sight of whoever happens to be in the same room right now.

Hmm...

written by Lightning4 on Feb 12, 2012 20:27

I smile and put my PDC away.

"Well, whatever works, you know? I wonder where my squad is going to be."

Anticipating some reaction by clones inside I ready my blaster again and start watching the door that leads deeper into this building.

written by Gligar on Feb 12, 2012 21:41

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango has a look around at who is currently here.

He can see L4-O, arguing that it doesn't matter how he contacted The Computer, since it worked, right? He wonders where his squad will be as he puts away his PDC, exchanging it for his blaster.

Some of the clones from the cafeteria, or probably their clones, begin speaking. "Armed Forces? Why would they be here?" "Maybe it's too much for the Trou - " "Shhh! Do you really want them to fine you? Or worse?"

Joe doesn't take part in the conversation. Clones seem to be shunning him now that he's outed himself as a mutant. And he doesn't look too happy about it.

Another group - the PowServ team, or what's left of it - are also in conversation, saying something that Mango can't quite hear. The cloningbot spits out another clone, who notices them and says hi.

And then there's the large group approaching from outside the outer door...

written by Lightning4 on Feb 12, 2012 22:09

Seeing that there's nothing going on at the interior door, I wheel about and see the incoming clones.

I try to determine if they're in fact Armed Forces, or if there's something else to worry about now.

written by Jam on Feb 13, 2012 01:04

I check for any other injured clones, and set to work patching them up as best I can...

written by Gligar on Feb 13, 2012 02:19

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Since the inner door is clear, L4-O turns to look at the outer door.

A group of twelve clones is approaching: three RED, the others INFRARED. They don't appear to be Armed Forces, but they do have the general appearance of living clones. Ones who are distinctly unhappy about something. As they approach, they notice the assembled clones and attempt to put on smiles.

Corridor 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y looks for other injured clones. There are definitely a few of those around. Take John-R, for instance. He has multiple fractures, and... he seems to have passed out again.

There's also Lucas-R, who seems to be fighting to stay awake, as well as also having multiple fractures.

Jam-Y starts on John-R...

written by Lightning4 on Feb 13, 2012 04:11

"Wonder what those guys are about..."

I continue to watch the group as they approach.

"Hello... you don't look like Armed Forces..."

written by Kristos on Feb 13, 2012 05:40

"I have no more questions. Thank you, Susan-G."

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 13, 2012 12:53

While Jam works, I keep alert for impending trouble.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 13, 2012 13:02

I take the authorization papers, and look them over.

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 13, 2012 13:15

"Hi Jam-Y."

I stand around awkwardly for a few moments, then decide to leave.

"I'm going to fetch a few supplies from Nukabot. There should be some medical supplies there, at least. If not, well, I can at least clean some wounds. Cleanliness is mandatory, you know."

I head cautiously in the direction of the garage, keeping a wary eye out for zombies, pistols at the ready.

Just to be sure, I check which one of my weapons is missing a shot.

written by Speeder on Feb 13, 2012 14:47

I smile happily.

"L4, that was great, you solved our problem in keeping the zombies in, and preventing more people from being zombified in a great way! I will leave you here for a while, and will check if the other half of the team is still alive where I died, I guess I will be able to reach there kinda easily if my unconventional use of ammo and lighting apparatus worked."

I take the spear in my hands, since I will not waste ammo on things that refuse to die, and start to walk toward where I did that mistake with the laser pistol.

written by Gligar on Feb 13, 2012 17:08

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O wonders about the approaching clones. He greets them, and notes that they don't seem to be Armed Forces.

"That's because we aren't," one of the REDs replies. "We're what's left of Work Shift Four from Building 3. Er... things are bad over there... first, there's the gas, then, lots of people die, then, they get up and... ugh. I don't want to think about it... and now... we're in lockdown. Do you know anything else, sir?"

Speed-Y seems pleased with L4-O's work, and decides to go check up on the rest of the team.

The RED looks shocked. "What... zombies? Does that mean that... no! It can't be!" But Speed-Y ignores him, and heads out.

Corridor 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y heads towards the foyer. He can hear zombie-like sounds from some of the rooms, but if that's what's in there, they don't seem to have figured out what door handles are for yet. Though it does sound like they're trying to bash the door down from the inside of one room...

He shudders and moves on.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R keeps an eye out for trouble. But it looks clear for the moment... no wait, there are sounds from one of the dormitories... the door opens a little...

King-R stands around awkwardly for a moment. He doesn't seem to have noticed the medkits Jam-Y is using to patch up the team, so he decides to go back to Nukabot to get some. Before anyone can react, he heads back downstairs.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

He heads back downstairs. As he passes Level 2, he becomes aware that something is approaching from behind the door. He tries to ignore it, and press on.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

He re-enters the corridor. The place looks a mess, though no better or worse than before.

He can hear something approaching from the vicinity of the foyer.

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y makes a cautious entrance from his corridor. There are even more zombie sounds from the vicinity of the power room, and something seems to be approaching from Corridor 3, but the foyer itself is clear.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Kris-R states that he has no questions, and thanks Susan-G.

Cryo-R takes the travel papers and looks through them. They permit Team Sigma to travel from JHT Sector to JHY Sector via transbot. Estimated departure time is 14:00, to arrive around 14:20.

Susan-G suddenly remembers something. "Oh yes! I offered you a B3. Hold on a secondcycle."

She heads over to one of the vendobots and swipes her ME Card, causing it to dispense two cans. "Here you are. Now... what was that code to shift the payment again? Oh yes..."

Transition Rentals, A Level, Iota Subsector

The salesclone heads over to Joris-R. "Citizen? You Transition is waiting. Is there anything else you wanted?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 13, 2012 19:13

I nod and point back at the RED.

"If you really must know, yep. Zombies. Zombies everywhere. You had better stay with us until the rest of the Armed Forces get here..."

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 13, 2012 19:56

I sit down somewhere where I'm not exerting myself heavily. A few cuts and stuff having to remain untreated, I don't mind so much about those compared to the main one.

written by Speeder on Feb 13, 2012 20:33

I ready my spear and wait for whatever is coming... Hoping zombies will not show up from the Power Room.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 13, 2012 21:46

"Wow! Thanks! If I ever need something from a vendobot, and don't know how to use the vendobot, or can't find a vendobot, or have lost both of my arms in a horrible vendobot accident, I'll be sure to call you. Say, did I ever get your number?"

written by Gligar on Feb 13, 2012 22:01

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O confirms to the RED that, yes, zombies are involved. Lots of them. He suggests that Work Shift Four should stick with them until the Armed Forces get here.

Mango sits on a nearby metal box and just tries to stay out of the way.

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y readies his spear. It's not worth wasting ammo on zombies, he reasons.

A clone enters the foyer from Corridor 3, cautiously. It's King-R.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R thanks Susan-G and expresses his wish to call her if he has any vendobot-related problems. "Er... what? Can't you use a vendobot yourself? Do you even realise what you're saying? Why would a GREEN citizen give out her PDC number to a RED clone for menial tasks?" She hands over the B3s. "Now, I suggest that you get started with traveling to your mission. You don't have much time, and you wouldn't want to keep Friend Computer waiting, would you?"

written by Speeder on Feb 13, 2012 22:03

"Halt zombie! The last I saw King-R he was acting like a zombie in the first level!"

I point the spear on his direction and wait for him to shamble into it.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 13, 2012 22:45

"And if you can grab anything handy that could be good for beating a zombie, do so. As you can see, some of the other clones present here are already armed... but I'm sure there's still things here and there."

"Hopefully it won't be necessary."

I look out of the building again, to see if anyone else is coming yet.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 13, 2012 23:15

I watch the door with keen interest.

written by Kristos on Feb 13, 2012 23:20

"At once! Come on, Cryo-R. There might be a spare LIGHT or KEY in JHY sector!"

I leave the room and head back down the hall.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 14, 2012 01:36

"Ah, I see your point. Well, I can just stop by here if I need help with vendobots then. Thanks!"

I take the B3s and stow them in my stylish backpack, so long as it didn't disappear or anything.

"Well, let's go!"

I head out into the concourse, where I take a moment to quickly examine the vendobots there, making special note of their contents.

written by Gligar on Feb 14, 2012 02:31

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y yells at King-R to halt, thinking him a zombie. After all, the last time Speed-Y saw him, he was sort of acting like one.

He puts out his spear, waiting for King-R to just shamble into it. King-R probably doesn't want to do that.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O suggests that Work Shift Four arms themselves with whatever's in the garage, as some of the clones have done. Hopefully, though, they won't need it, but you never know.

He looks outside again, half-expecting for someone else to be following. He can hear some kind of noise from outside, but it's unclear what it is.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While Jam-Y continues to work, Azir-R watches the door. It opens a little wider. "Hello?" a young-sounding voice calls out. "Is there someone there? Someone who isn't a commie or a zombie?"

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Kris-R agrees, and suggests to Cryo-R that they might want to head over to JHY Sector, adding that there might be lights or keys there. Without waiting for Cryo-R, he exits the meeting hall, heading back down Corridor C1.

But Cryo-R does follow him, after saying that he could just return to the meeting hall if he needs help. He takes the B3s, and... yes, he's still wearing a jumpsuit as a backpack. Probably why Susan-G pulls out a pack of pills and eats one. Before grabbing her PDC and doing something to it, probably forms-related.

Concourse C1, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

But Cryo-R doesn't see that. Right now, he's too busy realising that the vendobots in the concourse are placed either side of the meeting hall doors, and are currently sold out.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 14, 2012 04:35

"We're not zombies or commies, whose there?"

written by Speeder on Feb 14, 2012 04:46

I look at the zombie that stopped movie seemly, and examine him.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 14, 2012 12:00

"Hrm..."

Deciding that the green clone probably isn't much help with restocking vendobots, seeing as I didn't see a stack of vendobot supplies next to her, I instead head back down the corridor, since Kris-R seems to have wandered off in that direction.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 14, 2012 16:26

I continue to listen to and watch for the strange noise outside.

written by Gligar on Feb 14, 2012 17:14

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R assures whoever it is that the team aren't commies or zombies, and asks who it is.

"Prove it! Prove you're not a commie!"

"Or a zombie!" adds another young voice from inside.

A third, older, voice adds, "Don't say that, it's not polite! A zombie wouldn't even be speaking right now, it would be trying to bash the door open!"

"I heard of some zombies who could talk," the first voice says. "So ner!"

Sounds like Junior Citizens in there, perhaps seeking shelter with some of the workers. But why are they here? Oh well. Just one more thing to worry about.

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y takes the time to inspect the "zombie" a little closer, since he seemingly decided to not approach. And.. he doesn't look very much like a zombie, now he can see him clearly. In fact, he looks like a very much alive King-R, albeit with a zoned-out expression that suggests that his mind is elsewhere.

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Looking at Susan-G one last time just long enough to decide that she isn't a vendobot refilling technician, Cryo-R follows Kris-R back down the corridor. Soon, they reach the stairwell again. That door at the far end is still locked.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O keeps listening to the noises. He eventually realises that there are multiple sources of noise. Some of it sounds like warbots, perhaps the Armed Forces response. A lot of it sounds like zombies. Zombies that are closer than the warbots. Ands approaching.

Did I mention that there are a lot of them?

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 14, 2012 17:25

"We're not zombies or commies, our proof is that you're still alive right now..."

We're troubleshooters sent to deal with this problem."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 14, 2012 19:27

"INCOMING!"

I judge distance, and if I can safely fire off another shell at the zombies (and if they're even visible yet), I get Turbo out, load it with whatever I find that's explosive, and... FIRE!

written by Speeder on Feb 14, 2012 20:39

I lightly touch the spear on him, just to see if he will really yelp.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 14, 2012 22:13

"We'll have to do something about that door. If we can't find a key, we'll need to use explosives to get inside."

I take a moment to note whether the lock on the door even has a place to insert a key or key-like device.

written by Gligar on Feb 14, 2012 22:19

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R again states that they're not zombies or commies. The clones in the room are still alive, after all. He adds that they're Troubleshooters.

The door opens fully, revealing that, yes, there are Junior Citizens present, along with a number of other clones between INFRARED and ORANGE clearances. Two of the Junior Citizens, presumably the ones who were arguing, are by the door. They look to have switched from suspicion to awe at the thought of being in the presence of Troubleshooters!

One of the ORANGES asks, "So that was you just now? What do you think you were playing at with the explosions?"

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O announces to everyone that they have company, loads a round into Turbo, and fi-

Click. Clickclickclick.

Erm...

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y decides to test something, and gently pokes him with the tip of his spear. He recoils out of the way.

Corridor C1 North, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R decides that if they can't find a key, they'll have to blow the door open. Wait... is there even a keyhole?

He realises that he can't see one.

But he hasn't got time for this. He does not want to anger Friend Computer by ignoring its orders.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 14, 2012 22:31

"Uh oh."

I try to toss Turbo away from me just to be safe.

I decide to try something "safer". I grab a grenade, pull the pin, and toss both at the zombies.

written by Kristos on Feb 14, 2012 22:58

I head back out to the roadway near Epsilon Subsector.

written by Speeder on Feb 14, 2012 23:15

I blink, and then I look again at King.

"Strange..."

I continue my way upstairs to Level 3.

written by Jam on Feb 14, 2012 23:58

I blink, and look up... Oh, the door's open! I was so focused on my work that I didn't even notice...

"Well, we were trying to wipe out the zombies that were here... As you can see, there aren't any more zombies!"

I smile as I realize the clones I sensed were in fact living. I turn to the highest clearance clone I can see...

"How many clones have you got there, and what are all your clearances? Oh, looks like there's Junior Citizens too! How many?"

I smile.

written by Gligar on Feb 15, 2012 02:06

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O drops Turbo in a corner and tries a grenade instead.

He somehow manages to miss. The grenade explodes harmlessly between the zombies and the building.

Stairwell, Emergency Bunker C-3

Kris-R heads back down, and heads back towards the roadway, not looking back to see if Cryo-R follows...

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks at King-R again.. how strange.

He shrugs and heads back up to Level 3.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As Speed-Y arrives, Jam-Y notices that the door is open. He looks up and explains that they were wiping out zombies. It worked, didn't it?

Noticing that all the clones in there are alive, he smiles. He has a look at the clones, and notices that, besides the Junior Citizens and the ORANGE clone, there are INFRAREDS and REDs... he asks how many there are. The ORANGE says, "Well... I guess it did work... What you see here is everyone I was able to find who wasn't immediately made dead by that gas stuff... there's myself, three other ORANGES, about fifteen REDs, and forty INFRAREDS."

"And us!" exclaims one of the Junior Citizens.

"And the Junior Citizens. Ten of those," adds the ORANGE.

written by Speeder on Feb 15, 2012 02:18

As I approach I smile.

"Great! Hey Jam, seemly we had success here!

Now we need to figure how to protect them from zombies, I do not think doors will hold the zombies forever."

I stop pointing the spear at people.

"The way that I cleared, is still clear, although from the nearby noises coming here, I do not expect it to remain safe for long, but I think we can take all this people to the garage. L4 is there coordinating lots of clones to fight the zombies, there are lots of loyal clones armed there, even if armed with a screwdriver, but they are armed. Also L4 could make the Armed Forces to show up, they are doing that other task, preventing anyone from getting here and be zombified, and preventing any zombie from getting out."

written by Jam on Feb 15, 2012 02:37

I smile back at Speed-Y.

"It seems we did!"

I go back to treating John-R...

written by Lightning4 on Feb 15, 2012 09:06

In frustration, I try a grenade again, if the zombies aren't too close. Pin, grenade, toss.

I back away from the zombies quickly if I am able.

written by Kristos on Feb 15, 2012 12:23

I look back to see if Cryo-R follows.⁷³⁰

written by Cryoburner on Feb 15, 2012 13:25

"Hmm... Looks like explosives it is then!"

Noticing that Kris-R is no longer here and has apparently wandered off again, I go off in search of him, namely back down the stairwell and out toward the roadway.

written by Gligar on Feb 15, 2012 17:18

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y is pleased. It seems that they've had some success with the zombies so far. The next step will be to protect these clone from them... that door won't hold forever.

He suggests taking the clones here to the garage. L4-O has organised some clones down there, and armed them with whatever was available. The way down to there is still clear.

He adds that the Armed Forces are on their way. Hopefully, they'll be able to prevent the zombies from escaping.

⁷³⁰ KRISTOS: (OOC: XD)

[942]

Jam-Y agrees, and goes back to his work. John-R seems to have stabilised for now.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O tries another grenade. He gets it a bit closer, probably helped by the fact that the zombies are approaching. He's able to blow a couple of them apart.

At this rate, though, it'll take forever to clear them all.

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

After a couple of minutecycles, Kris-R emerges from the loading dock. He look back, to see Cryo-R, who seems to be looking for something, following him. Please don't tell me that he's looking for explosives, since he isn't cleared for them. Or perhaps he wanted to lose both his remaining clones to treason-related activities?

written by Lightning4 on Feb 15, 2012 19:45

I scramble back over to Turbo now that it hasn't exploded yet, and retreat so I can try to fix it.

Once somewhere "safe" I try to remove the non-operative shell and get Turbo ready for shooting again.

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 15, 2012 19:50

The chest wound though patched up, will probably limit my ability to do anything useful, let alone anything useless. So I watch.

written by Gligar on Feb 15, 2012 22:38

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Noticing that Turbo hasn't exploded, L4-O scrambles over to it and tries to find somewhere "safe". But given the noises that are evident from the corridor, I'd wager that there aren't that many safe places. Regardless, he attempts to repair the weapon. Turns out it was just jammed; it seems that the trigger was defective, and may have damaged the shell. He clears the jam.

Mango just watches.

written by Jam on Feb 15, 2012 22:55

Noticing John-R seems stable, I move on to Lucas-R.

written by Speeder on Feb 15, 2012 23:30

I turn to the clones on the door.

"Ok, do you want to wait in that room, or you prefer to come with us to the garage? Mind you, the garage has been attacked more than once and there are lots of dead people and dead zombies there... But at least it is more predictable, in the sense that we know zombies will get there, and we know we will fight them... While waiting in the room does not guarantee that the door will protect you forever."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 15, 2012 23:43

Seeing that I'm ready to fire again, I try loading Turbo with another explosive shell, or if none of those are left, something that might also be good against a large group of zombies. Napalm perhaps?

I fire when ready!

written by Gligar on Feb 16, 2012 02:02

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While Jam-Y starts working on Lucas-R, Speed-Y asks the dorm clones what they want to do: do they want to stay in the room or come with them to the garage? They know that the garage will be attacked, but at least they can predict it. The dorm, on the other hand... that's an unknown to them. The ORANGE replies, "Well, we were considering barricading the door and using the air ducts to get around if need be. I mean, we've got beds in here, and a toolbox..."

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O tries again with Turbo. He seems to have run out of explosive shells, so he chooses a napalm one, and fires.

His aim is good, but the shell ends up not going off...

The sounds from the corridor get worse...

Something rattles in the ceiling...

written by Jam on Feb 16, 2012 06:04

While I'm working, I note how badly Lucas-R is injured...

written by Speeder on Feb 16, 2012 11:35

I think a bit, and then I say.

"Ok, that is good. If you need us, you know we are at the garage."

I turn to Jam.

"Jam, this group is the entire big group that you have found?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 16, 2012 16:36

Frustrated, I put Turbo away and exchange it for my blaster. I try to just start blasting away at whatever zombie is currently closest to me, switching to others if I somehow down that one quickly.

written by Gligar on Feb 16, 2012 17:15

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y notes that Lucas-R has multiple fractures and is having difficulties breathing.

Speed-Y decides that the ORANGE's plan is a good one, and reminds him that they'll be in the garage. He turns to Jam-Y and asks if this was the entire group he discovered earlier.

"Wait, what?" asks a RED.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O switches back to his blaster and starts firing. Though he;s able to eliminate two zombies, there are just too many of them.

Not only that, but guess what just showed up at the inner door?

The ceiling stops rattling.

written by Speeder on Feb 16, 2012 19:26

I turn to them.

I point to Jam mutant armband.

"His mutation is... what I can say... He can find people, and I told him to find the biggest group of people that he could, so that we could prevent that group from being turned into zombies. So, that group would be you."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 16, 2012 19:27

"So many... I don't think we're going to make it."

I continue blasting off zombies as best as I can.

Suddenly, inspiration strikes, a light fixture almost appearing above my head!

"Nukabot! Top speed! Run down as many zombies as you can! Just uh, watch out for us, okay?"

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 16, 2012 20:16

I attempt to arm myself.

And then retreat. What's the chance of this actually holding off? Unlikely. Plus, it's not like I'm any use to those lot.

written by Gligar on Feb 16, 2012 22:28

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y explains to the RED that Jam-Y is a mutant, and was able to mentally find the largest concentration of clones in the building - them.

"I'm not sure how I feel about that..." the red replies. "I know he's registered, but.... the thought a a clone being able to find anyone he wants with his mind... if he can do that, what else can he do?"

Jam-Y continues working on Lucas-R.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O continues blasting at zombies, though he's beginning to think they won't make it.

Hey, wait a minute! They have a forkbot!

He asks Nukabot to go and charge them. The bot begins to move, backing out of the garage and turning to get a good look at them. "My camera is detecting a large number of... I am unsure whether they are clones are not. Assuming that they are not... Five Laws do not apply..."

It suddenly adjusts its forks, jumps into gear, runs at the zombies at full speed.

Crunch!

It knocks over several zombies, running over a couple* before impaling four more on its forks. It tries to back up for another run but it finds itself surrounded.

Meanwhile, Mango has been busying himself with finding a weapon. This... nameless big tool will have to do. He is also pessimistic about their chances, and doesn't believe himself to be of any use around here. Then again... what specialities does he have?

written by Lightning4 on Feb 16, 2012 23:38

I try to assist Nukabot by picking off some of the zombies surrounding it with my blaster.

"That was a good attack, we need another one of those..."

written by Jam on Feb 16, 2012 23:59

I look up...

"Hey! I can't just find any clone in Alpha Complex! All I can do is detect if there are clones nearby."

I stop working for a secondcycle, and look at the RED...

"You're probably thinking I can just force my way into your mind and make you do anything I want... Well, believe me, I've tried doing just that against CMTs, and it doesn't work."

I turn towards Speed-Y.

"Also, yeah, I'm pretty sure these are the clones I sensed..."

I turn back to Lucas-R, and continue working on him...

written by Cryoburner on Feb 17, 2012 00:28

After apparently standing in the roadway for a bit, I decide that it might be best for us to get going wherever it is we are going.

"We should be going!"

I tug at Kris-R, pulling him along as I wander down the roadway.

"You know, this might be easier if we had one of those big truckbots. I wonder how much explosives one of those could carry. I mean, in the hypothetical situation where one might be carrying them for some purpose. We would just be riding in it, of course."

I note whether I can see any big truckbots around. Or little truckbots. Or any bots, for that matter.

written by Gligar on Feb 17, 2012 02:22

Transition Rentals, A Level, Iota Subsector

The Transition beeps to itself. It seems to be ready to leave.

Mick-R doesn't notice, of course. Joris-R doesn't give any indication of noticing, either.

* They might be "only" Grade C reconditioned tyres, but that doesn't mean they aren't up to the job... as long as someone doesn't shoot at them or something...

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O shifts his aim, trying to pick off those zombies who are surrounding Nukabot. He's able to clear a gap for Nukabot to back up and start another run.

While he's doing that, the identity of the arrivals at the inner door is made clear, though you probably guess by now. Suffice to say, the other clones in the room get busy with attacking them. I'm not exactly sure which side is winning... there seems to be casualties on both sides already.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Sector B

Jam-Y looks at the red, and tells him that he can only scan for groups of clones, and can't pinpoint one in particular. That means that he can't just dive into someone's mind and have fun with it.

The RED looks unconvinced, but shuts up, allowing Jam-Y to get back to work.

"I'd accept his explanation if I were you," an ORANGE suggests. "He might be a mutant, but he is YELLOW."

From somewhere below, there is the sound of many zombies shambling around. No, not from just below...

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R isn't concerned about any of that. He's more interested in dragging Kris-R down the roadway. He mentions that it would be quicker if they had a big truckbot with them. Probably because big truckbots can carry large amounts of explosives... probably enough to cause significant damage to Computer Property and get him demoted, terminated, brainscrubbed so completely that his entire personality was rewritten, and finally dumped in Armed Forces target duty in HEL Sector. It is a good thing, therefore, that there are no big truckbots in the vicinity. There are a few little truckbots in the distance, along with some warbots - is that a T68? -, but I doubt they'd be willing to take on any passengers. And the smaller scrubots, forkbots, funbots, botbots, docbots, spybots, combots, petbots, cambots, deliverybots, collectobots, and idea bots on the roadway don't seem to be interested in giving rides either.

Perhaps they could hire an autohack or something? Surely one of them has the number.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 17, 2012 06:05

I go with explosives again. I toss as many grenades and pins as I can at clusters of zombies, while trying to keep myself away from them.

written by Speeder on Feb 17, 2012 13:33

As I hear the zombies...

"Oh no, zombies incoming... Anyone here has melee weapons? I figured that if we keep shooting them we will end running out of ammo eventually..."

I flash my spear around (carefully to not hit any friendlies) and then point it at the stairwell.

written by Gligar on Feb 17, 2012 17:31Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O goes with explosives again. He's trying to eliminate as many of the outside zombies as he can, helped along by Nukabot. He lobs a grenade right into the horde (just one, since he doesn't have the time for two), with predictable results. But it doesn't seem to have enough effect... and they're getting too close for comfort. If he uses another grenade, he'll probably hit himself with it.

Meanwhile, the group by the door is still fighting, though they're being pushed back. Clones armed with edged tools seem to be having the best luck as they are able to decapitate the zombies as they come. But it is surprisingly hard to decapitate a zombie. And what with the sheer number of zombies, as well as the number of clones dying to the zombies, and the dead eventually reanimating... well, the cloningbot has its work cut out. It's got to the point where even Mango, who was trying to distance himself from everyone, is involved.

The one saving grace is that it's taking time for the dead to reanimate... it looks like a couple of minutecycles.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y hears the sounds, and announces that they have incoming. he asks if everyone has melee weapons, since they'll eventually end up running out of ammunition.

As the sounds get closer, he readies his spear.

Jam-Y suddenly tenses. There's an active mind amongst the approaching horde...

written by 4616599 on Feb 17, 2012 17:36⁷³¹

I suddenly shake myself out of my daze.

I grab the rental clone.

"Hey! Fantastic Transition you got there! I'm glad I took the time to examine it! Good daycycle, sir!"

I grin widely.

I get on the Transition, and poke Mick-R.

written by Kristos on Feb 17, 2012 19:20

"Yes, I am trying to remember the best way to ride to another subsector..."

I look for any favorable transportation possibly headed to Kappa subsector, or possible a clone or bot to quiz.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 17, 2012 20:31

"Vatcrap, there's just too many, we can't even get out..."

I speak loudly while trying to zap outside zombies with my blaster:

"Everyone that is alive to me as fast as you can! We need to fight out way out. There's no way we can hold out here, but if we can fight our way out we might stay alive. We don't need any more clones becoming zombies!"

⁷³¹ 4616599: (OOC: Oops, distracted elsewhere!)

If the YELLOW Powserv clone is still alive, I shout to him:

"Sir! Catch!"

I toss him the YELLOW laser pistol.

Finally, I try to address the cloningbot.

"Cloningbot, you should cease operations immediately. We don't need you producing even more zombies for the horde."

written by Gligar on Feb 17, 2012 22:35

Transition Rentals, A Level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R suddenly snaps back to reality. He notices the Transition, grabs the salesclone ,thanks him, and hops on board. But before leaving, he can't help but poke Mick-R again. Mick-R doesn't seem to respond.

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Kris-R replies to Cryo-R. He's trying to think about ways to get to Kappa Subsector himself.

He also looks around... aha! Maybe he doesn't need to call for an autohack after all... there's one coming towards them.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O calls for all remaining clones to join him at the outer door. It looks like they'll have to fight their way out... they can't hold the garage like this.

He looks around, and sees the PowServ leader holding a disconnected bot manipulator. Perhaps he could give him a better weapon? He apparently thinks so, as he hands over the YELLOW laser pistol he'd been carrying. The YELLOW looks at it for a moment.. "I'd ask why you have that," he says, taking the pistol, "but we don't have time."

Finally, he instructs the cloningbot to go offline. he doesn't want it creating any more potential zombies. "I am currently generating two clones," it tells him. "If I were to go offline, I would end up terminating them - "

"Override," the YELLOW interrupts. "Present your power core for inspection, authorisation: PowServ-Delta! And don't bother complaining about how TechServ won't like it. They aren't here!"

"...As you wish."

Meanwhile, everyone else has been busy. L4-O has managed to fell another couple of zombies, and the rest have been reasonably successful at dispatching another four. Even Mango got in a couple of blows.

But the zombies are beginning to surround the group. In their no-minded approach, they begin to knock over supply cabinets, revealing some old noticeboards, which seem to be covering an air duct.

written by Speeder on Feb 17, 2012 23:56

I start to move toward the sound of zombies, spear ready, but also with the loaded slugthrower in a easy to reach place.

I hold the spear with two hands, one in the middle of it, so I can control the point in a finer way, even if losing range.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 18, 2012 00:00

I blast at the zombies near the air duct.

"Hey, look! That might be a way out..."

If it's safe, I approach the air duct and give it a quick inspection for safety. And maybe glance at one of the noticeboards to see if there might be any danger.

If it's safe, I continue:

"Everyone in!"

written by Cryoburner on Feb 18, 2012 02:16

(One would think that a cloningbot and/or other bots could be parked in doorways for various purposes.)

"If you find some wheels, I could probably build us a platform that we could roll on. I'll probably need a platform too though."

I look around for any platforms that look as though wheels could be attached to them in some way. I also make sure we don't get run over by any vehicles coming toward us.

written by Gligar on Feb 18, 2012 02:37

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y starts moving towards the stairwell, making sure to have his slugthrower at the ready as well as the spear. He shifts the spear for increased precision at the expense of range. Which might be a good thing...

Soon enough, a zombie manages to shamle from the stairwell into the corridor...

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O shifts his aim inwards, towards the newly-revealed air duct. He shoots at the zombies near there. He creates an opening large enough that, if he plays his cards right, should be enough to get through the throng and enter the duct.

He takes it... which causes the zombies to try to claw at him. But he is able to avoid taking much damage and get to the duct., which he promptly inspects.

It looks to be safe enough to traverse, though it would be tough going: the duct is not large enough to walk through. The noticeboards, he notices, are full of warnings to be careful of the open air duct. Which might be good advice except for the fact that he's planning to use the thing.

He instructs everyone to enter the duct. "Good timing," the YELLOW replies, "because I'm out of ammo!"

Clone begin to converge on the duct... as do the zombies. L4-O can feel their hands on him...

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R suggests that if Kris-R finds some wheels, he could combine it with a platform... assuming he had a platform.

As for platforms, there is just one, in the IntSec checkpoint nearby. However, to access it, he would need tools to unbolt the thing.

The autohack continues to approach. (Some clones prefer to call them taxibots, but that term has been deprecated for a long time.)

written by Speeder on Feb 18, 2012 03:24

I start to quickly aim with the spear for knees, or legs if I fail at that, attempting to make the zombies fall over each other.

written by Kristos on Feb 18, 2012 03:52

Though I do not recall ever seeing an autohack I have heard about similar devices. Pulling something from my memory I lift my fist in the air with my thumb upwards. This feels awkward.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 18, 2012 05:12

I attempt to direct my aim towards the zombies trying to claw at me, and zap them with my blaster.

"Oh no you don't!"

If I am able, I crawl deeper into the duct so other clones are able to enter.

written by Gligar on Feb 18, 2012 17:31

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y adjusts his aim in an attempt to slow down the zombies using... another zombie. Specifically, he want to make one collapse so that the others will trip over it.

The approaching zombie sees him, and speeds up. Not that you'd notice.

And runs right into the spear. And keeps trying to get within reaching distance of Speed-Y.

Some of its friends, appearing from the stairwell, seem to want to join in.

Meanwhile, Jam-Y is finishing up with Lucas-R.

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Dredging up a memory from somewhere, Kris-R sticks out his thumb.

The approaching autohack screeches to a stop right next to him and Cryo-R. "Need a lift, pal?"

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While clones fight their way towards the air duct, L4-O concentrates on tearing into those zombies who are concentrating on tearing into him, and taking damage while doing so. One of them starts gnawing on his arm, for instance, but he's able to use his other arm to shoot his blaster at it. The blaster is again getting hot through use, but it's enough to ward off a couple of them.

He's now able to crawl into the duct proper, though he still has a couple of zombies hanging off him.

written by Jam on Feb 18, 2012 17:33

"Oh, I guess I should mention, one of those zombies is actually a living clone..."

I stand up, and look over at the zombies... I try to figure out which one is the living clone.

written by Speeder on Feb 18, 2012 17:54

I keep hitting the zombie knee, trying to make it fail, taking care to the zombie not reach me...

written by Speeder on Feb 18, 2012 17:55

I turn to Jam.

"What? Oh... That is not good, it means someone can control the zombies..."

Or someone is crazy and pretending to be a zombie, I hope is the second."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 18, 2012 19:27

If I have room to maneuver, I try to get Fred out so he can finally see action.

I promptly stab the zombies trying to grab me. Repeatedly. Hard. Did I mention repeatedly?

written by Gligar on Feb 18, 2012 22:16

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y tells everyone about the active mind amidst the zombies, which he interprets as a living clone. But he's not sure exactly where it is... though the zombies are approaching, so he should be able to... yes, there he goes. The mind is still on the stairwell.

Even as he's stabbing this zombie, Speed-Y turns to Jam-Y and decides that his news means that there is a clone who can control the zombies. Either that, or someone's crazy.

But since he turned round, he is unable to defend against the zombies, who begin to claw at him, and pull him to the floor...

Air ducts, near the Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O is also having a zombie problem. Though he believes that he can solve it with the use of Fred, his knife. He starts stabbing repeatedly at whatever he can, including zombies, the duct, zombies, the air, zombies...

It might not be enough to make them let go, but he certainly causes damage. As do they...

written by Lightning4 on Feb 19, 2012 01:46

I struggle to both stab the zombies, and get out of range of their clawing. More stabbing!

written by Jam on Feb 19, 2012 02:14

‘That’s not good...’

I try to distract the zombies with my emergency light, by setting them on fire...

written by Cryoburner on Feb 19, 2012 02:28

‘No, we don’t need a lift. We took one earlier when coming down from the cafeteria. Now, we’re going down the road. We’ll let you know if we need one later though.’

I take a moment to examine the autohack, noting whether it has any wheels that may be of use. I also check if the autohack actually has a lift on hand, or if he was just asking out of curiosity.

written by Gligar on Feb 19, 2012 02:41

Air ducts, near the Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O’s zombie problem continues.

He starts struggling. All he wants to do is get away... much like Mango, who is somewhere in the ductwork by now... but then, Mango doesn’t have to deal with zombies. L4-O does. And he does so by stabbing!

It’s difficult, but at least the difficulty is shared... the zombies are having problems too, and end up breaking bones, which doesn’t help them. It helps L4-O, though, who continues stabbing. He’s able to shake one more off hem off. That leaves one, who is still chewing on his arm.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y tries the fire trick again with an ‘emergency light’. There are enough zombies around that he is able to ignite two of them, not that they notice.

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Cryo-R seems to misunderstand the autohack. He says that they do not need a lift, as they took one earlier. Right now, they are using the roadway.

‘Oh, a wiseguy, huh? Maybe you misunderstood my question. Some fleshbags have a tendency to do that. Okay, I will make it simpler for you: Are... you... in... need... of... trans-port-a-tion?’

Cryo-R may or may not be listening. He’s examining the autohack, of course. He notes that it has wheels, of course, but is not in possession of a device to permit vertical movement.

written by Kristos on Feb 19, 2012 03:52

‘Yes! We are trying to get to the transbot station past Kappa subsector, preferably before the next hourcycle. Will you take us there?’

Then, noticing that my hand is still in the air with my thumb raised, I return my hand to my side.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 19, 2012 04:00

‘Hey! That’s mine! Chew on this!’

STAB

I resume struggling to get deeper, and try to kick off the remaining zombies and keep the others at bay.

written by Jam on Feb 19, 2012 04:29

I notice the zombies don’t seem to be reacting to the fire...

‘Well, that didn’t really work...’

Instead, I take my longest copperlyke pipe out, and start hitting the zombies near Speed-Y with it, as hard as I can...

written by Gligar on Feb 19, 2012 16:35

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Kris-R explains to the autohack that yes, they do need transportation. They need to get to the transbot station. ‘Alright,’ the autohack replies, and opens its doors. ‘Hop in.’

Air ducts, near the Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O continues with the stabby, and adds kicking into the mix. Somehow.

It takes a while, and the zombie manages to tear a chunk out of his arm, but he;’s able to cause it to cease moving, clogging the vent.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y is also busy with zombies. He seems to have abandoned the fire idea, given that, though it does ignite zombies, they don’t seem to realise that they’re on fire. Instead, he pulls out a copperlyke pipe, and starts bashing away. Of course, this means getting into melee range of the zombies, who eventually realise that they now have more than one target. So, even though his pipe is reasonable effective at knocking off zombie limbs, he takes quite a bit of bite damage himself...

written by Jam on Feb 19, 2012 16:45

‘OW! Why are you biting me?! Eat fire, you zombie vatslime!’

I wave the emergency light at the zombie’s faces, and back away...

‘I really wish I’d bought that flamethrower now... Maybe if I set enough zombies on fire...’

I run around trying to set as many zombies on fire as I can!

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 19, 2012 18:56⁷³²

I snap out of my daze and realize that there’s fighting going on.

⁷³² AZIRPHAELI: (OOC damn sorry guys, been away)

[948]

I check my barrel, making sure it's secure and has adequate shots remaining before I start blasting zombie heads.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 19, 2012 20:12

I check to see if clones still need to get into the air vent, or if they're already in, or already... zombies.

And if it's safe (relatively), I check my medkit for some kind of bandaging material. If I find one, I proceed to wrap up my wound.

written by Gligar on Feb 19, 2012 22:39

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Now upset over the zombies chewing on him, Jam-Y goes back to fire. He wishes he'd bought that flamethrower when he had the chance. But maybe he can still cause enough fire damage with his "emergency light"...

As he waves the light around wildly, trying to ignite as many zombies as he can, a couple finally realise that they're on fire, and lessen their grip on him. Notably, the ones chewing on him stop doing so. One of them collapses.

Azir-R suddenly shakes his head, trying to loosen the grip of whatever it is that causes clones to suddenly freeze up like that. He looks at his laser pistol to find that his barrel is secured and has six shots remaining, and begins shooting.

He fires three shots. All three hit their mark: the heads of zombies attacking Jam-Y. However, only one of them collapses. The other two just slow down as what's left of their brains is damaged.

Air ducts, near the Garage, building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O tries to look past the zombies to see if anyone still needs to get into the duct... but all he can see are zombies.

He keeps moving, heading towards some of the clones, where he pulls out his medkit... blast it, no bandages.

written by Speeder on Feb 19, 2012 23:15

I try to break free, specially away from fire zombies, until I can hit them again.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 20, 2012 00:10

I put my medkit away and check to see what clones made it in with me, and their status.

"I don't suppose anyone has a medkit or bandages with them...?"

I then proceed to check my own wounds to see how serious they are.

written by Gligar on Feb 20, 2012 02:15

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y attempts to break free and get clear of zombies, specifically those zombies who are on fire. He kind of succeeds... he still has a hand stuck to him. But at least he's clear.

Air ducts, near the Garage, building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O puts away his medkit and looks over the clones. It looks like there are a couple of PowServ clones here, as well as some of the INFRAREDS, Mango included. There could be more further down the duct system.

He asks if anyone has a medkit or bandage, though it doesn't look like anyone does. This could be an issue, since those bite wounds are pretty serious.

written by Speeder on Feb 20, 2012 02:57

After I am sufficiently away from the zombies, I grab that hand, set it on fire (putting it near a emergency light... if we remove too much we may end in the dark after all...) and then throw it on the zombies.

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 20, 2012 03:25

I snap out of my daze, and look around myself. I rub the spot where Speed-Y poked me.

I hear the noise overhead and head speedily up towards level 3, looking all over the floor for some sort of weapon like the spear I was just poked with.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 20, 2012 05:05

The next three shots go to three more zombie heads.

We've held off this long and they are not going to get us now.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 20, 2012 08:05

"Well uh, let's move on ahead I guess."

I start to follow behind the clones to see if this duct system leads anywhere we could use to get somewhere safer.

written by 4616599 on Feb 20, 2012 15:41

I drive the Transition ahead.

"Now, where was that team?"

I look around for directions to Industrial Subsector B.

written by Jam on Feb 20, 2012 16:16

I continue setting zombies on fire!

written by Gligar on Feb 20, 2012 17:29

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Looks like things are rather busy up here.

First, Speed-Y is trying to deal with that hand that's still attached to him. He is attempting to set it on fire, but he just ends up extinguishing an "emergency light" instead.

Second, Azir-R is still shooting. He's trying to ventilate some zombie heads, it seems. Specifically, those three right there, right behind the other one. He pulls off two good shots, right to the forehead of two zombies. His third... well, his barrel begins to squeal.

Third, Jam-Y is continuing with his little bout of pyromania, targeting the two freshly-ventilated zombies. He's a little more successful than Speed-Y.

Fourth, Lucas-R just threw something at the zombies. It falls somewhere in the stairwell.

Speaking of the stairwell, it sounds like someone is firing a laser pistol there.

Foyer, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R snaps out of his daze. Ow... did Speed-Y poke him? Yes, he did... but he seems to have vanished somewhere. He checks the poked spot, and finds that Speed-Y didn't cause any damage.

Now... where did Speed-Y run off to? Upstairs?

He heads back through the corridor, and into the stairwell.

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

He finds the way up choked with zombies. As he watches, one falls from above, landing in front of him with a sickening thud. He notices that it seems to have been carrying a knife. It's a good thing that it didn't know how to use it.

He also notices that it seems to be inert.

He also notices that someone above is shooting a laser pistol. Hey, he has one too, doesn't he?

Corridors, A Level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R glides past Mick-R on the Transition as he tries to get his bearings. Now where would Industrial Subsector B be? Down the roadway? Sure.

Now to get to the roadway... ah! That checkpoint... good thing it's unmanned... perhaps the guards were called away?

He drifts on through, finding himself on the roadway. It all seems... familiar...

Air ducts, near the garage, Level 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O and the rest of the clones press on, looking for somewhere safer.

All around them, the sounds of the undead are in evidence. Past two junctions, then... they could go up?

written by Kristos on Feb 20, 2012 18:20

I hop into the autohack, Cryo-R in tow, and take a look at the interior.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 20, 2012 18:36

"Ah... I see your plan."

I wink to Kris-R, indicating that his plan is seen. As I enter the autohack, I have one more quick look at the wheels, noting what it might take for their removal.

written by Speeder on Feb 20, 2012 18:43

I get upset and try to throw the hand very hard on the face of the nearest zombie.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 20, 2012 19:34

"Not too keen on the idea of going up... but if it gets us further away from those zombies..."

I continue to follow.

written by Jam on Feb 20, 2012 20:06

"Ahahaha! Burn! Buuurn!"

I continue setting the zombies on fire, and delightedly watch the flames grow and slowly consume them!

"Ahahahaha!"

written by Gligar on Feb 20, 2012 22:30

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Kris-R accepts the autohack's invitation and enters, looking at the interior. Though unfamiliar to him, the controls at the driver's seat seem to be set to automatic. But that's okay... he's not sure he can drive one of these anyway. Besides that seat, there is one more in the front, and two in the back. All four seats are neutral grey, as is the rest of the interior.

Cryo-R enters after him, but not before winking to Kris-R, and having one last look at the wheels. He would need some sort of tool to remove the wheels, one that could remove the fasteners that connect the wheels to the axles. The fasteners are of a sort he is not familiar with.

Once Cryo-R is inside, the autohack closes its doors and replies, "Alright. hold on!"

And starts back up, executing a nice handbrake turn before heading back the way it came, towards Kappa Subsector.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Meanwhile, Speed-Y still wants to be rid of this hand. Grabbing it, he pulls it off and throws it as hard as he can towards a zombie.

One which Jam-Y is attempting to ignite. Never before has fire been this much fun to him! He absolutely must spread it, and spread it he shall! Take this zombie, for instance. It doesn't have enough fire! It needs more! More!! More!!!

The fire does indeed take hold. And once it takes hold, it begins to spread... first the zombie, then surrounding zombies, then more zombies... then to the living clones...

And where fire spreads, it consumes...

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O doesn't really like the idea of going up, but anything to get away from zombies. He follows the other clones. His arm really hurts...

written by Lightning4 on Feb 20, 2012 22:36

I check the medkit again for anything that might dull the pain a little. If I found something, I take it.

I then resume following the clones, hoping the pain goes away.

written by Speeder on Feb 21, 2012 02:00

I attempt to get away from the fire, if I am on fire, I also attempt to put it out properly (patting small fires or rolling on ground if big fire)

And after I am not on fire, I start to stab zombies randomly using the most range I can with the spear.

written by Gligar on Feb 21, 2012 02:11

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O gives the medkit another check. He finds some visomorpain, which he takes to help with the pain. But as the pain receded, an odd sensation overtakes him... some kind of lethargy...

He tries to shake it off and follow everyone else. They're still heading upwards. But there seems to be some sort of commotion up ahead.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y checks himself over. The fire seems to have spread to him, too. He hits the deck and rolls about to put it out. There we go.

Next problem: zombies. They're still here, though they're on fire and beginning to burn up. He stabs a couple of them. They begin to fall apart.

A voice suddenly comes from the stairwell. "What... are... you... doing?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 21, 2012 02:51

I try to shake off some of the lethargy.

"I feel... kind of weird..."

I shaky my head again and try to focus on what's going on ahead.

written by Speeder on Feb 21, 2012 03:54

I shout back at the stairwell, while still stabbing zombies.

"Who are you?"

written by Jam on Feb 21, 2012 04:42

I suddenly notice the fire is spreading to the living clones.

"Ah! Oh no! Too much fire!"

I make sure no living clones are on fire, and try to put out any fires that are on living clones, starting with the Junior Citizens, since they are most important.

Actually, wait, I got distracted by the voice...

"Wait, is that a voice I hear? That's right, there's a living clone down there!"

I look in the direction of the voice, and try to sense the name and clearance of its owner...

written by Kristos on Feb 21, 2012 04:58

"I see your plan?"

I take the opportunity to see what is in the equipment boxes while carefully being sure nothing is flung around the speeding vehicle.

written by 4616599 on Feb 21, 2012 09:41

"Uncanny. Very uncanny."

I get off the Transition, and inspect the checkpoint for any items of interest, or useful equipment.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 21, 2012 13:03

I remove my squealing barrel with haste and toss it somewhere away from us (but towards zombie, if such a place exists).

written by Gligar on Feb 21, 2012 18:01

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O shakes his head to try and clear it... it isn't working too well...

He tries to focus on the commotion. It turns out that there is another group in the air ducts. Apparently, they came from one of the dormitories.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Even as he continues attacking, Speed-Y demands that the stranger identify himself.

At first, Jam-Y doesn't notice the newcomer. He is too busy with dealing with the aftermath of his pyromania, namely, extinguishing clone fires, to care. Luckily, the fires are limited to the team, thanks to the clones in the dormitory being in the middle of escaping into the ducts.

It doesn't take long, though, before he does notice the newcomer. He reasons that this must be the mind he sensed earlier, and concentrates. The voice seems to belong to someone named Brian-O-CRS-4. "My name," he says, "isn't important. Why are you attacking my brothers? They are the future. Everyone dies eventually. But that is just the beginning."

Azir-R acts quickly, and throws the offending barrel away, in the general direction of Brian-O.

Kris-R's Autohack, Roadway

Kris-R seems confused at Cryo-R's wink, but tries to ignore it. As the autohack continues onward, he decides to open his boxes, starting with the general equipment box. The first thing he finds in them is a lot of Packy-Foam, but he continues, digging down until he reaches equipment. Specifically, he finds two laser pistols complete with RED barrels, four spare RED barrels, and two sets of RED reflex.

He checks the TEAM LEADER box next. Inside, buried in another small mountain of Packy-Foam, he finds a Team Leader MBD badge and a Team Leader's Hat, complete with visibility aids such as blinking lights and reflective stickers, such that Cryo-R can find him when he needs advice. Or any other team member, if they had any.

The autohack speaks up. "Roadblock ahead? Odd..."

Indeed, the gate into the Industrial Subsectors, usually only staffed by a single clone, is blocked by many more clones, all of them Armed Forces, as well as some small truckbots, and even a couple of warbots. Something big is happening.

From outside, one of the warbots can be heard saying, "Turn back immediately!"

Rather loudly.

The autohack comments. "Nothing for it... time for a detour!"

It suddenly makes a sharp turn as if to head back. But instead of stopping at that, it continues turning, and straightens out, now heading off the roadway! It seems to want to go round the Industrial Subsectors. Of course, the turn has had a side-effect, in the form of the Packy-Foam escaping the box and going everywhere.

Cryo-R hasn't yet opened his box.

Internal Security Checkpoint, A Level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R pops his head back in for another look. It is odd that the staff would go away like this. They've even taken much of their equipment with them, though someone has left a pair of handcuffs and a truncheon behind. The terminal on the security desk has been left logged on.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 21, 2012 19:29

I check to see if my wooziness is due to bleeding from injuries.

If I have too much bleeding, I decide to take drastic measures by taking Fred to my jumpsuit to make bandages.

If I succeed in making some decent bandages, I try to wrap them around some of my wounds to stifle the bleeding.

written by Speeder on Feb 21, 2012 19:38

I look grumpy...

"You crazy ax crazy bastard murderer! What is a bastard anyway? You are using nanotechnology you do not understand to transform everyone into zombies! You are crazy! You do not understand what you are doing! Who gave that idea to you?"

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 21, 2012 20:09

I attach a new barrel to my laser pistol. Then I blast at the old one if I can get a clean shot.

I don't care much for what Crazy McZombie Clone is babbling about.

written by Gligar on Feb 21, 2012 21:28

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O checks himself over. It turns out that he's bleeding pretty badly... which might account for his lethargy.

Lacking any other alternative, he takes Fred and cuts strips out of his jumpsuit. He cuts enough to not only make bandages for himself, but to reduce his jumpsuit to a short-sleeved variant. Which, to be honest, probably won't pass any uniform inspections. But he doesn't really care about that right now. All he cares about is stopping the bleeding, something he's able to do to something resembling a passable degree. It's enough to prevent his condition from getting any worse, at least.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As Lucas-R prepares to shoot, Speed-Y assumes that Brian-O is responsible for this whole mess, and tells him that he doesn't know what he's doing. How can he hope to understand the nanotechnology involved? Who gave him the idea?

"Oh, it's not me who started this," Brian-O replies. "It's all down to The Firs-"

He doesn't get a chance to finish. Azir-R has reloaded his pistol and fired at his squealing barrel, with predictable results.

But if you're after specifics, the on-fire zombies are reduced to mere chunks of burning flesh and bone, and Brian-O himself doesn't seem to be, well, living any more.

written by Speeder on Feb 21, 2012 21:42

I look at Azir.

"Azir! You just killed a willing informant! I did not even need to torture him or anything! He was confessing everything on his own will!"

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 21, 2012 21:43⁷³³

"Oh well, I didn't notice he was spilling the beans until it's too late. Besides I heard what he said. He clearly mentioned that the whole thing was started by 'The Furs'. We just need to figure out who they are."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 21, 2012 21:45

Now that I've managed to get myself taken care of, I put Fred away and start playing catchup with the rest of the group.

While doing so, I also try to keep my pace relatively steady so I don't cause any unnecessary exertion.

written by Speeder on Feb 21, 2012 21:55

I give Azir a glare SO HARD that it might actually hurt him. Then I resume stabbing zombies.

written by Jam on Feb 22, 2012 00:32

"That clone... His name was Brian-O-CRS-4. We should notify IntSec so they can monitor the cloning stations..."

I also look at Azir-R.

"Why'd you have to terminate him? We could have gotten some useful information! And just what are these 'beans' you say he was spilling?"

written by Cryoburner on Feb 22, 2012 01:23

"Wow! All this Packy-Foam could be super useful if we need to pack something!"

I begin chewing on a piece of Packy-Foam.

⁷³³ AZIRPHELII: (Edit because I didn't see Speedy's response)

"Is there anything else useful in there? How about some tools for removing fasteners of a kind I am not familiar with?"

I open my own box and begin rummaging through the Packy-Foam, in a search for tools or anything else that may be of use.

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2012 01:41

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y protests Azir-R's treatment of Brian-O. After all, he was telling them valuable information without having to interrogate him!

Azir-R claims that he didn't notice that Brian-O was "spilling the beans", whatever that means, but adds that he heard the guy say something about "The Furs", whatever they are.

Speed-Y just glares, and goes back to stabbing, taking down another zombie that appears from behind the late Brian-O.

Jam-Y reports Brian-O's name, and suggests that they notify Internal Security, before Also rounding on Azir-R, demanding to know why he had to terminate the clone, and just what these "beans" are that he was supposedly spilling.

As the two glare at each other, Brian-O stands up again.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O puts Fred away and catches up with the rest of the group. They seem to have stopped to chat with the other group, some of whom seem to be Junior Citizens. It's a good thing that they seem to have picked what must be the largest junction in the building to do so. One clone from the other group mentions that they met up with some Troubleshooters outside of the dormitory they were hiding in.

Kris-R's autohack

Cryo-R believes that the Packy-Foam itself may be useful, and tries nibbling on a piece. I tastes awful. But then again, it's probably not meant to be eaten, seeing as it's probably made of recycled laser pistol barrels, which also can't be eaten (unless you're a Matter Eater).

He rummages through his own box, revealing a Loyalty Officer's MBD Badge, a Troubleshooter Helmet, a Mark II Indestructible Loyalty Transcripts Recorder, a supply of ELT Tests and a supply of SDL cards.

As he's uncovering those, the autohack makes another sudden turn, spreading Packy-Foam all over everything. Again.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 22, 2012 01:55

I overhear the conversation and try to get in it as well.

"Good place to rest for now, that was a tough battle. Shame not everyone made it. Both me and my blaster need the rest for a moment... everyone else okay for now? I have some meds, and we can fashion emergency bandages if we need them."

I try to get into a more comfortable position for the time being. I also pull out my PDC.

I address the other group.

"Troubleshooters then? Good to hear the rest of my team is still kicking in the building. I hope they get somewhere safe though... the zombies are really coming in force. The garage position got absolutely swamped. Were there two YELLOWS? Maybe some REDs?"

Finally, I turn to my PDC momentarily to get a message in to Nukabot, then resume my focus on the conversation.

Sorry, we couldn't hold out at the garage, but we're at safety now. The choice is yours whether to continue clearing zombies or to just get to safety. I'll notify you if we need you at a certain position either way.

written by Speeder on Feb 22, 2012 03:11

"Jam, see if you can wrench data from Brian-O zombified, maybe the nanomachines do not destroy completely whatever was on his brain. But if you suspect anything strange might happen, kill him, without using your powers."

I start to stab not-Brian zombie.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 22, 2012 03:33

"Ahh see look, nothing to worry about. He's already better."

written by Kristos on Feb 22, 2012 04:54

I put on my badge and hat, then try to stuff some of the foam back in my boxes and shut them to keep everything from flying out.

"Roadblock?"

written by 4616599 on Feb 22, 2012 07:38

I look around for any clones.

"It's almost as if there's were a big problem in there."

I think back.

"Surely that box didn't need that much attention? Maybe it was Jam-Y?"

"Ah well..."

I grab the truncheon and handcuffs, and see if there's anything meaningful on the terminal screen.

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2012 17:33

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O gets into the conversation. He says it's probably a good idea to rest right now... he needs it, and so does his blaster. He offers some meds if people need them, and they can fashion some bandages. That doesn't seem to be needed, though.

He asks about the Troubleshooters. Were there a couple of YELLOWS and some REDs? He hopes they got to safety.

"Yeah," one clone from the second group replies. "They went up against some zombies while we escaped. I don't know if they manages to get to safety or not."

Another clone, an ORANGE, adds, "You say the garage was overrun? That's bad news... we were hoping to get to Subsector A..."

L4-O keeps quiet. He's sending a PDC messgae to Nukabot, telling it that it can either keep attacking zombies or get clear. The bot does not reply.

A wave of dizziness overtakes him. Maybe he lost more blood than he thought...

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y tells Jam-Y to try and read the zombified Brian-O. Hopefully, the nanomachines don't damage the mind. Though he does admit that there is a chance that something bad could happen, in which case Jam-Y should just terminate the zombie.

Speaking of zombies, Brian-O is joined by several more from the stairwell. Speed-Y stabs them.

Azir-R states that everything is alright, since Brian-O got better. Ignoring the fact that Brian-O is now nothing more than a shambling mound of reanimated deadness.

Kris-R's autohack

Kris-R puts on his badge and hat, and leaves everything else where it is. (No reflec, or laser pistols? What's a Troubleshooter that can't shoot trouble? As the saying goes, dead.)

He asks about the roadblock. "It appears that the Armed Forces are barricading the Industrial Subsectors," the autohack replies. "Their bots are not telling me anything else, other than 'Code Three-Zed.' Does that mean anything to either of you?" The autohack makes another turn.

Internal Security Checkpoint, A Level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R looks to see if there is anyone in the checkpoint, but doesn't find anyone. It must have been a really big emergency. Perhaps that box? Or maybe Jam-Y?

He takes the handcuffs and truncheon, and sneaks a look at the terminal. A message on the screen reads

Alert

Code 3-Zed in progress at Industrial Subsectors A and B - report to [REDACTED] immediately.

DO NOT APPROACH INDUSTRIAL SUBSECTORS

written by Speeder on Feb 22, 2012 18:46

"WHY YOU DO NOT STAY DEAD?"

I stab the zombies now with rage.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 22, 2012 19:19

I struggle to maintain consciousness... perhaps a pep pill will help. I try to take one if I can, then get back into my relaxed position.

Did the Armed Forces training come with any blood loss procedures... I try to concentrate on that...

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 22, 2012 19:39

I continue to provide support fire in the form of headshots, despite my teams sudden disinterest in being protected.

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2012 21:34

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While he waits for Jam-Y, Speed-Y keeps stabbing. Why won't these things stay dead?

Azir-R continues trying to get headshots with his new barrel. Between them, they're able to fell another two zombies.

But the zombies just keep coming.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O tries to remain conscious... maybe a pep pill will work? He tries it. His heart begins to race and pound in his chest...

He tries to remember the Armed Forces training for heavy blood loss, and remembers that he would need combat drugs which he simply doesn't have on this mission.

The two groups of clones are discussing possible routes of escape. One suggestion is to get to the roof, and... somehow cross to other buildings?

written by Cryoburner on Feb 22, 2012 22:13

"Hmm... It's not quite as good as Hot Fun, but not quite as tongue melting as Tasty Gel Substance Treat."

I begin munching on a few more pieces of Packy-Foam, while I have a better look at the other equipment.

I first check the troubleshooter's helmet to determine just what type of helmet it is, whether it has straps and/or a visor and/or a headlamp, and whether there is comfortable cushioning inside. I place it on my head to determine just how comfortable any such cushioning might be.

I then attach my Loyalty Officer's MBD badge to my jumpsuit directly beneath my name badge, once again orienting it so as to be optimally examinable. I then examine it.

After that, I have a look at the Loyalty Transcripts Recorder, to see just what it is, and the ELT Tests and SDL cards to see just what they involve. I then have a look at the box to try and estimate just how many pieces of Packy-Foam are inside.

written by Jam on Feb 22, 2012 22:52

"I dunno... I'll try..."

I try to read Brian-O's mind for any thoughts that may have been left over from when he was alive.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 22, 2012 23:02

“Yeah but, there might be zombies all around the buildings too... I don’t have many explosives left...”

I pause for a moment to take a breath.

“Although I can probably still deal with clusters of zombies in the open with my cone rifle... I’m sure I still have some useful shells here somewhere.”

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 23, 2012 00:20

Deciding to try something, I take the barrel from my second pistol(the one I haven’t fired yet) and gently toss it halfway up the stairs. Then, I take my other pistol and fire off a careful shot at the barrel on the stairs.

If I miss, I repeat the attempt to fire at the barrel.

written by Kristos on Feb 23, 2012 01:47

To the autohack I reply: “I have heard that once before. Though I cannot remember for sure what it meant, it is not a fun thing.”

To Cryo-R: “Chew, but do not swallow. Consuming Packy-Foam is known to cause harmful mutations in CAL sector.”

When our route appears to be more stable I re-open the boxes and fully equip myself.

written by Gligar on Feb 23, 2012 02:17

Kris-R’s autohack

Cryo-R comments on the taste of Packy-Foam... and decides to chew some more.

Then he inspects his equipment. First, the helmet. It’s a Troubleshooter Helmet, designed in such a way that it is clear that the wearer is a Troubleshooter. It’s designed to not require any padding or chin-straps, and perhaps offer a measure of protection against impacts to the head. Additional accessories such as visors and headlamps are, well, additional, but are not provided as standard. Cryo-R puts his on and finds the fit to be adequate.

Next, the MBD badge. Naturally, he puts it on in such a way that he can see it “properly”, but this of course means that it is upside-down to everyone else. Looking at it, he sees the logo of a Loyalty Officer.

Next, the Loyalty Transcripts Recorder. It is issued in a locked case which seems quite sturdy. The key is taped to the side, so he uses it to open the case, revealing a tape recorder, complete with one spool of tape. And a take-up reel. The machine is ready to record.

Finally, the tests (which are Emergency Loyalty Tests, which can be used in an emergency to determine if a clone is acting in a loyal manner) and the cards (which are Spontaneous Demonstrations of Loyalty cards, which detail ways in which a Loyalty Officer can instruct clones in ways to demonstrate their loyalty).

Wait, did I say “finally”? Nope. Cryo-R then decides to estimate how much Packy-Foam he has! He has a whole freaking lot of Packy-Foam. Le sigh.

Kris-R tells him not to swallow any Packy-Foam, since it has been found to cause mutations. To the autohack, he mentions that he has heard the term before, but does not know what it means, other than it does not mean anything Fun.

After the autohack makes yet another turn, Kris-R takes the opportunity to equip a set of reflex and a laser pistol.

It becomes clear that the autohack is now leaving the vicinity of the Industrial Subsectors.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Unlike, say, Jam-Y, who has agreed to try and read Zombie Brian-O’s mind. He finds himself overwhelmed by thoughts of hunger, intermixed with “the First Church of the Easter Cycle”. And hunger. Did I mention hunger?

The zombies continue to advance. Behind them, on the stairwell, someone seems to be shooting a laser pistol.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

It turns out that the shooter is King-R. He’s thrown one of his laser barrels into the midst of the zombies, and is firing at it. It take him three shots, but the thrown barrel eventually begins to squeal.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O points out that the zombies might have left the buildings. He doesn’t have that many explosive shells left. Though, he might have something useful left.

“You may be right,” a clone replies, “but do you have any other ideas?”

written by Jam on Feb 23, 2012 03:12

“It’s, the... ohhh... the First Church of the... Easter Cycle... ohhhh... So hungry... I need... food... FOOD! I NEED IT! I MUST EAT! NOW!”

I look for, something, anything to eat! There must be something in my pockets somewhere! Something, anything to stop this hunger!

written by Speeder on Feb 23, 2012 06:36

“Ok... that is good... although now I know that reading the mind of zombies is bad idea...”

I attempt to kill Brain again, and then whatever zombies are the nearest ones to us.

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 23, 2012 12:54

I hear the squeal of the barrel and run to get behind a wall.

I peak my head out nervously and yell out,

“Take Cover!”

While I wait for a explosion - or something - to happen, I check to make sure of how many shots I have left in my barrel.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 23, 2012 12:59

I continue to provide support fire.

written by 4616599 on Feb 23, 2012 15:14

"What's a Code-3 Zed?"

I strain my mind.

"Zone? Zoom? Zippy? Zig-zag? Zebra? These don't make sense? What's a zebra anyway?"

I get on the Transition, and tuck the truncheon under my arm.

"I'm coming, Z-things!"

written by Kristos on Feb 23, 2012 16:08

I must confess... my curiosity has become overwhelming. I grab a piece of Packy-Foam and chew on it. "What in all treason?!" I spit the foam back out and purify my taste buds with the rest of my Soylent-RED.

Then I look out the window and try to determine what sort of place we are now in.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 23, 2012 16:23

I start to wonder whether my heart racing is a good thing or a bad thing, though if I'm feeling less tired, maybe it's good.

Maybe.

I just continue to rest now.

written by Gligar on Feb 23, 2012 18:10

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y reports his findings to Speed-Y, but it seems that the zombie's hunger has rubbed off on him. Desperately, he searches his pockets... there has to be something... aha! A packet of Soylent RED! That'll do.

While he's munching on that, Speed-Y comments that perhaps it isn't a good idea to do that, though it is at least good that he could.

He targets Zombie Brian-O again... as does Azir-R. Together, they're able to eliminate the thing. They've got what they wanted from it. In the process, though, Azir-R drains his pistol's barrel.

Another zombie is picked off by John-R.

Then, two things happen.

First, someone, sounding very much like King-R, yells from the stairwell, telling everyone to take cover. The reason? There's a squealing barrel somewhere. Probably on the stairwell.

Second, another voice, this time from the other direction, saying "Die, fleshbag!"

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While he waits, King-R checks his laser pistol. He has three shots left.

He doesn't have long to wait before the barrel explodes.

Internal Security checkpoint, A Level, Iota Subsector

Joris-R is unfamiliar with Code 3-Zed, it seems. He tries to figure out what it means, but quickly gives up. It's probably worth investigating. He heads back out and boards the Transition again.

Roadway, near Iota Subsector

Joris-R starts up the Transition and directs it towards the Industrial Subsectors. There seems to be something... off about them. Perhaps it's the mass of Armed Forces clones and bots in the vicinity. The gate itself seems to be guarded by a warbot, for instance. Why would that be?

Roadway, near Kappa Subsector

Kris-R decides that he might sample one of those pieces of Packy-Foam... ugh! That stuff's horrible! How can Cryo-R even stand the taste? Perhaps it's... some kind of mutation? Or is he just too stupid to spit it out?

In either case, Kris-R looks for something to cleanse his mouth with. Perhaps his half-packet of Soylent RED will do the trick. As he's munching on it, he looks out of the window at the rapidly-approaching Kappa Subsector. The subsector seems to be made out of several smaller buildings, likely dormitories and support buildings, laid out around a junction between this roadway and another one. Some of them are not yet finished. Looming over them, though, at the end of the roadway, is the transtube station.

The autohack begins to slow down as it approaches.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O wonders if his heart racing like this is a good thing or not. Though, since he's no longer tired, it might be good.

He continues to rest.

The others continue to discuss their plan of getting to the roof.

written by Speeder on Feb 23, 2012 18:12

I promptly turn while pulling the slughtrower from where I redied it and firing in the probable cyborg.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 23, 2012 19:48

I dive way out of the way to the side... possibly hitting a wall due to a lack of concentration. Why?

Because, much like the hero of a vidshow, I try to detach my empty barrel and toss it towards the "DIE FLESHBAG", and then attaching a fresh new barrel.

All this, while dive/sliding out of the way.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 23, 2012 19:56

"Well, it's safe here for now, so let's go over a plan carefully. If we rush off and all die, that's just more zombies the Armed Forces, including myself, have to kill later. If you guys know anything else about the zombies, like weaknesses or such, now's a good time to mention them!"

Now that I can think a little clearer, I try to pull up a map of the Industrial Subsectors on my PDC. Specifically, the building we're in.

Even more specifically, I try to search the map for any alternate entrances and exits that we could potentially use if we find a nearby air vent exit.

written by Gligar on Feb 23, 2012 22:46

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y and Azir-R both react to the voice. Speed-Y grabs his slugthrower, spins around, and fires! At the same time, Azir-R dives for the floor while trying to unload his laser pistol, throw the spent barrel, and reload.

Speed-Y's shot hits the originator of the voice quite nicely. Azir-R... hits the wall, loses his concentration, and drops his spent barrel.

The source of the voice? At first glance, it appears to be a jackobot or something. But then it begins to deflate, revealing that it's just an inflatable model. It repeats its "Die, fleshbag!" sound clip a few times, getting glitchier and glitchier, before the sound chip dies.

Lucas-R tells them, "If that were a real jackobot, it would probably be attacking about now. You have good reaction times, there. Keep it up. You don't want to be caught out, do you?"

The sound of zombies can still be heard from the stairwell, but none seem to be coming in here. That's probably because the stairwell is thoroughly ruined, what with all the explosions.

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

They're all piling up down here instead. I don't think they've noticed King-R behind the wall yet.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O advocates caution. They don't want to rush off and get killed by the zombies (since that would cause more zombies), so perhaps they should focus on zombie weak points. One clone points out that the zombies are slow... perhaps they could outrun them.

L4-O pulls out his PDC again and tries to pull up a map of the building. Frustratingly, though, all he can get is a map of the outside of the building... but hang on... is that a fire escape there? I thought the building didn't have one...

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 23, 2012 23:19

"Oooww..."

I slowly reload, and get to my foot.

"That wasn't funny."

written by Jam on Feb 23, 2012 23:52

Yum yum... Soylent!

Oh wait, did I hear someclone just tell us to die?

"Ah! We're being attacked?"

I set down my soylent and aim at what I'm assuming is a cyborg.

"Die cyborg—er, I mean, jackobot, wait, hang on, what is that?!"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 24, 2012 01:13

"True. Zombies are quite slow, if we had them behind us but not in front, we could easily get away. Plus there's many ways of slowing them down. Though if they have us surrounded..."

I look back down at my PDC, then promptly start showing it to nearby clones.

"Anyone know where this fire escape is? This could be useful for us. Might be able to get out that way."

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 24, 2012 01:56

I look out at the stairwell to make sure all the zombies are dead, and if so, I call out for the others.

"Everyone alive up there?"

written by Gligar on Feb 24, 2012 02:17

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R tries that again, slower this time. As he does, he makes it known that he did not find that funny. "Why not?" Lucas-R replies. "I found it fun!"

Jam-Y munches on his Soylent before realising what just happened. He puts down the packet and aims his own laser in the direction of the deflated Insta-Inflatable jackobot target. Of course, since it's deflated, he isn't exactly sure what it is. It certainly has the right colours (and it certainly had a sound effect)... for a moment, it truly looked like a jackobot gone frankenstein.

From the remains of the stairwell, King-R can be heard asking if everyone is still alive.

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The zombies certainly appeared to be inert at first glance, but it seems that a few are still active. And now King-R has called out, they know he's there...

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O agrees about zombies being slow. If they could get in front of the zombies, they could outrun them. But the problem there is that it doesn't work if they're surrounded.

He looks down at his PDC, still showing the fire escape, and shows it to the assembled clones. He asks if anyone knows how to reach it. "The fire escape?" one replies. "I think it's on the other side of the building. But it hasn't been used in yearcycles..."

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 24, 2012 03:14

I take another look at the stairwell, both to see whether it is climbable and to count the zombies that are still "alive".

Also, I check if the state of the crumbled stairway is poor enough that it blocks the zombies' way of passage.

written by 4616599 on Feb 24, 2012 05:52

I approach the entrance cautiously, looking around with Cryo-R -like intensity.

written by Speeder on Feb 24, 2012 11:57

I shout.

"Speed-Y alive!"

Then if there are no threatening threats that are threatening to me I examine the 'jackobot' in a non-threatening manner.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 24, 2012 13:53

"Well I'm glad you are happy at least."

I then turn to the sound.

"I'm here to! (for better or for worse)"

written by Gligar on Feb 24, 2012 17:15

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R has another look. He can see that, without tools or probably some kind of mutation, there is no way to climb what's left. The remaining zombies (all eight of them) seem to be trying to climb over their fallen... other zombies to get up there.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y announces his presence down the stairwell before turning his attention to the "jackobot". It's really just an inflatable rubberlike thing with a canister of gas attached to inflate it, and a sound chip to let it play its sound clip. It's well and truly deflated now, and is no longer usable. But I'm sure hat Lucas-R has plenty more of them.

Azir-R also announces his presence.

Roadway, near Industrial Subsectors

Joris-R approaches the gate slowly. The warbot turns its guns (all of them) on him. "Do not approach!" it intones. "Code Three-Zed protocols are in place."

One of the Armed Forces grunts also makes himself known. "State your business!"

written by Speeder on Feb 24, 2012 18:35

I look puzzled, and upset with the seemly joke thing.

I attempt to figure where the thing come from, if it actually has wheel and can move on its own, or if someone had to come here and drop it there.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 24, 2012 19:20

"Hm. Any way of getting there through these air ducts? The less time we spend in actual rooms, the better..."

written by Cryoburner on Feb 24, 2012 22:46

"A key! How suspicious!"

I proceed to record a message on the Loyalty Transcripts Recorder...

"I found a key. It seems rather suspicious."

After closing the recorder back in its case, I lock it with the key and place the key in my pocket. I take a moment to note whether the recorder itself is likely to be indestructible, or just the case.

Having done that, I turn to the general equipment box and pull out some general equipment.

"Wow! A laser pointer!"

I munch on several more pieces of Packy-Foam.

written by Gligar on Feb 24, 2012 23:02

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y tries to figure out where the inflatable jackobot came from. He quickly determines that it has no way of moving itself. Someone must have put it there.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O asks if there is a way to get the fire escape via there air ducts. The less time they spend in the rooms and corridors, the better. "There should be... although to actually use it we'd need to enter a corridor."

Kris-R's autohack

Apparently, Cryo-R has ignored Kris-R's advice and swallowed the Packy-Foam he was chewing.

For some reason, Cryo-R thinks that the key to the recorder's case is suspicious, and dictates a note saying so, before locking the thing up again and pocketing the key.

As he does, he wonders if the recorder really is indestructible, or just the case. Well, it wouldn't be a good idea to test it, because if the recorder is not indestructible, it would count as losing his assigned equipment, which is treason.

Speaking of equipment, he takes a laser pistol (which he misidentifies as a laser pointer) from the general equipment box.

And then decides to eat more oft he Packy-Foam. This causes his stomach to protest at the horrible stuff (so I guess it isn't a mutation) and make him feel a little queasy.

The autohack comes to a stop at the crossroads. "Here we are," it announces. "Kappa Subsector."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 25, 2012 00:05

"Well, we could check that Corridor I guess... maybe if it's relatively clear we can get to the fire escape. Which way?"

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 25, 2012 01:26

"Uh, Speed-Y? Could you throw down that spear you poked me with earlier?"

I watch anxiously at the stairwell so as to dodge any spears thrown down.

written by Gligar on Feb 25, 2012 02:18

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O suggests that they check out that corridor... as long as it's reasonably clear. But does anyone know the way?

Some of the clones look round. It looks like none of them really know where they are. One suggests that they head in that direction.

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R calls up the stairwell, asking Speed-Y to throw his spear down, and then waits, getting prepared to dodge.

Presumably, he wants to do something about these zombies. One of which is close enough to touch him.

written by Speeder on Feb 25, 2012 02:20

"What do you want my spear for? It has even my name!"

I look again at the jackobot.

"Jam, someone put that inflatable jackobot here... I wonder who... This is not good, someone sneaked on us!"

written by Jam on Feb 25, 2012 03:04

"Oh, really? I just thought it was Lucas-R..."

I try to determine the source of the fake jackobot...

written by Speeder on Feb 25, 2012 03:18

"Oh, now I understood, this was a alertness test! Good, good... And Lucas is very sneaky! Nice! Also if our enemies were not zombies this could be good for diversion..."

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 25, 2012 04:20

I step back from the zombie that is within arm's reach and yell nervously back up the stairwell.

"I have eight zombies down here! I promise, I will return your spear, Speed-Y. You know, I did just save your life with my little laser barrel trick. At the very least, I saved you a bit of trouble. Couldn't you toss me something? A barrel? Is Azir-R up there? I could use a barrel, Azir-R!"

I continue my strange dance of zombie avoidance.

written by Speeder on Feb 25, 2012 05:44

I thrown to King my two spare RED barrels

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 25, 2012 05:49

"Speedy took care of it!"

Then I think...

"Are you thirsty, do you want a B3 as well?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 25, 2012 05:50

I try to see if I'm ready to get moving yet safely, and if the little rest helped me any.

If so, I tell them that we can get moving then.

If not, I tell them we should rest for a few moments longer.

written by Gligar on Feb 25, 2012 17:44

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Ppeed-Y wonders why King-R wants his spear, before turning his attention to the false jackobot again. Someone must have placed it there... meaning that someone managed to sneak up on them. That's not good.

Jam-Y disagrees, suggesting that Lucas-R put it there. And, looking at it, it is certainly possible that Lucas-R might have thrown some small object, say the uninflated jackobot, to where it is now, and let it inflate on its own.

That, at least, is a whole lot better, and suggests to Speed-Y that this was an alertness test. Lucas-R, he says, can be sneaky when he wants to be. Lucas-R just smiles.

He adds that the inflatable targets could be used to distract enemies (though not these zombies).

King-R yells up that he still has eight zombies to deal with down there. He is in desperate need of some sort of weapon, as he just used one of his barrels to cause the recent explosion. If he can't have the spear, he asks for some laser barrels instead. Either Speed-Y or Azir-R... that's fine.

Now, Speed-Y still has two RED barrels left over from last weekcycle. He throws them down for King-R to use, so that Azir-R doesn't have to. Instead, Azir-R offers a B3... he might be thirsty.

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

I don't know about thirst, but King-R certainly looks like he needs something. And there are the laser barrels now, so... what else? Well, avoiding zombies, for one. King-R might be faster, but there are eight of them, and one of him. He won't be able to keep this up forever.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O checks himself over again. It seems that he can risk moving if he takes it slowly, so he tells everyone else that they can get moving.

Slowly, clones begin to move out.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 25, 2012 20:47

I continue to follow behind the clones. If we pass any junctions, I peek both directions, as well as behind me, to make sure there's no zombies invading the ductwork.

written by Gligar on Feb 25, 2012 22:28

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As the clones move along, L4-O keeps up the rear.

They pass another junction. L4-O checks as they pass, seeing if anyone... or anything... has entered the ducts other than them. But the coast looks clear.

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 25, 2012 23:09

I shoot three of my shots at the nearest zombies, aiming for the necks.

When I've shot three shots, I begin to insert the next barrel.

"Thanks! Just a few moments. I'll be done here soon."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 25, 2012 23:20

I continue following behind the rest of the clones.

If I can, I check my blaster to see if it has adequately cooled off yet, and if there's a power indicator on it to give me an idea how ready it is for further combat.

written by Kristos on Feb 26, 2012 00:59

"Here we are, Cryo-R."

I gather any loose items, try to clean up some of the packy foam, and hop out of the door whenever it opens.

written by Gligar on Feb 26, 2012 02:25

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R begins shooting at zombies. He aims for the neck, and manages to cause one to collapse! Good shot! It struggles to get to its feet again, bleeding through its fresh wound. Yes, zombies can still bleed. Well, as long as they still have blood.

King-R lines up another shot. He hits a second zombie, causing it to collapse on top of the first. Though it also tries to get up. It doesn't seem as injured as the other.

King-R's third shot manages to not hit anything.

That's that barrel taken care of. He swaps it for a new one, and tells the team that he won't be long.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The group continues on. The lead clone announces that it shouldn't be too far now.

L4-O manages to sneak a look at his blaster. It seems to have cooled down a little now. It's also showing that the power pack is getting a little low.

Crossroads, Kappa Subsector

Kris-R begins gathering up his things. While he's at it, he tries to clean up some of the Packy-Foam before Cryo-R eats it and becomes violently ill from poisoning or something.

The autohack opens its door. "That will be 30 credits, citizens. Who gets to pay up?"

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 26, 2012 02:40

I wince at the flow of blood coming from the first zombie, then fire a shot at the zombie on top of it.

"Euayag!" I cry with a shiver. "Blood!"

"Still," I decide as I turn my pistol to the next zombie, "I can understand why being a troubleshooter is so much fun." Smiling, I pull the trigger several more times, aiming for the necks of the zombies again.

written by Gligar on Feb 26, 2012 17:19

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R recoils in disgust from the blood, though it's not enough to dissuade him from shooting at them. Being a Troubleshooter is fun!

He continues shooting. First, the second zombie. He scores a hit, but ends up not causing any damage. The zombie continues to try to get up.

Next, he shoots a third zombie, with the same result.

Third, a fourth zombie. He's more successful and causes it to collapse., And bleed.

That's a lot of blood.

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 26, 2012 17:46

"That's enough of this, " I mutter.

I walk up to the second zombie at fire at his neck at close range, before it can get up. I also walk up to the third zombie and try to fire off his neck before he can take a swipe at me.

I look for a fifth zombie and approach it to do the same.

Then, I backstep and change my barrel.

written by Speeder on Feb 26, 2012 18:16

I go help King, fighting any zombies in the way with the spear

written by Lightning4 on Feb 26, 2012 19:44

I continue my trek behind the clones.

If I can do so while moving, I replace the power pack in my blaster with a fresh one.

written by Gligar on Feb 26, 2012 22:37

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R has had enough. He steps right into the fray, and, ignoring the hands clutching at him, fires his laser pistol at the second zombie at point-blank range. Aside from causing more bleeding, it causes the zombie to stop moving.

He turns to the third zombie and tries to replicate the results. While he's able to hit it at such close range, he doesn't seem to do much, except cause it to let go of him.

He looks around and spots a fifth, also with its hands on him. He decides that it must want to be shot, and obliges. The shot pierces the neck, causing the obvious to happen: blood spills all over him. But at least he's not being grabbed any more.

He retreats to change his barre. The remaining zombies take the opportunity to regroup and turn to attack...

...to be interrupted by Speed-Y, who jumps down the gap in the stairwell, spear in hand. And what do you do with a spear? Stab things! Like these zombies. He's already attacking one right now. Specifically, number six. The spear punctures the chest cavity, but doesn't seem to do much else.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O and the clones continue onward, taking another junction. While they're doing that, L4-O changes his blaster's power pack.

Soon, the lead clone announces that they'll have to leave the ducts to continue.

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 26, 2012 23:31

I tilt my head to the side and take a good look at number three.

"This one must have been a mutant. There's no way it could still be moving otherwise. I think you should try fighting this one, Speed-Y."

I step around number three and take a couple more point-blank shots at zombies seven and eight. Then, if Speed-Y hasn't finished with number six by this time, I fire at this one in similar fashion.

written by Speeder on Feb 27, 2012 00:11

I also attempt to remove some heads, aiming for the neck of the zombies (but I don't care if I hit something like the mouth, or nose, or something like that...)

written by Cryoburner on Feb 27, 2012 00:32

"Kappa Subsector! That's convenient! You won't even have to remove that bot's wheels like you planned, Kris-R!"

I take a moment to remove the other stylish outfit from the general equipment box, and put it on. I decide to hold off on more Packy-Foam for now.

"Hmm... I guess it was Kris-R's idea to get in here, so I suspect he's willing to pay. I would have been just as happy walking, or maybe packaging myself in a box and shipping myself here in the back of a big truckbot or something."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 27, 2012 01:02

If I can without disrupting everyone, I try to move forward so I can get a good look of the corridor outside of the vent.

If I can't make it up there, I ask,

"What's it look like? How many zombies around?"

written by Gligar on Feb 27, 2012 01:58

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R has a good look at number three. He believes that it may be a mutant - nothing else would explain how it could still be moving. (Funny... it doesn't look like a mutant... then again, most mutants don't look like mutants, either.) He suggests that Speed-Y have a go at fighting it.

Of course, Speed-Y is busy with number six, so King-R steps round it and starts on numbers seven and eight. First, number seven. He pulls off a shot, which somehow decapitates it! It must have been a particularly weak zombie or something. Number eight fares much better, due to Seven's decapitation spreading blood and gunk everywhere. And we all know how much King-R likes gunk.

By now, Speed-Y has managed to stab Six a few times in the head, causing a rather messy collapse. He moves on to Three, while King-R tries to regain his composure. Speed-Y is more successful than King-R when it comes to Three.

However...

It seems that the zombies managed to score hits on King-R, tearing chunks out of him. He only just realised and noticed his wounds, whereupon they began to protest. Rather forcefully.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

On hearing the clone, L4-O tries to get up to the front, but finds his path blocked. These air ducts are rather narrow, after all. He resorts to raising his voice, asking the clone what he sees, and how many zombies there are.

"Not good. There are definitely zombies out there. I'd say... fifteen or so."

Crossroads, Kappa Subsector

Cryo-R claims that being in Kappa Subsector is "convenient, since Kris-R won't have to remove that bot's wheels like he planned."

"And which bot was this?" asks the autohack.

Cryo-R continues, suggesting that Kris-R could pay. Cryo-R doesn't seem willing, and suggests that he could have walked here. Or, he adds as he grabs a set of reflex from the box, he could have mailed himself inside of a big truckbot...

"You do know that mailing oneself, and avoiding security inspections, pass checks, and advertising, constitutes treason?" asks the autohack. "I believe that the punishment is to be terminated by being run over by a truckbot..."

"So, when do I get my money?"

written by Speeder on Feb 27, 2012 02:07

I continue fighting zombies, but as soon as I notice how in bad shape King is, I shout.

"Jam, King is heavily injured, I need you here!"

written by Kristos on Feb 27, 2012 05:25

I pay the 30 credits and begin walking, looking around for any indication of the TransTube station. A convenient sign would be nice.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 27, 2012 06:18

"Yes, yes, I'm an expert at treason!"

I point at my loyalty officer badge, showing that I clearly am an expert at treason, or detecting it anyway.

"I said I would have, had I been some kind of traitor, which I clearly am not, so I probably would have just walked, or maybe done something vaguely similar to walking involving wheels and a platform."

[961]

"I'll just be going now."

I step out of the autohack, taking any remaining supplies with me. I leave a bit of Packy-Foam as a tip though.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 27, 2012 07:30

"You can use these to try and clear a few out."

I pass forward a couple of my grenades, unless I only have one left. Then I just pass the one forward.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 27, 2012 14:32

I know King-R and Speed-Y are down there, which means the experts are at work.

So instead, I position myself on the stairwell in such a way that I can snipe at some zombies without going into the fray.

If I can, I do (snipe that is).

written by Gligar on Feb 27, 2012 17:06

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y continues stabbing at number eight. Just this one, and one more, left.

He notices King-R and calls for Jam-Y to come and see to him.

Stairwell, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

It is Azir-R who responds. He is in no condition to offer medical aid, so he instead takes potshots at zombies. There are only the two left - hold on a minute, is Number One still trying to get up? Not for long! Azir-R gets off a shot, burrowing right through One's head...

He gets off another shot, aiming at Number Eight, which removes an arm.

Number Five rounds on Seed-Y, and scores a hit.

From somewhere, there is the sound of a squealing barrel.

Crossroads, Kappa Subsector

Kris-R elects to pay the thirty credits, and begins to walk towards the helpfully-labelled transtube station.

Cryo-R claims to be an expert at treason, as evidenced by his Loyalty Officer badge. "For all I know, you could have bought that from the INFRARED Market," the autohack replies. "I am not convinced. Especially since you claim that, though you could have walked, you could have done something involving wheels. Well, these wheels are assigned to me, you understand? Hey! Why are you walking off leaving Packy-Foam all over the seats?"

Luckily, he doesn't get far. A voice from a nearby building calls out to both him and Kris-R. "A moment of your time, citizens! Impromptu Hygiene Inspection!"

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O passes forward a couple of his five remaining grenades so that those at the front can attempt to deal with the zombies out there.

Shortly afterwards, there is an explosion.

Followed by a scream.

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 27, 2012 18:11

"Ugh... Blood! Blood! Too much blood!"

I try not to look at my wounds as I fall to my knees. Actually, I'll close my eyes.

"Scrubots. Need Scrubots."

I start to hyperventilate.

written by Speeder on Feb 27, 2012 18:35

I look at King.

"Please do not break down before we figure what barrel is squealing and get rid of it!"

I finish killing any zombies, while shouting.

"Damn, I got hit!!!"

I check what damage the zombie did.

Then I look up.

"Thanks Azir!"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 27, 2012 19:00

I look very concerned.

"Erm. Zombies don't scream, do they? What's going on up there?!"

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 27, 2012 21:01

I check my barrel, to make sure it's not the squealer.

If it is, it gets tossed far from living clones.

If it is not, I take the time to reply to Speed-Y:

"Think nothing of it. By the way, I think someone's barrel's about to go off in a bad way!"

written by Gligar on Feb 27, 2012 22:12

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As you might imagine, King-R isn't reacting well to all this blood. He sinks to his knees and closes his eyes... and I think he might be hyperventilating. I can't imagine that he's happy right now...

Speed-Y tells him to get a hold of himself, at least until they figure out whose barrel is squealing. He stabs Eight one more time before completely missing Five. He ends up bashing the wall, causing his spear's screwdriver to loosen a bit.

He then realises the he has been hit. Specifically, Eight has managed to gash him pretty deeply on the chest. And right now, Five is threatening to make it worse.

He does thank Azir-R, though.

Stairwell, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R checks his barrel. So that's where the squealing is coming from... He pulls it off and throws it somewhere safe (read: where nothing is alive). That ends up being through the door on Level 1...

It continues to squeal.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O gets worried. Zombies don't scream... do they?

He asks forward, trying to figure out what is happening. "Er... I don't know... If zombies don't scream, then maybe there was a living clone out there... a zombie sympathiser? It can't be..."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 27, 2012 23:08

"Hm. Well anyway, how many left? I'm sure those grenades took out a bunch, but now we need to hurry... I'm sure that alerted the rest."

written by Speeder on Feb 28, 2012 01:40

I quickly flip the spear around like a quarterstaff and try to crack zombie five head at that.

And then whatever zombie is closer of hitting him again.

written by Gligar on Feb 28, 2012 02:09

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O doesn't seem too concerned about the possible casualty in the corridor. he's more interested in how many zombies are remaining. "It looks like we have six left", replies the lead clone.

L4-O adds that they need to hurry. That explosion probably alerted the horde. "So we just have to brave them?" asks the lead clone.

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y flips his spear and starts zombie bashing. Of course, there is only one left. And, though he is able to incapacitate the thing, it's able to get off another hit.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 28, 2012 03:44

"Yep. My blaster is ready for some more action, I can probably pick off a good few zombies if we need to. Here, use another grenade..."

I pass one more up.

written by Speeder on Feb 28, 2012 03:51

I get upset as it hits me and bash the thing in rage for a while.

Then I calm down, and fix the spear.

After it is fixed, I check my wounds.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 28, 2012 04:45

"A hygiene inspection! That's convenient, since we don't have a hygiene officer of our own. It couldn't come at a more convenient time!"

I check my PDC to see just what convenient time it is.

"Let's go, Kris-R!"

I grab Kris-R's arm and drag him toward the hygiene inspection.

written by Kristos on Feb 28, 2012 05:22

I... am dragged towards the hygiene inspection.

written by Granpire viking man on Feb 28, 2012 05:24

"Barrels? What barrel? I can't hear anything..."

I continue mumbling loudly, eyes closed.

"Can't look. Get the scrubots here first!"

I cover my eyes with my hands. After wiping them on my jumpsuit, of course - thoroughly.

"Too much red."

written by Gligar on Feb 28, 2012 18:40

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O replies in the affirmative. His blaster has cooled off now, and he still has more grenades, one of which he passes forward. "Well... okay..." the lead clone responds. "But it's looking like there are more of them... here goes..."

There is shortly another explosion. This time, there is no scream.

"I think that's cleared a path... here goes nothing..."

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y continues with the bashing. Rather vigorously, it seems. After a flurry of blows, half of which miss, the zombie goes down.

That dealt with, he turns his attention to the spear. It needs repairs, so he gets started on that.

King-R claims to not hear the barrel, still squealing away in the corridor where it landed. He's concentrating on not looking at all the blood. And trying to clean blood off his hands. And covering his eyes.

He still wants the scrubots to pay a visit.

Speed-Y finishes his repairs and checks his wounds. Those gashes on his chest look rather serious, and will probably hurt like [DFSR] once the adrenaline rush wears off. (Whatever adrenaline is.)

Crossroads, Kappa Subsector

Cryo-R responds enthusiastically to the hygiene inspection, saying that it's convenient, since they don't have a hygiene officer. They probably even have the time to take one, since it's now 13:30. He drags Kris-R into the building. Kris-R doesn't bother to protest.

Hygiene Inspection Office, Kappa Subsector

The voice is revealed to belong to a YELLOW CPU clone., probably a Mandate Enforcer. She is flanked by Internal Security goons, both of which are adorned with the usual scowls, armour, and truncheons. And slugthrowers. All three are spotlessly clean.

The YELLOW see the two clones. "Ah, excellent! Just sta - are you wearing a jumpsuit as a backpack, citizen? Can't you read the label? Oh well... we'll deal with that in a moment. Just stand over there, and we'll begin."

written by Speeder on Feb 28, 2012 19:20

I shout.

"Jam, I am hurt too! Jump down here! We killed all zombies already!"

I turn to Azir.

"Hey Azir, call Jam down here."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 28, 2012 19:43

I follow behind the group of clones as quickly as I am able.

If I get out of the vent, I immediately try to start shooting zombies with my blaster. Preferably the closest ones, but any zombie I can hit will do.

written by Gligar on Feb 28, 2012 23:05

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y calls down Jam-Y, since he's injured, and the zombies are all dead... again.

When Jam-Y doesn't respond he calls for Azir-R to go and tell him.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O follows along after the clones as the exit the air ducts.

From the corridor, one of the clones seems to be having trouble. Apparently, the grenades have damaged the floor somewhat. And, from the sound of it, there are more zombies in the vicinity...

L4-O gets a move on.

Corridor 2, Level 4, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

He exits, and immediately sees the zombies approaching. He begins shooting, blasting one of them to bits.

As he's doing that, the clone from before points in one direction. "The fire escape sghould be this way."

written by Speeder on Feb 28, 2012 23:49

I then pay attention to hear the squealing barrel, or where it has been, and await for the explosion in safety.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 29, 2012 00:07

I turn to Jam

"Hey, the guys down there are hurt and are asking for your aid. You may want to consider helping them."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 29, 2012 00:56

I follow the clone, still trying to blast zombies at the same time.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 29, 2012 02:18

"Hello!"

I wave enthusiastically to the Hygiene Inspection Office crew.

"It's great that you happened upon us, because we're on a mission of the utmost importance, and lack a hygiene officer of our own. I'm glad to see that our level of hygiene will be inspected to make sure it conforms with all mandatory hygiene protocols. We wouldn't want the mission to fail due to inadequate hygiene, after all."

I stand over there, examining over there as I stand there.

written by Jam on Feb 29, 2012 02:43

I look at Azir-R.

"Huh?"

I give Azir-R a blank look... I seem to be a bit lost...⁷³⁴

written by Gligar on Feb 29, 2012 02:49

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y listens to the barrel. It's been rolling around in Corridor 3, apparently bouncing off some dead zombies.

Presently, it explodes. I guess those zombies are even less likely to get up again than they were.

Stairwell, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R pokes his head back in the corridor, calling for Jam-Y.

Jam-Y looks back at him. His mind seems to be wandering.

Corridor 2, Level 4, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O keeps shooting while following the clones, downing another couple of zombies as he does. But there are many more where they came from. And they get within range of the clones...

"Here!" says the lead clone. "This should be it."

Hygiene Inspection Office, Kappa Subsector

Cryo-R waves, and repeats that they don't have a hygiene officer. He also stands where he should.

He also inspects the area. He can see a Computer terminal on a desk, which seems to be idle. He can also see a RED Clearance stripe, which only seems to cover half the room. There's another stripe, but he can't see what colour it is from here.

The YELLOW begins the inspection, starting with Cryo-R. "Let's see... oh dear... Your nametag and MBD badge are upside-down, and you're wearing as jumpsuit as a backpack."

⁷³⁴ JAM: (ooc: Sorry, I've been a combination of busy and sick these past few days. Bad timing, huh? 😊)

I think that qualifies as 'sloppy'. Surely you know the regulations?"

The goons take notice.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 29, 2012 10:10

I try to keep away from the zombies, and keep with the group as we hopefully escape to relative safety.

Additionally, I try to rapid-fire shoot some zombies in the legs to hopefully slow down the ones behind them.

written by Speeder on Feb 29, 2012 13:36

I tug the screwdriver a bit, testing if I reattached it correctly.

Then I take a peek on what the now exploded barrel did.

written by 4616599 on Feb 29, 2012 15:09

"Code-3-Zed? That's not something I'm familiar with. However, I think I may be qualified to inspect this place. I was with a troubleshooter team in this subsector and I did notice several suspicious going-ons. I'm sure I could figure this out, or at least put the blame on someone... also, it seems that the team may need my help. Whatever's going on in there."

"I hope it's not a renegade mutant..." I mumble.

written by Gligar on Feb 29, 2012 17:24

Corridor 2, Level 4, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O keeps shooting, aiming at zombie legs, while trying to keep up with the group. Of course, with the zombies so close, and with so many of them (where did they all come from, anyway?), it's kind of easy to do. L4-O is able to fell one of them quite quickly, which causes several more to trip over it.

There's just one small problem... exactly because there are so many zombies, it's pretty easy for one of them. to get into a position to get a hold of L4-O...

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y checks his spear, and, satisfied that he's repaired it, looks out at the results of the barrel explosion. Well, it seems that the corridor is now painted in various shades of darkish-red, for one. And there's now a hole in the floor.

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Joris-R states that he's not familiar with Code 3-Zed, though he believes that he's qualified to conduct an inspection. He's a Troubleshooter whose team was assigned to the subsector. While in the subsector earlier, he did see some suspicious things. He is certain that the team will need his help, and... maybe he could find a cause... a mutant, maybe?

The grunt looks at him. "Sorry," he says. "I have my orders: no-one goes in or out. Unless..."

"Enough!" the warbot interrupts. "Talk of that override is forbidden!"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 29, 2012 19:12

"Not again!"

I start struggling and shooting again. Hopefully the zombie being tripped on my leg also leaves it in a better position for me to try to shoot it in the head. Repeatedly.

written by Azirphaeli on Feb 29, 2012 20:38

I call back to Speedy

"May need to wait on Jam, he seems a bit out of it"

written by Speeder on Feb 29, 2012 20:39

I turn to Azir and nod.

Then I go see how far the hole go, including if is possible to see a floor below.

written by Gligar on Feb 29, 2012 22:07

Corridor 2, Level 4, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

This is kind of familiar... zombies (well, a zombie) grabbing at L4-O...

While he's dealing with that, by shooting it, the lead clone works on opening the fire escape door. It hasn't been used in a while, as he said, and it has become stuck.

L4-O manages to dispose of that zombie only for more zombies to latch onto him.

Stairwell, level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R tells Speed-Y that he'll have to wait for Jam-Y to snap out of whatever it is.

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y nods, and investigates the hole a little further, expecting it to lead to a level beneath Level 1.

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As it happens, there is no level down there, only an air duct, which has been ruptured by the blast. It is one of the larger air ducts, though.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 29, 2012 22:21

"Ah... Aaaah! A little help here?"

I continue struggling and trying to blast the zombies trying to grab a hold of me. I go for heads when I can, but also arms if there are any good targets.

In desperation, and if I still have it, I try to get my length of ladder and start using it as a makeshift spear/crowbar. I try to shove zombies away from me with it, and try to keep any others from getting too close.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 01, 2012 00:00

I open my eyes carefully, attempting to steer my vision away from the various darkish-red paint shades on the wall.

written by Speeder on Mar 01, 2012 00:05

I attempt to figure if I can walk inside the air duct or if I would need to crawl or something.

written by Gligar on Mar 01, 2012 02:18

Corridor 2, Level 4, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O calls for help...

He tries to use his piece of ladder to whack away at the zombies, trying to get them to let go, while at the same time using his blaster to shoot what he can. But it's no use... for each one he kills, there are three more...

Some of the clones appear to try to help, and begin attacking...

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R decides to risk opening his eyes. Notably, he tries to avoid looking out into the corridor, now delightfully redecorated in shades of dark red, while simultaneously avoiding looking at zombie remains. That doesn't leave a lot to look at, other than up...

Corridor 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks again at the air duct. Like most ducts, it is too small to walk through, though one could crawl through if needed.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 01, 2012 02:28

I keep my eyes transfixed firmly on the ceiling, whistling the Mandatory Team Troubleshooter theme song, to the best of my abilities.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 01, 2012 07:23

"We don't have much time! Get the hatch open! Everyone not doing that, keep these zombies at bay!"

I continue struggling with the zombies, wielding my ladder in one arm as a zombie-prodding-poking-bludgeoning device, and my other one wielding the blaster as a zombie-zapping-incinerating-redeadifying device. If an unarmed clone should get in range of me, I attempt to give them my ladder since I'm probably not very effective wielding it while juggling a blaster too...

I concentrate on the zombies already grabbing me, and zombies that are about to be grabbing me within the next few secondcycles.

written by Speeder on Mar 01, 2012 11:45

I kneel near the hole and stick my head on the air duct, and attempt to figure where it go.

written by Kristos on Mar 01, 2012 15:15

I tidy myself a bit before I am inspected.

written by Jam on Mar 01, 2012 16:19

I suddenly snap out of my daze.

"Huh? Wait, what happened?! Did we kill all the zombies?"

I look around for any more zombies, and try to walk towards Speed-Y and Azir-R...

written by Gligar on Mar 01, 2012 17:38

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R keeps looking upward. Now, he's trying to sing the Mandatory Team Troubleshooter theme. He doesn't seem to be doing anything related to, you know, hygiene. He seems to just want to ignore it all.

Corridor 1, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y comes round, and asks if they've dealt with the zombies. Looking around, he can't see any moving, so it looks like they have.

He heads over to the stairwell.

Stairwell, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y finally joins Azir-R and notices that the stairs between Levels 1 and 3 are... pretty much gone. Below, he can see King-R, surrounded by a whole load of dead-again zombies, trying not to look at them, and trying to sing.

Corridor 3, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y checks out the air duct, seeing where it leads. It seems to run both ways along the corridor, with junctions nearby.

Corridor 2, Level 4, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Even as he continues fighting the zombies, L4-O instructs the clones to get the door open, as well as to help him hold the line. Though admittedly, since he is completely surrounded, he isn't doing that very well, is he?

He continues to bash and shoot while other clones try to help. It takes a little time, but L4-O is eventually able to rejoin the clones, though he does take more damage in the process. The combined damage is enough to cause him to pass out.

"Got it!" The door suddenly opens with a loud groan, and clones begin to exit. Some of them stop to help L4-O move.

Hygiene Inspection Office, Kappa Subsector

Kris-R surreptitiously tidies himself up while Cryo-R is inspected. "Well? What do you have to say for yourself?" the YELLOW is saying. "Not only have you violated uniform regulations on three counts, but you clearly haven't cleaned your jumpsuit recently. That's four counts. That's almost treasonous levels of sloppiness, citizen. I'll have to issue a 45-credit fine. More unless you explain yourself."

written by Speeder on Mar 01, 2012 17:47

I walk to the stairwell again.

"Ok, there are a air duct here, in case we need to flee the building or something, but I think we should check the garage again, everyone was there last time I've been there..."

Seeing King not really wheel, I decide to take some clothes from zombies, and cut the cleanest strip I find, and then tie around King eyes.

written by Jam on Mar 01, 2012 17:48

I look down at Speed-Y.

"How did you get down there?"

I try to find a way down to him that doesn't involve breaking both my legs in the process...

written by Lightning4 on Mar 01, 2012 19:40

I, well... don't do much of anything, really.

Besides trying not to die and thus become a zombie.

If I do manage to come around, I do my part in trying to get out with the clones assisting me.

written by Gligar on Mar 01, 2012 22:34

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y returns from the corridor, and tells everyone about the air duct. (Yes, everyone: Lucas-R and John-R are not far behind Jam-Y.) He suggests they could use it to escape the building, but he wants to check the garage again, since there were a lot of clones there.

He then notices King-R's predicament, and checks what's left of the zombies for a reasonably clean piece of cloth. He soon finds a partly-clean towel, which he cuts up to liberate the clean part. He uses the clean part as an impromptu blindfold, so that King-R won't have to look at anything.

Stairwell, Level 3, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y looks down, and wonders how Speed-Y got down there. Then he notices that, although the stairwell is pretty much destroyed, it might still be possible to jump down. There are still fragments of stair attached to the walls, so he could jump between those.

I'm not sure he'd be able to get back up, though.

Corridor 2, Level 4, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O continues being unconscious while the clones try to get him through the fire escape. The zombies don't let up, and pick off two clones, making up for the two they lose in the process.

Soon, though, the door is reached.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 01, 2012 23:06

"Ahhhh. Thank you, Speed-Y."

I stay in the same spot, not wanting to step on any zombie limbs or bowels.

"Yes, let's go back to the garage. I need to file some mandatory emergency hygiene forms!"

"Uh, though I still might need someone to take me at least part of the way. This unhygienic place burns my eyes. I'd like to avoid killing any zombies we meet. Couldn't we just give them a little food? They seem hungry."

written by Speeder on Mar 01, 2012 23:34

I look kinda horrified.

"King! We cannot give food to zombies! In fact, they are likely to eat human flesh! It is gross! We must let them starve until they die!"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 01, 2012 23:35

If I come around, I start assisting the clones that are, well, assisting me. Or I try to anyway, I'll probably be a big groggy after coming around.

written by Gligar on Mar 02, 2012 02:13

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Now that he doesn't have to look at zombies, King-R's mood brightens considerably. Though he still doesn't move, primarily because he now can't see if he was about to step into zombie guts or whatever.

He agrees that they should return to the garage. He needs to fill out some Emergency Hygiene Forms, after all. Of course, he'll need help to get there. He adds that he would like to avoid killing zombies. Perhaps they should just feed them?

Speed-Y reacts negatively to this suggestion. As far as he can see, the zombies would prefer to eat cloneflesh (or something like that).. and that is something they cannot spare. No, the zombies must starve to death.

Near the Fire Escape, Corridor 2, Level 4, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Could that area description get any longer? Possibly.

L4-O doesn't care, though. He's more interested in trying to regain consciousness. And, as he is being moved through the door, he does.

He tries to help the clones near him, who are trying to take out a few more zombies, but he quickly realises that in his condition, aiming is... problematic.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 02, 2012 02:47

"Violations? Hmm..."

I look down at my badges. I then look down at them further, then further still, until I am actually looking up at them.

"Ah, I think I see the problem."

I continue further bending over, and perform a handstand, thus correcting the problem.

"You do have a point about those badges. I can see how someone not standing on the ceiling might have perceived them as having less than optimal readability. Are you sure about the backpack though? I seem to recall it being distributed to me as a backpack, though I suppose there could have been a mix-up somewhere along the line. I've heard that the tags can sometimes be difficult to read, after all.”

“Oh, and my jumpsuit’s cleanliness might have been effected by recently passing near the industrial subsectors. They tend to be rather messy, after all, and our team currently lacks a hygiene officer to keep tabs on those things. Hey, maybe you could be our hygiene officer! I think we’d get along really well!”

I take a moment to examine the floor in greater detail from my inverted perspective.

written by Jam on Mar 02, 2012 02:53

I try to carefully climb down to Speed-Y...

“What if we can convince the zombies to eat each other?”

written by Lightning4 on Mar 02, 2012 07:30

Now that I’m conscious, I try to get through to safety and assist the remaining clones in doing so.

To the best of my ability anyway.

Unless I’m still being carried by other clones, then I don’t resist.

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 02, 2012 14:15

I survey the stairwell... I am unsure how harmless a descent it will be with a missing leg and broken arm, and will voice my concerns thusly.

I also remind Jam that King needs tending to, medically.

written by 4616599 on Mar 02, 2012 14:46

“Unless what? Surely, sirs, you wouldn’t deny a troubleshooter from trying to help his team, which was there before the trouble started, and may have had one or more of its members inadvertently start whatever the trouble is.”

written by Speeder on Mar 02, 2012 16:07

I look at Jam.

“Actually, this gave me a idea, if we manage to leave the building, and keep the zombies inside, I think they may eat each other until only one remain, and that one will starve and die, or we shoot it...”

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 02, 2012 16:10

“How do we know this? What if we went to the cafeteria and got some food, just to try feeding it to a zombie? Maybe cloneflesh is simply more convenient for them?”

written by Gligar on Mar 02, 2012 17:23

Hygiene Inspection Office, Kappa Subsector

Cryo-R inspects his badges... by bending over to look at them. He keeps going... and ends up falling flat on his face.

But he seems to have come to a realisation: he was standing upside-down!

He tries to recover and perform a hand-stand, but ends up crashing over into one of the goons. Said goon takes the safety off his weapon and points it right in Cryo-R’s face.

Meanwhile the YELLOW is saying, “Why do I always end up with these cases...”

Cryo-R continues, explaining that they have just been past the Industrial Subsectors, and offers the YELLOW a position on the team. The YELLOW tries to decline politely, but is already feeling annoyed at Cryo-R’s antics.

While Cryo-R inspects the floor (synthcrete, spotless), the YELLOW continues. “Have you considered taking the badges off and putting them back on the other way round? That way, you wouldn’t have to stand on your hands, citizen. You wouldn’t want all the blood to go to your head, would you? And what if your arms get tired? And besides, you’ve just demonstrated how difficult it is to do it. As such, I’ll have to fine you an additional 25 credits.”

The YELLOW turns to Kris-R, and begins inspecting. “Hmmm... I see that your jumpsuit could do with cleaning, too. Do you have an explanation?”

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y has a go at jumping down to join Speed-Y, and gets all the way to the last jump before missing and falling on an ex-zombie. Ouch! But at least he doesn’t seem to be injured.

While Lucas-R tries to jump down after him, he offers a suggestion: let the zombies eat each other.

Speed-Y likes that. Perhaps they could escape, and let the zombies eat themselves, or starve, until there is only one left, that can either starve or be shot?

King-R has another suggestion. What if they don’t need to eat cloneflesh, and only do so because it is convenient? Perhaps they could head to the cafeteria to get them some food?

Azir-R has a small problem with getting down: he can’t, really. He is injured, after all. As is King-R. He reminds Jam-Y of these facts.

Fire escape, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O manages to get to his feet, and tries to usher clones out of the building.

As he does, he notices that one of the Junior Citizens isn’t following. He’s looking at the zombies for some reason.

Speaking of zombies... Their sounds can be heard from below.

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Joris-R wonders that the “except” means, and asks if they would deny a Troubleshooter who was part of a team assigned there before the trouble started, and may have in fact accidentally set it off...

The warbot replies. “The directive is clear. Move or...”

It is interrupted by louder noises behind it. It turns around.
"None may leave!"

The source of the noises ignores it. The reason for that is obvious: they are zombies.

The warbot repeats itself. "You may not leave! Turn back now!"

The grunt turns to look. "Vat it." He turns back to Joris-R.
"Wait... did you say something about mutants? I'm not a big fan of them... it's why I joined the Mutant Mashers."

He pauses, as if expecting something.

written by Speeder on Mar 02, 2012 17:36

After a while looking at Azir.

"What happened to the wheelchair?"

I then shout.

"John, if you are still over there, can you grab Azir good arm and slowly put him here until someone can grab him on this side?"

I then look at Jam.

"Can you patch up King and then me?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 02, 2012 21:05

"Hey! You! Those zombies aren't your friends, if you want to live, get out here now!"

If the Junior Citizen doesn't come and is within grabbing range, I try to just grab him and drag him out with me to safety.

written by Gligar on Mar 02, 2012 22:14

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks at Azir-R and wonders where his wheelchair went. Not that it would help in getting him to Level 1, mind you... he has to ask John-R, who is still up there, to help lower Azir-R. It's slow work, especially since Azir-R only has one good arm to grab.

Speed-Y then asks Jam-Y to patch up King-R first, then him.

Fire escape, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O calls out to the Junior Citizen, telling him to get out of the building now. Those zombies aren't friendly, and will probably kill him. "How do you know?" is the reply. "They might just want a haaah!"

It seems that the Junior Citizen pushed his luck a little too far, for a zombie just tries to grab at his head. L4-O ends up having to pull him to safety.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 02, 2012 22:24

"The only thing they want to hug is your brain. With their teeth. What's left of their teeth anyway."

If the fire escape door is reachable, I try to secure and close it before any zombies try to follow us. I then try to proceed with the rest of the clones towards... safety?

If I can't close the door, I just proceed then.

written by Jam on Mar 03, 2012 03:52

I nod, and start patching up Azir-R...

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 03, 2012 05:48

Thanks guys, sorry for the hold up.

written by 4616599 on Mar 03, 2012 11:03

"Mutants? Oh yes, I suppose the loyal ones are fine, but you can never tell."

"Wait...did you say Mutant Mashers? L4-O's in my team. He's in there!"

I gesture behind him, then gasp.

"Oh my, it's a heap of shambling mu- no, it's zombies! This is worse than I thought!"

I fumble around for a laser pistol, and wind up pulling out a pair of handcuffs, which I threateningly brandish at the zombies.

written by Speeder on Mar 03, 2012 11:58

I turn to Jam.

"Can you go fix King please? You know, I need to first put Azir on the ground before you are effectively patching up him... Because right now I think he is mid-air"

written by Gligar on Mar 03, 2012 15:36

Fire escape, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O starts lecturing the Junior Citizen about the ways in which zombies will hug you. That it, your brain. With their teeth. But the Junior Citizen doesn't seem all that interested, so he gives up.

With there being no more stragglers, L4-O attempts to close the fire escape, but it just sticks when it's almost closed. Oh well, good enough, right?

He checks the rest of the clones to find that they're heading up to the roof. He follows them.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y doesn't bother waiting for Azir-R to even get lowered to the ground before getting to work on him.

Speed-Y suggests that he go and see to King-R instead, since Azir-R is kind of in midair right now...

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Joris-R responds that loyal mutants are probably fine, but you never can tell. Realising what the grunt said, he adds that he knows L4-O He's trying to say that L4-O is in the subsectors when he catches sight of the approaching zombies... and points them out. As the warbot opens fire, the grunt replies, "Maybe we should continue this later. I reckon I'll be busy in a minute. Can I have your ME Card a moment?" He pulls out a scanner.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 03, 2012 20:57

Once on the roof, I join with the rest of the clones and do an area survey.

"Thanks for the assist back there... those zombies are just tearing me apart..."

I check my own wounds to see how much of me is left. If I need more bandages, I set about applying them, making more if necessary.

written by Gligar on Mar 03, 2012 22:05

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O follows everyone up to the roof and has a look around. The omnipresent smog makes it impossible to actually see anything, but in the distance he can hear the sounds of rapid firepower. Perhaps a warbot has opened fire on something.

He thanks the clones and sets about trying to make more bandages out of his jumpsuit... but he soon realises that he just doesn't have the energy.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 03, 2012 22:08

I try to get into a sitting position to rest and conserve what little energy I have left.

"Is there any other way down? Perhaps we could call something to rescue us from up here? I can't do much more of anything right now..."

written by Jam on Mar 04, 2012 00:21

I look confused...

"What? Wait, you said Azir-R, didn't you? No? Whoops... Er..."

I go to King-R and start patching him up instead.

written by Speeder on Mar 04, 2012 00:23

I burst laughing...

Until I end feeling what the two zombies did to me.

"YEAAAAOUCH! HA HAHA OUCH OUCH HA OUCH!"

I put my hands on where it is hurting and end doubling over.

written by Gligar on Mar 04, 2012 02:16

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O finds a place to sit. He wonders if there is any other way down besides the fire escape. Hmm... there might be roof access from a stairwell or something...

The other choice is to call someone to rescue them from the roof. But who to call?

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y stops what he is doing. Wait... didn't Speed-Y say Azir-R? He could have sworn he did...

He tries to clear his head and works on King-R instead.

Speed-Y suddenly bursts out laughing... whereupon his wounds suddenly start hurting, big time.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 04, 2012 02:29

I kneel down to let Jam-Y work on me, but I can't help yell when he touches my wounds.

"Graaaaahgh"

"Sorry, I think this blindfold has-" I gasp for air for a moment, "-Sharpened my sense of touch."

I try to concentrate on the song I was whistling before.

written by Speeder on Mar 04, 2012 03:33

After my laughter completely dies, I continue with my pains a bit.

"It hurts... hurts... it hurts... ow... ow..."

written by Jam on Mar 04, 2012 03:34

I touch King-R's wounds...

And clean them...

And dress them...

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 04, 2012 04:24

I yell...

And whimper...

And try to calm down...

written by Lightning4 on Mar 04, 2012 09:35

If I have energy, I hand a grenade to another nearby clone.

"Here. Keep an eye on that fire escape... if any zombies decide to start coming up it, we have no choice but to blow it. I'll see what Our Mutual Friend suggests we do... perhaps we can get some rescue up here..."

I try to put in the call on my PDC.

written by Gligar on Mar 04, 2012 15:24

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While Speed-Y moans to himself in the corner (it looks like his laughter has completely gone), King-R lets Jam-Y work on him. The problem is, with him being RED Clearance, he is not cleared for such things as anaesthetic, meaning that he is in pain the whole time. And it doesn't help that, with his eyes covered, he is acutely aware of anything that touches his skin.

But Jam-Y continues, applying dressings and clea - oops. Perhaps that isn't a cleaning solution...

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O hands out another grenade, just in case the zombies decide to climb the fire escape after them. Meanwhile, he places a call to Friend Computer.

The PDC rings... and rings...

written by Speeder on Mar 04, 2012 16:56 Hygiene Inspection office, Kappa Subsector

I look at Jam, and when I notice he aplying the...

"Jam, you just put B3 on his wounds? You know that this is not pleasant to the... patient."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 04, 2012 21:04

I wait for a response on my PDC.

Meanwhile, I give the surrounding area another look from my position. I probably can't see much though... if my torch provides better vision around me, I use it.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 04, 2012 21:41

I yell loudly, stand up, and throw a reflexive kick in Jam-Y's direction.

"Gah! THAT STINGS!"

"WHAT IS THAT STUFF?"

written by Kristos on Mar 04, 2012 22:13

"I was not aware that accruing this quantity of matter distributed on the outer jumpsuit surface violated the regulatory convention. As team leader I acknowledge that, in the absence of a hygiene officer, the responsibility to maintain proper cleanliness of the team is a subset of my role. Please inform me of the proper regulations and procedure and I will forthwith guarantee satisfaction of the aforesaid requirements."

written by Gligar on Mar 04, 2012 22:44

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks over at Jam-Y... why is he trying to clean out King-R's wounds with B3? Where did he get that from anyway? He only has the one can left, and I'm not sure he'd want to - oh. It seems that someone has been mispacking the medkits again, and put B3 in the kits instead of cleaning solution. Jam-Y presumably wasn't paying attention when he grabbed the bottle.

King-R screams and kicks out at Jam-Y, but as it transpires he isn't very good at it, and only manages to kick away the medkit.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O's PDC stops ringing, and gets a connection. "Thank you for calling The Computer... your call is important to us... please remain on the line and The Computer will process your call when it is able."

Then it starts playing a loyalty jingle.

While he waits, L4-O pulls out his torch and has another look around. He can now see the warbot that was firing earlier. It seems to be tracking a mass of clone-shaped objects. It is assisted by several more clone-shaped objects... it's frustrating when you can't get any details of who, though.

Kris-R states that he was not aware that getting your jumpsuit dirty was against regulations, and asks about those regulations. He claims responsibility since his team doesn't have a hygiene officer.

"The main regulation is CPU Mandate 214/885-23," replies the YELLOW, "which covers proper hygiene protocols. There is also 214/11089-c, covering hygiene inspections. I suggest you read them. I'll have to fine you an additional 10 credits for not keeping up with protocol."

She steps back. "Now, unless either of you has anything else to add, I suggest you scan your ME Cards." She indicates an ME Card scanner affixed to the inside of the door. Funny that you didn't notice it earlier.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 05, 2012 00:24

"Oh, yes, taking the badges off and flipping them over does seem like it might improve readability for most other clones. However, clones walking on the ceiling might have trouble reading them. Certainly, walking on the ceiling in a non-ceiling walking zone is traitorous. If such a clone recognizes me as a loyalty officer, they will undoubtedly stop their traitorous ways and turn themselves in to avoid trouble. If flipped around the other way, loyal, floor-walking clones might have an optimal badge readability angle, but a ceiling-walking traitor might mistake me for just another clone, and continue in his traitorous, ceiling-walking ways. As a highly-skilled hygiene officer, I'm sure you can recognize how difficult it can be to clean footprints off the ceiling, and just how important this matter is."

written by Jam on Mar 05, 2012 01:03

"Oh, whoops! Er..."

I take one of my towels and try to mop up the B3...

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 05, 2012 01:25

Assuming I have made it safely down to their level, I will survey the area (I haven't been down here yet)

written by Speeder on Mar 05, 2012 02:21

Well, I stop sobbing a bit and finish lowering Azir!

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 05, 2012 02:48

I stop talking for a moment to catch my breath and wait until the pain dulls.

"That was actually B3?! How could you mistake it? Cleaning solution doesn't come in a can!"

written by Gligar on Mar 05, 2012 02:55

Hygiene Inspection office, Kappa Subsector

Cryo-R admits that turning his badges round would improve readability... for most clones. But it is clear that he does not want to. He argues that leaving them inverted will aid readability for clones walking on the ceiling. Such clones are most likely acting treasonously, and, he hopes, will turn themselves in if they know he is a Loyalty Officer.

[971]

Besides, he adds, it must surely be difficult to clean footprints from a ceiling.

"You do have a couple of points there," the YELLOW replies. "But, by your logic, wouldn't everyone else have problems with identifying you as a Loyalty Officer if they can't read your badge properly? And not just that, but if someone was walking on the ceiling, being unable to read a badge is the least of your problems. Wouldn't you say? Because, after all, they're clearly a mutant, and would most likely attempt to terminate you, and not just turn themselves in. In my experience, turning themselves in only really happens in vidshows."

She thinks for a moment. "And as for footprints on the ceiling... I admit they're not that easy to remove. I'd probably have to call in a scrubot with an Extend-o-Brush or something. But... I thought I asked you for your ME Cards..."

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y realises what he is doing, and fishes out a towel to mop up the B3.

Speed-Y realises that Azir-R is still in mid-air and continues pulling him down. Once that's done, Azir-R can notice how damaged the stairwell is. He realises that it's just Level 1, not far from the cafeteria.

King-R wonders how Jam-Y could have mistook B3 for cleaning fluid when the latter comes in cans. Well... that's clearly a bottle that Jam-Y is holding, isn't it?

written by Lightning4 on Mar 05, 2012 03:02

"Bah... busy... but I can imagine so, having to sort out this situation."

I just resume resting for now, need to conserve energy...

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 05, 2012 03:11⁷³⁵

"I'm all for hygiene, but shouldn't mopping come after medical help? Besides, the floor is covered with-" I shudder, "Blood."

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 05, 2012 04:44

"Alright, where to now guys?"

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 05, 2012 05:08

I move for somewhere safer, because why wouldn't I? It's a state of emergency right now, isn't it?

written by Gligar on Mar 05, 2012 17:25⁷³⁶

Hygiene Inspection office, Kappa Subsector

Kris-R swipes his ME Card, and waits for Cryo-R to do the same.

⁷³⁵ GRANPIRE VIKING MAN: (OOC: My character is wearing a blindfold. He can't see the bottle.)

⁷³⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: counting Kristos' posty even though it was in the wrong thread...)

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R wonders why Jam-Y is prioritising hygiene over medical help, when the floor is covered in blood...

I think he answered his own question there...*

Azir-R wonders where they'll be going next.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O notes that his PDC is still on hold... probably understandable, given the lockdown.

Meanwhile... where's Mango?

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Still in the air ducts, it seems. He apparently got separated from the rest of the clones. But he never did like company.

He heads in a direction he believes is safe.

Noises nearby indicate that a bot is operating in the ducts.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 05, 2012 22:25

Since I have the time, I go through my maintenance supply kit and my tool kit, to both take inventory and see if there's anything that could be remotely useful in this situation... be it a weapon, or emergency alerting device, or somesuch.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 05, 2012 22:57

I shiver again.

"Ugh! B3 mixed with blood! I don't think I'll ever have a B3 again!"

"Just hurry up and patch me up please! I think there's too much blood down there to wipe up!"

written by Gligar on Mar 06, 2012 02:18

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Since The Computer is still busy, L4-O has a look through his toolkit and maintenance supply kit. Aside from the usual things such as spanners, screwdrivers, allen wrenches, socket sets, polarity reversers, spare screws, spare fuses (don't show those to King-R 😊), lengths of spare piping of varying types, grav-jacks (what clearance are those, anyway?), radiation meters, electrical meters, water meters, light bulbs, fluorescent tubes, LEDs of various colours, etc. etc., he finds some hazard lights and a blowtorch.

The PDC continues to be on hold.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R thinks of the concept of B3 mixed with blood and shudders. He mentions something unthinkable: the concept of not drinking B3 again. Lucas-R gasps.

King-R requests that Jam-Y finish patching him up and forget about the cleaning up.

written by Speeder on Mar 06, 2012 02:20

"No! What you will drink if you never drink B3 again..."

* Maybe he needs therapy for that blood aversion.

WATER? you know that NOONE drinks WATER!"

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 06, 2012 06:24

I watch out for the bot, proceeding on carefully.

I'm pretty sure that's the most care that I can muster from my condition...

written by Lightning4 on Mar 06, 2012 06:47

"Hm. If anyone doesn't have a weapon, I've got a blowtorch here. Not sure how effective it is against zombies though."

"I've also got some hazard lights. I don't know if they're strong enough to cut through the fog, but maybe if some clones in the distance see it, they'll know we're up here... though we might risk alerting the zombie horde too. Though I don't think they can climb walls..."

If I've got the energy, I check my wounds now and start applying rudimentary first aid, if necessary.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 06, 2012 13:00

"I don't know what I'll drink! I just don't want to think about - about B3! And Blood... Uuuuuughh"

"So please stop talking about B3 and blood so I can stop thinking about it! Maybe then, I can forget about this and drink B3 again!"

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 06, 2012 14:03

I crack open a B3 and drink it. All this talk made me thirsty.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 06, 2012 14:50

"Hmm... I suppose I could wear my badges the other way, then flip them around whenever I encounter clones on the ceiling. Let's just hope they don't wander off somewhere during the readjustment though, as it might be hard to locate them again. The ceiling's a pretty big place, after all."

I stare blankly for a few seconds.

"Well, it's been fun! We should probably be going though, as we have an important mission of some sort to complete, and then possibly lunch."

I also swipe my ME card.

written by 4616599 on Mar 06, 2012 16:03

I seem to be mumbling in a daze. "Vat it. There weren't any zombies around previously. Agh. Zombies are like, totally, treasonous."

I glide the Transition further up the road, hold my truncheon up like a projectile weapon, then fling it at the zombies, jolting the Transition forward for momentum as I throw it.

I halt the Transition near the goons.

"Sorry to interrupt, sirs. Is there an armoury near here? My team's definitely in trouble. This might include L4-O."

written by Gligar on Mar 06, 2012 17:54

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y demands to know what King-R will drink, if not B3. Surely not... water? Nobody drinks water!*

King-R doesn't know. All he knows is that he doesn't want to think about B3 or blood around now.

Speaking of B3, all this talking is making Azir-R thirsty. He cracks open a can and drinks. Mmm, mandatory.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango keeps moving. He soon encounters the bot - a scrubot - as he approaches a junction. It is using some sort of attachment to scrape residue from the inside of the duct. It beeps quietly as it approaches.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O announces that he has a blowtorch if someone needs a weapon, and hazard lights in case they want to try to signal to someone. He's not sure how much they will help, since he doesn't know how much damage the torch will do to a zombie, nor does he know if these lights will cut through the smog... but it might be worth a try, right? The YELLOW takes a couple of the lights, and offers to take over the distribution.

Meanwhile, L4-O takes the time to administer some rudimentary first aid to himself. He's able to clean up some of his wounds, and stop some of the bleeding.

Hygiene Inspection Office, Kappa Subsector

Cryo-R admits that he could wear his badges the right way, until he finds a ceiling-walker. Then, of course, he'd have to turn them round, and during that time, the traitor could get away.

He stares blankly for a moment, during which the YELLOW asks, "You have a laser pistol, don't you? You could always shoot the ceiling-walker, and then, while he's disabled, you could take care of your badges. That way, you get the best of both. Sigh... why do I even bother?"

Cryo-R states that they should be going. Apparently, he's forgotten what his mission is, and also that he's already eaten lunch. But at least he hasn't forgotten about his ME Card, which he swipes.

"Good, that's both of you," the YELLOW states. "Thank you for your co-operation, citizens. I won't keep you any longer."

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Joris-R seems to mumble for a moment. Those zombies are a real problem.

It seems that the grunts are thinking the same thing. They approach the horde and open fire.

Leaving the checkpoint unguarded.

* At least not directly... it's usually part of something else, such as TeaSir. Water on its own is unsafe, at least according to R&D Report G7-45a (clearance GREEN; RED versions are available).

Joris-R fires up the Transition, accelerates, and throws his truncheon at the horde. It somehow manages to miss everything.

Not that he cares. He's managed to enter the Industrial Subsectors without a problem.

Actually, there is one problem: weapons. He decides to ask the goons about armouries.

"What?" one of them (a different one... the goon he spoke to earlier is, indeed, busy, fiddling with his card scanner) replies. "An armoury? You'd have to go to Iota Subsector for that. And we can't allow that."

written by 4616599 on Mar 06, 2012 18:04

"Look, you'll need someone to guard the checkpoint, at least. And somehow, I've this gut feeling that I've, er... handled zombies before."

I hand the earlier goon my ME card.

written by Speeder on Mar 06, 2012 18:40

I suddenly look confused.

Then I turn to Azir.

"You have some B3? It might help against pain... I mean, it is not a pill or anything, but I saw in the ad that B3 is good for EVERYTHING, thus it might help against the pain... It is hard to not crawl in a corner and cry right now..."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 06, 2012 19:33

I nod to the YELLOW.

"Hopefully whoever is fighting down there sees them."

I start to wonder if perhaps there's food somewhere up here or in my belongings that I could eat to perk me up.

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 06, 2012 19:38

"Sure, remember I have tons of these guys... possibly."

I dig around my backpack for the B3, and also take inventory of the remaining cans.

When (if) I find one I hand it to Speed-Y.

written by Kristos on Mar 06, 2012 19:50⁷³⁷

"Thank you for the inspection. This has been a most fun and mandatory experience. We must hurry now so that we do not miss our ride!"

I exit and follow the signs to the transbot station.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 06, 2012 19:51

I move, keeping my distance from the scrubot, minding my business. I glance at what the residue is, but don't try to waste too much time examining it.

⁷³⁷ KRISTOS: (ooc: Here is what I posted in the wrong thread.)

I fish for my ME card, scan it, and return it to its home.

(ooc: And now my current action.)

written by Gligar on Mar 06, 2012 23:11

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Joris-R continues talking to the AF goon, apparently a sergeant, telling him that they need to keep a guard on the checkpoint. Also... he has the feeling that he's dealt with zombies before. "Well that'll help, at least, since you'll have to stay here until the lockdown is lifted."

Joris-R then remembers the goon from earlier, and hands over his ME Card. "Thanks, citizen," that goon replies. "I, er, needed to test this anyway." He scans the card and hands it back before turning to the sergeant. "With your permission, sarge, I'd like to follow the citizen's suggestion and get back to the checkpoint. We wouldn't want anyone to get in or out while our back was turned, would we?"

From what seems to be the roof of a building, faint lights begin to blink.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The lights, of course, come from L4-O and the survivors up here. Some of them, guided by the YELLOW, have been set up. They're blinking away merrily. L4-O hopes they'll be enough.

He begins to wonder about food. Is there any up here, or on his person? Well, the Junior Citizens seems to have summoned Vita-Yum bars from... hang on, was the lift's roof access open before? Looks like there's a room in there.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks confused, before asking Azir-R if he has any more B3. He thinks that it might be good at pain relief... after all, the advertising says that it's good for everything, right?

Azir-R, of course, has plenty of B3. In fact, he notices as he fishes around in his backpack, he has eight full cans, one of which he gives to Speed-Y.

Hygiene Inspection Office, Kappa Subsector

Kris-R thanks the YELLOW for the inspection, and adds that they need to get a move on. They don't want to be late for the transbot.

He then leaves, and starts heading towards the station. It's not far, actually, only a minutecycle or so away.

Outside the Transtube Station, Kappa Subsector

As he approaches, Kris-R can make out the station in more detail. It stands three levels or so tall and is, strangely, constructed of brick rather than synthcrete. It must be an old building.

Affixed above the entrance is a digital clock, showing the date and time. Right now, it is 13:55 on the 19th of Tenmonth, Yearcycle 214.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to avoid the scrubot. This involves climbing up at the junction, and allowing the scrubot to pass down the duct.

As it passes, he notes that the residue seems to consist of dust and black particles mixed with some sort of lubricant.

He moves on, to... where?

written by Lightning4 on Mar 07, 2012 01:26

Since I probably still lack the energy, I point out the room instead of going to it.

"Hey... what's down in that room there? There better not be zombies..."

I address the Junior clones more specifically now.

"Did you get those bars down there?"

written by Gligar on Mar 07, 2012 02:14

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O points out the roof access, and asks what's down there. Someone replies, "Oh, that's the lift maintenance room, I think. I don't think it's been used in the last few monthcycles."

He then asks the Junior Citizens if they found their VitaYum bars down there. One answers, "Yeah, there's a whole load down there. And some tools and stuff. It was really easy to get in there," he adds, with a grin.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 07, 2012 02:32

Wishing to block out all the talk of B3, I plug my ears.

I resume humming the Mandatory Team Troubleshooter theme song.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 07, 2012 03:36

"Nice! We can use those supplies... and I know I can use something to pick me up a bit."

If I can get up, I do so and see if I can get into the maintenance room myself, to have a look around.

written by Speeder on Mar 07, 2012 03:45

I look at King.

"That remembered me of that scrubot... I wonder if zombies attacked it."

I then open the B3 can happily and take a sip.

"Good news is, B3 IS refreshing.

Bad news is... it DOES NOT fix the pain."

I grumble in pain a bit, and then take another sip.

"I do not want to waste B3 by spilling it by trembling in pain, so I will first finish drinking it, and then I will tremble in pain."

written by Gligar on Mar 07, 2012 17:56

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Still trying not to think about B3, King-R starts doing the Junior Citizen La-La-La-I'm-Not-Listening thing, albeit with the Mandatory Team Troubleshooter theme. Perhaps he's forgotten that it mentions the "new flavours of B3" at one point. And the fact that B3 comes in cans...

Anyway. The theme song reminds Speed-Y of Leeroy, the scrubot, sitting deactivated in the garage. Was it attacked by the zombies? Who knows?

Ignoring King-R (maybe), he opens his can and takes a sip. Good news, B3 is refreshing, though we knew that already. Bad news, it does nothing for pain. But now that it's open, Speed-Y doesn't want to waste B3 by spilling it everywhere while shaking uncontrollably. So he'll just have to wait until he's done drinking it before letting himself shake uncontrollably. Which would imply that he can somehow control the ability to hake uncontrollably. Oh well, at least he has his priorities right 😊⁷³⁸

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O decides not to question how the Junior Citizen got the door open, as he is pleased that they have access to supplies they can use. And he knows what he can use right now...

He pulls himself together and stands up, rather unsteadily, so he can walk to the maintenance room.

Lift maintenance, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

A short flight of steps leads down into the maintenance area, which is Clearance RED. L4-O practically falls down them, and looks around.

As promised, there is a crate of Vita-Yum Meal Substitute Bars, sitting in a corner next to what seems to be a bedroll. A nearby table holds a couple of empty B3 cans.

Also present are the tools one would expect for maintaining a lift, surrounding the top of the lift shaft itself, and the lift machinery. What seems to be a makeshift guardrail, constructed from surplus piping, serves to protect against clones falling into the machinery.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 07, 2012 19:08

I grab a Vita-Yum of the appropriate clearance and immediately start eating.

I proceed to give the tools a good search for anything useful if we have to fight again.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 07, 2012 19:45

I move further along, suspecting that the others haven't passed through here. Not that I mind too much, so long as I don't get reckless...

⁷³⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: That's kind of an interesting ability, Speeder 😊 +1pp.)

written by Gligar on Mar 07, 2012 22:05

Lift maintenance, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O grabs a Vita-Yum bar and starts looking through the tools. Well, where to start? The usual spanners, ratchet [REDACTED]s, motorised splicers... oh hey, some hammers.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango keeps moving. It seems that he feels safe around here. With no-one else around.

Or, at least, that's what he believes.

But... whereabouts is he? There's a draft coming from up ahead, if it helps.

written by Speeder on Mar 07, 2012 22:19

I drink more B3, happily, in fact, seemly drinking B3 makes me VERY happy.

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 07, 2012 22:36

I am pleased that despite the recent events, happiness levels are improving.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 07, 2012 22:46

I grab a few hammers and a bunch more Vita-Yum bars and put them safely away, then attempt to climb back up onto the roof.

written by Jam on Mar 07, 2012 23:09

Seeing as clones are drinking B3, I search my own pockets for some to drink...

written by Gligar on Mar 08, 2012 01:38

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While King-R continues to try to not listen to everyone and generally act unhappy, Speed-Y drinks from his can. The B3 might not help his pain, but it does help his morale. B3 is good at making people feel happy.

Azir-R is pleased at that. But King-R is still a worry. Perhaps he has something that could help?

Jam-Y decides to join in, and searches his jumpsuit, finding a nice YELLOW can. (There's also the B3 he found in the medkit, but he prefers the can.) Mmmmm.

Lift Maintenance, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O decides to take some of the Vita-Yum bars, and some of the hammers. They might need them.

Then he heads back up.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

He arrives on the roof to find the PowServ YELLOW. "What did you find down there?"

written by Speeder on Mar 08, 2012 02:38

I look at Jam.

"Hey, I am drinking B3 waiting for you to patch up King, then me, then Azir! If you drink B3 too, I will have to drink MORE B3! I mean, nothing against that, but I should save them for later."

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 08, 2012 03:20

I try to dwell on the flavours mentioned in the song.

"Hey, Azir-R? You wouldn't happen to have a B3 that's a different colour than RED?"

"Not the treasonous non-red kind, just the kind of not-red that means... well... the absence of red... Actually, that might not work..."

"Oh no!"

A look of panic captures my face as I ponder the horror of the REDness of B3.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 08, 2012 04:56

"Some tools. These hammers might be useful if we still have a few unarmed clones."

"Also some food. I think I brought enough to last a little while."

I present the Vita-Yum bars into a small pile near the collection of clones, keeping an extra for myself. I put all of the hammers next to them.

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 08, 2012 14:13

I dig through my backpack, fairly certain I don't have what King is looking for. I instead keep an eye open for something that will help the poor clone relax a little.

written by Gligar on Mar 08, 2012 17:46

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks over to Jam-Y and tells him to hurry up with patching everyone up. He doesn't want to have to go through the team's entire supply of B3 just waiting for him. (He doesn't have any more, other than what's left in the can he's holding.) Not that there's anything wrong with that.

King-R tries to remember what flavours the song mentions, and asks Azir-R if he has any B3 that isn't RED. Even through "RED" B3 is just RED clearance, and is actually more of a brown colour.

Azir-R is sure that he doesn't, but still looks in his bag. It turns out that he does have an INFRARED can of B3 Plain, but he's more interested in other things that might help King-R... things such as the bottle of qualine he finds in his medication supplies. He recalls that just one swig of the stuff will improve a clone's morale to the point where they won't even panic if they're trapped near a leaky reactor. As one frequent user once said, life's funny that way.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O answers the YELLOW by putting the Vita-Yum bars and hammers in piles near the rest of the clones. "Ah, good," the YELLOW replies. "We'll start -"

[976]

He is interrupted when the fire escape begins to rattle.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 08, 2012 19:48

I sigh.

“Not good. Remember what I said about the grenades... if we need to, we should just completely blow out the fire escape and make it unusable for the zombies. That way, at least we'll be safe.”

If necessary, I hand out my remaining grenades to other clones.

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 08, 2012 19:53

That ought to do the trick!

“Sorry King, I just have this INFRARED B3... but I found something else you might like.”

I hop over to King and attempt to administer the Qualine dose.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 08, 2012 20:05

I keep going, towards the draft.

I remain cautious.

written by Kristos on Mar 08, 2012 20:37

Dragging Cryo-R along if necessary, I enter the TransTube station and approach the counter.

“Hello, we are here to take the 14:00 transbot to JHY sector. Cryo-R, could you present the travel authorization papers?”

written by Speeder on Mar 08, 2012 21:15

Instead of drinking, I only look to Azir for a while.

“What is that you are giving him?”

written by Gligar on Mar 08, 2012 22:10

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O doesn't like the rattle. He reminds everyone that they should grenade the fire escape if necessary, and hands out his remaining grenades. “But are you sure you want to blow up our only method of escape?” asks the YELLOW. “We're not sure that these hazard lights are even working, after all.”

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R tells King-R that he doesn't have anything other than the INFRARED B3... and the qualine, which he attempts to administer. Unfortunately, it seems that he isn't very good at making clones take their medicine, and King-R refuses to take it. Maybe he needs more practice.

written by Speeder on Mar 05, 2012 02:22

I am laughing hard after seeing Cryo last pose...

I am sure he might end actually convincing the hygiene officer that he is right XD

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 05, 2012 02:50

I'm shocked that you find this funny, Speedy-Y!

Those footprints on ceilings are a real challenge to us hygiene officers! 😊

Speed-Y asks what he's trying to feed to King-R.

Transtube station, Kappa Subsector

Kris-R enters, dragging Cryo-R behind him, and heads for the ticket counter.

Ticket counter, Transtube station, Kappa Subsector

Kris-R announces to the clone behind the counter that they need to take the 14:00 transbot to JHY Sector, and asks Cryo-R to show the authorisation papers. “You're cutting it a bit fine, aren't you? The transbot's due to arrive in - “ she checks the clock, “ - ninety secondcycles.”

written by Lightning4 on Mar 08, 2012 23:17

“Perhaps not... but is it really a method of escape if there's a horde of zombies waiting for us right down there? We've got food and some supplies should some stray zombies get up here, but I don't think we can fight off another big horde, let alone fight through the building to find some other way down.”

I glance at my PDC, to check it for any change in status.

“I've also got a call in to Friend Computer, so hopefully Our Mutual Friend will respond soon enough, and I can let Friend Computer know of our present situation.”

“And anyway, I think maybe there's other ways down. Might be some other roof access points here... which we should probably keep an eye on. Not sure if there's any exits in the maintenance room, don't believe I saw any.”

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 09, 2012 00:24

“Yes, what is it, Azir-R? Did you make sure you didn't pick up the bottle of cleanser by mistake? Someone did mix up the bottles, you know.”

written by Gligar on Mar 09, 2012 01:51

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O admits that he probably doesn't. But he also points out that an escape path which leads to a zombie horde isn't really an escape path, is it? They have food and supplies for the odd zombie that gets up here, but he doubts that they'll be able to fight off a horde, much less fight their way through the building.

He checks his PDC. It's still on hold. This is very odd. Usually, Our Mutual Friend responds rather quickly, but it seems to be busy all of a sudden. He just wants to tell it what's happening...

written by Gligar on Mar 05, 2012 03:02

The die roll wasn't quite good enough. 😊

Though I agree about cleaning footprints from ceilings.

scribble scribble

[977]

But anyway. He believes that there are other access points on the roof. They should look for them and keep an eye on them.

"We've got company!" shouts a clone. "Zombies on the fire escape!"

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R also wants to know what Azir-R is trying to feed him. After all, he knows that at least some bottles have been mis-packed, and that could easily be cleanser instead.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 09, 2012 02:08

"How many? If there's too many, blast them! Don't hesitate!"

I try to come up behind but keep a safe distance from any blast. If they decide not to use grenades, I fire up my blaster for a fight.

written by Jam on Mar 09, 2012 02:41

"Oh, right..."

I put the B3 back in my pocket, and get back to work patching up King-R... I try to make sure I'm actually using cleaning solution this time, rather than B3...

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 09, 2012 03:27

"I assume you, it's medicine to help with your queasiness. You'll feel better in no time after you take it."

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 09, 2012 04:03

"Can you at least smell it? I don't want to swallow cleanser. Or B3."

"Actually, better yet, let me smell it. I'm an expert on cleaning fluids now."

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 09, 2012 12:54

"Very well." I open the bottle and let him smell it.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 09, 2012 16:17

Noticing that I've somehow been dragged to a ticket counter, and am being asked for authorization papers, I respond.

"Yes, we are being efficient, not wasting any time waiting around for transbots. You may not have noticed, but I am an expert at efficiency."

I proceed to pull out the authorization papers in an efficient manner. I then examine the ticket counter.

written by Gligar on Mar 09, 2012 17:41

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O demands to know how many. "Looks like four."

written by Kristos on Mar 05, 2012 15:31

I fish for my ME card, scan it, and return it to its home.

written by Speeder on Mar 05, 2012 15:35

Kristos... I think you replied on the wrong thread...

written by Gligar on Mar 05, 2012 17:12

Don't you just love character limitations... 😊

With any luck, that shouldn't happen again.

A clone rushes forward with a grenade and drops it down the fire escape. There is an explosion. "Two now."

And indeed, the two continue to climb onto the roof.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y puts away his B3 and starts working on King-R again, this time making sure to look at the bottle to make sure that it's actually cleanser (it is). But he is distracted by an explosion somewhere close by.

Azir-R assures King-R that the stuff he's offering is medicine for his queasiness. But King-R isn't convinced, and asks to smell it first. By now, he considers himself an expert at cleansers, and doesn't want to accidentally swallow any cleanser... or any B3. (He might need to talk to Friend Computer about that.) Azir-R gives up and allows him to smell it.

As he opens the bottle, a smell permeates the air, one that is considerably un-cleanser-like.

Ticket Counter, Transtube station, Kappa Subsector

Cryo-R answers that they are being efficient by not waiting around (predictably claiming to be an expert at efficiency), and offers the papers. And then... he inspects the counter. Wasting valuable secondcycles in doing so, so that he can assure himself that he is, in fact, cleared to be here, and that the ticket clerk is also authorised to be here. This is not a problem due to the INFRARED Clearance of the counter, and the clearance-coded lines (none of which are in use right now, except for their RED line). The clerk notices even as she inspects the team's papers. "For an expert, you're wasting a surprising amount of time there, friend." She enters something into her terminal, which prints off something. "It seems that these are in order. Your tickets will be twenty credits."

A vidscreen behind her chimes, and displays a new scree, which indicates that a transbot is arriving at Platform C. It's heading for CUA Sector, and will be calling at JHP, JHY, NRR, TXN, VPO, and BOP Sectors on its way there.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 09, 2012 19:19

If I have line of sight, I let my blaster take care of the two remaining zombies.

written by Jam on Mar 09, 2012 21:06

"Oh, what was that explosion? Someclone had better investigate!"

I try to ignore my curiosity, and get back to work on King-R.

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 09, 2012 21:07

“See, now if all is well and good, this should help you feel better! I suggest taking a good solid swig.”

written by Gligar on Mar 09, 2012 22:14

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O looks over to the fire escape. There’s one zombie right there, so he lets loose with his blaster. He’s able to hit it twice before he’s overcome by dizziness... he’s not in the best condition, after all.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y comments on the explosion and suggests that someone check it out, but gets back to patching up King-R. Now armed with the proper cleansing fluid, he’s able to clean out King-R’s wounds and dress them properly. There, that should do it.

Now all that is left is his medicine, which Azir-R is describing to him. He suggests that King-R take a good swig of the stuff.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 10, 2012 00:02

I try to slink down into a crouching position and regain some of my awareness.

If I recover enough, I resume firing.

written by Speeder on Mar 10, 2012 00:40

I finish my B3 finally, and then I calmly sit on the ground (in whatever cleanliest patch I find), and then I turn sideways in a fetal position, and then I start shuddering in pain.

written by Kristos on Mar 10, 2012 05:05

I think about mentioning that our journey was interrupted by a mandatory health inspection. Then I decide that I like Cryo-R’s answer better. So instead I just hand over or scan my ME card.

“Cryo! There are no light bulbs, keys, or wheels on the counter!”

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 10, 2012 06:48

I look around. It isn’t easy to tell which place this is, other than that it involves drafts.

Perhaps it’s an office block or something...

written by Cryoburner on Mar 10, 2012 11:45

I hand over my ME card, and continue examining the counter. Namely, I check whether any ring-for-service bells are present on the counter, and whether they are in functioning order, if present. I also check whether they are secured to the counter adequately.

written by Gligar on Mar 10, 2012 12:37

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O allows himself to fall into a crouch, and tries to come back to his senses.

Meanwhile, the others are trying to deal with the zombie. Fortunately, there si only one zombie and lots of them, so they seem to have the upper hand.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y finally finishes his B3. That means he feels that it is a good time to give in to pain, and does so.

Ticket counter, Transtube station, Kappa Subsector

Kris-R looks like he wants to talk about the hygiene inspection, but decides to let it go and hand over his ME Card. He notices Cryo-R and tells him that there are no wheels, lights, or keys present.

Cryo-R also hands over his card... and continues inspecting. Even though he knows what isn’t here, he seems to think that there are ring-for-service bells here. There are not.

The clerk scans the cards and hands them back. Her terminal prints out something, which she hands over to Kris-R. “Here are your tickets. Thank you for your co-operation.”

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango looks around and eventually finds a grate. Through it, he can see the source of the draft: one of those big fans that is used to keep air flowing in the ducts.

written by Jam on Mar 10, 2012 18:12

I move over to Speed-Y and try to ease his pain, as well as treat his injuries.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 10, 2012 20:50

I just try to get back to my senses now, seeing that the group should probably have this handled.

written by Gligar on Mar 10, 2012 22:20

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O allows himself to fall into a crouch, and tries to come back to his senses.

Meanwhile, the others are trying to deal with the zombie. Fortunately, there si only one zombie and lots of them, so they seem to have the upper hand.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y looks round. He notices Speed-Y huddled in the corner, and goes over to him to work on him. It doesn’t look good.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While L4-O tries (not entirely successfully) to pull himself together, the rest of the clones work on taking out that zombie. One of them lands a blow to the zombie’s skull, splitting it open in a manner which King-R would most likely find disgusting.

Throughout the sector

“Mick-R-NRK-5, please report for termination immediately. You have failed to attend your missions, and it must be assumed that you have refused to accept them. Failure to co-operate this time will result in one monthcycle of mandatory re-education, followed by reassignment to reactor shielding duty.”

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 11, 2012 01:09

Hearing the scuffle, I mutter something about how I'm glad to be wearing a blindfold.

“OK, Azir-R. I think I'll try a drink of that stuff. I am getting a little thirsty.”

I hold out my hand to have a drink of qualine.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 11, 2012 01:34

“Well, that's good so far.”

I survey the fire escape for any damage, and if there is any evidence of more zombies potentially coming.

I also start snacking on my other Vita-Yum bar.

written by Gligar on Mar 11, 2012 02:25

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O hauls himself to his feet and goes over to look at the fire escape. Woah... that's a long way down. But he can see that the lowest section was damaged by the grenade, and that there are zombies trying to get up here.

In a further effort to steady himself, he pulls out his other Vita-Yum bar and begins eating it. It seems to help, just a little.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R is somehow able to hear the sounds of combat from all the way down here. Hmmm.

But at least he decides to trust Azir-R's word about the qualine, and puts out his hand for the bottle.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 11, 2012 04:17⁷³⁹

I take off my blindfold, snatch the bottle out of Azir-R's hand and start drinking thirstily.

written by Jam on Mar 11, 2012 04:43

I try to figure out exactly how bad Speed-Y is doing, and if there is anything I can do to help him...

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 11, 2012 05:12

I allow him to do so, and thank [someone] that it wasn't more difficult under my breath.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 11, 2012 11:28

I try to back away before I end up falling or something. I return to a resting position nearby.

I check my PDC again to see if there's any activity yet.

“Hopefully I get a response... soon...”

⁷³⁹ GRANPIRE VIKING MAN: (OOC: Oops. I was confused about where that fight was taking place.)

written by Gligar on Mar 11, 2012 17:31

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R is apparently being too slow for King-R, who suddenly pulls off the blindfold and grabs the qualine bottle. He feels nauseated by all the blood around, but that vanishes when he takes a drink. In fact, the thought of blood, and of B3 mixed with blood, doesn't even bother him right now. It's not like it's all his blood, after all. Everything's not so bad when you get right down to it. He's still alive, and he'll see it through. Even if he does lose a couple of clones in the process.

Azir-R is grateful that King-R ended up co-operating after all, and that it didn't get too difficult.

Jam-Y, though, is having a hard time seeing to Speed-Y's wounds. He won't straighten out and let him look at those gashes on his stomach, for instance. And he's losing a lot of blood.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O staggers back from the fire escape before he ends up falling off, and checks his PDC. It's still on hold, and is now playing the Tella-O-MLY Adventure Hour theme tune. Which reminds him, it's not been on recently... didn't he hear something about a new season?

written by Lightning4 on Mar 11, 2012 21:42

I start humming along with the theme tune. If it doesn't interfere with my pending call, I do a little research on Tella-O-MLY Adventure Hour and see if there is indeed a new season coming soon!

written by Gligar on Mar 11, 2012 22:29

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O starts humming along with the theme tune, and tries to do a little research, but discovers that he'd have to cancel his call to do that. Which would be a shame, since The Computer just interrupted the theme tune. “Citizen, report!”

written by Lightning4 on Mar 11, 2012 23:00

“Friend Computer! We have a situation at the Industrial Subsector... I'm with a rather large group of living clones, but we cannot get to safety because we are on the roof, and pretty much all exits are through very, very large groups of zombies.”

I look around again.

“I don't suppose we could have some rescue bots or something like that come and get us off? There's myself, a YELLOW... some junior citizens...”

I continue listing off whatever clones nearby I see.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 11, 2012 23:13

“I've noticed that your ring-for-service bells are inadequately fastened to the counter, and as a result, someone has stolen them all. Do not worry, for I will locate them for you!”

[980]

I hurry off in the direction of the transtubes, dragging the team leader with me.

"Let's go! We must locate the missing bells!"

I keep a lookout for any clues related to where the bells might be, such as suspicious footprints that could belong to bellnappers, or clones carrying bells.

written by Speeder on Mar 12, 2012 01:51

When I notice Jam near me, I attempt to be quiet and allow him to see my wounds.

written by Gligar on Mar 12, 2012 02:00

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O explains the situation to Our Mutual Friend, indicating who is with him, and mentioning the Junior Citizens. "There are Junior Citizens with you? Then you have found the group who were visiting from the JHY Sector Crèche. Unfortunately, it is not possible to send reinforcements or rescue teams at this time. Please escort the Junior Citizens to one of the Industrial Subsector Checkpoints and hand them over to the Armed Forces personnel enforcing the Code Three-Zed lockdown. It is important that none of the Junior Citizens are harmed during this journey. Failure to comply will result in termination. Thank you for your co-operation."

Meanwhile, the fire escape has started shaking again...

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y finally relaxes a little, allowing Jam-Y to see his wounds a little clearer. Those stomach-gashes are... rather deep.

Ticket counter, Transtube station, Kappa Subsector

Cryo-R seems to believe that the absence of ring-for-service bells indicates that they were stolen, and heads off to the transtube platforms to "look for them", with Kris-R in tow.

The ticket clerk begins to say, "But we don't..." But her voice falls on deaf ears.

Transtube platform overbridge, Transtube station, Kappa Subsector

Cryo-R and Kris-R stop on the overbridge. There's a small problem here, as there are six platforms of varying clearances. Cryo-R can see footprints leading to all six. However, there are transbots at only two: C and E. The one at Platform C seems to be saying something about almost being ready to depart.

Who has the tickets?

written by Jam on Mar 12, 2012 02:21

I look worried.

"Those gashes on your stomach look pretty deep. We may need to amputate... Anyclone got a saw?"

I half-grin, then put on a serious expression again.

"Kidding... But anyway, I'm not sure you'll make it without a docbot. Hmm, let's see..."

I try to figure out if any of his internal organs were damaged, and if I have the necessary equipment and knowledge to fix him up.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 12, 2012 04:24

I smile and look around at the bright scarlet shades decorating the walls.

And Speed-Y's stomach.

written by Gligar on Mar 12, 2012 17:05

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y tells Speed-Y that the situation is serious, and may necessitate amputation... no wait, he's just imitating a docbot. I'm pretty sure noclone has a chainsaw anyway.

And anyway, I doubt that amputation would do anything for the internal bleeding that Jam-Y discovers. The source of the bleeding isn't readily apparent without further investigation.

King-R isn't too much help. He's just marveling at how pretty the new RED decorations are.

written by Speeder on Mar 12, 2012 17:42

"I will die again, won't I? Please do not let me die! No chainsaw please! I do not want to die, not again, not again! Not like this! I only want to die in blazing glory, never like this!"

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 12, 2012 19:55

I decide to make another route, considering that the fans here are probably not meant to be tampered with, let alone jammed.

I doubt any object could stop those fans anyway.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 12, 2012 22:03

I frown, having processed what Friend Computer said.

"Well, we have a problem. We need to get to safety, rescue is not an option. I mean, I suppose we could hold out here, THEN get to safety, if that's an option... but if any of the Junior Citizens are harmed, the penalty is termination..."

"Well then... I guess it's time to reassess options. Maybe there's something we can do."

written by Gligar on Mar 12, 2012 22:18

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y, it seems, doesn't want to die, not to a chainsaw, not to injuries... He only wants to go out in a blaze of glory. But such things are usually reserved for the Armed Forces.

Air ducts, somewhere in Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to leave the fan alone and take another route. He doesn't seem interested in dying at all, and just wants to be left alone.

As he finds a junction and heads up, he hopes that no-one can find him.

He soon finds the top of the duct, though. Through the grate, he can see some sort of machinery.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O frowns. He tells everyone that there is no rescue, and that they must get themselves out. Somehow. He would prefer to try to hold out here before doing so... but if the Junior Citizens are harmed, it means termination.

"Hmmm. Not good," the YELLOW replies. "That doesn't give us many options. I guess we will have to find our way down."

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 12, 2012 23:37

I recall Speed-Y going out in quite the blaze of glory not too long ago, but neglect to mention it..

written by Kristos on Mar 13, 2012 01:05

I take a look at the tickets to see which TransTube we are to take.

Assuming the tickets indicate TransTube C:

"Cryo-R, drag us into transbot C! I will keep an eye out for suspicious ring-for-service activity behind us!"

If anybody demands tickets, I thrust them towards the direction of their voice.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 13, 2012 01:29

"That is a plan! The bellnappers might be there!"

I follow the footprints to transbot C, dragging Kris-R with me, since he seems incapable of walking there himself for some reason.

written by Gligar on Mar 13, 2012 01:58

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R looks amused. Perhaps he remembers that Speed-Y recently did just that, and went out in a blaze of glory already. If he does, though, he isn't sharing it.

Transtube Platform Overbridge, Transtube station, Kappa Subsector

It turns out that Kris-R has the tickets. He must have grabbed them as Cryo-R was dragging him away.

He seems to like being dragged, though, as he looks at the tickets (which mention Platform C) and directs Cryo-R to drag him there. He'll, er, look for suspicious activity behind them.

Cryo-R seems enthusiastic at this, and follows the trail of footprints to the transbot on Platform C.

Platform C, Transtube station

Cryo-R continues dragging. The RED section of the platform is right there, and there's the transbot, still with its RED doors open. They lead onto a transbot compartment with not much room left: it's standing room only in there. But that's where the footprints lead, so Cryo-R's mind kicks into inspection mode... and there's some nice spaces that he can Kris-R can slot into! They manage to board just as the doors close.

How convenient... or lucky? No, there's no such thing as luck.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 13, 2012 01:58

"Well, first plan I guess is to scout the roof. Check for any other potential way down. Wouldn't want to overlook, say, a ladder down the entire side of the building that could get us to safety quickly... Someone can also recheck that lift maintenance room, maybe there's a shaft in there, or maybe a path back into the air ducts... anything."

"I hear some rattling from the ducts, so whoever has weapons, keep watch."

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 13, 2012 03:31

"Look at the bright side, Speed-Y! You made some nice spear jabs on some zombies before dying. That's at least a little glory!"

written by Speeder on Mar 13, 2012 03:57

"No it is not! I do not want to die like this! It is... degrading! My first clone died in a nuclear explosion while using a awesome Massacrebot, the second in a blazing glory suicide attack destroying zombies... The third cannot die because it got punched by a brainless zombie!"

written by Kristos on Mar 13, 2012 04:53

I stand and brush myself off in case there is a mandatory hygiene inspection on the transbot. And I... wait.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 13, 2012 13:43

(heh, oops. Guess I posted a bit too late. I'll just redo my action)

"Well, first plan I guess is to scout the roof. Check for any other potential way down. Wouldn't want to overlook, say, a ladder down the entire side of the building that could get us to safety quickly... Someone can also recheck that lift maintenance room, maybe there's a shaft in there, or maybe a path back into the air ducts... anything."

"I hear some rattling from the ducts, so whoever has weapons, keep watch."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 13, 2012 14:40

"Wow! There's lots of clones in here! Any one of them could be the culprit!"

I begin searching the clones immediately around me for clues. Things such as ring-for-service bells, or suspicious keys, or boots, that could readily identify them as bellnappers.

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 13, 2012 15:40

"I don't know, I can't imagine a single zombie punch will kill you."

I recall that some of us have survived much worse.

"For now, I think we need to plan what we are going to do next."

written by Gligar on Mar 13, 2012 17:26

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O suggests that they search the entire roof. He wouldn't want to overlook anything that could be used as an alternate way down. He kind of wishes that they could find, say, a ladder down the whole length of the building, or another vent access. Speaking of vents, he thinks he hears something rattling down there. Anyone going to the maintenance room should be careful.

The YELLOW nods. "You're probably right. If there's one way down, there's probably another." He begins ordering clones to start looking. And yes, some enter the maintenance room.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R looks at Speed-Y, and tells him that he should be grateful. He got in some good hits with the spear, surely that counts?

But Speed-Y disagrees. To be killed by a single punch from a zombie... this is such a letdown after his first two deaths. (I guess getting annihilated by a nuclear explosion while inside an experimental armoured bot, and getting blown up by a malfunctioning laser barrel while attacking zombies, might be considered "going out in a blaze of glory". But you should never get used to it.)

Azir-R disagrees. He thinks that Speed-Y could survive more than just one punch. Maybe he's just being unhappy.

But for now, they should plan their next move.

Kris-R's transbot

Kris-R manages to stand up and begins to brush himself off in case there is another hygiene inspection.

Cryo-R, on the other hand, is still busy looking for the "bellnappers". By looking for clones with keys. And clones with boots. Among other things.

He definitely finds plenty of both. For one, it seems that half of the clones in here have keys of one form or another. However, all of them have boots. Including Kris-R. And even him.

As he's contemplating this, the transbot begins to move.

written by Speeder on Mar 13, 2012 17:37

"But I am still bleeding! I am dieing don't you see! Please, hit Jam in the head to wake him up and save me! I do not want to die like... this!"

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 13, 2012 19:07

"Jam, snap out of it!" I will shout.

"We won't get anywhere if we let each other bleed to death!"

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 13, 2012 19:26

"Come on, Speed-Y," I tell him loftily, "You can't get too attached to your clones. You've got plenty more!"

"Tomorrow's another daycycle!"

written by Kristos on Mar 13, 2012 20:14

I scribble notes on my PDC as is my habit. Something about hygiene and headaches...

written by Cryoburner on Mar 13, 2012 21:08

"How suspicious!"

I begin searching the pockets of the clones around me for clues.

written by Gligar on Mar 13, 2012 22:27

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y reminds everyone that he is dying! Why won't they do something about his bleeding?! He asks someone to hit Jam-Y in the head to wake him up.

Azir-R... doesn't. Instead, he simply yells at Jam-Y, telling him that they won't get anywhere by letting each other bleed out.

King-R is a lot more optimistic about things. After all, Speed-Y has more clones, right?

Kris-R's transbot

As the transbot accelerates, Kris-R pulls out his PDC and starts making some notes... something about headaches and hygiene.

Cryo-R... doesn't. He decides that something is suspicious, and decides to ... search pockets for "evidence".

Fortunately, the owner of the pocket he checks first, seemingly a Tech Services clone, doesn't notice. Unfortunately, the pocket is empty.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 13, 2012 22:02

I raise my voice and direct it towards the maintenance room.

"I hear some rattling down there. Be careful!"

I start scanning around the rooftop with my eyes. Well, to the best of my ability anyway.

written by Speeder on Mar 13, 2012 22:32

"We must not waste clones! The first six clones are actually Alpha Complex property, we should not just waste them like that!"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 13, 2012 22:50

I look around the rooftop for any danger. Well, any danger that I can potentially see, what with all the smoke and smog and general unpleasantness floating around in the air here.

written by Jam on Mar 14, 2012 02:43

I suddenly come back to my senses.

“Oh, right, I was supposed to treat you... Lucas-R, come help me! Anyclone else have medical training?”

I attempt to discover the source of the bleeding, and if I find it, I try to figure out how to stop it, if I even can.

“I don’t know about going out in a blaze of glory, but I can make it so you go out in a blaze, Speed-Y.” I gesture to a nearby emergency light.

written by Kristos on Mar 14, 2012 03:29

“Cryo-R!” I harshly whisper as I jerk him back, “You can’t pickpocket them - they’re not INFRARED clones.”

written by Gligar on Mar 14, 2012 17:53

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O calls over to the team investigating the maintenance room again, telling them about the rattling, before looking round himself. He can see that the fire escape is shaking again, and that there’s something else over in another direction... he can’t tell what it is, though.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y argues that they must not waste clones. Their first six belong to Alpha Complex, and thus The Computer.

He seems to have taken the recent policy of not wasting resources to heart.

Jam-Y suddenly comes round, and asks Lucas-R, and anyone else with medical training, to come and help him work on Speed-Y.

At first, there are no takers. But as Lucas-R and Jam-Y begin their work, another clone remembers that he has medical training: King-R. But even without his help, the two are able to reduce Speed-Y’s bleeding. Which is a good thing, as Speed-Y’s vision is starting to fade.

Kris-R’s transbot

Kris-R notices Cryo-R, and pulls him back. He tells Cryo-R not to pickpocket the REDs. They aren’t INFRARED, after all.

The transbot continues to accelerate. It leaves the station behind, and enters the TransTube network proper.

written by Speeder on Mar 14, 2012 17:55

“Aaah! I am seeing less things! I am dieeeing, it hurts! Nooo! I do not want to get lost in the Memomax Limbo! Nooo!”

written by Speeder on Mar 09, 2012 01:57

Misplaced bottles...

This remembered me of a very recent (less than 1 year) case her ein Brazil:

Someone placed two identical bottles in the same place... The place where you are supposed to store that aqueous solution for intravenous hidratation (I forgot the english name of the thing, it is only water, salt, sugar, etc...)

A nurse grabbed one bottle, injected it in a patient... and it died.

Later someone figured the bottle had transparent liquid vaselin :/

A VERY BAD case of misplaced bottle.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 14, 2012 19:20

I examine the machinery from a distance, trying to discern what it is that’s there.

written by Gligar on Mar 14, 2012 22:32

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y freaks out. He’s beginning to die! He does not want this to happen.

Lucas-R keeps trying. The bleeding slows even more. Speed-Y doesn’t get any worse. For now.

Air duct, near Lift maintenance room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango tries to identify the equipment. It looks remarkably like a set of large motors. In front of it is some sort of makeshift safety barrier constructed of pipes.

There is some sort of noise from beyond the grate It turns out that there are clones in the room. They seem to be approaching. “Ah! This must be the source of the rattling!”

written by Lightning4 on Mar 14, 2012 22:43

“Hello? Now what is that?”

I try to direct any lightsource I have in the direction of the shape, and slowly crawl towards it, blaster ready.

written by Jam on Mar 14, 2012 23:07

I continue working on Speed-Y.

“What’s Memomax Limbo? Sounds high-clearance...”

written by Kristos on Mar 15, 2012 02:54

“Whew! Fun!”

I forget about Cryo-R and enjoy the ride!

written by Speeder on Mar 15, 2012 11:48

Suddenly I am all technical again.

“We do not know what high-clearance clones know about that, but to low clearance clones, even infra-red, is what we believe happen when you are not erased, but not recloned either while you still have clones remaing, legends say that you might end there if there is a malfunction in your memomax chip too...”

And I believe that... that... strange I cannot remember... but I remember that remembered before about a clone that we knew personally that had strange interactions with memomax, but I cannot remember anymore. Maybe he was erased, if that is the case, he deserved it, I remember his strange interactions with memomax even without details because it caused great grief to me.”

written by Gligar on Mar 15, 2012 17:16

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O crawls towards the thing. It turns out to be... some sort of ladder?

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y keeps working on Speed-Y. He's able to stop the bleeding.

He remembers something Speed-Y said about "MemoMax Limbo"... that's not a term he's familiar with... is it high clearance?

Now feeling a little better, Speed-Y explains. Apparently, it's TechServ parlance. He doesn't know what the higher clearances know, but to lower clearances, it's supposedly where you go if you die and don't get recloned, even if you have clones remaining. He seems to recall something about... someone he once knew, who had problems with the MemoMax system... though he doesn't remember the person, he remembers that detail because it caused him grief.

I dunno... this whole thing sounds like a treasonous rumour to me. But then, I'm not Tech Services...

Kris-R's transbot

Kris-R forgets about Cryo-R trying to pick people's pockets. Instead, he concentrates on enjoying the ride.

Suddenly, the transbot comes to a halt. A door opens, admitting a BLUE guard. "Let me see your tickets and papers, please!"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 15, 2012 22:27

I crawl closer, then take a peek down the side of the ladder to see if I can determine if it's safe.

I try to call out as loudly as I can.

"Hey guys! I found a ladder!"

written by Gligar on Mar 15, 2012 22:38

Lift maintenance room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

One of the investigating clones approaches the duct. He notices the source of the rattling - Mango.

But he doesn't have time to do anything about it before he hears L4-O's voice from the roof, announcing that he found a ladder.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O is in the middle of looking down the ladder. The first thing he notices is how far down it goes. The second is that, although there are a few zombies down there, they don't seem interested in the ladder. Perhaps they can't use even it. The third is how far down it goes.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 16, 2012 00:19

"Yikes... that's... pretty far."

If clones start coming around, I add...

"I guess once we're ready we can send clones down. I'll go down last, both because I'm not really in any condition to go down a ladder, but also because I can provide some fire from up here, and pick off some zombies, maybe."

I check to see if I can get a good bead on the zombies from up here with my blaster.

"Maybe I've got something that'll make it safer for me to get down..."

I try to recall whether I saw any combination of tools in the maintenance room that might make it safer... like a rope + something, or a tether, or maybe these grav-jacks do something?

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 16, 2012 03:53

I attempt to look for something in the bag of supplies that might stop Speed-Y's bleeding more permanently.

"You know, if you didn't spend so much time thinking about MemoMax Limbo, you might heal faster. Everyone's just so negative all the time! Just be happy! Isn't it mandatory anyway?"

written by Kristos on Mar 16, 2012 04:55

I present our tickets. Then I retrieve the papers from Cryo-R and present them as well.

"Yes sir, our tickets and authorization papers are guaranteed to meet mandatory hygiene requirements!

And hopefully any other requirements as well..."

written by 4616599 on Mar 16, 2012 07:43⁷⁴⁰

I snap out of my daze.

"Whew. The sight of all those zombies must have been making me busy. Or maybe it's all that smog."

I stare at the subsector, scanning for anything unusual.

I then look around for a mask, or air filter of sorts.

written by Speeder on Mar 16, 2012 11:36

"I I... I feel a bit better actually! Jam and Lucas you are awesome!"

written by Gligar on Mar 16, 2012 16:43

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As clones start gathering round, L4-O tells them his plan: once they're ready, clones can start going down. He'll stay until last, since he's not in the best physical condition, but also because he can pick off zombies more effectively from up here. Wait a minute... can he? He checks. He can, but it's kind of tiring in his condition.

⁷⁴⁰ 4616599: (ooc: was on a rather last-minute holiday trip to Hong Kong)

He also wonders if they could rig something to make it safer for him to get down... nope, it doesn't seem that they can.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R suddenly comes round, and checks their supplies to see if they have something to help stop Speed-Y's bleeding on a more permanent basis. Hmm... they're getting low, but perhaps... this?

While he works on applying it, he suggests that Speed-Y stop dwelling on this "MemoMax Limbo" thing and concentrate on getting better. Everyone's just so negative all the time! Why can't they all just be happy?

Speed-Y assures him that he's feeling better now anyway. Probably even better now that King-R has done his part.

Kris-R's transbot

Kris-R fishes out the tickets and starts rooting throu -

...wait, why is Cryo-R going through his pockets? Isn't that his PDC that Cryo-R has in his hand? For a Loyalty Officer, that's kind of disloyal, wouldn't you say?

Treason point to Cryoburner!

For now, Kris-R just takes the authorisation papers from Cryo-R's pockets, and shows them, and the tickets, to the guard, saying that they should be fit for hygiene, or any other, purpose.

The guard takes them. He scrutinises them closely... almost as close as Cryo-R. He turns them upside down, holds them to the light, looks at them edgeways.

And hands them back. "Thanks, citizen."

He moves on to another citizen, who seems to panic.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 16, 2012 17:53

"Oh, don't worry about me. I'm just making sure no one stole your PDC or anything. If someone was willing to steal a counter-full of ring for service bells, then our own equipment may be at risk! In any case, all your equipment appears to be accounted for, so there's nothing to worry about."

I put Kris-R's PDC in my pocket, and return to looking for clues. I have a quick look out the door to see where we might be.

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 16, 2012 20:34

I am pleased that Speed-Y is finally feeling better.

written by Speeder on Mar 16, 2012 20:57

"I won't die? Please make me not die! In fact, please close me again, I do not want dirt getting inside me! Who knows what a scrubot might do..."

I shudder.

written by Gligar on Mar 16, 2012 22:17

Kris-R's transbot

Cryo-R claims that he is preventing anyone from stealing Kris-R's PDC.

I think I see a small hole in this argument.

A small PDC-sized hole.

Speaking of the PDC, he just pocketed it. That's Treason Code JJ, citizen. Theft is Treason.

He then attempts to find out where they are by looking out of the door. It seems to be a small platform taken over by Internal Security for the purposes of checking clones who use the transbot.

Speaking of which, remember that panicking clone? It turns out he doesn't have a ticket. Right now, he is being escorted off the transbot.

Zap

Well, that's one less clone crowding the transbot, at least.

With that out of the way, the transbot closes its door again and, once again, starts accelerating.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

With a pleased-looking Azir-R watching, Speed-Y asks whether he's likely to die, and whether they'll close him up. I mean, who knows what would happen if they went around in his condition? A scrubot might decide to clean him or something!

John-R replies, "Well, we're running low on supplies... but I'll see what I can do."

He goes over to said supplies...

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Joris-R snaps out of his daze and looks around for anything unusual.

Well, apart from the still-present Armed Forces, and the still-present zombies attacking said Armed Forces, he can make out something shining from atop one of the buildings on the right-hand side of the roadway... the second one, he thinks.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 16, 2012 23:00

"Well then... whenever you're ready!"

I look down and start trying to pick off a couple zombies ahead of time, preferably without hitting any clones going down the ladder.

written by Jam on Mar 17, 2012 00:24

I follow John-R over to the supplies and help him look...

written by Speeder on Mar 17, 2012 00:56

I... I do nothing actually.

I wait them to finish the work on me.

written by Gligar on Mar 17, 2012 01:19 Kris-R's transbot

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O indicates that the rest of the clones should go ahead. As they start the journey down, he starts shooting. He's able to get a couple of hits on a zombie despite how injured he is.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y doesn't care about shooting. He just wants to wait until everyone's finished doing things to him.

Actually, noclone is doing anything to him right now. However, both Jam-Y and John-R are searching through their supplies, seeing if they have anything to close up that gaping hole in Speed-Y. They eventually find a suture kit, though it doesn't look complete.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 17, 2012 04:44

"Hmmm. No, I think that wound is quite clean. This room, on the other hand, could use a few scrubots." I say, glancing unenthusiastically at the walls.

Eyeing the suture kit, I try not to look too long at it.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 17, 2012 12:41

I try to get into a more comfortable and stable position if I'm not already in one, and continue trying to pick off zombies to the best of my ability.

written by Kristos on Mar 17, 2012 14:25

"Oh, so you want to be the team equipment manager as well? Great! What a perfect way to encourage team loyalty! Cryo-R, your intelligence is... out of this complex! Wouldn't it help if you had a backpack, though?"

written by 4616599 on Mar 17, 2012 15:58

"What's that?"

I look around for goggles, or anything that can shield my eyes and face from the smog.

If I find any, I squint at the lights.

written by Gligar on Mar 17, 2012 17:36

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R looks at the suture kit, though he doesn't look too enthusiastic about it. He believes that Speed-Y's wounds are clean enough. Unlike the room...

Yeah, the wound might be clean enough, but it's still open...

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O tries to get into a more appropriate position to shoot zombies, and continues.

This time, all three of his shots hit.

Meanwhile, clones continue down the ladder.

Ignoring the fact that Cryo-R just committed treason by taking his PDC, Kris-R asks if Cryo-R wants to handle the team's equipment as well. He says that Cryo-R would need a backpack for that.

The transbot continues on its way. As it does, Kris-R's PDC (you know, the one which was just stolen by Cryo-R) rings.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Joris-R wonders what the lights are. Unfortunately, her can't make out much detail. And lacking such things as goggles, it's going to be difficult to do so.

However, he does inform the Armed Forces that there's something there.

One takes a pair of binoculars and looks. "It could be my imagination, but there could be someone up there."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 17, 2012 23:01

I assess the current zombie count, and continue lending my blaster in destroying more of them.

"So much better shooting them when they can't get to you..."

I quickly glance up and around me though,, to make sure there aren't any sneaking up on me.

written by Gligar on Mar 17, 2012 23:34

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O looks down at the zombies. There are now a couple less shambling around.

He continues shooting. It's good that they can't get to him.

Or can they?

He glances around. Clones are still heading down the ladder. It looks like the lights are staying where they are. Notably, there are no zombies up here.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

The Armed Forces clone turns to his superior, a YELLOW clone. "Sir, there might be more survivors up on one of the buildings. What do you recommend?"

"We don't have the manpower, soldier. You know that." The YELLOW looks over, and notices Joris-R. "Hey, you with the Transition! Make yourself useful and go and check up there! You're not supposed to be out here anyway."

written by Kristos on Mar 17, 2012 23:39

"Equipment Manager Hygiene Officer Cryo-R, please provide my PDC! I think somebody needs help filling out a form or something, that call sounds important."

After Cryo-R retrieves the PDC I answer it.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 18, 2012 00:37

I eye the ladder, and deliberate on whether I do have the energy to take myself down it safely... it's a long way down, isn't it?

I stop worrying about it and just continue picking off zombies from up here.

written by Jam on Mar 18, 2012 00:53

"Oh! A suture kit!"

I try to figure out what's missing from the kit.

written by Gligar on Mar 18, 2012 02:06

Kris-R's transbot

Believing the call to be important (since it could easily be The Computer, or someone who needs help with forms, or something) Kris-R requests his PDC from Cryo-R. He holds out his hand, waiting for Cryo-R to comply.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O looks at the ladder. Could be safely get down? He's not sure... it's a long way down.

At least he can shoot zombies, though. Only a dozen or so left.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y looks through the suture kit himself, trying to ascertain what's missing. It looks like there are some patches missing, as well as tape to hold them in place, but... they're not really crucial, are they? Are they?

written by 4616599 on Mar 18, 2012 09:53

"Excellent suggestion, sir! I'll get to it immediately."

I try to determine if the Transition can do vertical ascents, and its maximum carrying capacity.

"Sir, I'd want to request armed escort."

I glance at the lights again.

"It could be my team. They're definitely in danger. And they'll probably have the best idea who started this."

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 18, 2012 10:34

I watch the actions of the clones, very, very carefully.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 18, 2012 13:18

I do a quick check to see how many clones are left up on the roof, and if anyone is at the bottom yet.

I then proceed to zap more zombies from up here. Not many left now... but gotta hurry...

written by Gligar on Mar 18, 2012 17:21

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Joris-R agrees to the YELLOW's order, and has a look at the Transition itself. It looks like there is a control panel on the side, but it's not labelled. But it should be possible to make these things ascend, right? They're based on the Mobile Tile technology, after all. Which means that they should be able to carry a fair amount, right?

He asks the YELLOW for armed escort. However, they YELLOW tells him that they don't have the manpower for that, he'll have to do it himself. Should be no problem for a Troubleshooter...

Lift maintenance room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Still in the air duct, Mango watches the clones as they... well, walk away. Something seems to have attracted their attention outside... probably that shout earlier.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As the clones approach, L4-O continues shooting. There aren't many clones left up here now... perhaps only a dozen... not including those who were in the maintenance room. A fair few have reached the bottom already. They huddle together and try to avoid the zombies, who are still being shot at.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 18, 2012 18:26

I check if Speed-Y is missing enough skin that the missing patches will be a problem.

Also, I look for something that could serve as tape.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 18, 2012 21:37

I take a momentary pause in shooting to both let my blaster and body rest, and to inform the rest of the clones of the plan.

"Okay... I might not be able to get down with you. In the likely event I can, you are all to get to safety at any chance. Just make sure any clones out there know you're alive and not zombies... relay this information to whoever is highest clearance."

I go back to shooting zombies. also take a moment to see where this ladder actually goes, since I never did check to see if it is the kind that goes down the side of the building to ground level.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 18, 2012 21:39

"Wasn't I the loyalty officer?"

I look down at my loyalty officer badge to make sure.

I also hand Kris-R his PDC. Actually, both PDCs, since they look rather similar and it could be either one of them that's ringing. I hand him a can of B3 too, since he might be thirsty. Wait, how many cans of B3 do I have? I begin sorting through my inventory to determine just what inventories I might have.

written by Gligar on Mar 18, 2012 22:55

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R checks Speed-Y. He seems to still have most of his skin... he doubts that he has lost enough to be too much of a problem. The main problem is tape: does anyone have any?

Will this box of sticking plasters do?

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O stop shooting for a moment to address the rest of the clones. He tells them that they are to get to safety at all costs. They are to ensure that everyone knows that they are alive and not part of the undead.

"Alright." "Will do." and words to that effect.

As the remaining clones continue down, L4-O continues shooting, killing another zombie.

He realises that he never figured out just where the ladder goes. He looks.... yes, it goes down to the ground.

Kris-R's transbot

Cryo-R is confused. He seems to have forgotten that he is, in fact, the team's Loyalty Officer. See, there's his badge.

As for the PDC, he hands over both of them, as well as a can of B3, and decides to go over everything he has. That would be: a RED jumpsuit and boots; a name tag (RED); an ME Card; a laser pistol body, with RED barrel; a set of RED reflex; a Loyalty Officer MBD Badge; an Indestructible Loyalty Transcripts Recorder, Mk. II, with key; and a second RED jumpsuit which he is treasonously wearing as a backpack, containing an apple and one can of B3.

Meanwhile, Kris-R has answered his PDC. It turns out to be an HPD&MC rep, asking him to rate his transbot experience.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 19, 2012 02:41

I push my doubts aside and try to use the sticking plasters in the place of tape.

I happily whistle the last B3 jingle I remember hearing and get to work on Speed-Y.

written by Kristos on Mar 19, 2012 05:19

"Oh, it was great! The floors are very dirty which is not good for hygiene protocol and it hurts to stand up this long in a moving vehicle and there are so many people in here I cannot move much around to take the stiffness out of my legs and I think somebody just got shot but considering I have never been in a transbot before I can truly say this has not been a below-average transbot experience for me and I was not shot and my loyalty officer was not shot and he has decided to manage our equipment as well which is great which might not have happened if we would not have gotten on the transbot where somebody got shot and the floors are dirty and there are a lot of clones and so for a RED clone I feel like I have been treated very well, very much better than an INFRARED and not as well as an ORANGE, so all-in-all this has been a most mandatory experience! ... Oh, you wanted a number? ... Between 10 and 10? ... Okay, I pick 10! ... Yes, thank you too. It has been fun participating in this transformational survey and I hope to see my numerical rating influence the whole TransTube program to evolve into what it already is!"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 19, 2012 07:55

I start trying to make a game of potshooting zombies. I try to go for killing them in the least amount of shots...

At least as long as my concentration holds... which probably isn't very long.

written by Gligar on Mar 19, 2012 17:57

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R grabs the box of plasters and decides to use in place of the missing patches. While he works on Speed-Y, he whistles a B3 jingle. It doesn't take long before Speed-Y is closed up nicely. He'll have a rather nasty-looking scar there, but surely he'll manage.

Kris-R's transbot

Kris-R tells the rep that, even though the floors are dirty, and there's no room to move around, and there are way too many clones on the transbot, it has not been a below-average journey for him so far. (Then again, he hasn't really used the transbots before.) He adds that he would rate his journey a 10.

"Thank you, citizen," the rep tells him. "Your feedback will go a long way towards maintaining the perfection of the TransTube network. Have a nice daycycle."

The rep hangs up. As he does, the transbot begins to slow down, and vidscreens begin to display the message APPROACHING 4A-48-50-2D-30-31.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As clones continue to descend the ladder, L4-O starts taking potshots at zombies, seeing how few shots he can use to kill one. The answer, he finds, varies depending on the zombie, but the absolute lowest is one.

But this level of concentration is tiring him out.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 19, 2012 19:40

I rest for a moment to try to regain some concentration, then resume shooting zombies in a slightly less concentrated manner.

written by Gligar on Mar 19, 2012 22:20

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O rests for a moment... it's all so tiring... all he wants to do is... sleep...

But no! He must remain awake! Even though it's getting increasingly difficult to aim his blaster, he must persevere! And shoot zombies!

That's another down, it looks like.

Not to mention that there are only a couple of clones left, waiting to climb down the ladder.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y's PDC suddenly vibrates at him.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 19, 2012 23:37

"Come on... not many more..."

I zap. I zap because I must.

written by Gligar on Mar 20, 2012 02:18

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As tired as he is, L4-O tries his best to stay awake. But he's been trained for this sort of thing. He holds on to consciousness, even if only barely, and keeps firing...

One more down.

written by 4616599 on Mar 20, 2012 05:41

I continue fiddling with buttons.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 20, 2012 16:48

Do I have another Vita-Yum? I try to find and eat one if I do, in attempts to perk me up again.

I either way I try to continue firing down at the zombies. I try to take count of how many remain... and hope that maybe the group can handle the rest soon.

written by Gligar on Mar 20, 2012 17:23

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Joris-R plays with the control panel... and it looks like he's managed to adjust the lifting parameters, causing it to drag him upwards quite a distance!

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O checks his pockets, finding another Vita-Yum bar. He eats it, and continues shooting. It looks like there are five zombies left... well, four now.

Clones continue to reach the bottom, Some of them begin to round on the remaining zombies with spanners and screwdrivers and other things.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y's PDC continues to vibrate at him, while King-R finishes off working on him.

Meanwhile, Lucas-R is getting bored. "Not to be disrespectful, sirs, but... how much longer are we going to be stood here tending to wounds? Haven't we got other things to do?"

Kris-R's transbot

The transbot continues to slow, and eventually comes to a stop at a station. The doors open, allowing clones to alight.

written by Kristos on Mar 20, 2012 18:11

"I'm not sure if this is our stop..."

I enter "4A-48-50-2D-30-31" into my PDC and see if I can find out what it means.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 20, 2012 19:37

If I can shoot any more zombies safely, I do so.

Otherwise, I just finally start resting now that I have the chance.

I keep my eyes on both the clones, and the area surrounding the clones... and if I can see anything, the distance away from the building too.

written by Gligar on Mar 20, 2012 23:23

Kris-R's transbot

Kris-R isn't sure if this is the right station.

He pulls out his PDC again, and looks up the listed code. It turns out that it's a station ID for a station in JHP Sector.

Clones get on and off the transbot. Cryo-R doesn't seem all that interested.

Soon, the transbot begins to beep.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O decides to rest for a moment, and looks down at the clones and their surroundings. As mentioned, there are still a few zombies around, but the clones are dealing with them. Nearby, a forkbot trundles round the building.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y's PDC continues to vibrate. Nobody else seems to do anything.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 21, 2012 00:03

My gaze focuses on the forkbot.

"Is that... Nukabot? What good timing..."

Since it seems I have the opportunity to rest now, I just... rest again.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 21, 2012 01:19

"Hmm... There should be more inventories..."

I continue searching my inventory, looking for other important things, like a box of packy foam and loyalty-related cards and maybe a pile of ring-for-service bells.

written by Gligar on Mar 21, 2012 02:14

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O peers down at the forkbot, which is now heading towards the clones. It is painted in a very similar fashion to Nukabot, at least as far as he can tell from up here, as the bot is also covered in soot.

The clones are continuing to fight the remaining zombies... looks like they lost one, though.

Kris-R's transbot

Cryo-R looks confused. He seems to think that there should be more in the jumpsuit which he is erroneously using as a backpack. He searches it again, hoping to find some more boxes of things, but no. If they were there, they aren't now. Why might that be? Simple: jumpsuits aren't designed to hold boxes. They probably fell out.

written by Jam on Mar 21, 2012 03:40

I suddenly shake my head...

"Uh, what? Oh, right, uh, sutures!"

I bring the suture kit over to Speed-Y.

"I wonder why I keep zoning out... Maybe it's the work of some mutant or something, or maybe it's a commie drug in the air!"

I also can't help noticing Speed-Y's PDC is ringing...

"Uh, are you gonna answer that, Speed-Y? Or... Did the commie mutant traitors get you too? Oh no! Speed-Y, wake up! Snap out of it!"

I begin lightly shaking him back and forth...

"Azir-R? King-R? Speed-Y isn't answering his... wait, no... You guys too?"

I run over to Azir-R and shake him, then do the same to King-R.

"This is terrible! John-R, please tell me you haven't been affected too? And Lucas-R! You're awake, right? Right?!"

written by Cryoburner on Mar 21, 2012 04:11

"Hmm... There should a pile of packy foam laying around somewhere. We'd better hope the thieves don't find it."

I look around for any sign of the packy foam on the train. I also examine my backpack for any obvious holes.

"We really should report this backpack as defective. Wait, wasn't this backpack infrared clearance before?"

I re-examine the backpack closer to note whether it is in fact red clearance as I thought I just saw, or infrared clearance, as I thought it was before.

I also keep looking for the "ELT Tests" and "SDL cards", whatever those are. Maybe they're in a pocket somewhere. Or in the transcripts recorder case! The packy foam could be in there as well, since it does pack down rather well. I open the case with the suspicious key, and have a look inside.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 21, 2012 09:42

"Hm."

I continue watching. If there are any remaining zombies I can assist with killing, I do so.

written by Gligar on Mar 21, 2012 17:56

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y snaps out of it, and fetches the suture kit. It turns out that King-R has it and is actually just about done. But he's zoned out.

What is it with him zoning out like this? Is it some mutant? Or a commie drug?

Whatever it is, it seems to have affected more than just him and King-R. Speed-Y has spaced out, as well! And with his PDC vibrating at him, no less!

He tries to shake Speed-Y awake, and calls for help.. but realises that Azir-R and King-R are out as well!

He turns to Lucas-R. Surely he's okay? Thankfully, he is. "I'm fine. But there's some sort of... whispering..."

"I hear it too," John-R (also awake) replies. "If it were just me, I'd probably pass it off as psionic feedback or something...but you as well?"

Kris-R's transbot

Cryo-R continue investigating. If things have fallen out of his <airquote>backpack</airquote>, they must be on the floor, right?

He starts pushing clones out of the way, looking for his Packy-Foam. Some object to this treatment and push him away. Others pull laser pistols on him. "Hey, keep to yourself!" etc.

Drawing a blank, Cryo-R looks at the <airquote>backpack</airquote> again. He notices that not only is it RED (he must have failed to notice the colour properly, the same way he failed to notice that it is in fact a JUMPSUIT), but that the zip has broken, which must be the cause of things falling out. He claims that they must report the <airquote>backpack</airquote> as defective.

As for those test and those cards, well, they're not there.

But his Mk.2 Indestructible Loyalty Transcripts Recorder is. He opens the case and checks to see if the cards etc. got in there. Nope.

The transbot closes itself up again, and pulls out of the station.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O keeps watching. As he does, he notes that the dead clone has already risen... only to be skewered by the forkbot. The other zombies are being dispatched quite nicely.

Maybe he could grab a snooze while he's at it... zzz

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 21, 2012 19:24

I snap out of it, but due to my awkward balance I fall over from the shaking.

"Oof."

I get to my feet (foot).

"Er.. what happened, what's going on? I think I zoned out."

written by Kristos on Mar 21, 2012 21:43

"Umm... lose something?"

I look around for the items (without interfering with the other clones).

written by Jam on Mar 21, 2012 22:17

I try to figure out if I am feeling any psionic interference, that I somehow didn't notice before...

written by Gligar on Mar 21, 2012 22:51

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R comes round, and, since Jam-Y's been shaking him, falls over. It's not easy to keep your balance when you only have one foot. He asks what is happening.

Lucas-R replies, "Yeah, you zoned out... John-R thinks there might be... some sort of interference... can you hear the whispering?" He looks a little nervous.

Jam-Y is seeing if he can find any sort of interference. And there it is... the whispering...

Kris-R's transbot

Kris-R notices Cryo-R looking for something, and decides to help him out. Of course, he has no idea what to look for, other than Packy-Foam. And he can't seem to find any of that. No wait... there is this one box in the corner of the transbot car... it's closed, but you never know...

written by Lightning4 on Mar 22, 2012 00:08

I dream dreams of algaechips and B3. Maybe.

I at least try to not die. Sleep, but not die.

written by Gligar on Mar 22, 2012 02:48

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O dreams. His patterns show that it's probably something pleasant.

As he sleeps, he is oblivious to the Transition approaching from somewhere on the roadway, with the clone hanging on to it as if he's out of control.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 22, 2012 03:19

I also close my eyes and listen for whispering. Unlike the others, though, I smile while I'm listening.

"Maybe it's Friend Computer! Hmm... Doesn't Speed-Y have a sort of mind-related registered-mutant power? Maybe he can... You know, understand it?"

written by 4616599 on Mar 22, 2012 08:29

"Oh...there's the roof! Ugh. Are those zombies down there?"

Gingerly, I jab at the controls again, trying to bring the Transition to roof level. I keep my eyes peeled.

written by Speeder on Mar 22, 2012 12:29

I suddenly wake up.

"Wait what? I passed out when you were fixing me up? Oh... I've heard this happen to some people... So, you fixed me up?"

I check my wounds. Or ex-wounds.

Then I look around me.

"Wait what? I was not passed out, was I? Why they are acting like zombies but are not zombified?"

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 22, 2012 14:22

"What? Who is acting like a zombie? What are you talking about? Do you hear the whispers?"

written by Speeder on Mar 22, 2012 15:02

"What whispers?"

I attempt to hear the whispers and actually figure what they are saying.

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 22, 2012 15:44

I also listen for these supposed whisperings

written by Lightning4 on Mar 22, 2012 16:15

I continue to sleep. Visions of forkbots and jackobots dance in my head. Or, what can roughly be construed as "dancing" anyway.

If I were in a more conscious state I would wonder if jackobots were indeed capable of dancing. Or if that's outside their programming. Or if it's treasonous.

written by Gligar on Mar 22, 2012 17:34

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R closes his eyes and listens. Is there any whispering? Yes, there it is...

He speculates that it might be Friend Computer calling them. But he seems to think that Speed-Y has some sort of mutation, since he suggests that Speed-Y listen in and try to figure out what it means. Does he know something about Speed-Y that we don't? Or perhaps he just confused the two YELLOWS? What do you think?

Regardless, Speed-Y is now awake. He initially assumes that he passed out while he was being fixed up, which he disregards since it's not too unusual.

He checks himself over, and notices that his worst wounds have indeed been seen to. That big one on his stomach has been closed, and although it still hurts somewhat, it should heal. Though it will probably leave a big scar as it heals.

Then he realises that he actually didn't pass out. That is a cause for concern. It's like he was a zombie, except not.

And why is everyone else acting the same way?

King-R doesn't know what he means, and asks about the whispers.

Speed-Y admits that he doesn't know (probably because he was being distracted by his PDC, which is still vibrating at him) and starts listening... and yes, there they are... the whispers... they're very quiet, almost inaudible, but they're right there, tugging at his mind... wait... there are a few words... easter cycle...

Azir-R also listens in... and can also hear them...

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Joris-R tries to wrestle his Transition back into some semblance of control, and is able to lower it back to somewhere near the roof. Below, at ground level, he can make out... zombies? They seem to be fighting some other clones, including... Junior Citizens? What are they doing here?

As eh gets closet to the building, he can make out a figure on the roof: L4-O. He is lying on the roof, seemingly asleep. He's in pretty bad shape.

He might still be dreaming.

written by Kristos on Mar 22, 2012 18:41

Not knowing who the box belongs to, I leave it alone.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 22, 2012 20:44

I continue to sleep. ZzZzZzZzZz...

written by Gligar on Mar 22, 2012 22:33

Kris-R's Transbot

Kris-R decides to leave the box alone. He doesn't know who it belongs to, after all.

The transbot continues on. Through the windows, nothing much can be seen, except for the inside of the tunnel rushing past.

The transbot then beeps, and it speaks. "This is a notice to all citizens below Clearance BLUE. Please look away from the windows in three... two... one..."

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O continues to sleep as Joris-R continues to fight to regain control of the Transition. He's able to bring it down to a relatively controllable speed... but not before it enters the lift maintenance room, and collides with a table. The only damage, though, seems to be to Joris-R's happiness level. And the table. Oh, and the Transition seems to be overheating slightly.

The sound probably carries through the vents to some distance.

written by Speeder on Mar 22, 2012 23:19

I then notice the PDC and attend to it.

"Speed-Y here! And alive seemly."

written by Jam on Mar 23, 2012 01:09

"There's some kind a psionic interference!"

I try to figure out where it's coming from...

written by Gligar on Mar 23, 2012 02:10

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y finally notices that his PDC is vibrating, and answers it. At first, he thinks that it is a voice message, but no, it seems to be text.

Jam-Y points out that the whispering seems to be psionic interference... coming from... er... Building 3?

written by Speeder on Mar 23, 2012 03:05

I look at the text, and reply quickly.

"What is a psionic interference?"

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 23, 2012 03:18

"Better yet, what's an easter cycle?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 23, 2012 09:39

I dream that I'm fighting commies now! And winning, of course. Commies aren't very well known for their fighting now, and suggesting that they are otherwise is, in fact, treason.

Of course to the outside world, all that manages to show is:

"Stop... right there, treasondoer!"

I twitch.

written by 4616599 on Mar 23, 2012 12:13

"I hope Transitions don't blow up easily. That'll really mess up things."

Carefully, I bring the Transition next to a nearby figure, which seems to be sleeping and mumbling.

"L4-O!"

I nudge him and begin stating the obvious facts.

"You're badly injured! Where is everybody?"

written by Kristos on Mar 23, 2012 12:32

I shut my eyes, and hold my hand in front of Cryo's if he is looking out the windows.

"These things - they are too great for us!"

written by Gligar on Mar 23, 2012 17:13

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y fiddles with his PDC for a moment before asking exactly what psionic interference is. King-R also asks about this "Easter Cycle".

"I'd kind of like to know about this Easter Cycle myself," John-R replies, "but I suspect it's probably treasonous. Jam-Y managed to pull a reference to it out of the mid of a zombie earlier.

"But I do know about psionic interference. If we're hearing it, it's because there is a strong source of psionic power somewhere nearby. Whether it's a mutant or not... I don't know. Maybe the zombie nanomachine things have a psionic component or something?"

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

It looks like Joris-R has managed to recover from his little crash. He's guiding the Transition over to where L4-O lies. L4-O, it seems, is dreaming about catching commies or something, judging by how much he is mumbling and twitching.

All that comes to an end, though, when Joris-R shakes him awake and states the obvious.

Kris-R's transbot

Dutifully, Kris-R averts his eyes from the windows, deliberately avoiding looking at whatever it is that has been deemed Clearance BLUE. He also places his hand over Cryo-R's eyes, though I am not sure Cryo-R was looking out or not. What is Cryo-R doing, anyway? My cameras aren't clear on the matter...

written by Lightning4 on Mar 23, 2012 18:38

"State your name and-oh. I... guess I drifted off there."

I glance down the side of the building again to see how the group is going.

"I had a group of survivors from this building with me. They're down there now... I hope they're doing okay. They need to get to safety... if those Junior Citizens aren't protected..."

"As for the Team, no clue now. You're the first one I've actually seen for a while. They're probably still in the building... this little zombie invasion caught us while we were separated."

written by Jam on Mar 23, 2012 21:29

"I'm sensing something coming from Building 3... I wonder what it means..."

written by Gligar on Mar 23, 2012 22:17

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

It takes L4-O a moment to realise that he's now awake, but he does bring Joris-R up to speed on recent developments, including the group of survivors, who have now linked up with Nukabot and are currently discussing what to do about another group of zombies they can see in the distance.

Unfortunately, L4-O doesn't know what happened to the team. They're probably still in the building somewhere, but they were separated when the zombie outbreak happened. He hopes they're okay.

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y reveals that he sensed something over in Building 3... though he doesn't know what.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 23, 2012 22:50

"Wait... This is not my backpack at all! It is a JUMPSUIT! Someone has stolen my backpack, and replaced it with a jumpsuit! The theft must have been the work of a pickpocket... and the untheft the work of a reverse-pickpocket!"

I now notice the announcement, and a hand covering my face.

"We can't obstruct our view with a pickpocket around! We must remain attentive. What if we are pickpocketed, or reverse-pickpocketed, or reverse-reverse-pickpocketed!? Valuable computer property could be stolen, or perhaps unstolen."

I uncover my eyes, and simply look away from the windows, keeping a lookout for any pickpockets. I make sure that I'm not inadvertently looking at any windows by first carefully examining the locations of nearby windows, their model numbers, transparency levels, and so on.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 24, 2012 00:49

"So, if easter cycles are treasonous, I suppose the psionic interference is also treasonous? Unless he's reporting treasonous activity..."

My cheerful attitude is only slightly dampened.

"I don't like this."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 24, 2012 01:09

I try to clear my eyes, and see if I can take any more shots at the zombies that threaten the group.

"So since you're up here, I don't suppose you have a way down? I should probably either keep with the group... or just keep guard around the buildings. Maybe there's some medical assistance I can get nearby so I can get back to work..."

written by Jam on Mar 24, 2012 02:13

I look at King-R...

"I don't like it either... We'd better get going. Are you ready, Speed-Y?"

written by Gligar on Mar 24, 2012 02:20

Kris-R's transbot

Cryo-R finally realises that he isn't wearing a backpack... but he fails to realise that he hasn't been wearing a backpack at any point. He believes that it was switched with a jumpsuit at some point.

He then realises that Kris-R is shielding his eyes from something... and declares that, with a supposed pickpocket around, they cannot afford to not look at things. In a confusing manner.

He tries to look around while not looking through windows... but his mind will not accept this without knowing where the windows are. This compels him to look for the windows.

He sees four windows, all of a type which doesn't require labelling. They are transparent, which is helpful for a window, Unfortunately, this means that he sees what is through the windows: a lot of warbots.

Did anyone see him looking?

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R reasons that is Easter Cycles are treasonous, then psionic interference must also be treasonous. It's also troubling. But in a happy way.

Jam-Y also finds it troubling, but insists that they have to get going.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O tries to clear his eyes and get a few shots off at the incoming group of zombies. But his aim isn't steady enough.

He asks if Joris-R has another way down. He suggests that he could either keep guard around here or keep up with the group of survivors. Or maybe he could find medical assistance.

written by Speeder on Mar 24, 2012 02:43

"Alright.... we were going to the garage, remember? To help the people there!"

I start to walk toward the garage.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 24, 2012 03:23

I excitedly ask a stream of questions.

"People? In the garage? I think I got lost when that happened. Who are these people? Are they interesting? Will they not try to eat chunks of our bodies? We should probably make sure of that first."

written by Jam on Mar 24, 2012 14:42

I also ask a stream of questions.

"Really? I forgot there were people in the garage! Are you sure they're all alive still? Don't you think they'd be mad at us for taking so long? What if they've already been eaten by the zombies? Speaking of which, we haven't heard from L4-O in a while, what if he's died and become a zombie?! I don't like the sound of a zombie with a cone rifle..."

written by Speeder on Mar 24, 2012 15:15

"Well... in the garage I told L4 that I was coming here to fetch you back to the garage... Now I have all of you alive here, it is time to return to the garage!"

written by Gligar on Mar 24, 2012 16:47

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y reminds everyone that they were heading over to the garage to help the people there.

He's about to head into the corridor to go over there when he is bombarded by questions from King-R (who wants to know who the people are, whether they're interesting, and whether they're likely to tear them apart and eat their flesh) and Jam-Y (who wants to know whether the people are still alive, whether they would be mad at them for taking so long, whether they've been eaten already... and hey! what happened to L4-O? Is he a zombie? That's an unpleasant thought... a zombie with a cone rifle...)

Speed-Y tells them that he had told L4-O that he would be back with the rest of the team. Now that they're back together, it's time to get back to the garage.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 24, 2012 17:29

I let Speed-Y take the lead and follow him when he sets off.

"From my experience with zombies, I don't think they could handle a cone rifle. They would probably just try to eat it."⁷⁴¹

written by Speeder on Mar 24, 2012 17:37

"I hope so... and I hope they do not try to eat the Nuke shell, if L4 is still carrying that one with him... I do not think we would appreciate it."

I again put my spear in position, in case we cross more zombies.

written by 4616599 on Mar 24, 2012 19:46

"That doesn't sound good. And I'm hardly equipped for this situation...in fact I'm not equipped at all! Who'd expect zombies?"

I look at L4-O again.

"Oh well, at least my limbs are still intact. You definitely need help. There're Armed Forces clones containing the subsector. Some of them in your company I think. I'm sure there're medics among them. See if you can crawl on this Transition. I'll try to evac you and the rest outta here. Junior Citizens, you say?"

written by Jam on Mar 24, 2012 21:46

"L4-O had a Nuke shell?"

I help Speed-Y to his feet...

written by Lightning4 on Mar 24, 2012 22:12

If Joris-R points out the transition, I do try to make my way to it and crawl onto it. Unless there's zombies nearby.

"That's good to know... hopefully I meet up with my team."

"Yeah. Junior Citizens. If any of them are harmed Friend Computer will have my head, and probably everyone else's involved too."

written by Gligar on Mar 24, 2012 22:15

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R lets Speed-Y take the lead. He suggests that the zombies probably aren't able to handle a cone rifle. If anything, they'd probably try to eat it.

Speed-Y hopes that that is the case. But... he hopes that they don't try to eat L4-O's nuclear shell, if he's carrying it... that wouldn't be good.

He gets out his spear and gets into position.

Jam-Y doesn't seem to know about L4-O's nuclear shell. He goes to help Speed-Y, but he doesn't seem to need it.

⁷⁴¹ GRANPIRE VIKING MAN: (OOC: Great, it seems I just edited this post over my last turn... Sorry about that. I'll try to recreate it to the best of my abilities.)

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Joris-R doesn't like L4-O's report. He isn't exactly equipped for zombies... in fact, he isn't equipped at all! He wasn't expecting zombies, at least.

However, he does have his limbs, and the Transition, so he can help out. He encourages L4-O to get on the Transition. He can take him to the Armed Forces unit outside the subsectors. He thinks that some of the are from L4-O's unit, and there might be medics with them.

He adds that they could take the survivors with them... and didn't L4-O say something about Junior Citizens?

L4-O crawls over. He confirms that there are Junior Citizens, and the The Computer ordered him to make sure that they get to safety. If he fails, The Computer will probably have his head, as well as the heads of everyone else.

He reaches the Transition and crawls on board. It's going to be a bit cramped on there for two.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 24, 2012 23:21

I look for anything to grab a firm hold on so I don't go flying or falling off.

"I'd give you a weapon, but I already handed out my extras. I'm not sure where they all went. I'll just have to get more now... I don't even think any clones with them are alive anymore."

"Maybe you're better off just grabbing anything big and solid to hit a zombie with. My weapons must be bad luck."

written by Gligar on Mar 25, 2012 01:18

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O tries to find somewhere to hold on to on the Transition. Once he's satisfied, he says that he has run out of spare weapons, since he's handed them all out. He thinks that all the recipients are dead, though. Perhaps his weapons are bad luck. Maybe Joris-R should simply find something big and heavy?

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 25, 2012 03:02

I check my barrel/barrels to see how many shots I've left.

Knowing, regardless, that I don't have enough shots for my two pistols, I ask Azir-R for the appropriate number of barrels.

Once/if I receive the barrels, I load both my pistols and brandish them both behind Speed-Y.⁷⁴²

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 25, 2012 04:53

"Well, since I seem to have this backpack still..."

I hand King the barrels he seeks. That should make him happy at least,

⁷⁴² GRANPIRE VIKING MAN: (OOC: OK, brandish is a poor word choice. I simply pull them out.)

written by Speeder on Mar 25, 2012 05:43

I start to actually move into the corridor and then toward the Garage where I came from.

written by 4616599 on Mar 25, 2012 14:03

"I think we'd better get you out of here first. I'll return for the Junior Citizens."

I head back for the Armed Forces checkpoint.

written by Jam on Mar 25, 2012 14:50

I take out a laser pistol and follow the others...

On the way, I check how many shots the barrel on the pistol has. I also try to figure out if I still have my emergency light, and if it's still lit.

written by Gligar on Mar 25, 2012 16:54

Stairwell, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As they prepare to move out, King-R checks his weapons. It looks like he has only one barrel left, with four shots on it. That is clearly not enough. He asks Azir-R for two more.

Azir-R checks his backpack, and finds two RED laser barrels. That leaves two more RED, and a few of other colours. King-R takes them and reloads. That's better.

Now that everyone's ready, Speed-Y moves out.

Corridor 3, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The corridor has clearly seen better day. What with the bits of dead bodies everywhere, the fallen synthcrete, and the big gaping hole leading down into the air duct, it's safe to say that there will be a big repair bill at the end of this. But let's not worry about that now. The team will probably regard the presence of a couple of zombies over in the foyer to be more important, along with the non-presence of all that gas.

Jam-Y regards his armaments as important. Specifically, the fact that he has no shots left on his laser barrel. Also, the fact that his "emergency light" has gone out.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Joris-R decides that L4-O is more important than a bunch of Junior Citizens, and decides to evacuate him first. He can come back for the Junior Citizens.

written by Speeder on Mar 25, 2012 17:33

I walk carefully toward the Garage.

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 25, 2012 18:25

I follow.

written by Jam on Mar 25, 2012 21:10

I also follow.

If I get the chance, I try to relight my emergency light by holding the string against the flame from another emergency light.

written by Gligar on Mar 25, 2012 21:28Foyer, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The team continues towards the garage. The zombies present seem to not be interested in them... but only because they seem to be busy with devouring some poor ex-survivor.

Perhaps trying to ignore it, Jam-Y stops for a moment at one of the "emergency lights", and relights his own.

Corridor 1, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The team continues. This corridor has fared little better than the other, though there is less damage, and more destroyed zombies. All very clear evidence of a battle here.

Garage, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The reason for the battle becomes clear, as there are more dead zombies present in the garage among the deactivated bots (the cloningbot, the hygienebot, the bot with the jumpsuits, Leeroy, and one other unidentifiable bot), but mostly by the open doors, bot to the corridor and out to the smog. Notably absent, however, are any signs of survivors... except, wait, many of the hand tools are also missing.

Azir-R notices that some things have been moved aside, revealing an air duct.

written by Speeder on Mar 25, 2012 21:41

"So... everyone is gone... someone go search for Nukabot... It certainly did not entered that air duct."

I look at Leeroy.

"I hate you, but you are still a clone... And a ex-teammate even..."

I approach the Scrubot.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 25, 2012 22:32

If the Transition is moving now, I look down if I can to get a status report on the survivor group and Nukabot.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 25, 2012 22:43

I run toward the hygienebot and see if there's a way I can activate it.

"Yay! A hygienebot!"

written by Gligar on Mar 26, 2012 01:13Garage, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y notes that everyone is gone... but what about Nukabot? There's no way it could have escaped through the air ducts. He orders someone to go look for it.

Then he approaches Leeroy. He hates the guy, but he is still a clone, and a former team mate, at that. Of course, Leeroy's a bot now, and the bot is offline.

King-R is more interested in one of the other bots: the hygienebot, naturally. He runs over and attempts to activate it. Sure enough, it starts to whirl and move.

Presently, it announces. "Self-test complete. Water reserves are low. How may I assist you, citizen?"

Lucas-R volunteers to go and find Nukabot.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The Transition is moving, but Joris-R seems to be having problems with it: it seems to be descending rapidly. But L4-O can still see the clone group from here. They seem to be fighting a group of zombies. It looks like the clones are just barely holding them back.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 26, 2012 04:20

"I would like to clean the blood off myself. I don't suppose your water reserves could last for the other members of my team?"

I take the appropriate steps to clean myself off.

written by Kristos on Mar 26, 2012 04:47

I wait patiently for window-outlooking to be non-treasonous for us REDs.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 26, 2012 05:24

If I can get steady enough aim, I try to shoot some of the zombies to make it easier on the clone group.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 26, 2012 10:28

I put my remaining equipment into my jumpsuit, as much as possible, since carrying it around in a jumpsuit on my back would likely make it more accessible to pickpockets, not to mention probably treasonous. I stuff the reverse-pickpocketed jumpsuit into my jumpsuit as well.

I then continue to look for thieves, particularly those with backpacks, bells, loyalty cards and Packy-Foam. Noticing a box in the corner of the transbot car, I decide to see if it is my box, opening it to check if Packy-Foam is inside.

written by Speeder on Mar 26, 2012 13:25

I attempt to start the maintenance mode of Leeroy, and see if I can somehow plug my PDC on it.

"I will attempt to see if we can save Leeroy without moving the whole bot... Last I heard he kept watching that troubleshooter show, meaning that it will keep freezing instead of following us... Unless I figure how to deactivate Leeroy and force the thing to use its basic bot programming... hum...."

written by Gligar on Mar 26, 2012 15:39Garage, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R explains to the hygienebot that he wants to clean off the blood, and asks if the bot's water supply would stretch to the rest of the team. "It is not recommended, but it would be possible if water rationing were to be enforced. That would require authorisation from a Hygiene Officer."

[997]

But King-R is already using some of the water himself. There is a shower compartment, but King-R opts for simple hand washing.

Meanwhile, Speed-Y works on firing up Leeroy in maintenance mode. This involves hooking up his PDC to a port on the bot brain and a few other things, but he is able to bypass the usual startup procedure. This is helpful, since said procedure usually involves the bot loading its operational RAM from internal memory. And since that's full of Leeroy...

Another benefit is that Leeroy won't try to run off and watch Mandatory Team Troubleshooter. And crash, since, as the copious number of sticky notes stuck to the bot explain, it keeps running out of memory, since it's full of Leeroy.

The problem, however, is that in order to use the bot for anything, Speed-Y would have to either let it boot normally or delete Leeroy... and he's not sure that it's even possible to do that.

The bot has finished its basic self-tests. It complains that it lacks operational memory. Its internal diagnostic routines suggest either deleting unneeded data or expanding the memory.

Lucas-R seems to have headed outside, looking for Nukabot.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

He finds it near a group of clones and Junior Citizens, who are currently engaged in fighting a bunch of zombies. They look to be having a hard time of it.

Above, a Transition struggles for altitude. On board, there are two clones, one of whom is heavily injured. The injured clone fires a blaster in the general direction of the zombies, managing to miss by a small margin.

Kris-R's transbot

Kris-R waits, probably for an announcement that it is safe to look.

He doesn't get it just yet. Instead, he gets the sound of Cryo-R reorganising his equipment. Specifically, he takes out the apple and B3 can from his other jumpsuit and stuffs them into his pockets. He tries to stuff the other jumpsuit into his pockets as well, but it is too big. The Indestructible Loyalty Transcripts Recorder will just have to be carried by its shoulder strap.

Then he continues to look for his missing items, as he still believes that they have been pick-pocketed. He notices two clones with backpacks... and the box in the corner. He assumes, therefore, that the box might be his. He goes over and opens it.

Doing so reveals a smaller box inside. The smaller box is ticking.

The transbot then announces. "Citizens of Clearances lower than BLUE may look out of the windows again. Thank you for your co-operation."

written by Speeder on Mar 26, 2012 15:43

I start to fiddle with the bot, trying to figure how Leeroy is coded in there, or how its data is read, or something, so I can figure how to backup Leeroy or how to delete it without a backup, or how to bypass it or something.

written by 4616599 on Mar 26, 2012 16:25

"We're still dropping! Looks like we're too heavy! Do you have any heavy things to toss off? Maybe explodey things too, seeing the zombies there?"

I struggle with the controls.

"Vat it. Okay, maybe I should have the blaster instead- my aim might be better."

If L4-O hands me the blaster, I start shooting at the nearby zombies.

"If we keep losing altitude like this, here's a plan B: we use the Transtion to ram a path through the zombies."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 26, 2012 19:31

I do decide to give my blaster to Joris-R for now. I check to see how quickly we are descending and brace for impact accordingly.

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 26, 2012 19:36

I look into the air duct, for lights or any sign that clones are/were traveling through it.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 26, 2012 21:24

"Wow! A ticking box! This could be useful."

I take the ticking box, for it might be useful.

"It's a good thing everyone can look out the windows again. If they were to look out before, and happened to see something beyond their clearance, like a bunch of warbots for example, that might be treasonous."

I return to where Kris-r is, and examine my new ticking box in more detail.

written by Gligar on Mar 26, 2012 22:17

Garage, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While Speed-Y fiddles with the bot, trying to see if it's possible to make a backup of Leeroy, or bypass Leeroy, or something, Azir-R has a look at the air duct. It seems that it has been used recently... there are footprints leading into the duct. Lots of footprints.

Speed-Y comes to a conclusion. It looks like Leeroy was crammed into the scrubot by making it read its operational programs directly from the memory card, instead of installing them into RAM. But even that didn't give them enough space. Even the bot brain's firmware needed to be trimmed in order to fit Leeroy in there. In short, it's not possible to boot the bot properly without waking Leeroy.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Lucas-R thinks, and smiles. He pulls out one of his pyrotechnic grenades and throws it at a zombie. It explodes with a flash and the sound of a blaster shot.

The flash must have been hot, as it caused the zombie to catch fire. This definitely nets a response from other zombies, who begin to approach Lucas-R. He can't help but quip, "It looks like you clones aren't all that alert, are you?" before he legs it, drawing zombies away with him.

Meanwhile, the Transition continues to lose height, albeit a little slower due to the work of the able-bodied clone. It aims for the biggest group of zombies, and the able-bodied clone accepts the blaster from the other, who braces for impact. Then, there are more blaster sounds, real ones this time, as the blaster is fired. It seems that the able-bodied clone's aim is more steady, as eh is able to shoot two zombies clean in the head.

Kris-R's transbot

Cryo-R, it seems, finds the lure of a ticking box too much to resist. He takes it back over to where Kris-R is and examines it. Well... it's a black box, and it's ticking. Oh, and there's a little dial on it, with one hand, which ticks closer and closer to zero. There's also the word "Bob".

The other clones begin to back away in panic. Except one, who runs up and tries to take it off him, jostling Kris-R in the process.

Speaking of Kris-R, his PDC is vibrating.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 26, 2012 22:36

I continue to brace for impact. Though I glance up if I can to see what's going on. Then I continue bracing for impact some more.

If all that preparation does anything to help me, anyway.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 26, 2012 22:55

I look back to see who is especially in need of cleaning, and, knowing Speed-Y is surely covered in blood, I ask him to come over.

"Speed-Y! Come over here to the Scrubot, please! You need cleaning!"

written by Gligar on Mar 27, 2012 01:18

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O looks up just long enough to see that they are still descending fast. Joris-R's efforts just weren't enough.

The Transition sails right over Lucas-R's head and crashes headlong into a group of zombies, crushing a couple and causing several more to lose some limbs. L4-O and Joris-R are sent flying, right into the group of clones.

Just narrowly missing a Junior Citizen.

Joris-R hurts all over - ow, he must have broken a rib.

L4-O isn't so lucky. As injured as he was, there's just no way he could survive something like that.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

After he's finished, King-R looks over the assembled clones, and decides that Speed-Y needs cleaning. He calls him over.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 27, 2012 03:12

I try to be alive... wherever that may currently be.

written by Jam on Mar 27, 2012 03:15

I hear a crash nearby, and run over to investigate...

"What happened? Was that a Transition?"

I run into the chaos and try to pull any survivors out of the wreckage, especially members of Team Epsilon, and any Junior Citizens.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 27, 2012 03:50

I look over the remaining clones to see if any of them have particularly visible blood stains on them, or other serious grime.

written by 4616599 on Mar 27, 2012 09:07

I stagger to my feet.

"Ow! Yes, it's a Transition. Ow! I've got to salvage it! Ow! Got to rescue the Junior Citizens!"

written by Speeder on Mar 27, 2012 13:13

"Just a bit more! I need to figure how Leeroy was but here in first place, in case I can copy him out, so I can put him back... Or see if I can retrieve him by removing the parts where he is actually stored!"

I continue fiddling with the bot, and when I figure I would need to remove parts, I use, even if in an awkward manner, my spear, to unscrew the screws and see if I can get Leeroy.

written by Gligar on Mar 27, 2012 16:36

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y hears something that sounds like a crash nearby, and goes out to investigate.

King-R looks over everyone else. It looks like they could all do with cleaning.

Speed-Y insists that he needs to finish up with Leeroy first. Specifically, he's seeing if it's possible to remove him, or otherwise copy him out of the bot. Unfortunately, the latter doesn't seem possible. There's some pretty strong DRM in place, and even if there weren't, Leeroy's too big to just copy to his PDC.

He resorts to dismantling the bot. Perhaps he can physically remove Leeroy...

Well, it's quite easy to access the bot brain. But given that Leeroy is stored on the bot's RAM chips and not the memory card, getting to him would involve extracting said RAM chips, as well as the firmware. And the board containing those is wedged in pretty firmly, and secured with screws of a kind that Speed-Y isn't even cleared to know exist.

[999]

As he's contemplating that, the cloningbot suddenly speaks. "Restart authorised from remote source. Warning: organic matter detected in cloning chambers. Beginning incineration."

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

By the time Jam-Y reaches the crash site, he finds that some of the clones already have things under control. It seems that there are few injuries, and those seem to be from combat rather than the Transition crash. In the distance, he can see Lucas-R running away, with a group of zombies chasing him. He seems to be heading for a big metallic... something... in the general direction of the checkpoint.

Joris-R has managed to recover. He has been injured by the crash, and seems to have broken a ring. He confirms that the crash involves a Transition, and says that they need to salvage it and rescue the Junior Citizens.

L4-O wasn't so lucky. It looks like the crash was too much for him.

written by Speeder on Mar 27, 2012 17:12

I look puzzled.

Then I attempt to figure, the clearance of the parts I did not had clearance to know... Although I am not cleared to know, maybe I am cleared to remove them, even if I have to damage the bot shell, to avoid damaging the parts.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 27, 2012 19:57

I see if I can get the air duct open from here, and exit here if possible. Else I continue onward, unless there's another huge fan...

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 27, 2012 20:44

"Well guys, it looks like a lot of clones went into this air duct, at least judging by the footprints."

I return to the team.

written by Gligar on Mar 27, 2012 21:32

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y checks the clearance of these strange screws. They seem to be... INDIGO.

Azir-R reports back to the team that a lot of clones have used the air ducts recently.

Air duct, near lift maintenance room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speaking of clones in the air ducts...

Mango is still here. He seems to have dozed off a for a while. Now, though, he attempts to open the duct and head out. To his surprise, the grate opens easily from this side.

The reason for that becomes obvious, when he explores the room properly: apart from the lift shaft, motors and maintenance equipment, there is also a half-empty crate of Vita-Yum Meal Substitute Bars and a bedroll here, as well as some empty B3 cans, all suggesting that someone sleeps here sometimes.

written by Speeder on Mar 27, 2012 21:34

I look unhappy.

I see if I can at least detach the memory chips and take with me...

I then have a idea and look around, to see if there are any destroyed bots around us, of the type that I can salvage parts to fix others (or modify Nukabot)

written by Lightning4 on Mar 27, 2012 21:57

I wait until I'm ready to be alive again.

a title is a curious thing...

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 27, 2012 21:58

"Hmmm... Hygienebot, can your tanks contain B3? I've heard that B3 can be an effective cleaner."

written by Gligar on Mar 27, 2012 23:41

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y look unhappy. All he wants to do is rescue Leeroy...

Perhaps he can just remove the chips?

He gives it a try.

Hmmmm... nope. And from those grating sounds, he's broken something inside the bot brain.

He looks around, and finds some pieces of broken bot manipulators in a locker... they look to have come off a truckbot or something. (No word on the size of the truckbot, though.)

King-R thinks, and asks the bot if it can accept B3 instead of water. "My tanks can hold B3..." it admits.

The cloningbot speaks up again. "Incineration complete." A vent opens, and expels a cloud of dust before closing. "Beginning cloning cycle."

written by Speeder on Mar 28, 2012 00:03

I walk over to the Hygienebot, looking unhappy.

"I cannot save Leeroy. But I think I can remove those bloodstains."

I look to the hygiene officer.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 28, 2012 02:43

"That's unfortunate..." I look confused for a moment, "I've never met Leroy."

"But go ahead," I gesture, "I think there should be enough water left for you to use it."

While Speed-Y gets clean, I walk over to Azir-R and ask him if he could hand over a can or two of B3, enough for him to clean himself with.

[1000]

"I wish Jam-Y hadn't left in such a hurry, though. He could have used a good wash."⁷⁴³

written by 4616599 on Mar 28, 2012 08:36

"Jam-Y! I never thought I'd be so glad to see a clone that murdered me!"

I look around for the Transition and see if it's salvageable.

"Another wave of zombies might arrive any moment. Is the team with you? We need to get the Junior Citizens out of here!"

written by Azirphaeli on Mar 28, 2012 13:42

"Wouldn't that just make him all sticky and soaked in B3?"

"If you want to use our ammo slash morale boosters for this still.. here"

I'll hand him two cans of B3, begrudgingly.

written by Kristos on Mar 28, 2012 13:56

Gasp! I return the jostle to the rude clone and pull him away. I answer the PDC and my responses to Cryo-R, RudeClone-R, and the PDC become melted into one sentence:

"Hello, who are you, what have you found, what do you want?"

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 28, 2012 15:38

"Yes, they could be a little sticky, but it's better to be sticky than full of blood!"

"Actually, the B3 is just for you, unless the water doesn't hold out for Speed-Y."

written by Gligar on Mar 28, 2012 16:20

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While the cloningbot runs through its cloning sequence, Speed-Y heads over to join King-R. Though he can't save Leeroy, he can certainly remove his bloodstains.

King-R seems sad at being unable to save this "Leeroy". Even though he never met the guy. But no matter. There's no reason why Speed-Y can't use the hygienebot to get clean... well, except for the water running out.

Speed-Y starts using the hygienebot while King-R deals with the water problem. Specifically, he goes over to Azir-R and requests a couple of cans of B3. It should be good for cleaning yourself, right?

It's a pity that Jam-Y ran off... he could have used a good wash.

Azir-R begrudgingly hands over the B3. He suggests that washing with it would leave someone feeling sticky. (He might be thinking about John-R, who is stood near the air duct.)

King-R takes them, and corrects Azir-R. The B3 is for him to clean with. Being sticky is better than being bloodstained.

⁷⁴³ GRANPIRE VIKING MAN: (OOC: There are only the 3 of us here at the moment, right?)

"So I don't get to wash?" John-R asks.

The cloningbot beeps, and opens up, depositing L4-O-QKW-2 on the floor.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Joris-R seems pleased to see Jam-Y, under the circumstances. He looks around for the Transition and finds it, now somewhat dented. But that doesn't mean that it's beyond repair, right?

He tells Jam-Y that they have to get moving. Another wave of zombies could be on them any momentcycle, and they have to get these Junior Citizens to safety.

From somewhere in the distance comes the sound of automatic weapons firing. It looks like the Armed Forces are busy.

Kris-R's transbot

Kris-R decides to handle everything at once, jostling the jostler back while answering him, Cryo-R, and his PDC all at once.

He also shows interest in the box Cryo-R found.

It makes its purpose known soon thereafter, when it explodes.

It's a surprisingly large explosion for a box that size. Needless to say, nobody in the transbot car survives.

Kris-R doesn't get to find out who was calling him.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 28, 2012 19:45

I look a little dazed and confused. In this daze, I try to make my way to the hygienebot so I can get cleaned up and get a jumpsuit.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 28, 2012 21:30

"Well... we'll see how far these two cans get us. We may need a third one, at least."

I take the cans and empty the liquid into hygienebot's tanks.

"Hygienebot, where can you normally refill your water tanks?"

written by Speeder on Mar 28, 2012 21:41

I see L4 dropping on the floor.

"Fast, someone interrogate him! We must not let his weapons fall in wrong hands!!!"

I remain doing the hygiene though.

written by Gligar on Mar 28, 2012 21:59

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Being as confused as you might expect, L4-O stumbles over to the hygienebot to start cleaning himself to remove the inevitable tank goo. However, he finds that not only is it being used by Speed-Y, but its water reserves are critically low. King-R is apparently pouring something into the water tank, apparently B3 from the colour. He's saying something about probably needing a third one, and then asks the bot where it usually refills its water. "I can connect to the main water supply," it replies, "however I do not believe that this garage is connected to the water supply. Alternatively, if a hose is available..."

[1001]

Speed-Y cuts it off. He has noticed L4-O, and is concerned about his weapons falling into the wrong hands. He orders that L4-O be questioned.

Cloning station, some other sector

Two cloning tanks fire up and run through their cycles.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 28, 2012 22:25

I resume being in a daze. I seek out any method of cleaning myself so I can get clothed, as if on autopilot.

written by Speeder on Mar 28, 2012 22:47

I try to finish cleaning myself before B3 shows up...

You know... I am those sort of people that HATE being sticky.

As soon as I can get away from the thing, I do, to make sure no B3 spills on me...

Then I go see if I can find a hose.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 28, 2012 22:52

I also glance around quickly to see if there's a possibility of there being a hose.

"Just wait a second, " I tell the others, "If we find a hose, we can just try and drink this B3 quickly, so it won't be wasted."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 28, 2012 23:07

I examine the explosion. This probably won't fare well for my eventual review of the transbot services.

written by Jam on Mar 29, 2012 01:21

I smile at Joris-R.

"You remember that? I thought most clones forgot the details of their deaths... Oh well, I'll start rounding up the Junior Citizens!"

I run over to any Junior Citizens I see...

"Hey, follow me! We'll get to some place a little safer, okay? Like over there..."

I gesture in the direction of the cloningbot and the rest of the team.

written by Gligar on Mar 29, 2012 01:52

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y finishes cleaning himself and steps away from the hygienebot before the B3 shows up. L4-O doesn't seem to care, and just barges in, trying to clean off the clone tank goo.

There seems to be a little water left, at least as far as can be seen. But it doesn't last long.

While Speed-Y goes looking for a hose, John-R starts asking L4-O questions. "Okay, first, I guess... whereabouts did you get to? Where did you die?"

King-R also goes looking for a hose. He adds that if they can find one, they might be able to drink the B3 after all.

Of course, they'd need to find the water supply as well.

As it happens, there is a hose. Quite a short one, though, presumably intended for refuelling from a canister alongside the bot it's refuelling.

Kris-R's transbot

The explosion also knocks out the nearby ORANGE carriage, though not all of the clones die there.

Cryo-R can't examine the explosion because he was right at the centre of it all. There's not much of him left.

Though that Loyalty Recorder may well have survived.

Cloning station, some other sector

Two clones drop from their tanks. These clones are Kris-R-QJT-2 and Cryo-R-BRN-6.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y finds it somewhat strange that Joris-R remembered that Jam-Y killed him, but brushed it aside to concentrate on the Junior Citizens. He suggests to them that they go somewhere else... somewhere like the garage.

Some of them seem enthusiastic about the idea, and start cheering. Others are too frightened to say anything. Still more just have that look about them that suggests that they don't want to listen.

Nukabot pulls up behind Jam-Y. "What are we planning to do with the deceased L4-O?"

Is it me or is that body twitching?

written by Jam on Mar 29, 2012 02:22

"Oh, right..."

I walk up to the dead L4-O and set him on fire in a few places with my emergency light.

"Now, Junior Citizens, remember that if you don't listen and stay here, you probably will get torn apart by the zombies and slowly devoured... Yeah, zombies eat clones, while they're still alive. That's not a rumor, I've seen it. Horrible, isn't it, a clone that eats other clones? I don't know how the zombies can stand it! We'd better get going..."

I start walking back to the team...

"Speaking of eating, when's lunch?"

I search my pockets for some Soy lent, since that sounds tasty at the moment...

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 29, 2012 03:54

I look to see if the hose is connected to the water supply, and whether it would be possible to let the hose reach hygienebot.

If not, I attempt to assess hygienebot's weight. Perhaps he could be pushed?

written by Lightning4 on Mar 29, 2012 04:31

I don't seem to be aware of John-R speaking to me. At least, not until I've reached the point where I'm (relatively) clean and clothed. At least, if there are jumpsuits available.

"Die? What are you talking about? I feel as fine as ever. And wait... how'd I get back here anyway? I was just outside."

I look down at my now non-injured leg in mild confusion.

"Hm. Docbots sure know how to fix up a prime..."

written by Speeder on Mar 29, 2012 12:10

While King is busy working with the hygienebot, I stand near L4.

"Tell me a stupid zombie is not with your stuff!"

Then I realize L4 did not realized he is dead... Well, this was his first death...

"You just lost a clone L4. We are interrogating you to know where you were killed, because you know what will happen with your equipment in zombie hands... Or worse, in the Easter whatever group hands."

written by Kristos on Mar 29, 2012 16:43

I look around, dazed.

Where am I? Who am I?

I perceive a thick liquid coating my body and impairing my vision. Though perhaps I am just delirious. Slowly, the preceding events come back to my memory.

Oh my... Cryo-R shouldn't have taken that clone's box. He got so mad he exploded! And blew us all the way to this place.

"Hello?"

written by Gligar on Mar 29, 2012 17:23Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y realises that he hadn't thought about L4-O's corpse. He makes a quick decision, namely to torch it. Or rather, "emergency light" it.

But it doesn't seem to want to burn. The jumpsuit ignites a couple of times, but it doesn't spread. Oh well. He leaves it with the jumpsuit smouldering.

It's a good thing that L4-O was so injured. From the look of things, any resulting zombie will have a hard time moving, if it could do so at all.

He turns to the Junior Citizens and reminds them that staying here will most likely equal them being eaten by zombies. No, that's not a rumour, it's for real.

He starts walking towards the garage. The Junior Citizens slowly start following him, as do the other clones. Nukabot tags along behind. L4-O's corpse doesn't.

But all this talk of eating has left Jam-Y hungry. Does he have any food with him... maybe some Soylent? No, but he does have several bags of algae chips. He opens one and starts munching.

It's a pity that the mission has made him miss lunch.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R checks the hose. It isn't connected to anything right now. As such it would be possible to connect the hose to the hygienebot. Which just leaves the problem of the water supply.

King-R decides to see if the hygienebot could move, when he realises that it has wheels...

L4-O continues cleaning. Soon, he decides that he's about as clean as he can get under the circumstances, and goes looking for a jumpsuit. The bot with the jumpsuits is still here, though its supply is running low from earlier. Fortunately, there is an ORANGE jumpsuit available.

He then realises that he has been spoken to. He seems confused at being asked about his death, since he's as healthy as ever. See? Even his leg is healed. Docbots can work wonders... which doesn't explain why he's back in here, but still...

Speed-Y demands to know is L4-O's equipment is in the hands of a zombie or not, before he realises: L4-O hasn't realised that he has recloned, since he's never done it before.

He proceeds to explain that, since L4-O has lost a clone, they are trying to figure out where he died. Remember that L4-O was carrying the heavy weapons. Think what a zombie could do with them... or those Easter guys.

Cloning station, some other sector

Kris-R is the first to come back to reality. He's still dazed, as you might expect, and he's not sure why he's covered in tank goo yet, but he remembers enough to come to a conclusion: the box. It must have been owned by one of the clones on the transbot, who got so angry at Cryo-R finding it that he exploded! Not too accurate... but it's not like you remember the last couple of minutecycles before you die anyway.

Cryo-R hasn't come round yet. But that doesn't matter. Kris-R looks around, trying to figure out if there's anyone around. He calls out.

A YELLOW clone quickly appears, followed by a pair of deliverybots. "Ah! You've decanted. You're Team Sigma, correct?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 29, 2012 19:33

"Well, I still don't believe I died, but I'll go along with this for now. I'll talk about the issue of prime vs not prime later."

I think.

"I was just outside the building. Joris-R was trying to get us down from the roof on his transition. But... I can't remember much else, it went by too quick."

I move over to the entrance of the garage and see if I can see anything from here.

"I do remember the fact I was pretty much low on ammo. I doubt whoever has my equipment hasn't resupplied it any... oh, Joris-R also has my blaster. I'll probably be needing that back."

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 29, 2012 21:58

"Well... It looks like we could probably take hygienebot with us. Only as far as it takes to find a water supply."

"In the meantime, who wants some B3?" I ask, holding up the hose.

written by Gligar on Mar 29, 2012 22:09

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O doesn't believe that he's died, but goes along with it. He adds that he was outside the building after meeting up with Joris-R and his Transition. After that... it's a blur. Except for the fact that he was running low on ammunition. Oh, and Joris-R has his blaster.

Then he remembers about Turbo.

King-R announces that they can move the hygienebot if needed. And they'll need to if they want more water. In the meantime, he offers B3, straight from the hose.

Just in time for Jam-Y and company to arrive outside.

written by Speeder on Mar 29, 2012 22:15

I blink a bit.

"That Cone Rifle you know, where is it?"

And... what you was doing in the roof? And how you got there? I pretty much remember blowing up the staircase..."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 29, 2012 22:43

"Turbo is probably with the rest of my stuff. Don't worry... unless I've been unconscious for some time I doubt that my equipment has fallen into the hands of any commie mutant traitors."

"Anyway... I suppose it's time to catch up. I was with a large group of survivors at the garage, which I believe you remember. Unfortunately things got a little too hot. Zombies started coming in everywhere. I got scraped up pretty bad, but a significant amount of us made it into the air ducts."

I point at the duct.

"We met another group of clones there. Some Junior Citizens were with them. We waited for a while then we found a way out, through the fire escape. Though we had to leave the ducts to do that..."

I continue recalling.

"Got banged up even worse there. Things get fuzzier there. A lift maintenance room... a ladder... Joris-R and that transition. Not much else."

written by Jam on Mar 29, 2012 23:02

I walk over to the others, and look confused for a few secondcycles as I see L4-O...

"Wait, you were... Oh, you've recloned already? That was fast."

I notice L4-O doesn't have any equipment, and facepalm.

"Oh, vatcrap, why didn't I grab L4-O's stuff when I saw his corpse? Hey L4-O, why don't you come with me and we can get that cone rifle. I don't think I'm cleared to bring it to you..."

I also look at the clones that followed me.

"This is probably the safest place in the subsector right now, so stay here with the nice YELLOW clone, okay?"

I smile, and point to Speed-Y.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 29, 2012 23:21

"I think I need to leave this garage. Hygienebot needs to be refilled. In the meantime, this B3 needs to be drunk."

"I suggest we all accompany you, Jam-Y. At least I should."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 30, 2012 00:55

"Recloned? I... nevermind, later. But yes, I should regather my equipment if you know where it is. I figured it can't have gone far..."

I prepare to follow Jam-Y as soon as he starts moving.

written by Gligar on Mar 30, 2012 01:25

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y wonders where Turbo is.

He also wonders how L4-O got to the roof. As far as he knows, he blew up the stairwell...

L4-O explains that Turbo will be with the rest of his equipment. It shouldn't have gone far (unless he's been out for a while (he hasn't)). He then brings the rest of the team up to speed with what he's been doing. He tells them about the zombie attack, and of escaping into the air ducts. He tells of finding more clones in the air ducts, and taking them to the roof via the fire escape. And then, the lift maintenance room, and the ladder, and Joris-R... the rest is fuzzy.

Jam-Y walks over, notices L4-O, and looks confused, before realising that he must have recloned already. He realises that L4-O is unharmed, and berates himself for leaving his stuff outside with his corpse. Then again, he doesn't think he's cleared to carry Turbo. He suggests that L4-O and he go and get it., and that the other clones stay here, since it's probably the safest place in the subsector. He doesn't get any arguments there.

King-R says that he needs to go and get water for the hygienebot. He also reminds everyone about the B3 it currently carries. Her suggests that he accompany Jam-Y as well.

[1004]

L4-O is still confused about recloning. But he agrees that he should go and get his stuff. If Jam-Y knows where it all is.

written by Speeder on Mar 30, 2012 01:44

At first I look confused... but that is only briefly...

I look the clones following Jam.

"I see... so the clones that I left waiting in the garage got to the roof and then had a very short trip down here... I think it probably has not been pleasant, considering L4 died on the trip."

I look at all the Jam followers that now will probably follow me.

"Is those, Junior Citizens? Wait, are those the ones I saw on the dormitory?"

I look at them again.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 30, 2012 01:54

I come to, and have a look around at my surroundings. I make sure to note any signs that might indicate where this might be, or that might provide any other information, useful or otherwise.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 30, 2012 02:04

"Either someone has to take Hygienebot with them, or I have to take it. And I can't drink all this B3 alone..."

"Besides," I continue, gesturing to the Junior citizens, "They need to stay with someone. Why don't we take Hygienebot over to a water supply and we can all get clean. They look like they could use washing, anyway."

"Speed-Y? What do we do with the Junior citizens?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 30, 2012 09:40

If Jam-Y starts moving, I proceed to follow.

If I have some time, I grab whatever weapons are handy around the garage that a dead clone from the earlier group may have dropped. Maybe one of my laser pistols? Or at least some kind of blunt weapon to use.

written by Gligar on Mar 30, 2012 16:57

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks momentarily confused, before realising that the clones he left in the garage got to the roof, and than got down quickly somehow... it probably wasn't a pleasant trip given that L4-O died.

written by Gligar on Mar 26, 2012 22:21

waits

totally not a one-word post

He then notices the Junior Citizens, and looks at them again. He realises that they're the ones from the dormitory.

King-R insists that someone needs to take the hygienebot with them. Either him, or someone else. But he can't drink all that B3 alone.

He then indicates the Junior Citizens. They have to stay with someone, so they might as well follow him to a water supply to refill the bot, and get clean. Everyone could go.

While he waits for Jam-Y to start moving, L4-O has a quick look around the garage. He notices one of his laser pistols on the floor, still with two shots left, and picks it up. There's also a big hammer over there, which he takes.

Cloning station, some other sector

Cryo-R comes to, a little later than Kris-R, and looks around. He notices the YELLOW and the two bots, as well as the cloning tanks surrounding the decanting area. Two are open (the ones they just used), some more are partway through their cycles, and others are sitting idle.

There are openings in two directions: one where they YELLOW has entered, and one opposite, with a sign marked SHOWER, and an arrow pointing left.

written by 4616599 on Mar 30, 2012 18:18

I continue trying to salvage the Transition.

I climb on it and see if it responds.

written by Kristos on Mar 30, 2012 19:56

I hear a dull voice coming from the direction of a yellow blur. I wipe goo from my face and try to knock it out of my ears. Perceiving the presence of a YELLOW clone, I say,

"Greetings sir or madam. Forgive me, I cannot discern your speech. There seems to be an thick gelatinous substance in my ears."

written by Jam on Mar 30, 2012 20:44

"I didn't see Nukabot, but I found L4-O and Joris-R. Joris-R said that he was trying to salvage a transition that had crashed."

I look around for him...

"Hmm... He must still be with the Transition... Well, I guess I'll be off! Ready L4-O?"

I start jogging back toward the crashed transition...

written by Gligar on Mar 30, 2012 22:04

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y notes that he didn't notice Nukabot, but he did see L4-O and Joris-R. The latter must still be where his Transition crashed.

He asks if L4-O is ready, and starts jogging back out, passing an arriving Nukabot in the process.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As it happens, Joris-R is still with his Transition, trying to get it running again.

He decides to give it a try and climbs onto it. Sure enough, it rises, slightly erratically, to what seems to be slightly below 50cm off the ground.

Not long later, Jam-Y and possibly L4-O arrive.

Cloning station, some other sector

It seems that Kris-R is having a little trouble with the tank goo, as it seems to be obscuring his vision and clogging his ears. He tries to free some of it and manages to make out the YELLOW clone, though he didn't really hear him properly. He explains this to the YELLOW.

"That's normal around here," the YELLOW replies, raising his voice. "The tank solution we use here is somewhat thicker than usual. Just head into the shower, it'll come right off." He points in the direction of the shower.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 30, 2012 22:08

I do jog behind Jam-Y, saying hello to Nukabot as I pass. I notice the fact that I can actually jog too.

"Good to see you survived the zombies. Was worried when you didn't respond to my PDC message. Will talk more shortly."

Once I arrive at the spot I have a look around.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 30, 2012 22:28

I speak to Speed-Y.

"Well, we need to keep these junior citizens safe, and we need to maintain our hygiene."

"You're the team leader. How do you suggest we fill these tanks?"

While I wait for Speed-Y's response, I take the end of the hose, insert it into my mouth, and ask Hygienebot, "Could you pump me some B3? About the equivalent of a human mouthful?"

written by Speeder on Mar 30, 2012 22:48

I look at King.

"That does not sound much hygienic... You ever though that a hose in the garage probably was a hose to move oil or fuel?"

I look if there are any obvious water sources inside the garage.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 31, 2012 00:39

"You're right."

I let the hose fall.

"Hygienebot, just send a little B3 through the hose."

I turn back to Speed-Y "B3 is quite a cleaner, you know. It will probably clear out anything harmful."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 31, 2012 01:16

I taste the solution, to determine whether or not it is at all similar to Tasty Gel Substance Treat.

written by Gligar on Mar 31, 2012 02:38

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O does, in fact, follow Jam-Y. He seems to be enjoying the fact that he can jog again.

Once the two reach Joris-R, L4-O has a look around. Apart from Joris-R and the Transition, his corpse is still in the vicinity. It seems to be twitching, as if it is trying to get up but is too injured to do so. It still seems to have all of L4-O's equipment.

Notably absent are any other clones, especially Lucas-R. Last time we saw him, he was leading a bunch of zombies away somewhere...

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R explains that he is trying to fulfil two goals: one, to protect the Junior Citizens; and two, to maintain hygiene. He requests a course of action from Speed-Y.

While he waits, he decides he wants a drink, and tries to get it from the hygienebot. Of course, with the (oily-tasting) hose in his mouth, he can't speak very well.

Speed-Y tells him to stop doing that. That hose was probably used for oil or fuel... neither of which you want in your mouth. He looks around for a water source, but there doesn't seem to be one in the garage.

King-R concedes that point, and settles for asking the bot to just send some B3 down the hose, again citing its cleaning properties. The bot obliges, eventually causing the B3 to spill on the floor.

Cloning station, some other sector

Cryo-R decides to taste the tank solution. He is slightly disappointed that it has no taste. "Please don't do that," the YELLOW says. "It has additives designed to reduce mutations during the cloning process, and is not meant for consumption after a clone has been decanted."

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 31, 2012 02:48

I repeat my earlier command to pump out a small amount of liquid, and this time, I put the newly-cleaned hose into my mouth after having spoken.

I then attempt to enjoy the once delicious B3.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 31, 2012 05:35

I frown when I see my corpse.

“Well that’s no good. I’m still supposed to be a prime...”

I proceed in re-gathering all my equipment again and putting them all in their proper place.

“No good at all...”

I look at the corpse and wonder...

“I wonder if... there’s something we can do? I mean... it is still showing life in a way... just a treasonous kind of life. Maybe there’s... some way of changing that...”

written by Speeder on Mar 31, 2012 13:59

I think that whatever it was given to you to stop you from freezing while seeing blood made you the most unhygienic hygiene officer that I ever saw...

Instead of cleaning you are dirtying stuff...

written by Gligar on Mar 31, 2012 15:16

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Now that he believes the hose to be clean, he repeats his command to the hygienebot, before replacing the hose in his mouth.

He attempts to enjoy the resulting B3, but all he can taste is the rubberlyke hose. And oil.

Speed-Y decides that whatever it was he was given to cure his fear of blood has made him a poor hygiene officer... all he is doing is making things more dirty.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

On seeing his own corpse, L4-O feels sad. he was supposed to be a prime! But it is now clear that he is not.

He liberates his equipment from the still-twitching and spasming corpse. It’s like it’s zombified, but too injured to be a threat. Perhaps there’s something that L4-O could do to fix it?

written by Jam on Mar 31, 2012 16:12

I see L4-O looking sadly at his own corpse.

“Sorry, but I don’t think we’re going to be able to bring your last clone back... The best thing to do would be to re-kill it before it becomes a zombie...”

I look around for any more living clones, and try to count how many zombies there are.

written by Gligar on Mar 31, 2012 21:17

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y tells L4-O that there’s nothing they can do about his corpse, except maybe re-kill it.

He looks around. There are a few zombies over in the distance - perhaps in Subsector A - and what appears to be a mass of clones over near where the checkpoint should be - presumably Armed Forces - and what seems to be a clone heading in their direction.

written by Kristos on Mar 31, 2012 21:39

Still unable to properly hear the clone, I think I understand his blurry gestures so I stumble to the chemical showers, trying to avoid slipping.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 31, 2012 21:48

“Well... it’s not really a threat at the moment. But we’d need to restrain it or something...”

I frown.

“No rope though. And I suppose that’s weighing the problem of resurrecting your prime versus the safety of the sector...”

“Though... a prime...”

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 31, 2012 22:23

“Blech.”

I spit out whatever B3 was left in my mouth.

“I think this hose is insufficient for hygienic use. Hygienebot, do you require a hose to refull through a water source? Will dirtied water pose a problem for your tanks?”

written by Gligar on Apr 01, 2012 01:24

Cloning station, some other sector

Though Kris-R still can’t hear the YELLOW, he can make out enough of his gestures to understand that he is supposed to head in the indicated direction. He decides to do just that, and it becomes apparent that his sensory impairment is affecting his sense of balance as he stumbles through the opening. He can dimly make out a blurry hallway to his left, so he takes it, and finds himself in what seems to be the right place.

Chemical showers, some other sector

The lights in here are harsh, with decorations which emphasise contrast between black and light grey, making the shower cubicles stand out. Some of them seem to be unoccupied.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O admits that his corpse is not a threat right now, but they’d need to restrain it anyway if they were to take it with them or something equally ridiculous. And they have no rope. Not just that, but you have to consider the safety of the sector versus resurrecting your prime.

L4-O seems conflicted over that.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R spits out the B3 and declares that the hose is unsuitable for hygiene purposes. He asks the hygienebot if it requires the hose to refill its tanks, and the bot replies in the affirmative.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 01, 2012 01:36

I ask Hygienbot, "Is water all you use to clean, or do you use some sort of cleaning agent? If not, I don't see how using this hose is acceptable."

"Unless you can clean this hose, we need to find something better."

written by Speeder on Apr 01, 2012 01:51

I decide to go outside and see if there are a available water source there but near.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 01, 2012 07:39

I take a look around.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 01, 2012 13:37

I check my cone rifle shells for something of use for this situation. Maybe some kind of long-term knockout device... or an EMP shell (do those even exist? and do I even know nanobots cause zombies?)

written by Gligar on Apr 01, 2012 15:51

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R continues questioning the bot, this time, asking about what it uses to clean. "The water I send through my system is just that", replies the bot. "However, there is also the chemical mixture used to clean newly-decanted clones. I still have a little of it."

Speed-Y goes to look for water sources outside, and finds none in the vicinity.

Lift maintenance room, building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango has another look around. He's still in the lift maintenance room, which seems to be Clearance RED, judging by the faded, peeling clearance stripe. If there are any cameras, he can't see them.

Also present is a staircase leading up. A table opposite the staircase has collapsed, indicating that something crashed into it recently.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O checks through his cone rifle shells... is anything useful? Hmm... what about this gas shell? There's also this damaged EMP shell, but... he doubts that it would be useful.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 01, 2012 20:23

I decide to proceed up the staircase, noting the table as I go.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 01, 2012 20:40

"Will this solution be sufficient to wash away any residual oil or gas inside the hose?"

written by Speeder on Apr 01, 2012 20:46

I give up on searching for water and go see the transition crash site.

I also see how bad is the situation in other buildings and in the perimeter.

written by Gligar on Apr 01, 2012 21:00

Lift maintenance room, building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango heads up. The maintenance room doesn't hold much interest for him, it seems.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

He finds himself on the roof. Signs, such as the discarded VitaYum wrappers, and the bootprints, and the emergency lights set up around the edge, and the dead zombies on the remains of the fire escape, indicate that there were clones here recently. They seem to have moved on. Either they were picked up (though surely Mango would have heard if they did) or they found another way down.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R asks if the chemical stuff will clean through oil. "I do not know. However, it is possible."

Speed-Y wanders outside a little further.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

He seems to be heading towards the crash site.

As he walks, he checks on what he can see of the situation elsewhere. The smog is thick, but he can definitely make out a group of clones at the checkpoint, along with some big machine-looking thing. The other buildings aren't too visible, but hew can make out zombies near Building 3, and some in the subsector opposite.

He arrives at the crash site, to find Joris-R and his Transition in one piece, more ort less, and L4-O's corpse, also more or less in one piece. Also present are the living L4-O, who now has all of his equipment, and Jam-Y.

The approaching clone continues to approach.

written by Jam on Apr 01, 2012 21:02

I look at the approaching clone, and try to figure out why he or she is approaching. I also attempt to determine who the clone is.

written by Speeder on Apr 01, 2012 21:20

I see tha approaching clone, raise my spear and wait looking at him.

"Oh, L4, good that you retrieved your stuff... I wonder if you have EMP ammunition there, if the gas is really nanobots, it might kill zombies..."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 01, 2012 22:33

I decide to try loading my cone rifle with the gas shell.

"I'll hit my corpse with this on our way out. Hopefully it'll still be here when we get back. Not that it can do anything as it is... this should just completely remove the odds."

I don't fire yet, I just look around and wait. I notice the approaching clone and watch.

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 02, 2012 01:23

I follow Speed-Y incase something happens

written by Gligar on Apr 02, 2012 01:25

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Both Jam-Y and Speed-Y notice the clone. Speed-Y levels his spear, but it turns out not to be needed: it's Lucas-R. "Whoa!"

L4-O is more interested in loading Turbo. He explains that he's going to shoot the corpse with this shell once they get clear. It shouldn't destroy it, but it should ensure that it isn't a threat... not that it is a threat, but still.

Then he notices Lucas-R.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 02, 2012 02:16

I let out an exasperated sigh at hygienebot.

"Do you ever worry about the condition of your hoses, or you just hope that it's clean and use whatever water came through it to clean clones?"

Deciding that scrubots are much better equipped to clean things, I attempt to find a solution to the problem.

"I'll try and find something to clean it."

I look around for a rag, brush, or pipe cleaner. Perhaps Hygienebot is equipped with something?

If I find something, I instruct Hygienebot to let out a very small amount of cleaning solution and B3, and start trying to clean out the inside of the hose.

written by Speeder on Apr 02, 2012 02:58

"Yay! Lucas!

So, what can you tell us?"

I start idly stabbing L4.

I mean, the dead L4.

Or the L4 that should be dead.

written by Kristos on Apr 02, 2012 04:57

I attempt to use a chemical shower.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 02, 2012 11:43

"Hmm... I wonder where they went...?"

I take a look for a way down. If the group of clones had been picked up, it wouldn't be likely that it would be coming back for myself.

written by Speeder on Mar 29, 2012 17:11

Cryo is on his last clone...

I wonder if he will retain his antics, die and create another interesting clone with another interesting personality...

Or if he will chance his antics right now to avoid losing his clone (or trying to award another clone).

Both make me very curious XD

written by Lightning4 on Apr 02, 2012 12:17

If Speed-Y starts stabbing my zombie, I frown.

"Hey! Don't... don't do that. I might still be able to do something. Maybe... it's my prime... I have to do something."

I look to see if it's not completely dead yet.

written by Gligar on Apr 02, 2012 16:10

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y relaxes, and lowers his spear. He asks Lucas-R for an update. "I led some zombies over to the Armed Forces at the fence," he replies. "Their warbot took care of them. That's a huge bot," he adds.

Speed-Y then realises that he's "accidentally" stabbed L4-O's corpse. He decides to make the best of it and keeps stabbing. The corpse stops moving.

L4-O (the living one) protests that Speed-Y shouldn't do that. They could still do something for the corpse... right? It was his prime, after all...

But it's too late. Speed-Y's attack has caused it to be still once again.

Azir-R arrives to witness Speed-Y continuing to stab L4-O's corpse.

Chemical showers, some other sector

Kris-R enters a cubicle. He notices that the showerhead is marked with a warning sign. He can't read the text due to his blurry vision, but the pictogram seems to indicate that one should not let the chemical mixture get into your eyes. There is also a big RED button. Of course, he's still disorientated from the decanting, so he ends up stumbling into the button.

The door closes, and a five-second cycle countdown begins.

Cryo-R still hasn't followed him. Perhaps he's examining some air molecule or something.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango keeps looking. He reasons that there must be an alternate way down. If those clones were picked up, he can't expect a return visit. His search pays off, as he finds an access ladder leading down the side of the building.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R seems to be getting annoyed. He wonders if the hygiene bot even cares about the condition of its hoses. "The upkeep of the hoses that are attached to me is not my concern," the bot replies. "Those are the responsibility of my operators."

King-R decides to take matters into his own hands. He looks around for a rag or a brush or something. He finds a couple of scrubbing brushes in the HYGIENE OFFICER box, currently situated on Nukabot, as well as some MintFresh cleaning fluid in 300ml bottles.

But he doesn't use the fluid. Instead, he asks the bot to let some B3 and chemical solution through the hose, so he can clean it. The bot does so, and he has a go at cleaning it.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 02, 2012 17:51

I look at and smell the hose, to see if it's clean enough to supply clean water.

I keep trying to argue with Hygienebot.

"Aren't you responsible for the water that enters your tanks? If the water is full of oil, shouldn't you reject it?"

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 02, 2012 21:00

"Nice," I remark to no one in particular.

I observe the ladder to get an early impression on how sturdy it is, before I leap to conclusions.

written by Gligar on Apr 02, 2012 21:23

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

After cleaning the hose, King-R checks it. It certainly looks cleaner than before. Clean enough to use, perhaps.

He insists that the hygienebot should take responsibility for its water. Surely it should reject, say, oil-contaminated water? "That is easy to say," replies the bot, "but I am not equipped to detect what is inside my tanks. It is up to the operator to ensure that the liquids are correct."

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango has a closer look at the ladder, and determines that it could support his weight.

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 02, 2012 21:47

"well.. good work I guess..?"

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 02, 2012 21:52

I stare at hygienebot for a moment, looking over its assembly.

"Wouldn't it be more efficient to have a simple electronic pump? What kind of functions do we need hygienebots for, anyway?"

I sigh at what I assume will be an unsatisfactory answer from hygienebot, and plug the hose back into the it.

"Now, we just need to find a water source... Where is everybody?"

I look around to see who is left in the garage; notably, the junior citizens.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 02, 2012 22:04

I frown seeing my corpse is no longer moving.

"Well... maybe something can still be done. Let's just... leave it alone."

I unload Turbo and put the gas shell safely away.

"I guess I can save that for some traitors now."

written by Cryoburner on Apr 03, 2012 00:12

"Wow! That's some interesting air. I really should probably take a shower now though."

I march toward the shower, and then shower.

written by Malkom on Apr 03, 2012 01:15

I attempt to feel paranoia once more. Preferrably in a suitably dark and dramatic location, but I suppose we can't be picky these days...

written by Gligar on Apr 03, 2012 01:56

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While Azir-R is slightly confused at seeing Speed-Y stab an L4-O with another L4-O watching, the latter L4-O frowns. Maybe he should get that frown seen to. He still thinks that something could be done for him prime. Like leaving it alone for now.

He unloads Turbo. That shell can be saved for commies or something.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R continues to wrestle with the hygienebot. He wonders why they even need hygienebots. Surely a simple pump would suffice. "Are you certain that you could adequately operate a 'simple pump'?" the bot replies. "There is more to consider than you imagine."

King-R tries to ignore it by plugging in the hose again. Now all he needs is a water supply. Wait... where did the team go?

"If you're looking for the team," John-R (the only other team member left in the garage) replies, "they all went over to the Transition crash. Or something."

Some of the Junior Citizens nod.

Chemical showers, some other sector

Oh hey, there's Cryo-R now. He must have finished his inspection.

He finds an unoccupied shower and enters. He looks at the warning sign, and the button, and presses the button, just once, whereupon it goes click and starts a five-second cycle countdown before the showerhead activates.

?

Mick-R awakens to...

...blackness.

But he seems to be walking – or perhaps he is being walked – somewhere, with his arms restrained behind his back.

Abruptly, he is pulled to the left, and turned through a right angle, if he even knows what that is.

written by Speeder on Apr 03, 2012 02:42

I idly stab L4 corpse some more while talking.

“Humm... big warbot, interesting...”

Alright, the part 1 of the plan is done, the situation is clearly contained.

Now seemly we have to escort some Junior citizens out, this sound easy, just walk from the garage to that huge bot...

But for some reason I think something will happen during that trip... It is always this way, like if some superior force is watching us and controlling events on purpose for pure sadism.⁷⁴⁴

written by Lightning4 on Apr 03, 2012 04:41

My voice almost turns to a growl when I see Speed-Y stabbing the corpse more.

“I doubt that’s necessary anymore. Sir.”

I sigh and then look around at the situation.

“We can run, probably. I don’t know if I have any explosive shells anymore... maybe I still have something good against the zombies. Napalm, perhaps. Maybe some other things. Then there’s my blaster... I’m getting to be a pretty good shot... but I don’t think I have many shots left.”

I check my blaster power packs.

Then I realize I don’t actually have (not sure?) my blaster on hand. I look to see if Joris-R still has it, and try to determine its status from here.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 03, 2012 06:11

With little option remaining in regards to progress, I put my weight upon the ladder, and begin to descend.

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 03, 2012 13:01

“Cheer up, it could be worse. He could be stabbing the you that’s not dead.”

I comfort L4.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 03, 2012 14:36

“And I suppose they don’t care about finding a water supply?” I ask no one in particular.

“Well, I suppose we need to stay and watch the junior citizens.”

I hope that the others remember to bring back some water.

written by Gligar on Apr 03, 2012 17:23

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y continues to stab while he speaks...

It seems, he says, that the subsectors are secure. Therefore they should concentrate on getting the Junior Citizens to safety, which should be as simple as walking to the checkpoint, right? Except... he can’t shake the feeling that something would happen. It’s almost as if someone is deliberately making trouble for them for no reason other than... well, because they can.

I’m pretty sure that such talk is treason.

L4-O takes offence to the continued stabbing of his corpse, saying that it’s not necessary any more.

With regards to the Junior Citizens, he adds that they could just make a run for it. He isn’t sure if he has any relevant cone rifle shells left... perhaps some napalm and a few others. He has his blaster, though... but he might be running low. Speaking of that, where is his blaster? It seems that Joris-R still has it. It’s right there in his hand. And the power pack’s running low... and L4-O still has two full ones left.

Azir-R tries to cheer up L4-O by reminding him that it could be worse: it could be him being stabbed.

Roof of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

With no other option, Mango decides to chance the ladder, and begins climbing down.

The ladder completely fails to break under the strain.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

On hearing about the rest of the team, King-R shows frustration. He bets they don’t care about finding water for the hygienebot. Though they do have to stay and watch over the Junior Citizens, some of whom seem interested in the open air duct.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 03, 2012 19:37

I hear Azir-R’s remark.

“Hmph. Well there’s that, I guess.”

“We should get back to the garage and start our plan... it won’t be safe from the zombies for long, if the same thing happens when I was there.”

I start to make my way back, making sure there are no zombies along the way.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 03, 2012 20:14

“You should stay away from that air duct! The air outside is bad!”

“You should look at hygienebot! He’s still got a little bit of B3 left in his tanks!”

⁷⁴⁴ Speeder: ooc: if I fail to reply tomorrow... It is because in the morning I will be in a business trip in another city, and in the night I will be in Pink Floyd (R Waters) concert 😊

written by Gligar on Apr 03, 2012 22:19

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O rather grumpily agrees, and suggests that they get back to the garage. He doubts they will be safe for long.

He starts heading back.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R tries to dissuade the Junior Citizens from touching the duct, citing air quality, and mentions that the hygienebot has some B3 left.

This works for most of the Junior Citizens, who enthusiastically start pestering the bot. But there are the one who persist in refusing to do what he says.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 03, 2012 23:57

I keep my eye out for zombies on the way back. I give the area a good look around me, to assess any tactical problems and where any potential assistance might be.

written by Gligar on Apr 04, 2012 01:38

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

On his way back, L4-O keeps an eye out. You never know when zombies, or mutants, or commies, or zombie commies, or mutant commies, or zombie mutant commies, might attack. Fortunately, with the exception of an AF squad nearby, the way seems pretty clear right now.

As he approaches the garage, he can see King-R, still messing with the hygienebot, and apparently speaking to some of the Junior Citizens.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 04, 2012 02:49

I walk over to the kid who refused to listen.

"Hey, check this out." I pull out my precious hygienic cloth from my pocket.

"This," I say, pointing to the specks on the cloth, "is what's out there."

"Believe me, you don't want to get that stuff on you. It's horrible. It's filthy. Probably deadly."

I pocket the cloth and try to close the air duct.

"What's your name, kid?"

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 04, 2012 04:19

I follow L4, sounds like there's work that needs doing.

written by Malkom on Apr 04, 2012 05:07

I attempt to cognicize my surroundings.

written by Granpire viking man on Mar 31, 2012 02:51

Hmmmmm, I distinctly remember cloning-tank solution having an algae-like flavour...

That was two Paranoia games ago, though. Maybe the solution has changed?

written by Cryoburner on Apr 04, 2012 08:35

I attempt to cognicize the shower, if that is even possible.

I also make sure my air mask is securely in place, making special note of the air's flavor.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 04, 2012 10:50

"Okay folks. The way looks clear. We need to get you to safety as soon as possible."

I take out my cone rifle, and load it with a napalm shell.

"Just need to wait for the others to get here then we can go."

I keep a keen eye on the surroundings for the aforementioned zombies, mutants, commies, zombie commies, mutant commies, zombie mutant commies, or even zombie robot mutant commies.

I gasp at the thought of that, but go back to keeping sentry.

written by Kristos on Apr 04, 2012 11:27

I grasp around for proper shower equipment.

written by Gligar on Apr 04, 2012 16:56

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R heads over to the vent, and pulls out his cleaning cloth, still stained with the black stuff from the roadway. Showing it to the JC, he notes that it's unpleasant, and most likely fatal. "Don't believe you," the JC replies. "We've been breathing it for ages and it hasn't done anything yet. Why would it do anything now?"

King-R puts the cloth away and asks the JC's name. "Not telling you!"

He looks around for the vent cover, but it seems to be absent.

Behind him, L4-O and Azir-R re-enter the garage, and L4-O announces that they need to get moving. The way looks clear right now, but they must be cautious.

He loads Turbo, and adds that they have to wait for the others, before lapsing into sentry mode. The prospect of some potential foes frightens him - zombie robot commie mutants, for instance - but he tries not to think about them.

?

Mick-R concentrates, trying to figure out why he can't see and where he is, before he realises that he is blindfolded.

He is again forced to make a turn, and then pushed into a chair. "Sit down", a gruff voice says.

Chemical showers, some other sector

Cryo-R looks at the shower, notes the warning sign, and looks around for an air mask. However, he finds that there is none. The shower may not need one. Perhaps he should close his eyes as the sign suggests. Oh well, this means he can taste the air all he wants. He notes no unusual smells, and several usual ones, of the sort one associates with chemical showers.

His shower's showerhead activates, spraying chemical mixture into the cubicle.

In another cubicle, Kris-R also searches for shower equipment. He finds some scrubbing brushes.

written by Speeder on Apr 04, 2012 17:04

I return to the Garage, with intention of leading the Junior Citizens to the checkpoint.

written by Gligar on Apr 04, 2012 22:14

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y returns to the garage, to find L4-O standing watch and that Junior Citizen sticking his tongue out at King-R.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 04, 2012 22:23

"Shall we go, Sir?"

I survey the group of survivors.

"Okay, file in folks. We're going to need to go fast to get out of here before any more zombies are around."

I watch the clones for a few moments more, then turn back to Speed-Y and wait for the order to go.

written by Jam on Apr 04, 2012 22:25

I suddenly notice I seem to have zoned out again...

"Oh, wait, huh?"

I look around, then start following the others back to where the hygienebot is.

"Hey, wait up!"

written by Malkom on Apr 04, 2012 23:10

A gruff voice. Perfect. Sounds like one of those authority types.

I sit down, hoping the chair doesn't suddenly zombify me.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 05, 2012 00:04

"Finally. Now we can go collect some water."

I grab a hold of hygienebot and prepare to wheel it out.

I pull the hose out of the hands and mouths of any junior citizens that may still be trying to drink B3. By this time, there can't be any left.

written by Speeder on Apr 05, 2012 00:19

I look at King.

"Leave that bot there... We need now to scout Junior Citizens to the army in the perimeter, so they can be more safely guarded."

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 05, 2012 00:55

"Are you kidding me? This team needs to be clean. We're all filthy. Just look at that" I exclaim, pointing at the bloodstains on Speed-Y's jumpsuit.

written by Gligar on Apr 05, 2012 01:51

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Now that Speed-Y is present, L4-O asks if they should get going.

While he waits for an answer, he tells the survivors that they'll have to move fast. Jam-Y enters at a run while he's addressing them, followed by Lucas-R.

King-R assumes that they're heading for a water source, and grabs the hygienebot, ready to wheel it out. but Speed-Y overrules that. Their priority is to get the Junior Citizens to safety, after all. King-R protests that everyone is filthy. Including him.

But where is Joris-R?

?

Mick-R sits down. The voice continues, "I guess you know why you're here. You have... issues. I assure you: by the time you return, those issues will be... gone."

The blindfold remains in place.

written by Malkom on Apr 05, 2012 05:12

I look confused. "Issues? I feel perfectly fine! To make myself absolutely clear, I have no pain whatsoever, I'm not unhappy at the moment, and I happen to be sitting in a very nice chair. What could be better?"

written by Kristos on Apr 05, 2012 14:49

I quickly put on an air mask and scrub the goo off, humming a catchy tune as the shower begins... which becomes suddenly interrupted with the realization that I died! This brings on a large gasp as I release the mask, causing chemicals to enter my mouth. I respond by choking and coughing, hoping to get it all back out, getting the mask back in place.

written by Gligar on Apr 05, 2012 17:16

?

Mick-R protests that he doesn't have any issues. He's not unhappy, and he's sitting in a nice chair.

"Oh, you have issues alright," the voice tells him. "You failed to report for two missions, and then failed to report for termination when ordered. But don't worry, we'll find out why. And I suspect that we'll find it... very entertaining."

Chemical showers, some other sector

Kris-R looks around for an air mask, but, as with Cryo-R's cubicle, there isn't one.

He starts scrubbing and humming a tune. But then he remembers that he died. The tune stops abruptly, and he gasps in shock.

This allows the chemicals to enter his mouth, whereupon he feels an intense pain. This causes him to gag and splutter to try to remove the chemicals. It works, somewhat, but it doesn't remove the pain...

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 05, 2012 17:33

I remind Speed-Y about getting clean.

"If you don't want me to take this hygienebot, you have to make sure the whole team gets to wash up at the next hygiene station we find after getting the juniors to safety."

written by Speeder on Apr 05, 2012 17:59

I look at King...

Then I keep looking at him.

"Alright... alright... But you do know that hygiene here does not really matter much, since right after hygiene that black stuff will get on us again."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 05, 2012 19:28

I frown.

"We can't be clean if we're dead. Let's move!"

written by Gligar on Apr 05, 2012 22:20

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R insists that, if Speed-Y does not want him to bring the hygienebot, the team must stop at the first hygiene station they find after they deliver the Junior Citizens to safety.

Speed-Y concedes, but points out that they'll just get dirty again, what with all this soot and smog.

L4-O points out that life is more important: dead clones can't be clean. He insists that they get going.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 05, 2012 22:56

I advance in a downward direction, taking every now and again a moment to check for any breakages.

I also look out at the scenery while I'm at it.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 01, 2012 07:42

Unless of course you've just gotten used to the taste.

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 05, 2012 23:59

"We will need to prioritize hygiene when the time right. For now, I think safety is the top."

written by Gligar on Apr 06, 2012 02:37

A ladder on the outside of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango starts climbing down the ladder. Every so often, he stops, to check the ladder's integrity. It seems intact, all things considering.

He also takes the opportunity to look around, and notices that there is a group of clones seemingly patrolling the area around Building 2, as well as one other clone standing on something that looks like it is hovering erratically. Though he can't make out much detail from this distance, given the ever-present smog.

He's able to get halfway down the building before he has to take a rest.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R insists that they prioritise hygiene only when the time is right. He adds that now is not the time.

written by Kristos on Apr 06, 2012 02:42

I do my best to cope with the pain and continue the shower. I will not resume humming. This is no longer fun. The computer must be testing me.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 06, 2012 03:44

"Hygiene IS safety. Getting blood or dirt in your wounds or mouth could be worse than getting killed by a zombie."

"I watched a vidshow about that once. Believe me, you don't want to get infected."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 06, 2012 04:54

I shudder.

"You don't need to remind us of that little mandatory piece of work."

I drift off into horrible memories, shudder again, then snap to. If the group starts moving, I move with them, motioning for the rest to follow.

written by Speeder on Apr 06, 2012 05:23

I also shudder at the mention of THAT vidshow.

But I just ignore King arguing and start to lead the way along L4.

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 06, 2012 14:50

I follow them.⁷⁴⁵

written by Gligar on Apr 06, 2012 16:36

Chemical showers, some other sector

Kris-R tries his best to ignore the pain. Humming a tune offers no excitement to him.

But he perseveres, and finishes his shower. The showerhead deactivates.

In another cubicle, Cryo-R also finishes his shower.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R argues that hygiene and safety are part of the same thing. He cites a vidshow he once saw about infection.

L4-O has also seen it. He shudders, and asks not to be reminded about it. However, he can't help but cast his mind back to it... how gruesome it was... ugh!

But he snaps back to the present, and notices that Speed-Y is also shuddering.

Speed-Y also snaps out of it, and heads out of the garage. L4-O and Azir-R follow.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 06, 2012 17:36

I stop so most of the group can pass me, and look back towards the garage to check who is still following and who is not.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 06, 2012 20:42

I reluctantly leave Hygienebot behind. It wasn't all that useful, anyway.

I try not to think too much about the vidshow. Maybe that's why I'm so adverse to blood?

I follow Speed-Y, and motion for the junior citizens to follow as well.

written by Speeder on Apr 06, 2012 21:23

Since we will be in wide open space, I put the spear on my back and take out the slugthrower... I also check if it is loaded.

written by Gligar on Apr 06, 2012 21:47

Just outside the garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O stops and looks back. He sees that some of the survivors are beginning to file out of the garage. Some of them appear reluctant, but have no other options.

King-R has finally abandoned the hygienebot and is motioning to the Junior Citizens to follow him, though he seems to be suppressing a shudder.

Speed-Y and a couple of the others pass L4-O, and continue on towards the checkpoint. Speed-Y also puts away his spear in favour of his "revolver", which he checks. There are two rounds remaining in the weapon.

⁷⁴⁵ AZIRPHAELI: (OOO I will be away for easter)

written by Speeder on Apr 06, 2012 21:54

I reload it...

And start to walk out with it in a aim position.

written by Jam on Apr 07, 2012 00:58

I follow Speed-Y, holding a laser pistol in one hand and my emergency light in my other hand...

"Wait, did I ever replace that barrel?"

I shrug, and replace the barrel on the laser pistol with a fresh one, just in case...

written by Kristos on Apr 07, 2012 01:56

I start looking for a jumpsuit and anything else I should take. If I do not see any obvious such items, I locate the nearest clone and ask about them.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 07, 2012 02:13

I pant. Climbing down is a tough thing to do for tall distances...

Speaking of which, I look down to see how far there is to go.

written by Malkom on Apr 07, 2012 03:15⁷⁴⁶

"Entertainment? I'm in! Let's get started. I take it this involves advanced technology, right?"

I say it the same way a third-grader might say, "This involves, like, big scary robots, right? Cooooo!" Of course that's treasonous knowledge of the Old Reckoning or something, but my player couldn't find a better metaphor so I guess I have to live with this one. What a drag.

{john! repair that darned fifth wall would you. and patch up the 103rd floor while you're at it I think reality's leaking again}

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 07, 2012 03:41

I look back into the garage to make sure no junior citizens are straggling.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 07, 2012 11:27

I start moving again, keeping to the side of the group. I keep an eye out for any CMTs. Or zombies, anyway.

written by Speeder on Apr 07, 2012 13:14

"I just thought of a redeeming quality of zombies...

I never saw a commie zombie!"

written by Gligar on Apr 07, 2012 16:18

Just outside the garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y reloads his "revolver" as he passes L4-O.

Jam-Y follows, holding both his laser pistol and his "emergency light". Wait... did he remember to change his barrel? Turns out that he didn't, so he does so now.

King-R looks back to make sure all the Junior Citizens are following. There are a couple of stragglers, but a couple of the other survivors are attempting to encourage them to follow.

⁷⁴⁶ MALKOM: (OOO sorry for the wait...)

L4-O takes up a position to one side of the group, as he continues to stand guard.

Speed-Y remembers one good quality that zombies have: he has never seen a commie zombie!

Joris-R still hasn't joined the group.

Chemical showers, some other sector

Kris-R looks round for equipment, but can't find any in the showers. Nor does he see anyone to ask... wait, there's one clone exiting the showers now, heading back to the main area. He follows.

Cloning station, some other sector

When he arrives, he finds that the YELLOW clone is still here, and has been joined by a couple more bots. Each of the bots has a box.

?

Mick-R hears that events will soon be entertaining, and enthusiastically agrees to take part.

"Good," the voice replies. "We'll get started right away. We'll start with your apparent belief that you are being controlled by an outside force.

"And don't you worry," the voice continues, "we're using plenty of technology here..."

Suddenly, blinding whiteness as the blindfold is removed.

written by Malkom on Apr 07, 2012 16:38

"Technology! Technology!" I make up a little jingle. "Techity tech, multiplex Bleck..."

written by Gligar on Apr 07, 2012 21:59

?

Mick-R is still enthusiastic about technology. He even starts singing a little tune.

The blinding white gives way to an image of the Eye of the Computer.

He then realises that there is more than just one Eye looking at him.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 07, 2012 22:14

I walk up behind the junior citizens who are at the back of the line, to make sure the junior citizens are safe, and to ensure they are all out of the garage.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 07, 2012 22:22

I start moving again along with the group. I look ahead to see how much farther we have to go until we reach the perimeter guards.

written by Gligar on Apr 08, 2012 01:51

Just outside the garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R waits for the stragglers to pass him (which they do, rather slowly) before following along behind them.

Nearer the middle, L4-O starts moving while looking ahead, where he sees what is probably the Armed Forces warbot, probably somewhere near the checkpoint. The smog does not permit further identification, but it is probably a couple of minutecycles' walk away.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 08, 2012 03:06

"Come on, keep moving! Don't let Speed-Y out of your sight. We don't want to fall behind."

written by Speeder on Apr 08, 2012 03:41

I just keep walking leading them, always alert...

I mean, REALLY always alert, although troubleshooters are supposed to be always alert some just pretend to... But I am really always alert this time.

written by Malkom on Apr 08, 2012 04:05

"Good evening, Eyes! Is the view good today?" I try to stroke one of the eyes. "What are you... holograms?"

written by 4616599 on Apr 08, 2012 06:12⁷⁴⁷

"Humph...hr...agh."

I shake myself.

"Where is everybody?"

I try to ascend.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 08, 2012 08:52

I wield Turbo again if I'm not already, and keep looking around while moving. Can't let anything slip through my attention.

written by Gligar on Apr 08, 2012 16:21

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While King-R busies himself with keeping the Junior Citizens moving (and it doesn't help that they seem to want to wander off), Speed-Y keeps walking, leading everyone towards the checkpoint. He can't be certain that the won't get attacked by any number of threats. L4-O does the same thing, and makes a point of getting out Turbo again. He notices that Joris-R seems to be moving, trying to get the Transition to ascend again, albeit not with much success. He must have damaged it.

?

Mick-R speaks to the Eyes. They don't respond.

He reaches out and tries to touch one. They don't seem to be within his reach.

He becomes aware of a sound, perhaps a voice.

⁷⁴⁷ 4616599: (OOC: Oops! Was a bit distracted busy this week.)

written by Kristos on Apr 08, 2012 17:48

"Hello, YELLOW. I can see and hear much better now!" I say with a probably very hoarse voice from the chemicals I partially ingested.

written by Gligar on Apr 08, 2012 21:17

Cloning station, some other sector

Kris-R greets the YELLOW, and says that his sight and hearing are better now. His voice has suffered, though.

"That's good to hear," the YELLOW replies, ignoring Kris-R's hoarseness. "One of these bots should have equipment for you... unfortunately, we've had to replace everything due to a fire. Although I believe one item survived... a recorder or something..."

?

The Eyes continue to stare at Mick-R.

As they do, the voice grows in volume, and can now be heard spouting loyalty phrases.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 08, 2012 21:52

I pause to make sure all the Junior Citizens and other clones are properly following, then resume walking as well.

"Now what's a good shell for this situation... hrm."

I rifle through my bag real quick and grab a napalm shell, and load it into Turbo.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 08, 2012 23:03

I march out of the shower!

If possible.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 09, 2012 00:02

I wait until I am fully rested before I start continuing with my journey downwards.

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 09, 2012 00:31

I make sure my barrel has shots remaining.

written by Speeder on Apr 09, 2012 01:50

When I notice the Junior citizens wanting to drift I stop, and frown at them.

written by Jam on Apr 09, 2012 02:50

I try to make sure none of the Junior Citizens get too far away from the main group... We wouldn't want them getting lost!

written by Kristos on Apr 09, 2012 11:56

"Yes, that was my loyalty officer's recorder."

I take the TEAM LEADER box and check to make sure all the same items are there.

If a jumpsuit is not provided, I croak: "Where are the jumpsuits?"

written by 4616599 on Apr 09, 2012 16:10

I try to get the Transition to catch up with the rest.

written by Gligar on Apr 09, 2012 16:41

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O stops and looks back, making sure they have the Junior Citizens with them. He can see that there are a couple of stragglers, but even they are being made to follow.

Jam-Y and Speed-Y also look back. Speed-Y frowns when he sees the stragglers. That sort of thing can't be tolerated.

L4-O loads Turbo again. Azir-R checks his laser pistol, and it's a good thing he does, because the barrel is showing empty.

The team continues. Nearby, Joris-R manages to get the Transition moving again, and follows the team.

The warbot looms in the near distance.

Ladder on the side of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango starts heading down again. This climb is quite tiring.

Soon, though, he reaches the ground. A lot of clones have been here recently, and apparently met some zombies, from the body parts strewn about.

Cloning station, some other sector

As Cryo-R marches out of the shower (or at least he performs some action which he thinks is a march) Kris-R tells the YELLOW that the recorder probably belongs to his loyalty officer.

He looks for a TEAM LEADER box. Sure enough, most of the same equipment is there, including a new jumpsuit. Even Cryo-R's old PDC is present, although it is rather damaged and burnt. Notably missing, though, is his can of B3.

written by Speeder on Apr 09, 2012 17:19

I star moving again, toward the warbot.

I look to Joris.

"That is a rented transition, isn't it? I wonder how much the bill will be, after crashing it and whatnot."

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 09, 2012 19:18

I change my barrel just incase.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 09, 2012 19:29

"Almost there folks. Keep it moving!"

I start pulling ahead so the Warbot or other clones in the area can get an ID on me, potentially.

written by Gligar on Apr 09, 2012 20:21

Near the roadway, Industrial Subsector B

The team continues on.

[1017]

Speed-Y stops for a moment (as does Azir-R, who changes his barrel) and looks at Joris-R. He asks if that Transition is rented. What with all the damage he has caused, the bill is likely to be high.

L4-O encourages everyone to keep moving. He picks up the pace, making himself more visible, in theory, to the Armed Forces clones.

Sure enough, as they draw closer, the warbot seems to detect them, and turns to face them. "Halt!"

written by Jam on Apr 09, 2012 20:49

If I heard the warbot, I immediately stop moving.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 09, 2012 22:03

I present myself.

"Hail, warbot! L4-O of the Mutant Mashers reporting in! This is a group of survivors from the Industrial Subsector buildings."

I remain still and await a response.

written by Speeder on Apr 10, 2012 00:34

I move only near enough to be clearly seen by the Army, and stop and let L4 do the talking.

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 10, 2012 01:39

I halt as well.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 10, 2012 02:00

I try to round up any Junior citizens who have strayed from the group, reminding them of the Army's presence.

"Shh, listen to the Army people!"

written by Kristos on Apr 10, 2012 03:35

"Thank you sir. I have one question: Why is a much thicker tank gel used here?"

I put on the new jumpsuit, the reflec, and my badge, and properly equip the laser pistol.

written by Gligar on Apr 10, 2012 18:14

Roadway, Industrial Subsector B

On hearing the warbot, Jam-Y freezes in his tracks, followed shortly by the rest of the team. The Junior Citizens require some encouragement, provided by King-R, but they do stop, primarily in order to gawk at the huge warbot.

L4-O steps forward and identifies himself, also telling the warbot about the survivors.

The warbot seems to stare at the group as if scrutinising them. Eventually it says, "Junior Citizens have been detected. Targeting denied. Orders are to permit Junior Citizens to return to designated crèche.

"Further citizens not permitted to leave under Code-Three-Zed protocols."

Cloning station, some other sector

Kris-R thanks the YELLOW, and, while equipping himself, asks the reason for the thicker tank mixture.

"It's simple," the YELLOW replies. "This sector has a zero-tolerance policy towards mutants. The mixture in use here is designed to minimise mutations by suppressing the... no, you aren't cleared for that part... but the basic idea is that it mixture makes it extremely difficult for mutations to form in a clone."

written by Speeder on Apr 10, 2012 18:20

"Whoa, nothing happened! That is new..."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 10, 2012 19:30

"Someone part of the Armed Forces guard who hasn't been in the Buildings should escort the Junior Citizens beyond the line..."

"I'm aware of the protocol, since I called it and all. Looks like me and my team stay here... but are we allowed to reinforce the perimeter?"

written by Gligar on Apr 10, 2012 21:19

Roadway, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y is surprised that nothing happened. Perhaps he expected to become a mushroom cloud or something.

L4-O requests Armed Forces personnel to escort the Junior Citizens to safety, and adds that he is familiar with the protocol. Though perhaps they are allowed to reinforce the perimeter from the inside?

"Reinforce?" repeats the bot. "Are you suggesting that I am... incapable of performing the task? Are you suggesting that I am... flawed!?"

A hatch on the warbot opens, revealing a clone. "Did you forget, sergeant? This is the Mark IV model 3248. They're powerful and they know it."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 10, 2012 21:37

"Ah, I apologize! I did not mean to suggest you are incapable of performing this task. Far from it. However, there is no such thing as enough firepower for killing traitors, commies, commie mutant traitors, and zombies. You can always shoot them more. More clones means more firepower, of course."

I smile.

"No kill like overkill, in other words!"

I look at the clone to see if I recognize him, since he seems like he recognizes me.

written by Jam on Apr 10, 2012 23:27

I start to breathe again, relieved that the warbot has decided not to terminate us all.

Wait, hang on, I spoke too soon! Ah, oh no, the warbot is mad again! I'd better go back to not breathing...

written by Malkom on Apr 10, 2012 23:56

Deciding that all this light must be hurting my eyes, I close them. Maybe it's a halluciwhatsis, and will go away.

written by Gligar on Apr 11, 2012 15:53

Roadway, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O quickly explains that he does not mean that the warbot is flawed, only that one can never have too much firepower when dealing with commies, mutants, and the like. "True enough," the warbot concedes, "but I have yet to see a commie who can withstand a full barrage of Mk.23 MegaDeathKill missiles from across the complex. No commie, mutant, or mega-fortified command post is a match for my firepower."

Jam-Y seems to have forgotten to breathe.

"I think what the Mark Four is trying to say," the clone (who L4-O can see is actually Corporal Sven-O-MPO-3) adds, "is that the average clone might be able to cause damage, but only a warbot can cause megadamage."

?

Mick-R closes his eyes. Apparently, they are beginning to hurt.

But that does not stop the glare of the lights. And he may not be able to see the Eyes any more, but they have been replaced with something else... a hammer and sickle.

And through his eyelids, the intense white light appears... kind of red.

written by Kristos on Apr 11, 2012 19:14

"Okay, thank you sir!"

I turn to go find Cryo-R so we can get back on mission.

"Cryo-R, we must be back to our mission soon! Remember we have to meet with JHY Sector R&D."

Oh! I do not know where we are. So I turn back to the YELLOW:

"What sector are we in?"

written by Gligar on Apr 11, 2012 20:25

Cloning station, some other sector

Kris-R thanks the YELLOW and goes looking for Cryo-R... who, as it happens, is right behind him. He proceeds to remind Cryo-R about JHY Sector R&D... before remembering that he doesn't know where he is. He closes his eyes for a moment, probably because he doesn't want to be seen rolling his eyes or something.

He turns back to the YELLOW and asks for this information. "This is JHP Sector," is the reply. "Before you go, I have a few forms I need you to fill in... oh, and your friend's equipment."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 11, 2012 21:01

"Well, no commies here that I can see. Just zombies."

I look back towards the buildings, then back at the warbot.

"Lots of zombies. So many..."

"But yes. Megadamage is wonderful to have in a situation like this."

"Anyway... what's the situation, Corporal? It looks handled so far. And, what would you have us do?"

written by Speeder on Apr 11, 2012 21:41

I just keep watching. Not really wary of the big hulking machine there... In fact I look interested, I keep watching it with much interest.

written by Jam on Apr 11, 2012 22:41

Seeing as the warbot seems to have calmed down, I start breathing again...

written by Kristos on Apr 11, 2012 23:24

I begin filling out forms.

written by Malkom on Apr 12, 2012 04:37

"Splendid."

I try to turn off my mind, hoping that when I wake up (if successful) I'll be in a better place.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 12, 2012 13:43

I also look curiously at the warbot, also wondering what the corporal would have us do.

written by Gligar on Apr 12, 2012 17:59

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O reports that he hasn't seen any commies here, only zombies. Lots of zombies. In such a situation, megadamage is a good thing to have.

He asks about the situation, and what Sven-O would have them do. "The perimeter is secure, yes, though we do have to sort out these Junior Citizens. Other than that... we don't really have a good idea of the zombie population. After all, we can't enter any more than you can leave. Perhaps you could give us an overall report, Sergeant? I can relay it to the captain."

Speed-Y watches with interest as the warbot gazes out over the Industrial Subsectors. He can almost sense its longing to let loose and obliterate the whole thing. Jam-Y remembers to breathe.

King-R also has a quick look at the warbot. It... definitely has a lot of guns, some of which even have more guns bolted onto them. In fact, every time he looks, he sees more guns.

Cloning station, JHP Sector

Kris-R accepts the small mound of forms from the YELLOW and starts filling them out. The zero-tolerance policy he mentioned is evident throughout every page. Almost every other question seems to be asking "Are you a mutant? Don't you want to register your mutation? Why? Why not?"

Cryo-R does a whole lot of... inspecting air molecules. Yeah, that's it.

?

Mick-R doesn't seem to react at the hammer and sickle. Instead, he tries to... shut off his mind.

An equally-puzzling location

"Sir, he's not reacting to the hammer and sickle."

"What? Are you sure?"

"Yes, sir. All I'm reading is a reduced heartbeat."

"That's not good. Try the adrenaline, and start in on the subliminals. We'll need to keep an eye on this one."

written by Cryoburner on Apr 12, 2012 18:18

After pausing a moment to further examine some air molecules (multiple at once, because I'm efficient), I take a moment to note the air's quality and consistency, along with any trace molecules suspended within that may or may not be suspicious.

"Yes, Let's go!"

I then march over to my equipment, and examine it.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 12, 2012 20:39

"Sure, but I can't give any concrete numbers. My team can probably help get a bead on it..."

I scratch my chin, the universal indicator of thinking.

"I would guess that around 90-95% of the population have been converted into zombies. Just from what I've seen, there are hundreds of zombies. I'd hazard a guess at nearly... five hundred zombies? I'm not too familiar with the population protocols..."

I add,

"Though I haven't really been in the depths of the building. Mostly the air ducts, which are zombie free."

Suddenly, I recall something.

"Oh. That reminds me. There were some clones that came in here in vehiclebots. I didn't get a good look at them, I was getting reports from Nukabot, the team forkbot. I did find some information that sheds light on what's going on. Something called the 'Reanimator Project'. But I haven't seen anything about those clones since... perhaps their plan backfired and they became zombies too..."

I turn to the group.

"Do you guys know any more about those clones?"

written by Gligar on Apr 12, 2012 22:04

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O reports that he hasn't seen any commies here, only zombies. Lots of zombies. In such a situation, megadamage is a good thing to have.

He asks about the situation, and what Sven-O would have them do. "The perimeter is secure, yes, though we do have to sort out these Junior Citizens. Other than that... we don't really have a good idea of the zombie population. After all, we can't enter any more than you can leave. Perhaps you could give us an overall report, Sergeant? I can relay it to the captain."

Speed-Y watches with interest as the warbot gazes out over the Industrial Subsectors. He can almost sense its longing to let loose and obliterate the whole thing. Jam-Y remembers to breathe.

King-R also has a quick look at the warbot. It... definitely has a lot of guns, some of which even have more guns bolted onto them. In fact, every time he looks, he sees more guns.

Cloning station, JHP Sector

Cryo-R finishes his inspection of the air, and finds that the air's composition, quality, consistency, and trace particle content all fall within mandatory levels for a cloning station. He then goes over to his equipment box and proceeds to inspect that, as well. He finds the loyalty recorder, still in its case, along with a new jumpsuit, ME Card, PDC, laser pistol and barrel, and MBD Badge. The loyalty recorder's case looks a little charred.

Buried under those he finds a set of RED reflec, to which is pinned a nametag.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O admits that he doesn't have concrete numbers, but estimates a 90-95% conversion rate, which must mean... something like 500 zombies in all? The one saving grace is that they haven't spread to the air ducts.

Oh! And there's one other thing. There were some clones who arrived here earlier in autocars, who were somehow linked to something called the 'Reanimator Project'. But they haven't been seen since... he suspects that they were turned. Sven-O admits that he hasn't heard of the Reanimator Project, but promises to relay the report.

L4-O turns to the survivors and asks them. Most don't know the project. A couple have heard of it, though. "I think I heard something... it had to do with reviving clones who had... suffered... fatal... wait, you don't think..." "Sure sounds that way."

written by Speeder on Apr 12, 2012 22:33

"And the easter something? We need to remember that... easter something... easter..."

I can't remember!"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 12, 2012 23:43

"Easter something? What'd I miss?"

"Oh... this reminds me. I should call Nukabot to the line."

I check to see if Nukabot is not already with us. If it's not, I get my PDC out and fire off a message to it.

Sorry, we haven't forgotten you! We're all grouped at the perimeter right now, so if you could join us, then we can see what other plans we have for the Industrial Sectors...

written by Jam on Apr 13, 2012 02:35

"The First Church of the Easter Cy—"

I stop suddenly, and clutch at my stomach.

"Ohhhh... I'm hungry all of the sudden... Really hungry..."

I look around for any kind of food...

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 13, 2012 03:10

"Easter Cycle! That's it"

I eye Jam-Y cautiously.

"You have an awfully good memory for potentially treasonous thoughts. You know, I don't actually remember ever hearing anything about a 'first church'... What's that about, anyway?"

written by Gligar on Apr 13, 2012 16:14

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y remembers something... easter... something... why can't he remember?

L4-O doesn't know what he means. Clearly, he missed something.

But he does know that he forgot about Nukabot! He has a look around for the forkbot, and realises that it's taken up a position on the other side of the group. So he doesn't need to send a message.

Jam-Y remembers about the easter thing: it's the First Church of the Easter Cycle.

But the memory triggers the other thing he got when he probed that zombie: hunger... He looks around for something to eat... but it doesn't look like he can see anything.

King-R agrees that that's it, but wonders how Jam-Y can remember such treasonous things. How did he even learn about it, anyway? King-R hasn't heard anything about it...

written by Malkom on Apr 13, 2012 16:07

I continue trying to shut off my mind, just in case it actually works.

written by Speeder on Apr 13, 2012 16:25

"First Church of Easter Cycle..."

What that means? Why they are cyborgs, and why they are using Reanimator? Why they are being traitors? Why I have so many questions? Why I question why I have so many questions? Why I question having questions? Why I have so much questions of the sort 'why'? Why you are looking at me that way?"

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 13, 2012 16:34

I look at Speed-Y "that way".

written by Lightning4 on Apr 13, 2012 17:30

"Cyborgs? They were cyborgs? Well, that explains why we kept running into those Corpore Metal guys before."

I turn back to the Corporal.

"And on top of that, the clones that entered were cyborgs. We've actually been sighting them all around the sector... which is kind of unsettling, actually."

"Then there's this... Easter Cycle.... First Church of the Easter Cycle thing that Jam-Y here mentioned. I'm not sure what it is. Sounds... treasonous."

written by Jam on Apr 13, 2012 18:10

I also look at Speed-Y "that way."

Also, I drool a bit...

"You know, you kinda look a bit like Soylent RED... Mmmm..."

I take a step towards him, a hungry look in my eyes.

written by Malkom on Apr 13, 2012 19:31

I attempt to focus on the notion of time travel as a way to distract myself from the monotony.

written by Gligar on Apr 13, 2012 21:39

?

Mick-R continues to try and shut off his mind, but it isn't working... those subliminals and adrenaline, however, are, and they're distracting enough to make the prospect impossible. Instead, he tries concentrating...

An equally-puzzling location

"It's working.. he's cognisant."

"Good. Ramp up the - "

"Wait... he's trying to concentrate on something. He's trying to block out the subliminals!"

"Okay... go back to basics... see if you can get him to scratch his nose or something. If that fails, start off on the electrics, and give him some of the usual recordings."

"Yes, sir."

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

First Church of the Easter Cycle... that just causes Speed-Y to ask more questions, mostly "why". Things like why they're using the Reanimators, why they're cybortge... why he's asking so many questions...

...and why is everyone looking at him like that?⁷⁴⁸

Now, asking too many questions is usually insubordination, a fact which a competent Loyalty Officer would notice in an instant. And indeed, Jam-Y is looking at him "like that". (So is King-R.)

⁷⁴⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: That's funny, Speeder. Definitely worth a Perversity Point 😊)

No wait... it seems that the zombie hunger from Jam-Y's earlier probing has clouded his mind... and he sees Speed-Y as a source of food! He advances on Speed-Y...

L4-O is still focused on the cyborgs. That would explain Copore Metal...

He adds them to his report, saying that they ran into a lot of them earlier. And as for the Easter Cycle...

"Thanks, sergeant," replies Sven-O. "I'll get right on the repo..."

He is interrupted by the warbot. "Viable target detected. Subject: Jam-Y-JYR. Suspected zombie infectee."

There is a lot of noise as the warbot seems to arm each and every one of its guns.

The Junior Citizens, who were creeping forward, suddenly make a run for it.

written by Speeder on Apr 13, 2012 21:41

I look at Jam, flabbergasted. If that is word...

Then I start to behave like a robot, hoping Jam will think he cannot eat metal, you know, a little robot dance, yeah, that one, that actually no robot moves that way and get offended...

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 13, 2012 21:59

I see if there is anything of use before departing.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 13, 2012 23:47

I retreat rather rapidly to a safe distance. At least, I try to make it a safe distance from the warbot that isn't on the outside of the perimeter where said warbot might consider me a target next.

I just... watch events unfold.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 13, 2012 23:48

Though, I do add some yelling.

"Hold fire! Do not fire on Jam-Y-JYR yet!"

"Jam-Y! Wake up! Or something! You never died!"

written by Malkom on Apr 14, 2012 02:57

I attempt to focus on any physical surroundings while still concentrating on time travel.

written by Jam on Apr 14, 2012 04:06

L4-O's voice snaps me out of my daze.

"Huh? What? Why would I be dead? Are you crazy?"

I suddenly notice that more guns than I can count are currently pointed directly at me...

"Oh vatcrap, that's a lot of guns... Hey now, don't shoot! I'm not a zombie, I'm just a bit hungry!"

written by Gligar on Apr 14, 2012 17:48

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y's reaction to Jam-Y's antics are priceless... as is his response. Namely, he tries to throw Jam-Y off by doing the robot.

Of course, no real bot would ever consider doing the robot, as it is way too stylised and inaccurate. Nukabot, for instance, does not seem impressed. Nor does it seem unimpressed, for that matter.

L4-O decides to follow the example set by the Junior Citizens and makes a run for it, in the general direction of "away from Jam-Y" while yelling for the warbot to not open fire, and also for Jam-Y to snap out of it.

And he does. He wonders why L4-O would think that he is dead, when he's only hungry.

Then he notices the massive number of guns, more than he can count, pointed at him. And panics. He yells at the warbot to hold its fire...

The warbot seems to stare coldly. "Current input conflicts with standing orders. Firing solution remains. Holding. Two turncycles until activation of contingency protocols."

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango begins searching the mangled and fractured bodies for anything of use... and finds a couple of ME Cards, and a knife.

He could take them, and then go to... where?

?

Mick-R tries to switch up his tactics by trying to concentrate on two things at once. It's hard, and why don't you scratch your nose? Go on, scratch your nose... and how about some B3? You know, B3 is mandatory... wouldn't you like to be mandatory?

He begins to feel a brief tingling across his chest.

written by Speeder on Apr 14, 2012 18:53

"Jam! Hug him! He might miss a hug!"

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 14, 2012 20:03

I watch all the Junior citizens run away from me, and wonder why they ran.

Deciding I will never be able to catch them all, I opt to watch where they go, and hope that Jam-Y doesn't try to eat one of them.

written by Gligar on Apr 14, 2012 21:43

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y suggests that Jam-Y give the warbot a hug, stating that it might miss it.

The warbot? Really? You might as well try to hug a [DELETED FOR SECURITY REASONS]...

King-R watches the Junior Citizens running down the roadway, and wonders why they ran. Oh well, at least they're not going to get eaten by Jam-Y.

written by Jam on Apr 14, 2012 21:44

I start to panic...

"Wait, I'm not a zombie!"

I start to back away from the warbot, until I hear Speed-Y's advice.

Hug him? Hug who, the bot?

I change my mind, and cautiously walk forward. I attempt to do the best I can to hug the warbot.

"Please don't shoot me, please don't shoot me, please don't shoot me..."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 14, 2012 22:10

"Ah why not, worth a try..."

I return to a yell.

"Warbot! Abort current order and return to standby mode! Execute Standby Mode, Authorization QKW-3-L1G4-12345!"

I watch to see if that actually works.

written by Speeder on Apr 14, 2012 22:51

I was going to say something... But I prefer to see the results of L4 action first.

written by Kristos on Apr 15, 2012 00:29

"Hurry, Cryo-R, you have to fill out your forms!"

I finish filling out my forms.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 15, 2012 03:05

"Wow! Equipment!"

I take my equipment, and equip myself with it. I also open the Loyalty Transcript Recorder's case if possible, and examine it's condition. I then look around for any forms and/or pens that may be present, and examine those as well.

written by Malkom on Apr 15, 2012 04:04

I try to resist. Hey, it's better to travel time than be mandatory! Think of the tech you'd see! I concentrate on those lovely, lovely techy images.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 15, 2012 04:23

I smile at the sight of Jam-Y hugging a warbot.

Then I burst out laughing, hoping that nothing too bloody will come of it. The hugging, not the laughing.

At this thought, I stop laughing and go back to simply grinning, just in case my laughing will somehow upset the warbot.

written by Gligar on Apr 15, 2012 16:45

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y panics, and backs away...

..and then processes Speed-Y's request. What? Hug the warbot? Well, must be worth a try...

He slowly approaches, and tries to give the warbot a hug.

This results in him getting a face full of gun. As well as a twitch from the warbot. "Step away!" it booms. "Do not attempt further contact!"

It also causes King-R to burst out laughing at the sight. He does catch himself after a moment, when he realises that it might set off the warbot.

L4-O also takes action, and tries issuing an abort code to the warbot.

There is a long pause, during which Speed-Y starts to say something... but thinks better of it.

"Incorrect access code," the warbot reports. ""Analysis: possible CMT interference. Commencing firing solution.

It begins aiming its guns, and fires a couple...

...it missed!

Sven-O dives back inside the warbot. From inside, he can be heard calling out, "Something's wrong!"

Cloning station, JHP Sector

Kris-R looks anxious to get underway. He insists that Cryo-R get a move on with those forms.

Of course, Cryo-R does everything but get a move on, an he inspects his equipment (so that's where the key went), equips himself, and then opens and checks the recorder. The recorder is undamaged, and the tape is still mounted and set in position after Cryo-R's last (only) recording.

He closes the recorder case, and looks around for forms and pens. The YELLOW has both, so he decides to inspect them. The forms seem to be customised versions of Post-Decanting Clone Release Forms, which incorporate most of the Suspicion of Mutation Form, the Mutation Registration Form, and the Voluntary Organ Donor Form. There are also elements of something else. Perhaps a new form?

?

Happiness is Mandatory. Wouldn't you like to be happy? Wouldn't you like to scratch your nose? Wouldn't you like to be The Computer's Friend? The Computer Is Your Friend.

Mick-R continues to try and resist the subliminal messages, and even tries to think back at them, stating that time travel is better than being mandatory, since you get to look at technology.

The existence of time travel is a rumour. Rumours are a sign of unhappiness. Happiness is Mandatory. Wouldn't you like to be happy? Wouldn't you like to scratch your nose? Wouldn't you like to be The Computer's Friend? The Computer Is Your Friend. Happiness is Mandatory. Wouldn't you like to be happy? Wouldn't you like to scratch your nose? Wouldn't you like to drink B3? Only loyal clones get

B3. Wouldn't you like to be loyal? Wouldn't you like to be The Computer's Friend? The Computer Is Your Friend...

An equally-puzzling location

"Sir, he's talking back at the subliminals. The bot brain's handling it, though."

"He's noticing them. Good. That's the first step. Any progress on the electrics?"

"None, sir. Wait... there may be a fault."

"Okay, skip them. Go straight to a level one brainscrub."

written by Speeder on Apr 15, 2012 17:28

"Everyone HUG THE WARBOT!!!!"

I run for it.

"Indeed it worked! The warbot is probably programmed to not shoot itself! Hug it, fast!"

written by Jam on Apr 15, 2012 18:10

A warbot gone rogue? This might be a problem...

I back away from the guns, and call out to Speed-Y.

"What should we do?"⁷⁴⁹

written by Kristos on Apr 15, 2012 20:08

"Here you are, sir. I hope all my answers are satisfactory!" I say with a (probably exaggerated) smile.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 15, 2012 20:55

"Vatcrap! Was that the wrong access code... I'm... I'm not sure actually."

I try to go over it mentally. At least, while trying to dodge fire if the warbot is shooting at me.

written by Gligar on Apr 15, 2012 21:26

Roadway, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y seems to have lost his mind... what other explanation would there be for him to suggest that everyone hug the warbot? He claims that it worked, though.

Notably, he runs off...

As does Jam-Y, who looks at Speed-Y in disbelief... and asks what they should do.

L4-O panics slightly... that was the wrong code! He goes over it in his mind...

...as the warbot starts firing again!

Everyone starts to dodge as best they can. Some of the survivors are unlucky, and fall dead..

Someone from inside the warbot calls out, "I'm trying to override! Maybe I can thr-" ⁷⁴⁹ JAM: (edit: I didn't see Speeder's post, but I'll still do the same thing.

"It's not responding!"

Also, I look towards Speed-Y with an expression of disbelief on my face. Has Speed-Y gone crazy?!)

Cloning station, JHP Sector

Kris-R finishes up his forms. He seems enthusiastic when he hands them back, as if he hopes that he can get away quickly.

The YELLOW starts looking over the forms as if he is channeling Cryo-R.. "Hmmm..."

written by Cryoburner on Apr 15, 2012 21:54

While the Yellow is looking over Kris-R's forms, I take the pens. All of them. I use them to fill out the forms, presumably in a more efficient multi-pen manner.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 16, 2012 01:01

I see the guns firing and run into the nearest place that appears to be sheltered.

Puzzled, I peek out at the two yellows and wonder what they're up to, and why they did that. Seeing them still hugging the bot, though, I can't suppress a giggle.

"Well, at least the Junior citizens are safe... That would have been disastrous."

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 16, 2012 01:06

I pick up the knives, and store them for possible later use. I also pocket the ME card, but not before checking the identity.

That done, I move off with a good degree of caution.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 16, 2012 01:08

"Execute override mode, Authorization... QKW-3-L1G4-23456!"

"Override now!"

I continue trying to dodge the hail of megadeath.

If that fails, I try another tactic:

"Warbot! Cease actions at once, you have murdered innocent clones! You have violated your laws of programming! Friend Computer will hear of this if you do not cease IMMEDIATELY!"

written by Jam on Apr 16, 2012 01:56

I try to dodge the incoming fire, then I look towards the others in the team.

"Well Speed-Y may be crazy, but he's still our Team Leader! It's our duty to follow his orders unquestioningly! So, let's go!"

I put on my biggest and best smile, then run towards the warbot, arms outstretched.

written by Kristos on Apr 16, 2012 04:37

I intently watch Cryo-R fill out his forms, observing the level of efficiency of his multi-pen approach. I determine the correlation between number of pens and form filling speed. Also I take note of the different ways the pens are held, and which techniques bring out the best in multi-pen stratagem. While performing my statistical analysis, I also read every answer Cryo-R writes down, occasionally offering a grunt to signify my positive outlook on soylent, taxibots, and all things copperlyke.

written by Speeder on Apr 16, 2012 13:57

I try to end behind the warbot, suck that to shoot me it would have to shoot itself.

written by Gligar on Apr 16, 2012 18:32

Cloning station, JHP Sector

The YELLOW continues inspecting the forms closely, including holding them up to a light and looking through them.

As such, he fails to notice that Cryo-R just grabbed all fifteen of the pens he was carrying in an attempt to speed up the filling out of his forms.

The problem, of course, is that it is extremely difficult to write with more than, say, two pens at once. As such, Kris-R, who is watching over Cryo-R's shoulder, notes that Cryo-R is not only making a mess of things, but also dropping the pens at intervals due to how many he is trying to use. This is only going to slow him down in the long run.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

King-R begins running, and is almost to a convenient autocar when...

... he isn't hit by a large number of bullets. Instead, they hit Nukabot, which has managed to make it to King-R's position.

L4-O attempts another authorisation code, one which is... slightly more successful, in that it causes the warbot to hold fire for a moment.

Then it just picks right back up again. Several more of the survivors meet their ends.

L4-O tries a third time, demanding that the bot cease operations this instant or The Computer will be notified.

The barrage suddenly ceases.

Sven-O opens his hatch again. "Whew! Managed to shut it down..."

He is interrupted, yet again, by the warbot. "Incorrect. Warbot Mk. IV model 3248 serial 44897 is still active."

Wait... it is just me, or is the warbot's audio output beginning to drag a little? Like a tape player that's beginning to run out of power...

Jam-Y takes advantage of the ceasefire to advance on the warbot again. And once again, he hugs the giant wall of metal, and once again, he ends up hugging a lot of guns.

As he does, he can hear some sort of noise inside the bot. Sort of like a malfunctioning laser barrel, only deeper...

Speed-Y tries the same tactic from the other side of the bot, but, given the number of guns, he ends up doing exactly the same thing.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango takes the knife, and picks up...

...wait, there is one knife and two ME cards. How did he think that it was the other way round?

Oh well, he picks them, both up. He notes that one is made out for a Ream-Y-PRS-2, and the other is AI-R-GEE-6.

After that, he heads off.

But to where? One of the buildings? The roadway? Or somewhere else?

An equally-puzzling location

"I've started the level one brainscrub, sir. The first agents are entering the bloodstream as I speak."

"Good. We'll let him marinate for a while. For now, let's focus on Skin-Y..."

written by Speeder on Apr 16, 2012 18:56

As I notice the slower down sound...

"I have a hunch that he is loading a capacitor... Maybe too much... I suggest now that we instead of hugging him, just ran away the fastest that we can from him, before it explode. Or shoot us."

I turn to the Junior Citizens.

"And enjoy your stay!"

And I run like the wind... I mean, the wind flies... So I just run back toward the buildings.

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 16, 2012 20:44

All that gunfire snaps me out of my stupor, and I notice Speed-Y hauling it.

Whatever's going on, I want no part of it. I power-hop after Speed-Y

written by Jam on Apr 16, 2012 20:45

"I agree..." I say to Speed-Y.

After looking at the warbot for a few more secondcycles, I start running away as fast as I can.

"AHHHH!"

I head in the same direction as Speed-Y and Azir-R.

written by Gligar on Apr 16, 2012 21:20

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y notices the warbot's speech slowing. To him, this can only mean one thing: the warbot is diverting power to something... perhaps it is storing it for something.

And he does not want to find out what it is.

He bids farewell to the Junior Citizens and legs it back the way he came.

From the looks of things, Jam-Y and Azir-R have decided on the same thing, and follow him.. They're joined by Lucas-R. That warbot might be cool, and he might well want to see what's happening, just... not up close.

The low-pitched-laser-barrel noise gets louder. The Armed Forces seem to get worried.

Decisions are made. One soldier cuts through a section of the perimeter fence and beckons to the Junior Citizens. They don't argue.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The group runs back towards Building 2...

Behind them, that noise continues to build.

Jam-Y then realises what he saw: something on the bot was glowing.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 16, 2012 21:20

"Corporal... you might want to run away!"

"Everyone else run! Try to keep together!"

I run in the direction of someone close by, preferably Speed-Y if he's going my direction, else, someone else.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 16, 2012 21:35

Finally making it to my cover point, I shiver at my near brush with death.

"Nukabot, are you OK?"

I try to take a look at any damage Nukabot has sustained.

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 16, 2012 21:55

I try to time an awesome cinematic jump away from the (in my mind) incoming explosion.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 16, 2012 22:52

I cut down on the number of pens in use. Apparently fifteen is too many. I try filling out the forms with just two, instead, which seems more efficient, at least until I can find more arms somewhere. I set the rest of the pens aside for the moment.

written by Speeder on Apr 16, 2012 23:29

If Nukabot is near I hop on him hoping he is faster than me.

Otherwise I just keep running.

written by Kristos on Apr 17, 2012 04:05

I shift 13 of the pens back to their original location, then see how the YELLOW is getting along with my forms.

written by Gligar on Apr 17, 2012 18:19

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O suggests to Sven-O that running away may be in order. "Can't! Captain's orders!"

But L4-O doesn't wait around to argue. He's already off, running after the group..

King-R gets behind the autocar and shivers. That was a close one! He looks out at Nukabot, asking if it is okay. "It appears that my manual controls are inoperable," it replies. "In addition, my left-side kevlar plates are in need of replacement." Indeed, it is clear to see that the operator's position is... rather damaged. It's a good thing that none of those slugs hit the bot brain.

The warbot's glowy bit suddenly fires! A huge plasma beam is emitted from the glowy bit, travelling down the road and, presumably, burning through the other checkpoint! The noise it's making is phenomenal!

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks back, and notes that Nukabot is some distance away.

He also sees, and hears, the plasma beam.

Cloning station, JHP Sector

Cryo-R decides that using fifteen pens to fill out forms is not efficient, and cuts down to two, and puts down most of the pens.

That means that thirteen pens should have been placed on top of that box there, right?

Wrong.

Apparently, $15-2=6$. Kris-R notices this at once. So where are the other seven?

For now, Kris-R returns the six to the YELLOW, and checks on said YELLOW's progress.

He seems to be near the end of scrutinising Kris-R's forms.

Say, did anyone hear that noise just now?

written by Lightning4 on Apr 17, 2012 19:29

"Holy nanochips, what firepower..."

"I want one of those."

I do a quick check to make sure the beam is no threat to me in my current position. If it is a threat, I adjust my position. Rapidly.

I watch the warbot and the beam to see exactly what kind of damage it's doing to the, well, everything around here.

written by Jam on Apr 17, 2012 21:02

After making sure I'm somewhere safe, I stare at the plasma beam in awe.

"Woah! That was amazing!" I shout.

I try to see what the beam hit, and what damage it caused.

written by Gligar on Apr 17, 2012 21:26

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O looks on in awe at the warbot's giant plasma beam, and expresses his wish to own one.

He checks to see if the beam is likely to cause damage to him in the immediate future. There's really no way to tell, but the fact that he is still alive probably means that he'll be okay. Megadamage is a tricky thing to calculate when you're talking about individual clones.

Content that he is still alive, L4-O then checks to see what damage the warbot is doing to the surroundings. Surprisingly, the damage seems limited to the alignment of the roadway. And it looks like it's stirring up the smog, too: it is possible to see that the beam has cut right through the checkpoint at the far end of the Industrial Subsectors, and seems to reach almost to Kappa Subsector in the near distance. If anything was using that roadway, they're toast now.

Jam-Y also looks on in awe. That is one powerful beam. Noisy, too. He also notices what the beam's doing.

written by Kristos on Apr 17, 2012 21:33

"What is that noise? Maybe there is still tank goo dancing in my ears..."

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 17, 2012 21:59

I look to the beam, equally impressed and concerned.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 17, 2012 22:22

I continue watching.

"That would vaporize a lot of zombies. And probably the Industrial Subsector's Buildings too... shame we need to keep those intact."

I do glance at them, and momentarily ponder the collateral damage of such a thing, then dismiss it.

If possible from my position, I move to keep with other members of the team. I also start checking for any remaining survivors, and if I can see any, see how many Junior Citizens may be left.

written by Malkom on Apr 17, 2012 22:33

I keep trying to concentrate on time travel. To hell with B3! Everyone's saying it was better in the old days anyway: time travel would get me better B3, if I wanted to drink that kind of crud. Now then, about tech: I must say, I imagine that, in the FUTURE, there'd be awesome technology. Like, you know, super-mega-plasma-beams that destroy entire buildings at the press of a button. Or huge robots that do the same. Or a mixture! You know, huge robots that destroy buildings at the touch of a button, destroying more buildings with super-mega-plasma-beams at the touch of another button. That'd be awesome! I bet I could actually get out of Alpha Complex with one of those, and wouldn't THAT be something?! What? What? What do you say to THAT?!?!?! I bet people outside'd have even MORE awesome technology! And so on and so forth. I try to make a B3 jingle - the most potent one - into a "Technology!" jingle, and repeat that in my head.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 17, 2012 23:48

I look around for a moment, then head off down the roadway.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 18, 2012 00:42

"Yes, that does sound like a noise. Almost like the sound a massive beam weapon might make, where it to cut through a checkpoint and vaporize two... maybe three ring-for-service bells along its path, among other things. You know, that kind of sound. One might even say that such a sound was phenomenal, were they within its phenomenality radius."

I continue filling in my forms.

written by Speeder on Apr 18, 2012 00:43

"I was right about capacitor!! But.. HOLY COW!!! And I do not even know what is a cow!!!"

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 18, 2012 01:05

I smile at the vidshow-worthy sound effects.

I also take a look to make sure everyone's OK.

"Is the equipment alright, Nukabot?"

written by Jam on Apr 18, 2012 02:39

I give Speed-Y an odd look...

"What? Holy? Say, Speed-Y, you don't happen to be a member of... er... FCCC-P, was it? You know, that secret society of Computer worshippers? Not that there's anything wrong with worshipping the Computer, but they're still in a treasonous secret society..."

Also, where did you hear about this "cow"? It sounds like something treasonous, or at least really high clearance!"

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 18, 2012 03:16

If I hear Jam-Y's talking from my position, I peek out and say,

"What this about - cow? I'm hearing an incredible amount of potentially-treasonous speech from all of you! I'm getting worried."

I look worried for the safety of my brain.

If Nukabot's supplies are still intact, I take out a cleaning brush and start to clean my teeth. I should probably do something hygiene-related, since I'm no loyalty officer.

written by Gligar on Apr 18, 2012 11:47

Cloning station, JHP Sector

Kris-R seems to have heard that noise, though he puts it down to residual tank goo.

Cryo-R looks up from his forms, and shows that he does, at least, have an idea about what the noise might be. Almost as if he knew what was going on in some other sector! Almost as if... he might be a mutant!

The YELLOW looks over. "Citizen... what did you just say? How could you know what that noise was to that great an extent?" A laser pistol appears from somewhere in the YELLOW's jumpsuit, and almost seems to leap into his hand.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R also looks at the beam, in equal parts awe and concern.

L4-O comments that it would vaporise a lot of zombies... along with the Industrial Subsectors if it ever got a chance. And they kind of need to keep those intact.

He does entertain the notion of the beam causing collateral damage for a second, and glances at the buildings, but dismisses it after a moment. The beam would probably have to come closer to the buildings to cause any sort of damage.

His thoughts turn to survivors. Did the Junior Citizens make it out? He can't see from here, because the beam is in the way. (And isn't it lasting an awfully long time?) And what about the other survivors? It looks like some of them have followed the team, including a couple of the Power Services team. And speaking of the team... where is Joris-R?

Speed-Y comments that he was right about the capacitor. He expresses his shock at the beam... but he does so using the words "holy cow"... how did he learn about those words?

Jam-Y notices, and demands to know that exact thing. Perhaps Speed-Y is a member of... er, FCCC-P, isn't it? The one which worships Friend Computer? (It is.) Now, that sort of worship is all well and good, but they're still a secret society...

And what's a cow? It sounds treasonous!

After a moment, the team reaches the garage once more.

Nearby, Mango looks around for a moment, and whoa! How in HEL Sector did he miss that giant plasma beam on the roadway? I know Mango is trying to block out all that is Alphan, but blocking out that...

In a slightly different elsewhere? King-R is also impressed at the beam, especially at the sound it makes. It's almost like the ones they use in vidshows.

He looks around, and notes that the rest of the team, as well as a few of the survivors, seem to have returned to the garage. He can't hear them from here, though. Wait... where is Joris-R? Was he with the team?

He also asks Nukabot about the equipment the bot is carrying. "I do not believe that any of the equipment has been damaged."

Good. He ambles over and grabs a cleaning brush, and proceeds to use it to clean his teeth. Hmmm... could use some of that SqueekyKleen toothpaste.

?

Mick-R continues to try to resist, even attempting to repurpose one of the B3 jingles in his pursuit of time travel and technology.

But all it does is makes him thirsty.

An equally-puzzling location

An alarm attracts the attention of the two technicians.

"Sir, it's Mick-R. He continues to resist. Looks like he isn't aware of what technology even exists right now."

"Hmmm. It looks like he's trying to use one of those B3 jingles against us."

"It's probably making him thirsty, sir. Or maybe it's the high temperature in there."

"Could be either. Regardless, why don't you send for some drinks? I'm sure he'd appreciate them."

"Good idea. I'll get some for us as well."

"You do that. But whatever you do, don't get the orders mixed up."

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 18, 2012 15:59

Didn't I clean my teeth with cleaning fluid last time?

I decide to read the label on the bottle I used to clean my teeth last time, hoping that it wasn't poisonous or harmful.

written by Speeder on Apr 18, 2012 16:30

I explain myself.

°I have no idea of what a cow is... I think I heard that once...

But Holy is how the FCCC-P calls Friend Computer, yes...

No, I am not FCCC-P... If I was, I would never use some of the terms I use to refer to the central administration computer, because it would be certainly heresy to the FCCCP.

Oh, heresy is a word of theirs too, I think it means that your opinion disagree with them and is inverse of Holy at the same time. Maybe, Unholy then...

Personally I do not consider FCCCP a threat, only nutjobs..."

written by Gligar on Apr 18, 2012 17:12

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R suddenly suspects something, and looks at the bottle of cleaning fluid again. It says that it can safely be used to clean one's teeth, but actual toothpaste is preferred for that purpose.

In the near distance, the plasma beam begins to fade.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y explains that he heard the word "cow" somewhere. He doesn't know what it means. He then confirms that "holy" is an FCCC-P word, used to refer to The Computer, before claiming that he is not FCCC-P. If he were, he says, he wouldn't use some of the terms he does use, since FCCC-P would think it blasphemous... oh, and that's an FCCC-P word, too.

[1028]

He certainly knows an awful lot about FCCC-P... and considering that he doesn't see them as a threat, only nutjobs...

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 18, 2012 18:43

I enjoy my lesson about secret societies, being as I obviously don't belong to one and thus have never heard about this kind of stuff.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 18, 2012 19:41

I make sure I'm with the group.

I raise an eyebrow at Speed-Y after his comments and say:

"I've seen the occasional propaganda leaflet from them. If I was forced to be in a secret society, it'd probably be them. What better secret society than one that worships Friend Computer?"

"But if I had to pick from them and none, I'd still say none."

written by Kristos on Apr 18, 2012 20:39

Did that gun just?!...

Suspecting the YELLOW to be a mutant, I look for the usual symbol to see if he is registered. If he is not registered, I jump back in surprise. If he is registered, I jump back in surprise.

"My loyalty officer... is incredibly observational. Perhaps the sound was not a massive beam weapon. And even if it was, he probably once worked at a ring-for-service bell factory near a massive beam weapon testing facility. An occasional misfire would explain his knowledge of ring-for-service bell vaporization. Please don't shoot us - I've already had a shower today."

written by Cryoburner on Apr 18, 2012 21:20

"Oh, don't worry! I just happen to be an expert at hearing things. And at bells. Not so much at massive beam weapons, but I imagine they would probably sound vaguely similar to that, were I to know what they sounded like."

"Besides, didn't you say the decanting solution around here is specially formulated to impede mutations and give you fresh breath that lasts and lasts? We can only assume it works as advertised, because assuming otherwise would probably be treason."

I continue filling out my forms if they are not completed yet. I double-plus-check to make sure I didn't inadvertently check any boxes during the initial multi-pen tests stating that I have a mutation, or other potentially treasonous entries, and correct them if necessary.

written by Gligar on Apr 18, 2012 21:53

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While Azir-R listens with interest to this discussion of secret societies, L4-O notes that he has heard of FCCC-P from the leaflets you sometimes see. If he had to join a secret society, it would be them. Of course, he would still prefer to not join a society at all.

Cloning station, JHP Sector

Kris-R jumps back in surprise at the YELLOW's laser pistol seemingly just appearing like that. He checks the YELLOW's jumpsuit, but can't find an armband.

He adds that Cryo-R is incredibly observational. As far as his guess, he could easily have worked in a bell factory at some point, and the factory may well have been situated near a testing facility. That's even assuming that it was a giant beam weapon. He requests that the YELLOW not shoot them as he's already had a shower today (as we've recently seen).

Cryo-R plays his "I'm an expert" card once again, fooling no-one, but also points out that the YELLOW mentioned the clone tank solution in use here, and his comment that it is designed to impede mutations. He concludes that it would be prudent to assume that it works. He goes back to his forms, finishing them up and checking them over. Though legibility has suffered greatly, he seems to have avoided the obvious traps.

The YELLOW responds, "Though the gel is designed to limit mutations, there is always the possibility that it has been tampered with. We mustn't let our guard down." He keeps his laser pistol pointed at Cryo-R. "Now, let's see your forms."

The Computer suddenly makes an announcement. "Greetings, citizens! Please disregard any giant plasma beam discharge you may have heard recently. Everything is under control. Thank you for your co-operation."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 18, 2012 22:08

I give the area a little search again.

"I don't suppose anyone has seen Joris-R? He has my blaster..."

I also see if that beam has let up yet.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 18, 2012 22:25

I...

Move?

written by Jam on Apr 18, 2012 23:33

I don't move.

Instead, I quietly stare at the beam.

"Wow, this beam is really lasting a long time..." I say to myself.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 19, 2012 00:11

I hand over my forms to the Yellow, disregarding any giant plasma beam discharge that I may or may not have heard recently.

written by Kristos on Apr 19, 2012 00:44

The YELLOW seems untrustworthy, but he is a YELLOW and I am only a RED. There is probably a good reason for his seeming untrustworthiness.

[1029]

Giant plasma beams are much more difficult to trust. I'm glad everything is under control.

Now that I think about it, the untrustworthability of the giant plasma beam makes the YELLOW not seem so bad anymore. I monitor his behaviour as he scrutinizes Cryo-R's forms.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 19, 2012 01:59

I also enter the garage.

"Come along, Nukabot. Speed-Y won't be happy to learn that you were damaged, I think."

written by Malkom on Apr 19, 2012 05:49

I switch tactics, trying to create a moving picture in my head - a moving picture about time travel, even. And, in the background...

Technology! Technology! Technology! Technology! Technology! And so on ad infinitum.

written by Gligar on Apr 19, 2012 18:45

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O has another quick look around. He doesn't find anything out of the ordinary.

He wonders where Joris-R has gone off to. He still has his blaster, after all.

He also has a look outside, and notices that the beam has dissipated more. And it looks like all that plasma is putting out a lot of heat... it's getting warm in here.

Jam-Y also looks at the beam. He seems concerned at how long it is lasting.

The both notice King-R entering the garage, riding on Nukabot. The bot seems to have taken some damage from that hail of slugs... namely, its left-side kevlar plates are ripped to pieces, and its manual controls look to be inoperable. But at least it still seems to be able to drive itself.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to make a move.

He ends up heading towards where the giant beam seems to be coming from. He can see that the beam is dissipating, and can feel that it is heating up the air somewhat.

Cloning station, JHP Sector

Cryo-R hands over his forms, which the YELLOW begins to scrutinise. He seems to be an expert at scrutinising forms.

Kris-R seems concerned. This YELLOW doesn't seem all that trustworthy. But then again, giant plasma beams are even less trustworthy. And this guy must be YELLOW for a good reason. So... when you get right down to it, this YELLOW isn't all that bad. He watches as the YELLOW scrutinises Cryo-R's form in the same way he scrutinised Kris-R's.

?

Mick-R continues trying to resist the subliminals, which are telling him that he is thirsty and would like a drink.

And, you know, the fact that the room(?) is warm and dry might be helping. Because, well, he does want a drink.

As he tries to think about nonexistent and possibly treasonous technology, a jackobot appears, carrying a tray of drinks. As in, it literally just appears. "Would you like a drink, citizen?"

A drink would really hit the spot right about now.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 19, 2012 19:40

I frown upon seeing Nukabot's damage.

"Oh dear... that's not good. At least you are still functional. We'll have to get you repaired at first chance."

I glance around, still kind of paranoid.

"Kind of odd how we haven't seen any zombies for a while now. Wonder where they all are? I'm sure we didn't kill them all."

I notice the heat.

"We should find somewhere safe from the heat. And zombies, if there's any around."

written by Gligar on Apr 19, 2012 21:43

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O doesn't like the look of Nukabot's damage, but is grateful that it is still functional.

Then he realises something: they haven't encountered any zombies in a while. He is sure that they haven't killed them all already.

"Maybe they're in other buildings," suggests Lucas-R.

Finally, he suggests that they seek shelter from the sudden heat. And any zombies they find.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 19, 2012 21:49

"Well, as long as there aren't any around or in this building."

written by Speeder on Apr 16, 2012 13:59

Considering Kristos last post...

I think Cryo just infected him with Cryo behavior.

Seemly Cryo behavior is a sort of viral disease that pass on if you work too closely with him or reclone with him.

[1030]

If I can, I take a look and listen down the corridor connected to the garage. I note anything useful that we can use, especially weapons.

Of course, I also note CMTs and zombies, if any are present, living or dead.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 19, 2012 23:12

I decide to wait for the warm feeling to pass, before I continue.

I look at the odd beam as well, watching as it slowly disappears...

written by Speeder on Apr 19, 2012 23:23

I just keep watching the plasma outside. Wondering if it can for example damage the city ceiling... In fact I get curious and start to try to figure where the smoke of the sector is going...

written by 4616599 on Apr 19, 2012 23:52

I finally snap out of my daze. Noticing the plasma beam, I bank the Transition forward to cower in the nearest adjacent roadway.

written by Jam on Apr 20, 2012 00:23

I also watch the plasma beam, with a slightly bored expression on my face.

"How long is this beam gonna last?"

Then I notice the room heating up...

"Oh, it's getting kinda hot in here. Good idea Lucas-R, maybe we should get going?"

I look at Speed-Y for his decision.

written by Malkom on Apr 20, 2012 00:33

"If you've got something better than t' crummy B3 they serve around these parts, then sure." I also soliloquize on time travel at the robot, hoping it'll... do something. Maybe tell me where I can get a time machine??!?!?

written by Kristos on Apr 20, 2012 03:17

"Are there any drinks around here? I accidentally partially ingested some shower chemical so my throat feels parched."

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 20, 2012 13:13

I agree, we need to seek safety. Seems everyone is mesmerized by the beam though.

written by Gligar on Apr 20, 2012 14:42

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Hoping that there are no more zombies in Building 2, L4-O looks out into the corridor. Seeing no "living" zombies (but a number of dead ones), he checks for anything resembling weapons. Aha! He can see a couple of laser pistols out there.

Speed-Y keeps looking at the plasma beam. As it continues to dissipate, he wonders what damage such a beam would do to the dome itself... it's a pity he's not a higher clearance, or he could probably submit forms to submit forms to submit the proper form to get that information.

His thoughts turn the the Industrial Subsectors' smoke. Where does it go? Come to think of it, he hasn't even see it rise... it just sort of hung there when he first came down the roadway. Perhaps there is some mechanism in place to deal with it?

Jam-Y also watches. He's kind of getting bored with waiting for the beam to dissipate. But as for the heat... yes, they should probably get going. Does Speed-Y have anything to say?

Azir-R agrees about heading to safety.

The beam dissipates further, and almost disappears entirely. The sound also drops in intensity, almost to the point of inaudibility.

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to wait for the warm feeling to pass. Annoyingly, it persists.

Until then, though, he can watch the beam dissipate.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

It looks like Joris-R managed to avoid the plasma beam, and is looking for somewhere to hide. Finding another roadway to hide on is difficult, seeing as there is only the one roadway. However, he can duck between two buildings, if he wishes.

?

Mick-R agrees that he would like a drink. But not B3.

"I have more than just B3, citizen. I also have TeaSir, CoffeelYke, AlgaePLUS, and water."

Mick-R doesn't choose a drink just yet, as he is fixated on time travel. After gushing at the jackobot for a couple of minutecycles, he pauses long enough for the bot to reply, "Er... citizen, are you aware that all research on time travel is classified Clearance INDIGO? Not to mention that the research was suspended due to the possibility of destroying the whole of time itself."

Cloning station, JHP Sector

Kris-R, it seems, also wants a drink. He did accidentally ingest some of the chemicals, after all. The YELLOW replies, "There is a vendobot in the lobby."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 20, 2012 19:11

I go to grab those laser pistols, and check to see how many shots they might have left.

While out there, I also see if I can see anything that I couldn't see from my position in the Garage.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 20, 2012 22:03

"Oh, wow, a vendobot! That sounds super-convenient!"

[1031]

I wander off toward the vendobot, to examine its levels of super-convenience.

written by Gligar on Apr 20, 2012 22:21

Corridor 1, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O takes the laser pistols, noting that they both have ORANGE barrels, each with five shots remaining. Then he looks for anything else. He finds something, alright: a... cyborg zombie? In the foyer...

Cloning station, JHP Sector

Cryo-R seems enthusiastic about a vendobot, and goes over to look at it.

Lobby, Cloning station, JHP Sector

Cryo-R finds the vendobot, and discovers that it stocks CoffeeLyke, TeaSir, and AlgaePLUS along with four flavours of B3.

A sign affixed to the machine reminds clones to not make unnecessary purchases, as the vendobot's next restock dates is in two weekcycles.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 20, 2012 23:29

I take a look over Nukabot's manual controls, and try to ascertain whether or not my prior electrical experience could be applied to repair them, and what sorts of tools or equipment might be required to do so.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 21, 2012 00:10

"Well, that's odd."

I give the area one more glance before I return back to the garage.

"Huh. There's a cyborg zombie back there. Interesting..."

written by Speeder on Apr 21, 2012 00:18

"Alright, the outside does not seem so much safe now... Ok, we should actually go investigate the trap trigger again in the power room... I mean, with all the chaos we never investigated it... It was our mission, AND we might find something that would help we fix the situation or know what is really going on..."

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 21, 2012 00:21

My eyes widen and I look up from my inspections.

"What? A CYBORG ZOMBIE?! Was it awake? How did you even know it was a zombie?"

"How is that even possible? A Cyborg zombie..."

written by Kristos on Apr 17, 2012 04:07

Or maybe Kris-R has a habit of imitating behaviors... in an effort to better understand them. Maybe. 😊

I pull out my pistols, but don't run out into the corridor just yet.

written by Malkom on Apr 21, 2012 01:33

"Destroying the whole of time itself? Hell, I've heard much worse! And I'm sure we'd all be better off without stupid old Time around anyway. We never have enough of him.

"Now, get me some water. Hopefully something that isn't contaminated, or is contaminated with time-travel-inducing chemicals."

I start singing my Technology! jingle again...

written by Jam on Apr 21, 2012 02:00

I look at L4-O, alarmed.

"A cyborg zombie?! Where?"

I look around for it, and pull out my laser pistol—no, my emergency light—er... both!

written by Lightning4 on Apr 21, 2012 02:31

I do a mental check to see if the zombie was alive, or dead, since I didn't actually check for that.

written by Kristos on Apr 21, 2012 05:35

"Thank you." I go see what the vendobot provides.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 21, 2012 09:56

I keep waiting for a bit.

...

I take a step back from the warmth.

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 21, 2012 16:38

Cyborg Zombies, that's no good.

written by Gligar on Apr 21, 2012 18:35

Garage, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R has a look at Nukabot's manual controls. Perhaps there's something he could do to help repair them? You know, he probably could get a couple of things working, say, the fork controls, or the lights, as long as he had replacement switches and/or levers. And screwdrivers and such. Beyond that... well, he doesn't really know all that much about bots.

L4-O returns to the garage and reports that there's a cyborg zombie out there. Interesting.

Speed-Y has become convinced that outside of the building is unsafe. Instead, eh suggests that they get back to their original mission, and inspect the power distribution board once more. Since the fault seems to be related to the zombies, perhaps there is something there that will help them.

King-R looks up, and wonders how cyborg zombies are even possible... was it even a zombie, he wonders? Zombie or not, it is troubling, and warrants extra protection, such as his laser pistols.

Jam-Y looks at L4-O, and frantically begins searching for the zombie, with both pistol and "emergency light" in hand. Since it isn't in the garage, he relaxes a little.

L4-O wonders. Was the zombie "alive" or dead? Well, it was definitely moving...

Azir-R looks troubled.

?

Mick-R requests water. Uncontaminated water, at that. Or at least time-travel-contaminated water.

The jackobot hands him a glass. "Here you are, citizen. 99.999999% pure. That is as pure as technology allows."

Cloning station foyer, JHP Sector

Kris-R joins Cryo-R in the foyer. The Yellow tags along as he hasn't finished inspecting the forms yet.

Kris-R looks at the vendobot. So many choices... either CoffeeLyke (pale or dark, with or without sweetener) TeaSir with similar choices, AlgaePLUS, or four flavours of B3...

Near Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Mango steps further away from the pl... what's left of the plasma beam. It's starting to turn chunky.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 21, 2012 19:42

"Well, if I may interject, Sir, Friend Computer commanded that I get the Junior Citizens to safety. So far that has been less than successful. I'd rather we not lose more than we already have..."

I do a survivor and Junior Citizen check. Are there even any left by now?

written by Speeder on Apr 21, 2012 20:32

I look at L4.

"Well... you are army... I think you are good for that... I am Tech Services... I will see that trap..."

I look to the rest of the team.

"Please, someone go with me, and everyone else with L4."

I start to walk toward the corridor toward the power room.

written by Gligar on Apr 21, 2012 21:28

Garage, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O reminds Speed-Y that The Computer ordered him to get the Junior Citizens to safety. And he doesn't believe that ht has done a good job of it. He looks around for any Junior Citizens and other survivors, and finds no Junior Citizens and only a few adult survivors.

Speed-Y says that L4-O would be good at that, given that he's Armed Forces. Speed-Y is Tech Services, so he can go and look at the trap in the power room.

He turns to the rest of the team and requests one member of the team to accompany him. Everyone else should go with L4-O.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 22, 2012 00:43

"I suspect that the Junior citizens may have already gotten themselves to safety. Think about it - if we had stopped them from fleeing from the warbot, most of them would probably be dead."

"Not that we shouldn't make sure they're safe. I just think they might already be safe."

I decide to follow L4-O, if and when he departs.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 22, 2012 10:25

"The cyborg zombie was certainly alive. You should be careful in there..."

I turn back towards the exit.

"But yes, priority should be tracking down the Junior Citizens, and trying to get any remaining ones to safety if they aren't there already. The remaining survivors can probably join them as well. Friend Computer wasn't as clear there..."

I do start making my way out of the garage, unless the heat is too strong. I keep on high alert for anything around... and also see if I can see the status of the warbot from here.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 22, 2012 10:45

I keep looking as the plasma beam changes in appearance.

"Huh...? Chunky looking... Odd."

I move further back, and finally decide to turn around to make sure I'm not going to end up being caught off guard.

written by Speeder on Apr 22, 2012 15:00

I take out he slugthrower, make sure it has maximum capacity of bullets, and start to walk toward where I want to go... I mean... you know... there... the panel thing...

written by Gligar on Apr 22, 2012 16:24

Garage, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R thinks that the Junior Citizens might have already got to safety. As he points out, had the team stopped them from fleeing, they would most likely be dead by now. Though it can't hurt to check, just to be sure.

He decides to follow L4-O.

L4-O tells Speed-Y to be careful. That cyborg zombie certainly looked "alive" to him.

He agrees that their priority should still be finding the Junior Citizens. The remaining survivors could probably join them... Our Mutual Friend apparently wasn't too clear.

He starts heading out of the garage. Most of the team, and the remaining survivors, follow him.

Who does this leave? Speed-Y checks, and finds that Lucas-R has remained. The two head towards the power room.

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The heat is making things uncomfortable, but not unbearable. The team presses on.

L4-O keeps on the lookout, and notices what seems to be a Transition hovering between Buildings 2 and 3. In another direction, the warbot doesn't seem to have moved. On the plus side, the plasma beam has all but dissipated.

Near Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Regardless, Mango keeps backing away from where it was. Perhaps the heat is getting to him.

He suddenly realises that there might be something behind him, and turns.

He can see that he is getting close to the outer perimeter of the Subsectors. On the other side, some of the Armed Forces can be seen. They seem to be glaring at him.

written by Speeder on Apr 22, 2012 17:46

I turn to Lucas...

"Any idea where the room we need to investigate might be?"

I walk toward the cafeteria corridor anyway.

written by Kristos on Apr 22, 2012 18:18

"Oooo! TeaSir!"

I purchase the second flavor of B3 and look for food in the room.

written by Jam on Apr 22, 2012 18:56

I follow L4-O, since he seems to know where he's going.

"So, we're going to go look for survivors, right? Especially Junior Citizens?"

I begin thinking about ways to find the remaining clones...

"Hmm... I wonder what the mental fingerprint of a Junior Citizen is like..."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 22, 2012 21:17

"Yes, keep a lookout. The more eyes we have looking for hiding survivors, the better."

I note the transition.

"Ah, there's Joris-R. I think..."

I also note the warbot.

"I'm going to have to check the warbot soon. Maybe it's best I do that alone so we avoid any further casualties... hopefully that warbot has been deactivated by now.

written by Gligar on Apr 22, 2012 21:44

Corridor 1, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y, it seems, isn't sure where the power room is. He asks Lucas-R as the two head for Corridor 3...

Lucas-R frowns. "Wow, it seems like it was ages ago... er, isn't it right across the foyer, or somewhere near there?"

Speaking of the foyer, they're practically there now. And sure enough, there's the cyborg zombie that L4-O mentioned...

It's looking at them.

Cloning station foyer, JHP Sector

Also speaking of foyers...

Kris-R makes a purchase, specifically, the second flavour of B3. He looks around for food but there seems to be a lack of it.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y asks how they're going to find survivors, Junior Citizens in particular, while wondering what a Junior Citizen's mental fingerprint would be like.

L4-O says that the more clones they have looking, the better. He notes that the Transition over there suggests the presence of Joris-R.

And then there's the warbot... he should probably check that out himself. The less clones in danger, the better.

Speaking of the warbot, the plasma beam has finally dissipated. It's still uncomfortably warm, though.

written by Speeder on Apr 22, 2012 22:08

I just start to popping bullets into the cyborg, specifically on whatever non-metal joints on lower body it have, or in the neck if it is non-metal.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 23, 2012 00:43

"Mental fingerprint? What's that, anyway? I've never heard that term before, and from my experience with words I don't know, they tend to have a high probability of being treasonous."

I keep a sharp eye out for juniors.

written by Jam on Apr 23, 2012 01:15

"Mental fingerprint? Oh, it's a mutant term... Everyclone has a unique mind, so many psionic mutants like John-R and I can learn to identify a clone based on their mental fingerprint. There's a few other benefits too, like... uh..."

I stop and think for a few secondcycles.

"Um, well, John-R, you know about this stuff, right? Anything I'm forgetting?"

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 23, 2012 04:27

"Hm. Interesting."

"Wouldn't different junior citizens have different mental fingerprints, then? Could you really tell the age of a clone through his or her mental fingerprint?"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 23, 2012 04:44

"Let's give the perimeter of the building a search."

I lead the way in one direction around the building, keeping an eye out for Junior Citizens, zombies, or perhaps other clones that may or may not be out around here.

written by Gligar on Apr 23, 2012 18:50

Foyer, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y starts shooting!

However, he somehow manages to jam his "revolver".

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R isn't familiar with the term "mental fingerprint" and believes it to be treasonous until Jam-Y explains: since everyclone's mind is different, it's possible for some psionic mutants (such as Jam-Y and John-R) to identify a clone based on his mental fingerprint. Though he's still unsure about the benefits of mental fingerprints. "Don't forget that some mutants can pick out mental fingerprints from a distance," John-R reminds him. "Which can be handy if a clone is trying to hide in a crowd." King-R finds this interesting, and asks if Junior Citizens would have different fingerprints. He also asks if it's possible to discern the age of a clone based on mental fingerprint alone...

L4-O suggests that they search around Building 2 for survivors, and heads in one direction. He certainly finds a lot of zombies clustered around a fire escape... dead ones, at least. Memories surface...

Somewhere in the middle distance stands some sort of figure, maybe a clone.

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 23, 2012 20:30

I assist L4-O with the search, since he heads in one direction, I head in the other.

written by Gligar on Apr 23, 2012 22:05

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R decides to help out by moving, hoppy fashion, around the building, in the opposite direction to the path taken by L4-O and the rest of the team. He finds more dead zombies, as well as some discarded makeshift weapons (read: tools from the garage, as well as some improvised devices).

written by Lightning4 on Apr 23, 2012 22:32

"I remember that now... hoo boy, that was a lot of zombies to shoot."

I look at the figure, and start approaching it. I try to see if I can make it out the closer I get.

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 24, 2012 01:30

I examine these devices, looking for anything that catches my eye.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 24, 2012 01:59

"Hmm... this place really could use a cafeteria. It's almost time for lunch..."

I note the lack of a cafeteria.

written by Malkom on Apr 24, 2012 03:26

Awesome. I take a careful sip of the water, then toss it off and return to chanting my "Technology!" mantra.

"Say, bot. Do you know anything about something called the Underplex?"

written by Kristos on Apr 24, 2012 04:13

I open the B3 and take a sip. While looking for food, walking towards the YELLOW, I trip over my own feet, sending B3 flying up and ahead, though I do not let go of the can.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 24, 2012 14:31

I eye the dead zombies momentarily and turn away, following L4-O and trying to identify the clone.

written by Gligar on Apr 24, 2012 18:59

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O lets the memories return, and comments on the quantity of zombies...

But back to the present. He begins to approach the figure, accompanied by King-R, until it becomes clear that the figure is an INFRARED clone, facing away from them, looking towards the perimeter fence.

Elsewhere, Azir-R has a look at the makeshift weapon devices. One of them looks interesting: what looks to be a laser rifle body crudely mounted to parts of a stapler, with an emergency power pack strapped on to the side.

Cloning station foyer, JHP Sector

Cryo-R has once again forgotten what time it is, as he thinks it's almost time for lunch. He notes that there is no cafeteria here. Well, of course there isn't. What does he think this is, the Old Reckoning, with coffeelyke shops inside coffeelyke shop hygiene stations inside coffeelyke shops?

"Wait," the YELLOW says, "what did you just say? Are you seriously hungry right after decanting? What are you, some kind of mutant?!" The laser pistol appears again, almost as fast as the forms disappear.

But Kris-R doesn't seem to notice. He's too busy taking a sip of delicious, delicious B3. He proceeds to head back over to the YELLOW... but ends up tripping up over his feet, and falls, spilling his B3 all over Cryo-R and the YELLOW, who now looks furious. "Spilling B3? What are you? Some kind of mutant?! I ought to terminate the both of you!!!"

?

Mick-R takes a sip of water... and throws the rest over his shoulder.

Almost immediately afterwards he continues his chant. You know, the chant is rather relaxing... it's making him very sleepy... it must be the chant, because the water was extremely pure...

Drowsily, he asks the bot about the Underplex. "I have no knowledge of the Underplex," the bot replies.

But Mick-R isn't listening. He's fallen asleep.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 24, 2012 19:37

"Hail there, INFRARED. What are you doing here?"

I check to see if I recognize him from anywhere, and await a response.

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 24, 2012 20:41

<whistles a little happy tune>

"Here I go a scavenging..."

I snatch slowly snatch up the rifle and place it in the backpack with care. (As you can imagine, leaning over an picking up something with one hand and one foot requires balance and care).

written by Speeder on Apr 24, 2012 21:47

Instead of fiddling with the gun I attempt to target the same areas with the spear.

written by Gligar on Apr 24, 2012 22:45

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O greets the INFRARED and asks what he is doing, but receives no reply. Almost as if the INFRARED is trying to ignore him... the same way he's trying to ignore the Armed Forces clones on the other side of the fence, all of whom are certainly not ignoring the INFRARED.

Meanwhile, Azir-R takers possession of the strange laser rifle/stapler thing.

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y switches back to his spear and gets in a few hits before the cyborg zombie manages to grab the thing.

written by Speeder on Apr 24, 2012 22:59

I get upset, and go for the laser pistol (quickly checking if it is charged first)

"Die you immortal thing!

Hey Lucas, can you help me with it?"

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 24, 2012 23:45

I will scan for commies/cyborgs/zombies and if things look safe, return to where L4 was heading.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 25, 2012 00:10

"Hello? Respond to me! That is an order! What are you doing?"

I start gripping one of the laser pistols.

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 25, 2012 01:55

"Can you give orders to an INFRARED?" I ask worriedly, "Maybe we should just keep moving..."

I look around for the nearest cover point, preparing to jump there if something goes wrong with the INFRARED.

written by Kristos on Apr 25, 2012 03:36

"Sorry about that! Here, you can have the rest of my B3. My throat feels much better after drinking some of it."

I offer my drink to the clone.

"Does ingesting shower chemical cause mutations? I really do not want mutations in my throat. Imagine if I had a mutation that turned B3 into water as I swallowed it. Wouldn't that be bad? Are you through looking at our forms? Hey, that's a nice laser pistol. We have a meeting with JHY sector R&D. Can I be of further assistance? I'm sorry about the spilled drink. It won't happen again."

written by Malkom on Apr 25, 2012 03:45

My eyes fly open. I look confused.

"Dang! I was just about to experience time travel, and I would have to wake up...!"

I hit something.

written by Gligar on Apr 25, 2012 17:16

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Once again, Speed-Y switches weapons: this time, to a laser pistol.

Of course, to do that, he has to change the barrel, since the current one's empty. And while he's doing that, he can't attack.

But Lucas-R can. Oh wait... he's reloading as well...

The zombie starts tugging at the spear, and manages to gain possession of it.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Azir-R looks for threats in the immediate vicinity and, seeing none, starts heading back over to L4-O.

In the meantime, L4-O once again questions the INFRARED, who again seems to ignore him. He prepares to draw a laser pistol.

Not that he thinks of it, the INFRARED does look familiar...

King-R wonders if L4-O can even give orders to an INFRARED, and suggests that they keep moving. He looks around for some cover, but it seems that the only cover consists of the building supports.

Cloning station, JHP Sector

Kris-R apologises, and offers the remains of his B3 to the YELLOW., who lowers his laser pistol slightly. "You know, I am a bit thirsty... but I'm still suspicious about you two. I'll have to double-check your forms."

Kris-R asks if the shower chemicals cause mutations. A throat mutation would be really bad, especially if he had one that turned B3 into water or something... He continues on for a minutecycle or so, basically trying to forestall what he believes is inevitable.

"Enough," the YELLOW interrupts. "I'll be back when I've processed these forms. Don't go anywhere."

?

Mick-R... oh, dear...

It seems that my cameras are faulty. By now, he should be out cold. Yet my cameras are showing him attempting to attack the jackobot.

Treason point to Malkom!

Let me adjust this... add that... encrypt this... aaand... there we go.

Ah, I see. He did attack the jackobot... and then promptly fell asleep again.

An equally puzzling location

"That's odd."

"What's up."

"It's Mick-R, sir. His reading show that he's asleep, but he's dreaming. He shouldn't be dreaming."

"Oh. I see... a mutant."

Treason point to Malkom!

"Do you want to fill out the forms, sir, or should I?"

"I'll do it. In the meantime, proceed like I showed you. You just have to add more suppressors."

"Right... Beginning aerosol injection... now."

?

Believing that he was about to time travel, Mick-R attacks the jackobot, destroying the drinks tray, and sending the drinks flying.

"That was uncalled for, citizen," the bot replies. "I will require assistance, it seems. "Do not move. I will fetch Internal Security."

written by Cryoburner on Apr 25, 2012 18:55

"Oh, wow! Free B3!"

I begin slurping some of the B3 off myself.

"Don't worry about mutations. I was just noting that this would be the perfect place for a cafeteria. If we did get hungry, it would be a very convenient location, being right next to us and all.

written by Kristos on Apr 25, 2012 19:07

After the YELLOW leaves, I turn to Cryo-R.

"I always thought being a YELLOW clone would be such fun, but this one does not seem to be very happy. Perhaps seeing REDs like us reminds him of his life as a RED- and how much less fun it was. Yes, that must be it."

I don't go anywhere.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 25, 2012 19:43

I sigh then approach the fence at a reasonable distance from the INFRARED.

"Soldiers, what's the situation? And... what's up with this joker anyway?"

I glance at the INFRARED, trying to get a better look from my new position.

After I get the run-down, I ask further:

"Have you seen any survivors running around? Like Junior Citizens?"

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 25, 2012 20:42

I decide to avoid the armed forces for the time being, and look further down the road, checking to see whether it's clear of the plasma beam fully, before beginning to walk down it.

written by Malkom on Apr 25, 2012 22:05

I blink and yawn. "Ho-hum. Someone send them back in time."

written by Jam on Apr 25, 2012 22:14

I look up suddenly.

"What's that? I sense a disturbance in the force!"

I look around, confused.

"Oh, hey Lucas-R, what's up?"⁷⁵⁰

written by Gligar on Apr 25, 2012 23:08

Cloning station, JHP Sector

Cryo-R notices the B3 that splattered onto him, and tries to drink it. It's not very satisfactory when drunk in that fashion. But it's not intended to be drunk in that fashion anyway, as it's not very efficient.

He adds that they shouldn't worry about mutations, and instead worry about the fact that this is a good place for a cafeteria. As if Friend Computer didn't already choose optimal places to put them anyway.

The YELLOW leaves, muttering something about CPU Mandate 499185 (which concerns optimal cafeteria placement), and how cloning stations are not listed in the mandate.

⁷⁵⁰ Jam: (ooc edit: Er, nevermind, I've been away from Paranoia for too long, thinking I'm with Speed-Y and Lucas-R...)

Kris-R observes that he thought that being YELLOW must be fun, but this YELLOW is anything but. He guesses that seeing the two REDs must remind him of events he experienced when he was also RED.

Near the perimeter fence, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O inquires of the Armed Forces as to the current situation. One responds, "Oh, hi, Sergeant! I heard from the checkpoint that you were here. I can't say much...there have been a few zombies, some survivors, and then that clone over there." He indicates the clone. L4-O looks... it's Mango.

Mango continues to ignore them and heads back towards the roadway.

"The warbot we brought with us seems to have been sabotaged," the soldier continues. "They certainly don't break down all on their own it says here. From what I heard, its heavy plasma generator activated all on its own! Can you believe that?"

L4-O asks about survivors. "Yeah, we've seen a few. Code 3-Zed says we have to turn them away, though. No Junior Citizens over here, but I hear that a group were recovered near the checkpoint."

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Mango reaches the roadway. The plasma bean has dissipated, leaving the area remarkably hot. The warbot sits motionless, with its plasma generator glowing a dull red.

He begins walking. The roadway seems sticky from the heat. In the distance, he can make out that the other checkpoint seems to have... well, evaporated.

?

Mick-R seems unimpressed. He's more interested in time travel.

The bot speaks up again. "You are in luck. It seems that Internal Security are busy right now. However, if they were to be sent backwards in time when they are not busy, they will no doubt be dropping in any timecycle now.

"But such speculation is treason, and treason is why you are here. It would be wise to not accumulate any more."

Bzzt

Something on the bot seems to spark.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y seems to be confused. For a moment, he thought Lucas-R was with him, instead of with speed-Y. Or maybe he thought he was with Speed-Y as well.

Perhaps it's a side-effect of not taking his medication?

written by Jam on Apr 25, 2012 23:20

I suddenly remember I have medication!

I take out my medication pack and try to figure out which pills I'm supposed to take...

"What's all this stuff do?" I ask to noclone in particular.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 26, 2012 00:10

"Oh. Him. I remember him... I guess he's harmless."

I look at Mango one more time then simply shrug.

"Yeah, that plasma generator nearly took out all of us. That warbot was definitely sabotaged... killed a good few survivors, nearly got me and my entire team too. But it sounds like the Junior Citizens are mostly to safety... so that's good."

"Anyway, we should continue our perimeter sweep to make sure there aren't any left around here. You guys keep up the good work."

I start moving away, making sure the rest of the team is with me before committing to movement fully.

written by Speeder on Apr 26, 2012 00:12

I resume shooting as soon as I can!

written by Cryoburner on Apr 26, 2012 01:59

"Less fun?"

I stare quizzically at Kris-R for a moment before returning to licking myself.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 26, 2012 09:54

I sigh.

"No going that way..." I say to myself.

I go back to where I was previously.

written by 4616599 on Apr 26, 2012 12:55

Noticing Mango starting to move towards the roadway, I follow slowly, keeping the Transition a safe distance above the road.

written by Gligar on Apr 26, 2012 18:42

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

It seems that Jam-Y hasn't been taking his medication because he forgot that he had it!

He fishes out his medication pack... and stares in puzzlement at the plethora of pills. He hasn't got a clue what any of this stuff does! He blurts out a question to that effect.

John-R looks over, and says, "Those packs are tailored to the individual mutant, sir, so I don't know what you have there. But I do know that you thinking that Lucas-R is here suggests that your power has activated on its own. If you have any of the red-and-gold speckled pills, take one. Or probably two... you're more powerful than I am."

L4-O remembers Mango, and, shrugging, dismisses him as harmless.

He tells the soldier that that plasma beam almost killed them. He agrees that the warbot was sabotaged, given that it took out several of the survivors. On the plus side, it looks like the Junior Citizens are safe.

He then decides that they should continue their sweep, and let the soldiers continue their own mission. "See you around, Sergeant," the soldier replies.

L4-O starts to move off, but decides to wait for everyone else.

Mango decides not to bother with the roadway and starts heading back. Behind him, Joris-R becomes visible as he guides the Transition closer.

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Now with a fresh barrel, Speed-Y starts shooting. As does Lucas-R, who has also reloaded.

Both clones fire off three shots each, for a total of four hits and two misses. The hits cause some of the cyborg parts to spark, as they realise that there's no way that this entity can still be alive.

Cloning station foyer, JHP Sector

Cryo-R looks questioningly at Kris-R for a moment before he continues licking the B3 off himself, just like a [CENSORED] cleaning itself... or like some mutants doing the same...

written by Speeder on Apr 26, 2012 22:03

I finish depleting my barrel to make sure the cyborg parts will fail... Just to make sure it won't move.

written by Gligar on Apr 26, 2012 22:32

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y and Lucas-R keep shooting, emptying their barrels.

The end result is, once again, four hits and two misses. And a cyborg zombie suffering from heavy damage. And two smoking barrels.

The zombie tries to attack, but just ends up collapsing to the floor, pulling Speed-Y down on top of it. Right on top of some of the sparking implants.

written by Malkom on Apr 26, 2012 23:03

I step closer to the robot, peering at the sparking place. "Say... I wonder if, if I concentrated, I could send this malfunction forwards in time and make you tell me some more about treason. It sounds interesting."

I concentrate, probably futilely.

written by Jam on Apr 26, 2012 23:25

I check the medication pack for any red-and-gold speckled pills.

"Huh... This pill won't block my mutation entirely, will it? We might need my powers if we're going to be searching for survivors..."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 27, 2012 00:48

I move onward.

"Let's keep a look out. Might as well at least finish our sweep, but it sounds like all of the Junior Citizens are safe."

written by Speeder on Apr 27, 2012 02:35

I attempt to get away from it and leave the barrel on it (but I take the pistol and the spear... or rather, I attempt to do all that)

written by Kristos on Apr 27, 2012 10:55

I wait.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 27, 2012 11:13

I make myself aware of what is going on, by taking a good look at everything.

"..."

I decide that speaking is out of reason.

written by Azirphaeli on Apr 27, 2012 13:26

Assuming I have now caught up to L4, I will assist him with his sweep.

written by Gligar on Apr 27, 2012 16:30

?

Mick-R approaches the bot, and suggests that he might be able to shift the malfunction into the future. And then get some information on treason.

*"You clearly know enough about treason bzzt", says the bot. "Bzzzt Your statement suggests that you are an unregistered mutant."*

Mick-R concentrates.

Sproing

Something inside the bot gives way, showering Mick-R in hot sparks.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While Mango keeps looking around, trying to watch everything, and saying nothing, Jam-Y looks through his medication pack, searching through the plethora of pills available, and finds that many are really very similar. Red pills with yellow flecks, red-and-yellow-speckled pills, red-and-brown speckled pills, aha! Red-and-gold.

He asks whether the pill will suppress his mutation entirely. "I doubt it," John-R replies. "Usually, it just dampens your mutation. It's useful when you don't want your mutations triggering accidentally."

L4-O keeps moving, insisting that they keep a lookout for other survivors and Junior Citizens.

Azir-R hops up behind him, and also keeps a lookout.

So far, there does not seem to be any sign of other survivors.

Foyer, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Aching from burns incurred by the zombie's implants, Speed-Y picks himself up and retrieves his weapons. He makes a point of leaving his spent barrel lying on the corpse before he steps back to rejoin Lucas-R.

Cloning station foyer, JHP Sector

Kris-R waits for the YELLOW to return.

He doesn't have long to wait. The YELLOW re-enters the foyer and sighs. "It seems that your papers are in order. Though I still have my suspicions about you two, it appears that neither of you is a mutant. You can go about your business."

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 27, 2012 17:10

I take a last look at the junior citizens and try to make a guess about whether they are all present.

I specifically look for the junior that wouldn't listen to me when I told him to get away from the vent.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 27, 2012 19:27

As we continue the search around the building, I note how far around the building we are and see how much we have left to go.

While checking around, I also see if I can see the other Industrial Buildings from where I'm at. Maybe I can see some of the commotion from here... unlikely though...

written by Malkom on Apr 27, 2012 20:04

"Hot bleeding time-warped sandwiches!" I jump back. "Wowzers! I... did that actually WORK?!"

I concentrate hard on the bot's drinks tray.

written by Gligar on Apr 27, 2012 21:32Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R tries to look for the Junior Citizens, but none are visible from near Building 2.

L4-O notes that he has reached the opposite side of the building to the garage. In the distance, other buildings loom: Building 3, and, distantly, two of the buildings from Industrial Subsector A. There seem to be zombies milling about around Building 3.

?

Mick-R seems surprised. Did... did it work?

He tries to concentrate on the drinks tray.

Nothing noticeable happens.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 27, 2012 22:08

I press onward, continuing to keep my eye out for anyclone of note. My eyes scan up and down Building 2 to see if I can spot anything amiss.

written by Speeder on Apr 28, 2012 02:53

I grumpily proceed toward the power room...

I look very grumpy.

Seemly pain make me grumpy and unhappy.

written by Malkom on Apr 28, 2012 05:34

I look disappointed... but then a bright idea strikes me!

I concentrate on the actuality of a laser gun that might be hovering above my hand sometime in the future. If I was a high-clearance quantum scientist, I'd say this had something to do with Schrodinger-R's famous Companionship & Amusement system, which he called Trevor (the one he put in a box along with a specifically treasonous nanovirus that might, or might not, infect the system before he removed it.)

If that fails (and it probably will, knowing me), I try to move a bit of drink upwards.

If that fails, and if that succeeds either, I have a good look round.

written by Jam on Apr 28, 2012 14:09

I look around for any living clones, and try to make my way over to wherever L4-O went.

written by Gligar on Apr 28, 2012 18:22Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O moves on, and continues to look for clones. There is a distinct lack of survivors near here.

To add a little variety,. he begins looking up and down the building itself, and notices lights set up on the roof. A memory surfaces: he was there when they were installed.

Jam-Y also keeps looking for survivors. There seems to be signs of life in the vicinity of Building 3...

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

A rather grumpy Speed-Y heads for the power room, with Lucas-R in tow.

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The first thing her notices on entering is the big power distribution board, taking up almost the entirety of one wall.

One section looks odd, almost as if someone has damaged it. Repairs have been attempted but suddenly stopped, given the pile of tools on the floor. Some spare parts have been carelessly dropped near the board.

?

Mick-R decides to try something else.

He concentrates.

Nothing happens.

He concentrates again.

[1040]

Nothing happens.

He tries looking instead of concentrating.

Nothing happens.

Especially not to the open door used by the bot.

written by Speeder on Apr 28, 2012 19:07

I start by examining the sabotage, trying to figure what the power services team wanted to actually repair.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 28, 2012 20:04

"Hm, those emergency lights might attract some rescuers or something. But it's too dangerous to get back up there and turn them off... guess we'll leave them on for now."

I continue onward, since there probably isn't much ground left to cover.

written by Jam on Apr 28, 2012 22:04

"Hey, L4-O, what's that?! Maybe there's survivors there!" I loudly exclaim while pointing toward where I saw the signs of life.

written by Gligar on Apr 28, 2012 22:25

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y has a look at the damaged section to see if he can figure out what the Power Services team were trying to fix, and discovers that, though the circuits and breakers are marked, they're marked in a Power Services code which he does not know. Service groups do not like sharing trade secrets, and Tech and Power kind of have overlapping jurisdictions (though don't try telling them that. Repair teams from both groups often get into firefights over just which group gets to repair some faults, sometimes causing even more damage than they would have fixed.) As such, he can't tell what the breakers connect to. But given that the lights are off, it's probably the lighting breakers that are broken. Indeed, some do appear damaged.

Lucas-R also has a look. "Hmmm..."

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O comments that the lights up top will probably attract rescuers, but he deems it too dangerous to go up and turn them off. He continues his sweep of the building's exterior.

Behind him, Jam-Y alerts him, rather loudly, to the probable presence of survivors near Building 3.

written by Speeder on Apr 28, 2012 23:08

I attempt to see how the breakers got damaged...

And after that I try to figure if something that does not belong to the board is connected somehow to it, or if there are something off, something unbroken that is not doing the normal function.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 29, 2012 03:02

"Wow! They didn't find out that you were an unregistered mutant plotting to overthrow the complex Kris-R, despite you looking and acting much like one... That's really great to hear!"

"Now, let's go! We have a cafeteria to find! And probably other things."

I grab Kris-R by his jumpsuit and pull him toward the exit, waving to the Yellow as I go. I wave to anyone else around as well.

written by Malkom on Apr 29, 2012 05:37

"If this is a dream, it's not following any rules I know if."

I look around, seeing what kind of place I'm in, if any. I also close the door and attempt to secure it.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 29, 2012 09:20

"Hmm? What's that, Sir?"

I turn around and see if there is a route to Building 3, or if each building has a marked off perimeter.

If there's a route, I say

"Well then, I guess there's no harm in checking."

I proceed towards Building 3.

written by Gligar on Apr 29, 2012 14:56

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y inspects the damaged breakers, and discovers that some of them were forcibly yanked free from their mountings and bent out of shape, shorting some of the wires inside and causing the breakers to fuse in the "off" position.

He has a quick look at the rest of the board and discovers a breaker that seems to be a replacement, probably installed by the Power Services team. It doesn't look out of the ordinary. But Lucas-R seems to be interested in it.

There is also a receptacle for something... something that isn't installed. The receptacle looks like it was added after everything else... probably as recently as a couple of daycycles ago.

Cloning station foyer, JHP Sector

Cryo-R loudly exclaims that it is a good thing that Kris-R's mutation and plans to undermine Alpha Complex were not discovered, and then begins to drag him out of the door.

Only to find the door slam shut as he gets there.

"Citizen Cryo-R-BRN-6!" booms The Computer. "You have just accused another citizen of being a mutant! Explain your accusation!"

?

Mick-R seems to think that it's a dream... and what would he know about the rules of dreaming?

He looks around. It's the same blinding whiteness he was brought to. He can now see that he was sat in a RED chair in what could be the middle, or to one side, or even attached to a wall. It's hard to tell.

[1041]

Other features include a door, currently open and leading to a RED corridor, a jackobot, currently deactivated and emitting sparks, and a tray of drinks. And cameras, but that does without saying.

He closes the door, and realises that there is no handle on this side. He'll have to find some way of opening it again if he wants to (attempt to) leave.

An equally-puzzling location.

"He's in position."

"Good. But there's something else. Notice that fluctuation on the lucidity graph? He might be aware of something."

"Or maybe he didn't drink enough of the..."

A panel beeps.

"That's not right."

"Oh, don't worry about it. We can correct for that. Increase the Thalanal injection to 25 ppm."

"Got it."

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O turns to look in the direction of Building 3. Since the perimeter fence only denotes the edge of the Subsectors, getting to Building 3 is easy.

He decides to go and check it out. As he approaches, he can make out a group of citizens, struggling to move through a mass of zombies.

written by Speeder on Apr 29, 2012 15:49

"What are you seeing there Lucas?"

I also examine the replacement breaker.

If I notice that removing it would not wreck my evidence, I remove it (after turning it off and relevant circuits to it off too) using the tools on the ground.

Then I examine it closely on my hand.

written by Jam on Apr 29, 2012 17:47

I also walk toward the direction of Building 3.

Once I see the group of citizens, I switch to running.

written by Kristos on Apr 29, 2012 19:46

I have now known Cryo-R long enough (not very long) to not be surprised by his present action. So I kick back against the wall (if it is RED or INFRARED clearance) and wait to see his explanation.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 29, 2012 20:29

I too start running. I pull out one of my more useful laser pistols and start firing away at the zombies, trying to clear a path for the survivors.

written by Gligar on Apr 29, 2012 22:46

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y asks Lucas-R what he's looking at. "I'm looking at the codes, sir," he replies. "During.. that incident last weekcycle - wow, is it that long already? - they decided that I shouldn't be specialised on running cloning tanks, and tried to teach me the basics of other service group jobs. I've forgotten most of it, but I can remember some of the basic codes used by the other service groups. Like this one. The damaged parts are marked up as being for the lights, the lifts... and 'spare'. That's the one that's been replaced."

Speed-Y examines the replacement. It looks the same as the other undamaged breakers on the panel. But appearances can be deceptive. He decides to get a closer look, and uses the discarded tools to remove it from the panel. Those screws are on tight, and might not even be the right ones for the job - as might the tools - but he succeeds in removing the replacement breaker while only causing minor scratches to it and the panel. It wouldn't pass a Power Services quality check, to be sure. The breaker, I mean, not just Speed-Y's work. It's almost as if it was constructed on-site.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y starts walking towards Building 3 with L4-O. At least until he sees those citizens, whereupon he starts running.

L4-O starts running alongside, fishing out a laser pistol as he does. He starts shooting at zombies. Out of three shots, he's able to hit twice, causing one zombie to collapse onto a second, which pulls a third down with it.

Cloning station foyer, JHP Sector

It seems that Kris-R has formed enough of an opinion of Cryo-R that he is not surprised at this turn of events. Instead, he leans against a nearby wall (INFRARED, if anyone's interested) and waits, to see what Cryo-R has to say for himself.

But The Computer wants answers now. "You as well!" it adds. "Are you a mutant? Explain yourself!"

written by Gligar on Apr 25, 2012 13:46

I think I've got enough information to replace at least one player with an AI script that, more or less, says:

```
10 PROCcreateclonfamily
20 FOR CLONE=1 TO 6
30 PROCgetintofight
40 PROCdie
50 NEXT CLONE
60 GOTO 10
```

I am sure that Cryo-R, and others, can appreciate the efficiency of this situation, and will forgive this use of BASIC in this example. (I just wanted the excuse to use a GOTO 10. I mean, work with me here.)

written by Lightning4 on Apr 29, 2012 23:03

I stop at a safe range from the zombies and swap to the other good laser pistol and continue firing at the zombies.

"Gah, wish I had my blaster about now..."

written by Granpire viking man on Apr 29, 2012 23:16

I pull out both of my laser pistols and help L4-O clear a path for the survivors.

I try to see if the survivors look like junior citizens.

written by Speeder on Apr 30, 2012 02:44

I attempt to disassemble the breaker if needed to figure if it has any part that does not actually belong to a breaker of the light system.

written by Kristos on Apr 30, 2012 06:38

"Umm, well... you see... it is RED. I mean I am red. Definitely RED. And definat. Very much definite... but definitely not treasonous. Just... threadlike. I- I- I mean, I feel like a thread... a very well defined thread. Like I'm being lead somewhere. It is not treason to close my eyes? It is very healthy and involuntar-ily. And on the other side of my eyelids... just RED. It would be laughable to try to take over the complex with my eyes shut. And treasonous. I am sure you understand, Computer!"

I fall face flat in respect, and speak no more until prompted again.

written by Gligar on Apr 30, 2012 18:39

Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O switches to another laser pistol and keeps shooting, letting loose with another three shots. But he doesn't do as well as last time, with only one of his shots hitting its mark. He wishes he had his blaster, but of course Joris-R still has it. He'd better remember that it's ORANGE...

But of course, there are more than just L4-O shooting zombies. King-R, for example. He takes out both of his laser pistols and starts firing. He fires six shots, but only three hit their mark, and strike down another zombie. He looks at the survivors and realises that they aren't Junior Citizens.

John-R is also shooting. He also fires three shots, and hits with all three, causing two more zombies to fall!

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y tries to disassemble the circuit breaker, but finds that he doesn't have the right tools to do so.

Cloning station foyer, JHP Sector

Kris-R seems to panic as The Computer demands answers. He stammers that it, no, he is RED, and it seems like he's been lead around on a thread. And surely it's okay to close your eyes? That can't be treasonous, right? That would be silly.

For a long moment, The Computer is silent.

Then: "I see. But I am still waiting for your companion to explain himself! Failure to comply will result in summary judgement. And this had better not a false accusation, else there will be terminations!"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 30, 2012 19:25

I check the shots on my pistols, and fire with whichever one still has shots left.

I see how many zombies remain between us and the survivors, and continue trying to pick them off so the survivors can make it to us.

written by Gligar on Apr 30, 2012 22:07

Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O checks his pistols. Three and two shots left, respectively. He sticks with the three, and empties the barrel, dropping another zombie in the process.

A survivor notices this, and starts to clamber over zombie bodies, trying to escape.

written by Lightning4 on May 01, 2012 00:04

I lend my assistance with my remaining two shots. I try to make those shots count.

written by Speeder on May 01, 2012 01:06

I use inappropriate tools to disassemble the circuit breaker, you know, like all TechServices people know how to do... Even if it is not part of training at all.

written by Cryoburner on May 01, 2012 01:24

"Oh, hello computer! Don't worry! That wasn't an accusation at all! I was just mentioning that Kris-R looks much like a mutant does, what with his legs and arms and all. Mutants are known to often have those, you know. He just has that sort of "mutant look" about him. Of course, the crew here looked over his information and found otherwise, and it sounds like the cloning tank chemicals here are specially formulated to reduce mutations, so I'm pretty sure he's not a mutant. It's possible that he's a traitor though, as I haven't ever heard him say things like "I am not a traitor" or "I sure prefer activities that are non-treasonous", so I'll continue to keep an eye on him. There's nothing to worry about! I'm just keeping on guard and looking for signs that he is planning to kill us all at any moment. That hasn't happened yet though!"

I give a thumbs up to the nearest camera.

"Hmm... now that I think of it, what happened to that transbot we were on..."

written by Granpire viking man on May 01, 2012 02:34

I keep helping L4-O with a few more shots, then check my barrels.

I try to take a quick tally of the remaining zombies, and tell L4-O this number.

written by Malkom on May 01, 2012 17:48

I grope 'round the walls and see if I can feel anything. If so, I pull, push, switch, click, or otherwise activate it.

If not, I decide the room is boring, grab the robot by the heels, and try to smash down the door with it.

written by Gligar on May 01, 2012 19:15Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O fires off his remaining two shots on his equipped pistols. That's enough to dissuade another zombie from interfering with the escape of the survivor(s). King-R finishes it off with another couple of shots. As he discovers, that leaves one barrel empty and the other with two shots left.

The survivor manages to clamber free of the zombies and make a run for it. Other survivors begin to do the same.

King-R counts the remaining zombies and tells L4-O that there are nine.

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Undeterred, Speed-Y attempts to use the tools he has to dismantle the circuit breaker. It takes him a while, but he actually manages it, and without breaking anything! (Well, except for a cable tie).

It occurs to him that he has never seen the inside of a circuit breaker before. Nonetheless, he doesn't see anything unusual.

Cloning station foyer, JHP Sector

Cryo-R explains that he didn't intend to accuse Kris-R of anything. Instead, he merely wanted to say how much like a mutant Kris-R looked... though his papers check out and the cloning process went smoothly, so he's probably not a mutant. He may, he adds, be a traitor, since he hasn't said he isn't one. Cryo-R promises to watch him for signs that he'll kill everyone.

The Computer responds, "Your earlier statement, that Kris-R's mutation was not discovered by the cloning technicians, suggests that you suspected him of possessing a mutation. Voice analysis routines construed this as an accusation! Are you aware of the amount of resources I must expend on false or inaccurate accusations every daycycle? No, of course not, for the information is beyond your security clearance. Nonetheless, I cannot allow this to go unpunished. you are fined two hundred credits for a false accusation of treason, and are sentenced to go without lunch for one weekcycle! Please pay this fine at the nearest confession booth immediately!"

The door unlocks.

?

Mick-R investigates the room a little closer, looking for something he can activate.

Sure enough, he finds a button. Click!

When he presses it, a hatch opens, revealing a ventilation duct and some wiring.

written by Speeder on May 01, 2012 19:25

I then try to figure what the receptacle on the panel do, specially what was supposed to be attached on it, and what the circuit it is attached to is supposed to do.

written by Lightning4 on May 01, 2012 19:40

Lacking any other weapon that operates with more surgical precision as opposed to obliterating everything around, I decide to try the taser on the closest zombie, if it has enough range.

I keep watching the survivors to see if there are any remaining that can't get to us.

If all the survivors become free, I yank my taser free and make a run for it with them back towards Building 2.

written by Jam on May 01, 2012 22:03

I run a bit closer to the zombies, and try to shoot at the head of the nearest zombie, as long as there aren't any living clones too close to where I'm aiming.

written by Gligar on May 01, 2012 22:15Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Next, Speed-Y investigates the mystery receptacle. It seems to contain a heavy-duty power socket. Whatever connects there must draw a lot of power. For what reason? Who knows? Whatever it is isn't here.

But the receptacle is connected, via what is probably an inverter, to what seems to be the main power line.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Lacking any other ideas, L4-O decides to try his taser out on one of the zombies. However, other than the thing buzzing at him, nothing happens.

It's a good thing that Jam-Y has a weapon, and is there to use it. He shoots at the same zombie, incapacitating it. That allows two more survivors to break free and run.

But that leaves another four who are in need of help...

written by Kristos on May 01, 2012 23:55

I turn to the YELLOW to see his current state of being. Then, to Cryo-R: "You should be honored. The computer just spoke to you directly. And fined you directly!"

written by Lightning4 on May 02, 2012 04:41

I try to yank my taser free and retract it.

"Hmm..."

I get an idea. I unload one of the barrels from a laser pistol and try to toss it just close enough to the zombies that they'll be caught in a nice explosion, that hopefully shouldn't also harm the survivors.

I then try to shoot my taser at that, if Jam-Y doesn't try to shoot the barrel first.

written by Granpire viking man on May 02, 2012 11:59

"Take cover!" I yell, hopefully loudly enough to warn the survivors.

I fire at L4-O's barrel, on the assumption that a taser will not set it off.

I then back away very quickly.

written by Cryoburner on May 02, 2012 12:09

"It's always great to talk with the computer!"

I return to walking toward the exit.

"Hmm... no lunch though. It's certainly a good thing that it will be dinner soon! I guess I won't need those 200 credits anyway, seeing as I won't have to buy lunches this week. It's a good thing the computer thought of this, or I might have had excess credits laying around, and nothing to do with them."

written by Azirphaeli on May 02, 2012 16:02

I wake up to a fire fight⁷⁵¹ and see King-R ducking for cover. I follow suite.

written by Gligar on May 02, 2012 16:30

Cloning station foyer, JHP Sector

Kris-R looks for the YELLOW, but he is nowhere to be found.

He tells Cryo-R that he should be honoured, since The Computer spoke to him, and fined him, directly.

Cryo-R replies that it's always great to talk to Our Mutual Friend. He may not be able to have lunch, but, he claims, that's a good thing, since it'll be dinner soon (wait... it's not for several hourcycles!) and he won't have 200 credits burning a hole in his pocket (er... did he forget that commerce is mandatory? If he hadn't been fined, he could have spent it on something! He's not in any danger of not having anything to do with his credits. Or, right now, lack of credits.)

Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O retracts his taser's probes and has an idea. One of the explodey variety. To that end, he unloads one of his spent barrels and throws it towards the zombies, and attempts to shoot it with his taser.

Realising what he's doing, King-R opens up with his own laser pistol and yells for everyone to take cover.

As the barrel begins to squeal, Azir-R realises what's going on and hits the deck.

The barrel explodes and practically deafens everyone. Everything is sent flying -

written by Speeder on May 02, 2012 16:58

I then figure if the receptacle was supposed to be there in first place or if it was installed in a extraneous manner...

"Lucas, I think we will have to check the security videos, if I am cleared to that, to see when this thing was installed... And when the sabotage happened."

Since I am here anyway, I attempt to do what minor fixes I can do.

written by Lightning4 on May 02, 2012 19:39

I check to see whether I'm alive, and check to see whether I've sustained any injuries.

"Okay, maybe I need to cut out the short-range explosions... this is what, the fourth time I've nearly killed myself already?"

written by Jam on May 02, 2012 21:37

I check myself for injuries...

"How are we supposed to save the survivors if you blow them up?!" I yell to L4-O and King-R.

written by Gligar on May 02, 2012 22:04

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks at the receptacle once again, and surmises that it shouldn't even be there. The workclonship suggests that the panel was deliberately cut open to make space for the receptacle. Whoever did it didn't make a very neat job of it, either.

Speed-Y informs Lucas-R that they'll have to review the security cameras to find out when the receptacle was installed and how the sabotage happened...

And, since he's here anyway, he decides to try and make a few repairs of his own. His knowledge of power systems is limited to making such fixes to cloning tanks and such when Power Services aren't looking, but there shouldn't be too many differences, right?

He causes quite the lightshow while doing it, but from the sounds elsewhere in the building, her seems to have activated something.

Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O picks himself up. He aches all over from being hurled to the ground but is otherwise still in one piece.

He decides that close-range explosions are probably not a good idea, and he should cut down. But he can do that whenever he wants, right?

Jam-Y also picks himself up. He berates L4-O. They can't save survivors if they keep blowing them up!

written by Azirphaeli on May 02, 2012 21:52

"Yeah I don't think I can lose any more limbs and still be a functional member of the team."

written by Speeder on May 02, 2012 22:39

I look at the power services symbols... You know, so later I can figure what I fixed and learn what the symbol means...

Then I turn to Lucas.

⁷⁵¹ AZIRPHAELI: (OOC sorry, been sick)

[1045]

"Also... I wonder what I turned on. I hope is something good against zombies..."

written by Lightning4 on May 03, 2012 00:12

"Right sir, sorry, although I did try to not blow them up... so..."

I see if the survivors are in fact still alive. And see if there are any zombies left around the area.

written by Granpire viking man on May 03, 2012 01:14

"Yeah, did we blow them up?"

I ask, but prefer not to look.

I tell L4-O, "I'm sorry, I haven't been a very supportive friend, as far as explosive-based addictions go. I'll try to stop you from causing them next time."

written by Gligar on May 03, 2012 18:50

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y glances at the Power Services symbols, trying to remember them. He wonders exactly what he just activated.

Lucas-R also looks at the symbols. "Hmmm... not the lights, that's for sure..."

Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O apologises and says that he was trying not to kill the survivors. He checks, and it looks like he succeeded, though they'll need the attention of a docbot.

As for the zombies, though... there are two left.

King-R, of course, prefers not to look. Instead, he apologises to L4-O, saying that he'll do a better job of stopping extraneous explosions in the future.

written by Speeder on May 03, 2012 18:53

"Alright, not lights... good to know."

Instead of moving out immediately, I check my equipment. Including replace rounds and barrels, and fixing the spear in case the zomborg damaged it.

"The only thing I have more than zombies, is zomborgs."

written by Lightning4 on May 03, 2012 19:25

I make sure my taser is still in working order, perhaps, and put it away since it's useless here anyway.

Lacking any sort of weaponry that won't blow the zombies up and us as well, I resort simply to Protocol 1115554B. Verbal assault!

"Your mother was a father and your hamster smells of elderberries!"

written by Gligar on May 03, 2012 22:15

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Before he moves out, Speed-Y checks his equipment. That is, he checks his laser pistol, "revolver", and spear, reloads the "revolver", and repairs the spear.

Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O hits the Test button on his taser, causing it to arc.

Then he stows it. But what weapon should he use if he is not to cause explosions? Harsh language?

Actually, yes.⁷⁵² Protocol 1115554B states that all soldiers should be equipped with one (1) mouth, intimidation purposes, for the use of. To most soldiers, that means "verbal assault".

And that is what L4-O tries. Unfortunately, the zombies seem less than impressed. But where did he learn that particular insult? (He got it wrong, anyway.) Some of those words date back to... no, never mind. Suffice to say that those words tend to attract the attention of Internal Security.

written by Jam on May 04, 2012 02:00

"Its what was a who was a what?!"

I swing my laser pistol aim over to L4-O.

"Where did you hear words like that?! I'd call them treasonous, if I knew what in Alpha Complex they meant!"

written by Granpire viking man on May 04, 2012 03:12

I swing my good laser pistol at Jam-Y.

"Stop it! Last I saw you, you were about to eat Speed-Y, and you hugged a warbot, almost killing us. I'd say that's treasonous!"

"We can deal with this after we kill those two zombies" I add, nodding at the zombies.

written by Lightning4 on May 04, 2012 06:43

"Protocol 1115554B, addendum C, Article 5... it's rather long, but in dire circumstances clones are allowed to draw from Friend Computer's All-Encompassing Compendium of Insults: Secret Fun Edition for the purpose of using a weapons-grade verbal assault."

"Armed Forces stuff, you know. Especially the Secret Fun Edition. I've got a few more where that came from... though

⁷⁵² GUGAR: (OOC: +1pp.)

written by Speeder on Apr 28, 2012 19:08

Malkom I heard that XYZZY make "Twice as much happens" using them within earshot of Junior Citizens lands you in a confession booth faster than you can say it in the first place."

I sigh.

"I guess either I botched it, or the zombies are simply immune to that ferocious assault..."

written by Azirphaeli on May 04, 2012 17:01

"I am sure we can find a very real source of damage that doesn't cause a big boom but also will actually work."

I look at the standoff..

"assuming we can all cheer up a tad and stop aiming at one another.. yes?"

written by Cryoburner on May 04, 2012 17:05

"walk walk walk..."

I continue walking toward the exit. And possibly passing through it. If I pass Kris-R along the way, I pull him along as well.

written by Speeder on May 04, 2012 17:11

I move out of the room, and try to remember where the sound might come from.

written by Gligar on May 04, 2012 19:14

Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y, it seems, hasn't heard of Protocol 1115554B, but then, that's to be understood. The problem is, he has heard L4-O unleash his verbal assault. It may not have worked, but it did push Jam-Y into action. He thinks, and shifts his aim... towards L4-O. He demands to know where L4-O heard of those words.

King-R also shifts his aim... towards Jam-Y. He's had enough. First, Jam-Y tries to eat Speed-Y; then he hugs a warbot; now he's pointing laser pistols at everyone! If anyone is acting treasonously, it's Jam-Y!

Azir-R doesn't join in with the pointing. He believes that they will find an alternative weapon with which to terminate zombies, but they have to not be pointing laser pistols at each other.

L4-O explains to everyone about Protocol 1115554B, specifically Addendum C, Article 5. He says that it's rather long, but it allows clones to use the Friend Computer's All-Encompassing Compendium of Insults: Secret Fun Edition to launch verbal assaults at enemies. Of course, that edition is restricted to the Armed Forces, and pretty much all of it is composed of words you wouldn't want to use around Junior Citizens...

And it looks like it didn't work out exactly as planned. Either he botched it, or the zombies are immune to it.

Either way, the zombies continue to advance.

Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Cryo-R and Kris-R (who is being dragged by Cryo-R, as usual) emerge from the cloning station into an INFRARED corridor unlike many they've seen. For one, the INFRARED corridors they're familiar with tend not to have giant e-ink adverts proclaiming the inferiority of mutants everywhere. As clones pass, the displays change, personalising themselves, changing to fit the clone, reminding them of the telltale signs of mutations, encouraging clones to report signs of mutations to the nearest guard immediately...

The second thing they notice is that... well, there are a lot more clones around here. Some of them are waiting around a bank of confession booths nearby. They seem to be talking about something... probably some mutant or something.

Corridor 2, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y and Lucas-R leave the power room. Speed-Y thinks that the sound came from somewhere in the direction of the far end of Corridor 3.

written by Kristos on May 04, 2012 22:40

I start walking to look less conspicuous. This place makes me uncomfortable. Looking around, I check for any signs of direction.

written by Lightning4 on May 05, 2012 00:04

"We've got two zombies left so, if we can get rid of those..."

I ready a large hammer as a blunt weapon, if I still have one. If the zombies get in melee range I start using it with extreme prejudice.

written by Jam on May 05, 2012 02:29

"Huh... Protocol 1115554B... I really need to keep up on those..."

I shift my aim back toward the zombies.

written by Granpire viking man on May 05, 2012 05:48

I shift my aim back toward the zombies also, but keep a sharp eye out for further treasonous behavior from Jam-Y.

I fire off my last two shots and check if I have any more barrels.

If I don't have any, I ask Azir-R to toss me a couple.

written by Gligar on May 05, 2012 18:37

Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

For some reason, Kris-R seems a little uncomfortable here. He starts walking, since being dragged might be a bit conspicuous. (Then again, I can see a couple of clones dragging a third to who-knows-where on this camera, past the confession booths.)

He also looks for some sort of directions. They still need to get to JHY Sector, after all. Well, there seems to be a concourse of sorts in one direction, and the confession booths in the other. Past the booths, the corridor intersects another, and past that, another small crowd is gathered around a bank of terminals. Past that... I can't really tell.

[1047]

Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O reminds everyone that they have two zombies left. He checks through his things and finds his large hammer. Figuring that it's better than nothing, he gets it out and prepares to use it to bash in some zombie skulls.

Jam-Y seems to accept L4-O's explanation, and relaxes a little. He muses that he really must keep up to speed with all these directives and mandates.

He starts aiming at the zombies again. King-R follows suit, but can't help glancing at Jam-Y from time to time. While he's at it, he fires off his last two shots, landing a glancing hit on one zombie, and looks through his spare equipment. He has one fresh barrel left, so he loads it, and asks Azir-R for a couple more.

written by Lightning4 on May 05, 2012 20:17

"Don't try too hard, sir. It's physically impossible to keep up on every single mandate. Which leaves it in bit of a funny spot, really... it's semi-treasonous to not know every single protocol, regulation, and rule in use in the Alpha Complex... yet, bearing knowledge of every single one of them suggests a dangerous mutation... or some other treasonous or suspect activity."

If any zombies are now in melee range, I start cracking skulls.

written by Gligar on May 05, 2012 23:12

Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O suggests that Jam-Y not try too hard to remember mandates and regulations. There are so many that one clone can't be expected to know them all... yet, at the same time, they have to know them all. So... if you don't, you're a traitor for not remembering the regulations, but if you do, you're a traitor because you're clearly some sort of mutant...

This is one of those things that Internal Security loves.

But there are more important subjects at hand, such as those zombies.

L4-O takes a swing at one, and his hammer connects with a cyborg implant, making a satisfying crackle and fizz! The zombie lurches for a moment as the malfunctioning implant does some nasty things to what remains of its brain, and keels over.

written by Kristos on May 05, 2012 23:22

If there is a confession booth with no line (or a short line) of clones waiting, I go there. When my turn comes, I hold my head low and speak:

"I have a confession to make. I am lost. My team, team Sigma, were following the way. Specifically, the way to JHY Sector R&D. But at some point our mortal bodies went astray, some pieces this way, some that way. Re-cloning has given us a second chance to fulfill our calling."

Lifting my head, with tears of desperation, I continue:

"Can you please, please advise us on returning to the path of our mission? We did not mean to slip away!"

The chemical burn in my throat probably amplifies the desperation in my voice. After a quick thought, I add:

"Specifically, directions and transport advice to JHY Sector would be most appreciated."

written by Lightning4 on May 06, 2012 01:09

"One down!"

If nobody else takes out the remaining zombie(s?), and if it's close enough I take some swings at it.

written by Jam on May 06, 2012 03:12

"That's an interesting thought... A mutant that can remember everything! I wonder if there are clones like that..."

I think a bit, then realize there is still a zombie alive (undead, whatever).

"Oh, need help with that?"

I walk up to the other zombie, and shoot it point blank in the head. Then, I check how many shots my laser pistol barrel has left, unless said barrel has just exploded from overuse, in which case I flail around and scream in agony.

written by Mingamango181 on May 06, 2012 11:15

I realise that I still exist, and on that, I shake my limbs back awake again.

I observe my surroundings, checking for differences compared to when I last checked.

written by Speeder on May 06, 2012 16:55

I go to the corridor 3, searching for the source of the sound.

written by Gligar on May 06, 2012 19:13

Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Trying to act natural, Kris-R heads over to the confession booths. The clones present there regard him with suspicion.

As it happens, queues are short. The reason for this becomes clear when one of them suddenly emits a bright flash and opens, sending out a blast of hot air and a cloud of what looks to be dust. The other clones notice it, and cheer.

But Kris-R doesn't seem to care. He enters the booth. Behind him, one of the clones tells another, "Wanna bet on this one?"

Confession booth, Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Kris-R enters, wipes off the chair and sits down.

Almost immediately, the Computer monitor activates, and The Computer intones, "Would you like to confess, citizen?"

And it seems that Kris-R would like to confess. Specifically, he confesses that he and his team have become lost after being re-cloned here, and he would like guidance in getting back on track.

“It is truly regrettable,” begins The Computer, “that some clones are capable of losing their way! If only they were more observant, perhaps they could remain on the path! You, for example! Can you identify what it was that caused you to lose your way? Did you notice it? If not, why not? If so, why did you still allow yourself to lose your way? Why has your teammate not yet entered a confession booth?”

Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O lets everyone know that he has dispatched another zombie, and moves on to the other. But it gets to him first, and takes a swipe at him. Ouch!

Jam-Y thinks that being able to remember everything is an interesting concept, and wonders if any such mutant exists.

The he realises that L4-O needs help, and walks towards it. Aiming his laser pistol again, he shoots. Twice. This is enough to make the zombie jerk back, right into his laser pistol. He almost drops it, but recovers. He checks it, and notices that he has two shots left.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango looks around again. He notes that everyone seems to have left him alone again. Even the Armed Forces seems to be ignoring him, as they seems to be more interested in helping out with the warbot.

The heat from the plasma beam begins to subside. As it does, something can be heard making little plink plink noises as it begins to cool (presumably).

Corridor 3, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y and Lucas-R enter the corridor, looking for the source of the noises. It is definitely not coming from the (remains of) the stairwell, or the cafeteria, that's for sure.

They continue on, past the wreckage, and emerge in a relatively unscathed stretch of corridor, in which there is a lift. It seems to be moving.

written by Speeder on May 06, 2012 19:39

“Oh nice, I fixed the lift! Much better than using stairs, specially one that I exploded.”

I smile happily.

And point the laser pistol at the lift, and then call it, and remains pointing the laser at it.

“Lucas, I am thinking in go searching for the gas boxes, and figure how they got triggered, do you have any better idea of what to do now?”

written by Lightning4 on May 06, 2012 19:50

Now angry at being hit, I try to take a good swing at the zombie with my hammer.

written by Gligar on May 06, 2012 22:03

Corridor 3, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y is pleased that he seems to have repaired the lifts. It means that he won't have to worry about having to take the stairs – specifically, the ones he destroyed earlier.

He calls the lift, cautiously keeping his laser pistol pointed at it, and outlines his plan: he wants to find more of the gas boxes and try to figure out how they were activated. He asks Lucas-R for ideas. Lucas-R replies, “I think there will be quite a few boxes... it should only be a matter of time before we find one. Then... I dunno, find some Power Services code or something? If we can find out what circuit they're on...”

He's interrupted by the lift, which arrives, and opens its doors.

Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O answers the attack with one of his own. Crack! Right in the chest!

written by Speeder on May 06, 2012 22:05

I step into the lift, and take a look on how much levels the building have.

“The gas was lighter than air, this means that the boxes are on the lowest levels.”

I see if the building has levels lower than this, underground if needed, it it has, I go for the lowest level.

written by Lightning4 on May 06, 2012 22:19

I continue my attack until such point that the zombie is rendered no longer moving, whether that comes about through my own attack, or assistance from one of the other clones.

written by Granpire viking man on May 07, 2012 01:16

I watch the cracking of heads and chests, looking curiously to see whether cyborgs have blood or innards.

written by Cryoburner on May 07, 2012 04:58

I notice Kris-R enter a confession booth.

“Oh look, a confession booth! That could be useful for disposing of my excess credits!”

I approach a confession booth, and see if it offers any obvious way of paying my fine.

written by Mingamango181 on May 07, 2012 09:04

I move so that I remain vaguely close to the Armed Forces.

Not too close to that warbot.

written by Gligar on May 07, 2012 18:33

Speed-Y's lift, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y enters the lift and looks at the control panel. Hmm... five levels. Nothing below Level 1.

He suggests that the gas boxes will be on the lower levels, given the behaviour of the gas. So... 1 and 2? And since he can't go any lower...

Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O keeps attacking the zombie. It tries to claw at him, and manages to do so on a couple of occasions, but he is able to take it apart soon enough.

After that, he realises just how much his body aches.

King-R, who was watching him, notes that cyborg zombies do have blood after all.

Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Cryo-R finally notices the confession booths.

Remembering (probably) what The Computer told him, he approaches. As he does, one of them opens, causing its occupant - an unfamiliar ORANGE clone - to fall from the booth and crumple to the ground, causing a cheer from the watchers. Perhaps the laser wound to the head has something to do with the fact that he isn't just walking out.

Cryo-R approaches the booth, causing the watchers to whisper amongst themselves. Her pauses briefly, and notices the ME Card slot, prominently mounted under the Computer Monitor inside the booth.

"Go on," one of the watchers calls out. "What are you waiting for? Got something to hide?" This gets a laugh from some of the other watchers.

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango edges closet to the armed Forces clones, trying to increase the space between him and the warbot.

One of the soldiers looks over. "Is something the matter there?"

written by Kristos on May 07, 2012 21:22

"Great Computer! I should have been more observant! Because of my lack of observation an unknown force, seemingly a blast, destroyed our previous clone instances during TransTube transit. I should have been more inquisitive! Since being decanted from a nearby cloning station, our location was never provided (though replacement and recovered supplies were!). I should have been more... mandatory! As team leader, I acknowledge that it is my responsibility to lead the team.

...

I do not know why Cryo-R has not entered a confession booth, though I suspect he is deep in observation that theoretically could be related to our mission."

written by Speeder on May 07, 2012 22:16

I frown. And just because I entered in the lift anyway, I go to level 2, just to be sure I wait for Lucas to be inside the lift, in case he is not.

written by Gligar on May 07, 2012 22:58⁷⁵³

Confession booth, Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Kris-R admits responsibility for not paying attention when the blast (if it was a blast) terminated him, and for not being more mandatory when decanting. If he had been so, he could have possibly avoided the blast, or figured out where he is. It is his responsibility as Team Leader to lead, after all. And apparently, he needs to improve at it.

As for Cryo-R, he isn't sure. Perhaps he is observing something related to the mission?

"Then perhaps you could learn how to be observant by observing your teammate!" suggests The Computer. "Yes, that is a good idea! Your punishment is to observe Cryo-R, and note what he observes, and how it is related to your mission! You can start doing so as you head to the transtube station on Corridor J2-05!

That is not all! At the conclusion of your mission, you are to submit a report detailing everything you have observed during the mission! Perhaps this will teach you proper observation skills!

But this does not explain why Cryo-R has yet to enter a booth! Perhaps he has something to hide!"

Speed-Y's lift, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y had kind of hoped that there was something below Level 1. Oh well. Instead, he presses the Level 2 button and waits.

Only then does notice the size of the lift. It could easily hold fifty or more clones.

written by Lightning4 on May 07, 2012 22:47

"Ugh.... already getting banged up again. Need to watch the combat."

I try to get myself back with the rest, and appraise the situation from there. Like any further zombies are at, and the condition of the survivors, and if there are any more in the area. Things like that.

written by Cryoburner on May 08, 2012 00:54

"Why, yes! Yes, I do have something to hide!"

I respond to the clones near the confession booths.

"There has recently been an outbreak of thefts in the complex, presumably performed by pickpockets, who privily pilfer possessions from the packs and pockets of pedestrians. It's probably a good idea for one to keep their equipment well secured and hidden from sight, to avoid a situation where their belongings might get stolen."

I take a step toward the booth, then quickly turn back around.

⁷⁵³ GLIGAR: (OOC: Kristos spends 3pp.)

"Say, I've noticed you've been standing around watching other clones quite a bit yourselves... That seems rather... Suspicious."

I suspiciously stare at the clones as I enter the booth, unblinking until they are out of sight, before inserting my ME card into the applicable card reader.

written by Speeder on May 08, 2012 02:04⁷⁵⁴

I look around the lift, and try to figure if I can fit a certain bot that I like inside it...

Then I try to figure what the purpose of the lift was originally.

written by Granpire viking man on May 08, 2012 02:12

"Yuck. More mess."

I busy myself with investigating the survivors. Particularly, whether any of them have bloody wounds.

"You know, I don't think I've seen a scrubot all daycycle. Plus, that hygienebot was nearly useless. That reminds me, you're all still filthy."

I look around for a hygiene station, or hygienebot that's actually connected to a water source.

written by Lightning4 on May 08, 2012 09:04

I try to get back to safety too, and check the survivors as well. I also check myself for any serious wounds.

After that's done, I give the surroundings a look for any further zombies. Or survivors.

written by Mingamango181 on May 08, 2012 09:35

I respond.

"I should hope not. Many a time have things occurred that shouldn't have."

written by Kristos on May 08, 2012 12:49

"I get free bonus mandatory duties added to the mission? Oh thank you, Great Unseen Friend! I will perform my duties so well that someclone of higher clearance at anysector will probably think I deserve almost half of a promotion at least! When this mission is completed, I will have learned to observe so well, that some clones will probably think I am Cryo-R! As soon as I am released from the confession booth, I will go observe why Cryo-R has not entered a booth, among other things that I will also observe. But as my first act of super-observeness I will now observe your response... for your response is a response to be observed, Friend Computer."

written by Gligar on May 08, 2012 19:09

Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O muses that he needs to watch himself, specifically during combat. He's already getting hurt. Checking himself over, he can see that his wounds are not serious, but they hurt like HEL Sector.

Noting that others are filtering back towards Building 2, he tags along. There don't seem to be any more zombies outside Building 3, at least. Or survivors, for that matter. The ones with him are injured, but they'll manage.

King-R also checks the survivors. Specifically, their wounds. Luckily, none of them are serious, but they are bleeding in places, something that, as we know, King-R dislikes.

He comments that he hasn't seen a scrubot all daycycle. Or a hygiene station, for that matter. Or a hygienebot that worked properly. He looks around for one, but wouldn't they be, you know, inside a building, and not out under the dome?

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango responds that he hopes not, since lots of things have gone wrong lately.

"Sounds like someone's unhappy," replies the soldier. "You might want to get that seen to."

An equally-perplexing location

"Sir, Level One Brainscrub is underway. I kind of want to know what that's doing to his dream."

"Given that he's not even supposed to be dreaming, so would I. But maybe he's not aware he's dreaming?"

"Shhh. He might have that obnoxious 'Aware That I'm Dreaming' mutation."

"That's not a mutation, citizen, it's just... well... something you can do."

"Oh."

Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Cryo-R retorts that he does have something to hide: his equipment. He says that he doesn't want his things stolen, so he keeps them concealed.

Without giving them a chance to react, he adds that their standing there is.. suspicious. He walks backwards into the booth, never taking his eyes off them, never even blinking... They stare back at him with equal suspicion.

Once the booth closes, one of them stammers, "The... the way... he looked at us..."

"Yeah. Bores right into your mind."

"Wanna bet on this one?"

"Yeah, I'll toss in twenty credits."

Cryo-R's confession booth, Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

But Cryo-R is oblivious to the clones' wager. He is more interested in using this handy ME Card reader. And as he inserts his card, the Computer Monitor lights up with the familiar Eye. "Your fine has been deducted, citizen. Since you are here, would you like to confess?"

⁷⁵⁴ SPEEDER: (OOC: I am laughing my ass off what computer said to Kristos...)

Kris-R's confession booth, Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Kris-R seems overjoyed to receive an addition Mandatory Bonus Duty, as he perceives it, and thanks The Computer. He promises to perform them to the best of his ability, beginning right now, with the Computer's reply. The Computer's replies are something worth observing, after all.

"Indeed it is," is the reply. "My replies are always worth observing! Please observe them to the best of your ability! Also, please observe the group of clones situated outside the confession booths! They seem to need observing! Thank you for your co-operation!"

The door opens.

Speed-Y's lift, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y is doing a little observation of his own, concerning the lift he now occupies. It seems to have been constructed to more easily move entire work shifts from their dormitory to elsewhere in the building. He could potentially fit several forkbots in here... or even ArmourBots, assuming that the door were big enough. And that there were several ArmourBots in existence to fit in here...

As he's pondering that, the lift stops, and its doors open.

written by Malkom on May 08, 2012 19:39

I feel around the walls; if I feel anything I try to pull it off and examine it.

If I don't feel anything, I try to bash the door down with the jackbot.

If that fails, I try to bash the door down with my head.

written by Speeder on May 08, 2012 21:50

I look... happy... for having used that lift and having fixed it.

"Hey lift, I liked you!"

I then move out, and see if I can spot any of those gas boxes already.

written by Gligar on May 08, 2012 22:39

?

Ignoring the air duct, Mick-R concentrates on getting the door open, using much the same method. First, he searches for a switch... oh hey! There's one. Press!

The door clicks, and opens ever so slightly.

written by Speeder on May 03, 2012 20:41

L4 just managed to splout 4 treasonous words in a single phrase, and insult someone with them.

Awesome.

Mother, Father, Hamster and Elderberries.

written by Lightning4 on May 03, 2012 21:47

Well, drastic times...

Speed-Y's lift, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y tells the lift that he appreciates it and moves out.

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks around for a gas box. There's one.

written by Lightning4 on May 08, 2012 22:43

I continue with the group back towards Building 2. I resume keeping a lookout as we progress, though it doesn't seem there's much to look at, at the moment.

Maybe another clone would take the time to investigate every single soot molecule...

written by Speeder on May 08, 2012 23:02

I first try to see how much not-inert the thing may be... Then if I can see from far where it is connected.

written by Malkom on May 09, 2012 02:54

Keeping my thumb on the (supposedly) invisible switch, I glance at the air duct. Hmm.

I try pressing the switch again. Then I try going down the air duct. If it tries disappearing or anything trippy like that, I go out the door. ("Duct first, maybe less Security Services down there!")

If there's time, I try wishing very hard for a high-clearance laser pistol. ("If I can influence this dream structure or whatever the HELsector it is... really, you can't tell me these white-light walls are natural...")

written by Gligar on May 09, 2012 16:20

Between Buildings 2 and 3, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O keeps a lookout as the group heads back to the garage. Fortunately, nothing of note happens, unless you count the soot continuing to blanket everything. And there's only one clone I know who would take the time to inspect that enough to learn that there are changes in its density.

Wait, maybe two.

Regardless of that, the team makes it back to the garage unscathed.

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As best he can, Speed-Y attempts to investigate the gas box from afar, first checking to see if it's active. He surmises that it was active, but is now inert.

He also notices that it seems to be connected to a wire that has been attached to the wall. It leads up and behind a panel in the wall, above the clearance stripe.

?

Mick-R keeps his hand by the button as he looks at the duct. It seems to be made of the same metal sheets as other ducts he's seen. But before checking it out further, he presses the button again. It clicks.

Satisfied that the button continued to exist, he enters the duct. It, too, continues to exist, and doesn't seem to be imaginary.

Air duct, somewhere

Mick-R continues crawling away from the room. Behind him, an alarm begins to clamour. Additionally, from what he can see, the white walls suddenly change and fill with static.

But he ignores it. For some reason, he still thinks that he is dreaming and can affect the dream. Specifically, he tries to conjure up a high-clearance laser pistol out of nowhere. Nothing happens, of course.

written by Speeder on May 09, 2012 21:30

I poke the box with the spear, from far, and see if it does something. It not, only then I go see if I can remove the panel.

written by Gligar on May 09, 2012 22:31

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Pulling out his spear, Speed-Y pokes the box. If Cryo-R were here instead of idling in a confession booth in JHP Sector, he'd probably think that Speed-Y was poking the box pokingly. But he isn't. Not that it would make any difference, since the box doesn't respond.

Satisfied, Speed-Y investigates the panel. It's one of those POWER SERVICES ACCESS ONLY panels, with the yellow-and-black surround that makes most clones cross-eyed if they even think about looking at it. But that doesn't deter Speed-Y, who just dives right in and sets about removing it. And it doesn't take too long before the panel is on the floor and he's looking at a circuit board that looks to be a lesser distribution panel, complete with PowServ symbols.

written by Speeder on May 09, 2012 23:13

I take a mental note of what symbol the box is connected to. And what else is connected to those same symbols.

written by Cryoburner on May 10, 2012 01:10

"Thank you, computer! I appreciate having credits removed from my possession!"

I take my card back, hiding it securely in a pocket of my jumpsuit.

"Now. confess, confess... Ah yes, I must confess that while I did head to the confession booth here more or less immediately as you requested, I did pause a moment to examine some suspicious clones near the booth's entrance. They seemed to be watching the clones who were passing by a bit too closely. So I watched them even more closely in return, to see what they were up to. Their response was to watch me even more closely still. This leads me to believe that they might be pickpockets!"

written by Granpire viking man on May 10, 2012 03:04

I notice the soot covering everything.

"Grahhh! Get it off of me!"

I dash frantically into the garage, flailing my arms wildly.

Once inside, I try to brush off every single speck of it as quickly as I can.

written by Lightning4 on May 10, 2012 11:07

"Well... no other survivors... I think I want to go check the warbot again, if everyone else is up to it. That clone might need some assistance now if the warbot has been taken out."

I try to appraise the status of the warbot from my current position.

written by Malkom on May 10, 2012 16:18

Sighing, I continue through the duct, trying to convince myself that my nose is red. Once I get to the end, I very cautiously peek.

written by Gligar on May 10, 2012 18:46

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y traces the box's wire to a junction marked with a particular symbol. "That's the emergency light circuit, if I'm remembering right," Lucas-R tells him. "So why aren't he emergency lights themselves working? Were they disconnected?"

Speed-Y traces wires further, seeing what is connected to this circuit, apparently the one for the emergency lights. He discovers that several of the wires have been cut, and guess what circuit those are connected to...

Cryo-R's confession booth, Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Cryo-R retrieves his ME Card and gets on to his confession. He confesses to pausing briefly to scrutinise some clones outside the booth. He outlines how he believes that they're suspicious, and possibly pickpockets.

"Your suspicion may or may not be warranted, citizen!" Our Mutual Friend replies. "While it is possible that the clones standing near the confession booths may be suspicious, the fact remains that you may also be suspicious! Perhaps they are simply as suspicious of you as you are of them!"

"Unless, of course, you have proof that they may be committing treason by standing outside!"

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R runs inside, his arms flailing wildly. It seems that he is taking exception to all this soot, and is trying to remove it from his jumpsuit. Of course, all that soot has to go somewhere, like all over everything and everyone else.

[1053]

L4-O stands in the door and reports that there are no other survivors that he can see. He suggests that they go and check out the warbot again, since Sven-O might need assistance now that the warbot is out of commission.

If it is.

He looks through the smog and can make out the looming form of the warbot in the distance. It doesn't seem to be moving.

Air duct, somewhere

Mick-R continues on, trying to will himself into believing that his nose is red, until he comes to a junction, where air ducts extend off in all directions. And I do mean all directions. Some of them seem to be occupied.

written by Speeder on May 10, 2012 19:03

"So...

They attached the boxes to the emergency lights, and sabotaged the emergency lights, so that in a emergency the zombies happen...

Zombies, in dark places... convenient if you ask me. Almost like a vidshow..

You know, like Zombie Apocalypse 924...

I wonder when Zombie Apocalypse 1 was shown, probably before Alpha Complex existed... But it is so much FUN this movie series, no wonder the original had 923 sequels."

I attempt to figure what sort of tool was used to cut the wires, and in how haste the saboteur was.

written by Granpire viking man on May 10, 2012 21:21

"Taken out?" I ask L4-O, "I think the only thing that could take out a warbot is another warbot."

written by Lightning4 on May 10, 2012 21:25

"Well, in this case, yeah. The warbot might've burned itself out with that gigantic beam. It was already malfunctioning pretty badly..."

"I can't tell if it's still active from here or not... and I'm kind of hesitant to get any closer..."

written by Jam on May 10, 2012 21:33

I snap out of a daze.

"So! As I was saying—"

I stop suddenly, and look around...

"Uh, guys? Where am I? And where'd everyclone go? Hello?"

written by Gligar on May 10, 2012 23:46

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y summarises: the boxes were attached to the emergency light circuit, and the lights themselves were disconnected. So, when the lights were activated, the zombies happened. (But why didn't the lights activate as soon as the power went out? PowServ Directive #489496-4832(x), that's why.)

This causes Speed-Y to go off on a tangent about the Zombie Apocalypse series of vidfilms... specifically 924. As you'll recall, 924 has a similar plot... hmmm...

Speed-Y briefly wonders when Zombie Apocalypse 1 was first shown, then realises that he's probably too low a clearance to know. Not that it matters, as it was apparently so popular that they're still making sequels!

Anyway, back to the sabotage. Speed-Y realises that the wires seem to have been snapped outwards, as if they were cut with a knife. It seems that whoever did it was in a hurry, as well.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R finds L4-O's statement hard to believe? A warbot... taken out? Last he heard, the only thing that could take out a warbot was another warbot...

L4-O admits that, but states that it kind of happened. He's not certain and doesn't really want to get closer to verify it, but it appears that the warbot has burned itself out after malfunctioning and causing that huge plasma beam.

Near Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y suddenly snaps out of a daze, and realises that he is back near Building 3. He doesn't know why. All he knows is that there is a pile of dead zombies nearby, and that there are tracks headed back in the direction of Building 2.

written by Granpire viking man on May 11, 2012 01:16

"Well, we survived its attack last time. Just don't hug it again, and we should be alright."

"Or maybe... The only way to destroy it is with hugs? Could it be?"

written by Cryoburner on May 11, 2012 09:20

"Perhaps I should watch them some more. I could watch them until they start removing items from other clones pockets. Then I'll know they're pickpockets for sure!"

written by Lightning4 on May 11, 2012 11:13

"Well, we can go check it out. That, or we can go see what Speed-Y is up to..."

I turn to Jam-Y.

"Call is yours, I guess, sir."

written by Speeder on May 11, 2012 13:26

"Alright, those wires were cut in a hurry by someone probably not really qualified, but that knew the power services code.

This means that there are a power services traitor, and I am not saying that just because I am tech services...

I think I should report this..."

[1054]

I look for a camera.

"ALPHA COMPLEX ADMINISTRATION ASSISTANCE COMPUTER, ARE YOU THERE AND AVAILABLE? I HAVE A REPORT TO DO!"

written by Gligar on May 11, 2012 17:26

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

King-R argues that they survived the warbot's attack last time, so as long as they don't try to hut it again, they should be fine.

Although... what if that hug was the only thing that can destroy a warbot? Hmm...

L4-O replies that they could go check it out... or they could go and join Speed-Y. He turns to Jam-Y... only to discover that he isn't here.

Cryo-R's confession booth, Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Cryo-R suggests that he could continue to watch then until they do do something... then he'd know for sure.

"Are you telling me, then, that you do not have proof of their alleged activities?! Are you also suggesting that I am incapable of monitoring every citizen in this Complex myself?! Then, you are committing treason twice over! Give me one good reason why I should permit you to continue existing, given that you have committed treason!!"

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y surmises that whoever cut the wires was not qualified, and was probably a traitor to Power Services - and he's not just saying that as a member of Tech.

He attempts to alert Our Mutual Friend - but does not get a reply.

written by Speeder on May 11, 2012 18:14

I * FRUMPLE * and get my PDA.

I think a bit. Then I think a bit more.

Then I decide to send a message.

written by Jam on May 11, 2012 20:55

I follow the tracks, hoping they'll lead to Nukabot and the others...

written by Lightning4 on May 11, 2012 22:03

"Where did-"

I peek out the garage door to see if I can spot Jam-Y.

"Wonder how that happened..."

written by Gligar on May 11, 2012 22:18

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y... er, I can't make out that expression.

But it seems that he still wants to make that report, since he pulls out his PDC and thinks.

After a while, he sends a message.

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O wonders where Jam-Y went, and how he failed to notice that. Curious, he looks outside again and, peering through the smog, he can make out what seems to be a YELLOW clone walking towards the building. As it approaches, L4-O can make out that it's Jam-Y.

written by Lightning4 on May 12, 2012 00:05

As soon as Jam-Y gets close enough, I immediately subject him to a barrage of words.

"Ah! Sorry sir, I guess we lost you... we're trying to decide where to go now. We can either check on the status of the warbot, if it's disabled, the Armed Forces may need some assistance keeping the perimeter..."

"That or we can try to find Speed-Y... he may or may not need our help."

written by Jam on May 12, 2012 01:34

"Oh, I thought I was the one that lost you guys! Huh..."

I take a few secondcycles to decide what to do next...

"How about we start walking towards the warbot, and call Speed-Y on the way to check up on him. And if we find any more survivors along the way, even better!"

written by Kristos on May 12, 2012 02:16

I exit the booth, and situate myself at a convenient out-of-the-way location; preferably a nearby dark corner. After a quick look at everything around me, I begin observing the pack of clones with a gaze that could melt adamantylke plating if I was a mutant.

written by Malkom on May 12, 2012 05:28

I hurry into an unoccupied vent as quickly and silently as possible, hoping it will lead me to a weapons storeroom or cloning station or something equally useful. Or better yet, into a room of unactivated warbots!

written by Speeder on May 12, 2012 14:34

I smile, and continue fiddling with the PDC, looking at some pictures on the screen.

After I am sure I remember them well, I take a look on the panel again, and where the cables are seemly going.

Also I see if on this panel there are a port to a Power Services computer that controls energy distribution.

written by Cryoburner on May 12, 2012 15:01

"Oh, don't worry! Certainly, you are most qualified at observing clones! I was simply suggesting that I could assist with observing them from another angle. Maybe they would even try to pick my pocket, in which case I would be on hand to intervene directly! I suppose it might be more efficient if I were to just get on with my existing mission and leave the monitoring of suspicious clones up to you though."

I take a moment to examine the cleanliness of the confession booth interior.

written by Gligar on May 12, 2012 18:41

Garage, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As soon as Jam-Y gets in range, L4-O starts talking at him. He apologises for the team losing him, and outlines their possible paths: either they could check on the warbot, or they could check on Speed-Y.

Jam-Y, who thought that he lost them, takes a few moments before replying. He suggests that they do both: they can head towards the warbot, while calling Speed-Y to discover his progress. And who knows, they might find some more survivors...

Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

The loitering clones are still discussing Cryo-R when Kris-R steps out of his booth, unscathed. One of them glances at him and mutters, "I believe that's sixty credits you guys owe me."

Kris-R looks for an out-of-the-way spot and finds one, next to a vendobot that looks to have not seen maintenance in a while. There, he has a look around before fixing his gaze on the pack of clones. Several of them are handing plasticreds to the first clone, having apparently lost a bet.

Cryo-R is nowhere to be seen. Kris-R guesses that he might have entered a booth, maybe, possibly, maybe?

Cryo-R's confession booth, Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Cryo-R admits that The Computer is well qualified to monitor citizens, and suggests that he could also monitor the. Perhaps they might attempt to pick his pocket. But in the meantime, he could simply continue with his mission.

"Of course I am qualified! Who do you think owns the cameras?! Certainly not you! You are fined 300 further credits for your transgression! You must pay this fine within static hourcycles or face summary termination!"

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y fiddles with his PDC, apparently pleased at something. Then he looks at the panel, and determines that the cables lead to a big mess of wires somewhere behind the panel.

Finally, he looks for a data port or something. He doesn't find one, but he does spot what appears to be the antenna of an access point.

Air ducts, somewhere

Mick-R picks one direction on impulse and follows it, until he reaches a grate. On the other side appears to be a warehouse.

written by Speeder on May 12, 2012 19:07

I start to fiddle with the PDC trying to connect to the access point... doing everything that I can if needed.

written by Lightning4 on May 12, 2012 21:53

"Good idea! Let's go then... and figure out who's calling Speed-Y. I guess I could."

I start walking towards the warbot and pull out my PDC, and try to call Speed-Y right away.

written by Jam on May 12, 2012 22:32

I follow L4-O, making sure to keep a look out for survivors, zombies, or warbots.

written by Gligar on May 12, 2012 22:55

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Spotting what seems to be an access point, Speed-Y decides to try and connect to it.

Lucas-R looks concerned. "Sir... are you sure you want to mess with that?"

He's able to get it to respond. It seems that it's part of a Power Services subnet, and is, naturally, protected. Apparently, it needs Ancillary Clearance PowServ-Gamma.

Before he can investigate further, his PDC begins to ring.

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As it happens, it's L4-O. He's heading out towards the warbot, with the rest of the team in tow. Behind him, Jam-Y looks out for signs of... well, anything, really. The only thing he can see is the big warbot looming ahead.

written by Speeder on May 12, 2012 22:58

I look at Lucas.

"Just in case it was left without security... Sometimes PowerServices do that... And then I would be learn a few stuff. Only Yellow clearance of course..."

I disconnect from the access point and attend to the PDC ringing.

written by Kristos on May 13, 2012 05:29

Perceiving the situation, I approach the clone that won the bet.

"Hello, my name is Kris-R. I am on special observation duty, so I would like to ask you a few questions. What is your name? Where are you from? What is your duty? Why did you wager that I would leave the booth in good condition?"

I ready my PDC to note down the clone's response.

written by Lightning4 on May 13, 2012 09:47

If Speed-Y successfully answers, I start speaking right away.

"Good to hear from you, sir. Any new information from what you're doing? And do you need any assistance? We're nearby, we did a sweep for survivors, but there aren't any more Junior Citizens. We did get a few survivors from Building 3 though..."

"We're just going to check up on the warbot at the perimeter, it may not be functioning anymore, so we may be needed to guard there... possibly..."

written by Cryoburner on May 13, 2012 17:06

I reinsert my ME card into the slot.

"It's always great to perform transactions with the computer!"

While waiting for credits to be deducted, I continue examining the cleanliness of the confession booth interior.

written by Gligar on May 13, 2012 18:49

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks at Lucas-R and tells him that he was simply checking to see if it was unsecured, something that Power Services does from time to time. If it were, he could have learned something.

He disconnects, and answers his PDC. It's L4-O, who asks for a quick status report, and gives one of his own. He tells Speed-Y that they are on their way to the checkpoint. Now that the warbot has apparently been neutralised, their help may be needed.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

As the team approaches, they can see that the warbot seems to be giving off copious amounts of smoke. All hatches are open, and a couple of clones are trying to make their way out while simultaneously trying to deal with the smoke. (And King-R thought the smog was bad enough...)

Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Kris-R approaches the wager-winner and asks a few questions. "Well well well... additional duty, eh? Alright then, why not? I'm Stu-R-JHP-2, I'm with PLC, and me and my friends like to watch mutants get zapped. I didn't think you were a mutant, though, and neither does Our Friend. So you must be okay. Can't say much about your companion, though."

Cryo-R's confession booth, Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

His companion is still busy, what with the new fine. He re-inserts his ME Card and waits. While he waits, he notices that a fine grey powder is covering every surface inside the booth.

Shortly, the Computer replies, "You have insufficient credits to pay this fine! Remember, you have static hourcycles to pay the fine, or you will be subject to summary termination!"

written by Speeder on May 08, 2012 13:29

Seriously, I cannot stop laughing every time in the last few turns that I read what Cryo and Kristos are doing...

The conversations with Friend Computer (among others) is absolutely hilarious.

Something in the booth begins to hum.

written by Malkom on May 13, 2012 21:31

Ah, a warehouse. Splendid. This grate however... unfortunately less so. I feel in my pockets for a PDA, a wrench, or even a humble screwdriver. Why didn't I think to steal one earlier? It'd sure come in handy now. Or, knowing my luck, it probably wouldn't.

With what I find, or more likely what I don't, I attempt to remedy the grate situation.

written by Gligar on May 13, 2012 23:06

An equally-perplexing location

"Sir... there's a problem."

"What's up?"

"We're getting a negative response on the brainscrub... it's like he's rejecting it."

"Okay then... I bet it's not thye only thing he's rejecting. Go deeper. But remember that we've been forbidden from terminating him."

"Sir?"

"Regulation 443-16bs. It's out of my control. Just do it."

Air duct, near a warehouse

Mick-R sees the grate and searches for something to take care of it.

He finds... nothing.

Regardless, he attacks the grate... to find that he really needn't have bothered. Apparently, the grate was so loose that it falls off as soon as he touches it.

He fails to notice that the grate is starting to vanish into darkness.

written by Jam on May 14, 2012 01:41

I wait for L4-O's report on Speed-Y.

written by Speeder on May 14, 2012 02:12

"Hello L4

Alright... I am investigating, we will never finish this mission doing only contingency, but good work.

What I found so far is that Power Services has a traitor... Power Services and Tech Services use notation that is unknown to each other, and also that is unknown in other sectors... But whoever did the sabotage and installation of the nanites, knew this sector Power Services code, meaning that someone from Power Services in this sector, is a traitor and is leaking out Power Services information or actively helping in treasonous activities.

[1057]

I will now see if I can figure how the nanites are controlled, somehow...

I am thinking in how to do that without committing treason by accident.

You do a physical sweep, to locate the operator of the nanites physically, there must be one, or at least some machine to oversee it, or some person overseeing the operation, but I very much doubt they just spread the gas and left everything running by itself, if they have a objective, they have someone, or something, working on it."

written by Kristos on May 14, 2012 02:57

"Hmm... most interesting. Thank you for your cooperation, Stu-R."

I enter abbreviated notes into my PDC.

"Cryo-R? You have seen him? We are on a mission. I need to find him as soon as possible so we can return to our tasks."

written by Malkom on May 14, 2012 04:05

"I'm feeling dizzy... hold on, hold oooooonnnn, I need aaairrrrrr..."

I plunge through the hole, shoving out huge amounts of air and gasping in as much as I can.

written by Lightning4 on May 14, 2012 08:09

"Hm. Good plan. I'll have to keep my eyes out then... but I haven't seen anyone suspicious for a while. If I may state my opinion, they may have already left the Industrial Subsector... I certainly wouldn't want to stay in the buildings after triggering something like this. And I think the tampering had already occurred before we arrived... so... well, I guess I'll just keep my eyes out. I can only hope such a clone is still in the area, and not elsewhere doing those... treasonous things."

I continue to approach the warbot cautiously, but I glance around occasionally to see if there's anyone else around that is either a survivor, treasonous person, or treasonous unperson.

written by Gligar on May 14, 2012 18:35

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y waits for L4-O to give him a rundown on Speed-Y's status.

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y tells L4-O that he is investigating things. He has discovered that there is a traitor in Power Services... one who knows the local PowServ codes. This traitor is either providing information about codes or is actively helping the traitors. His next step will be to figure out if the nanomachines are being controlled remotely... if he can find a non-treasonous way to do that. He suggests that the rest of the team continue their sweep, and look out for any sign of a nanomachine controller. After all, if they've gone to the trouble of spreading the gas around, there must be a reason for it...

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O approves, but notes that he hasn't seen anyone suspicious for a while. He believes that any suspicious types may have slipped through the cracks and left the Industrial Subsectors. And since the tampering occurred before they got there... the only thing he can do is keep his eyes open.

He and the rest of the team approach the warbot. It seems that the warbot is indeed inert, and is smoking from every... everything. It must have really overloaded itself.

Soldiers are clustered around it, trying to rescue their squadmates from the smoky interior. It's clear that they're not having much luck. Only a few have made it out.

Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Kris-R thanks Stu-R, and makes some notes. He then asks about Cryo-R. "Is that his name? Yeah, I've seen him. He entered a confession booth not long after you did. He stared at us the whole time. He had this creepy stare, like he could see right through us or something... almost... inhuman. I've got 20 credits on him not coming out."

Warehouse

Suddenly overcome by dizziness, Mick-R dives into the warehouse, gasping for air.

His mind clears somewhat (not enough to notice that the air duct is now... gone) and he notices that, as well as being RED, the warehouse is full of boxes.

written by Lightning4 on May 14, 2012 23:40

"Let's help them!"

I start jogging up, and lend any assistance I can in getting the remaining clones out.

written by Gligar on May 14, 2012 23:54

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O decides to offer the team's assistance in rescuing clones from the warbot's interior.

Together, the team is able to rescue two more clones: Sven-O and another. But not without inhaling some of the acrid smoke from inside the thing.

written by Kristos on May 15, 2012 00:29

"Yes, that is definitely Cryo-R! The most observational clone in all of Alpha Complex! He is an incredible asset to this mission, so if he won't come out, I guess I'll just have to go and get him."

[1058]

I walk up to a confession booth and call out, loudly, "CRYO-R! ARE YOU IN THERE? WE NEED TO RETURN TO OUR MISSION! HURRY UP AND FINISH YOUR BUSINESS..."

written by Granpire viking man on May 15, 2012 01:44

I pull out my trusty hygiene cloth to keep my lungs clean of acrid smoke, while trying to use my free hand to somehow assist the others.

written by Cryoburner on May 15, 2012 01:57

"Oh, good! I lack sufficient funds, meaning I'll have to acquire some! That sounds like great fun!"

I retrieve my ME Card and begin marching in place, preparing to leave. I take a moment to note where the humming is coming from. Hopefully, it is the kind of humming consistent with a properly functioning confession booth, and not the kind of humming consistent with a booth that has been tampered with.

written by Jam on May 15, 2012 02:33

I also try to assist in any way possible.

written by Lightning4 on May 15, 2012 12:48

After an attempt at expelling the smoke from my lungs, as long and as loud as necessary, I try to assist any remaining clones in getting out of the warbot.

At which point I likely cough some more.

written by Speeder on May 15, 2012 13:38

I blink... blink blink

"L4 what are you doing right now? I mean, why you are coughing a lot?"

written by Malkom on May 15, 2012 18:05

I keep gulping air and concentrating on existence.

When possible, I read the labels of the boxes, then open one that looks promising (PDAs or laser pistols would be sweet right now, but so would unconsciousness-staving-off meds. Knowing me, I'll find prosthetic fingernails or something bloody stupid like that...)

written by Gligar on May 15, 2012 18:39

Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Recognising the description of Cryo-R, Kris-R goes to look for him.

He does this by walking up to a random confession booth.

Which opens as he approaches, revealing Cryo-R.

He proceeds to tell Cryo-R, rather loudly, that he should finish up his business as they have a mission to complete.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

The team continues helping with rescuing soldiers from the hulk of the warbot:

King-R covers his mouth with a cloth before getting stuck in. Her quickly realises that he would need both hands to help. He learns this when a hatch closes on his free hand. Had he had both hands free, he could have held the hatch open.

Jam-Y reaches through an open hatch and manages to pull someone out. The someone falls to the ground, unconscious.

L4-O nearly coughs up a lung before diving back in. He is unable to find any more survivors, but he does repeat his coughing fit.

Corridor 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Of course, Speed-Y can hear all this through his PDC, and wants to know what's going on.

Warehouse

Mick-R, who continues to exist, starts reading boxes. Hmmm... balls of twine, duct tape, copperlyke piping, screwdrivers with unusual heads, power cells, ultracapacitors...

written by Jam on May 15, 2012 21:15

I drag the clone away from the warbot and the smoke, and check for signs of life.

If the clone seems to be alive, I check the clone's clearance and attempt to wake him up.

written by Gligar on May 15, 2012 22:17

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y proceeds to drag his survivor away from the smoke, and checks him. He's ORANGE, and seems to be unconscious, but Jam-Y seems unable to wake him.

written by Cryoburner on May 15, 2012 23:46

I check whether or not I have retrieved my ME card yet. If not, I continue retrieving it, until it is fully retrieved. I then exit the confession booth.

Upon noticing the clones outside, I begin staring at them intently, noting any signs that they may or may not be pickpockets.

written by Granpire viking man on May 16, 2012 02:08

I muffle a cry behind my cloth, and try to pull my hand out of the hatch, looking over it to make sure it isn't broken.

I stuff the cloth into my mouth (but not my throat), so I can have both hands free, breath safely, and try opening the hatch. I enter the hatch and try to pull out a survivor.

written by Lightning4 on May 16, 2012 03:12

I cough a bit more then realize my PDC is still talking to me.

"Oh, sorry sir, I forgot to close the line. cough"

"We arrived at the warbot guarding the perimeter. It's definitely out of commission. cough. We were assisting in the rescue of clones inside... so much smoke... cough cough"

"We got them though."

I back away from the warbot and try to assess how many clones have been pulled from it against my knowledge of how many clones normally make up the crew of a warbot.

written by Malkom on May 16, 2012 16:07

“SCREWDRIVERSH! YEAH, baby!! Now I can do some real SCIEEEENCE!!!”

I open the box(es) unless they're taped shut or something take one of each kind of screwdriver and stow them in my jumpsuit. Then I have a Thought.

I try to get my hands on some copperlyke piping, some power cells, and some ultracapacitors. And a ball of twine and some duct tape, if possible.

Once this is done, I take my twine and attempt to secure as many ultracapacitors on one end of the piping as I can manage, and then, setting it on the floor, form a circuit between the power cell and the capacitors using the pipe, and stand well back.

If nothing happens, I add several more power cells...

If nothing still happens, I give up and scrounge around for some wire. Surely some electronilyke cabling should be lying around, given what I've seen so far.

written by Gligar on May 16, 2012 18:56

Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Having retrieved his ME Card, Cryo-R pushes past Kris-R and walks out of the confession booth. Apparently, he had failed to notice that he had already retrieved his ME Card.

He does notice Stu-R and the other clones, though. Once again, he regards them suspiciously. “Vat it,” Stu-R mutters. “He’s still alive. That means... he’s not a mutant? Unless... wait, isn’t there a kind of mutation that can block out other mutations? I heard someone say something on a vidshow once...”

He fumbles for his PDC and takes a picture.

The others perform similar, non-pickpocketlyke actions.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

King-R lets out a muffled yell and yanks his hand loose of the hatch. It’s bleeding and feels broken.

He stuffs the cloth into his mouth and dives into the warbot. His search, however, proves fruitless. However, he does notice that not only has his cloth accumulated a thin layer of soot, but that it is extremely difficult to breathe through the wadded-up cloth. He’d have to breathe through his nose.

L4-O realises that his PDC is still connected and apologises to Speed-Y, giving him a quick run-down of what’s happening with the warbot, before backing away and making a quick count of the survivors. From his experience with warbots, he notes that there appears to be four missing out of the warbot’s crew.

Warehouse

Mick-R looks at the supplies and eagerly opens the boxes, retrieving approximately 30 kinds of screwdriver, most of which are above his security clearance. He also retrieves a bunch of other things.

A light fixture goes on in his head.

He begins to lay out a crude circuit with his new-found supplies, with a bunch of ultracapacitors, a pipe, and a power cell. Nothing happens, so he adds more.

Just ONE pipe, you’ll notice.

This means that, when he attaches the power cells, he shorts then out.

After the sixth, BANG! He is thrown against the wall.

written by Speeder on May 16, 2012 19:16

“Whoa, how inefficient... Massacrebot could do some hell of a kick with only one pilot... Granted it probably needed a very good pilot, or it was useless...”

Also it did not had that plasma thing, although as we just learned, it is definitively single shot.”

I look at Lucas.

“The warbot is dead. So you want to go there help them, or stay with me and investigate? I think I will need to do some... you know... fiddling... with powerservices stuff... nothing treasonous I hope.”

written by Malkom on May 16, 2012 21:11

I pick myself up, feeling my pockets for the screwdrivers.

Once I’ve recollected any I lost, I try to ascertain what exploded - the capacitor? The power cell?

written by Jam on May 16, 2012 21:35

“Did we get everyclone?”

I try to use my Mind Sense powers to see if there is anyclone left in the warbot, and where they are in the bot.

written by Gligar on May 16, 2012 22:38

Corridor 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y comments at how inefficient the warbot seems. After al, look what Massacrebot was able to do with just the one pilot...

“I hope they make another Massacrebot,” Lucas-R says. “I kinda want to have another go at piloting one.”

Speed-Y adds that the warbot is inoperative, so if Lucas-R wants to go and help out there, he can do so. Speed-Y wants to do some... fiddling... with the panel... nothingtreasonousofcourse. “Oh, sure,” Lucas-R replies. “I mean, the zombies have calmed down now, right?” He starts heading back towards the lift.

[1060]

Warehouse

Mick-R picks himself up and checks himself over. Nothing serious. More importantly, his screwdrivers are all there.

He has a look at his circuit. It seems that, when he shorted out the power packs, they heated up, causing them to violently disassemble themselves.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y wonders if that's all of the warbot's crew...

He has a mental look inside, but can only find one mind in the vicinity of where King-R entered the bot.

written by Speeder on May 16, 2012 23:07

As Lucas walk away I comment.

"I wish they made a series of them, but at least one of them having a copy of the one that worked with me... He was so... FUN and nice. I loved how it went 'yip yip' when stuff exploded. And it also must have been happy to have died in BLAAAAAZING GLOOOOORY!!! if you take my drift."

I then return to stare to the power services panel, STARE HARD, like if it would do anything to it.

written by Lightning4 on May 16, 2012 23:28

I finish up my call.

"Don't worry, sir... you should probably keep doing what you're doing there. Maybe you'll get some more information there. I think we have enough clones here to provide covering fire if any zombies come by... so far, nothing."

I look around.

"Anyway, I should end the call. Good luck, sir."

I close the connection, let loose a few suppressed coughs, and speak to the group in general.

"Shouldn't there be four more? Where are the rest..."

written by Granpire viking man on May 17, 2012 02:57

I decide to keep the cloth in my mouth. It's always nice to have something to bite down on when bones are broken.

Of course, I breathe through my nose now to catch my breath, but I try to duck underneath the smoke and make my back toward Jam-Y.

"Jam-Y, you have medical training, don't you?" I ask, after spitting out the cloth and holding out my hand.

written by Jam on May 17, 2012 03:25

I answer L4-O first.

"I'm only sensing one mind in there, and I'm pretty sure it's King-R. I guess the others must not have made it. Oh, speaking of King-R..."

I turn to King-R.

"Yes I do! Or, at least, I half do... I haven't finished that course yet..."

I try to figure out how King-R's hand is injured and if I have the necessary supplies and skills to treat the injury.

written by Gligar on May 17, 2012 18:46

Corridor 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As Lucas-R re-enters the lift, Speed-Y reminisces on Massacrebot... it would be nice to see more ArmourBots, but a copy of Massacrebot would be especially welcome.

He then turns to the Power Services panel and glares at it.

The access point blinks at him.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O finishes up with the PDC call, telling Speed-Y that he should continue what he's doing up there and possibly gain information maybe? Meanwhile, they have enough clones here to mount an adequate defence should it be needed.

He turns his attention back to the group and asks about the four missing soldiers from the warbot. Jam-Y replies that he's only finding a mind that is most likely King-R... look, there he is now.

King-R has exited the warbot and is biting down on his cloth. Seeing Jam-Y, he spits it out and asks for treatment.

Jam-Y decides to have a look. the hand is bleeding and some of the bones are broken, consistent with having a heavy hatch close on it. He could most likely treat it with the supplies he has left.

written by Gligar on May 17, 2012 22:59

An equally-perplexing location

"Sir, he's... responding... to something."

"Responding to what? The drugs?"

"I'm not sure. It's almost like he's happy about something."

"Well, we want him to be happy. But what about the brainscrub?"

"Proceeding. We're at 21.43% scrub."

"Hmmm... maybe we need to speed it up. Add 10% more zataproximetacine."

"Don't you mean 'it', sir?"

"Oh yes, of course... they change the name so often that I keep losing track."

JHT Sector Central Compnode, V Level, Central Subsector

"Right. That's enough of that script for now. Anything to report?"

"Yes. A Code Three-Zed situation is underway in the Industrial Subsectors."

"WHAT?! I explicitly specified that subcode Zed is a priority event! Why was I not notified?"

"The matter is being dealt with, High Programmer. And besides, you did not ask about priority events."

*"sigh Did you forget the definition of 'priority event' again? Here, let me see to that..."*

written by Speeder on May 17, 2012 23:14

I blink at the blinking light.

I take out my PDC to connect to it again, going on from where I left last time... You know, some things ARE left on the default settings...

written by Lightning4 on May 18, 2012 00:21

I start looking in the distance again. Surely this zombie-free period won't last for long...

I do address the tankbot crew though, while doing that.

"Any casualties? I'm seeing there might be four missing clones, unless you were operating below normal crew limits..."

written by Malkom on May 18, 2012 01:10

I look for wire and try to wire the capacitors to the power cells, whistling blithely. "Oh, there was a jackobot in a field of sludge, too-da-ley toodalo de day..."

written by Jam on May 18, 2012 01:40

I begin to treat King-R's hand...

"Hey L4-O, what did Speed-Y have to say? Is he and Lucas-R alright?"

written by Gligar on May 18, 2012 18:40

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y stares at the access point some more, and decides to give connecting to it another go. It seems that some things are left on default...

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O looks into the distance, a little worried. They've been zombie-free for a rather long time now...

Or maybe they're all trapped in other buildings?

Regardless, he looks at the warbot crew. Some of them seem to have recovered somewhat from their ordeal. He asks them about the apparent missing crew members. "That's not good news," Sven-O replies. "If they didn't make it..."

Meanwhile, Jam-Y is treating King-R's hand. He asks L4-O for a report on what Speed-Y's doing, and inquires about him and Lucas-R.

Warehouse

Undeterred, Mick-R huntas around for some wire. He finds some cheap thin wire... that'll do, right?

He sets about hooking up those ultracapacitors to his remaining power packs. There is a faint whine as he connects them.

written by Speeder on May 18, 2012 18:50

I smile, and start fiddling.

written by Cryoburner on May 18, 2012 20:11

I continue watching the clones. I'm sure they'll do something pickpocketlyke any moment now. To make sure I don't miss anything, I move closer to them, then closer still, all while continuing to watch for anything suspicious.

written by Lightning4 on May 18, 2012 22:25

"He didn't mention Lucas-R, I assume he's okay."

I lower my voice so hopefully only Jam-Y can hear.

"He says Power Services may have a traitor. There was sabotage at the power room for Building 2. He suspects the nanites are controlled by someone, who may still be relatively close."

My voice returns to normal.

"That's all he said."

written by Gligar on May 18, 2012 23:24

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y smiles. It seems that he is making progress.

If only my main cameras were online in that subsector...

Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Cryo-R continues his observation of the clones. He moves closer, and closer again, so that he is almost breathing down their necks.

"Hey, clone, there's no need to do that," Stu-R tells him. "We're not mutants. Are you? You're creeping me out like one..."

At that, Stu-R's friends start pulling out laser pistols. "You've got five secondcycles to back away, or me and my friends here will open up a few new holes in you."

Roadway, JHP Sector

L4-O reports that Speed-Y didn't mention Lucas-R. Probably a good sign.

In a quieter voice, he relays Speed-Y's suspicions about the Power Services traitor and the nanomachines.

written by Malkom on May 18, 2012 23:53

I stand well back, watching apprehensively and touching the handle of one of my screwdrivers.

written by Jam on May 19, 2012 03:25

I whisper back to L4-O...

"Well, if there is a traitor in Power Services, we'll probably run into him soon... Remember, don't trust anyclone."

I frown, and look at Sven-O.

"If they died, they've probably become zombies by now. Make sure you be careful if you see them walking around, and check to make sure they're actually alive before getting too close..."

[1062]

written by Lightning4 on May 19, 2012 05:04

"Well, if they never went into the buildings, they shouldn't be zombies. I think. It's that blue gas that causes it."

I look a little skeptical for a moment.

"I think."

written by Speeder on May 19, 2012 11:15

I frown at the suddenly non-responding properly PDC and run the same thing I did last time again.

"Common! Let's find out this traitor!"

written by Kristos on May 19, 2012 14:45

"Thank you for your information and cooperation, Stu-R! We are pleased that you are not mutants. I will report this to my superiors, and they will be pleased that you are not mutants! But, for now, we have other tasks to tend to. Good day!"

I drag Cryo-R away while attempting to type notes into my PDC about EVERYTHING. If only I had a voice recorder... Corridor J2-05... Hmm...

written by Gligar on May 19, 2012 18:29

Warehouse

Mick-R steps back slightly, his hand resting on one of his (many) screwdrivers.

The wires begin to smoke, and the capacitors continue to whine.

Soon, the whine goes away, and the capacitors, too, begin to smoke. Wow, they must be draining the power packs! Those things are supposed to last several yearcycles!

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y replies that, if that is the case, they'll be running into a traitor soon.

Turning to Sven-O, he tells him that the 4 missing crewmembers are probably zombies by now, so... be careful.

L4-O isn't so sure. If they never entered the buildings, then they shouldn't be. It's the blue gas that causes zombies... right?

Right?

Almost as if in answer, there is some clunking from inside the warbot.

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

It seems that Speed-Y has run into a few difficulties with his investigations, as the access point stubbornly refuses to divulge any secrets.

He keeps trying.

I kind of get the feeling that his activities might be logged...

Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Kris-R thanks Stu-R and begins dragging Cryo-R away from the group. They remain where they are, watching as Cryo-R is pulled away.

Meanwhile, Kris-R tries to make notes on everything they said, while wishing that he had a voice recorder. Well, he has two options: he could use Cryo-R's loyalty transcripts recorder (if he had the key) or he could see if there's one available from PLC or one of the auction sites.

written by Gligar on May 19, 2012 23:08

Warehouse

One of the capacitors suddenly, and rather forcibly, detaches itself from the circuit and embeds itself in the warehouse ceiling.

written by Lightning4 on May 19, 2012 23:27

"I don't suppose someone has a grenade? That might get rid of the zombies... though I wonder what would happen with the warbot parts inside..."

"Or I could try a cone rifle shell... not sure what ones I have."

I rifle through my shells for something useful against zombies. Napalm? Explosion? Something other?

written by Cryoburner on May 20, 2012 00:19

I continue watching the clones while getting dragged away.

written by Malkom on May 20, 2012 05:54

"Wow!"

I keep standing back, pulling out a screwdriver and holding it in front of me, just in case.

written by Speeder on May 20, 2012 14:19

I attempt to retrieve more data, if I fail again I leave a note:

"This is Speed-Y of troubleshooter team Epsilon, your service group has a traitor that helped sabotage and setup a trap in the Industrial Subsector. If you come across this message and my logs, help me find this traitor, he must be interrogated. If you are the traitor... bad luck for me, but I suggest you at least erase my logs and this message, before someone figure out I am looking for you."

written by Gligar on May 20, 2012 18:22

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O wonders if anyone has a grenade. The warbot crew (those who are awake, at least) check themselves over... nope, it doesn't look like they have grenades on them.

L4-O also checks himself over, looking for something... a grenade, a cone rifle shell, anything!

He does find an explosive shell, but it's one of the damaged ones...

The sounds continue.

Behind the group, someone approaches.

Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Cryo-R still stares at the clones, even as he's being dragged away.

This makes a couple of them nervous. One clutches his head... "I can feel him! He's probing me!"

That's enough. The group aim their pistols again, and a couple fire!

Luckily, it seems that marksclonship isn't their strong point.

Kris-R continues dragging, until he finds a junction.

Warehouse

Pleased at the result, Mick-R continues watching, as the rest of the capacitors do the same. Even as he steps back, though, one of them decides to embed itself in his left hand.

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y continues fiddling, hoping to get some info...

Soon, he finds some.

He also triggers an alarm somewhere.

written by Lightning4 on May 20, 2012 22:37

I look at the explosive shell, then think about the multitude of weapons on the warbot.

I put the explosive shell away.

"Maybe that's not a good idea..."

written by Speeder on May 20, 2012 22:44

The alarm make me frantic on the work.

written by Malkom on May 20, 2012 22:58

"ARRRRRRRRGH!" I hop around, hitting at the capacitor with the screwdriver. I then grab it and yank it and throw it away and fall over moaning. Hopefully I wasn't fried by tremendous energy currents in the process.

written by Gligar on May 20, 2012 23:28

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O looks between the shell and the remains of the warbot, still bristling with potentially-explosive weaponry, and thinks better of it. Who knows what that warbot's still packing?

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y hurries up, trying frantically to get at something, before he is forcibly disconnected with a notice that Internal Security have been notified of his unauthorised access.

Treason point to Speeder!

Warehouse

Mick-R hops around, making lots of noise as he pulls the capaci-

ZAP

-as he pulls out the charged capacitor from where it embedded itself. He falls to the ground, twitching violently.

His noise also attracts attention: a door somewhere in the warehouse opens, and someone walks towards him. A voice angrily demands to know what is going on before its owner - a RED PLC worker, comes into view and stops, noticing Mick-R. She pulls out her PDC and requests a docbot.

written by Kristos on May 21, 2012 01:32

Yiy! I turn RIGHT at the junction. Or, if that is not possible, then LEFT. More to break Cryo-R's line of sight than to get out of eyesight of the firing clones, since that appears to be inciting their aggression.

"What treasonous clones! And RED too! I hope they make confessions of their treasonous activity soon. They are conveniently located for confessions, are they not? Hmm... Corridor J2-05..."

I look around, in a more observing-than-usual manner. Then I observe my thoughts about Cryo-R's observation to see what I am thinking.

written by Malkom on May 21, 2012 02:20

* twitch *

* twitch *

* twitch *

* twitch *

"What-what-wh-wh-w-w-w-wwwwwwwwww happenhaphaphppppppp?"

I try to stop my lips vibrating. My fingers twitch uncontrollably. My screwdriver is probably rather deformed, but whether or no - it's twitching. Guaranteed. As, I have no doubt, is my expression (heh... must be a sight), not to mention... oh yes, the capacitor. HEL sector, it's probably doing a bloody tap dance somewhere on the backside of eternity by now. So much energy! So much power! Wow! Wow! Wowwowwowwowwow...!

I pull myself out of the cyclic thought feedback loop and try to put a hand to my head. I end up patting myself on the head, of all the bloody stupid things I could be doing. Like some darned junior citizen. Though some of them are blasted fine hackers...

By the way.

"Where-wh-w-wwwwwwrrrrrrrwrwrwrwr ammmammamamam I-I-I?" I hiccup convulsively. "Heheheheheheeeellp-p-p..."

I try to get to my feet, but it's not likely. I suppose I'll end up heeling myself in the head or something.

written by Speeder on May 21, 2012 12:55

I am now worried, hectic and everyting else too.

written by Gligar on May 21, 2012 19:34

Junction G-5c, Corridor G7-45, JHP Sector

Kris-R glances at the junction and drags Cryo-R off to the right before he has to stop and catch his breath.

Corridor G6-61, JHP Sector

As he takes a couple of minutecycles to recover, he realises that the clones have not yet followed. He hopes that they will enter the confession booths themselves. But right now, he's more interested in trying to get to the corridor The Computer told him about. And looking around. As he looks around, he finds a Computer Terminal not far from here.

And since he's probably being rather observant, it should be pointed out that the corridor is RED, and is actually quite wide (though that makes sense when you remember the high population of the sector). There are the usual cameras and light fixtures, one of which, right next to an access panel, seems to require maintenance. Clones walk to and fro, regarding them, and everything else, with suspicion, on the off chance that a mutant might appear out of nowhere and try to... mutant at them.

He also notes that Cryo-R seems to still be staring the the same approximate direction, even though they've turned. It's almost as if he's observing the clones through the wall, and is quite unsettling.

Warehouse

Mick-R tries to control his twitching and ask where he is, but all that comes out is some stuttering. Everything he tries just compounds the problem.

The clone, however, understands that he needs help. "The docbot's on its way," she tells him. "What happened here? And how did you get in here? The door was locked."

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y begins to panic. What's happening what's happening what's happening...

written by Kristos on May 21, 2012 22:22

"Cryo-R, what are you doing?"

If I see any applicable forms of public transportation, I try to get a ride to corridor J2-05. At any rate, I check if the computer terminal is public and RED-clearance, then (if so) attempt to look up corridor J2-05.

written by Gligar on May 21, 2012 23:15

Corridor G6-61, JHP Sector

Kris-R wonders what Cryo-R is doing. But he still wants to get moving. Corridor J2-05 awaits.

Looking around again, Kris-R determines that there is no method of public transport available except for an escalator heading down.

He then heads to the terminal, which recognises his ME Card as he approaches, and configures itself for RED Clearance use. It permits him to enter a search query, which he does, and begins searching.

After a while, it returns with a list of results. The first page is a list of adverts, promoting products sold by vendobots and other things on Corridor J2-05. One such thing is the transtube station, of course.

Kris-R switches to the second page. He discovers that the corridor is somewhere below here.

written by Speeder on May 21, 2012 23:27

I start using my PDC so furiously that it will probably end hurting my fingers a bit.

written by Jam on May 22, 2012 02:26

I look at the remains of the warbot, and try to figure out how it's damaged.

written by Kristos on May 22, 2012 06:30

I drag Cryo-R onto the escalator and keep an eye or two out for overly-suspicious laser pistol pointing clones.

written by Lightning4 on May 22, 2012 14:20

I look around at the group, pondering the clones around, and pondering what might be in the warbot.

"I guess we... just wait here then."

"Hm."

written by Malkom on May 22, 2012 17:09

I blink twitchily. "I-I-I'm n-not sure. Th-think-thithithntknknknknknknkn I-I'm an elec-lec-lectric'n." I smile distantly. "Niceiceice screwdridridrivers."

written by Gligar on May 22, 2012 19:04

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y frantically does something to his PDC, not even noticing when a laser turret pops out of the ceiling.

He does notice the voice that suddenly speaks at him. "Citizen! You have accesses a restricted access point! Were you not aware that access requires TechServ-Gamma?"

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y looks at the ruined warbot. It is clear that something overloaded, but he can't tell what. From all the smoke, it looks like it might just be the entire power system that overloaded.

L4-O looks around at everyone, and at the warbot, and ponders what to do next. Wait? Figure out what's inside the warbot? (Speaking of which, a hatch just fell off.)

[1065]

From behind the warbot comes the sounds of clones arguing. It seems that a contingent of IntSec goons is trying to access the Industrial Subsectors.

The approaching clone reaches the group.

Escalator, Corridor G6-61, JHP Sector

Team Sigma boards the down escalator. Behind them, some clones can be heard running around. Noises also indicate that the clones have laser pistols.

Cryo-R continues to stare right behind them.

Warehouse

Mick-R claims that he isn't sure, but he might be Power Services... and says something about screwdrivers. "Yes," the clones says. "You do have a lot of screwdrivers. And I can't help but notice that a lot of them are beyond your security clearance. Now, why would that be? And why does your jumpsuit tell me that you're R&D, and not Power Services, if you're Power Services?"

Behind her, a bot enters the warehouse.

written by Cryoburner on May 22, 2012 19:26

"Hey, did you see the way those clones pulled those laser pointers out of their pockets? Almost exactly like a pickpocket would pull them out of another clone's pocket! Veery suspicious..."

I continue descending the escalator, staring in the direction of those clones.

written by Kristos on May 22, 2012 21:54

My eyes pop wide open, and I RUN down the escalator with Cryo-R. I hope our Mutual Friend can excuse my momentary drop in observation levels as I seek the nearest place to hide that doesn't look like a dead end. Though, if that fails, I find a dark corner or room that I am cleared to be in.

The lapse in observation allows my mind to realize that I am also in possession of a laser pistol. So I pull it out in case it should prove necessary to prevent another trip to the chemical showers. Yuck.

written by Gligar on May 22, 2012 22:38

Escalator, Between Corridors G6-61 and H5-84, JHP Sector

Cryo-R seems to believe that the way those clones whipped out their laser pistols is similar to how a pickpocket would pull something out of someone else's pocket. How would he know that? That's rather... suspicious to me.

It's apparently not lost on Kris-R either, who begins to run down the escalator, while still dragging Cryo-R with him. He seems anxious to avoid another run-in with the chemical showers.

Corridor H5-84, JHP Sector

While he's running, he suddenly remembers something: he has a laser pistol as well! He pulls it out.

Soon, though, he has to stop. There's a little rest area with a table and a couple of vendobots conveniently situated near a hygiene station, so he stops there to catch his breath.

written by Speeder on May 23, 2012 00:24

I look at the camera.

"Alright, I managed to get your attention.

Yes, I am aware, in fact I know I just made something illegal. But what I did is not treason, I did it because PowerServices has a traitor, and I need to find him, and undo his work. I tried to do a report, but it failed to go through.

If you still want terminate me, can you please leave the data on my PDC for the next clone? Or give me the data I need? Or somehow help me? I did it for the good of the mission."

I stand proudly in place and looking at the camera, not even flinching or demonstrating fear of the turret.

I do my best to show that I was fully aware of what I did, and that I knew what I was doing.

"Also, before doing whatever you decide with me, can I leave a priority message to this sector High Programmer?"

written by Lightning4 on May 23, 2012 00:30

I quickly react to the hatch falling off by raising my (currently unloaded) Turbo and aiming it at the warbot.

"Something is in there..."

written by Gligar on May 23, 2012 19:12

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y tries to regain his composure, and speak calmly as he tells The Computer that, though what he did is illegal, he believes that it is not treasonous. That's because there is a traitor in Power Services, and he wants to find out who it is, and undo his work. He attempted to report it earlier, but it did not get through.

He adds that if The Computer still wishes to terminate him, it may do so, but he requests that the information in his PDC be returned to him to allow him to continue his work. Or it could help in other ways. Or something. But before The Computer proceeds, he would like to leave a message for the High Programmer.

He then waits, seemingly unafraid and ready for what The Computer wants to do with him.

"So," Our Mutual Friend responds. "You have illegally accessed a file server and downloaded confidential files in order to determine the identity of a traitor. You contend that this is not treasonous. And, while I commend your diligence, I must disagree. The fact remains that you did access the access point without authorisation. An Official Reprimand will be placed on your permanent record. In addition, you will be placed on probation for a period of one monthcycle, and will be required to maintain contact with your probation officer. Further transgressions will result in more severe punishment.

“Your request to leave a message for the High Programmer is summarily denied. He is very busy, and I am sure you would not like to anger him unnecessarily. Thank you for your co-operation.”

The Computer falls silent, but the laser turret remains deployed.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O raises Turbo, and points it at the hatch. He knows that there is something in there.

Note, however, that he has not loaded Turbo.

The clone finally reaches the group, and clears his throat. It's Lucas-R. He approaches Jam-Y.

From out of the hatch falls... what's left of one of the missing crewmembers. Half of its flesh seems to have been burned off.

I'm sure I don't have to say that it's still moving. Wait... that would mean...

written by Speeder on May 23, 2012 21:37

“Alright. Then leave this message at your discretion, I assure that all that I will say now is true, I think you can calculate the importance of the message and relay if, if you think it is needed.

The message is:

The Industrial Subsector was attacked by a organization named something like Easter Cycle, they are seemly part of, allied, or related to Corpore Metal, the Industrial Subsector is sabotaged, and nanites have been deployed on it. A good programmer is needed to reverse engineer the nanites code, and discover their purpose, or if they are not autonomous, discover who is controlling them. Power Services is known to be compromised, clearance of the compromised clone or clones are unknown to me, but I think they are YELLOW and above. IntSec may be compromised too, because of how easily the compromised Power Services people could sabotage the facility. Also a Warbot malfunctioned, suggesting that whoever is doing this can sabotage or interfere with high powered Army equipment, thus again, someone that can program is involved.

Speed-Y from Team Epsilon out.

And Administration Computer, thank you for your services, and I will fully comply with your decision regarding my punishment.”

written by Jam on May 23, 2012 21:55

“Lucas-R! Hello! How are you?”

I turn to the hatch.

“Oh, a crewmember! Let's kill it!”

written by Gligar on May 23, 2012 23:29

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y leaves his message anyway, for The Computer to do with as it sees fit. “Your co-operation is appreciated,” it responds.

The laser turret goes offline.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y notices Lucas-R and greets him. “I'm fine, sir,” he replies, “but I think you should know, Speed-Y was... doing something to a Power Services access point. I'm not sure it was entirely non-treasonous.”

Jam-Y then turns his attention to the hatch, and the remains of the crewmember, and suggests that it be killed.

Well, considering that it's trying to pull itself to its feet, that might be an idea.

written by Lightning4 on May 24, 2012 00:04

I try to fire Turbo. To no effect, of course.

I then back away to let someone with actual weapons get the job done. Hopefully there are some...

written by Malkom on May 24, 2012 01:40

“H-H-Howowoowowow didid my jujujumjumpsuit t-tellell youou anythingthingthing? It isnisn't sapsapsap... sapsapsap... sapsapient.”

I continue twitching and I look more and more distant. Mayhaps I start twitching slower. My eyes seem to be glazing over (is that treasonous?)

written by Granpire viking man on May 24, 2012 03:13

I don't look particularly pleased at the sight of burned flesh, so I busy myself by checking my barrels and swapping out any that are empty.

written by Gligar on May 24, 2012 18:46

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O tries to fire Turbo, forgetting that it isn't loaded, to no effect. He steps back and lets some of the others fire.

Not King-R, though. Remember that he doesn't like blood, or injuries of any sort? Well, he's ignoring the zombie. He's more interested in checking his weapons instead of, you know, actually using them.

The zombie manages to pull itself to its feet and begins to stumble around. Somehow sensing King-R's weaknesses, it shambles towards him...

...only to be shot a few times by John-R.

Warehouse

Mick-R demands to know how his jumpsuit can say that he's R&D when it can't talk. “Because it has R&D badges on it, silly!”

But Mick-R might not have heard that. It seems that, somewhere, someone has decided to defy instructions and try to kill him.

If it weren't for the docbot arriving on the scene, Mick-R might die (or self-terminate? Terminated by his pl[DFSR]?) here. As it is...

An equally-puzzling location

"Alright, enough of that. We need to start bringing him back to normal to accept re-education."

"Should I alert the docbot?"

"Yes, please do. We're running short on time."

written by Speeder on May 24, 2012 21:49

I smile slightly.

Then I resume working on my PDC, searching in the files I erm... stole, if any of them might give any clue about where the gas boxes are attached to, and what should exactly trigger them.

written by Gligar on May 24, 2012 23:08

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y allows himself a smile, and begins searching through the files he obtained. He discovers that the boxes seemed to be connected to two circuits: the emergency light circuit, and a spare one. It's possible that the spare one was reused as a sort of command channel.

written by Speeder on May 24, 2012 23:24

I see if I have any files that track how the spare one is controlled, or how to chance its purpose, or where is the entry point of it.

written by Lightning4 on May 25, 2012 00:16

"Well, that's one down."

I put Turbo away.

"Maybe the others will be stuck in there, if they're not already dead."

I turn to Lucas.

"So what's the report from Speed-Y?"

written by Kristos on May 25, 2012 01:28

How convenient! A rest area just when I needed rest. So I procure, ideally, some TeaSir, or other drink. I wonder if we could both effectively hide under the table...

written by Jam on May 25, 2012 02:21

"Speed-Y was being treasonous? Oh no..."

I check how many shots are left on my laser pistol, then aim it at the possibly-dead zombie, just in case it moves again.

"Could you elaborate on what Speed-Y was doing that seemed so treasonous, Lucas-R?"

written by Gligar on May 25, 2012 14:42

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y continues checking, focusing on the spare circuit. How is it controlled? Where is it being access from? The answers he gets aren't good: there are multiple control points, and it seems that all of them are being used.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O puts Turbo away. He thinks that the other zombies might be trapped in the warbot, unable to harm them. If they are zombies.

He then turns and asks Lucas-R for a report, as does Jam-Y, who is checking his laser pistol. Noting that he has two shots left, he aims it at the motionless zombie, just in case. He then asks for a clarification of Speed-Y's possibly-treasonous activities.

"Well, sirs," Lucas-R says, "the two of us found an auxiliary distribution panel with an access point on it. Speed-Y decided to try and access the access point, since he thinks there is a traitor in Power Services. He assured me that PowServ sometimes leave the security on default. But... wouldn't that still be treasonous? I mean, he isn't Power Services... and 'default' means that there's still security, right? He'd have to break through that, wouldn't he?"

Rest area, Corridor H5-84, JHP Sector

Deciding to take advantage of the rest area, Kris-R gets some TeaSir from a vendobot, and looks at the table. Sadly, it's too small for both of them to hide under... and barely big enough for just one of them.

written by Speeder on May 25, 2012 21:58

I frown, and decide to see if I can go walking toward the nearest control point, so I can take a closer look on how it works.

written by Speeder on May 25, 2012 22:04

I frown, and decide to see if I can go walking toward the nearest control point, so I can take a closer look on how it works.

Before going I close again the access panel, but I leave the trap box untouched for now.

written by Gligar on May 25, 2012 23:27

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y closes the access panel and starts walking. It seems that he wants to look at one of these control points and figure out how it works. As it happens, he doesn't have too far to go, since there's one in the same corridor. It seems that someone has attached a device to the control point, which is causing its little screen to spew forth lots of scrolling text.

written by Speeder on May 25, 2012 23:27

I attempt to see if I recognize what the text is...

If it is too fast for me to read, I start to take photos with the PDC and read the photos instead.

written by Lightning4 on May 26, 2012 00:34

I listen to Lucas-R and think...

"Hmm. Possibly... though I guess if it gets the mission moving ahead, Friend Computer might be willing to be lenient on the punishment for it..."

"I don't know too much about PowServ and TechServ... but if that's anything like trying to break into a secure Armed Forces area..."

I shudder.

written by Cryoburner on May 26, 2012 01:12

"Wow! A table!"

I examine the table and check to see whether there are any chairs available. If so, I check whether they are attached to anything.

written by Granpire viking man on May 26, 2012 02:40

After my near brush with a zombie, I return to inspecting my weapons, suspecting that one of my pistols contains only one shot, and the other is empty. If such is the case, I swap out both barrels.

"Thank you, John-R." I say calmly, "I wasn't trying to avoid combat, I was trying to avoid exploding barrels."

written by Jam on May 26, 2012 06:45

"Hmm... Breaking through security? That does sound treasonous! I'll have to have a talk with him once we see him next..."

I look around.

"In the mean time, how about we all... er..."

I think for a bit, then take out a stack of cards.

"...do some spontaneous demonstrations of loyalty! Doesn't that sound like fun? How about you go first, Lucas-R! Here, pick one!"

I fan out the cards and hold them (face down) in front of Lucas-R.

written by Malkom on May 26, 2012 16:58

I continue seizing up...

written by Gligar on May 26, 2012 17:37

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y tries to read the text, and discovers that it seems to be gibberish. No wait... he can make out some of it... it seems to be... hexadecimal?

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

After listening to Lucas-R's report, L4-O comments that, since it's related to the mission, Friend Computer might go easy on Speed-Y. Though if PowServ security is anything like the Armed Forces...

"PowServ's probably not anywhere near as secure," Lucas-R tells him. "I mean, I was able to pick up on one of their labelling codes quite quickly. It kind of comes in handy when trying to get stuff to behave."

He doesn't seem to have noticed that a member of Power Services is right here, in the form of King-R. who, incidentally, is still checking his weapons. How many times does he have to convince himself that he has two full barrels (though he has no spares left), before he is willing to shoot something with them? He claims to not want an explosion, but... wouldn't that kill off more zombies?

Jam-Y replies that breaking through security sounds treasonous. He'll have to have a word with Speed-Y when he returns.

In the meantime, how about some MBD action, in the form of Spontaneous Demonstrations of Loyalty? Lucas-R can go first, and choose a card.

"Er... okay, I choose... that one," he says, picking one on the left edge.

It turns out that he picked the Alpha Complex National Anthem.

Rest area, Corridor H5-84, JHP Sector

Cryo-R... will he ever change? Probably not. If those rumours of MemoMax Limbo are true, he'll probably be examining every cubic femtometer of it. Assuming that all those who are spreading that rumour don't get erased first.

Right now, though, he's examining that table. It's a Standard Mandatory Rest Area Table, with four chairs attached to it. The table, incidentally, is bolted to the floor.

Warehouse

Though Mick-R's seizures are getting worse, the docbot does not give up, and continues working. One imagines that Mick-R will have quite the bill to pay off.

An equally-perplexing location

"We're ready to wake him. Do we go with -"

"Hold on. His seizures aren't letting up. Outside influence, perhaps?"

"Could be Troll Syndrome."

"True. Keep him under for another minutecycle while we correct those seizures."

written by Kristos on May 26, 2012 22:15

I enjoy my TeaSir while resting on a Mandatory Rest Area Chair and keeping my ears trained for bad news. In full compliance with my complementary bonus mandatory duty addendum, I briefly observe the surroundings, then thoroughly observe Cryo-R's observe-ness and take appropriate note.

"Why do you study things so intently, Cryo-R? What general purpose does it serve?"

written by Gligar on May 26, 2012 23:48

Rest area, Corridor H5-84, JHP Sector

Kris-R takes a seat and sips his TeaSir while looking around. The rest area is RED, with the usual light fixtures and clearance stripe. And cameras. Can't forget the cameras. Also present are a bank of vendobots, selling refreshments such as Kris-R's TeaSir and B3, as well as Algae Chips and Cold Fun.

A thought occurs to Kris-R, and, with his additional duty, he has the perfect opportunity to pursue it. He asks Cryo-R exactly why he's so observant, and what purpose it serves.

The sound of running footsteps can be heard faintly.

written by Lightning4 on May 26, 2012 23:55

"Oh... loyalty exercise! Hmm. I pick..."

I deliberate a little bit more, before picking a card as well.

written by Cryoburner on May 27, 2012 00:32

"Clearly, it is my job as an expert to be observant. An unobservant expert is not an expert at all, unless perhaps they are an expert at being unobservant."

I proceed to crawl under the table, and begin observing its underside, in case any mission-critical observables can be observed there.

written by Malkom on May 27, 2012 02:11

(shouldn't I let poor old Mick off now? hmm....)

I continue in a state of seizing, neither worse nor better.

written by Jam on May 27, 2012 02:49

I read the card that Lucas-R picked.

"The Alpha Complex National Anthem! Excellent! Let's hear it, Lucas-R!"

I smile, and wait for Lucas-R to start singing...

written by Kristos on May 27, 2012 04:17

Distracted by the sound of running footsteps I fail to notice what Cryo-R is saying. What I do notice is that the table is no longer a vacant hiding spot. If it is possible, I hide behind a vendobot. Otherwise I look for a wonderful place to hide such as a cafeteria or dormitory.

written by Speeder on May 27, 2012 15:33

I attempt to figure if the data is encoded text or just numbers or binary data.

And then to see more or less what it means.

I also frown, and look at the thing like if I wanted to just yank it out.

written by Gligar on May 27, 2012 19:38⁷⁵⁵

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

It's L4-O's turn to pick an SDL card. He choosers... that one. You know, the one that has you give a one-minutecycle lecture on why you love The Computer. Meanwhile, Jam-Y urges Lucas-R to start singing. He turns out to be off-key, but at least he's getting the words right. Of course, that's just the first verse. The most recent version has around thirty... I wonder if he knows them?

Rest area, Corridor H5-84, JHP Sector

Cryo-R once again pulls out his 'expert' card to answer the question of observation, stating that if he didn't observe, he wouldn't be an expert. He then crawls under the table. There's an odd pattern of dots under there.

Kris-R doesn't seem to be listening, but he does notice that Cryo-R is... er, inspecting the table. He decides that that area between the vendobots and the back wall is an excellent place to do a little inspection of his own. The first thing he notices is that it's a tight fit.

No sooner than he's in position, the source of those footsteps comes into view. It's the clones from earlier... well, some of them. They glance around briefly, and notice that there's someone under the table. "Hey! What are you doing down there?"

An equally-perplexing location

"That's definitely Troll Syndrome. Those seizures look deliberate."

"How is he able to give himself seizures like that, sir?"

"Does it matter? He's clearly trying to die. Escalate the wipe to - no, wait. Try to wake him. If that fails, we may have to lobotomise him. Or maybe fit a bot brain."

"That would be fun, sir. You know what people (and bots) think of androids... Okay, he should be coming round any minutecycle now..."

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks at the hexadecimal. He realises that he doesn't really know what it says. It seems to be just gibberish to him... maybe a command stream. If he had several hourcycles, he could probably figure out some of the commands, but wouldn't that be kind of treasonous? He'd stand to lose more than just a clone... perhaps he'd bet busted down to RED or something. He's in enough trouble as it is.

written by Speeder on May 27, 2012 19:41

"Alright, figure what this do, but seeing what it won't do now."

I try to carefully remove it, if I fail, I just yank it out in fury, ⁷⁵⁵ GLIGAR: (OOO: Now where did that list go...? I could have sworn it was in one of the books...)

written by Cryoburner on May 27, 2012 22:28

“Oh, hello! I’m examining an interesting pattern of dots under this table. Would you like to assist me? I’m not sure if there’s enough room for all of us under here though. Maybe you could just buy me some refreshing B3, to make the examination more flavorful.”

I continue examining the dot pattern, trying to determine its purpose and origin.

written by Lightning4 on May 27, 2012 23:00

I look at the card.

“Oh! Friend Computer is of course the friendliest friend of friends there could be, and that is why I and we should and do love Friend Computer. Friend Computer provides for us all, and cares for us on an appropriate clearance-level basis, and allows us freedoms, again, on the appropriate clearance-level basis! Friend Computer keeps us from becoming traitorous commie scum! Becoming traitorous commie scum is treasonous, and Friend Computer does not like treason. This is why I love Friend Computer! Friend Computer- oh... I think that was one minutecycle.”

written by Gligar on May 27, 2012 23:49

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Deciding that the best course of action doesn’t involve figuring out what the device does right here and now, Speed-Y opts instead to remove it. Given that it’s only loosely fastened on with screws that are the wrong type, Speed-Y is able to yank the thing free, revealing as connector which seems to have been bent out of shape in the effort to install the device.

Speaking of which, the device begins to beep.

Rest area, Corridor H5-84, JHP Sector

Does Cryo-R have a Final Death-wish? It’s the only reason I can come up with why he would oh-so-cheerfully address the clones who, for the last few minutecycles, have been chasing him down and terminate him for (supposedly) being a mutant. He doesn’t even seem to recognise them, even! Does that look like the actions of an “expert” to you? And with that request for B3... it’s almost as if he sees everyone else as existing for his benefit, and not that of The Computer!

And as for the dot patterns... they look vaguely familiar.

And as for the clones, they seem confused. They’re probably wondering just what the HEL is going on...

But Stu-R snaps out of it, and tells his colleagues, “Clones, we’ve found him! Lock and load!”

He aims, and fires.⁷⁵⁶

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O looks at the card, and explains that he loves Friend CComputer because it’s just so lovable, and it protects

⁷⁵⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: Anyone want to spend PP on whether that hits?)

everyone, and cares for them, and so on. He tries to keep it up for the whole minutecycle, almost repeating himself at points, and pausing, you know the drill. Burt with all those tricks, he succeeds.⁷⁵⁷

By now, Lucas-R realises that he doesn’t know the second verse after all.

written by Speeder on May 28, 2012 00:07

I try to look at the screen very fast, to figure what it is doing... if it is likely it will explode, I throw it away, if I have no idea at all of what it will do... I throw it away too, and run in the opposite direction.

written by Malkom on May 28, 2012 02:12

“Arrrgh! Owch! Ouch! Arrrrgh! Ow! OW! Holy mackerel! Holy catfish! YEOW! Why do I have to get woken up b-by e-e-electric sh-shocks?!”

I start twitching again.

written by Granpire viking man on May 28, 2012 03:03

Finally putting my weapons away, I say to the others, “Ah yes! I’m power services! I should be able to access... Um, whatever power-services places we want to access. Up to my clearance level, that is.”

Looking condescendingly over the group for a moment and comment, “You know, it really is treasonous to suggest that we bre-” I stop myself. “Ah, never mind.”

I pick up a card.

written by Lightning4 on May 28, 2012 10:59⁷⁵⁸

I hand my card back to Jam-Y, and now that I can cease worrying about myself, I watch Lucas-R have... fun.

“Are you going to do a card as well, sir? After all, a loyalty officer should be willing to test his own loyalty!”

I smile.

written by Kristos on May 28, 2012 16:09

Hopefully the clones are facing away from me to enhance the element of surprise. If there are only three clones, I shoot at one while pouncing the other two to daze them, then attempt to seize their laser pistols, backpedal, and shoot any who show aggression.

If there are more than three clones, I yell “Friend Computer! Treasonous cones attempting to abort our mission!” as I make a mad dash for the twistiest, turniest looking corridor of proper clearance. One of those laser turrets would be convenient about now.

written by Jam on May 28, 2012 18:03

I take the card back from L4-O.

“Excellent job! That was a great speech, one that only a truly loyal clone would be able to produce!”

I smile at L4-O.

⁷⁵⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: Take a perversity point for that one, L4 😊)

⁷⁵⁸ LIGHTNING4: (OOC: Thanks 😊)

[1071]

"Of course I'll take a card! But... Hang on... Lucas-R, what happened to the rest of the anthem? That was nice singing, but I thought there was more verses than just one..."

I look at Lucas-R, and wait for the other verses...

written by Gligar on May 28, 2012 19:02⁷⁵⁹

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Surprised by the beep, Speed-Y glances at the device. It's... beeping. Speed-Y doesn't know what that means, but it can't be good, so he throws it down the corridor and runs back in the direction of the lift.

There is a sudden intense flash of light from the direction Speed-Y threw the device, as well as an indescribable sound.

Brainscrub Laboratory #448-3049-29874

Mick-R wakes up with a start, and utters several words that are troubling to me. He demands to know why he was woken up by electric shocks.

A nearby docbot tells him, "Citizen, the words 'holy', 'catfish' and 'mackerel' are not in my database. However, I can tell you that you are in the process of receiving a brainscrub. Just two more minutecycles, and you will be done. Logging code MM against Mick-R-NRK."

An equally-perplexing location

"He's awake, sir."

"Good. There's only one more step. The docbot can handle it from here."

"Alright... but what about... those words?"

"Log the recording and forget about it. We can't afford to take any more time with him. We're already three clones behind."

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Putting his weapons away without so much as firing them, King-R reminds everyone that he is Power Services, and should be able to access whatever it is they need to access. He begins to add that something is treasonous, but realises that Jam-Y is looking at him. He takes a card. Aha! He is to praise the security clearance system, and explain why it is necessary.

L4-O hands back his card, and watches Lucas-R. He wonders if Jam-Y will also take one. After all, a Loyalty Officer should also be prepared to demonstrate his loyalty, right?

Jam-Y praises L4-O for his speech, and says that of course he'll take one. But first, there is the matter of Lucas-R, who seems to have stopped singing. He wonders why that is so. Isn't there more than just the one verse? "Er... I might have forgotten the second verse," Lucas-R admits in a small voice.

John-R asks, "Should I take a card as well?"

Rest area, Corridor H5-84, JHP Sector

The lasers narrowly miss!

Hoping that he hasn't been seen, Kris-R glances at the clones, and notes that there are five of them.

Too risky... He shouts to The Computer that treasonous "cones" are interfering while heading down the corridor and into a junction, hoping to lose them.

Leaving Cryo-R behind.

Most of the clones give chase, but Stu-R remains behind. He adjusts his aim. "So... got anything else stupid to say? This is gonna be fun..."

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

As he runs, Kris-R hears The Computer say, "Citizen, you are in error! There are no cones interfering with your mission!"

written by Malkom on May 28, 2012 19:30

"A brainscrub? Crumbs, that's torn it."

[Looks like they're finaling. Cut the signal - I can't afford any backwash now.]

I freeze...

written by Lightning4 on May 28, 2012 19:35

"Hmmm... I have an idea! Perhaps the other clones here should be willing to demonstrate their loyalty too? It would be a shame if the traitor was here all along and we never noticed..."

I glance around at the group of clones.

"But they all look like loyal Armed Forces to me..."

written by Kristos on May 28, 2012 20:07

I slap myself in the face ("facepalm") for my error and look for a convenient niche or corner to shoot from. Now that there are (hopefully) less clones to worry about at the moment, I take them on with a seemingly out-of-character fury. Danger of chemical showers or not, I NEVER abandon an active team member.

If there is a sufficient hiding location for this strategy, I wait until the clones have passed me, then peek out and zap them. PEWWW! PEWWW! Too bad TEAM LEADER MBD's do not come with flamethrowers.

written by Cryoburner on May 28, 2012 20:23

"Say, did you notice the way those clones were running off just now? It was almost exactly like how a mutant would run, when pretending to run like a normal clone. Veery suspicious, if you ask me."

I reposition myself under the table and return to examining the vaguely familiar dot pattern.

written by Jam on May 28, 2012 23:41

I look to John-R first.

⁷⁵⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: Kristos spends 2pp.)

[1072]

"I dunno... Do you think you can sing the WHOLE Alpha Complex National Anthem? Maybe you can remind Lucas-R, since he can't seem to remember..."

I shoot a disapproving glare at Lucas-R, then speak to him.

"Well, at least you know the first verse, I guess that counts for something... Now, I want you to be able to sing the first five verses from memory by the end of the hourcycle! That's an order!"

I check the time on my PDC.

"Okay, John-R is next, then King-R has to..."

I look at his card.

"...praise the security clearance system and explain why it is necessary! Oh, that's a good one!"

written by Gligar on May 29, 2012 00:45⁷⁶⁰

Brainscrub Laboratory #448-3049-29874

As the docbot [TEMPORARY FAULT, PLEASE STAND BY]

An equally-perplexing location

"Hmmm... the docbot's reporting a drop in neural activity."

"Whatever. We're out of time. Move to the next one."

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O has an idea: what if the other clones were to demonstrate their loyalty as well? Even though most of them seem to be loyal Armed Forces clones. Speaking of the Armed Forces, they seem to have recovered now. Sven-O in particular seems to be watching them.

Jam-Y looks at John-R. Would he be willing to sing the whole of the National Anthem for Lucas-R? He wants the RED to memorise at least the first five verses by the end of the hourcycle. John-R grins. "I'm pretty sure I remember it all... I was the one who was always 'volunteered' to sing it back in the crèche. Funnily enough, it started happening again after I registered... I probably wouldn't have remembered otherwise." Jam-Y makes a point of checking the time: 14:45.

That sorted, Jam-Y turns to King-R, and looks at his card. He seems to like this one.

Rest area, Corridor H5-84, JHP Sector

Cryo-R still seems not to notice the laser pistol, but comments that the clones who ran off must be suspicious by the way they ran. "And how would you know how a mutant runs? Eh? Maybe you run the same way? Did you think of that?"

But, once again, Cryo-R is ignoring Stu-R, looking once again at the dot pattern. He's definitely seen something like that before.

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

Kris-R facepalms and looks for a niche or something to provide cover as he shoots. There's a corner over there.

⁷⁶⁰ Gligar: (OOC: Cryoburner also spends 1pp.)

As the clones become visible, he... doesn't shoot. Instead, he waits until they're past him, and then opens up and shoots. But it turns out that he's not very good at this whole "aiming" thing, as all three of his shots go wide.

The clones return fire, and manage to singe Kris-R's reflex. Not to mention giving him some nasty burns.

And if that wasn't bad enough, he realises that one of the lasers was GREEN. Yet he sees no GREENs in the group...

written by Speeder on May 29, 2012 01:20

Scared, I hit the button of the first floor.

When the elevator starts moving, I hit the one of the second floor again, and wait.

written by Granpire viking man on May 29, 2012 04:07

"Ah, the lovely clearance system! Isn't it pretty?"

I get a satisfied look in my eyes for a few moments, looking around for areas I'm not cleared for.

"I can look at that ORANGE door, or that YELLOW food, and I can admire its colourfulness and I know that its colour protects me from ever committing treason. What could be simpler? Only the Computer could think of such a wonderful and perfect system to prevent treason..."

written by Lightning4 on May 29, 2012 05:36

I turn to Sven-O.

"Sorry about the warbot there... I didn't think that would happen... I could've sworn that was my access code... I needed to protect a higher clearance clone, of course..."

I look back at the smoking remains of the warbot.

"I don't suppose some vile treasonous clone might've sabotaged it? But that would imply there's a traitor in our midst..."

written by Jam on May 29, 2012 07:02

I look at L4-O and Sven-O with a slight frown on my face.

"If the warbot was sabotaged, it must have been from one of the Armed Forces clones that was inside... Either that, or our unknown nanobot zombie-making clone is a lot more powerful than we thought... You don't think he has a mutation like Machine Annoyance, do you? Hmm... We'll have to investigate! But first..."

I smile at John-R.

"Excellent! How about you sing the first five lines now for Lucas-R, and then sing the rest once we get moving again..."

I turn to King-R, and listen to his response.

"Indeed, the clearance system is very pretty! But, are you sure you should be looking at high-clearance things? What if the ORANGE door opens and you accidentally look into the area beyond? That'd be treasonous!"

Also, I think you missed something. You covered the clearance colors, but what about the system as a whole? What about orders, and the fact that higher-clearance clones can tell lower-clearance clones what to do? How is that necessary? And why is it that most of the citizens of Alpha Complex are INFRARED? Why are they important?"

While King-R thinks up a reply, I take a card for myself and read it aloud to the group.

written by Granpire viking man on May 29, 2012 15:06

"You're right... I'll try not to look at ORANGE doors, even if they're pretty."

"Orders are important because higher-clearance clones are better! I need to obey higher-clearance clones so I can be loyal and happy and clean and become higher-clearance, and I can tell lower clearances what to do!"

"Everyone knows that INFRAREDS are not good enough to not commit treason. If they listen to us, they will become higher clearance. They are important because they do easy jobs that are not suited to higher-clearance clones, and they do jobs that don't let them do treasonous things."

written by Kristos on May 29, 2012 15:17

Realizing I have now caused myself to be effectively surrounded with aggressive clones that might treasonously possess weapons that I have no chance against, I throw my hands in the air, dropping my laser pistol, and yell, "Stop!"

"Okay, I surrender. What is it you want from us? I just had a chemical shower earlier today and really would rather not repeat the experience anytime soon."

The creaks and squeaks in my voice should give away the truth in what I say.

"The cloning tank slime was an extra thick mix, reportedly designed to prevent mutations in decanted clones. I thought I would die in the sludge. I gather your group is tasked with mutant control. Perhaps this whole subsector specializes in mutation elimination."

"Please forgive my aggression, but the Computer has given us a very important mission and I must do all in my power to remain on that mission until the Computer says otherwise..."

written by Gligar on May 29, 2012 19:52

Speed-Y's lift, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y dashes inside and mashes the Level 1 button until the lift begins to move.

Then he presses the 2 button again...

But the lift is already heading down.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

King-R begins his SDL by looking around for something beyond his clearance. He notices that Sven-O seems to be carrying some ORANGE weapons, for instance. But he still uses his own examples to illustrate why he believes the clearance system is necessary.

L4-O turns to Sven-O and apologises for the warbot. "You're apologising to the wrong clone, sarge," Sven-O replies. "You'd better suck up to the brass or something, cause I'm sure they'll want to know why their multi-million-credit warbot went berserk."

L4-O continues. It is possible, of course, that it might be the cause of sabotage. But if that is the case, the saboteur was a soldier...

Jam-Y frowns. If that is the case, then the saboteur was inside the warbot. Unless the clone responsible for the zombie nanomachines is also responsible for this, in case he might be more powerful than previously thought. Perhaps he has some sort of mutation, perhaps Machine Annoyance? That is worthy of investigation.

But first, he must look closer to home. Specifically, the matter of Lucas-R's singing. He suggests that John-R sing the first few lines right now, and continue once they get going. "Sure," he replies. "But I'll let you finish first."

For Jam-Y still has more to say, this time, in reply to King-R. He finds King-R's explanation lacking. He covered the colours themselves, but what about, say, if he saw an ORANGE door, and the door opened? Or, for that matter, the system as a whole? What about orders? Why are they necessary? Why are most clones INFRARED? Why are they important?

I, for one, wonder if he knows about ancillary clearances. Probably not... they tend to be confusing.

Does Jam-Y? I don't know. But I do know that he has chosen an SDL card for himself, and it's a good one: he is to explain why it is important to never attempt to leave Alpha Complex without express orders to do so.

King-R agrees about looking into high clearance areas. High clearance colours might be pretty, but it might be too risky.

As for orders, well, they're important because higher clearances are better. Following orders makes you loyal and can get you higher clearance, and giving orders means you can tell lower clearances what to do.

And according to him, INFRAREDS are "not good enough to not commit treason." (Has he considered a career as a CPU Forms Writer?) If they listen, they get higher clearance. They're important because there are some jobs that are not suited to higher clearance clones, or are too dangerous for them. Those jobs are done by INFRAREDS, so that they can't commit treason.

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

Kris-R realises that he is facing clones who may have treasonous weapons, and surrenders. He asks what the clones want, and points out that he has already had to endure a trip to the chemical showers todaycycle, and he doesn't intend to go there again. Especially not to the showers in this sector, at least. They have that thick mixture meant to flush out mutations, which he finds unpleasant.

He guesses that the team are tasked with mutant control. Perhaps the same is true of the subsector as a whole?

Finally, he apologises for his earlier aggression. He is on a mission, after all.

One clone answers, "What do we want? We want to terminate mutants! Your friend seems to act like one, and you're with him! That makes you a target!"

"So does not liking the chemical showers!" another chimes in. "What's not to like about measures that eradicate mutants before they're decanted? Even if they need coaxing sometimes..."

written by Lightning4 on May 29, 2012 21:36

"Yeah... guess you're right. Although it'd be great if we could prove it was sabotaged..."

"Well, now more than ever, we should probably get a loyalty demonstration from everyone. Everyone here! Get a card from the YELLOW right here. You'll know what to do."

written by Jam on May 29, 2012 22:00

"Er... INFRARED clones can't commit treason? I think you're mistaken, King-R! What if an INFRARED steps into a RED area? That clone would be committing treason! If there are any clones that couldn't commit treason, I would think it would be ULTRAVIOLETS... But I'm sure there are things that are treasonous for even the UVs, like trying to turn FC into a mass-murdering commie-lover or something..."

"But anyway, my card! Why is it important to not leave Alpha Complex without orders to do so... Hmm..."

I take a few secondcycles to think up a good answer...

"The Outside is probably a high-clearance area, like GREEN or something... Also, it's probably filled with all kinds of dangerous mutants and rogue bots and other things too horrible to imagine! Friend Computer doesn't want clones to be in danger, so it makes sure we're safe from whatever is on the Outside! I'll bet the Computer that runs the Outside is an evil commie-lover or something! We're much safer staying in Alpha Complex, and only sending out occasional teams of clones to fight whatever evil plans the Outside Computer thinks up... Or maybe I'm completely wrong... I've never been to the Outside, after all. That'd be treasonous!"

I smile, satisfied with my answer. I turn and offer out cards to the Armed Forces clones, and check the time again...

written by Speeder on May 29, 2012 22:39

I just wait...

I start to hop from one side to the other, in expectation.

written by Cryoburner on May 29, 2012 19:10

"Gasp! I have just realized..."

I crawl out from under the table, stand up, then point at it.

"This table has failed us!"

written by Gligar on May 29, 2012 23:46

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O agrees, but wishes he could find evidence that it was sabotaged. Perhaps now would be a good time for the soldiers to join them in their Spontaneous Demonstrations of Loyalty. He instructs them to get cards.

Few of them move. Among them is Sven-O. In the end, only four of the soldiers take cards.

John-R can be heard singing, quietly so as not to interfere with the conversation. But... is the National Anthem really something that should be sung quietly?

Jam-Y disagrees with King-R, who seemed to be saying that INFRAREDS can't commit treason at all. It is clear that they can: they could step into a RED area, for instance. Even ULTRAVIOLETS, he adds, could potentially commit treason.

He takes a moment to compose an answer to the instruction on his card. Eventually, he says that, though he has not visited the Outdoors, he believes that it is a high-clearance area, probably GREN, and filled with dangerous bots and mutants. It is in Friend Computer's best interests to protect us from these. He speculates that there is also a Computer out there, one who is probably an exact opposite of our Computer, and would not hesitate to kill them off. No, better to stay indoors and only send out occasional teams as needed. Of course, he could be wrong...

He offers his cards to the other soldiers, and checks the time again. 14:53.

Speed-Y's lift, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y starts hopping in anticipation...

Finally, the door opens, revealing... a scrubot. Not Leeroy, though.

Rest area, Corridor H5-84, JHP SDetector

Cryo-R gets out from under the table, and states that it has failed them.

"No," Stu-R replies. "Just you."

And fires.

...

...

...

His laser pistol barrel falls off.

written by Kristos on May 30, 2012 01:17

"Friend? My teammate was chosen for this mission by Friend Computer. As strange as Cryo-R acts, I cannot deny that the Computer specifically chose him for this mission so I must accept that and trust his testament of not being a mutant. Has he evidently used any mutant powers? I have never witnessed that. Sure, he is a bit over observational, but that is just a character trait that helps him specialize in certain tasks."

"As for not liking the chemical showers... that is wrong. I LOVE the chemical showers! But I am afraid a second trip will make me loose my voice completely, and then I will not be able to effectively respond when Our Mutual Friend engages me! Does that not sound treasonous? Though I suppose you are right... that can't be as bad as a nasty mutation!"

"I met a mutant once, back when I was a junior citizen. He could change colors of anything. Sometimes he was mischievous and changed the colors of clearance stripes or jumpsuits. One day he changed a RED laser pistol to look GREEN. The clone with the pistol shot him. Such is the end of mutants!"

"Say, didn't one of you have a green laser pistol? Are they the standard anti-mutant issue now? That's handy! Maybe my team will be issued anti-mutant material. We probably have not been given any because of the recent laser barrel factory sabotage. Did you hear about that? I think it was the job of mutants! Be careful, I hear some of the barrels are corrupted... they might even have the wrong colors! Barrghgh! Mutants!"

written by Malkom on May 30, 2012 03:22

[Okay, sorted that. I should have disconnected that tertiary passive linkage before they moved up the queue and hit me with a stack overflow through it. Now, back to business...]

I blink several times, then turn around slowly.

...
...
...

"What's this?" I step forwards gingerly, and prod the odd-looking clone-shaped object in front of me. "Chew toy? I don't see any dogs..."

written by Cryoburner on May 30, 2012 04:17

"I suppose you may be right. It is entirely possible that this table has not failed you at all. The table and its connected chairs might have supplied you with hours of sitting and eating enjoyment. Unfortunately, that doesn't necessarily qualify it to be a member of our team. Being bolted to a floor would definitely put a hamper on its ability to follow us on our mission, after all."

I march up to Stu-R.

"Say, I have an idea! You seem like a pretty level-headed clone. How would you like to join our troubleshooter team? I'm sure my team leader would agree to it! We're on a mission of the utmost importance, and I'm sure you'd be great at helping us find wherever it is we are supposed to be going, and do whatever it is we are supposed to be doing. With your skills as a pickpocket, and my skills as an expert at hunting down pickpockets, we're sure to complete the mission to an adequate degree in no time!"

written by Jam on May 30, 2012 05:31

I notice only four of the soldiers have moved, and that there are other Armed Forces clones that didn't move.

"HEY! LISTEN TO L4-O! Line up, and wait to receive your SDL cards! As of now, you are all marked as potentially being extremely dangerous mutants, traitors, or secret society members! No clone is to leave this area until everyclone here is tested! Any clone who disobeys will be terminated as a traitor!"

written by Speeder on May 30, 2012 12:34

I blink. Then, I blink again.

Then I decide to search for that security room, and leave the elevator...

written by Lightning4 on May 30, 2012 16:27

I continue watching the clones, checking to see which ones do and don't grab cards, and then watch the ones that have cards to ensure they do the proper loyalty exercise.

"One at a time too, please... can't have everyone bunching all together..."

written by Gligar on May 30, 2012 19:33

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

Kris-R continues explaining things to the group. He says that, although Cryo-R is a little strange, he was chosen for this mission by Friend Computer, and therefore must not be a mutant. He asks if Cryo-R has openly demonstrated mutant powers, as he believes that he has not. His observational tendencies are simply a character trait. They come in handy sometimes.

He moves on to other matters, such as the chemical showers. He admits that he likes them. It's just that he believes that a second trip would cause him to lose his voice, something that would not be of benefit when The Computer wishes to speak to him. On the other hand, that would be better than having a mutation.

Which brings him back to that subject, and lets him relate a story of his last (only) encounter with a mutant, a mischievous one with Chromativariation. His habit of changing the colour of things eventually lead to his downfall when he changed a laser pistol to look GREEN.

And speaking of GREEN laser pistols, he recalls that one of the team has one. Is that standard equipment? If so, Team Sigma mustn't have received them due to the recent factory sabotage. Why, even their barrels might be defective! It must be due to those mutants!

His speech causes the group to look uncomfortable. Some of them look uncertainly at their laser pistols, and put them away.

"Is that true?" one of them says. "About the laser pistols, I mean. We're kind of on a mission ourselves."

"Quiet!" another snaps. "This could still be a trick!"

[1076]

A third pulls out a notebook and scribbles some notes, and says, "You know... I think I heard something about that. But what's more troubling is that he says that someone here has a GREEN laser pistol barrel. Yet we're all RED! That means that someone here has some treasonous equipment!"

The second replies, "If that's the case, I think that here's a good time to go through a Mandatory Equipment Check! You too," he adds to Kris-R. "Let's see it."

Rest area, Corridor H5-84, JHP Sector

Meanwhile, Stu-R is busy retrieving his laser pistol barrel, while Cryo-R admits that it is possible that the table might not have failed Stu-R. But that means that the table can't be a member of Team Sigma. How about Stu-R? Would he be willing to join? He seems to have the skills, and would be an asset to the mission... whatever it is. But then he calls Stu-R a pickpocket. Real smooth there.

As you might imagine, Stu-R doesn't like that. "My bad. You aren't a mutant after all, you're a treasonous idiot! You claim to be a Troubleshooter, yet you don't know what, or even where, your mission is, then you try to recruit me into your team! Last I checked, it doesn't work like that. There's only one Computer who can assign Troubleshooters to teams. Oh, and there's that accusation you made of me being a pickpocket. Would you care to show me your proof? I'm sure an 'expert'" - he fills in the airquotes around that word - "would have plenty of proof. But from what I've seen, you aren't one.

"If you aren't going to show me any, then get out of my sight, and let me report this incident."

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

John-R finishes off the first five lines while Jam-Y yells at the soldiers, demanding to know why only four of them have cards. Those who don't could now potentially be mutants, traitors, or secret society members. As such, noclone is permitted to leave until everyone has either performed a task from his SDL deck, or been terminated as a traitor.

"Rest assured," Sven-O adds, "those who don't take a card right now will be sent on Remedial Frownything Cleanup Duty. With no light sources."

That gets them moving.

It also gets L4-O's attention. He tries to take his mind off his recent mission by focusing on the Demonstrations, noting who takes a card and who doesn't, and then insisting that they go one at a time.

And they begin. The cards seem to vary from the simple (saying that you like Internal Security (with the obligatory forced smile)) to the difficult (naming all of the Heroes Of Our Complex, in order, starting from the earliest (given that some of them later turned to to be Commie Mutant Traitors and had their records erased) and saying why they received this honour). In the end, only Private Pete-R and Grunt Joe failed to take a card.

A third, Private William-R, seems hesitant, but then, as L4-O remembers, he always is. He looks at his card, approaches, and asks, "Excuse me, sirs, do you have any B3?"

Speed-Y's lift, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y exits, looking for the security room. Though I seem to recall there being one in Building 1... nah, there's probably one a bit closer. At least the zombies aren't a problem (in Building 2, at least).

Brainscrub Laboratory #448-3049-29874

Now that my cameras are working again, I can see that Mick-R is poking the docbot, and using more words that are outside the bot's vocabulary. No matter, since the bot is telling him that he is to be reassigned to reactor shielding duty on a permanent basis.

written by Kristos on May 30, 2012 20:13

My RED laser pistol is already on the ground. I readily reveal the rest of my inventory.

written by Speeder on May 30, 2012 21:53

I start wandering around searching for a security station...

Although if I spot any gas box, I go check to what it is connected.

written by Lightning4 on May 30, 2012 22:05

I do a glare at Private Pete-R and Joe that only a Sergeant could do, hoping that will spur them to get their cards as well.

In response to William-R, I think for a moment.

"None on me, Private... but, I'm sure someone around here has some."

I think, glance around, and try to recall if anyone in our team has some. If I fail to remember or spot any, I raise my voice and ask directly.

"Anyone have some B3? We need some!"

written by Jam on May 30, 2012 22:51

I do a glare at Private Pete-R and Joe that only a registered Mind Sense mutant could do, hoping that will spur them to get their cards as well.

"Would you two rather me test you the hard way?"

I tap my temple with a finger, and make sure my registered mutant armband is clearly visible to them. Hopefully, it will be clear what I'm implying.

I also hear William-R's request, and check my pockets for any RED B3...

"Oh here's one—oh wait, nevermind, it's YELLOW clearance..."

...

Nope! Nothing!"

Also, I check the time again...

written by Gligar on May 30, 2012 23:36

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

Though a couple of clones seem a little reluctant to comply, Kris-R is not one of them. He starts placing the rest of his equipment next to his already-dropped laser pistol: his ME Card; his Team Leader's hat (which is still flashing); his Team Leader MBD badge; the transbot tickets to JHY Sector; the travel papers; and the two PDCs.

"Two PDCs?" the second clone queries. "What's with the second one?"

Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y wanders around looking for a security office. There doesn't seem to be... wait, there's something on Corridor 2... wait! That's it! And there's a gas box in there too...

He detours a little. Where is that box connected to?

As it turns out, the box is connected to an empty space on the main board, the space where the shoddy connection for a missing something is...

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O fixes the two privates with a Glare of the sort that, if L4-O were a mutant, would probably melt steellyke. They seem to avoid his gaze.

He also tells William-R that he doesn't have any B3. He thinks... does anyone have any? Actually, yes... doesn't Azir-R have several cans?

Jam-Y contributes his own Glare of the sort which, since he is a mutant, is able to penetrate deeply into the privates' minds. They try to ignore it... but it's clear that they're finding it uncomfortable. He suggests that he could test them some other way, specifically, with his mind. Pete-R looks over and says, "With respect, sir, no-one is probing me!" Joe looks at his partner in disbelief, though eh doesn't do anything to get a card.

To William-R, Jam-Y says that he does have a B3, but it's YELLOW. He also checks his PDC again... to find that it's now 14:57.

written by Kristos on May 31, 2012 03:22

"Oh my. Cryo-R has been studying the ways of pickpockets so he can spot them out. He has been practicing removing things from and placing things in my pockets to better understand how pickpockets operate so he can effectively counter their operations. After all, losing critical mission inventory is generally frowned upon in Alpha Complex. This must be Cryo-R's PDC."

written by Lightning4 on May 31, 2012 04:08

I address William-R,

"As I recall, Azir-R here might have some B3. You can get some from him... it should be of the appropriate clearance..."

I go back to watching Pete-R and Joe suspiciously.

written by Jam on May 31, 2012 04:15

I walk up to Pete-R, so that I'm standing right in front of him, with my face inches from his.

"Oh, does that mean you have something to hide then? Refusing to do a demonstration of loyalty, refusing a mental scan from a registered mutant... How about... I order you to take an Emergency Loyalty Test! You, and your INFRARED friend... In the mean time, how about we have a few guns pointed at these two, to remind them not to do anything funny."

I take out the Emergency Loyalty Tests, and examine them. Then I give one each to both Pete-R and Joe.

written by Gligar on May 31, 2012 19:29

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

Kris-R explains that Cryo-R is practicing at spotting pickpockets ("Practicing? More like boring through my skull!", one clone interjects) and the ways they operate. This, apparently, involves reverse-pickpocketing his PDC into Kris-R's pockets.

"A little odd, don't you think? Especially since the PDC is damaged... this looks like... explosion damage. Maybe... you have something to do with the recent transbot explosion!"

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O tells William-R that Azir-R might have some B3 of appropriate clearance. William-R goes to pester Azir-R.

While that's happening, Jam-Y is... speaking to Pete-R, unconsciously adopting the manner of a drill sergeant. Almost. He says that Pete-R must have something to hide if he refuses to complete an SDL and refuses to have his mind scanned. Therefore... it's ELT time!

He fishes out his ELTs. It turns out that, although they are cards, they are not intended to be passed out to individual clones, but instead administered by the Loyalty Officer. According to the supplementary card, this is to stop clones memorising them and performing flawlessly at them.

Jam-Y looks at a few of them. They seem quite diverse in subject matter, from mathematics to Tella-O to Complex knowledge and beyond, and many don't seem directly related to loyalty per se, but, as every Loyalty Officer knows, the signs of treason are everywhere. Each card has several levels of tests. He is supposed to choose one at random and read it out.

written by Lightning4 on May 31, 2012 19:36

While Jam-Y continues to deal with the two clones, I ponder which division the clones belong to... perhaps that'll shed some insight to their behavior?

written by Speeder on May 31, 2012 21:29

I frown.

I take my PDC and call L4.

written by Jam on May 31, 2012 21:32 Brainscrub Laboratory #448-3049-29874

I pick a card at random, and read the first question to Pete-R.

If he passes that, I read the second question, then the third, and so on.

written by Gligar on May 31, 2012 22:52

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

While William-R retrieves a B3 from Azir-R, L4-O ponders. What division are they? While they might all be Mutant Mashers, that regiment is a large one. He believes that might be 4 Division, colloquially known as the 466th Jackbooted Thugs to those who don't know any better.

Jam-Y picks out a card. It turns out to be a word association test, something that is more readily recognisable as a loyalty test. Her starts reading out words and recording answers. According to Pete-R, "Computer" matches with "friend", "missile" matches with "boom"... and "commie" matches with "sharing".

The ensuing silence is only broken by L4-O's PDC ringing.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 01, 2012 16:29

"Sharing. Hm."

I am about to remark on that but I notice my PDC and tend to that.

"Hello?"

While focusing on my attention to whoever is on the other end of the line, I also try to continue observing the loyalty demonstration.

written by Gligar on Jun 01, 2012 18:19

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O finds Pete-R's association between "commie" and "sharing" to be interesting. He is about to say something about it when he realises that his PDC is ringing. He answers it, to find that it's Speed-Y.

While he deals with that, the Armed Forces clone begin to pull out weapons and point them at Pete-R and Joe. "Hey now guys," Joe protests, "I'm not with him!"

Near Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

It turns out that Mango is still standing here. The nearby Armed Forces clones are beginning to become agitated at his supposed inability to do... well, anything.

written by Gligar on May 29, 2012 00:05 Consider this a warning.

Oh look, an arbitrary NPC.

Someone isn't up to speed with the house rules, it seems. Either that, or they're being ignored.

Isn't that right, Malkom?

Or maybe you're trying to get rid of a second clone family. Maybe I should start assigning ancillary clearances to things like that.

Mick-R seems to have resigned himself to his fate. He's now apparently waiting for someone to lead him out of here.

written by Speeder on Jun 01, 2012 21:40

"Hello L4! I just found out, that the trap was triggered by a device that is connected to the board that the Power Services team was supposed to repair...

Except the device, is not present...

Thus... do you remember seeing any members of the Power Services team attaching something to the board, and then removing it again?"

written by Jam on Jun 01, 2012 21:45

I notice the Armed Forces clones have finally started pointing weapons at Pete-R.

"Hey, looks like you all finally followed my orders! Took you all long enough, guys! Next time, go a little faster with the pointing of the weapons! Remember, tardiness is treason! Also, no firing yet..."

I focus my attention back at Pete-R.

"So, 'commie' matches with 'sharing', huh? That almost sounds like something that would be written on commie propaganda... Care to explain your logic?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 01, 2012 21:58

"Hmm, let me think. I wasn't there the whole time, I was asked to go to the security office to determine who had accessed it."

I try to recall if any such thing did happen...

"Speaking of the list, I do have that. If we get somewhere secure where we can decypher all the codes, that might help. Sadly, it's all raw data, so all we can do is compare it to ME cards right now."

written by Gligar on Jun 01, 2012 23:56

Corridor 1, Level 2, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y tells L4-O that, according to his information, the gas trap was triggered by a spare circuit, which was connected to something on the power board that was not present. Does he remember anyone on the Power Services team adding, and then removing, an object from the board?

[1079]

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y notices that the Armed Forces have finally decided to follow his orders. Sven-O explains that they're unused to taking orders from civilians.

Jam-Y adds that Pete-R's word association sounds like something you would find on commie propaganda. Would he care to explain?

"Well, er... commies like to, er... share things..." is the reply.

L4-O is still on his PDC. He replies that he wasn't in the power room the whole time, since he was sent to the security office to obtain a list of clones accessing it. A list he still has, and that they can decipher at some point. It's raw data, though, so they'll have to compare it to ME Cards.

He seems to have forgotten that they have the means to match an ID number to a name.

written by Kristos on Jun 02, 2012 00:33

Okay, these guys are starting to eat at my steellyke nerves...

"Had something to do with it? Sure, I had something to do with it! I was on the transbot when it exploded! I was exploded with the transbot! I saw the bomb with my own two standard-issue RED-clearance bio-degradable clone eyes!"

...

"Wait... wait! I saw the bomb! I remember the bomb! (Or at least what I think was the bomb.) I should tell the Computer about it!"

"And has everybody participated in the Mandatory Equipment Check yet? Are you all just going to stare at me instead?"

written by Jam on Jun 02, 2012 01:50

"Hmm... And do you also like to share things?"

With a free hand, I take out my laser pistol and aim it at Pete-R.

"Careful, the wrong answer might not end well for you..."

written by Speeder on Jun 02, 2012 01:56

"Alright... I will see if I can find the security room here... And see if I can find something watching the video myself..."

Speed-Y out!"

I disconnect and go searching for the security room again.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 02, 2012 04:55

I respond to Stu-R...

written by Kristos on May 29, 2012 15:02

I'm not up to speed with the house rules. Can you post them or direct me to them?

written by Granpire viking man on May 29, 2012 15:08

The first page of the IC thread has a list of basic rules.

In this case, I think it's the rule about not trying to get your character killed senselessly for the sake of humour that he's referring to. That's what Malkom seems to be doing.

written by Kristos on May 29, 2012 15:20

Thanks bud.

written by Jam on May 29, 2012 17:20

I thought it was the "[Looks like they're finaling. Cut the signal - I can't afford any backwash now.]" part... Implying that he's sending some sort of telepathic/electronic

"Hmm... The Computer may assign troubleshooters to teams, but one of our team members never showed up to the briefing. Maybe YOU are that troubleshooter, and you just forgot! In that case, it was awfully convenient that we met up! We really should get going though!"

I begin marching off toward the direction Kris-R wandered off in.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 02, 2012 08:00

"Right then, sir."

I close the call and put my PDC away as well.

I simply watch what Pete-R's response is, and Jam-Y's response to the response.

written by Gligar on Jun 02, 2012 18:54

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

Kris-R is getting a little annoyed with these clones. He rather snappily tells them that he was present in the transbot as it exploded, and even saw the bomb. He needs to tell Friend Computer about that.

He asks whether everyone has completed the Mandatory Equipment Check yet. As it turns out, they haven't. "Come on, clones! Equipment, right now!" demands the clone who suggested it. "Or do we have to have Stu-R tell Our Mutual Friend that you aren't obeying your Equipment Guy?"

The clones start showing their equipment, somewhat reluctantly it must be said. As everything is placed on the floor - mostly laser pistol barrels, PDCs, and that sort of thing - the apparent Equipment Officer calms down somewhat.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y wonders if Pete-R also likes to share things, cautioning said clone that the wrong answer will end badly for him. As if to underline that point, he pulls out his own laser pistol.

L4-O finishes his call just in time to hear Pete-R stammer... "Well... er, sharing's good, right?"

Somewher ein Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y begins again with his search for a security room. He eventually finds one on Level 2.

Rest area, Corridor H5-84, JHP Sector

Cryo-R points out that one of their team members failed to show up for briefing. Perhaps it was Stu-O? If that is the message to a probably-invented-on-the-spot-NPC... And, I'm guessing it was without Gligar's consent...

written by Granpire viking man on May 29, 2012 17:44

Oh, right. That makes more sense.

I just guessed it was related to past warnings. My mistake. I find it hard follow anything that's going on with him...

case, it's a good thing he found him, since they need to get going. And with that, he heads off after Kris-R.

Behind him, Stu-R mutters, "They'll let anyone be a Troubleshooter these days. Failing to notice that I'm clearly with another team? That's got to be worth something, surely."

written by Speeder on Jun 02, 2012 20:12

I attempt to get inside the security room, and see what is the clearances, who is working (or not) there, and if anything is working.

written by Kristos on Jun 02, 2012 20:37

The cooperation allows me to relax some. I hum the "which of these is different" theme from the junior citizen loyalty and compliance training videos as my eyes scan the array of equipment. Not doubting what I saw earlier, I concentrate on the spread of laser barrels.

"Something is wrong... right... there!"

I point to a barrel that seems to have an anomaly with the RED coloring.

written by Gligar on Jun 02, 2012 23:41

Security room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

The door is opened, partway, then sticks. The clone on the other side, Speed-Y, steps through and surveys the room, finding the reason for the stuck door at once: the staff here have been terminated, and torn apart. From the remains of their jumpsuits, Speed-Y can determine that they are YELLOW IntSec clones, perhaps three of them.

The room itself is ORANGE, with a YELLOW Computer Terminal at one end, flanked by monitors. The terminal, and some of the monitors, seem to have power, but the cameras they monitor are apparently off-line.

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

Kris-R looks over the team's equipment, spread out for inspection. He sees that everything is in order... but something catches his eye. The colouring on one of the laser pistol barrels is... odd. He points it out to the assembled clones.

The apparent Equipment Officer goes over and looks at it. "Hey, good eye. The colours on this are... well, the shade's good, but... I can't see how many shots are left. That's against regs right there. Which implies that this barrel has been tampered with.

"Come to think of it... I thought you came onto this mission with no ammo, Ralph-R. I distinctly remember giving you two barrels, and here you have three. Where did you get this one?"

"I wanted a holdout," the clone with the laser barrel, presumably Ralph-R, replies. "Is that too much to ask?"

"It is when your holdout is an anomalous barrel." He starts examining the barrel closer. Ralph-R looks distinctly uncomfortable.

written by Jam on Jun 03, 2012 07:44

"So, commies like sharing, and you like sharing... Are you saying you like the same thing that commies do? Are you implying that you're a commie, Pete-R?"

written by Speeder on Jun 03, 2012 15:32

I first try to figure what killed the and if it might kill me too, THEN if I think I am safe, I get inside and examine the bodies more closely.

written by Gligar on Jun 03, 2012 15:57

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Near the checkpoint, tensions begins to flare as the Internal Security clones, who have been trying to gain entry for the last few minutecycles, decide to press the issue. It seems that more than just harsh language might ensue.

Meanwhile, near the warbot, Jam-Y makes a leap of logic and, since Pete-R likes the same thing as the commies (sharing, remember?), concludes that Pete-R must like the commies. As he asks whether that is true, some of the Armed Forces clones begin to take their weapons out of Safe* mode.

"Er, wat? No! I mean, er, if someone of your clearance has need of something, his friends should help him with it!" Pete-R looks uncomfortable.

Security Room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y stops. What could possibly have killed these IntSec clones? Well, from what he's seen recently, it could have been zombies. But how would they have got in here? That's an autoclosing door (which has closed behind him)...

He looks around. There's an air vent up on the ceiling... quite a large one. The grate hangs open.

As for the bodies themselves... it looks like they didn't have any armour, and only a single laser pistol each.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 03, 2012 17:03

I do the eyebrow look at Pete-R.

"Getting a bit nervous looking there, aren't you..."

I keep an eye on Joe as well, and give the area a quick check to make sure nobody has decided to run off. I also note anything else out of the ordinary.

written by Speeder on Jun 03, 2012 20:45

I take my time to take the good YELLOW barrels, never going too near of the air vent, or when I go near it, I keep staring at it...

Then I fit a fresh one in the best condition pistol I can find (my own one, or some of the ones in the ground) and wield it.

Then I examine the air vent more closely, see if I can find any tracks or spilled stuff on it.

* Although that's probably a relative term.

written by Gligar on Jun 03, 2012 23:43

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O raises his eyebrow at Pete-R's discomfort. As he does, he can see Jam-Y slump a little, as if he is suddenly exhausted.

He also looks at Joe, who seems to be trying to edge away from everyone.

He can also hear what sounds like some clones fighting near the checkpoint.

Security room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Noticing the laser pistols, Speed-Y investigates a little further. He notes that out of all three, only four shots have been fired, and all of those were from the same barrel! Interesting.

Moving on to the laser pistols themselves, he notices that none of them are standard Troubleshooter issue. Instead, they're a slightly newer model, designed to be a little more comfortable to use, and the barrel mount seems a little more sturdy. Smiling, he takes one, replacing his old pistol, and loads it with his old barrel as it's still fresh. He thinks about taking the other two fresh barrels.

But he seems distracted by the air vent. Though he can't see anything to support it, he can't shake the feeling that something isn't right.

written by Jam on Jun 04, 2012 01:39

I pant a bit from exhaustion. Then I start laughing slightly...

"Ahaha... I guess you're either hiding something, or you're really paranoid about mutants getting into your mind..."

It's funny though... I used to know a scrubot named Leeroy. From what I'm told, he was originally a clone that got turned into a jackobot, probably because he was a commie or something. Then, because he was still being treasonous, FC had his bot-brain put into a scrubot! Now, I'm not sure who this "Sammy" is, but if he's anything like Leeroy, I doubt he was a very loyal clone during his life... Do you know how boring it is being a scrubot? I'd tell you to ask Leeroy, but I doubt Leeroy is still sane anymore..."

I walk up even closer to Pete-R, and whisper to him so that no other clones can hear.

"You know, I'm starting to think you really are a commie..."

Lucky for you, I'm not looking for commies, I'm looking for the whoever is responsible for destroying the warbot and causing all these clones to turn into zombies... Now, I don't know for sure, but I'm willing to bet the clone that's

written by Speeder on May 29, 2012 22:40

It is related to past warnings 😊

Malkom did that before. (creating hacker NPCs).

I think that NPC is the third he creates or something.

controlling the zombies is a pretty dangerous mutant... It makes sense, doesn't it? The zombies have nanobots in their brains, and a Machine Empathy mutant is controlling the nanobots... This could even be some sort of sick collaboration between Copore Metal and Psion.

You may be a commie, but you also seem to be a pretty strong anti-mutant... Therefore, it seems we share a common enemy, that is, whoever is responsible for the zombies. So, I'll let you live. Friend Computer can deal with you later..."

I grin at him, then make an announcement to the group...

"Whatever he may be, I don't believe he's the clone we're looking for! He lives for now, and we can let FC deal with him later!"

I look to L4-O...

"...unless you want to question him further? He might still know something. Maybe you and John-R can get him to talk..."

written by Speeder on Jun 04, 2012 02:28

I take aim in the air vent with one hand, and try to illuminate it with the other.

I see if I can use the PDC photography equipment, or if not possible, the screen backlight itself, to illuminate the vent.

written by Kristos on Jun 04, 2012 16:00

I wait to hear the results of the Equipment Officer's observations. Eventually, if nothing happens, I suggest that he try firing a shot from the barrel.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 04, 2012 16:27

"Hmmm."

I think for a moment, glaring at Pete-R just long enough to make him feel uncomfortable (or moreso than he already is)

"That shouldn't be necessary right now, but since he's in the Mutant Mashers, I do get to see him later on... and don't worry, we will be talking about this later. Always need to stamp out potential treason right away, of course..."

"Either that or, maybe Pete-R will volunteer to visit a confession booth later. That's an option too..."

I turn away from Pete-R now.

"Anyway, If we clear Joe, then that means our treasonclone is still out there... somewhere. Unfortunately."

"But anyway... on to Joe?"

written by Gligar on Jun 04, 2012 17:00

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y recovers enough from his sudden exhaustion to tell Pete-R that he's either hiding something or really paranoid about mutants, before telling him about Leeroy. Now why'd he change the subject like that...? Oh... right.

He then leans in close and says something that my spybot can't pick up. Let me bring it closer...

...

Oh, he's finished. Never mind. He's now telling the group that he's satisfied that Pete-R is not the clone they're looking for. If there's something else about him, Our Mutual Friend can deal with him. Unless, of course, L4-O would like to question him?

L4-O declines, saying that they'll talk later. Unless Pete-R decides to visit a confession booth in the meantime, of course.

For now, he adds, they should move on to Joe, who is still edging away from the group.

Security room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y moves on to the vent. Armed with his new laser pistol and his PDC, he has a look up there. He can now see that, jugging from the marks in the vent and the state of the grate itself, the grate was forced open from the inside.

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

Kris-R waits as the Equipment Guy looks at the suspect barrel.

Soon, he comes to a conclusion. "You know what could explain the state of this barrel? If it were painted..."

He pulls out a file and uses it on the barrel, and sure enough, the red colouring flakes off, revealing GREEN colouring underneath.

"...like that! What do you have to say for yourself, Ralph-R?"

As the Equipment Guy finishes speaking, the rest of his team pick up their laser pistols again, and point them...

written by Lightning4 on Jun 04, 2012 19:37

"Don't go any further, Joe. That's suspicious behavior. Stay put, and if you have nothing to hide, then you should not have to worry!"

I watch him intently.

written by Jam on Jun 04, 2012 23:38

"Joe!"

I pick another random ELT card, and read the first question to Joe.

written by Speeder on Jun 04, 2012 23:41

I take the most spent barrel I find, hit it in the ground carefully until it starts squealing and throw in the vent, and wait in a corner of the room, away from the vent.

written by Gligar on Jun 04, 2012 23:58

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O calls out to Joe to stay where he is. Does he have something to hide?

Jam-Y is right behind L4-O in this one, as he chooses another ELT card, and asks Joe: if Jam-Y ordered Joe to terminate him, would he do so?

The answer is an emphatic yes.

Security room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Lacking a grenade, Speed-Y looks for some other form of explosive before deciding on the impromptu almost-grenade formed by a malfunctioning laser barrel. Of course, he doesn't have a malfunctioning laser barrel.

Yet.

A good few whacks later, he realises that it'll take more than just being whacked against the floor to make one malfunction. Or at least, these barrels need more than just a few whacks against the floor.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 05, 2012 00:15

"Not sure that was a good card for this situation, Sir..."

I think for a moment.

"Well wait... that was an awfully quick 'yes', wasn't it? That's kind of suspicious!"

I just let Jam-Y handle things, and try to continue my stare. I occasionally glance at Pete-R to make sure he's not doing anything either.

written by Speeder on Jun 05, 2012 00:21

I bite the barrel, not too hard.

Then if it does not work, I throw it anyway and try to hit it in the air...

If that fails too, I look for a B3.

written by Jam on Jun 05, 2012 01:33

I look to L4-O.

"Hey, I'm just picking a random card! I don't decide what the card says! That's all up to... actually, I have no idea who determines what's on these cards... Probably one of those High Programmers that likes to watch everyclone through the cameras or something... I'll bet he would know all kinds of things about loyalty and what signs to look out for to catch treasonous clones!"

I briefly look towards the nearest camera, in case camera-UV is watching or something...

Then I smile towards Joe.

"But you're exactly correct! And I like the speed of your answer! No hesitation at all!"

Now, before we move on to the next question, I got one of my own to ask you... What if L4-O ordered you to terminate me? Then what would you do?"

written by Kristos on Jun 05, 2012 03:45

I do not pick up my laser pistol as that could divert all the attention back to me.

written by Gligar on Jun 05, 2012 17:56

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O has his doubts about that card, and the answer seemed a bit rushed... sounds suspicious.

Jam-Y doesn't think so: he has no control over the contents of these cards - he's not even sure who does, though he believes it to be the High Programmers. (For his information, ELT Cards are regulated by a service firm - the name escapes me right now - under the banner of Internal Security.) And Joe's answer is correct, and with no hesitation! Nice.

He expands on the question by asking: what if the situation was different? What if L4-O had given the order? This time, Joe hesitates a little, before answering, "I... think I'd need to ask for evidence, sir. He's ORANGE, but you're higher."

Security room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y continues to try and damage the laser barrel, by biting it (it tastes metallic, and hurts his teeth), and, when that doesn't work, he just shrugs and throws it anyway... and punches it up into the vent.

That works. The barrel starts squealing, somewhere in the ceiling.

Corridor H7,??, JHP Sector

Kris-R watches the Equipment Guy, and Ralph-R, who is explaining that he didn't know that the barrel was painted. "Yet you've fired off at least one shot from it. How can you fail to notice that the laser's not RED? Hmmm?"

Cryo-R then chooses this moment to make an appearance.

written by Kristos on Jun 05, 2012 19:41

"Cryo-R! We are having a mandatory equipment inspection. Lay all your equipment on the floor for the Equipment Officer to see."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 05, 2012 22:27

"Hmm... very interesting."

I refrain from commenting anymore for now, but my expression mutates around from fascination, puzzlement, and deep thinking, in no particular order.

written by Jam on Jun 05, 2012 23:13

"Okay, sounds like a good answer to me! Now, next question..."

I pick another question on Joe's card, and read it to him.

written by Gligar on Jun 06, 2012 00:22

Corridor H7,??, JHP Sector

Kris-R interrupts the Equipment Officer to tell Cryo-R to join in the equipment inspection. "Sure, why not? The more the merrier, right? Maybe we'll find more painted laser barrels or something..."

Ralph-R replies, "Well gee, maybe I didn't see the colour of the shot amongst all the other shots!"

"That's no excuse unless you're colourblind or something, and that can be corrected. No, I think you knew that was a GREEN barrel. Right, Tom-R?"

Another clone, who is busy writing in a notebook, nods. "Noted... subject: Ralph-R... incident: equipment inspection... summary: illegal laser barrel found during inspection." Based on that, he must be the Loyalty Officer. (It'd be easier if they had MBD Badges. Alas.)

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O looks on with interest. And an interesting expression.

Jam-Y accepts Joe's answer, and moves on. The next question asks him to list three signs that a clone is a member of a secret society. "Er... acts secretive, does funny handshakes, and talks in whispers all the time?"

written by Speeder on Jun 06, 2012 00:37

I try to get away most that I can from where I think the barrel went, and use a body as shield

written by Jam on Jun 06, 2012 00:52

"Wow... You're good at this... You're either a loyal clone or a really smart unloyal one... Why didn't you just take an SDL card? I'm sure you would have done fine at it!"

After he gives a response, I pick another question off his card and read it to him.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 06, 2012 18:06

"Well, there's still the fact he was trying to edge away. That's pretty suspicious, I think!"

I look at Pete-R again to make sure he's not trying to get away either.

written by Gligar on Jun 06, 2012 19:35

Security room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y tries as best he can to protect himself against the ensuing explosion, but is caught out just before he reaches his preferred spot

The barrel explodes, knocking him to the floor, and, apparently, causing damage to the air ducts. If there was anyone in there, they're not in any condition to interrupt him now.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Given Joe's latest answer, Jam-Y wonders why he didn't just take an SDL card. "Well, I don't like them, okay?"

L4-O points out that he did try to get away earlier. He checks Pete-R, and finds that he's still there, but seemingly not paying attention.

Jam-Y then reads off the third, and final, question: What would he do if he found a Junior Citizen with commie propaganda? "Er... I'd take it off him..."

written by Granpire viking man on Jun 06, 2012 21:51

As the others take a more conventional approach, I perform a mandatory secret hygiene inspection on Joe.

Meaning, I look over his clothes to make sure they are suitably clean for a non-commie.

written by Speeder on Jun 06, 2012 22:05

I frown.

"OUCH!"

Then I try to stand and check if I am injured.

If not, I resume loading up barrels.

written by Gligar on Jun 06, 2012 23:09

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

As Joe stammers out his answer, King-R gives him a quick look, and sees that his jumpsuit is covered in soot, sweat and blood.

Security room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y picks himself up, noting that the only injury he has sustained is that his ears are ringing from the blast. Satisfied, he grabs the other two laser barrels.

Now... why did he come here again?

written by Speeder on Jun 06, 2012 23:31

I then choose whatever station looks like can have access to camera feeds.

written by Jam on Jun 07, 2012 00:18

"Take it off him... and do what with it?"

written by Granpire viking man on Jun 07, 2012 00:24

"Joe! I also see that your jumpsuit is absolutely filthy! It contains treasonous levels of blood! Also, it looks like it isn't your blood!"

I gasp.

"Shared blood!?"

written by Kristos on Jun 07, 2012 15:02

Inside, I beam with pride for my MBD badge. 😊

I assist Cryo-R in laying his equipment out for the inspection. ALL of the equipment.

Towards the other team I ask "So, if you may tell, what mission is your team on?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 07, 2012 18:39

I decide to address Sven-O, or whoever is the leader of the group here at the checkpoint.

"I don't suppose any of you have some spare weapons? I'm pretty much out myself, and I think the rest of us are low too. As Equipment Officer, that's my duty of course, to make sure we have some..."

"I mean, I have Turbo, but that's not exactly great for killing single targets without destroying everything else around it."

written by Gligar on Jun 07, 2012 19:06

Security room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Now certain that he won't be interrupted, Speed-Y surveys the room looking for a likely terminal, and finds one, still logged in, which seems to have access to camera feeds. It looks like most of the cameras were knocked offline, but their logs might be accessible.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y prompts him. He hasn't said what he plans to do with this hypothetical commie propaganda.

But Joe doesn't have a chance to answer before King-R interrupts with his hygiene report. Specifically, he wonders about the blood, which he doubts belongs to Joe. Perhaps... it's shared?

"Hey now, when have I had a chance to wash recently?"

L4-O turns to Sven-O and asks if they have any spare weapons, as they're running low. Except for Turbo, but he's a bit too powerful for this job. "I never thought I'd hear a cone rifle user complain about a cone rifle being too powerful," Sven-O comments. "But I'm afraid we're running low ourselves, unless we were to raid the warbot. And I kinda don't want to accidentally set it off again. Even if it's fried."

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

Seeing as Cryo-R has lapsed into id-er, intensive inspection of a random section of clearance stripe, Kris-R assists in removing his equipment for inspection. Specifically he retrieves, and places on the floor, Cryo-R's ME Card, Cryo-R's laser pistol (complete with barrel), Cryo-R's Indestructible Loyalty Transcripts Recorder mark 2 (though the key seems to be elsewhere), Cryo-R's ELT and SDL Cards (I thought they'd vanished in the explosion or something!), and Cryo-R's apple.

"Is that it?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 07, 2012 21:27

"Well, not just too powerful, I think I'm running low on shells useful against those zombies. Gas shells are... not terribly effective I would imagine."

"But yeah, good point, the warbot should just be left alone for now... and it seems like the worst of it is over anyway."

I look momentarily worried.

"I hope."

written by Gligar on Jun 07, 2012 23:41

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O corrects Sven-O, saying that, rather than Turbo being just too powerful, L4-O is actually running low on useful shells. That might have been a problem if the danger had not passed.

Apparently.

Sven-O says, "I see." Then he turns to Joe. "Hey, citizen, the YELLOW asked you a question!"

written by Jam on Jun 08, 2012 01:37

"Hey, Joe, I asked you a question!"

I wait somewhat impatiently for his answer...

written by Granpire viking man on Jun 08, 2012 02:55

I continue eye Joe very suspiciously, waiting for his answer to Jam-Y's question.

written by Kristos on Jun 08, 2012 03:13

"That appears to be it."

I give Cryo-R a light kick to try to get his attention, and to see if anything else falls from his jumpsuit, and because it is fun.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 08, 2012 05:45

In case Joe pretends not to know what he was asked, I remain ready to remind him.

"Hmph... wish Speed-Y were here, he'd be good at inventing unconventional weapons. That's TechServ's job, after all..."

I look at Fred, my hammer, scratch my head for a moment, then check myself for some unused duct tape.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 08, 2012 08:03

"Gasp! A pickpocket!"

I point at Kris-R in a pronounced fashion, much as one might point at someone who has just picked their pocket.

written by Speeder on Jun 08, 2012 18:48

I smile, and happily try to find in the logs the log of the PowerServices team fixing the power panel.

written by Gligar on Jun 08, 2012 19:27

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

It looks like everyone is waiting for Joe to respond to Jam-Y's question. However, he claims not to have heard the question.

Correct me if I'm wrong, but didn't Jam-Y's tone of voice meet CPU Mandate G65-H, concerning the correct tone of voice to use in certain situations? I'm sure it did. Maybe Cryo-R could tell us one way or another. If he weren't stuck examining some random part of JHP Sector.

Luckily, L4-O is ready to remind him. Though he seems preoccupied... he seems to be looking for duct tape. And he finds some, in the form of his old duct tape headband!

He kind of wishes Speed-Y were here, though. He seems to know a lot about improvised weapons...

Corridor G7-??, JHP Sector

Kris-R reports that he has located all of Cryo-R's equipment, and gives Cryo-R a light kick, just to see what will happen.

It turns out to be enough to snap Cryo-R out of his observations and back into the real world, whereupon he realises that Kris-R has his stuff. He begins pointing. With his finger, because his laser pistol is on the ground. The equipment Officer tells him, "Really? Didn't you hear him tell you to present your equipment for inspection? Apparently not, since he decided that more direct action was necessary. It's probably against some regulation, but I'm sure there's a form to cover it somewhere."

"What's happening here?" asks the voice of Stu-R, moments before Stu-R appears round a bend in the corridor. "Oh... him."

"Yeah," the Equipment Officer replies. "He was showing us just how well he can focus on a random section of clearance stripe. Almost... inhumanly so..."

Security office, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y smiles. Just what he needs!

He searches through the logs, and quickly discovers that there is a large chunk missing. Presumably, that corresponds to the power being off. He looks at the power room's logs, selecting the log from around when they were restoring power. From the look of things, they managed to repair the camera circuit at some point, since he can see the team at work, with L4-O at the door peeking in. He's asked them if they have any more information. The YELLOW responds that he has, and that it shouldn't take long to repair the damage. He suggests looking at the security logs. L4-O tells him that he doesn't know where the logs are, except that they'd be in an office somewhere. However, the YELLOW doesn't know where it would be, so L4-O leaves to go look for it.

written by Speeder on Jun 08, 2012 19:31

I see if I can see the slot, and see if on the course of the video someone put, or removes, something from it.

written by Jam on Jun 08, 2012 23:35

I facepalm.

"Ugh... Listen this time! What would you do with the commie propaganda you took from the Junior Citizen?"

written by Gligar on Jun 08, 2012 23:49

Security office, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y keeps watching. In particular, he's looking for that slot, the one which was crudely installed on the panel, which did not have anything connected to it when he was investigating earlier. He has to juggle between several feeds, but the logs show that it was present when the team is working on it. Indeed, one technician seems interested in it, as he can be seen looking at it, and shaking his head. He pokes at it with some unidentifiable tool before one of his colleagues calls him to work on a circuit breaker. L4-O returns to the power room soon after.

[1086]

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Frustrated, Jam-Y repeats his question to Joe. "Oh! I'd dispose of the propaganda, I guess."

written by Speeder on Jun 08, 2012 23:50

I see if anyone else interact with the slot, until the entire team is zombified or dead or fled.

In fact I get also interested on what happen to them.

written by Jam on Jun 09, 2012 00:37

"Would you tell Friend Computer about the propaganda? I'm sure FC would be very interested to know that a Junior Citizen had commie propaganda..."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 09, 2012 17:53

I look sad, but decide to sacrifice my headband for the greater good. I try to tape the knife to the hammer head to the best of my ability, and secure it as much as possible.

If successful, I try a few practice swings. Pointing away from everyone else, of course.

written by Gligar on Jun 09, 2012 19:00

Security office, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y continues to watch the logs as the PowServ YELLOW explains about the sector codes in ID numbers. L4-O looks at the list and picks out a few, asking how to get more information. The YELLOW suggests that they use a card scanner, though L4-O isn't sure they have one. Perhaps their assigned equipment? Otherwise, as the YELLOW says, he'd have to order one from PLC... or do they have a Financial Officer?

At this point, the clones working on their replacement circuit breaker announce that they're ready to install. L4-O tells the YELLOW about Joris-R (what happened to him anyway?), and the YELLOW suggests that he wait until they're done. They install the breaker into the panel - and Speed-Y notices how close they install it to that slot - and... Beep. Beep. Beep.

The YELLOW can be heard to gasp He thought that that was the light circuit! L4-O looks like he wants to run. The PowServ team look like they're looking for the beep. It should be no surprise that it's coming from one of those boxes.

They run, only to run into a complication: BLUE gas. Several of the team can be seen falling to the floor as L4-O manages to pick his way through them and exit the frame.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y demands to know if Joe would inform Friend Computer. "No, I wouldn't trouble Friend Computer with it. The Computer is busy, after all."

Meanwhile, L4-O has decided to sacrifice his headband in order to combine knife and hammer into a weapon. Now done, he swings it a few times. It seems sturdy enough.

written by Speeder on Jun 09, 2012 19:38

I note the PowerServ explanation to L4

And try to see if I can take photos of the frames that allow me to take photos of the YELLOW guy face.

I look around to see if the security station has any access to the clones database, at least a database that can access up to YELLOW clones...

written by Lightning4 on Jun 09, 2012 22:19

"I dub thee... 'Fredinator'."

I put Fredinator away to note what's going on with Joe.

"Perhaps, but Friend Computer is never too busy to take note of potential communists!"

written by Gligar on Jun 09, 2012 23:06

Security office, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y rewinds the footage. He replays the YELLOW's explanation of ID numbers, noting as the YELLOW explains that the first three characters are a sector code. Then, he tries to get a good freeze-frame of the YELLOW so he can take a picture of it. It's a bit blurry due to the close range, but he is able to get some pictures of the YELLOW.

Now, all he needs to do is identify him...

He looks around the room again. Of the other terminals, a couple look promising. Perhaps he could convince them to give him some info on this guy.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Naming his contraption Fredinator, L4-O puts it away, and addresses Jowe. He says that Our Mutual Friend always has time to identify potential communists. Joe visibly reacts. "Really, I disagree."

written by Jam on Jun 09, 2012 23:21

"L4-O is right! How could FC be too busy to take care of commies?!"

written by Speeder on Jun 10, 2012 03:12

I go fiddle with other terminals...

Trying to see if I can run a face recognition, or if I can find information of the PowerServices team assigned to the area.

written by Kristos on Jun 10, 2012 07:26

"Cryo-R... you have taken things out of my pockets how many times with no given reason... and now you complain about me assisting you in a mandatory equipment inspection?! I need you to focus on the mission, not on the wall..."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 10, 2012 17:04

"Or other treasonous clones, for that matter?"

I frown a bit.

written by Gligar on Jun 10, 2012 17:35

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y agrees with L4-O. How can Friend Computer not have time to deal with commies? Or, as L4-O adds, other treasonous clones?

Joe smiles. "Well, it could be dealing with zombies!"

This results in a lot of clicking as the Armed Forces ready their weapons. Sven-O tells him, "Them we'll just have to deal with you. Start talking, And let me add that if we don't like what we hear, your clone will be going back to the range; those targets won't hold themselves up."

Security office, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y gets to work with his new images. It takes a while, but he's able to wheedle an ID number out of the terminals: JHT-323-709-209-360.

But when he asks it to turn that into a name, he finds that the ID server won't give it to him.

written by Speeder on Jun 10, 2012 19:16

I send a message to L4 using my PDC.

"Id of possible power services traitor is JHT-323-709-209-360, please figure a way to investigate this guy.

The person attached to that ID is that YELLOW PowerServices guy"

I then resume fiddling with the video, see if I notice anything else about the slot or the breaker attached near the slot.

written by Gligar on Jun 10, 2012 23:21

Security office, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Since Speed-Y seems to have hit a dead end, he decides to send what he has to L4-O, namely, the ID number of the YELLOW PowServ clone.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Joe tells Sven-O, "What do you want me to say? That I'm a commie, and that I know the names of everyone involved? Because I don't!"

L4-O watches, but realises that his PDC has received a message.

written by Granpire viking man on Jun 11, 2012 04:27

"Aha! So you are a commie, but you just don't know the names of everyone involved!"

"Well, you must know some of them, then!" I challenge fiercely.

written by Jam on Jun 11, 2012 04:51

"Aha! So you are a com—"

I stop as I realize King-R is saying the same thing as me, few secondcycles before me. I wait for him to finish, then glare at him...

"Hey, I was going to say that!"

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 11, 2012 09:07

I try to remain nearby the group. They're probably the best in ensuring that everyone survives.

Not that other group. They're probably on a mission that's unrelated to myself anyway.

I smile, as anything could happen.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 11, 2012 16:01

I shoot a quick 'Thanks, I'll check it out as soon as I can.' message back to Speed-Y.

I then puzzle over how to get back to where I was with the card reader device. Now, I have a code, I just need... hm.

I also look for that YELLOW PowServ clone in the group. I don't make a move yet, I just make sure they're here.

written by Gligar on Jun 11, 2012 19:39

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

As King-R notes, Joe seems to be implying that he is a commie, but he just doesn't know all the names. He challenges Joe to give him the ones he knows.

He doesn't seem to notice Jam-Y glaring at him. He'd been about to say that exact thing!

"And if I do? What will you do then?" Joe replies. L4-O notices that there's an odd glint in his eye.

Speaking of L4-O, he has just sent a reply to his PDC message. Speed-Y should be getting it about now. Now L4-O just has to remember how to read that code... Ah, yes! The card reader! Now where did he leave it...? Oh, yes! He already has it!

He glances at the remaining Power Services clones, to see the YELLOW over there saying something to them.

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Oh hey! MAnGo is on the move. It looks like he has found a group of survivors to stick with. They don't seem to be doing much, other than looking out for zombies. One of them seems intent on the big inert warbot, or rather, what's happening near it. It's strange... almost like she's listening in or something. She mutters something about commies in the Armed Forces.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 11, 2012 20:55

I remain silent, and continue to smile. It'll all get sorted out eventually. All I need... is patience.

written by Gligar on Jun 11, 2012 22:59

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango doesn't do anything. He seems to be just biding his time, and not caring about what is happening.

"Zombies! From Building 1!"

"Get ready!"

Not even as those around him take out makeshift weapons. One turns to him and says, "Hey citizen, have you got a weapon? Now's the time."

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

Cryo-R also seems unconcerned, even as Kris-R calls him to task for complaining after he did the same to Kris-R a couple of times. He even seems unconcerned when the other team's Loyalty Officer picks up his laser pistol again, and, standing right in front of Cryo-R, points it right between Cryo-R's eyes. "Okay, that's enough. I'm convinced you're a mutant, and you're gonna find out, first hand, what we do to mutants here."

written by Speeder on Jun 12, 2012 01:02⁷⁶¹

I then return to the video feeds, and see if I can notice anything new on the new breaker or in the slot, anything that I did not noticed before.

I also see if the breaker attachment caused the beeps or if USING the breaker caused the beeps (or if it was not the breaker fault at all)

written by Granpire viking man on Jun 12, 2012 01:34

Suddenly uneasy at Joe's response, my hands go to my pistols, and I await L4-O's or Jam-Y's decision of what to do with him.

written by Jam on Jun 12, 2012 02:55

I grin at Joe-R...

"Well... How about you tell us everything you know, and I buy you a delicious YELLOW B3... I might even let you live long enough to drink some..."

I suddenly get an extremely sadistic grin on my face...

"Or I could just rip all your fingers and toes off..."

...then your hands and feet...

...then your arms and legs...

...and watch as you slowly die, in extreme agony."

I continue grinning, and take a few steps towards him..

"Wouldn't that be fun?"

written by Granpire viking man on Jun 12, 2012 04:22

My unease subsides, and I grin like Jam-Y.

"That would be fun..."

⁷⁶¹ SPEEDER: (ooc: for some reason my post failed to go →)

written by 4616599 on Jun 12, 2012 05:52

With Mango-R on the move, I bank the Transition forward and continue shadowing him from above.

I try to remember if I still have L4-O's blaster. If I do have it, I ready it, though I avoid firing.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 12, 2012 05:57

I look a little unsettled at Jam-Y's recent... development.

I think for a moment, then get into the largest group of people, preferably right near the YELLOW PowServ clone.

"Okay, since the Loyalty Officer is predisposed right now, and probably wants a distraction should things get... messy... I will do a simple test. I wish to know the names of clones here, and see if your ME cards back them up! This is just to see if you are really who you say, of course. Can't be too careful, and some treasonous clones aren't smart enough to change out their ME cards!"

If clones comply, I start my testing (with the ME card reader if it's necessary for reading ME card names) on clones, and aim to get the YELLOW's name as well. If I get to that clone, I attempt to memorize that name.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 12, 2012 08:41

"I uh..."

I make a check on my current inventory.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 12, 2012 13:47

"Oh, wow! An invitation to lunch!? That's great and all, but unfortunately I'm unable to have lunch this week, as a reward from the computer for being great or something. Oh, also, I'm not a mutant, so you would need to find someone else. Hmm..."

I examine the other clones present, noting whether any of them appear mutant-like in any way.

written by Gligar on Jun 12, 2012 19:56

Security room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y returns to the video terminal, and replays the section of video concerning the installation of the breaker again. And again. And again. And in slow motion. And in reverse. And...

He eventually sees that, when the breaker is activated, there is a pause (during which the YELLOW looks confused), followed by something in the corner of the power room beginning to beep. It's difficult to tell due to the way the cameras are pointed, but it has the same general size and shape as the gas boxes.

Perhaps the two are connected somehow.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

King-R looks uneasy at Joe's reply, and reaches for his laser pistols.

But it turns out to be unnecessary. Jam-Y offers Joe a nice incentive to give them the names of the commies he knows.

Or, failing that, he can resort to pulling Joe apart, limb from limb, until only a bleeding torso is left. King-R thinks that that would be fun. Joe doesn't. Though he still doesn't want to say anything.

"Want us to hold him down, Sir?" asks Sven-O. He, too, seems to be grinning. I thought they were the Mutant Mashers, not the 86547th Jackbooted Thugs...

Meanwhile, another Mutant Masher, specifically L4-O, is busy with the other survivors. He has decided to conduct a little test of his own, involving ME Cards, and probably his (well, Joris-R's) card scanner. Specifically, he wants to see if everyone's ME Card matches who they say they are.

John-R decides to go first. "John-R-SMR-4, sir." He hands over his ME Card. L4-O looks at it, and discovers that it matches, and that his ID number is SMR-323-353-554-362.

One of the PowServ ORANGES goes next. He says that his name is Bill-O-RPO-3, and allows L4-O to look at his card. The mane matches, and the ID number is RPO-323-061-940-330.

He is about to continue when it becomes apparent that Joe isn't talking. As such, the other Mutant Mashers begin to grab him...

Somewhere In the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango starts to answer, when he realises that he can't remember what he has! He checks his pockets... to find that all he has, apart from his ME Card, is this message packet. Admittedly, it's made of heavy cardboard with hard plastilike inserts to protect the contents...

Floating above, Joris-R snaps out of a daze. He notices that the zombies are approaching the group below, and readies L4-O's blaster. (Yes, he still has it. I guess it makes up for L4-O having his ME Card scanner. Maybe, kind of.)

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

Cryo-R finally notices that he has been spoken to, and, of course, misses the point. He says that he can't join them due to a "reward" given to him by The Computer. And besides, he's not a mutant. Maybe someone else is? He looks, but doesn't see anyone else acting in a mutant-like fashion (but then, he doesn't know how mutants act in general, so how would he know if someone was acting like one?)

The Loyalty Officer scoffs. "Hah! Only a mutant would claim that he is not a mutant!" He pulls the trigger...

"It's jammed!"

"What? You were firing it an hourcycle ago! That must be due to improper maintenance!"

"Or perhaps luck on his part", the Loyalty Officer spits. "Perhaps uncanny luck!"

The others begin to pick up their weapons.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 12, 2012 20:14

"So far so good."

I turn to glance at the commotion with Joe, but attempt to resume my name-collecting process a few moments after.

If there is a logging feature on the ME Card scanner, I try to activate it so I don't have to remember all of these IDs. If not, then I just try to remember some of the more important ones so I can cross-reference them with my list.

Though, I already know the PowServ clones were in there so...

written by Kristos on Jun 12, 2012 21:53

If I am standing in the line of fire, I calmly sidestep. I ask Cryo-R, "Are you a mutant?" Then I ask the Loyalty Officer, "Are you a mutant?"

written by Speeder on Jun 12, 2012 21:53

I grin happily. And start to rush back toward the power room...

written by Gligar on Jun 12, 2012 23:07

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O looks over at his squadmates' treatment of Joe, but quickly returns to the task at hand. By the time he's ready to collect a third name (Janet-PPE-2, one of the survivors, code PPE-324-024-321-251) they have dragged Joe to the ground.

Before he continues, he checks the card scanner's app. It seems that it's already logging the cards it has read. As well as the remaining credit associated with each card - it is a financial app, after all.

He moves on to a fourth: the YELLOW. "I'm Rick-Y-JHT-2, citizen." He holds out his ME Card to scan.

Corridor H7-?? JHP Sector

Far from being alarmed at the team's actions, Kris-R simply ensures that he out of the line of fire. He then asks Cryo-R, and the Loyalty Officer, whether they are mutants. "I think that should be self-evident, don't you? The answer is, of course, no."

Power room, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

A grinning Speed-Y runs into the power room. It seems that he has found something.

written by Kristos on Jun 13, 2012 03:13

To the Loyalty Officer, "With all due respect, you just said only a mutant would claim that he is not a mutant..."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 13, 2012 06:49

I proceed to scan the YELLOW's card. I make sure to be extra careful to scrutinize the card to make sure he really is who he says he is.

If everything checks out, I thank the YELLOW and proceed to a few more nearby clones I haven't checked yet.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 13, 2012 08:06

"How very suspicious!"

I proceed to pick up my various items off the floor, since that seems to be what everyone else is doing. I pick up any other items that might have been left for me on the floor as well.

written by Gligar on Jun 13, 2012 19:02

Corridor H7-?? JHP Sector

Kris-R notes that the Loyalty Officer just said that only mutants say that they aren't mutants. Yet the Loyalty Officer just said that he's not a mutant...

Cryo-R notices it too. He begins to pick up his equipment again, and notices the RED/GREEN laser barrel nearby, and picks it up...

"Hey! What are YOU doing now?! That's evidence! Drop it right now, mutant!"

Looks like the Loyalty Officer noticed that, too. Not just him, but Stu-R, as well. The latter can no longer control himself, and fires.

The shot misses.

"I... think I agree on the uncanny luck. He's definitely a mutant. So, you all know what to do."

It doesn't take long, before... Zap zap zap zap zap zap-

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

While Joe struggles to escape from the grasp of his (possibly former) squad-mates, L4-O scrutinises the offered ME Card. He discovers that:

- The ID number is embossed correctly, and reads JHT-323-709-209-360.
- The Eye-of-the-Computer hologram, just below the Mercantile Express logo, looks as it should.
- The e-ink screen looks intact, and displays Rick-Y's likeness, along with a YELLOW clearance stripe. Displayed on the stripe is the name RICK-Y-JHT-2.
- The contacts for the card's chip do not seem to have been tampered with.
- The card's background looks to have been printed properly, and prominently displays a Power Services emblem. It's just a shame that the "contactless" logo covers part of it.

"Satisfied?" Rick-Y asks.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 13, 2012 21:26

I nod.

"Indeed, sir!"

I hand back his card, and try to proceed to a few other nearby clones, so it doesn't seem too suspicious.

written by Speeder on Jun 13, 2012 22:04

I look around, grinning, and go see the place where the new breaker is supposed to be, if the breaker is there, and what it is activating

written by Gligar on Jun 13, 2012 23:39

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

It seems that L4-O is indeed satisfied. He hands the YELLOW his card, and moves on to another clone, who identifies herself as Sue-O-AQI-3. Her ME Card seems to match up, and gives her ID number as AQI-322-421-998-376. The card reader agrees with the card.

He continues with Reeg-R-HOY-4 (HOY-324-001-250-240), and Ken-NNN (NNN-323-951-001-275).

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y continues to grin as he investigates where the new breaker should be on the panel. Indeed, it is present, and is connected to a circuit which bears a PowServ code.

But there's an odd, very thin flying lead connected to it. It snakes out, leading from the breaker to the odd slot in the panel. It's hot to the touch, and Speed-Y can't be sure if it's smouldering or not.

written by Kristos on Jun 14, 2012 02:09

"Cryo-R! What, is part of your brain missing? I need you to start acting reasonable!"

written by Cryoburner on Jun 14, 2012 02:57

"Yes! We really should get back to the mission! We can't just chat with our suspicious friends all day!"

I begin sprinting off in the direction of the mission. Or, at least, in a direction that looks somewhat mission-like.

Noticing that the barrel looks somewhat suspicious as well, I toss it back to our suspicious friends, seeing as it probably belongs to them.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 14, 2012 16:26

Reasonably satisfied with my job to get the YELLOW's information, I check to see how many other clones remain unchecked in the group.

After, I also see what's going on with Joe and the rest over there...

written by Gligar on Jun 14, 2012 18:58

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

Over the zapping comes the sound of voices. One wonders if part of someclone's brain is missing. The other asserts that they should get on with the mission.

"Cease fire!"

The zapping stops.

Slowly, the air clears, revealing Kris-R standing there, looking at a squealing laser barrel, which currently sits in the vicinity of the body of the Loyalty Office. He's been blasted with what seems to be a dozen laser shots.

Cryo-R is nowhere to be seen. Let me track his ME Card...

Corridor H7-91, JHP Sector

As it happens, he's right at the other end of the corridor, staring at yet another popout turret, as well as a bulkhead which has just dropped into place.

What's interesting about this turret is that it's not a laser turret, but a slugthrower turret. It's packing two heavy slugthrowers, and they're aimed right at Cryo-R's heart. "Just where do you think you are going, mutant?!" The Computer booms at him. "It seems that you were able to evade my scans! Well, I have found you! Do you have any last words?!"

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O looks around at the group, and sees that there are four more clones he has not checked. In this group, at least. Though, since he has accomplished his goal, namely to check Rick-Y, is there really any reason to continue?

Especially when the Mutant Mashers are currently... well, not mashing, but at least issuing a beating to Joe?

written by Lightning4 on Jun 14, 2012 19:26

Not to feel incomplete in what I said I would do, I at least give the ME Cards on the four clones a passing glance, without scanning.

If everything checks out, I state.

"Hm. Well, no traitors found that way. Means any potential traitors here are more intelligent... and dangerous..."

I glance over at Joe and the beatdown on him.

"Well, maybe not always those..."

I think for a moment, and decide to check the ME card log for anything anomalous about the clones finances. Not that I'm a financial officer though, so I don't hold too much hope for that.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 14, 2012 20:11

"Oh, hello computer! It seems as though some clones have misinformed you about me being some kind of mutant or something. I wonder if it was those suspicious clones back there."

I gesture down the corridor toward some suspicious clones.

"They were looking for a mutant to take with them to lunch or something, and seemed to mistakenly think that I was one. I clearly am not though, so I had to decline. If you'd like, I could take an additional scan to make sure though. It's unfortunate that they wasted your time with such frivolous accusations."

"In any case, I'm just on my way to my currently assigned mission, to do mission-things."

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 14, 2012 20:40

"...I guess not. Though I do have plastilyke. Will that help?" I ask.

written by Jam on Jun 15, 2012 01:15

I look at Joe, and observe his situation...

"Willing to talk yet?"

written by Gligar on Jun 15, 2012 01:20Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

So as not to leave it unfinished, L4-O has a quick look at the cards of the other four clones. They seem to be in order. This means that potential traitors must be more clever than that. Well, not counting Joe, who seems to have lost consciousness.

Then he has a thought, and has a closer look at the scan logs. Immediately, he can see that Rick-Y's credit balance is flagged as unusually high, at 8,250 cr.

Jam-Y wonders if Joe is ready to talk. Of course, since Joe's out cold, he's not really in a position to do so.

Corridor H7-91, JHP Sector

Cryo-R asserts that The Computer has been misinformed about his being a mutant. "Misinformed?! My information is accurate! Unless you are insinuating that I have MADE A MISTAKE?!"

The turret opens fire, silencing Cryo-R forever.

Main Cloning Station, BRN Sector

A terminal spits out a report:

```
 Moving clone template to inactive status:
Name: Cryo-R-BRN; ID=BRN-323-629-647-417
Reason: Clone family exhausted
```

```
Clone template and MemoMax transfer in progress.
Destination: Archive Vault 17, [DFSR] Sector
```

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango reports that he has no weapons, just plastilyke. "Well, your plastilyke had better be sharp. Here they come!"

The zombie group reaches the survivor group, and starts to attack...

written by Jam on Jun 15, 2012 01:57

"Excellent!"

I walk up to Joe.

"Now we can begin..."

I pause for dramatic effect.

"...the extraction."

written by Kristos on Jun 15, 2012 03:01

My jaw drops to the floor. Well, not really. But I probably have a blank open dumb stare on my face.

The loyalty officer. He was a bit gruff, but I kind of liked his dedication.

My loyalty officer. He was kind of insane, but I always felt he would play some key role in preserving Alpha Complex's future.

At least the other loyalty officer should make a reappearance soon. Cryo-R doesn't seem likely to be seen again.

Now I am a team of one. This changes everything. Or nothing, actually.

Scan evasion? Who... what was Cryo-R?

In my state of semi-shock, I avoid the temptation to struggle for answers and instead answer the call for survival.

"Run! The GREEN laser barrel is squealing!"

I find the nearest object to hide behind, or just run down the corridor.

Hopefully after the dust settles Friend Computer, the other team, and myself can have a little heart-to-heart discussion on present and future matters.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 15, 2012 03:53

"Hrm. Curious."

I take out my PDC and send Speed-Y a message.

The YELLOW's name is Rick-Y-JHT-2.

No obvious outward signs of treason, but this card reader has him flagged for unusually high spending. Perhaps not a sign of treason, but perhaps it is. I'll try to get as much more information as I can, but since I'm only ORANGE I probably can't get as much as you can, or the actual Financial Officer can.

I put my PDC away and try to see if the ME Card Reader will give me any more information on the matter. I also try to make sure the YELLOW isn't close enough to me to see what I'm doing.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 15, 2012 12:02

I swing my plastilyke at the zombies! No time to check how sharp it is, too many zombies around!

I look to see if the plastilyke is actually effective against zombies.

written by Granpire viking man on Jun 15, 2012 13:17

I stare at Jam-Y, wondering worriedly at what he's planning to "extract".

written by Gligar on Jun 15, 2012 19:34

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Now that Joe is unconscious, Jam-Y steps up. It seems that he wants to "extract" something from Joe... perhaps thoughts, perhaps names, who knows? King-R certainly doesn't. He looks on, concerned.

The Mutant Mashers seem surprised, and a little alarmed. "Just what sort of mutant are you?" one exclaims.

Jam-Y concentrates. It turns out to be quite difficult to do what he wants, since he's apparently trying something he's never done before. But... that can't be right... he's pulled information from clones before, right?

Well, whatever it was, it didn't seem to work. Joe seems as unconscious as ever, and Jam-Y looks thoroughly drained. So, he tries a different tactic... involving pulling off Joe's boots... but ends up falling to the floor, apparently asleep.

Meanwhile, L4-O has walked down the roadway a little to give himself a little room to send a message to Speed-Y. He suggests that his security clearance might not be enough to get any more information, but perhaps Speed-Y can. (Although, as he soon finds out, the lack of information is due to the PDC he's using to get information from the scanner, which, as you'll recall, is Joris-R's old one.)

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

As the thundering of the heavy slugthrowers fades into the dull sound of motors raising the bulkhead, Kris-R appears dumbstruck. He's just witnessed the deaths of two Loyalty Officers... and though one is likely to return soon, the other probably won't. And this might be a bad thing. Kris-R always thought that Cryo-R was somehow important for the future of Alpha Complex... but perhaps...

The Computer's words replay in his mind. What was Cryo-R? Was he a mutant after all?

...The squeal of the barrel pulls him out of his shock.

He realises that he needs to run...

Corridor H7-91, JHP Sector

He finds himself near the body of Cryo-R when the barrel explodes.

As for the other team? They probably went the other way. Probably.

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Having no other option, Mango begins attacking zombies with his plastilyke. It turns out to make a pretty good blunt weapon... until one piece breaks. Then it turns out that it's quite sharp.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 15, 2012 20:35

I think, then take out my PDC and add another message to Speed-Y:

Update, Turns out that Joris-R's old PDC can't really get the information. Don't you have a new one, sir? If we meet up again eventually we can try it. I'm not sure anyone else has a new PDC, or would be willing to let me use it.

I put my PDC back away and go over to Jam-Y to make sure he's okay.

"I guess everything today has taken energy out of everyone..."

I check to see if I still have any of those VitaYum bars left.

written by Speeder on Jun 15, 2012 22:14

I read the messages an reply.

[1093]

"I am doing a TechServices investigation of sorts here... After I am done I will go to you and lend my YELLOW PDC."

I search if in my memory or data I know the power services symbol that has the small wire.

written by Kristos on Jun 15, 2012 23:01

I attempt to dive behind Cryo-R's body as the initial shock arrives. I knew he was going to be important to the mission!

written by Gligar on Jun 15, 2012 23:52

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O makes a quick addendum to his message to Speed-Y, requesting the use of Speed-Y's Series 1500.

Then he suggests that everyone might be tired after recent events, and looks for any more of those VitaYum bars. Unfortunately, he seems to have none left.

Power room, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y replies that he's busy right now, but will join the team when he's done.

Then he attempts to decipher that PowServ code. Hmm... the code doesn't seem to say anything about flying leads... that's supposed to be a lighting circuit...

Corridor H7-91, JHP Sector

Kris-R is already down, using the body of Cryo-R as a blast shield. See? He was right about Cryo-R being important to the mission! He even saved Kris-R from serious injury! 😊

I guess the nigh-indestructible case of the loyalty recorder helped, too...

written by Speeder on Jun 16, 2012 00:21

I turn off the breaker and see if the lights turn off.

Then I turn it on again and see what happen.

Then I turn it off again.

written by Gligar on Jun 16, 2012 18:43

Power room, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y decides to function-test the breaker... by repeatedly cycling it.

The first thing he notices is that the breaker seems to work. The second thing is that it doesn't seem to be doing anything to the lights.

The third thing is that that thin wire catches fire.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 16, 2012 22:01

I frown after discovering I'm out of food.

"Hm. Anyone else have food for Jam-Y? He probably needs a recharge after... whatever that was."

written by Gligar on Jun 17, 2012 00:48

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Since he's fresh out., L4-O wonders if anyone else has any food, since Jam-Y might need it.

One survivor replies, "I have a VitaYum bar..."

written by Jam on Jun 17, 2012 03:06

Indeed, I am rather hungry, though it's not like I'm noticing my hunger at the moment.

Instead, I continue to lie on the ground...

written by Kristos on Jun 17, 2012 03:21

After the bast is over I gather what remains of my and Cryo-R's equipment, survey the damage, and, if reasonable, walk to the center of the blast site.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 17, 2012 08:25

"That'll do, if you're willing to part with it."

If the survivor hands it over, I keep it ready in case Jam-Y decides he's able to wake up.

If he doesn't wake up yet, I try waving it under his nose.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 17, 2012 11:52

I keep swinging! Now that the plastilyke is sharp, it should work even better against the zombies than when it wasn't!

I try not to cause too much stress to the plastilyke however.

written by Gligar on Jun 17, 2012 18:44

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y twitches in his sleep, almost as if he is dreaming of food... perhaps VitaYum bars? I mean, L4-O can just take the one from the survivor - which he does - and tempt him with it, like so, so that the smell permeates his dreams...

Given previous experience with food and sleeping clones, it's probably enough to wake him up.

Corridor H7-91, JHP Sector

Picking himself up after the explosion, Kris-R starts gathering up equipment. He's able to recover most of the team's equipment - mostly his, and most of Cryo-R's (namely the loyalty transcripts recorder, and his "laser pointer", MBD badge, nametag, and ME Card) is relatively intact.

That done, he heads back to the site of the explosion.

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

He finds that the corridor has suffered extensive damage here, consistent with a grenade going off. Some of the other team's equipment lies ruined, but the team themselves are missing.

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango keeps swinging with his plastilyke "weapons". They're quite effective at keeping the zombies at bay - he's even able to kill one or two - though they manage to get some swings in as well. He's getting a bit cut up... perhaps he should try harder?

written by Speeder on Jun 17, 2012 19:17

I look puzzled.

I start to turn off and on again the other breakers, until I find one that turns off the light, and then I take note of what symbol it is, and compare with what it should actually control.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 17, 2012 20:34

If Jam-Y wakes up, I promptly give him the VitaYum bar and back off.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 17, 2012 20:48

I try, and try, and try a little more than I already do.

written by Speeder on Jun 17, 2012 21:07

I look puzzled.

I start to turn off and on again the other breakers, until I find one that turns off the light, and then I take note of what symbol it is, and compare with what it should actually control.

written by Gligar on Jun 17, 2012 23:20

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks puzzled, and starts testing breakers... hmmm, let's see... nope... no... not that one... aha! We have light!

Now... according to those files, that should be the "Ventilation 2" circuit...

That apparently confuses him so much that he promptly does the whole thing again, as if he forgot he did it or something

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O watches Jam-Y and, noticing him wake up, hands over the VitaYum bar and backs off.

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango redoubles his fighting efforts. He's able to slice off the leg of one zombie, causing it to fall and knock down another couple of zombies, giving him a little breathing room.

written by Speeder on Jun 18, 2012 00:58

I now look a bit less confused.

I decide then to see what breakers affect the ventilation, using the same trial and error method, and see what symbol is on it.

written by Jam on Jun 18, 2012 02:38

I take the VitaYum bar and attempt to eat it. I make a note of how VitaYummy it is...

written by Kristos on Jun 18, 2012 04:39

I backtrack to the rest area and look for a vending machine. After purchasing the first food item I see of RED clearance, I head up the escalator and begin my search for Corridor J2-05. I've got to find that transtube station. I've got to head to R&D of... where was it? No matter, it'll come to me. For now - the transtube station.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 18, 2012 16:36

I just... watch Jam-Y for now.

written by Gligar on Jun 18, 2012 19:49

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Now suitably un-confused, Speed-Y sets about finding the ventilation circuit. However, after flipping several switches, the smell of fried electronics comes from somewhere. Looks like he damaged something. And from the magnitude of the smell, it must be something important.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y grabs the VitaYum bar and chows down. It's at least 15.43% more VitaYummy than the leading brand!

L4-O just watches.

Corridor H7-??, JHP Sector

Kris-R backtracks, trying to remember where he came from, and eventually reaches the rest area.

Rest area, Corridor H5-84, JHP Sector

Once there, he looks at the vendobots, and decides on a packet of Soylent RED. That done, he moves on, heading back up the escalator.

Corridor G6-61, JHP Sector

Now, let's see... how to get to J2-05... hmmm, didn't the terminal say it was down from here?

written by Jam on Jun 18, 2012 19:55

"Yum yum! Thank L4-O! Where'd you even get this from? This is delicious!"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 18, 2012 20:47

"One of the survivors had it, thank them!"

I smile a little, seeing that Jam-Y is pleased.

written by Gligar on Jun 18, 2012 23:16

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y expresses his appreciation for the VitaYum bar, and wonders where L4-O got it from. L4-O directs him to the survivor, who, of course, volunteered the bar.

[1095]

Meanwhile, it looks like Joe won't be waking up any time soon.

Also... remember those IntSec clones who were trying to gain entry? It seems that they have managed to get past the Armed Forces...

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Mango and his group of survivors keep fighting, felling a couple more at the cost of one of their own.

written by Kristos on Jun 18, 2012 23:37

After walking up the escalator for several minutes, deep in thought, I tire of the constant pace and rest for a while. Then I suddenly remember a clue... GO DOWN! So I turn around and find myself... already down, at the foot of the escalator. I search for any means to go /further/ down.

written by 4616599 on Jun 19, 2012 16:34

I notice casualties in Mango's group.

"Intervention time!"

Now fairly alarmed, I move the Transition until I have a good line of sight, and open fire with L4-O's blaster.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 19, 2012 18:56

I look towards the IntSec clones and start noting them for any suspicious behavior.

"Can we help you?"

written by Gligar on Jun 19, 2012 19:08

Corridor H5-84, JHP Sector

After continuing to walk up an escalator for a while - and he somehow managed to get back on the down escalator without realising it - Kris-R realises that he's gone nowhere. He needs to go down, not up. Perhaps some mutant is responsible? 😊

Of course, to go further down, he'll need some sort of transport. Say, didn't he pass a lift earlier when he was running away?

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

While Mango and friends continue to fight, there are just too many zombies to make any appreciable dent in their numbers.

Perhaps a blaster, wielded by someone above, will help in felling them. A blaster such as the one carried by Joris-R, for instance. And indeed, he's able to at least distract some of the zombies by drilling a nice hole in one of them, allowing Mango and friends to breathe (slightly) easier.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O looks over at the IntSec clones. They're approaching the group in a manner that suggests that anyone getting in their way will meet the same fate as the Armed Forces clones at the checkpoint.

L4-O asks them if he can help. "You can help by telling me what you know about an illegal server access in Building 2 of Subsector B!" one growls at him.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 19, 2012 19:24

I frown having been growled at and look the clone who addressed me straight in the eyes.

"Honestly? I don't much like that attitude, we're dealing with more than just illegal server access here, like, I don't know,"

My eyes widen and my voice reaches a growl only a sergeant is capable of,

"several hundred zombie clones and the clones who committed this act in the first place!"

I calm myself for a moment and think... suddenly I remember something and try to suppress a look of worry.

"So either whoever did the unauthorized access is one of those treasonous clones who came here, a zombie causing more havoc, or, Friend Computer forbid, actually someone on our side trying to get this mess solved in the first place. They might even already be dead."

written by Speeder on Jun 19, 2012 21:30

I frown.

I try to remember what breaker fried something, take note of what it is supposed to do, and go check the fried the thing... on the way I see if I find something else fried, so I can figure what I fried, and what code it belonged to...

I look confused with all the code switching.

written by Gligar on Jun 19, 2012 23:30

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O glares at the IntSec clone, who, as it turns out, is a BLUE. He states that he does not like that attitude, and anyway, they're dealing with more than an illegal access here. They're dealing with a Code 3-Zed. Not to mention the clones who caused said situation.

Though, he adds, perhaps the two are related. Perhaps the access was caused by the perpetrator, or perhaps a zombie. Or maybe it was caused by someone trying to put an end to it.

The BLUE responds in kind. "First," he says, getting right up to L4-O's face, "I don't like the tone of your voice. Second, there is no such thing as a zombie.. Do you understand me? Therefore, you soldier types can get moving, and return to blowing up bushes outside! We don't need your help here."

Sven-O answers that with, "With respect... sir, we're in a Code 3-Zed situation here. That means that by coming here, you've broken quarantine. I bet Our Mutual Friend would love to know about how you've just let zombies out of the subsectors!"

It becomes clear that Sven-O is referring to his fallen squadmates, killed by IntSec, who are beginning to rise...

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Since he's caused it, Speed-Y tries to find out what fried, and to what it was connected.

As it turns out, the fried smell came from the cameras. And, tracing wires around, Speed-Y finds that those cameras are connected to a breaker labelled "Door control 3"... it's so confusing...

written by Speeder on Jun 19, 2012 23:34

I look confused.

And worried that I friend cameras, Friend Computer dislike that in particular...

I decide to walk again to the security room...

written by Lightning4 on Jun 20, 2012 01:56

I say, almost smugly, "I suppose those don't exist then? Tell you what, you made the mess, you get to clean it up, seeing as you're the ones at fault here for... let's see, and someone maybe catalog this for future use:"

I run down a mental checklist.

"1. Murder of loyal armed forces clones, certainly not something we look too kindly on."

"2. Failing to observe Code 3-Zed protocol, as Sven-O stated."

"3. Breaking aforementioned protocol by releasing zombies from the quarantine zone..."

"4. Interfering with an Armed Forces operation directed by Friend Computer."

"5. Contradicting Friend Computer. You said there's no such things as zombies. Since Friend Computer declared the Code 3-Zed, zombies must exist. Saying otherwise, and you're saying Friend Computer is a liar."

"6. Littering."

I smile.

"That's a pretty impressive record right there. Persisting will also net you 'Interfering with a Troubleshooter Operation', which, with the presence of Troubleshooter Team Epsilon, it is."

written by Kristos on Jun 20, 2012 02:39

I make my way to where I remember a lift being before. If the lift still exists, I enter and request to be placed as near Corridor J2-05 as possible.

written by 4616599 on Jun 20, 2012 12:41

I continue firing.

I then look around for any getaway routes the group could use. I also see if the Industrial Subsector B checkpoint is visible from my current position, and its status.

written by Jam on Jun 20, 2012 15:10

I finish my VitaYum bar... Mmmm...

Then I look over at the new zombies that are appearing...

"ZOMBIES! They're getting past the barrier! Make sure they are destroyed before they spread!"

With that order sent out, I notice L4-O arguing with a BLUE clone... That's odd, I don't remember that clone being here before. He must have crossed the quarantine barrier!

I stand up and run over to them. After listening to what L4-O has to say, I point my laser pistol at the head of the BLUE clone.

"Sir! By entering here, you have violated Friend Computer's orders! Code 3-Zed clearly states that no clone may enter or leave the Industrial Subsectors, or they will be terminated by the Armed Forces clones who were guarding the subsectors! Since you appear to be resisting Friend Computer's orders, I have to assume you are a traitor!"

I turn to our group of Armed Forces clones.

"You have your orders, straight from Friend Computer, to terminate every clone that has just entered the Industrial Subsectors from the outside! You're not going to disobey Friend Computer, are you?"

Speaking of FC..."

I also try to contact Friend Computer.

"Friend Computer! This clone and his team have just violated Code 3-Zed protocols! Permission for Team Epsilon to assist Armed Forces in their termination?"

written by Gligar on Jun 20, 2012 18:40

Power room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y's confusion gives way to worry. Things are going to suck at debriefing...

Oh well. He heads back to the security room.

Security room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

He arrives to find that the security monitors are now only showing static.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O points out that this would mean that the zombies which are spreading out right now behind the BLUE must not exist either. So... perhaps IntSec should clean up after themselves. They'd better get used to it, given their current rap sheet. Perhaps they'd like to add to it? If not, they should stay out of the way.

"Yeah?" growls the BLUE. "You forget who you're talking to. The Computer will believe me more than you. You, who interfered with this vital operation!"

By now, Jam-Y has finished his Vita-Yum bar, and has noticed the new batch of zombies. He screams for someone to deal with them before they escape. Some of the Armed Forces find themselves doing just that as they're attacked.

[1097]

He then notices the BLUE, and the other IntSec clones. Realising that they must have broken quarantine, he decides to challenge the BLUE directly. Pointing his laser pistol, he repeats some of L4-O's accusations, reminding him of the Code 3-Zed protocols. Which, as he points out, means that the Armed Forces-

He doesn't get a chance to finish, as the BLUE barks. "Enough, mutant! Men, FIRE!"

Everyone seems to do so, all at once...

When the smoke clears... nothing has happened.

Well, except for Jam-Y calling out to The Computer.

For a moment, nothing seems to happen.

Then, the hulk of the warbot begins to emit some horrendous metallic groans, almost as if something is compelling it to overcome its massive damage and turn around.

A voice sounds through its speakers. "Assuming direct control."

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Joris-R keeps shooting, even as the group keeps fighting. Together, they're able to... well, hold the line.

Joris-R looks around for an escape route, and discovers that the zombies are lesser in number in the direction of Building 1.

Corridor H7-72, JHP Sector

Kris-R heads back to where he remembers the lift to be, to find that the doors have gone. But it looks like he could still call the lift, and use it.

He does so. It doesn't take long for it to arrive, so he enters and directs it to head to his destination. It begins to head down.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 20, 2012 18:50⁷⁶²

I start backing away slowly at first, then a bit more quickly until I'm safely away from the BLUE and his team.

"I sure hope that's Friend Computer."

I stop moving and hold my position, and watch the warbot with a fairly worried expression on my face.

written by Jam on Jun 20, 2012 21:44

I maintain my position, to show the BLUE clone that I'm confident that Friend Computer won't allow a loyal clone like myself to come to harm. Okay, I might be just a little scared to move, since I was just shot at by multiple clones. I'm lucky to even be alive, let alone surviving that unscathed. Plus, from what I've seen, warbots don't seem to like clones that move.

"Friend Computer! Is that you?"

I suddenly feel the urge to run from the warbot, and try very hard to resist that urge.

"Uh, it seems this clone has also ordered his team to fire on me merely because I am a mutant! A registered mutant, I might add!"

written by Gligar on Jun 20, 2012 23:28

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

On hearing the voice speaking through the warbot, L4-O backs away. Is that... The Computer? The voice sounds very similar, only with a hint of High Programmer, and... not as booming. Perhaps the speakers are damaged? Or is it being controlled by a subnode? L4-O realises that he probably lacks the security clearance to find out.

He stops moving and starts watching. At the same time, Jam-Y is also not moving. Whether through bravery, fear, or sheer defiance, he stands there. He asks if that is Friend Computer, probably in order to distract his mind from its desire to make him run away from the shell-of-a-warbot-being-controlled-by-something-else. "I am here," the voice responds.

Jam-Y continues, saying that the BLUE has ordered his execution, simply because he is a mutant... a registered mutant. There is a pause, followed by a loud, deep grinding, accompanied by copious amounts of sparks and smoke as the warbot hulk is sloooooowly forced into attack position. "Perhaps he has a reason? Explain."

written by Speeder on Jun 21, 2012 00:02

I first check if the logs still are fine.

Then I start to search on them, the fast as I can, when someone switched symbols around or rerouted cables around.

written by Kristos on Jun 21, 2012 01:47

I speak to the lift: "I am on a mission to investigate a laser barrel factory sabotage. Could you provide any recent news on the incident, appropriate to a RED clone?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 21, 2012 02:02

I try to call Sven-O over to my position, or if he's close by, I merely go to him myself.

If I do get near him, I lower my voice and ask:

"Not to doubt Friend Computer or anything, but what will happen if what's left of that warbot tries to attack? If that bot can produce a beam like that, I can't help but wonder what kind of explosion it could do if it experiences a nasty weapons malfunction."

written by Jam on Jun 21, 2012 13:23

Hmm... That voice almost has a hint of High Programmer in it... This must be a really serious issue, if the UVs are getting involved. It's not very often we get to hear from an ULTRAVIOLET. Of course, a zombie invasion has the potential to become a sector-wide disaster, it makes sense that the clone that watches over the sector would become involved... Looks like the BLUE really screwed this one up!

⁷⁶² LIGHTNING4: (OOC: Harbinger? We're all toast now.)

I grin despite my fear, suddenly feeling very confident now that both FC and the High Programmer have become involved.

I also listen to what the BLUE has to say... Heh, I bet this is gonna be really FUN to watch!

written by Gligar on Jun 21, 2012 19:26

Security room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y checks the logs, looking to see if he can find any clue as to how the power room's breakers got in the state they're in. Perhaps someone switched the codes round, or messed with cables...

But he can't anything concrete. All he can see is that the pattern of codes is different in the log just before the power outage... and hey, doesn't that INFRARED clone in the vid look familiar?

Kris-R's lift, JHP Sector

As the lift descends, Kris-R asks the lift for a news report concerning his mission. "There is little concrete information, citizen. Much of what is available is beyond your security clearance. However, from the remaining data, it can be assumed that the production lines have been damaged in some way."

With that, the doors open.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O edges towards Sven-O, and asks what would happen if the warbot hulk were to have another weapons malfunction. "That plasma beam seems to have fried the plasma generator, so I doubt the thing's up to the same level. No, I think a malfunction would blow the whole thing up. And I think it's still armed with a full load of nukes." Sven-O falls silent.

Jam-Y grins. Looks like he's noticed something. Or he at least thinks he has.

The BLUE answers, "Surely I don't need to explain myself? These subsectors are harbouring dangerous Commie Mutant Traitors, and it's my responsibility to find them, no matter what gets in the way!"

The warbot speaks again. "So you are willing to ignore a Code 3-Zed quarantine, and potentially escalate the situation to Code 4-Zed? All for an illegal server access?"

The Armed Forces clones begin readying their weapons. As does the warbot hulk, with yet more groaning and grinding of gears and motors. "Or perhaps you are involved with the situation in the first place!"

It is now the turn of some of the other IntSec clones to ready their weapons... and point them at the BLUE. "Sorry, sir, but I now suspect--"

But they don't get a chance, as the other IntSec clones round on them and start shooting...

"Cease fire," demands the remains of the warbot. "Explain yourselves, troopers. Present your identification this instant."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 21, 2012 19:50

"Nukes!?" I nearly exclaim, while simultaneously trying to suppress my volume.

I lower my voice again.

"Well, for all our sakes I hope it either doesn't shoot, or doesn't malfunction..."

If the shooting sends stray shots my way, I try to dodge or find cover behind something.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 21, 2012 20:51

I keep attacking the zombies with my plastilyke. I stand my ground, unless everyone that isn't a zombie starts to retreat. I'd follow after them, then.

written by Kristos on Jun 21, 2012 22:23

Stepping off the lift, I gather every obvious detail about my immediate surrounding, and perhaps a couple more details. Then, to help promote fun in Alpha Complex, I wave at the nearest camera with a smile on my face.

written by Jam on Jun 21, 2012 23:05

I remain standing in the same place, making sure to dodge any shots that might come my way.

Hopefully a stray shot won't accidentally hit me or something... That'd be bad...

written by Speeder on Jun 21, 2012 23:54

I start to make an effort to find in my own memory and in the PDC the INFRARED clone...

written by Gligar on Jun 22, 2012 00:54

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O almost raises his voice a little too much, before remembering that doing that in the presence of even a heavily-damaged warbot is probably a bad idea. He settles on hoping that either it doesn't shoot, or it doesn't malfunction.

Meanwhile, he does his best to avoid getting shot. Much like Jam-Y, although the latter seems to want to stand in one place all the time. Several slugs fly past his head, mere centimetres from his ear.

The IntSec clones seem to have failed to notice The Computer giving them an order, and are still busy with their terminations. Only now, Sven-O chooses to join in. "Soldiers, you have your orders. Fire!"

The warbot fires. Only one gun, though. Its aim seems to be off. "This weapon requires recalibration," The Computer says through it. "See to it."

Security room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y tries to identify the familiar clone... where has he seen him before?

Memories surface of a debriefing... and an idea bot! But it can't be Leeroy, he wasn't INFRARED... wait! Mango! Didn't he get demoted?

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speaking of Mango...

He's still busy dealing with zombies. But things have taken a turn for the worse. Even with the help of Joris-R's (actually L4-O's) blaster, the zombies just keep coming...

Soon, clones begin to realise that they need to get out of the open. Perhaps to Building 1? The zombies seem to be less numerous in that direction...

Some clones decide to pursue that course of action and focus their efforts into cutting a path to Building 1...

Corridor J2-04, JHP Sector

Kris-R steps off the lift and immediately begins to take everything in...

It's actually quite a wide, albeit INFRARED, corridor, apparently a main thoroughfare. It is strongly lit... Kris-R can make out at least ten light fixtures, but they hurt to look at. As for cameras... yep, there must be fifty visible ones. Aside from that, the corridor is filled with posters, reminding clones about the dangers of... well, mostly mutants around here, but the usual commies get a nod, too.

The corridor stretches past the lift in both directions, with a plethora of doors either side. Clones enter and leave through these doors at a constant rate.

written by Speeder on Jun 22, 2012 01:17

I look confused and upset.

I decide to return to the first level and attempt to leave the building.

written by Granpire viking man on Jun 22, 2012 01:58

I try not to appear unhappy, with some difficulty.

I remain silent and still, doing my best not to tremble after that volley of shots.

written by Kristos on Jun 22, 2012 03:05

First I make a note in my PDC: "AFTER RUN-IN WITH ANTI-MUTANT CLONES AND NEAR DEATH, CRYO-R WAS TERMINATED BY FRIEND COMPUTER. ONE- OH, ALL CAPS. One RED clone was found in possession of a GREEN barrel, disguised as a RED. Anti-mutant clone group disappeared after catastrophic explosion of said barrel. I am now most alone in my task, except for the help from FC. Perhaps I should consult FC soon. Now I am in a wide infrared corridor with very bright lights and many cameras, so I think this is an important place for observation. So I will observe these clones." Then I take various short notes about the surroundings.

I try to get the attention of any clone by walking up to some and waving. "Hello, I am Kris-R, leader of Team Sigma. Does anybody know how to get to Corridor J2-05 from here?" I note the character of response.

written by Jam on Jun 22, 2012 03:09

I continue grinning despite the chaos around me.

At least someone here is being loyal! Look at all these clones shooting each other! Weren't they just ordered to cease fire? Oh, it looks like Armed Forces is joining in too... Sure, they're just following protocol, but a direct order from FC or a UV would surely supersede that! And look at the rest of my team, hiding over there as if they were afraid or something! They should be standing here with me, showing how loyal they are! It's probably treason to run away when FC is talking! It's certainly suspicious!

With those thoughts going through my head, I continue to stand at attention, watching the warbot and making sure to grin extra-wide since an ULTRAVIOLET may be watching me.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 22, 2012 06:23

I assist in making a path to Building 1. It's much better to be heading to a meaningful direction over beating zombies only to be clawed dead or eaten or whatever zombies do.

The current condition is much better than that of the Underplex I conclude, while I continue jabbing at the zombies.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 22, 2012 16:33

Being Armed Forces, I almost consider joining the fighting myself, before realizing I actually lack weapons anyway.

Instead I just continue to watch, and hopefully dodge.

written by Gligar on Jun 22, 2012 19:40

Security room, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks upset, as if he can't believe that Mango would have anything to do with this. And, lacking anything else to look up, the only thing he can do is leave the building.

Just outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

As soon as Speed-Y arrives at the entrance, he can hear the sounds of clones fighting zombies in the general vicinity. Looking around, he spots a clone riding a Transition, shooting a blaster into... well, he can't see from here, but it seems to be the source of the sounds.

He also realises something else. The warbot seems to have... moved.

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

But Mango isn't aware of anything that isn't attacking zombies. He, and the others, are trying to make a break for Building 1, and seems to be actually making some progress on that. In the last few minutecycles, they've moved several metres in that direction, and are almost at the edge of the horde.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

The Armed Forces stop firing. By the look of things, they are running low on ammunition.

"I believe I requested that this slugthrower be calibrated," The Computer reminds them. "Why has it not been calibrated?"

"Apologies, Friend Computer," Sven-O replies, "but I had to make sure that certain clones did not interfere before doing so." He turns to an INFRARED. "Meg, go see to the warbot."

"But..."

"Why aren't you seeing to the warbot, grunt?"

Meg runs warbotward.

It becomes clear that Internal Security are no longer firing, either. There's a good reason for that. They appear to be, well, no longer living.

Jam notes that The Computer had ordered a ceasefire before the Armed Forces started firing. That's kind of... suspicious. And why are the rest of the team cowering over there - especially King-R, who seems to be hiding behind Azir-R's wheelchair - when he's over here being loyal?

"Also, I would like to know why clones continued to fire after I called a ceasefire," The Computer adds.

Corridor J2-04, JHP Sector

Kris-R starts making a few notes on his PDC, in accordance with Friend Computer's special bonus duty, and then sees to the important task of actually getting to his mission.

To that end, he approaches a clone and asks for directions. The clone waves down the corridor in one direction. "It's down there."

written by Speeder on Jun 22, 2012 22:10

I look at the warbot, confused.

Then I look at the horde, and start to carefully walk toward there, I take out a YELLOW laser and take a look in how many shots left I have.

written by Gligar on Jun 22, 2012 23:16

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y looks at the warbot, momentarily confused at how it has moved. But he quickly puts it out of his mind and starts walking towards the noise. It quickly becomes apparent that there is a whole horde of zombies nearby.

This troubles him. He pulls out a laser pistol. Oh hey! A full barrel!

The zombies don't seem to notice as he approaches.

written by Speeder on Jun 22, 2012 23:33

I kneel, and start to take a careful aim to neckshot whatever zombies are more dangerous to any living clone that I can protect.

written by Kristos on Jun 23, 2012 02:11

Fast, efficient, to the point... I like that. Definitely not a commie.

I head down the corridor in the indicated direction until I locate Corridor J2-05.

written by Gligar on Jun 23, 2012 19:42

Outside Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Taking advantage of how he hasn't been seen, Speed-Y gets into a nice firing position, and proceeds to fire into the horde.

Zap! A zombie is hit in the back of the head! It stops momentarily, allowing one of the survivors to push it away and stab it several times.

Corridor J2-04, JHP Sector

Kris-R seems to appreciate the directness of the clone. He head sin that direction, to find that the corridor makes a right turn into what seems to be a junction.

written by 4616599 on Jun 23, 2012 19:40

I notice Speed-Y.

"Greetings, sir! It looks like we're getting the team back together again! Maybe we should go back to the checkpoint and meet up with everyone else! If we can shake off these things."

I aim and fire the blaster again, yelling.

"Go away, you treasonous messes of ex-clones! You aren't even supposed to exist!"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 23, 2012 20:03

I await a response from my comrades in arms... since I wasn't actually involved in the shooting, I have nothing to confess!

I do, however go over to the IntSec clones and make sure they're actually dead.

If they are, then I see if they might've been carrying any weapons that would be more useful in my hands. And are of my clearance.

written by Speeder on Jun 23, 2012 21:35

I zap another zombie in the same way...

written by Gligar on Jun 23, 2012 22:53

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Noticing Speed-Y below, Joris-R calls down to him and suggests that they regroup with the team. After dealing with the zombies...

Both clones shoot. hey end up targeting the same zombie, which collapses.

[1101]

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

While the INFRARED sees to the warbot's slugthrower, Sven-O adds, "Though I am aware that a ceasefire was called, the IntSec clones did just treasonously terminate several of my soldiers. That made them commie mutant traitors, and most likely involved with -"

He is interrupted by the BLUE. "Treasonous?! You were in the way!"

Meanwhile, L4-O just listens. Then he has an idea, and goes over to the dead IntSec clones. They're dead, alright; but given current circumstances... He doesn't dwell on this long, though, as he relieves the corpses of their blaster power packs. Oh, and one functioning blaster.

written by Speeder on Jun 23, 2012 23:53

I target another zombie, and I nod to Joris.

"Alright! Tell me, what is up with the warbot right now?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 24, 2012 00:45

I check the clearance of the blaster, but even if it's RED (do RED blasters even exist), a weapon is a weapon.

I check it for a power pack, if the power pack is low I swap it for a better one.

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 24, 2012 07:40

I continue my way towards Building 1 with the others, slightly confused about the origin of the zombies, but I let that not impede my efforts.

written by Gligar on Jun 24, 2012 18:20

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y shoots again, opening up a hole in the horde through which the survivors start breaking through. Once free, clones start running towards Building 1, Mango included.

Speed-Y then acknowledges Joris-R, and asks about the warbot.

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O checks the blaster's clearance (ORANGE) and power level (almost empty) and changes the power pack.

The Computer speaks through the warbot again. "Do you mean to tell me that you were willing to break a clearly-defined quarantine protocol without regard for what it might be containing? Did the 'Zed' subcode mean nothing to you?!"

"I know that it has something to do with zombies, Friend Computer, but those are just rumour..."

He is about to continue when rumour suddenly grabs him, and starts attacking.

"Clearly, they are not. And you just let them out into the sector at large."

There is a sudden volley of slugfire, and the sound of a clone hitting the floor. "Calibration complete."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 24, 2012 20:09

Speaking of zombies, I check whether the ones that were released have been dealt with yet. If not, I try to lend a few shots to help get rid of them.

written by Gligar on Jun 24, 2012 23:26

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O looks over to the new zombies, to find that there are still quite a few that haven't been dealt with. He helps to deal with them by shooting a couple of times. Both times, he misses, and the zombies continue to stumble away from the checkpoint.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 25, 2012 00:06

Sensing this as a relatively important duty, I give chase to the zombies. Once I'm closer, I try shooting again.

written by Gligar on Jun 25, 2012 19:46

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O notices that having these zombies shambling about is a bad thing, and that getting rid of them would be a good thing, and gives chase. Not that they have gone all that far, given how fast zombies travel.

He approaches to a comfortable firing distance, and, well, fires. He scores a few good shots.

But he notices that, even when he shoots, nothing seems to happen.

No really, nothing happens. No movement, no sound, no anything. From anything. It is as if the world has just... stopped.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 25, 2012 22:39

What is going on, I wonder?

If I can wonder at all.

written by Gligar on Jun 25, 2012 23:14

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O wonders what's going on...

He doesn't get an answer.

"Whoa... what's going on?"

Oh hey, Lucas-R's not frozen.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 26, 2012 00:01

I go back to Lucas-R.

"I don't know. This is a new one to me too..."

I look around in confusion, for any kind of obvious sign of what's going on. Or maybe perhaps a less obvious one.

written by Kristos on Jun 26, 2012 02:05

I continue my journey down the corridor, avoiding higher-clearance locations of course.

written by Jam on Jun 26, 2012 18:05

If I'm not frozen, I look around in wonder.

"Wow... That's strange... It's almost as if... as if time itself has stopped. But surely that's impossible! Right?"

I try to check the time on my PDC, and note whether the seconds indicator is changing.

written by Gligar on Jun 26, 2012 19:10

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O walks back over to Lucas-R. He finds that it's difficult to move at any speeds over typical walking speed without muscles complaining...

Her tells Lucas-R that he hasn't experienced this sort of thing either, and looks around. Maybe there's some clue as to what's happening...?

But he's at a loss. He does notice Jam-Y looking around, though. Jam-Y also wonders what's happening. Perhaps time has stopped? But isn't that impossible?

Jam-Y pulls out his PDC, and checks the time. It's 15:32:08... and the figure doesn't seem to be changing...

Corridor J2-05, JHP Sector

It seems that the stopped time extends outside of JHT Sector. JHP, too, is seemingly frozen.

One clone, however, is active. Kris-R, who is walking down the corridor, doesn't seem to have noticed the time-stop (perhaps because he has his eyes closed)...

Soon, he reaches a door and tries to open it. But it is difficult for him to do... almost as if the door is way too heavy.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 26, 2012 21:22

"This is extremely odd. I wonder if anything even works?"

I check my PDC to see if it still functions at all.

I then look around at the group to see if anyone or anything isn't frozen.

"Friend Computer? High Programmer? Anyone?"

written by Speeder on Jun 26, 2012 21:46⁷⁶³

~~I suddenly wake up and start again to kill any zombie on sight.~~⁷⁶⁴

I look puzzled at the time stop.

But I abuse it to kill zombies until I run out of ammo... And I mean that as long as I can shoot and switch barrels I do it...

⁷⁶³ Speeder: (ooc: sorry, some personal problems got in the way)

⁷⁶⁴ Speeder: EDIT (ooc: scratch that Isat pose... posing while having a fight with significant other is bad idea)

written by Gligar on Jun 26, 2012 23:25

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O starts wondering if anything is working, and checks his PDC. It looks like nothing is working, though.

He looks around, to see the rest of the team wondering what is going on, apart from Speed-Y, who is abusing the time-stop by shooting zombies. But he finds it extremely tiring to do, and only manages a couple of shots before he has to take a break.

L4-O then tries calling The Computer or the High Programmer. Neither respond.

There is then a sudden noise like a tape picking up speed, and everything returns to normal. Several zombies - those who were shot - suddenly drop dead.

The Computer announces, "Do not be alarmed, citizens. Everything is under control. Any sensations of time stopping are due to CMT interference and have nothing to do with R&D experiments into time travel. Please resume your duties."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 27, 2012 00:04

"Okay... now that was the weirdest thing I've seen. That I remember, anyway."

I pause for a moment to think, then shake my head.

"Anyway..."

I look back at the zombies to see if there are any left. If there are, I go back over and shoot them, hoping them to fall over immediately this time.

written by Speeder on Jun 27, 2012 01:02

I grin, tired, but happy.

"Seriously, I WANT this thing, whatever it is... And I want it on Massacrebot!"

I start to imagine myself stopping time, launching a couple of explosive shells and waiting behind a steel wall for the time-stop to end, and then savoring the results...

written by Kristos on Jun 27, 2012 01:14

I lean into (or away from) the door to give it a little extra force. Surely it is not stuck?

written by Mingamango181 on Jun 27, 2012 11:54

I keep moving towards Building 1. Building 1's my goal.

At least until I need another goal to achieve.

written by 4616599 on Jun 27, 2012 15:37

I aim my blaster and continue covering Mango and the other clones.

"That was odd. Whatever happened there. Was R&D or some mutant interfering? Still I wish it had gone on for a few more hourcycles."

written by Gligar on Jun 27, 2012 19:15

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O realises that he can't remember anything weirder than what just happened. He also realises that there are still zombies left, so he goes over again and starts shooting.

"Wait..." interrupts Sven-O. "One moment you were there, now you're here... now there's something about R&D? Can someone explain what just happened?"

Speed-Y apparently doesn't know, but he definitely wants to be able to do that. And he wants it on Massacrebot... the ability to shoot explosives while getting behind cover, all while nothing else can act, would be awesome...

A couple more zombies fall before L4-O's blaster starts getting hot.

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Now free of the horde, Mango and some of the survivors hightail it towards Building 1. They're able to get almost to the door before they have to stop and rest.

Behind and above them, Joris-R continues firing. He also wonders what happened, and whether it was caused by R&D or some kind of mutant.

I'm sure that if it were, he would not want to meet him. Or her. Much less take them down...

Corridor J2-05, JHP Sector

Kris-R tries again, putting all his weight behind the door...

Of course, now that the time-stop has ended, the door opens easily, and he simply falls through it, into:

Transtube station, JHP Sector

As with most other places in the sector, the station is crowded with clones. Some are crowded round the ticket counters, where clerks try their best to answer complaints about overcrowded transbots... by shooting the complainers. Remember, complaining means that you're unhappy, and that's treason...

Beyond the clerks, there are a number of platforms available, all similarly crowded. Not just by passengers, for it seems that each Internal Security has a large presence here, checking travel papers and running mutant scanners.

Above everything are a number of vidscreens showing the usual advertisements and important messages about the latest suspected mutants. Oh, and the transbot schedules are sometimes displayed as well.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 27, 2012 19:21

I go back to the group since my blaster needs to cool down, and address Sven-O.

"I'd tell you but it's probably above your clearance. Also, I guess that would mean it's above mine too. Though Speed-Y probably might be able to know if it's R&D related..."

of course, Friend Computer says it's not, so suggesting otherwise... ah, forget it."

I finally notice Speed-Y is actually here.

"Oh! Hello, sir! We've got some business to conduct, as I'm sure you know already."

written by Speeder on Jun 27, 2012 21:50

I notice I am actually near L4.

"Oh hello! Whoa, I teleported?"

I smile.

"We have... lots of problems. In fact, the prime suspect now is not the guy I sent the code, but Mango!"

written by Gligar on Jun 27, 2012 23:10

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O returns to the group and tells Sven-O that the details are probably above their clearance, though Speed-Y might know.

Wait... Speed-Y is here? Wasn't he with Mango and Joris-R? It must have happened during the time-stop... Maybe a mutant did it? Maybe Speed-Y is a mutant? Who knows?

Speed-Y seems pleased by the situation, however. He informs L4-O that they have problems. Their main suspect is actually not the PowServ clone, but... Mango! "Eh? What's this about?" Sven-O asks.

written by Speeder on Jun 28, 2012 02:16

"Oh, I investigated a bit the sabotage that released the zombie gas, in a attempt to find the source of it so we can shut it down, I could find that powerservices have traitors, someone sabotaged their procedures, and I saw a ex-troubleshooter of our team, currently demoted to INFRARED, wandering in the sabotaged power room around the time it got sabotaged..."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 28, 2012 06:22

"Interesting theory, though not to doubt you, sir, but I don't know if an INFRARED has access to this kind of things... but then again, maybe he was just a contact for the more... troubling members of this treason."

I get close to Speed-Y then lower my voice to a whisper so only he can hear, hopefully.

"Should we still check out that YELLOW's finances? There is reason to be suspicious there, it has been flagged."

written by Jam on Jun 28, 2012 18:26

"Oh, hi Speed-Y! Where'd you come from?"

I smile at him.

"Shouldn't we be destroying the zombies before they escape, instead of talking?"

written by Gligar on Jun 28, 2012 19:00

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y explains that he was investigating the cause of the sabotage, and the source of the zombie gas. He has discovered that there are traitors in Power Services, who have sabotaged PowServ repair procedures... and he saw Mango in the power room just before the sabotage happened.

The YELLOW - Rick-Y - interrupts. "I don;t think you should be looking too closely, citizen. I doubt you have PowServ clearance, after all. And shouldn't it be PowServ who deals with PowServ treachery? Give me the information, and I'll deal with it."

L4-O tells Speed-Y that he finds the theory interesting, but respectfully expresses his doubts that an INFRARED could have access to that sort of thing. He doesn't rule out the possibility of Mango being a low-level accomplice, though.

Leaning close, he asks if they should continue checking up on Rick-Y. After all, his account has a flag on it.

Jam-Y notices Speed-Y. He asks if they should be killing zombies instead of standing around talking.

Transtube station, JHP Sector

"Hey, citizen! Stop blocking the door! Clones want to get through here!"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 28, 2012 21:41

I say to Jam-Y

"You're right sir. Although my blaster needs to cool a little bit, too much prolonged fire."

I check it's temperature. If it's ready to fire again, I go over to shoot some more and hopefully finish the task.

written by Speeder on Jun 28, 2012 22:00

I check how many shots I have left in my barrel, and if I have shots left, I spend them in the nearest zombies, otherwise I reload.

"Good idea Jam!"

written by Gligar on Jun 29, 2012 00:49

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O agrees with Jam-Y, but realises that he can't do anything about it because his blaster is still hot.

Speed-Y's laser pistol, on the other hand, still has two shots remaining. He decides to use them to try and drill a hole in a zombie. He almost manages it, too. At the very least, this zombie's not getting up again.

written by Jam on Jun 29, 2012 01:28

I fire a shot at one of the zombies, using my laser pistol.

Then, I try to count how many zombies are left.

written by Speeder on Jun 29, 2012 03:42

I happily reload.

"Hey people, we do not have any more effective weapons around here?"

I turn to the warbot.

"Hey friend computer, can you help us get rid of all those zombies?"

written by Kristos on Jun 29, 2012 12:08

What a funny door... I get up off the floor, step to the side, and dig around for my travel papers.

"Excuse me- my mistake" I say with a bow.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 29, 2012 16:21

I decide to take the opportunity and also check that fallen BLUE for anything of note. That's anywhere near my clearance anyway. I also note any YELLOW items that Jam-Y or Speed-Y can also take.

written by Gligar on Jun 29, 2012 19:23

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

A shot shines out from Jam-Y's laser pistol. It hits one of the four remaining zombies but doesn't seem to stop it from continuing its escape.

While he reloads, Speed-Y wonders if they have any more effective weapons. Turbo? Nope, too damaging... his 'revolver'? He doesn't seem to consider it.

Wait a minute. The hulk of the warbot is there, isn't it?

He asks The Computer to assist. In reply, there is yet more grinding and sparks from the tortured mass of metal that is the warbot.

L4-O decides to check put the BLUE... or what's left of him. It turns out that he's also carrying a cone rifle, along with several shells and triggers. He's also got a couple of sonic pistols, clearance ORANGE. But apart form that...

Transtube station, JHP Sector

Kris-R picks himself up and bows towards the voice, which turns out to belong to... wait, is that an INDIGO? Yes, it is!

Kris-R steps aside while searching his pockets for his travel papers. Ah, there they are.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 29, 2012 21:30

Not needing another cone rifle, Turbo being all I need, I just take the shells and triggers, and the sonic pistols.

"Huh. Haven't used these before."

written by Gligar on Jun 29, 2012 23:33

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Leaving the cone rifle, since he already has one, L4-O grabs the shells, triggers, and sonic pistols. Apparently, he hasn't used sonic pistols before.

The hulk of the warbot stops screeching and sparking, and fires its slugthrower at one of the zombies, and ends up practically sawing it in half.

written by Speeder on Jun 29, 2012 23:45

I cheer happily upon seeing warbot destroying zombies.

I decide to switch back to the revolver, and hope the impact of the bullets will rip off parts of the zombies, and then I go for joints and necks...

written by Lightning4 on Jun 30, 2012 01:44

Wondering what this sonic pistol does, I reflect back on any Armed Forces training I've had on various weapons.

Either way, if it's safe to do so without harming myself or others, I give one a few test fires against a zombie to see what it does.

written by Kristos on Jun 30, 2012 03:00

When I realize that the clone is INDIGO I instantly return to my bow and hold the position unless addressed. If I become confident that the INDIGO is paying me no attention, I join the queue, holding my papers ready for presentation.

written by Jam on Jun 30, 2012 03:05

I notice L4-O has a new weapon.

"Oh, cool! What's that do?"

I watch as he fires the pistol, and try to figure out what effect it has on the zombies.

written by Gligar on Jun 30, 2012 19:40

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Satisfied - and more - that the warbot is now taking part, Speed-Y decides to follow its lead and unleash some slugs of his own, courtesy of his 'revolver'. He fires off three shots in rapid succession, but only one hits its mark. However, that one does have the effect of severing one zombie's leg.

L4-O thinks back. What does he know about sonic pistols? Hmm... he seems to recall a lecture about them, and about how they use directed sound waves. Kind of like those vidshows where they demonstrate shattering glass with sound alone, now he comes to think about it.

L4-O therefore realises that it must clearly be safe to try one out. And, since Jam-Y also wants to see what a sonic pistol does, he aims one at a zombie, dials in some likely-looking settings, and pulls the trigger.

The gun emits what seems to be a cone of extremely loud, high-pitched tones (though only the barest hint seems to make it outside of the cone, enough to make L4-O's teeth tingle) which strike the zombie and make it vibrate in uncomfortable-looking ways. It sounds like its bones are rattling, as well.

Transtube station, JHP Sector

Kris-R notices that the clone is INDIGO and returns to his bow. The INDIGO does not bother to respond and simply walks past him.

Satisfied that the INDIGO is not interested in him, Kris-R gets up again and joins the line at the ticket desk. The line moves forward, probably because of the laser pistol blast up front.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 30, 2012 20:11

"Huh. That's neat. Also kind of weird."

I rub my jaw a little, then look at the zombie for any effect.

If it had no effect, I try turning up the power. At least, I think this one is the power? Or maybe it's this one?

Then I shoot again.

written by Speeder on Jun 30, 2012 21:41

I try to aim more carefully and slowly, I go for necks or mouth only.

written by Jam on Jun 30, 2012 21:55

I look at the zombie vibrating.

"Well, that didn't help much. I wonder what that does to a living clone..."

I see L4-O adjusting something on the pistol, and wait for him to fire again.. Maybe his next shot will have more of an effect!

I also check to see if my emergency light is still on fire, or if I still even have it.

written by Kristos on Jun 30, 2012 22:41

I count the number of clones of each COLOR in the room and permanently record the data with my PDC. I also count and record security cameras, windows, doors, estimated length of clearance tape, estimated square meterage of the room, the type of floor, type of ceiling, and all products provided via vending bots.

written by Gligar on Jul 01, 2012 00:00

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Deciding that the sonic pistols are neat, if a little weird, L4-O surveys the effect on the zombie. Said zombie seems to have lost some of its teeth, and has collapsed to the floor as its muscles vibrated enough to throw it off-balance.

But that doesn't seem to be good enough for L4-O. He seems to want a greater effect. To that end, he starts fiddling with the settings. Perhaps that one is power? No... maybe this one?

While he's fiddling, Jam-Y comments that it didn't seem to have much effect. Seemingly, he agrees with L4-O. He does wonder what it would do to a living clone, though, and realises that a living clone would most likely be writhing on the floor in pain... if the pistol were set up correctly.

Meanwhile, Speed-Y has decided that perhaps he was shooting too fast, and begins shooting again. Since he's taking more care with his aim, he only manages to get off one shot, felling a zombie, before L4-O is ready to fire again.

[1106]

And fire he does. This time, there is no leakage from the gun's cone, but the zombie starts bleeding. From everywhere.

Transtube station, JHP Sector

While he waits his turn, Kris-R starts observing, as The Computer directed him. He counts four hundred and four clones (of which 210 are wearing black jumpsuits, 86 are wearing red, 20 are wearing orange, 42 are wearing green, 40 are wearing blue suits, one is wearing indigo, and the remaining five are wearing yellow). He can also see 64 visible security cameras, no windows, eleven doors, approximately 720m of clearance stripe - which doesn't seem to be enough for the 325 square metre room (though he isn't taking the platforms into account) - and a standard synthcrete-and-metal floor and ceiling, as well as a large list of products served by vendobots that is too long to include here.

He's just finished that when he discovers that he is at the head of the queue.

written by Jam on Jul 01, 2012 15:29

"Cool!"

I watch the bleeding zombie, and try to figure out how all the bleeding is affecting it.

written by Speeder on Jul 01, 2012 15:55

I smile upon seeing the pistol results.

I note the clearance, and take one too, and try to use my tech services skills to figure what each dial do, and attempt to put a setting that will make a cone that won't bleed much and is focused, and a frequency that will resonate with water specifically...

And then I see if I can melt or explode a zombie.

written by Gligar on Jul 01, 2012 19:16

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y decides that he was wrong about sonic pistols not having an effect. As he watches the zombie bleed, he realises that, if that were a living clone, it would die pretty quickly. Indeed, this zombie seems to have stopped moving.

Speed-Y also seems to like them. Noticing that they are ORANGE, Speed-Y looks for one. Of course, there were only two, and L4-O took them both... but from what he can see from watching L4-O, those dials seem to control more than just the strength of the cone. There seems to be more than one frequency control, for instance. As for the rest, Speed-Y doesn't know. He'd have to experiment. When he gets one.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 01, 2012 19:47

I look at the rather gross mess the zombie is becoming.

"I bet this thing would be pretty effective against bots too, maybe. Just in case there are any rogue ones. Or maybe also against those cyborg guys."

I note Speed-Y kind of looking at my pistol longingly.

"I do have another if you want one, sir. Or if you want one, Jam-Y. Whoever wants it has to claim it."

"Although since you're both high clearance, you can both have one if you wish... I do still have my blaster for combat."

written by Speeder on Jul 01, 2012 20:28

I look at the pistol with greed...

"Jam, just let me test it..."

If I get handed the pistol, I attempt again to do the thing I wanted to do.

written by Gligar on Jul 01, 2012 23:23

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O decides that the pistols would probably be effective against bots and/or cyborgs, too. If they run into any.

He then notices Speed-Y looking at the pistol, and offers it to him. Or to Jam-Y, if he wants it. They could have one each, if they want; they're YELLOW, after all.

Speed-Y asks Jam-Y to let him test one, and grabs it from L4-O's hands. Then, he starts playing with the dials, trying to figure out what they do. Hmm... looks like that one controls spread... and that's some sort of [DFSR] setting...

Okay. He believes that he can get this thing to do what he wants now. So... he sets up the dials, finds a zombie - that one's a bit far, isn't it? - and fires. Looks like he's hoping he can get the gun to heat water or something.

Alas, it doesn't seem to go up that high. He just ends up causing more bleeding.

written by Speeder on Jul 02, 2012 00:11

I aim at the nearest zombie, and fire at its head specifically.

Grimacing.

written by Kristos on Jul 02, 2012 03:49

I silently hand over my travel authorisation forms.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 02, 2012 09:09

I decide to tweak my sonic pistol one more time. I fiddle with it more before I decide it's at a good setting, and hopefully not one that can overload the pistol.

I aim at another zombie, if there are any left, and shoot at it.

written by Gligar on Jul 02, 2012 15:04

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y doesn't seem to mind about his relative failure. Instead, he adapts his plan and, aiming at a zombie's head, fires.

Three things happen. First, the zombie's head suddenly begins exuding a grey liquid, and it collapses. The remaining zombies suddenly turn and pounce on it.

Second, Speed-Y feels a pressure in his head, as if his own brain is vibrating around in there.

Third, his pistol begins to emit a beeping noise.

L4-O decides to make one final test, and tweaks the settings again before firing at the remaining zombies, who are currently tearing apart the one shot by Speed-Y. But it looks like he's set the pistol on too low a setting, and it does nothing.

Oh wait... it's also beeping.

Transtube station, JHP Sector

Kris-R shows his travel authorisation forms to a clerk, who scrutinises them. "So where's the rest of your team?" she asks.

written by Kristos on Jul 02, 2012 16:47

"There was one guy- I cannot remember his name- who never joined the team. I suspect Our Mutual Friend was not pleased. Oh, and Cryo-R, my Loyalty Officer, was terminated by FC for reasons probably beyond my clearance to know. I am doing my best as Team Leader but it is an odd role when there are none to lead but myself."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 02, 2012 19:55

I check to see why the pistol is beeping? Low power? Going to explode in a few seconds? Weapon jam?

If the pistol is low on power, I check for the means of giving it more. Does it reload like a normal laser pistol, or charge like a blaster? Hmmm.

written by Gligar on Jul 02, 2012 20:24

Transtube station, JHP Sector

Kris-R explains that there should have been three of them. But one failed to even show up at briefing, and the other was terminated for some reason. So now he is a Team Leader with no clones to lead.

The clerk looks at him. "Don't you think you'd better see if either of them are going to show up? See, these papers are for a team, not one clone."

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O investigates the beeping. He notices a little red light on the pistol, blinking along with the beep, but he's still not sure what the beeping is, since the light's not labelled.

He does notice a couple of buttons near the light, though.

written by Speeder on Jul 02, 2012 21:50

I first take a quick look on the pistol to see if there are any label or anything that might indicate what it is doing.

I check if it is overheating or overuse.

If I don't figure... by knowing how things behave in alpha complex, I just throw the pistol in the middle of the zombie-zombie fight.

written by Jam on Jul 02, 2012 22:14

I grin when I see the zombies trying to eat each other, and don't notice what's happening with Speed-Y and L4-O...

written by Gligar on Jul 02, 2012 23:19

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

It's Speed-Y's turn to investigate his pistol. He is soon able to ascertain that the thing doesn't seem to be overheating. In fact, it's quite cool to the touch. Which, now he thinks about it, might mean something else... because don't power packs generally heat up when they're used?

As he looks for a label, he notices that the light, and the beep, seem to be getting fainter. Before they fade out completely, he notices a tiny label on one of the buttons reading PWR RELEASE.

Jam-Y doesn't notice any of this. He seems to be grinning stupidly while watching the zombies eat their downed companion. It's a pretty disgusting sight, actually.

And it doesn't help that the zombie they're trying to eat is... on fire! How in the compnode did that happen? Well, however it happened, the fire quickly spreads to the still-active zombies...

written by Speeder on Jul 02, 2012 23:38

I point the thing at a random zombie and press the button.

"I wish you knew how to use this L4... The army don't use those?"

Oh wait... I believe the army must focus on things that kill clones fast... like... cone rifles..."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 03, 2012 00:06

"Well, the Armed Forces does use nearly every weapon to some degree. That's our job, after all. We're the weapons users. We like weapons, we use weapons. This one seems like part weapon, part interrogation device... fitting for IntSec."

I look at my pistol again, and watch what Speed-Y's does. If it doesn't do anything dangerous to him, I replicate what he did towards zombies as well.

"We don't have much need for interrogation, hence why they're rarer among us..."

written by Jam on Jul 03, 2012 00:30

"If zombies will eat each other, all we have to do is make them all bleed like that one did! Then they should just tear each other apart! Or maybe we could just... wait, hang on, why are they on fire?"

I look to Speed-Y.

"Did you do that?"

written by Kristos on Jul 03, 2012 03:16

"Sadly I believe I am the team now. I am hoping FC will assign new members to my team soon."⁷⁶⁵

⁷⁶⁵ KRISTOS: (ooc: perhaps an npc if no real peeps are available. grin.)

written by Gligar on Jul 03, 2012 15:25

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y aims, and presses the button. A thin wave of sound emanates from his pistol, hitting the burning zombies and pushing the fire around, before the pistol ejects its power pack.

He wishes that L4-O knew how to use sonic pistols. But maybe the Armed Forces simply don't use this sort of weapon?

L4-O explains that although the Armed Forces do use most weapons, the sonic pistol seems to be part weapon, part interrogation device - perfect for IntSec. But it's not the Armed Forces' job to interrogate people, so there aren't many sonic pistols in the Armed Forces.

He also presses his button, causing the same thing to happen. He notices that the ejected power packs look similar to those used by blasters.

Jam-Y observes that is zombies will eat each other, they simply need to make zombies bleed, the same way that one did. Wait... why are they on fire? Is that Speed-Y's doing?

Transtube station, JHP Sector

Kris-R replies that, as far as he can see, he is the team. Unless, of course, Friend Computer assigns him a new teammate or two.⁷⁶⁶

The clerk considers this. "Alright. I'll tell you what. For twenty credits, I can issue an Emergency Single-Clone Travel Warrant to let you get to JHY Sector... but you'll have to get your own ticket."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 03, 2012 16:26

I collect the blaster pack that was ejected if I didn't, and put it away. If I have plenty of spare charged packs, I place one in the sonic pistol, and see if it starts working again.

I finally notice that the zombies are on fire.

"Huh. They are on fire. How did that happen?"

I check how many living zombies remain.

written by Gligar on Jul 03, 2012 18:57

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O picks up the sonic pistol's power pack, and puts it away. He fishes around for a blaster power pack, and, finding one, fits it into the pistol. It's a bit of a loose fit, but it stays in place. A little GREEN light comes on when he does.

He then notices that the zombies are on fire. He's at a loss to explain how it happened, but hey, it helps. He notes that there are three zombies left, all on fire.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 03, 2012 19:22

Not sensing any urgency to fire my weapon, I put it away.

"Fire should finish the job for us!"

I do keep my eye on the zombies to make sure they're properly dying, though.

"So what's the plan now, sirs?"

written by Kristos on Jul 03, 2012 19:44

"Okay, that will be very helpful to the mission. Pardon my ignorance, but where do I get the ticket?"

I hand over my ME card, or swipe it, or whatever is appropriate to complete the transaction. If I can purchase my ticket immediately, I do that as well.

written by Speeder on Jul 03, 2012 21:51

I keep looking at the zombies...

I also collect the power pack, and hand it and the pistol back to the equipment officer.

"Interesting weapon, I wonder if it was my settings that set the zombies on fire... But I am not willing to test it again now, since it vibrated my brain too..."

written by Gligar on Jul 03, 2012 23:10

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Seeing no further need to fire the sonic pistol, L4-O puts it away. The fire should finish off the zombies. As he watches, one of the collapses He asks about the team's next move.

Speed-Y picks up the ejected power pack and hands it, and the pistol, back to L4-O. He thinks that the weapon is interesting - and, he guesses, might have been responsible for the fire - but, after the effects it had on him, he is unwilling to further test the weapon.

It's a good thing that they aren't assigned by R&D.

Transtube station, JHP Sector

Kris-R hands over his ME Card, and asks about tickets. While she swipes the card, the clerk answers, "There are ticket machines on the platforms." She returns the card and starts typing into a terminal.

"This will take a moment to process," she says.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 04, 2012 00:38

"Fair enough sir. I'll hold it unless Jam-Y wants it as well, or one of the Armed Forces clones here wants it."

I look around to see if anyone speaks up in response to that.

written by Kristos on Jul 04, 2012 02:58

Do do dooo do do-do doooo... Yet Another Catchy Tune plays in my head.

⁷⁶⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: Perhaps even Cryoburner's new character, if he chooses to start a new one 😊)

written by Gligar on Jul 04, 2012 16:25

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O puts the other sonic pistol away., saying he'll hold on to it, unless Jam-Y, or one of the other Armed Forces clones wants it?

None of the soldiers respond. The zombies keep being on fire, prompting The Computer to remark, "It appears that the situation here has been resolved. As you were, soldiers and other clones. As always, your co-operation is appreciated."

Transtube station, JHP Sector

While he waits, Kris-R seems to hear The Female Clone From IPA Sector play in his head... oh wait! That's someone's PDC ringtone!

The clerk's terminal beeps, and prints something off. "Here you are, she says."

Behind Kris-R, another clone enters the station at a run. From his ME Card's chip, I can see that his name is Cyrus-R-NBV-1. He seems to be looking for someclone.

Foyer, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Mango and friends rush in towards the relative safety of the building. Never mind the noises...

written by Jam on Jul 04, 2012 16:36

I look at L4-O's sonic pistol.

"Nah, you keep it! I like laser pistols better! Maybe Speed-Y can show you what settings he had though! I can't believe a sonic pistol set a zombie on fire!"

I smile as I watch the burning zombies.

"Too bad we don't have any flamethrowers... Fire seems to work really well against the zombies."

written by Gligar on Jul 04, 2012 20:08

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y tells L4-O that he prefers laser pistols. Why doesn't he ask Speed-Y about those settings? Although... he isn't sure that a sonic pistol could cause fire.

It's a pity, he adds, that they don't have flamethrowers. Fire seems to work quite well.

Indeed it does. In fact, it's dealt with those remaining two zombies already.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 04, 2012 21:29

I look at the settings on Speed-Y's pistol, and maybe try to make sense of them. Or at least memorize them... for future, fiery reference, of course.

I take a look at the group of clones gathered here, to see if anyone might have gone missing in the confusion and chaos.

written by Gligar on Jul 04, 2012 23:56

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Instead of asking Speed-Y, L4-O settles on just looking at the settings. Some of them don't seem to make sense - since the dials aren't labelled - so he ends up simply memorising them.

He then has a look at the assembled clones. It looks like a couple of the Armed Forces have gone missing: Meg and another INFRARED.

written by Jam on Jul 05, 2012 00:52

I suddenly remember something...

"Lucas-R! Did you memorize the Anthem yet? I even gave you extra time!"

I check the time on my PDC just to verify that it is indeed past the end of the hour.

written by Speeder on Jul 05, 2012 01:23

I think a bit...

"Hey, I think we should figure how to build a flamethrower as our next step... Or see if that warbot has one!"

I actually start to walk toward the warbot.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 05, 2012 12:17

I check my knowledge of warbots for any information on their weapons compliment.

"Well, the warbot is in pretty bad shape, might not be much to salvage, if it came to that. Though of course, we probably would need permission."

written by 4616599 on Jul 05, 2012 14:03

"Speed-Y? Where did you go?"

I examine what Mango and the other clones are doing.

written by Kristos on Jul 05, 2012 15:39

"Thank you, ma'am."

Grabbing the printout, I turn to the clone who's PDC is/was ringing and offer the compliment "Catchy ringtone!" as I head to the platforms.

That is, until I am paralyzed by the mind-numbing force of a snack-attack. Unwillingly and unwittingly I approach a food-carrying vendobot and purchase the two lowest-priced RED items and begin devouring one of them. Crunch crunchy crunch.

written by Gligar on Jul 05, 2012 17:20

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y suddenly remembers that he ordered Jam-Y to memorise the Anthem... or at least the first five verses. Surely it's been an hourcycle by now... He checks his PDC. Hmm... 15:47... yep, that's been an hourcycle now! How's Lucas-R getting on. "Er... I'm at six verses, sir."

[1110]

Speed-Y thinks that they should probably figure out how to build a flamethrower. OR perhaps see if the warbot has one... He walks towards it.

L4-O points out that the warbot's in pretty bad shape, and they'd need permission to disarm it. That's even assuming that it has a flamethrower... something that L4-O doubts.

Somewhere in the vicinity of Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Joris-R realises that Speed-Y seems to have vanished – right into thin air! One moment he was there and the next...

He tries to distract himself by watching Mango and the survivors. He realises that most of them have already entered Building 1, and seem to be taking a break.

Transtube station, JHP Sector

Kris-R grabs the form the clerk hands him and heads to the platforms, pausing to compliment that clone on his ringtone. "Thanks!"

He passes Cyrus-R on his way over. Cyrus-R seems to be a bit out of breath.

Platforms, Transtube station, JHP Sector

Kris-R arrives at the platforms, to find that there are 12 of them.

As he stops to take them in, he is suddenly hit by the subliminal suggestion to eat something, sometimes called a "snack-attack" by the lower clearances. Obediently, he proceeds to a vendobot and purchases a VitaYum bar and a packet of algae chips, and proceeds to eat the latter.

written by Jam on Jul 05, 2012 18:21

I smile at Lucas-R

"Excellent! Keep up the good work!"

Then I turn to Speed-Y.

"Well, there's plenty of fire with these emergency lights... We just need something flammable we can spray! Though, are you sure any of us actually know how to build a flamethrower? I'd hate to see it blow up in our faces as soon as we pull the trigger!"

written by Gligar on Jul 05, 2012 20:04

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Pleased at Lucas-R's progress, Jam-Y comments that they have fire via these "emergency lights". The main problem would be to find something flammable to spray. Well, actually, that's not true; the main problem is that he isn't sure if any of them know how to build a flamethrower! For all he knows, they could build something that could blow up the first time the trigger is pulled. (Heh. Stick an R&D logo on the side and call it an experiment... oh wait, only R&D can do that. My bad.)

written by Speeder on Jul 05, 2012 21:44

I think a bit...

Then I turn to Jam and say.

"Well... I think I can build one, if someone figure where to find the fuel, a fuel container that is resilient to heat, a heat-resistant hose, a container of pressurized air or oxygen, and a hollow metallic object, to be used as nozzle. And of course, lots of duct tape..."

I smile happily.

"Or you find those room deodorant cans!

But I still think it is easier to see if we can salvage weapons from the bot..."

I start to see if the bot has any interesting weapons.

"So L4, what is the process to salvage things from a Army bot in a emergency? Meaning no request forms that take 4 weeks to process."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 05, 2012 22:29

"Hm. Well, I do believe there's a few codes and protocols, but they're not used very often..."

I think for a moment.

"Protocol 52 says that if needed, weapons, ammo, and other immediately useful things to a clone's survival may be scavenged from a corpse. Though this applies to the Armed Forces, not sure if it applies to everyclone."

"And the warbot isn't a corpse... right now anyway."

I think a little more.

"I don't know anything else. I suppose we could just ask Friend Computer directly, if it's still in control of the warbot."

written by Gligar on Jul 06, 2012 00:19

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y believes that he could build a flamethrower, assuming the ability of certain supplies (fuel, oxidant, construction materials, that sort of thing). Failing that, he could use an aerosol can...

But he would still prefer to salvage form the bot. While he looks at the hulk, and notes several slugthrowers, some laser-like weapons, and several grenade launchers (but, seemingly, no flamethrowers), he asks L4-O how he'd do that, and hopes that it doesn't involve filling out a form and waiting a monthcycle.

L4-O answers that there are protocols in place for that sort of thing. Protocol 52, for instance, permits a soldier to recover equipment from corpses, though he's not sure it applies outside of Armed Forces. (Though given that everyone seems to be doing it anyway, it's possible that other service groups have similar regulations.) Beyond that, he's not really sure: a warbot isn't exactly a corpse, after all. Perhaps they could ask Our Mutual Friend?

written by Jam on Jul 06, 2012 01:40

I grin, and look at Lucas-R.

[1111]

"I've got a better idea! How about we find a vat of toxic waste and throw Lucas-R into it! He can swim around until he turns into a fire-breathing mutant or something! He'd be even better than a flamethrower, because he'd never run out of fuel! At least, not until he dies... Then... Er..."

I turn to John-R.

"Would his next clone still have the mutation? Or do you think he would lose his fire-breathing powers once he re-creates? I really should know about this stuff... Maybe I'll take a course sometime..."

Speaking of which, I guess the same thing applies to me! Heh..."

I start to look slightly nervous... It seems I've grown rather fond of my powers these past few monthcycles.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 06, 2012 10:54

I turn to the warbot and see if it's still actively controlled.

If it is, I approach.

"Friend Computer? My superior has a question that I'm going to relay... may we salvage the warbot for parts if there is no further use? He believes we might be able to cobble some weapons together from what's left there."

I do a look over of the warbot while awaiting a response, checking the condition of some of the weaponry.

written by Speeder on Jul 06, 2012 13:10

"I don't think patting a warbot is good idea... You know what happened last time we hugged it."

written by Cryoburner on Jul 06, 2012 13:13

"Hmm..."

I take a glance around the station, noting whether anyone present appears to be a member of my team.

written by Kristos on Jul 06, 2012 14:28

Now that I am once again in control of my conscious functions, I return to the platforms and look over my papers to see what I should board and when I should board it, also checking the time on a visible clock or otherwise on my PDC. If it becomes clear I should board immediately, then I do.

written by Gligar on Jul 06, 2012 15:39

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y has an unorthodox suggestion: they could throw Lucas-R into a vat of toxic waste and let him get a mutation from it! Who knows, it might be one that lets him breathe fire! That way, they get a flamethrower that never runs out of fuel! Well, until he dies...

Maybe. Jam-Y isn't sure about that one. But this is something he should know, being a registered mutant. One who, it seems, has forgotten that he's taking a course in Power Studies.

He wonders if the same applies to him, and suddenly gets nervous. He's become accustomed to his own power in a remarkably short time... John-R looks at him. "Sir, with respect, are you really suggesting -"

He doesn't get a chance to finish. Lucas-R has already knocked Jam-Y to the ground, and starts yelling at him. "NO SIR! I WILL NOT BECOME AN UNREGISTERED MUTANT JUST TO HAVE A FLAMETHROWER ON THE TEAM! THAT'S WHAT FLAMETHROWERS ARE FOR!"⁷⁶⁷

Meanwhile, L4-O is dealing with the warbot. He approaches, and notices that it is still being controlled. This is clear due to the amount of smoke and noise it is generating.

He asks Friend Computer whether it is permitted to salvage parts from the warbot. "Permission denied, citizen," is the reply. "This warbot can still be repaired and returned to active duty."

Speed-Y seems to mishear L$-O's request, somehow getting the impression that L4-O wants to pat the warbot instead of getting parts from it. He reminds L4-O of what happened the last time someone hugged it.

Transtube station, JHP Sector

Catching his breath, Cyrus-R looks around, looking for any evidence that his team is here. Amidst the mass of clones, he does spot a clone wearing a flashy Team Leader's Hat - which is, of course, why the hat sports flashing lights and retro-reflective parts. He realises that it is being worn by a clone who passed him a moment ago and proceeded to raid the vendobots.

Platforms, Transtube station, JHP Sector

The clone, of course, is Kris-R. Now back in control of himself, he checks the form he was just given. It authorises him to travel to JHY Sector via a transbot from Platform 5, due to leave in a few minutecycles. It doesn't seem to have arrived yet, though.

written by Speeder on Jul 06, 2012 16:18

Suddenly starts to wonder who is L$

Then he becomes slightly sad at hearing Friend Computer message, but then he becomes happy.

"That is great news! Good that we do not lost such nice warbot!

But I still want massacrebot back..."

replyquote

written by Jam on Jul 06, 2012 17:33

I look slightly surprised that Lucas-R pushed me to the ground. Then, I quickly try to form an expression of confusion as I reply to him...

"But, we'd make sure you're registered, of course!"

I look at him for a few seconds, trying to keep a straight face. Then, I suddenly burst into uncontrollable laughter.

⁷⁶⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: Jam gains a perversity point there. 😊)

“Relax Lucas! I was only kidding! But you—you believed me! Ahhahaha...”

written by Gligar on Jul 06, 2012 19:26

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y looks confused for a moment. Then his face goes from sad to happy as he processes what The Computer told him. Sad, because they can't salvage the bot, but happy, because the bot will be restored.

It's just a pity that no-one seems to want to restore Massacrebot*...

Jam-Y also looks confused, not to mention surprised, that Lucas-R would push him over like that. He reassures Lucas-R that they're get him registered, before breaking out into laughter and claiming that it was a joke. “Huh? Didn't sound... ow... I think I broke something...” Lucas-R stops, apparently in pain.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 06, 2012 22:20

“Very well then, thanks for considering the request.”

I walk back to Speed-Y.

“So anyway, we should start investigation, yes? It sounds like you have at least one suspect... wherever Mango might currently be.”

written by Speeder on Jul 06, 2012 22:36

I nod, and then I point to building one.

“He is there. I was exiting that building, and saw him and Joris fighting a huge horde of zombies and trying to get into that building and then I was here.

Don't ask me how, I don't know either.”

written by Gligar on Jul 07, 2012 00:18

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O returns from the warbot, and asks about their next move. Should they begin? It is clear that Speed-Y suspects Mango... wherever he is.

Speed-Y knows where he is: Building 1. He saw him earlier, fighting zombies and running towards Building 1... before Speed-Y somehow got here.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 07, 2012 05:44

“Hmm...”

I pull out my PDC, and check to see if there are any photos of my team included in the mission briefing materials. If so, I compare them against the team leader who appears to be wandering aimlessly on the platform.

* It might have helped if something physical of Massacrebot remaining, like, say, the bot brain, not just the data dump. Just saying... bot brains are kind of expensive. 😊

written by Gligar on Jul 07, 2012 14:45

Transtube station, JHP Sector

Cyrus-R checks his PDC. It seems that he made notes during his briefing, which, he hopes include a picture of the team he's supposed to be joining. Yep... there's one. It looks like a still frame from a surveillance feed, and it depicts three clones. One, in GREEN, seems to be a briefing officer. She seems to be a little unhappy about how some RED clone (who is wearing an upside-down nametag, identifying him as Cryo-R) is talking to her. But the third clone in the picture closely resembles the clone he can see on the platforms. Unfortunately, he's not wearing a nametag. But his notes identify him as Kris-R.

As the clone - apparently Kris-R - continues to pace up and down the platforms, a transbot arrives at one of them.

written by Gligar on Jul 07, 2012 20:17

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

While Lucas-R and John-R work on the Anthem, Sven-O approaches the group again. “I guess you guys are off, then?”

written by Speeder on Jul 07, 2012 23:23

I turn to Sven.

“Yes... we need to defuse the situation, the Army job is let us do our job. Our job is do not make your job to be stay forever here!”

written by Gligar on Jul 08, 2012 00:26

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y replies that they are. They have to defuse the situation; the Armed Forces' job is to let them while the team makes sure that the Mutant Mashers don't get permanently assigned to quarantine duty. Sven-O replies, “Yeah, got it. We'd need another warbot if we were to stay here a long time, and that'd take a while to get here.”

written by Lightning4 on Jul 08, 2012 00:29

“Well then, I guess we should probably go.”

I start off towards Building 1, slowly until others start tagging along.

written by Jam on Jul 08, 2012 14:00

“Oh, you broke something? Let's see it then...”

I sit up and look at wherever Lucas-R says he's hurting. I try to determine if and how it's broken, and if I'll be able to fix it.

written by Gligar on Jul 08, 2012 15:05

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O decides that it's about time for them to go, and starts heading off towards Building 1. He's joined by John-R, Azir-R, and King-R, for whatever reason.

[1113]

Meanwhile, the rest of the team seems concerned about Lucas-R. Jam-Y, for instance, seems to be using his medical training to figure out what's wrong with Lucas-R.

It turns out that he hasn't actually broken anything, He has, however, dislocated his shoulder.

written by Speeder on Jul 08, 2012 17:40

I wait for Jam to fix Lucas, but I keep an eye on L4.

written by Gligar on Jul 08, 2012 18:55

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

While Jam-Y works on fixing Lucas-R's shoulder (causing a bit of pain in the process), Speed-Y looks towards the other half of the team. In the distance, he notices what seems to be a clone on a Transition.

With one last yelp from Lucas-R, Jam-Y finishes his work.

written by Speeder on Jul 08, 2012 20:29

I start to walk toward the clone on transition.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 08, 2012 22:22

I slow down and allow Speed-Y to take the lead. I then continue to follow him.

written by Gligar on Jul 09, 2012 00:19

Between the roadway and Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

It seems that Speed-Y has decided to follow L4-O, in the hopes of seeing who is on that Transition. L4-O hears him approach and slows down, letting him pass.

Soon, the group reaches Building 1, to see that the clone on the Transition is Joris-R. He's looking down at the building's entrance.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 09, 2012 06:35

I approach the team leader on the platform, and poke at him.

"Hi, I'm Cyrus-R. I'm supposed to be meeting up with my new troubleshooter team here, which is apparently you."

written by Kristos on Jul 09, 2012 08:48

I look at the transbot. Then at the strange clone. Then back at the transbot.

"I'm heading to JHY Sector on that transbot [pointing to it]. It is scheduled to leave in a few minutes. If you really are on my team, you have travel authorization papers. You need to get a ticket rather quickly [now pointing towards the ticket desk]. Algae chip? [now holding out my chip bag]. Come."

I walk to the shortest queue, if there are multiple.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 09, 2012 10:37

I look up at Joris-R and watch for any reaction, but if Speed-Y moves, inside, I promptly follow him.

written by Jam on Jul 09, 2012 15:14

"Okay! Let fix up that shoulder Lucas-R!"

I go to relocate it, then realize it's already been done.

"Huh... That's weird... I must have done it already and forgotten..."

I look around...

"Wait, when did we get here? And is that Joris-R?"

written by Gligar on Jul 09, 2012 15:39

Platforms, Transtube station, JHP Sector

Cyrus-R approaches Kris-R and introduces himself, stating that he's supposed to be meeting his team here. Apparently, Kris-R is the team. Kris-R looks between the transbot and Cyrus-R, and replies that he should have travel papers, and that he should go and get a ticket before joining him on the transbot, before joining the queue for the transbot.

At the head of the queue, a lone IntSec clone is checking papers and tickets. He looks to be a bit bored, as if he'd rather be out stomping on mutant heads. He waves one clone onto the bot, and the queue moves.

Near Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O watches Joris-R, seeing if there is any reaction. But the clone doesn't seem to have noticed them yet.

...

Oh! That might be why. It seems that the half of the team that stayed with the warbot have somehow appeared here. Perhaps Joris-R is staring at them.

The first to notice is Jam-Y who seems to have forgotten what he just did. Regardless, he has noticed Joris-R looking in their direction.

written by 4616599 on Jul 09, 2012 16:37

"Hi there. Welcome back!"

I wave.

"Remember Mango? He's sheltering in there, with a small group of clones."

written by Gligar on Jul 09, 2012 19:56

Near Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

It looks like Joris-R is choosing to ignore the fact that ha;lf the team appeared out of nowhere. Instead, he just greets them normally. He also indicates that Mango is inside the building.

JHT Sector Central Compnode, V Level, Central Subsector

"Okay, seriously. These time travel experiments are getting out of hand... did get out of hand... are about to have always gotten out of hand... whatever! Can we rein them in before the whole of R&D turns out to have never existed?"

written by Speeder on Jul 09, 2012 21:56

I look confused.

"Wha? I mean... Well, it happened to me too, so I won't ask how..."

I think a bit.

"Mango might be a traitor... anyone has any idea on how we should investigate him?"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 09, 2012 23:00

"Interrogation? Mind probe? Maybe he'll fess up himself?"

I shrug.

"Won't know until we go in there I guess."

written by Gligar on Jul 10, 2012 00:08

Near Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

After a moment of confusion over the sudden being here instead of over there, Speed-Y starts discussing how to deal with Mango. L4-O suggests interrogation or a mind probe, but adds that they'll only know for sure when they get in there.

"I'd advise against mind probes, sirs," John-R says. "Remember what happened to him during our last mission? I wouldn't be surprised if Headgrabber left something in there..."

written by Speeder on Jul 10, 2012 00:20

I nod and say.

"Headgrabber... I had forgotten about it..."

In fact... now I am fearing that Mango is acting on behalf of headgrabber... That would be... problematic."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 10, 2012 09:48

"Headgrabber? Hm."

"I still want to know what happened there. But I guess I shouldn't know, or aren't allowed to anyway. Ah well."

I take a peek inside the building.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 10, 2012 12:39

"Oh, algae chips! How thoughtful of you."

I proceed take the entire bag of algae chips that have been offered to me.

"Hmm... Travel authorization papers? I would assume those would be something you would have. I don't believe any were provided to me at the briefing."

written by Gligar on Jul 10, 2012 15:05

Near Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Headgrabber! Speed-Y had forgotten about him! In fact, he is concerned that Headgrabber might still be in control of Mango!

L4-O isn't even sure what happened with Headgrabber. The details, though, are probably beyond his clearance.

He puts it aside and looks into the building, where he sees Mango and some survivors, apparently catching their breaths.

Platforms, Transtube station, JHP Sector

Cyrus-R thanks Kris-R, and proceeds to grab the entire bag. Kris-R still has a grip on it, though.

As far as travel authorisation papers, he isn't sure he has them, and is pretty sure that they should be in the hands of Kris-R. Then again... did he really look at the messages he received during briefing? There was the picture, and the information about Kris-R... was there anything else? He was rather short on time...

written by Kristos on Jul 10, 2012 15:33

I use Cyrus-R's grip on the algae chip bag to guide him to the queue. Then I release the bag so he can take it.

"You better check and see if you have any forms should they be needed."

Then I ready the authorisation papers I have.

written by Speeder on Jul 10, 2012 16:34

"Alright... let's proceed... I HOPE if it is Headgrabber again, that Freaky again comes to our rescue..."

I reload all my weapons and enter the building 1, wielding the spear.

written by Gligar on Jul 10, 2012 19:28

Platforms, Transtube station, JHP Sector

Using the bag, Kris-R attempts to gently guide Cyrus-R into the line with him before letting him have the bag. He doesn't notice the clone behind him getting rather irate at having his position taken like that.

He continues by saying that Cyrus-R should have another look for his travel papers in case they're needed.

The line moves forward again. Only one more clone in front of him now.

Near Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y prepares to go in, hoping that Freaky makes an appearance if needed. Then he enters.

Foyer, Level 1, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

As he enters, one of the survivors looks in his direction. "So there is a Troubleshooter team here! I thought it was just the two of you!"

Behind him, Mango does not a lot of anything.

written by Speeder on Jul 10, 2012 21:34

I nod and say.

"Oh, Speed-Y leader of Team Epsilon, former Lightspeed Jam, here!

Indeed, we got split a bit to cover more area, but we came to interrogate him."

[1115]

I point to Mango.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 10, 2012 22:45

I follow Speed-Y in and join the conversation.

"That's right... know anything about him? And while you're at it, anything else you know about the situation would be helpful. Any suspicious activity, things like that."

I take a look around while they reply.

written by Gligar on Jul 10, 2012 23:26

Foyer, Level 1, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y identifies himself to the survivor, saying that the team got split up to cover more area. But now they're here to interrogate Mango.

Entering behind him, L4-O asks whether anyone knows anything about him, and if they've seen anything suspicious lately. He briefly looks around, and notices that the place is in disarray. The notice board seems to have been ripped down, and there is debris on the floor... looks like a mix of the usual litter, impromptu breathing masks, spent laser pistol barrels... that sort of thing.

In answer to L4-O's questions, one survivor says that he has seen Mango around before... he seems to be unhappy and keeps to himself a lot. He once said that his former Troubleshooter team weren't very good, and that their last mission almost ended in disaster... no wonder he got demoted. As for anything suspicious... it's kind of interesting that the power went out just as Mango went for reactor shielding duty, isn't it?

written by Jam on Jul 11, 2012 03:33

I enter behind L4-O.

"Did I hear someclone say 'Mango'?"

I grin.

"Excellent! I've been wondering what happened to that clone. Reactor shielding duty, huh? I should try that sometime, it sounds like it'd be fun..."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 11, 2012 12:42

"Really? Now that's pretty odd. Sounds almost... mutanous. Mutation? Mutantness...ous?"

I think.

"Wait. Weren't we his last troubleshooter team?"

written by Gligar on Jul 11, 2012 15:19

Foyer, Level 1, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y also enters the conversation, saying that he had wondered what happened to Mango. He suggests that he hasn't had a chance to try reactor shielding duty, and should probably give it a go some time. (That can be arranged. Power Services are always looking for volunteers.)

L4-O comments that it sounds kind of... well, something to do with mutants. Then he realises what Mango said about his last team... wasn't that Team Epsilon?

John-R looks concerned. "Yes... to both. Unless Mango was assigned to another team after he was demoted... and I never heard of an INFRARED being assigned to a team."

"Hey," Lucas-R says. "I was with you when I was INFRARED."

"True," John-R replies, "but you weren't formally assigned until you were promoted, were you?"

"Oh yeah..."

written by Gligar on Jul 11, 2012 19:51

Platforms, Transtube station, JHP Sector

"Team Sigma!" The Computer announces. "Report! Why are you not on your way to JHY Sector?!"

written by Jam on Jul 11, 2012 20:02

"There are INFRARED clones in Armed Forces, aren't there? Why not the Troubleshooters too?"

written by Cryoburner on Jul 11, 2012 20:31

"Oh, Hi Computer! I just met up with my team leader here, and as far as I know, I am on my way to JHY sector, which apparently involves getting in this line, and proceeding to the front of it. At least, that is what the team leader has suggested."

I quickly check whether I happen to have travel authorization papers of my own, or any other relevant documents.

written by Speeder on Jul 11, 2012 21:37

I frown...

"So... MY TEAM made a disaster?"

No, HE was a disaster.

I had to nuke myself to save the Alpha Complex, and that guy... that guy... how he DARES say something like that?"

I start crying.

"Massacrebot... I want you back... I want to explode things with you... Not with Nukes on my hand though..."

written by Gligar on Jul 11, 2012 23:30

Foyer, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y reasons that there should be INFRARED Troubleshooters... after all, there are INFRAREDS in the Armed Forces... "Hmmm," John-R replies. "It'd make sense, but... how would you arm an INFRARED Troubleshooter? Lasers are standard issue... it's right there in the motto. And there's no such thing as an INFRARED laser. There isn't, right? Or INFRARED reflec, for that matter. Plus, there'd be the whole 'getting to places' thing, what with lots of places being higher than INFRARED."

Speed-Y takes offence to Mango's assertion that the team nearly caused a disaster, angrily stating that he personally averted one by allowing himself to be nuked. No... Mango was the disaster.

It's just a pity that the price of success was so high... so much so that Speed-Y bursts into tears as he relives the loss of Massacrebot...

Platforms, Transtube station, JHP Sector

Meanwhile, in a nearby sector, a completely unrelated clone speaks to Our Mutual Friend, explaining that, as far as his Team Leader has told him, he is on his way to JHY Sector. As he does this, he searches through his things, to realise that he has not yet been equipped. He only has his ME Card and PDC (and his jumpsuit, of course)... but that doesn't mean he doesn't have electronic documents. Indeed, his PDC contains, among other mission data, a travel docket permitting travel to JHY Sector.

The Computer replies, "If that is the case, I am unhappy with your progress! You should have been halfway to JHY Sector by now! Tardiness is treason!"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 12, 2012 00:18

"Well, the getting places isn't too bad, I guess. As long as the INFRARED sticks around the team leader or someone higher than them, they can at least go most places."

"Though I'd imagine they'd have problems if they stray away..."

I realize we've drifted off topic a little and correct myself.

"Anyway, Mango, right."

I look at him to see if he's responding, to well, any of this.

written by Gligar on Jul 12, 2012 17:11

Foyer, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O responds that getting around shouldn't be too bad... just stick with the Team Leader. Although if they split up...

He doesn't seem to have thought of what would happen if the whole team were INFRARED...

He realises that he's derailed the conversation, and drags it back on track by looking over at Mango. Mango seems to be trying to ignore them, and would probably prefer that they leave.

written by Gligar on Jul 12, 2012 20:57

Platforms, Transtube station, JHP Sector

"Citizens!" bellows The Computer. "Are you even listening?!"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 12, 2012 21:08

"For your sake, you should probably start talking. And fast."

I allow the others in my team to do more, though, if they decide to.

written by Kristos on Jul 12, 2012 22:31⁷⁶⁸

"Great Friend, with a million mouths and a billion ears- with eyes uncountable..." [My gaze jumps from camera to camera, trying to figure out which might be the dominant optical receiver.] "...I thank you for supplying Team Sigma with another member in your perfectly effective and effluent way! My pitiable RED-clearance clone excuse-of-a-self was unable to foresee the coming of another member, so in my seal for the mission I purchased a Emergency Single-Clone Travel Warrant and a single transboticket. Now that your Gift has arrived will secure another ticket and mount the tubebot before it abandon the platform!"

As I am saying this, I commit the Computer's wisdom to my PDC's memory: "Tardiness is treason!"

written by Gligar on Jul 12, 2012 23:27

Foyer, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O seems to want to do something, but instead decides to wait for anyone else who wants to do something. He settles for merely suggesting that Mango answer soon. For his own good.

He doesn't say anything.

Platforms, Transtube station, JHP Sector

Kris-R suddenly responds to The Computer, explaining that he was unaware that a replacement had been assigned to the team until just now, so he arranged for a emergency papers for just himself. He'll get more papers for his new team member and get on his way.

"Good! Get to it! That is all!"

...

Wait a minute... am I getting some sort of interference from JHP Sector? Perhaps the local compnode [TRANSMISSION INTERRUPTED]

written by Speeder on Jul 12, 2012 23:41

I get over my sad memories, and decide to get back to work.

I point my spear at Mango.

written by Jam on Jul 13, 2012 00:39

I think a bit...

"Oh! The INFRARED could have a brevet for a laser pistol! Kinda like L4-O and his cone rifle..."

Then I realize Speed-Y seems to be crying, or recovering from crying, or something... Did he mention Massacrebot?

I pat him on the back and attempt to comfort him...

"It'll be alright, we'll get you a new Massacrebot... A better one, with even more guns and rocket launchers and lasers!"

I smile at him.

⁷⁶⁸ KRISTOS: (OOC: Was out of town. Had a great time. I'm back now.)

[1117]

"Now please stop crying, or I'll have to report you for being below the mandatory happiness levels!"

written by Kristos on Jul 13, 2012 01:09

I present my paperwork as well as Cyrus-R's travel docket if it is needed. As soon as possible, I run and purchase a ticket for Cyrus-R and drag him onto the transbot at platform 5 if he does not come along quick enough.

Once on the transbot (assuming we succeed), I whisper to Cyrus-R "Last time I was on a transbot, the whole thing exploded! Then I was re-cloned and chased by angry clones with laser pistols of the wrong clearance! Then my team member, who had a mustache just like yours, was terminated by FC! Keep an eye out for suspicious containers, or else the whole thing might happen again. And remember what we were taught: Even the flap of a micro flybot's wing can completely change the future of Alpha Complex."

"I cannot afford to lose another team member. By the way, what is your Mandatory Bonus Duty?"

While listening for an answer I intensely survey the entire transbot interior.

written by Gligar on Jul 13, 2012 15:42

Foyer, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

With Jam-Y's help (whether he needed it or not), Speed-Y regains his senses and points his spear Mango-ward. Jam-Y also comments that an INFRARED could be breveted to use a laser pistol.

Clearly, he's not aware of CPU Mandate 191/7742-c subparagraph 4, which states that laser barrels cannot be breveted.

Mango looks over, not bothering to disguise a look of distaste.

Platforms, Transtube station, JHP Sector

Finally, it is Kris-R's turn.

Kris-R grabs Cyrus-R's PDC, and his own (paper) travel form, and shows them to the guard, who gives them a cursory glance. "Electronic forms... why don't I have a reader for those? Oh well... move along."

Shooting a quick glance towards the transbot, Kris-R notices that there are few clones boarding it. He'd better get there quickly. But first... Cyrus-R needs a ticket!

After a minutecycle, Kris-R finds a ticket machine - seemingly the only functioning one - which saves him the trouble of having to go back through the station to the ticket desk, allowing him to buy a ticket for Cyrus-R, and rush back towards the transbot, dragging Cyrus-R as he seems to be moving too slowly. The doors close as he gets there but he's able to open them again using the handy button and - what luxury! - there are still seats available! He grabs one just as the bot begins to move.

Kris-R's transbot

As they get underway, Kris-R gives Cyrus-R the condensed version of what happened to Cryo-R, and warns Cyrus-R to watch for mysterious packages. He does not want the same thing happening.

When Cyrus-R doesn't respond, Kris-R asks about his MBD, but it's clear that he's really more interested in looking around. It turns out that this transbot seems to be a little less well-kept than the first - the advertising posters are torn, and the windows are less clean... and... the place isn't nearly as packed. That's odd.

written by Gligar on Jul 13, 2012 19:46

Foyer, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Sounds can be heard from one of the corridors leading off the foyer. Isn't that... the office?

Mango seems to be ignoring it.

Kris-R's transbot

The transbot picks up speed. Soon, a pair of clones appear from somewhere, and ask to see everyone's tickets.

written by Speeder on Jul 13, 2012 21:53

I smile at Jam!

"YES! MORE EXPLOSIVES!!"

Then I happily stroll toward the place where I am hearing sounds from.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 13, 2012 23:50

I follow Speed-Y, drawing a blaster.

written by Gligar on Jul 14, 2012 00:20

Foyer, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

A now happy Speed-Y, and L4-O, both go to investigate the sound.

They follow it down the corridor, past a couple of doors, into a familiar room.

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Yes, it's the same room they were told to report to when they arrived at the Industrial Subsectors, though it's now devoid of clones. Whoever was here when things started to be Fun obviously left in a hurry. Some of them didn't make it, though, as they're still here... or what's left of them. Something has torn chunks out of these bodies, and from the sound of things, it's still around.

There is a scrabbling sound from the vents...

written by Speeder on Jul 14, 2012 01:35

"NOT AGAIN!"

I try to pierce one sound source, throwing the spear if necessary, and if I cannot retrieve the spear now, I pull the slugthrower.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 14, 2012 11:40

I ready my blaster, and shoot if any zombies come out at us.

If a zombie doesn't come out at us yet, I try shooting up the vent.

written by Gligar on Jul 14, 2012 15:47

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

The sound is enough to anger Speed-Y. His spear already in hand, he lunges forward and stabs one of the vents... hitting nothing. He switches to his "revolver" and shoots off a few slugs into it instead. The slugs don't hit anything either.

But L4-O is also ready to shoot. He aims at a different vent, and is more successful at hitting something. With a loud clatter, something falls out of the vent onto him.

written by Speeder on Jul 14, 2012 16:29

I look around to see if there are more of them in the vents, and try to kill that...

I let L4 handle the one with him unless he gets into trouble, then I attempt to just grab it and remove from him so L4 can move easier.

written by Kristos on Jul 14, 2012 20:01

When appropriate, I show my ticket, and also Cyrus-R's since I probably still have it.

written by Gligar on Jul 14, 2012 20:19

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y goes looking for more things to kill in the vents... aha! There's one! But his shots end up missing.

L4-O, on the other hand, doesn't seem to need help. The thing that fell on him - yes, it's a zombie - doesn't seem to be moving.

Kris-R's transbot

The inspector clones continue checking tickets. One clone, a couple of places in front of Team Sigma, seems to have neglected to buy one. The two pull out truncheons, and apply them to the poor clone's head, whereupon one drags him away. The remaining clone returns to the task of looking at tickets.

He soon reaches Kris-R, who shows his team's tickets. The clone looks at them. "Well, at least some clones understand the importance of tickets," he says.

written by Speeder on Jul 14, 2012 21:18

I get upset... if I have more ammo I try again... If not I reload.

written by Gligar on Jul 14, 2012 23:04

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y keeps firing... and is still unable to hit the advancing... zombie?

Just what's going on here?

written by Lightning4 on Jul 15, 2012 00:30

"Waugh!"

I try to throw off the zombie, shooting it a couple more times before realizing it's actually already dead.

I try to get my bearings after the little scare, and if I manage to notice Speed-Y is in trouble, I lend my blaster in aid, trying to shoot his zombie.

written by Jam on Jul 15, 2012 00:43

I check how many shots are left on my laser pistol, and if there are any left, I fire at the zombie that's walking towards Speed-Y...

written by Gligar on Jul 15, 2012 15:37

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O manages to get the zombie off him, and shoots at it a couple of times before realizing that it isn't necessary.. though it never hurts to make sure.

He looks around, and sees Speed-Y struggling to hit another zombie, and decides to join in. He lands a couple of good hits, causing it to stumble back and hit the wall.

Whereupon it gets shot by a YELLOW laser, causing it to collapse to the floor.

The laser belongs to Jam-Y, who realised that he had one shot left, and put it to good use.

written by Kristos on Jul 15, 2012 19:13

"Oh yes! I have heard it said, and rightly so, that the entire complex is held together by its authentication systems. The ticket is particularly critical because of its role in regulating transportation."

written by Speeder on Jul 15, 2012 19:40

I reload the slugthrower

"What happened to my aim???"

I then go check the zombie thing and see if it is a normal zombie.

written by Gligar on Jul 15, 2012 20:08

Kris-R's transbot

Kris-R replies that the whole complex is held together by authentication and regulation - in this case, the ticket regulates the transportation. "Yeah," the clone agrees. "It's important that we find commies as soon as possible! They're always the ones to do something like not buy a ticket..."

[1119]

A sign nearby lights up, indicating that the transbot is approaching JHY Sector.

Reception, Level 1, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y reloads, and wonders what happened to his aim...

Then he approaches the zombie... and notices that it is not exactly typical. For one, it's wearing... INDIGO. Second, there's some sort of device on its belt, marked with an R&D Experimental Device sticker.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 16, 2012 00:08

I notice Speed-Y checking his zombie, and also check the one that fell on me.

written by Gligar on Jul 16, 2012 00:11

Reception, Level 1, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Now that he has the time, L4-O checks over his zombie, to find a similar device, also marked as an R&D device. This zombie is only wearing ORANGE, though... and now L4-O looks, he can see an R&D badge on the jumpsuit, as well.

written by Speeder on Jul 16, 2012 00:13

I see if I can find any ME card on the zombies.

"This look like R&D members... maybe workers of the plant that made the BLUE gas?"

written by Cryoburner on Jul 16, 2012 02:58

"Oh, sorry I zoned out there for a moment. I was a bit tired after rushing all the way to the station. As for my MBD, I believe I was supposed to be taking over for a loyalty officer."

"Say... Did you say there was a mysterious package on the last transbot you rode? What kind of package was it? Do you know that was inside?"

I glance around for any mysterious packages.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 16, 2012 11:15

"Good question. Wonder what these do, and if they're related."

I try to ascertain whatever the device does. If I can anyway, without causing something horrible to happen.

"If only we had an R&D clone with us, maybe they'd know."

written by Gligar on Jul 16, 2012 15:30

Reception, Level 1, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y decides to look for ME Cards on the two zombies. If these clones are R&D, maybe they have something to do with the gas? (It's a long shot, but worth investigating, right?) Well, he's not sure about their involvement, but he certainly finds their cards. It turns out that these clones are - or were - Leonard-I-PPE and James-O-ULU. And according to his ME Card, James-O is a registered mutant.

L4-O is also not sure if they're involved, but does want to know what these devices do. To that end, he has a closer look at one of them. He finds that the device is quite heavy, apparently made of non-metallic materials, and has three controls.

He also realises that it seems to be attracted to his cone rifle shells.

Kris-R's transbot

Cyrus-R wakes up from what he claims to be a nap and answers Kris-R. According to him, he's replacing a loyalty officer.

He then inquires about the suspicious package. Did Kris-R know it was there? What sort of package was it? What was in it? Is there one on this transbot? (Apparently not, from what he can - or can't - see.)

Just then, the transbot decelerates and comes to a stop, opening its doors.

written by Kristos on Jul 16, 2012 15:50

"Okay, great. I suppose you should then take control of the loyalty transcripts recorder." I hand Cyrus-R the slightly charred box. "As for the suspicious box, I actually cannot remember what it looked like. Just, there was a box and presumably an explosion, then I dropped out of a cloning tank."

I exit the transbot and study the surroundings, particularly interested in anything pointing to or belonging to R&D.

written by Jam on Jul 16, 2012 16:51

"Ah! I shot an INDIGO! Good thing he was already dead... But, what's this?"

I look at the strange R&D device on the INDIGO zombie, and, if it seems to be a low enough clearance, try to take it off of his belt and inspect it closer.

"Why were two R&D clones climbing through the vents with these devices on their belts? Very strange..."

written by Gligar on Jul 16, 2012 19:44

Reception, Level 1, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y freaks out when he learns that he just shot an INDIGO. Though, since it was already dead, he doesn't freak out long, and directs his attention to the device. It appears to be Clearance ORANGE (though that doesn't mean much with R&D), and has the same controls as the other device.

But why would two R&D clones be crawling around in the vents like that...?

Kris-R's transbot

Kris-R hands over the loyalty transcripts recorder, charred box and all, and then tells him that he is unsure about the suspicious package in the other transbot. All he knows is that there was a package, and then an explosion, which probably killed him.

That done, he exits the transbot, presumably looking for R&D.

Platform 2, Transtube station, JHY Sector

Exiting, and looking around the RED platform, he notices that there is a distinct lack of R&D presence on the platform. There is an overbridge, however, with stairs leading to it. It spans the entire station, with exits at both ends.

written by Speeder on Jul 16, 2012 23:24

I look at L4.

“Do you still have that ME card scanner?”

I take out my PDC.

“Let’s scan those ME cards... Also you needed to scan something with my PDC was not it?”

I start to search for YELLOW applications that can use the ME card reader and can communicate with the Alpha Complex Administration Computer System, known as “Friend Computer” too.

written by Gligar on Jul 17, 2012 00:12

Reception, Level 1, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y asks L4-O for the ME Card scanner, so he can check these cards... and didn’t L4-O ask to have something else scanned?

Of course, he’ll need to interface it with his PDC to get it to do anything... but there are apps for that, such as the “Financial Analysis” app currently loaded onto Joris-R’s old PDC. It’s also available for Speed-Y’s Series 1500, where it’ll use his clearance to get more information than Joris-R could. There are also apps that can tie in with other databases to get information such as mutant registration or security records...

written by Lightning4 on Jul 17, 2012 00:39

“I do.”

I take out the scanner assembly and run the cards through it.

“Also, we still can use your PDC, to check that YELLOW’s data, and assumably get more information since you’re higher clearance for everything.”

If Speed-Y requests the reader, I give it to him.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 17, 2012 01:08

I step out of the transbot and onto the platform.

“Oh good, an indestructible loyalty transcripts recorder. That might be useful for recording indestructible loyalty transcripts and the like. Might there be a key for it?”

I try opening the box.

“I should probably also have an MBD badge, if one’s available, in case another member of the team forgets who the loyalty officer is.”

I look up at the overbridge, estimating its height, in case that knowledge becomes useful at some point in the future. I also note whether there are any other exits from the platform, aside from those accessible via the overbridge.

written by Speeder on Jul 17, 2012 01:53

I install first the security records, then the mutant registration, then I try for a sort of worklog or assignment log database, and the financial for the last...

In case I run out of space on the PDC before installing everything, I just ignore those I failed to install.

Then I hookup the scanner and see if everything is working fine, I scan my own ME card if needed to test it.

written by Kristos on Jul 17, 2012 12:57⁷⁶⁹

I check if I happen to have the key, as well as any Loyalty Officer badges. Any of those I find are handed to Cyrus-R.

“What was your duty before being assigned to this team? I was HPD&MC.”

Then I walk to the overbridge.

written by Gligar on Jul 17, 2012 15:34

Reception, Level 1, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O agrees that he has the card scanner and gets it out. He runs the two ME Cards through it, and determines that the IDs are genuine, and the IDs match what they say they match. He then hands it over to Speed-Y, saying that he can check that YELLOW data.

Speed-Y takes it and starts installing apps. The security app refuses to install because he’s not Internal Security, though. The mutant database and financial analysis apps install at the cost of 100cr each. As for the assignment logs... there is a public version available with limited data, for fifty credits.

That done, he connects the scanner. It installs without any problems... but to make sure, he scans his own ME Card and runs the various apps. He discovers that he is not a registered mutant, and that he has 1,252.8cr in reserve. He can also see a graph showing how much he has spent recently, and where. Finally, the assignment log shows that he was assigned to JHT Sector’s Main Cloning Station a couple of weekcycles ago, just after a gap in the records. It also shows that his dormitory is in Emergency Bunker C-3.

Platform 2, Transtube station, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R takes the transcripts recorder, and inquires about a key... which it apparently needs because he can’t open it, and there is a keyhole. While he waits, he looks at the overbridge, and determines that it is 6m high. He can tell that because someone has placed a sign above the platforms. His expression while doing so is extremely familiar... or maybe it’s just the lack of other exits causing that.

Kris-R agrees that there is a key, and hands it over, as well as the Loyalty Officer MBD badge when asked. He then inquires about Cyrus-R’s service group, and walks to the overbridge.

⁷⁶⁹ KRISTOS: (OOC: You could probably exit the platform by jumping off and crashing on whatever lies below.)

Overbridge, Transtube station, JHY Sector

He climbs up the stairs, and his eyes seem to close.

written by Speeder on Jul 17, 2012 15:46

I smile happily.

"Awesome!"

Then I think bit.

"Hey, a couple of YELLOW intsec clones are dead in the security station... Jam can you go there and see if any of them have a PDC with the security app already installed?"

I then scan the ME cards from the zombies.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 17, 2012 15:52

"Ooh. Neat."

I take a look around the room for anything else of interest, or any potential hazards. Then I go to watching Speed-Y's PDC for results. If I can see it anyway.

written by Gligar on Jul 17, 2012 19:25

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Pleased that the apps seem to be working, Speed-Y realises that he really wants to access the security app. The thing is, he'd need to use a PDC registered to Internal Security... hey, what about those clones in the security office? One of their PDCs might already have the app installed...

He asks Jam-Y if he'll go and get them. In the meantime, he has ME Cards to scan. First, Leonard-I. He is not a registered mutant, and has over eight thousand credits to his name. He would normally have more but he's been spending a lot recently. He works at JHP Sector R&D's Bioweapons Annexe, and lives... hmmm, this says he has an entire corridor to himself, over in JHP Sector! (I bet there are a lot of clones who would really like to occupy the space he uses. But then again, he's INDIGO. INDIGOs get that much space because they're INDIGO.)

Next, James-O. He is a Class A registered Rage mutant, with registration number JHY-489-220-661. He actually has a negative credit rating, which might explain why he is assigned to both the Bioweapons Annexe and JHP Sector's HPD&MC Mandatory Voluntary Survey programme. As for where he lives... oddly enough, it's redacted.

He realises that L4-O has been watching him scan the cards. Seemingly, the ORANGE has been looking around, and has noticed that the terminals are offline. There is a functioning drinks vendobot, though.

written by Kristos on Jul 17, 2012 22:38

"Definitely to the left..." I mutter.

"Hey Cryo-R, I mean, Cyrus-R. It's this way." I begin running. Then suddenly halt. "What all did they brief you on about the mission? We can talk on the way." I begin a fast pace. Then halt again. "Mandatory Hygiene inspection! Do you happen to know how to do one of these?" I begin looking around our jumpsuits as well as the bridge for signs of uncleanness.

written by Gligar on Jul 17, 2012 23:17

Overbridge, Transtube station, JHY Sector

Kris-R calls back to Cyrus-R (though he mistakenly calls him Cryo-R) to tell him that he wants to go this way, and begins heading off... before stopping and asking about Cyrus-R's briefing. He sets off again, only to stop again and ask whether Cyrus-R knows how to perform a Mandatory Hygiene Inspection...

It looks like both of them would pass, though, assuming that the inspector was having a good day.

written by Jam on Jul 18, 2012 03:20

"Okay!"

I try to find my way to the security office and get the PDCs of the Intsec clones, then bring them back to Speed-Y.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 18, 2012 12:55

I walk over to the drinks vendobot, and order a B3.

If I receive one, I scrutinize it for any damage or potential infection from that BLUE gas. If it looks safe, I promptly consume it.

written by Gligar on Jul 18, 2012 15:14

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y decides to comply, and leaves to try and find a security office.

But which building was it?

Meanwhile, L4-O is investigating the vendobot. He tries it out by ordering a B3. Sure enough, a B3 can drops into the slot.

The can seems to be slightly corroded. But it doesn't look like anything's got inside. should be safe, right?

Corridor 1, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y checks the two other doors, and finds them locked...

written by Kristos on Jul 17, 2012 13:03

Malkom said he was wanting to play a game that this was not, so he was bending the rules, pushing the limits, and really should have just stopped playing.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 18, 2012 15:52

I hold the can and inspect it a little more.

"Hmm.. what do you think, Sirs?"

I decide maybe I can hold my thirst off for now, at least.

written by Gligar on Jul 18, 2012 21:10

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O looks at the can and decides... maybe he's not all that thirsty... He asks Speed-Y what he thinks about the can, and would ask Jam-Y, but he's not here.

You know, worrying about a corroded can is a sign of unhappiness. I'm sure you know the rest...

written by Lightning4 on Jul 19, 2012 12:14

I put the B3 away and try ordering another can.

I check that can, if it looks reasonably better, I open it and promptly consume its contents.

As gruesome as it is, I check the clone remnants around here for anything that might be useful too. Probably nothing, but doesn't hurt to look.

written by Gligar on Jul 19, 2012 19:00

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Since Speed-Y hasn't answered him, and everyone else seems to have zoned out (including the Happiness Officer, who would be extremely interested about someone turning down B3 just because the can was corroded), L4-O just orders another can. It too is corroded. But it doesn't seem to be as bad, so he drinks that one. It tastes normal.

He then decides on something a little unpleasant: he checks the clone remains here in the reception. There are a couple of damaged ME Cards, half a packet of pills, a relatively intact ORANGE laser pistol barrel, but not much else.

written by Kristos on Jul 19, 2012 20:59

To Cyrus-R's silence, I reply "Yeah, that's what I thought too. Good enough! Hygiene inspection pass!"

I drag Cryo-R over the bridge and to the left. All the way until I reach a large obstacle such as a wall or an area above my clearance or a misplaced Warbot Jr. SE.

written by Gligar on Jul 19, 2012 23:31

Overbridge, Transtube station, JHY Sector

Since Cyrus-R (yep, Cyrus, not Cryo - Cryo's gone) didn't respond, Kris-R decides that htye both passed, and starts dragging the idle clone along with him.

All the way to the end of the bridge, where he finds the station's concourse.

There's a small problem: it's YELLOW...

written by Cryoburner on Jul 20, 2012 02:11

"Oh, thanks."

I pocket the key for now and carefully attach my MBD badge to my jumpsuit, taking a moment to make sure not to poke myself before responding to Kris-R's questions.

"Ah, yes. I'm with PLC. I work at a premium discount bot store back in JHP sector, selling premium discount bots and premium discount bot accessories. What is it you do for HPD&MC?"

I take a moment to examine the cleanliness of my jumpsuit.

"As for the briefing, it was rather brief, as I had to catch up with the rest of the team before you left the sector. As such, they only went over the basics."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 20, 2012 02:25

I put the pistol barrel away and wipe myself off, if I got any grunge, or dirt, or... anything else that's not too pleasant to have.

"I think I'll take a look around outside."

I leave the room, inspecting things along the way. Once I get outside, I give the area a good look around.

written by Jam on Jul 20, 2012 04:08

I zone out for a bit...

Then I snap back to reality, and realize I have no idea where the security office was...

Oh well! I guess I'll keep searching!

"Hmm... Security Office... Security Office..."

written by Speeder on Jul 20, 2012 11:17

After I finish absorbing all the marvelous information from the ME cards...

I look at L4.

"Alright, those two zombies DID worked in the bioweapons program.

Now the question is: They are traitors on their own, or someone forced them to do that like the Commies were forcing a guy to make Massacrebot for them?"

written by Gligar on Jul 20, 2012 15:34

Overbridge, Transtube station, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R takes the key and wears the MBD badge. After this, he finally answers Kris-R's query regarding his service group, by mentioning that he works for a discount bot store in JHP Sector. A premium discount bot store, at that...

He then returns the question, and tells Kris-R that his briefing only covered the basics, before checking his jumpsuit. It's as clean as it was this morningcycle, when it came out of the cleaningbot.

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O pockets the laser barrel before cleaning off some of the miscellaneous zombie and clone chunks he's managed to accumulate over the course of searching the remains. But some of them seem to not want to go away...

[1123]

Anyway, he then heads out to have a look around. As he does, he notices a message flash on one of the terminals.

Speed-Y calls out after him, saying that it looks like those two zombies worked in the bioweapons program... question is, are they traitors, or being forced to work on bioweapons by traitors? You know, like Derek-G...

Corridor 1, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O arrives in the corridor to find two doors, both locked. Though... looking at one of them, it seems to have been locked recently.

He also finds Jam-Y, who seems to be looking for the security office. Needless to say, it is not in this corridor. He heads out into the foyer and across into another corridor.

Corridor 2, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

The corridor is a higher clearance than the other - YELLOW instead of RED. That means that there is a greater chance of one of the three doors being a security office, right? In fact, there's one open at the end.

A message pops up on Team Epsilon's PDCs. And from the ringtone, it's from The Computer.

written by Jam on Jul 20, 2012 16:33

I take a break from searching to read the message on my PDC.

written by Kristos on Jul 20, 2012 16:34

"YELLOW... YELLOW. YELLOW..." I begin to pace. "See, I told you, this is the shortest route... if you are clearance YELLOW or higher. No matter. That just means we must go... the other way!"

I run to the other side of the bridge with a huge smile on my face and my tongue falling out of my mouth. Such a great daycycle to be alive! I love easy decisions.

written by Gligar on Jul 20, 2012 19:21

Corridor 2, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Jam-Y stops searching to read the message. It reads:

The Computer said:

From: The Computer

To: Team Epsilon

Subj: Mission debriefing

Greetings, Troubleshooters! By now, you should be nearing the completion of your mission. Please report to Debriefing at Debriefing Room H-12, J

written by Gligar on Jul 18, 2012 22:24

Since Kristos has asked, I have made a PDF of the IC and OOC threads available. You can find it at http://streyalis.org/~gligar/ppg/Post_archive/

written by Lightning4 on Jul 19, 2012 14:27

Pretty impressive, thanks for sharing that.

Hard to believe we've been at it for almost two and a half years now!

written by Speeder on Jul 20, 2012 11:18

Whoa! Very long! And slow game!

But I love it =D

I wish we could one day really gather around a table 😊 This way Gligar can throw dices...

At player heads when they are spacing because they found a new girlfriend...

Level, Alpha Subsector at exactly 17:35, where you will be given the opportunity to discuss your mission, and explain your actions. Being late is treason! Being early is treason! Treason is treason!

This mission debriefing notification is sponsored by JHT Bots Division R&D: Tomorrows bots, yesterdaycycle!

Overbridge, Transtube station, JHY Sector

Kris-R paces. He proclaims that he was correct about this being the quickest way to get to their destination... but only if you can access YELLOW areas. Since they can't, their best option is... the other way!

He begins to run down the bridge in the other direction. As eh approaches, he finds another concourse, this time a RED one.

written by Gligar on Jul 21, 2012 01:16

Foyer, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Mango decides to risk it, and edges towards a door.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 21, 2012 02:06

I glance at my PDC and do the eyebrow thing again.

I go back out to the room with Speed-Y and Jam-Y.

"Weird. Doesn't feel like we should be done yet..."

I also take the chance to go look at that terminal that I thought I saw something pop up on.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 21, 2012 02:33

"I get the impression that you might not really know where you are going."

I wander across the overbridge in the direction of the RED concourse, examining the concourse as I approach.

written by Jam on Jul 21, 2012 02:47

I start to sweat a bit, and check the time on my PDC... Then I turn and run back to L4-O and Speed-Y.

"Guys! Did you get that message from FC? Since when did we finish the mission? And how are we supposed to get to Debriefing?"

written by 4616599 on Jul 21, 2012 04:09

I descend to try to get a better view of the foyer.

written by Gligar on Jul 21, 2012 14:58

Corridor 1, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O also reads the message, and raises his eyebrow... just as Jam-Y returns from Corridor 2 while looking at his PDC and frowning at the time: it's 16:05.

The two of the return to reception.

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

When they arrive, Jam-Y explains that he received a message from The Computer... did anyone else get it? And since when are they supposed to be finished with the mission. And just how are they supposed to get to Debriefing?

Meanwhile, L4-O goes over to look at the message on the terminal... and notices that it is the same message.

Overbridge, Transtube station, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R chooses to believe that perhaps Kris-R doesn't know which way to go, as he follows him towards the RED concourse. As he approaches, he notices that it is, indeed, a concourse, and it is, indeed, RED, with at least one exit.

Outside Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

Joris-R descends towards the foyer, and drops low enough that he can see Mango attempting to push the door open and leave.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 21, 2012 16:01

"Well. That's odd, this terminal here also displays the message."

"This is weird. Either we have to believe that maybe someone is trying to get us to leave the area, by..."

I gaps.

"Impersonating Friend Computer!"

I think.

"Or, maybe we're just supposed to leave. I guess if Friend Computer says we need to get to Debriefing, then we're just allowed to leave the Quarantine zone..."

written by Gligar on Jul 21, 2012 18:38

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O looks at the message on the terminal in confusion. So someone is trying to get them to leave the area... perhaps it's... an impersonator of The Computer!

written by Kristos on Jul 20, 2012 16:28

"Uh oh... Speeder is unconscious. At least he got a good dice roll."

Of course, it could also be genuine... in that case, does that mean they can just leave the quarantine zone? That sounds... suicidal...

Then again, perhaps that's how they have to leave...

written by Cryoburner on Jul 21, 2012 22:46

"Hmm... such a nondescript RED concourse..."

I enter the decidedly featureless concourse, and proceed to an exit, of which there is apparently at least one of. I look through the exit to see what lies beyond, so long as doing so doesn't involve opening any doors above my clearance or anything.

written by Gligar on Jul 21, 2012 23:28

RED concourse, Transtube station, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R enters, and finds that the concourse is less nondescript than he had originally believed. One feature of note is a Computer Terminal, affixed to which is a sign indicating that maps are available from said terminal. Another feature is a second door (not visible from the overbridge) leading to a hygiene station. But Cyrus-R is more interested in the first exit, which, he discovers, leads out of the station and onto a roadway.

written by Kristos on Jul 22, 2012 03:45

I go through the at least one exit and look around.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 22, 2012 13:57

"Oh... of course! Maybe Friend Computer is still in control of the warbot... we could just go and ask what we need to do!"

I start walking out of the building and towards the checkpoint again. I slow down if anyone else from the area joins in.

written by Gligar on Jul 22, 2012 15:12

RED concourse, Transtube station, JHY Sector

Entering behind Cyrus-R, Kris-R notices the doors, and picks the first to check out. He proceeds to exit onto the roadway.

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

He finds himself on the side of an eight-lane two-way roadway, busy with traffic. But it's an interesting layout: each lane appears to cater for different security clearances... presumably, this indicates the security clearance of vehicle occupants, rather than of the vehicles themselves. The outside lane in each direction, marked as INFRARED Clearance, is almost at a standstill owing to the large volume of traffic. Inner lanes, with correspondingly higher clearances, have less traffic, with the innermost lane (marked as VIOLET) having no traffic at all.

Along each side of the roadway are buildings of various kinds, marked as being used by different service groups... that one's PLC... that's HPD&MC... there's a dormitory... and way over there is an R&D lab.

Reception, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

L4-O suggests that, assuming the warbot is still under Computer control, they could ask it for advice. With that in mind, he starts leaving the building.

From the doorway, John-R suggests, "Or... I do have the Com 1..."

But L4-O has already left.

Foyer, Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

As L4-O reaches the foyer, he can see Mango exiting the building through the main doors. Since he's heading in that direction anyway, he follows.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 22, 2012 16:10

I watch Mango intently, but continue to go in the direction I was intending towards the the checkpoint.

written by 4616599 on Jul 22, 2012 16:17

I follow.

"What is the matter with that clone?" I wonder aloud. "I think he kinda lost his head previously."

written by Jam on Jul 22, 2012 17:16

I peer at Mango-R very closely...

"I wonder if Headgrabber is still in there..."

written by Gligar on Jul 22, 2012 19:09

Outside Building 1, Industrial Subsector B

It seems that Jam-Y, and possibly more of the team - perhaps even all of it - decided to tag along.

L4-O watches as Mango heads back to Building 2 while Jam-Y wonders if Headgrabber is still in his head... No, he's not in there, he realises. Perhaps he's just been affected too much by extended contact.

Wait... where did that come from?

Nearby, Joris-R is wondering the same thing.

written by Gligar on Jul 22, 2012 23:09

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

As they approach, Team Epsilon notices the Mutant Mashers doing something to the warbot. Around it are several smaller bots which seem to be in the process of being dismantled.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 23, 2012 03:39

"Hmm. That's unusual..."

I approach and hail the guards again, and see what they're up to, if they don't explain it themselves.

If Friend Computer does still seem to be in charge of the warbot, I talk to it.

"Hello, Friend Computer! Did you, by chance, send us a message to get to debriefing? Does this mean we are allowed to leave the quarantine?"

written by Gligar on Jul 23, 2012 15:25

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O notes the oddity of the situation, but approaches anyway. As he does, he notices that parts from the smaller bots are being transferred into the warbot. As L4-O watches, a large smoking component is thrown out of the warbot, and crashes to the ground close to him, still smoking.

Finally, one of the Mutant Mashers notices L4-O, and greets him. "Didn't see you there, sarge!" He goes on to explain that The Computer told them to cannibalise other bots to restore minimal functionality to the warbot, enough for it to move under its own power. It's difficult, though, as the replacement parts are... kind of small and underpowered. And to add to that, they have to find a suitable bot brain, too... The Computer kind of burned out what was left of the old one... er, he means, the old one must have been defective.

written by Kristos on Jul 23, 2012 15:32

"Hey look, it's the sector R&D! We are finally almost there! I hope FC does not mind our tardiness."

If it is possible to walk to the R&D lab I begin walking that way.

written by Speeder on Jul 23, 2012 15:44

I get bothered with something... The I try to look around and see where I am.

Then I read the PDC message, and after that I try to remember the usual procedure to follow when a message maybe is from a Friend Computer impersonation.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 23, 2012 17:16

"Hm... I take it Friend Computer has left, then... well, good luck finding the parts. That warbot is a critical asset out here. Also..."

I look around to make sure Nukabot isn't being used for parts. If it's even around.

"Mind Nukabot, the forkbot, it's part of our team. We'll probably be needing it to get back... and possibly for other encounters."

After that, I turn towards Team Epsilon to talk.

"So we should contact Friend Computer, then... I guess PDCs are our only option now, it seems the warbot has been vacated."

written by Gligar on Jul 23, 2012 19:55

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Pleased at having found the lab, Kris-R decides to head straight there. Though... that involves crossing the roadway.

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y snaps back to reality and looks around. He realises that the warbot is looming large in his sight.

He also realises that his PDC has a message. He reads it, and is suddenly doubtful. Now, what was the protocol for dealing with possibly counterfeit messages? Oh yes... he should contact Friend Computer and verify if it is genuine.

L4-O surmises that Friend Computer is no longer in control of the warbot and wishes the Mutant Mashers luck in their repairs. He does remind them not to cannibalise Nukabot, which is sitting nearby, since they'll need it later. Probably.

To Team Epsilon, he adds that they'll have to contact The Computer themselves, and guesses that they'll have to use their PDCs. "Er," John-R reminds him (yet again), "I still have the Com 1, remember?"

written by Speeder on Jul 23, 2012 20:17

I turn to John.

"John, contact Friend Computer and ask him if the message is correct. Also inform him that we did not found out the culprits of the zombie outbreak yet, but we DID found Bioweapon researchers zombified."

written by Kristos on Jul 23, 2012 21:05

I look for a pedestrian overpass (or underpass). If none are apparent, I ask Cyrus-R, "Do you think we can make it across the road?"⁷⁷⁰

written by Gligar on Jul 23, 2012 23:25

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y takes over and orders John-R to place the call. John-R does so: "Friend Computer, this is Team Epsilon requesting verification of a recent message concerning debriefing. My superiors have suggested that it might not be a genuine -"

The Computer cuts him off. "The message concerning a mission debriefing is genuine, citizen. All members of Team Epsilon are fined 50 credits for doubting its authenticity. Please report for debriefing at the allotted time, and no other time."

⁷⁷⁰ KRISTOS: (OOC: Hold on, let me go practice playing Frogger.

up.up,left.up,right.right,down.right,right.up,up,left.up,right.down,right.right,up,up,SPLAT!)

written by Speeder on Jul 23, 2012 15:46 😊

Erm...

I did not expected my post to be predicting the future (I was away because what was supposed to be a date turned into me spending some days with a girl, away from computers!)

written by Gligar on Jul 23, 2012 16:39

throws a d30 at Speeder 😊

John-R continues. "Roger. But we have not yet determined the cause of -"

He is cut off again. "A full report can be given at debriefing, citizen. Do not give a report before or after that time Thank you for your co-operation."

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Now needing a way to cross the roadway, Kris-R looks for a way to do so safely. There is indeed an overpass, but it is Clearance BLUE, and guarded by some surly-looking IntSec goons.

The other (or only, depending on your clearance) option is, of course, to brave the traffic and cross the roadway itself. Faced with that option, Kris-r asks his companion if he thinks they can make it.

As he waits, several vehiclebots speed down the BLUE lane at about 100 kph.

written by Speeder on Jul 23, 2012 23:28

I look confused.

"What the HEL... I wonder what is going on with the Computer... But alright, we are not ULTRAVIOLET, it is not our place to debug it... We must trust that the ULTRAVIOLET citizens are doing their job and thus that Computer can be trusted."

I turn to the checkpoint people.

"So, can we leave?"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 24, 2012 02:57

I frown a little, but realize 50 credits isn't all that much.

I go over to and get on Nukabot.

"Sorry that we've been kind of neglecting you this mission, Nukabot. Just been a lot of in-building work to do. Looks like we're going home now...and we can clean off all this... stuff you've accumulated. And get these controls repaired."

I glance down at Nukabot's forks and wheels... then cease looking down that way since it's probably not pleasant from all the zombie killing and soot.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 24, 2012 07:18

Standing in the doorway, I respond to Kris-R's suggestion.

"Hmm... You might be able to make it across..."

I momentarily stare off across the roadway, picturing Kris-R darting toward the other side...

"At least a few lanes, before I have to shoot you for crossing through a VIOLET lane."

“Just think of what would happen if a VIOLET clone were to be driving somewhere important, such as to brunch, and happened to pass through here at the exact moment you chose to step into the roadway. They might end up with clone debris stuck in the air intakes of their vehiclebot, which could potentially slow them down and cause their awaiting meal to fall below optimal consumption temperatures. Clearly, that would be tragic in many ways.

written by Gligar on Jul 24, 2012 14:59

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y looks confused but puts it out of his mind. It isn't his place to criticise The Computer. If there is a problem, it's already being dealt with.

He instead asks the Mutant Mashers if it's okay to leave. “With all due respect, sir, I can't let you do that,” he is told. “Cold Three-Zed protocols are still in effect.”

L4-O realises that their fine isn't so bad, and heads on over to Nukabot, apologising for ignoring it, and glancing over its forks and wheels. Those will have to be cleaned, and Nukabot repaired (again).

Nukabot doesn't respond.

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R, it seems, hasn't left the station. Instead, he calls out that Kris-R could get part way across the roadway, but then he'd have to terminate him.

He continues by outlining a situation in which a VIOLET is inconvenienced because of it. But he does it in such a way that I am wondering whether this is truly Cyrus-R... or is it an illegal clone of Cryo-R? The similarities are too large to ignore.

Treason point to Cryoburner!

written by Lightning4 on Jul 24, 2012 15:16

“Nukabot? You still with us?”

I listen for a response.

I check it over for any further damage that might've been received during this mission.

written by Speeder on Jul 24, 2012 15:28

I look confused.

Then I look MORE confused.

“I wonder how we solve this...”

Then I turn to the soldiers.

“So... can the protocol have an exception?”

written by Jam on Jul 24, 2012 18:07

“I know! If we shut down the all the cloning bots in the subsector, then ‘accidentally’ get ourselves killed, we would reclone on the outside! Or, I think we would... You'd know more about that kind of thing, Speed-Y.”

written by Gligar on Jul 24, 2012 18:59

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y's confusion returns in force as he tries to figure out how to get out of the subsectors...

He asks if the protocol can have exceptions, but, as it turns out, the answer is no.

Meanwhile, L4-O is checking over Nukabot. Apart from the ruined side panels (from the warbot) and the ruined manual controls (also from the warbot) Nukabot seems fine. It finally finds its voice: “Apologies, citizen. I had entered power-saving mode.”

Jam-Y has an idea: if they shut down all of the cloningbots in the subsectors, they could die and be re-cloned elsewhere! That'd work, right? Er... right? Speed-Y would know better, though...

written by Speeder on Jul 24, 2012 20:21

I turn to Jam.

“Maybe.

First, this is a expensive option to us...

Second, I do not know if the quarantine protocol is the sort of protocol that do not allow us leave as MemoMax clones too, it might happen to us just get stuck on the compnode here until someone turn on the cloning stations again.”

I turn to the clones in the checkpoint.

“What is the penalty for ignoring a Code-3-Zed and leaving anyway?”

written by Gligar on Jul 24, 2012 23:17

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y isn't sure. For one, it's a rather expensive option; for two, he's not sure that Code Three-Zed protocols even allow for MemoMax requests to leave the quarantine zone.

He asks the Mutant Mashers what would happen if he tries to leave anyway. “Well,” he is told, “then we'd have to terminate you.”

written by Speeder on Jul 25, 2012 12:33

I remain thinking a bit.

“Can R&D fetch us using quarantine equipment?”

I turn to the rest of the team.

“Obviously this mean that we will end being used on their... tests... stuff... whatever scary stuff they do... But at least we probably can leave that way and complete the mission without doing any treason, remembering that killing one of your first six clones intentionally is treason, since those clones are property of Alpha Complex.”

written by Lightning4 on Jul 25, 2012 12:48

“Ah, good, you're still with us! And we should be apologizing, since we've been kind of ignoring you a bit during this mission. I mean, we've done a lot in the buildings. And you've been a great help... so once we get back we need to get that stuff fixed as soon as possible..."

[1128]

"If we get back, anyway..."

written by Gligar on Jul 25, 2012 15:27

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Hmmm...

It seems that Speed-Y would prefer to avoid getting the team terminated where possible. To that end, he explores another option: R&D. He is certain that they have equipment for dealing with quarantines and decontamination... The main drawback (if you can call it that) is that it would leave the team open to experimentation at R&D's discretion. However, if it means that they get out of the quarantine zone and report to debriefing as ordered, then all the better. He reminds the team that it would be preferable to do it this way rather than just killing themselves off, since needless terminations are treason. Not to mention destruction of Computer Property.

(Speaking of R&D, do they know about the loss of Speed-Y's Prime yet? I'm sure they'd be interested to know that that experimental leg was lost. Who knows what could happen if whatever's left of it fell into the wrong hands?)

L4-O seems pleased that Nukabot is still online, and apologises to it for ignoring it. He promises to get Nukabot repaired once they get out of here. If they get out of here. "I appreciate it, citizen," Nukabot replies.

written by Speeder on Jul 25, 2012 15:49

I smile happily.

Then I look at Nukabot.

Then at the mutant mashers.

Then I comment.

"You know, I am pretty happy by staying at Speed-3, I do not want to be 4 so soon..."

ON NO!!! SPEED-2 HAD A EXPERIMENT! R&D will be very upset with me if I lose a second experiment! I mean, SPEED-1 lost Massacrebot already!"

I dart off to the building where I remember going suicidal like if there was no tomorrow.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 25, 2012 16:33

I get back to the group at the checkpoint.

"We do need to get out of here though... Friend Computer doesn't tolerate tardiness... we are to report to debriefing. I don't dare question Friend Computer, though it doesn't really feel like we've done very much good..."

I look around, and at the warbot.

"Quite the opposite, really."

I remember something.

"Would you let us leave if we submitted to one of those bioscan things? We passed a checkpoint some time back that was checking for some kind of BLUE toxin, and I'm pretty sure it was the same stuff we've had. Apparently there's a way of purging it from the system... so if any of us have it, it can just be removed."

written by Gligar on Jul 25, 2012 19:23

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y looks happy with his decision. He looks around, and announces that he is not ready to become Speed-Y-DOF-4 yet.

Wait a minute... the leg!

He suddenly realises that the leg is the second thing he's lost for R&D. But wait... he could still find it!

He darts off towards Building 2 as fast as he can.

Meanwhile, L4-O tells everyone that they need to get to Debriefing. Even though he doesn't think they've done much good here - quite the opposite.

A thought then occurs to him... wasn't there that BLUE biotoxin scanner thing a while back? Could they get out of the submitted to a scan? After all, it's apparently possible to remove it. (He doesn't notice Lucas-R shudder when he says that.)

The Mutant Mashers seem to consider this. Soon, a voice behind them says, "It's not just this biotoxin, though, is it? I thought there was some... nano-whatsit involved as well. We'd have to get detectors for them from R&D, and that could take hourcycles!"

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Arriving just behind Mango, Speed-Y notes that the place looks deserted... a far cry from all the zombies earlier.

Now... where was he when he blew up...?

written by Speeder on Jul 25, 2012 20:54

I think a bit... And then I remember the staircase that I blew a huge hole on it, and try to reach it.

I comment to myself...

"If that leg survived the explosion I caused, R&D will be very happy, and me too, because they might just invented a explosion-proof limb. Considering how I lost limbs or died the last times, I might want to replace most of my body with that..."

written by Gligar on Jul 25, 2012 23:42

Foyer, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Remembering that he blew up in a stairwell, Speed-Y reasons that it shouldn't be too hard to find it. And given the level of damage down that corridor...

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subbsector B

...it stands to reason that it should be nearby. And here it is.

Amongst the ruins of the stairwell are the ruins, er, remains, of a number of zombies. And something metallic.

written by Speeder on Jul 26, 2012 00:01

I see if I can retrieve the something metallic without much damage.

written by Kristos on Jul 26, 2012 01:55

"How true! Thank you, Cyrus-R, for protecting me from treason! What an excellent Loyalty Officer you are! But... how are we to cross the road? Perhaps there is another overpass further away?"

I try to think outside the box and look for some other crossing such as an infrared sewer...

written by Lightning4 on Jul 26, 2012 15:52

"Hmm. Well, I think the toxin and the nanobots might really be the same thing... possibly. I think Speed-Y knows more about them... but ah, I see he's run off."

"I'm not actually sure I'm infected, anyway. By now, that stuff has dissipated, and people seem to tell me that I'm on clone number two, so..."

I think for a moment, then look back at the Armed Forces now-non-clones that were turned into zombies and promptly re-killed.

"Er... were they near or inside any of the buildings, by chance? I just realized, the fact they became zombies is not a good thing if they never actually entered the buildings!"

written by Gligar on Jul 26, 2012 18:32

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y attempts to retrieve the something metallic. It's an unpleasant task, what with the stench of spoiled Soylent... but he's able to push past it, and extract the something metallic from the debris. It turns out to be a prosthetic lower leg, and a familiar-looking one at that. It seems rather dented, and something inside is squealing faintly.

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R thanks Cyrus-R for reminding him that he was about to commit treason. However, that leaves them at the same position: how do they cross the road? Is there another overpass somewhere else? There certainly seems to be one further down the roadway.

Or is there something... closer? Something to go under the roadway like, say, a waste transfer conduit? There's got to be one somewhere, right? Hmmm... nope, he can't see one.

Or maybe he just doesn't know what he's looking for. The access covers are different shapes in different sectors, after all, and he might not be aware that JHY Sector uses covers about the same size as the hexagonal metal plate Kris-R is standing on.

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O argues that the BLUE toxin and the nanomachines might actually be the same thing. Speed-Y would probably know more, but he's run off. Naturally.

He continues by saying that he might not actually be infected. The stuff has dissipated, and... well, everyone is saying that he's on clone 2 now, so...

Wait a minute... what about those Armed Forces clones that zombified? Were they in or near any of the buildings recently?

Sven-O (who, as it turns out, was the clone behind them) answers, "Well, I'm not sure, since the CO died, but... I do recall some squads performing searches of the buildings earlier. They might be it.

"That does at least mean that there is a connection between these nano-things and the BLUE gas... but I'm still not sure they're the same thing. I'll see if I can dig up anything else..."

written by Speeder on Jul 26, 2012 19:12

I figure the battery inside it is damaged.

I attempt to see if I can open the battery compartment, note what battery it was, and throw it in another level, away from me.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 26, 2012 19:46

"Hmm... perhaps the map terminal in this otherwise nondescript concourse might be of use in some way..."

I proceed over to the terminal and have a closer look at it, taking a moment to note how it is fastened to the wall.

written by Gligar on Jul 26, 2012 23:04

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Guessing that the battery is faulty, Speed-Y looks for a way to remove it... but can't find one. There is no obvious battery compartment.

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R decides that the best course of action is to... go back into the station.

Transtube station RED concourse, JHY Sector

He decides to look at the terminal, mounted, as it is, by [YOU ARE FORBIDDEN FROM LOOKING TOO CLOSELY]. He can see that it gives him a search prompt, asking where he is trying to go.

written by Speeder on Jul 26, 2012 23:22

I try to disassemble the thing until I find the battery, using my screwpeardriver if necessary.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 27, 2012 00:31

"Fair enough... we need to know that the stuff hasn't spread to the rest of the sector already. I doubt it has, it seemed pretty contained to me."

written by Kristos on Jul 27, 2012 03:30

I follow Cyrus-R.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 27, 2012 06:49

"Hmm... Where are we going? I think they might not have gone into much detail about that during the briefing."

written by Gligar on Jul 27, 2012 15:16

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y continues in his attempt to extract the battery by trying to dismantle the thing. Small problem: he doesn't have the right kind of screwdriver. And... oops, did he just break a warranty seal? You know how important those are...

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O relaxes a little. At least he knows that the air is now safe... but they do need to know if it's spread to other parts of the sector. He doubts it, though. It seems pretty contained now. "You're right" Sven-O agrees. "I think I'll send some squads to check the buildings again... the situation might have improved."

Transtube station RED concourse, JHY Sector

As Krtis-R re-enters the station behind him, Cyrus-R wonders aloud where it is they're supposed to be going. Apparently, his briefing didn't cover it.

Maybe it's contained within the information that was downloaded to his PDC during the briefing. Or maybe he didn't hear the briefing officer talking about the laser barrel production facility, or the R&D labs who have something for them.

written by Speeder on Jul 27, 2012 15:57

I frown. THAT frown.

"Damnit... Explosions hate me, that must be it..."

I start to run back to the team, squealing object in hand.

written by Gligar on Jul 27, 2012 19:06

Stairwell, Level 1, Building 2, Industrial Subsector B

Speed-Y frowns like a you-know-what. Explosions, it seems, aren't his friend. At least he found it, though.

And with that, he runs back the way he came. In the meantime, the faintly squealing leg continues to faintly squeal.

He's back out of the building before Mango has even decided what do do with himself.

written by Kristos on Jul 27, 2012 23:07

"There was a laser barrel factory sabotage and we are supposed to investigate that. Our first stop is this sector's R&D, which was visible on the other side of the roadway."

written by Cryoburner on Jul 28, 2012 00:13

"Ah, That sounds convenient. We should probably go there then."

I type into the search prompt:

JHY SECTOR R&D LAB

written by Gligar on Jul 28, 2012 00:33

Transtube station RED concourse, JHY Sector

Kris-R tells Cyrus-R of their destination, and that they'll be stopping at R&D first. Cyrus-R decides to run a search, and discovers that there are, in fact, four labs in the sector. The closest is the one across the roadway.

written by Kristos on Jul 28, 2012 02:18

"Can you search for a RED-clearance route to get to the nearest one?"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 28, 2012 11:53

I continue to wait around at the checkpoint, watching the clones for activity, and also watching the distance, such as it is due to the smog.

written by Gligar on Jul 28, 2012 15:25

Transtube station RED concourse, JHY Sector

Kris-R asks Cyrus-R to search for an appropriate route to get them to the lab. But as he finishes, the terminal suddenly goes blank and displays a message:

sorry clones i cant let u do that lolololo!

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

As L4-O waits, he notices several squads leave the checkpoint and head towards each of the buildings, passing Speed-Y, who arrives at a dead run carrying some sort of robotic lower leg.

Lights on the roadway also indicate that a vehiclebot is approaching from the direction of the main domescraper.

written by Gligar on Jul 28, 2012 21:46

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

As L4-O watches the vehiclebot, he realises that it's carrying some sort of scanning equipment much like the scanners

written by Gligar on Jul 26, 2012 23:43

In case you haven't noticed, I have altered the rules slightly to try and clarify a couple of things.

[1131] used to detect the BLUE toxin back in... wow, it seems like monthcycles ago...

Transtube station RED concourse, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R's PDC suddenly rings. It seems he has a new message.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 29, 2012 00:37

"Scanning equipment? That was fast... but very useful."

I continue watching the vehiclebot, and see if it's coming to this checkpoint on purpose.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 29, 2012 00:46

"I've got mail!"

I check my messages. : 3

written by Gligar on Jul 29, 2012 15:15

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O notes that it arrived pretty fast, as the vehiclebot slows down and comes to a stop, just outside the quarantine zone. The bot announces, "I have received orders to deliver scanning equipment."

Sven-O looks over. "Thanks, that was rather... prompt of you. Odd, it usually takes several hourcycles to get the scanners... oh well. Will you help us unload, Sergeant?"

Transtube station RED concourse, JHY Sector

Pleased at receiving a new message, Cyrus-R reads it.

written by Gligar on Jul 29, 2012 20:09

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

While Sven-O waits for L4-O to answer, he indicates to the vehiclebot that it should proceed into the checkpoint, and asks, "You should have been given an authorisation code. What's the third code group?"

written by Cryoburner on Jul 29, 2012 21:31

"Hmm... I just received a notice that terminal services are currently experiencing service issues throughout JHY sector. Our recommended course of action is to either wait until services are restored, or seek alternate services that don't require use of the terminal network. Maybe I have a map or something from the briefing..."

I look through my inventory to see if I received a map at the briefing, or maybe a digital map on my PDC.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 30, 2012 00:30

"Indeed."

I help them unload the vehiclebot, and look for somewhere nearby to place all the stuff.

I work on as much of the pile as I can, anyway. Probably a lot of stuff to unload.

written by Kristos on Jul 30, 2012 06:52

"You look for your map, let's go see if there is a crosswalk we can use."

written by Speeder on Jul 30, 2012 12:13

I look at all the new stuff.

"Interesting. I wonder if that stuff arrived fast not because we asked, but because indeed Friend Computer planned ahead and sent it."

written by Gligar on Jul 30, 2012 14:01

Transtube station RED concourse, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R announces that his message notified him of terminal disruption. They should either wait for services to be restored or seek alternative sources of information. He wonders if he has a map or something.

While he rummages around for a map (eventually finding one on his PDC), Kris-R suggests that they leave the station again and look for some other way to get across the roadway, such as a crossing. Hmmm... wasn't there something a bit further down?

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O agrees to help the soldiers unload, and looks for a suitable place to unload it all. How about the spot near the guard point? That's clear right now.

As they unload - and there's quite a lot - the vehiclebot answers Sven-O. "It is %lgo(op)@, citizen." It's quite interesting how well it can pronounce a percent sign, something which most clones have trouble with. (You know, without saying "percent".)

Sven-O pulls out his PDC and consults something. It looks like it might take some time, though.

Speed-Y, who has been watching, expresses his opinion that the scanning equipment had been sent, not because the team requested it, but because Our Mutual Friend had planned ahead. "I am not at liberty to discuss my orders," the vehiclebot tells him.

written by Speeder on Jul 30, 2012 14:36

I show the Leg to L4.

"Hey L4, this leg is squealing, I think it will explode. Can you see if your Army friends have one of these containers used in controlled explosions? So I can put the leg inside to take it safely back to R&D"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 30, 2012 14:49

"Erm..."

I look around at the group.

"Well, anyone have one? This doesn't sound good...I'm not sure what kind of power source something like that has..."

I look around again, but this time at objects. Maybe there's something similar around here?

written by Gligar on Jul 30, 2012 19:14

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

While Sven-O and the rest continue to unload the vehiclebot, Speed-Y tells L4-O that he found the leg. Problem is, it's still squealing. He wonders if the Mutant Mashers have any of those boxes used in controlled demolition. L4-O asks them, and, receiving no reply, goes to look himself.

As luck would have it, the Mutant Mashers did bring a couple of them. There's one problem: they're GREEN Clearance.

written by Speeder on Jul 30, 2012 20:08

I frown.

I look around to see if any GREEN clones are available.

If I do not find one, I ask around if anyone have brevet to use it...

If I do not find that either, I take out my trusty PDC, and write a message explaining the situation, to Friend Computer, and to some old friend of mine, I also see if I can find and send a copy of the message to Derek-G...

written by Gligar on Jul 30, 2012 23:27

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y frowns. Are there any GREEN clones around? He looks, but, alas, there are none. Apparently, there were... but, guess what? Either they were part of the building squads or they fell in the line of duty... either way, it's entirely possible that Team Epsilon has seen them at some point and not realised it.

So, Plan B. Any brevets? Not for the containers, it seems... there were, but... not any more... take a guess why.

So... where does that leave Speed-Y? Drafting a message on his PDC. He seems to be sending it to several locations... let's see... The Computer, Derek-G over in R&D... somewhere else...

As he does, one of the new building squads can be seen running back. "Corporal! We've got incoming!"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 31, 2012 00:20

I look at the squad, and then the building he came from.

"Weird, there isn't really much left..."

I continue to look until I possibly see something. I draw my weapon in preparation.

written by Gligar on Jul 31, 2012 13:33

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O looks over. Odd that there are still zombies left...

But then he realises that the squad just came from Building 1 of Industrial Subsector A... and, looking through the smog, L4-O notices that they do indeed have company...

As the members of the squad prepare their weapons, L4-O does the same.

Here they come...

written by Lightning4 on Jul 31, 2012 13:44

I start firing at the zombies with my blaster. Or whatever else I have equipped, so long as it's not Turbo.

written by Jam on Jul 31, 2012 16:54

I notice everyclone readying their weapons, and I do the same with my laser pistol.

Actually, wait, how many shots do I have left on this barrel? Maybe I should just lob it at the zombies, or whatever it is that's incoming...

written by Speeder on Jul 31, 2012 17:20

First I finish the PDC business.

Then I happily sit on the ground, take out my YELLOW pistol, take a look at the barrel to see how many shots I have left, and if I have any left, I start shooting slowly, taking careful aim at zombie knees.

written by Gligar on Jul 31, 2012 18:45

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O pulls out his blaster and fires four times. Each time, it's a hit! Nice shooting! He's able to almost decapitate one zombie (for they are indeed zombies), and shoot the legs out from under a second.

The four members of the Building 1 squad also shoot. They also have blasters, it seems. I bet they wish that R&D were finished with the XAC-59, but, you know, laser barrel problems... if it weren't for some pesky commies sabotaging that laser barrel factory, it'd be ready by now. Not that it matters too much in this case, since, as we've seen, blasters are effective. The four of them follow L4-O's example and take out another four.

Jam-Y notices everyone firing, and raises his laser pistol... wait, the barrel's spent! Oops... good thing he noticed.

Speed-Y doesn't seem to notice. He's still busy with his message.

Finally, though, he looks up (probably due to a laser shot from behind him) and notices what everyone's doing... he sits on the floor, grabs his laser, and fires. He ends up emptying the barrel shooting at zombie knees... and generating a lot of smoke in the process.

At least he hit a couple of times.

written by Gligar on Aug 01, 2012 00:07

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

It looks like everyclone is preoccupied with the zombies. That's to be understood; after all, they're right in front of them and are attacking. To not be preoccupied with them would probably be a recipe for termination.

This means that noclone is looking up at the swarm of spybots. Not that they can really be seen from the Industrial Subsectors, of course, although staring at the spybots at any time is liable to attract attention from Internal Security. In this case, however, it seems that the spybots are already interested in what's happening below. A few of them are already breaking off from the swarm and descending for a better look at the fight.

written by Speeder on Aug 01, 2012 00:15

When I run out of ammo, I instead of pulling those risky explosion moves, I just change my barrel, and continue doing my careful shooting into knees. Zombie knees I mean... Or at least I hope to hit only those.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 01, 2012 00:31

"A map! Hmm..."

I consult the map on my PDC to see if I can determine the most efficient path to the nearest R&D lab. I also note whether the map includes an indicator marking our current location.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 01, 2012 01:24

I continue firing at the zombie horde. I momentarily glance up at the spybots, but try to keep my focus on the more important thing at the moment, the zombies.

written by Gligar on Aug 01, 2012 13:36

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

As the spybots continue to descend, Speed-Y decides to change his barrel. Just that, no flashy explosive tricks or anything.

While he's doing that, L4-O continues with the shooting. A couple of nice shots are enough to completely decapitate one zombie. He glances up at the spybots, which causes one of them to... well, glare at him. He gets the impression that someone is watching him through it.

By now, Speed-Y is ready to shoot. He fires off three shots, but the zombies stubbornly refuse to let up. Especially the one right in front of him about to lunge at him.

Transtube station RED concourse, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R studies his map. Hmmm... the station is easy to pick out, as is the roadway. And there seem to be clearance-appropriate crossings about five minutecycles' walk from here. He looks for a "You Are Here" mark, but realises that he's not cleared for one in this sector.

written by Speeder on Aug 01, 2012 15:21

I drop the pistol on the ground (carefully, so that it falls flat, not barrel first or trigger first or anything important first).

Takes out my spear and try to sweep the zombie legs from under it.

written by Kristos on Aug 01, 2012 15:48

I point to the map. "Ooo, look, that route will work! As team leader, I order you to lead me along this route."

Pulling up my PDC I note the sighting of the R&D lab, the terminal reporting the presence of several labs in the sector, the strange terminal error message, the efficacy of Cyrus-R's PDC map, the strange apparent lack of convenient entrance points to INFRARED-clearance sewage drains running under the roadway, and the color and ordering of the roadway lanes along with an estimated traffic factor for each.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 01, 2012 16:22

I continue doing what I do best. At least, I think I do it best. Maybe there's other things I do better.

I continue doing what I do quite adequately, shoot zombies!

written by Gligar on Aug 01, 2012 16:44

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Making sure that it doesn't fall on anything important, and simply falls flat (or at least, he tries to do so), Speed-Y drops his laser pistol, and pulls out another weapon: his Spear 2.0. He continues to aim downwards in an attempt to sweep this zombie off its feet, but is unable to do so.

The zombie seems to take advantage of this and pounces, knocking Speed-Y to the ground. Other zombies seem to sense this and start heading over.

However, they have to also deal with the Mutant Mashers' Building 1 Squad, as well as L4-O, who concentrate their fire on the approaching zombies, and, collectively, manage to dispatch four of them.

Transtube station RED concourse, JHY Sector

Looking over Cyrus-R's shoulder, Kris-R points out a likely route and orders Cyrus-R to take him that way.

While he waits for Cyrus-R to respond, he pulls out his PDC and makes a couple of notes concerning what he has seen: the location of the R&D lab; the terminal's report that there are other labs in the sector; the terminal's error message; Cyrus-R's map; the fact that he couldn't find any waste transfer conduits near the roadway; and a brief report of the roadway itself (eight lanes total, four each direction (INFRARED, ORANGE, BLUE, VIOLET from the outside in) with a decreasing amount of traffic as you go inward; estimated traffic levels attached).

written by Speeder on Aug 01, 2012 17:04

I get upset.

"DO NOT MOVE ME AGAINST MY WILL!"

I again try to sweep zombies, from the ground, using both my legs and spear, extending it from me horizontally.

written by Gligar on Aug 01, 2012 19:35

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Once again, Speed-Y attempts to sweep zombies off their feet, albeit hampered by the fact that some of them are practically on top of him. Although to be fair it does give him more targets..

Well, the good news is that several of them have, indeed, been tripped up, the bad news is that they invariably fell on top of Speed-Y... oh, and did I mention that they're attacking?

written by Speeder on Aug 01, 2012 20:13

I get more upset and try to get up and throw the zombies away from me. If I fail I start to bash them with THAT leg.

written by Gligar on Aug 01, 2012 23:26

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

All this getting attacked business is angering Speed-Y. So much so, in fact, that he abandons his spear and resorts to trying to throw them off (after a fashion). He cries out in sheer anger...

...and it works! He's actually able to stand up under the weight of the zombies and push them back, despite being injured! And once they're thrown back, the zombies become a target for the Mutant Mashers, who promptly shoot them.

But Speed-Y's still angry...

written by Speeder on Aug 01, 2012 23:31

I remember the massacrebot final run, and the staircase suicide, and many other incidents of anger.

"DO NOT MOVE MEEEEEEEE!!!!!" I take the nearest zombie and use it as club against the other zombies.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 02, 2012 01:24

If Speed-Y is still in danger, I try to assist him with my blaster. Otherwise, I shoot the nearest zombie to him... or the nearest zombie to me.

written by Jam on Aug 02, 2012 16:40

"Oh no! Speed-Y has gone into berserk rage mode!"

I watch to see if Speed-Y has suddenly gained the strength of a thousand clones, or something like that..

That'd be awesome!

written by Gligar on Aug 02, 2012 18:42

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y is still angry! Even more so than during Massacrebot's final run, or during his second death...

Angry enough that he is able to... attack some zombies with a zombie! His attack sends some of the flying and breaks quite a few bones.

But then... his anger fades, and he realises... some of them were his...

He realises that Jam-Y has been watching him with interest.

L4-O continues shooting. That zombie right there, right near Azir-R, gets a couple of blaster shots to the head for its troubles. L4-O tries to continue, but nothing happens.

written by Speeder on Aug 02, 2012 19:29

I collapse on the ground quivering.

written by Gligar on Aug 02, 2012 22:59

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

As Speed-Y collapses to the ground, the battle rages on. Even Lucas-T joins in with his laser pistol, though not as effectively as others, using blasters, who continue their efforts.

One zombie gets close to King-R and lunges.

Above it all, Joris-R (and the spybots) watches, and... doesn't seem to do anything.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 02, 2012 23:20

I swap out my blaster power pack with a fresh one, and try to assist Speed-Y again.

In the heat of combat, I try to get a tally on how many zombies are around and attacking us.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 03, 2012 02:22

Having studied the map, perhaps a bit too closely, I finally notice that Kris-R has been hovering over my shoulder, and apparently said something.

"Oh, look, this route should work! As a team member carrying a map, I shall lead you along this route."

I then set out along the designated route, pulling Kris-R along with me.

written by Kristos on Aug 03, 2012 02:30

I follow Cyrus-R, leading from behind in grand style.

written by Gligar on Aug 03, 2012 12:45

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O swaps out his blaster's power pack, and continues shooting, scoring another hit. He notes that there are ten zombies remaining.

However, six of them seem to be fixated on Azir-R and King-R. King-R in particular is having a hard time.

Transtube station RED concourse, JHY Sector

You know, I'm not sure about Cyrus-R. He seems to be acting rather... suspiciously. Almost as if he were really someone else...

Treason point to Cryoburner!

For instance, he seems to be inspecting that map rather closely, doesn't he? Oh wait, he's finished. But he seems to have ignored Kris-R's suggestions/orders entirely, as he proceeds to head off towards another crossing.

[1135]

Kris-R follows along behind, but you have to wonder: what is he thinking?

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

As the two proceed in the direction away from Kris-R's recommended route, the two encounter an obstacle, in the form of a vehiclebot which seems to have parked here. The windows are darkened, rendering an inspection of the contents impossible.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 03, 2012 12:51

I try to assist King-R now. More zombies to kill, no time to think about it!

written by Speeder on Aug 03, 2012 12:54

As soon as I stop quivering I take my spear carefully and stab whatever zombie I can reach and is NOT looking at me, I hit its neck or spine if possible.

written by Gligar on Aug 03, 2012 15:49

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O shifts aim, trying to clear some room for King-R. Out of four hits, though, he's only able to hit once, causing one zombie to break off and lunge at him. Meanwhile, King-R takes some hits...

But L4-O is not the only combatant. Speed-Y, though in pain, is trying his best to still help out with his spear, but isn't able to inflict enough damage.

written by Speeder on Aug 03, 2012 15:58

I decide to change tactic. I look for the nearest leg, and spear it, anywhere on it.

written by Gligar on Aug 03, 2012 19:16

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y decides to be a little more direct, and starts stabbing, starting with the nearest leg. He lands a solid hit... on Jam-Y.

written by Gligar on Aug 03, 2012 23:13

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Does Jam-Y like to be stabbed in the leg? He doesn't seem to be reacting to Speed-Y's attack...

Come to think of it, nobody is reacting! Except for the zombies... who are tearing into Azir-R and King-R like noclone's business. It's entirely possible that they've already left the subsectors... after a fashion.

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

A door on the vehiclebot opens, revealing a BLUE clone, who pushes past the two. "Outta my way."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 04, 2012 01:23

Scared by the zombie attacking me, I try to unleash a flurry of blaster bolts at it to try to get it to stop doing that. If it gets too close and starts attacking me, I try to kick out it's legs or something.

written by Kristos on Aug 04, 2012 01:34

"Hey! Wait, this is the wrong way! And what's...?" I take a look at the vehiclebot, noting the clearance. I want to get away from it but it seems important to study for the mission report to satisfy the computer's previous demands. And it could be significant. I wait for 10 secondcycles. If nothing happens, I tell Cyrus-R, "Come. I'll lead the way" and turn and follow my suggested (demanded) route.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 04, 2012 01:47

"Hi there, vehiclebot. It seems as though we are both occupying the same walkway, doesn't it? Us for walking, and you for... parking. It's really great that these walkways can serve multiple purposes."

I see if I can determine what model of vehiclebot it is. I also note whether it would be possible to travel around, over or under the vehicle bot in a way that doesn't have us crossing into the roadway.

written by Gligar on Aug 04, 2012 12:31

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O starts shooting like crazy, trying to fend off that one zombie still attacking him... in his panic, he even forgets simple things, like aiming, and accidentally hits Jam-Y with one shot. On the plus side, though, he did manage to eradicate the zombie.

Meanwhile, the horde has finished with King-R...

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Realising what's going on, Kris-R berates Cyrus-R for leading him the wrong way, and has a quick look at the vehiclebot. As you are no doubt aware, bots do not have a clearance the same way clones do, but this one is painted a nice BLUE colour to match its occupant, who is presumably its owner. Said BLUE, though he has already passed them, waits impatiently for the two to leave. "Are you deaf?! I said move!"

Kris-R looks like he wants to do just that, but before he can, Cyrus-R starts talking to the vehicle bot. It does not respond. He tries to identify it, but it is a model he is not familiar with. What he is familiar with is the fact that it is blocking the pavement.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 04, 2012 12:38

I check my blaster for heat, and if it's not too bad, continue trying to get any zombies near me, if there are any left. Otherwise, I just shoot some random zombie.

written by Gligar on Aug 04, 2012 16:09

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O stops shooting for a moment to check his blaster. It isn't hot, so he continues firing, taking extra care to aim this time, which pays off: with just two shots, one more zombie goes down.

Phew... now he has a little more space to think...

written by Kristos on Aug 04, 2012 19:08

I grab Cyrus-R and drag him out of the path. "What are you, Cyrus-R, some sort of treasonbot!? I cannot imagine the Computer being pleased with your behavior." I note this infraction in my PDC.

written by Gligar on Aug 04, 2012 20:11

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Noticing what Cyrus-R is doing is enough for Kris-R. He falls back on the old standby and drags Cyrus-R out of the way, demanding to know whether he is a treasonbot or something. The way he is acting... Kris-R doubts that The COmputer would be pleased with it.

Kris-R makes a note of it and continues dragging Cyrus-R back towards his favoured route.

written by Jam on Aug 05, 2012 00:11

I suddenly notice the stab wound in my leg.

"Hey, when did that get there? Speed-Y, do you know anything about this gash on my leg?"

I also notice I seem to have suddenly acquired a nasty burn from what looks to be a blaster shot.

"Oh, that's new too! Say, L4-O, did you just shoot me or something? You know that's treasonous, right? Remind me to punish you once you guys are done saving my life!"

I smile at L4-O, then start to sway back and forth. A terrible scream of intense agony is heard, then the sound of a rather nasty impact of skull against synthcrete, then silence.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 05, 2012 00:13

I continue to pepper what's left of the zombies with blaster fire, changing blaster packs again if I need to.

written by Gligar on Aug 05, 2012 00:32

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Jam-Y suddenly snaps out of his daze, and realises that he is injured. He starts asking, calmly, about his injuries. Specifically, he has a stab wound... would Speed-Y know anything about it? And... he also has a blaster wound - a rather nasty one at that. Perhaps L4-O would like to share anything he knows? Shooting a higher-clearance citizen without a proper reason is treasonous after all, and deserves punishment... when they're done saving his life.

L4-O doesn't seem to be paying attention, though. He is more interested in shooting, and killing another zombie. But he quickly comes back to reality when he hears an anguished scream - and notices Jam-Y, collapsed on the ground, not moving.⁷⁷¹

⁷⁷¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: Jam gets 1pp for the fun performance there. 😊)

written by Cryoburner on Aug 05, 2012 06:31

I have another look at the map on my PDC whilst following along.

"I suppose this route might work as well... I do think we could have managed to crawl under that vehiclebot though, maybe even without getting snagged on something and dragged for several sectors."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 05, 2012 12:21

I notice Jam-Y has collapsed for reasons maybe possibly part of my doing, and run over to him while trying to take out another zombie.

If I get to him, I check his wound to see how bad it is.

"Sir? Er, sorry sir... you here with us?"

written by Gligar on Aug 05, 2012 13:11

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

As Team Sigma continues to make its marginally-uncertain way towards R&D, the BLUE can be seen muttering to himself as he dials a PDC number.

Meanwhile, Team Sigma itself - or at least half of it - is also using its PDC. While being dragged, Cyrus-R checks Kris-R's route. But why couldn't they have simply crawled under the vehiclebot? Perhaps because there was not the room to do so, unless one has some kind of mutation that allows them to get through really narrow spaces...

They soon reach the promised crossing: an overbridge, clearance RED. Nobody seems to be using it, though. Casual inspection reveals the cause to be a toll booth partway across.

However, the inspection is interrupted by the teams' PDCs ringing, indicating that a fine has been charged to their accounts.

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

As the zombies continue chewing on Azir-R, L4-O tries to shoot even as he investigates Jam-Y... only to find that the YELLOW has... well, left the subsectors. And L4-O may be partly responsible...

Oh, and by the way, he missed.

There is a sound behind him. "Sir, turn around. Right now." It's Lucas-R, and he has his laser pistol aimed right at L4-O.

JHT Sector Main Cloning station, below Central Subsector

Things are getting busy around here. For a while now, clones have been decanting after being terminated in... strange ways, according to the master display... total paralysis, being burned, having their brain removed, being eaten alive...

Then again, it could just be a typical day at R&D. It's difficult to tell.

You remember perversity points, right? Those things that nobody ever users, that have the power to alter dice rolls...? 😊

[1137]

Right now, the tanks are at capacity. One, carrying an INFRARED, is forcibly emptied (and the contents liquefied) in order to make way for a YELLOW clone. Looks like the INFRARED will have to wait.⁷⁷²

written by Gligar on Aug 05, 2012 18:03

JHT Sector Main Cloning station, below Central Subsector

One side-effect of everything running at capacity is that there are few delays outside of those put in place by security clearance (well, and Tech Services, but give them a break, will you? They're being run off their feet... who can blame them for... er, running foul of commie sabotage yeah, that's the ticket... from time to time? And so what if some random clone gets liquefied to make room for a YELLOW? The INFRARED was probably due for termination anyway.), and consequently, the YELLOW's tank is already halfway done with its clone. It almost looks like the clone is annoyed with itself for not realising something sooner.

It also looks a little like Jam-Y.

written by Kristos on Aug 05, 2012 18:58

I check my PDC to identify the details of the alert. I also walk up the toll bridge and request the amount of the toll fee.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 05, 2012 21:40

I sigh and turn around.

"Erm... whoops? I may have gotten a little overzealous while trying to kill zombies..."

I glance back at Jam-Y.

"Vatcrap... I didn't even think I hit him in an important bit."

I glance in the direction of the zombies, and keep my blaster in that direction. I make sure nobody is in my line of fire, and that my blaster is aimed nowhere near Lucas-R.

"That was not intentional, either way... and do you think we can do this after we're not in immediate danger?"

I punctuate my comment with some blaster shots at a zombie in the direction I'm aiming. If there are any.

written by Gligar on Aug 05, 2012 23:20

Overbridge, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R stops to check his PDC. He discovers that 25 credits have been deducted from his account by order of one Magnus-B-JHY-3. He also discovers that he has less than 100 credits remaining.

Speaking of credits, he proceeds to walk to the toll booth and ask the toll. He discovers that the booth is unmanned except for a single jackobot, which tells him that the toll for a RED Clearance citizen is 35 credits.

⁷⁷² JAM: (ooc: I try to use a PP to save my I—Oh wait... Too late!)

But I suddenly feel the urge to facepalm... It's only after I die and am recloned outside of the quarantine zone that I finally figure out a way to leave!)

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O sighs and turns around. He tells Lucas-R that his shooting of Jam-Y was an accident, and that he didn't even think the wound was to anything important. Perhaps he got a little overzealous when it came to shooting zombies...

Hew repeats that it was unintentional, and suggests that they deal with it at some other time when they're not about to be eaten by zombies. Speaking of which... one's about to pounce on John-R. L4-O shoots it a couple of times. He manages not to hit John-R and drop the zombie.

This causes John-R to approach, and tell Lucas-R, "How about we save this for debriefing? You know, along with the part where I tell everyone about the loss of my multicorder."

Lucas-R calms down a little. "Yeah, you're probably right," he replies. "But I still think we need to make some sort of record now - hey, doesn't Jam-Y have that loyalty recorder?"

"True, but we'll need to find the key."

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Jam-Y's tank finishes up with his next clone, and, after downloading his memories, releases Jam-Y, depositing him on the floor.

written by Jam on Aug 06, 2012 02:25

"Urgh!"

I wipe some of the tank slime off of my face. As I'm wandering towards the chemical showers, I attempt to figure out just where in Alpha Complex I am.

written by Kristos on Aug 06, 2012 05:35

"Cyrus-R, how many credits do you have remaining?"

written by 4616599 on Aug 06, 2012 09:48

I finally snap out of my long daze.

"It's almost like I was in another world for a moment- oh, vat it, more of that lot!"

I fire at the zombies, and also look around the roadway and checkpoint for anything, preferably explosive or flammable or heavy, that could be useful.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 06, 2012 11:58

I go back to killing zombies, if there are any left. I do glance at Lucas-R occasionally to keep an eye on him, though.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 06, 2012 12:32

"Hmm... a fine. How troublesome."

I put my PDC away and continue along.

"Oh, I probably have enough credits. Maybe you should pay my way just to be safe though."

I follow Kris-R to the overbridge toll booth and have a look at the Jackobot, noting whether it is armed, and any other potentially relevant or otherwise interesting details about it.

written by Speeder on Aug 06, 2012 13:11

I look confused, in pain and dazed.

“WHYYYYY WHAA AGLARMGUAG?”

I am clearly not a zombie... But taking a closer look, I am kinda behaving like one, or is all the shock and pain from the combat... Who knows.

written by Gligar on Aug 06, 2012 13:49

JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

It is not unusual for newly-decanted clones to exhibit signs of confusion. The confusion, of course, is due to apparently just... appearing inside the cloning tank after being elsewhere, possibly several sectors away, perhaps in the heat of battle, or after having entered a confession booth, or perhaps even just walking down a corridor. The resultant loss of memory from being terminated (the MemoMax system only performs a backup every few minutecycles or so) does not help either.

Jam-Y-JYR-3 is no exception to this. After a moment, though, he can think clearly enough to realise that his face is slimy, and wipes it off. Then he realises that the rest of him is slimy, too. He'd better – oh, he's already heading for the showers. See, there's the stairwell over there.

As he descends, he looks out over the cloning station, and spots the master display in a control alcove to one side. He can make out that he is in JHT Sector, and that the Code Three-Zed protocols are still in force.

He realises that he'll have time to look at the display a little longer if he wants, since the chemical showers are currently full.

Overbridge, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R inquires as to how many credits Cyrus-R has remaining. The reply is that he probably has enough, but it might be better if Kris-R paid for both of them.

The jackobot (a C6L series, by the way, outfitted with an ME Card scanner, clipboard, pen, and neurowhip) interrupts him. “Perhaps you are unfamiliar with Toll Booth Directive 929-C? The one which states that all clones must pay their own toll?”

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Somewhere above, Joris-R suddenly reacts to the situation, by firing his blaster. However, he ends up missing everything.

Hmmm... perhaps there is something on the road that can help? Like, say, something explosive? You would think so, what with the Armed Forces being around, wouldn't you? Alas, there seems to be no such thing.

L4-O also continues shooting. He notes that there are only a couple left, and that Lucas-R is still watching him. He also manages to miss everything. What is it with missing?

He also spots something zombie-like from a little closer in... oh wait, that's Speed-Y. He isn't a zombie... is he? He's acting like one... but perhaps that's due to his broken bones? Maybe? Possibly? Maybe?

written by Speeder on Aug 06, 2012 16:00

I twist and turn in place.

“AAAAAH!!! PAAAAIIINS!!”

When I notice odd looks.

“PAAAAIIINS! NOT BRAAAAAIIINS!!!”

written by Gligar on Aug 06, 2012 18:56

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y takes the opportunity to loudly announce to everyone that he is in pain. However, he... kind of picks the wrong words for it, and nearly gets shot for his trouble. “Oops,” John-R says. “My bad... maybe we should do something about him?”

“Like what?” Lucas-R asks. “Anyone got any happy pills? Oh, wait... Azir-R! Didn't he have, like, all the drugs?”⁷⁷³

written by Lightning4 on Aug 06, 2012 20:03

After nearly getting distracted by not-zombie Speed-Y, I try to shoot the remaining zombies again, counting on slightly improved aim. Maybe?

written by Kristos on Aug 06, 2012 21:43

“That is almost the same thing I was about to say, Mr. Jackobot!” I pay the toll and continue to the other side. “Come, Cyrus-R.”

written by Gligar on Aug 06, 2012 23:04⁷⁷⁴

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Though Speed-Y is distracting, L4-O does his best to ignore him and concentrate on the actual zombies. IT is difficult, especially with Speed-Y shambling around, but he's able to get in a couple of good shots, culminating in the death of two zombies. Only two left...

Toll booth, overbridge, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

It seems that Kris-R was about to say much the same thing as the jackobot. He thanks the bot, and offers his card for scanning. The jackobot does so, and allows Kris-R to pass. “Thank you, citizen. It is now your turn,” it adds to Cyrus-R.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 07, 2012 07:12

I try to aim a little better at one of the remaining zombies, so I can try to kill it accurately without killing any other clones.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 07, 2012 08:19

“Ohhh... Toll Booth Directive 929-C, of course. I was thinking of that other one. The one where Kris-R pays. I suppose that doesn't apply here though.”

⁷⁷³ GLIGAR: (OOC: +1pp to Speeder 😊)

⁷⁷⁴ GLIGAR: (OOC: Speeder spends that PP he just received.)

I proceed to swipe my ME Card and travel with Kris-R across the overbridge, provided the transaction follows through as expected.

written by Gligar on Aug 07, 2012 13:04

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

With there still being a couple of zombies left, L4-O's work is not done. He continues firing, trying to keep his aim as tight as possible, trying to fire only at the zombies. Not at anything else.

Unfortunately, he seems to have forgotten that he doesn't have just aim to worry about. He also has his blaster's heat situation. It grows hot in his hands, extremely so. Enough to severely burn his hands.

Good thing the Mutant Mashers have it cov—

Oh. It seems that they are out of ammo.

Toll booth, overbridge, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R reveals that he is aware of Toll Booth Directive 929-C, but was momentarily confusing it with another, possibly 929-D, which permits a citizen of higher clearance to order a citizen of lower clearance to pay for him. However, that directive does not apply, since both he and Kris-R are of the same clearance, namely RED.

He officers his ME Card fort the jackobot to scan. It does so, and thanks him, allowing him to pass and rejoin Kris-R on the other side.

written by Speeder on Aug 07, 2012 13:24

I see the situation...

I hear the situation...

"Screw it... FOR BLAZING GLORY AGAIN!!!"

I stand, take the squealing robot leg, and go in raging anger again because we are in a hopeless situation bashing zombies with the leg, sometimes I may shove a laser barrel in a zombie or two, kick another, headbutt another...

written by Gligar on Aug 07, 2012 17:15

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

What with there still... hey, haven't I started with that already? No matter. This time, it's Speed-Y who decides to act, and it looks like he's trying to trigger whatever it was that made him rage like that. But... it seems that he just can't summon the anger on demand. Perhaps the pain is too great or something.

Nonetheless, he still charges the remaining zombies, and actually manages to drive one back. It falls to the ground, twitching.

That seems to spur on the soldiers of the Mutant Mashers, some of who have knives. They rush in to help, one of them yelling, "Blazing glory is our thing! Don't go stealing it!"

With their help, the zombies, who now have more targets than just Speed-Y, are more or less under control again. But that doesn't mean that you're in the clear just yet.

written by Speeder on Aug 07, 2012 17:51

I attempt to rise again, almost from the grave, and bash them again with the squealing leg.

written by Jam on Aug 07, 2012 18:15

"I hope those guys remember to get all my stuff... I'd hate to see my precious laser pistol barrels in the hands of some commie or something..."

I continue waiting for a shower to become available, with a slightly bored expression on my face.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 07, 2012 20:30

"Ow ow ow!" I drop my blaster and start blowing on my burned hands.

"Aaah! Speaking of blazing!"

I look for something cold. Or liquidy. Or something. Anything!

written by Gligar on Aug 07, 2012 21:33

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

What with there being still a third time when there are still zombies around, Speed-Y keeps trying to trigger the same level of rage, as well as using that leg as a club. He's... getting there, but as yet, the rage state eludes him. Nonetheless, his attacks manage to nor only ensure that the fallen zombie will no longer be a threat, but take down two more. That leg's squealing takes on a more urgent volume, but I'm sure that's not important.

L4-O drops his baster and tries to cool off his hand in any way he can; first by blowing on it and, when that doesn't seem to work, he looks for something cold and/or wet. Well, there are these bodies everywhere... I'm sure they're cold and damp by now... no? Well... I guess he could use the metal equipment he's carrying...

Outside the chemical showers, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

While he continues to wait for the showers, Jam-Y muses about his equipment. Hopefully, someone will remember to pick it all up... he'd hate to lose everything. Especially his laser barrels.

Soon, though, a shower becomes free. The clone steps out and scurries off in search of a jumpsuit, while muttering that he's never seen the cloning station this busy.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 07, 2012 21:48

I try grabbing something metal I have to cool off. Whatever is coldest, anyway.

If the pain starts to die down, I check my hands to see how damaged they got from that.

written by Jam on Aug 08, 2012 00:26

I attempt to enter the shower, after first making sure I'm wearing a mask and all other necessary equipment. I wouldn't want to suffocate or anything!

written by Speeder on Aug 08, 2012 00:45

I frown.

"WHY THE ZOMBIES DO NOT END???"

WHY THIS SQUEALING DO NOT STOP?"

I stop and think a bit.

"Well, alright."

I go to one of the blast boxes, drop the leg inside it (without touching it).

"Oooops, this was a accident."

Then I "stumble" on the lid, closing it.

If any zombie attack me while I am doing this... I bash it back with the leg.

written by Kristos on Aug 08, 2012 03:01

"We're finally almost there!" I walk to the R&D lab.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 08, 2012 09:37

Walk, walk, walk...

"Yes."

I check to see whether I have that bag of algae chips Kris-R seemingly released into my hands back in the JHP sector station.

written by Gligar on Aug 08, 2012 13:01

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

What with Speed-Y still being angry about there being zombies around, and at the fact that that leg is still squealing... Speed-Y does something about the leg. Specifically, he "accidentally" walks over to one of the blast boxes, "accidentally" drops the leg inside and "accidentally" closes the lid. Oops.

Then he collapses on the ground in pain.

And what with L4-O being burned, L4-O does something about that, too. Specifically, he grabs hold of Turbo, which is nice and cold due to not being used recently... that feels good. Though the pain seems to still be there.

Meanwhile the Mutant Mashers finish off the zombies (though they lose a clone in the process), leaving the area relatively quiet again.

"Whew!" exclaims one of the Building 1 Squad soldiers. "That was close!"

Chemical shower, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Jam-Y moves to enter the shower. At the same time as a couple of other clones behind him. Clearly, they don't know that he's YELLOW and should go first.

Turns out they're too slow, though. Jam-Y gets there before them and dons the mask before hitting the START button. Ahhh, there's nothing like a nice chemical shower after being decanted...

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Team Sigma continues its walk back down the roadway. Kris-R, for one, seems excited to be almost at R&D. Cyrus-R, on the other hand, seems more reserved. He's more interested in that bag of algae chips he appropriated from Kris-R.

Outside the R&D lab, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Before he gets to eat them, though, the two arrive outside the R&D building. It is quite large and seems to be reinforced, as if explosions happen regularly inside it. Notably, the door is one large slab of synthcrete, with an intercom nearby.

written by Gligar on Aug 08, 2012 17:40

Chemical shower, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

And after all that waiting, it's refreshing for something to go quickly for a change. The thing is, it's the shower cycle. Jam-Y's shower finishes and opens, revealing that there's still a queue for the showers.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 08, 2012 20:04

I stay near my blaster and decide to recall any memories I have of the 'Rules and Regulations and Fines and Punishment for the Armed Forces' (RRFPAF for short!), regarding accidentally killing a clone in the heat of combat.

Then I try to cross reference that with the RRFPTS, TS for Troubleshooters, of course.

If I fail those, I maybe try to call them up on my PDC, if I can.

written by Gligar on Aug 08, 2012 21:15

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

While the Mutant Mashers start setting up that scanner equipment, L4-O starts thinking. Can he remember anything from the regulations concerning accidentally terminating a clone in combat? Hmm... from what he can recall, the term "accidentally terminate" is kind of a slippery concept, the king that can get you terminated if you do it to the wrong clone. The RRFPAF suggests that the punishment is target duty (with you as the target), and the RRFPTS recommends that the Loyalty Officer deal with it - oh wait...

So it doesn't look good. Unless... what's the usual Troubleshooter justification for terminating someone? "He was a commie"? Well? Is he? Has he done anything that could warrant termination?

written by Jam on Aug 08, 2012 21:20

"Ah, that was a nice shower!"

I walk out of the shower, and try to find a YELLOW jumpsuit to put on.

I also look for the appropriate forms to fill out, and check the time once more...

written by Lightning4 on Aug 08, 2012 23:54

I think some more... then shrug and gently check my blaster to see if it has cooled down enough to put away safely.

written by Gligar on Aug 09, 2012 00:39

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O thinks a little further and apparently decides to drop the matter, at least for now. He turns his attention back to his overheated blaster. It's still too hot to touch.

Sven-O comes over to him. "Hey, sarge, we're almost done setting up the scanners."

Chemical Showers, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Pleased with the shower, Jam-Y exits, passing the two possibly-RED clones behind him. He doesn't seem to notice them glaring at him, as if they are suppressing unhappiness at getting to the shower before them. He continues down to the lower area.

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Entering from the stairs, Jam-Y finds a couple of racks of jumpsuits, including some YELLOW ones. He begins to get dressed as he looks around, noticing some terminals and an ME Card dispenser. Next to the dispenser are several vendobots.

But that's not all he's looking for; he's also interested in the time. From the clock over there, it is now 16:42.

written by Kristos on Aug 09, 2012 01:49

I approach the intercom and speak, "Team Sigma reporting for a meeting with JHY Sector R&D."

written by Cryoburner on Aug 09, 2012 10:21

I check whether there is a button to press to actually activate the intercom.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 09, 2012 11:10

"That's good then. Let's get the scanning started so we can see if it's safe for us to leave quarantine."

I stand near the scanner and wait until they're fully ready, then I look at my team to see if anyone is going to offer to go first.

If nobody does, I offer to go first instead.

written by Speeder on Aug 09, 2012 13:31

I am still thinking in how to haul a GREEN box around without committing treason.

I message Derek explaining that a important R&D part got fallen by accident inside a GREEN box and that I need to take that back to R&D.

Then I smile happily at the dead zombies.

written by Jam on Aug 09, 2012 17:36

I go to the terminals, assuming there must be some electronic forms to fill out... I also try to figure out how to operate the ME card dispenser, after I've filled out my forms, of course.

written by Gligar on Aug 09, 2012 18:28

Outside the R&D lab, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-Y approaches the intercom and announces Team Sigma's presence. Cyrus-R chooses to observe, focusing his attention on the intercom itself. There doesn't appear to be a button on the intercom which one could use to activate it. Perhaps it is some kind of experimental voice-activated model?

In a moment, the big door grumbles and begins to open. I did say it was big, right?

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O states that they should begin scanning as soon as the equipment is ready. The sooner they're checked out, the sooner they can get out of here. Perhaps someone would like to go first?

Everyone seems reluctant for some reason. Perhaps they are remembering what happened to Lucas-R.

In the end, L4-O volunteers to go first. "Great," Sven-O says. "Let's get started. Is everything ready over there?" he asks the soldier acting as the operator. The response is a thumbs-up. Good to go.

But Speed-Y seems to be uninterested. He's sending a message concerning the leg to Derek-G, saying that it's in a GREEN box.

He gets a quick reply:

Derek-G said:

If you can get it to the bot parking area under Central Subsector, I'll take it off your hands.

Oh, and... since you helped out with X-1, you might like to know that X-2 is in the initial build stages right now. I've been delayed due to my helper - now what he was his name? Mike-R? No... Mick-R, that's it - being charged with treason and reassigned to reactor shielding. He was working on operational parameters, and now I have to ditch his work. Gah.

[1142]

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Now dressed, Jam-Y heads over to a terminal, wondering if there are any forms on there. Well, given the current display - a box reading "Self-Service Clone Release: Touch screen to begin" - it is a fair bet that it does.

He touches the screen, to find that, hey! It has forms for him to fill out! He'd better do so and look at that card dispenser! He glances at it in passing, and notices a tongueprint scanner.

written by Speeder on Aug 09, 2012 18:40

I turn to Nukabot.

"Nukabot!

You have no clearance...

Please, take that thing..."

I point to the box.

"To bot parking area under Central Subsector please... Derek-G, that GREEN researcher that took care of you a bit after Cryo broke you, will take care of that box."

I get to the queue to get scanned.

"Odd... I feel like I have some broken bones... I have? I am not sure."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 09, 2012 19:05

Fairly confident that I should be clean, I go through the scanner, and listen for any response from either the clones running the scan, or the scanners themselves.

I follow any further instructions that are needed of me as well for the scanning process.

written by Kristos on Aug 09, 2012 22:00

"Wow, that's a big door! I am surprised it does not have many cameras attached."

written by Gligar on Aug 09, 2012 22:10

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

As L4-O is led through the scanning process, Speed-Y realises that there is a way to get the box to Derek-G: Nukabot. Since it has no clearance, it can simply pick up the box and get going.

Nukabot wakes up from power-save mode again. "It is good to feel needed," it says as it rolls into position, lifts the box with its forks, and proceeds to... be stopped by the Mutant Mashers. "Hold it, bot, we'll have to scan you as well. We wouldn't want you to accidentally be carrying something that was infected, now would we?"

Speed-Y gets in line, just as the operator finishes his scan of L4-O. "Looks like you're clean, Sir."

Outside the R&D lab, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R offers his comments on the door. Why yes, that is a big door. And as it continues to open, it becomes apparent that, in fact, there are at least a few cameras attached... no, embedded into the door.

Soon, the door is completely open. A voice from inside states, "Team Sigma, step forward."

written by Jam on Aug 09, 2012 22:54

I fill out the forms as best I can, and attempt to acquire a ME card by pressing my tongue against the tongueprint scanner.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 10, 2012 02:22

"Perfect. Where should I go now?"

If they tell me, I go there. Otherwise, I move away from the scanners and watch.

written by Speeder on Aug 10, 2012 11:11

After I get scanned I wait outside the quarantined zone but still in view.

I also observe Nukabot to see if it will manage to leave.

written by Gligar on Aug 10, 2012 14:03

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Jam-Y finishes up with the forms and heads over to the dispenser. He presses his tongue to the scanner. It tastes faintly of lemonlyke.

But the taste is less relevant than the ME Card the machine drops, which enables him to use the other vendobots.

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O asks where he should go now, and is told that, since the scan says he's clear, he is free to leave. Though he should expect a call from Medical Services or R&D at some point.

Once L4-O moves out of the way, it's Speed-Y's turn. As the scan progresses, the equipment beeps and whirrs, and makes some alarming-sounding noises. "Hold on," says the operator. "I'll run that again... there's something..."

Meanwhile Nukabot is also being scanned. A pair of soldiers are using hand scanners to check over it. The scanners also make noises, and it is clear that the soldiers don't really know what the noises mean. After a brief conversation, they decide to ignore the noises and let Nukabot pass. It does so.

written by Speeder on Aug 10, 2012 14:20

I look unhappy.

"It hates me."

written by Gligar on Aug 10, 2012 17:28

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y doesn't look too happy (someone had better speak to him about that, preferably with a dose of happy pills) about the scanner seemingly "hating" him. Perhaps there is an alternative reason?

[1143]

The operator continues working. And, it seems, has found the cause for the earlier problems: blood on Speed-Y's jumpsuit. "It seems, sir, that one of the zombies bled on you. I don't think I need to say that the blood is contaminated, and we can't let anything contaminated leave."

written by Speeder on Aug 10, 2012 17:41

I look at the blood...

Then without much patience I take my spear out and attempt to cut the bloodied part out...

Unless that part is too big, then I remove the jumpsuit.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 10, 2012 18:45

"Yes, and a rather big doorway to go with it."

I step forward, into the big doorway, pulling Kris-R with me, and have a look around inside, since not doing so might pose a hazard.

written by Jam on Aug 10, 2012 18:54

I check the name on the ME card, to be sure my name matches I'm who I think I am. I guess I haven't looked in a mirror since I recloned, I could be in a completely different body!

"Okay!"

I move on to the vendobots, and try to figure out what is available for me to purchase, as well as how many credits I have left...

"I wonder where I could get a PDC at... Or maybe I don't need one yet! I could just use the one my old clone had, right?"

I look slightly worried...

"Oh, I really hope the others have my stuff. Assuming they didn't die with me..."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 10, 2012 19:15

"Sounds good then. Thanks for understanding our situation..."

I get on Nukabot and watch the rest of the team go through the scanning process.

written by Gligar on Aug 10, 2012 22:26

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y looks down at his jumpsuit, to find that the operator wasn't lying. There's a lot of blood on there. After all, this is the jumpsuit his previous clone used, isn't it? And while he could just use his spear to cut off the infected parts, that wouldn't leave him with much jumpsuit left. So, left with no other option, he just removes the whole lot, leaving him out of uniform. "Heh. That'll work, sir, but... do we have a spare jumpsuit or something? No... I guess not."

Well, I guess he is still wearing his reflec and hat...

L4-O thanks the operator and heads over to Nukabot in order to sit at the operator's seat. This allows him to wait for everyone else... if Nukabot didn't automatically start heading back to the main domescraper.

R&D Lab Interior, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R does as ordered, taking one step forward, before he looks in. It becomes apparent that the interior is one large space split into "rooms" by equipment placement. Leading from the door, a "corridor" of sorts runs the length of the lab. It seems to be GREEN Clearance, though there is a RED stripe running down it for them to walk on.

A GREEN scientist stands at the de-facto entrance to one of the "rooms". He looks at the two of them and comments, "I thought there would be more of you."

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Fearing that he might not have been cloned in the correct body (even though there is absolutely no chance of that happening, at all, seriously, absolutely no chance at all), Jam-Y takes the opportunity to look at the ME Card he just received. According to the card, though, his fears are unfounded, since it is made out to Jam-Y-JYR-3. The card patterning is unfamiliar, but that is hardly surprising.

Moving on to the vendobots, he discovers that, aside from the usual B3, Soylent, and algae chips, there are vendobots for PDCs (which answers that question...), laser pistols, and laser barrels. Inserting his card into one, he discovers that he has 528.4 credits remaining.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 11, 2012 01:13

I realize Nukabot appears to be carrying some cargo and get off.

I watch Nukabot drive away, wondering where it's going, then go back to watching the rest of the team.

written by Kristos on Aug 11, 2012 02:36

I step forward while minding my clearance. "Greetings, sir! Yes, my hygiene officer never met with the team. What was his name? Mike? Milk? Mkei? And my loyalty officer was terminated for some undercover high treason or maybe for observing ultraviolet dust particles, I'm not really sure. Cyrus-R here is the replacement loyalty officer. Thus far he is doing an excellent job as a perfect substitute for old Cryo-R. And I am the [pointing to my nifty hat and badge] team leader, Kris-R."

written by Cryoburner on Aug 11, 2012 03:46

"Hello."

I wave.

written by Gligar on Aug 11, 2012 12:27

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O decides not to accompany Nukabot after all, and allows it to head off. He wonders where it is going. Apparently, he wasn't listening when Speed-Y ordered it to take the box. Oh well.

[1144]

He returns to the scanner and watches Lucas-R be processed. Unlike last time, he checks out.

R&D Lab Interior, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R explains the situation with his team, stating that his Hygiene Officer did not show up, and that Cyrus-R (who waves at the scientist) is a replacement Loyalty Officer. "I see," the GREEN replies. "Well, I've seen worse... though I would have hoped for a larger team. What is it with clones these days? Noclone seems to want to be a Troubleshooter any more. Perhaps they're all involved in treasonous activities... but anyway. If you'd like to follow me..."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 11, 2012 16:27

"Hm... that leaves John-R... and... Azir-R? I think?"

I look around for any others on our team that are actually here.

"Oh... Joris-R I guess. If he's not off floating around."

written by Speeder on Aug 11, 2012 16:55

I check if somehow I can take out all my important items from the jumpsuit, see what ones do not have zombie blood, and then...

"How I carry that?"

I think a bit in where a suitless clone can stuff things...

Oh, no... not THERE...

I see if I can at least put my PDC and ME card somehow between the reflec and my body, or between the hat and my head...

written by Gligar on Aug 11, 2012 18:12

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Now that he's lost his jumpsuit, Speed-Y has a small problem: how to carry his equipment. He can lighten the load by leaving behind anything else that has blood on it... so, his breathing mask, the spent laser barrels, and his spear all have to stay...

That leaves his ME Card, his slugthrower and ammo, his PDC, that piece of paper with directions on it, his MBD badge (but he can wear that), his laser pistol and its spare barrel, and his taser. How would he carry all that?

The ME Card and PDC are easy: there is enough space inside the reflec. As for the rest... well, there was that vidshow... you know the episode, with the clone who carried a mini-laser in a certain place... but no. It seems that Speed-Y has rejected that idea. So... how?

Wait a minute... does someone have a spare backpack, or some other way of carrying things? I seem to recall...

But anyway. Back to L4-O, who is still watching the scanning. He notes that there's still John-R, who is about to be scanned, and...

Azir-R...

...who is dead.

Vatdammit.

Oh wait! There's Joris-R, floating around up there on his Transition.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 11, 2012 19:55

I check my hands now that I've had some time, and see if the burns are serious enough to need a docbot sometime in the near future. I then go back to holding Turbo, whatever good that does for my hands.

Noticing Speed-Y's predicament, I go over to Jam-Y's corpse and see if there's anything on it that can help him. I realize someone is going to need to carry this stuff anyway, and offer to help out.

written by Jam on Aug 11, 2012 20:57⁷⁷⁵

After a lot of thought, I decide to buy a laser pistol and a YELLOW barrel. I also check to see if I can buy a YELLOW clearance PDC, or at least a newer model than the one my last clone had...

written by Kristos on Aug 11, 2012 21:47

I follow the GREEN.

written by Gligar on Aug 11, 2012 23:54

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O checks his hands... those are some pretty nasty burns. He'd better get those seen to when he gets back to the domescraper. In the meantime, he can continue holding onto Turbo...

He notices Speed-Y struggling to find places for his equipment, and fiddling with the MBD badge before he realises that he can attach it to his reflec. Deciding to help out, he goes over to check out Jam-Y's belongings, of which there are quite a lot, and among the laser pistol barrels, first aid kits, laser pistols, Loyalty Officer stuff, more laser barrels, B3, and other miscellany, he... zones out for a moment.

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Jam-Y decides to take the plunge and purchase a brand new laser pistol, and a YELLOW barrel to go with it.

After further thought, he checks out the PDC vendobot. It seems to be selling several models of PDC, including the Series 1500, which Speed-Y uses. Jam-Y buys one. As he picks it up, it chimes pleasantly and registers his ME Card data, enabling him to use it in place of his old Series 1300.

R&D lab, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R follows the GREEN, leaving Cyrus-R at the door, and ends up in one of the rooms formed by equipment placement. In essence, the large lab has been split into several smaller ones in this way. Kris-R gets the impression that the split could change at any time as needed.

⁷⁷⁵ JAM: (ooc: How is Speed-Y supposed to wear his MDB badge if he doesn't have a jumpsuit?)

The GREEN directs him towards a device on a table. "I understand that your mission involves sabotaged laser barrels?" he asks.

written by Speeder on Aug 12, 2012 00:17

I see if everything is somewhere with the team...

And...

Oh wait.

I go check Azir and see what happened to him. If he is REALLY dead, I just take out all his stuff, put in the wheelchair, put any other stuff without a place on the wheelchair, and use the wheelchair to carry stuff.

written by Jam on Aug 12, 2012 02:43

I look extremely excited at my shiny new laser pistol and barrel.

"Ah, it feels good to have a new laser pistol... Thanks, vendobot!"

I try to figure out if there's anything else I need to do before I leave the cloning station... I wouldn't want to forget anything important!

"Hmm... Well, might as well register again!"

While I'm walking toward the exit of the cloning station, I keep a look out for any mutation scanners, or registration offices, or something like that.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 12, 2012 06:25

I remain zoned out for a little bit, but then return to reality.

I look over Jam-Y's corpse again and gauge whether I can carry all this stuff.

But then a thought hits me shortly afterwards.

"Wait... shouldn't Jam-Y be a zombie now?"

I draw a laser pistol and point it at the corpse and watch it carefully for any movement.

written by Gligar on Aug 12, 2012 11:51

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y looks to see if his equipment has been picked up... no, not yet. L4-O is still dealing with Jam-Y's stuff, and nobody really wants to touch YELLOW equipment (or if they do, they aren't showing it).

Wait... Azir-R!

He heads over to Azir-R, and quite quickly figures out that if Azir-R has been torn open and partly eaten, he's most likely dead.

But that's actually a good thing, because it gives Speed-Y access to Azir-R's wheelchair. And using it, he can carry more stuff!

He starts by dumping the corpse of Azir-R on the ground, removing the corpse's equipment, and placing it all on the wheelchair. That done, he moves back over to his equipment, and also places it on the wheelchair. That's... quite a lot of stuff piled on there. It'll be difficult to move it all.

Meanwhile, L4-O seems to have stopped zoning out. He wonders if he can carry all of Jam-Y's stuff, and decides that he can't, especially since Jam-Y had Mick-R's equipment as well. Speaking of which... Mick-R had that box, and it's right here...

Hold on a minutecycle... shouldn't Jam-Y be a zombie right now? L4-O steps back and, drawing his laser pistol, waits for the corpse to make a move. However, it remains still.

It's now John-R's turn to be scanned.

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Excited at having a nice new laser pistol, Jam-Y wonders if there is anything else he needs to do... ah yes! He should re-register his mutation!

Heading for the foyer, he notices a queue leading to a table bearing the logo of the Mutant Registration Office. The clone behind it looks like she has her hands full with all these registrations. Jam-Y can overhear her saying something about having to schedule some confession booth sessions for the new registrants... why can't they be re-registrants?

written by Speeder on Aug 12, 2012 13:05

I look at the equipment in the wheelchair and throw out anything that have significant amounts of blood in it.

THEN I move the wheelchair to scanning.

written by Speeder on Aug 12, 2012 13:06

I turn to L4.

"Hey L4..."

Where is the teleport box and the other side of the teleport box?

I liked that name... teleport box... I wonder if they will let us keep it!"

written by Jam on Aug 12, 2012 15:57

I get in line.

"Hmm... This is gonna take a while..."

While I'm waiting, I look at the other soon-to-be-registered mutants, to see if they're doing anything especially mutant-y.

written by Gligar on Aug 12, 2012 16:21

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

While John-R goes through the scanner, Speed-Y decides to lighten the load a little. After all, some of Azir-R's equipment is bloodstained; specifically, most of the medication, the PDC, the backpack, and that open can of B3. That's better now. It'll at least fit into the scanner. And look, John-R is finished now. Only Joris-R left to go...

He then has an idea. Don't they have that R&D Quantum Box? Even though they don't know its true name, they can still use it. He asks L4-O to find it. And... whereabouts is the other half of the box? Nukabot, right?

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Jam-Y settles in to wait. In the meantime, he can observe the other registrants. One seems to be floating off the ground slightly, though from his actions, he seems to think he's walking normally.

The MRO clone (she's ORANGE, by the way) pulls out a laser pistol and informs the clone at the front that he can't register. Despite his protests, she orders the clone to the termination centre.

"But I thought The Computer would like someclone who could empath—"

He doesn't get any further, because she shoots. "I said, Machine Empathy can't be registered."

written by Jam on Aug 12, 2012 17:47

I gasp in surprise.

"Wow... Machine Empathy? That's a really treasonous mutation..."

I look to the clone in front of me, and attempt to talk to him/her...

"So, what mutation are you registering?"

written by Lightning4 on Aug 12, 2012 17:56

I grab and lift up the box.

"It's right here, in fact. Jam-Y asked me to make sure it's safe, and also figure out a way of storing all his stuff. I can't really carry all of this, I'm already pretty loaded down."

I take a peek inside the box to see if I can locate the other end based on surroundings. Or sounds.

written by Gligar on Aug 12, 2012 19:32

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Jam-Y gasps. As he points out, Machine Empathy is highly treasonous. And as the MRO clone mentioned, it can't be registered.

But Jam-Y tries to put it out of his mind and investigate another mutant: the one in front of him, a RED clone. He inquires as to the mutation he's registering. "Er... I don't know the name of it, sir. All I know is that I can set things on fire... I think that's why I was terminated..."

He's interrupted by the Machine Empath who, it seems, isn't dead. "Friend Computer... could I possibly ask for your assistance? I've just been shot by a most inconsiderate ORANGE clone who shot me when I attempted to register a mutation..."

"He tried to register Machine Empathy!" interrupts the ORANGE.

"...but clearly, this is not the case," the Empath continues. "Surely the ORANGE should consider all the data before deciding not to help me?"

"Of course she should," The Computer responds. "It is clear to me that you have only the best intentions for Alpha Complex, and that it would be a shame to lose you."

Er...

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O holds up the box for Speed-Y to see, and informs him that Jam-Y told him to find it and secure his stuff, somehow. And since he's carrying quite a bit already, that doesn't leave a lot of options.

Now that he has the box, it's probably worth figuring out where the other end is. To do this, he sticks his head inside. Aside from the Hygiene Officer kit that Mick-R neglected to touch, L4-O also finds that he can hear the sounds of a bot's motors. In fact, they sound a bit like Nukabot.

He also finds that he is becoming disoriented from having his head in two places at once.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 12, 2012 19:49

I pull my head out quickly before I blow some Vita-chunks.

After a few moments of stumbling disorientation, I try to regain my bearings.

I then see if the box might be big enough to hold all of Jam-Y's stuff. Or at least, if the box and myself are enough to carry it all.

written by Jam on Aug 12, 2012 20:26

I look at the Empath with fear, and whisper to the clone in front of me.

"He's using his Empathy powers to influence Friend Computer. That's treasonous, highly treasonous... Now would be a good time to test out your powers, on his head."

written by Kristos on Aug 12, 2012 20:30

"Yes, we are to investigate the laser barrel production facility sabotage in this sector. We were informed that JHY R&D would have a device that may prove useful to our mission. Is this the device?" I take a careful look at the thing.

"Also, in route we encountered a transbot explosion. It may be related. Perhaps the enemies of the Computer were trying to keep us from our mission. Has any further relevant information on the sabotage been discovered?"

written by Gligar on Aug 12, 2012 23:51

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Stumbling, L4-O yanks his head out of the box and tries not to throw up. It seems that having one's head in two places at once has not been cleared by The Computer yet.

Once he recovers he starts seeing what will fit into the box... hmmm, with all of the Packy-Foam gone, there's quite a bit of space in there. Let's see... Mick-R's ME Card and laser pistol can go in there (doesn't look like he'll be claiming them), as well as Jam-Y's breathing mask, taser, Loyalty Officer equipment, ME Card, PDC, his pills, mutant medications pack, and first aid kits, as well as that severed bot manipulator he picked up. That just about fills it up.

He can just about handle the rest (including the YELLOW stuff), though he decides to leave the jumpsuit and open can of B3 for the corpse.

By now, the wheelchair and the stuff piled on it have been checked out. There's only Joris-R to be scanned now.

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Jam-Y whispers to the clone in front of him that Mr. Empath is using Machine Empathy to influence Friend Computer, and that now would be a good time to test his own powers. "Are you sure, sir? I mean, I'm not yet registered..."

But it seems that Mr. Empath is having enough influence that Our Mutual Friend has decided to make some laser turrets known. "In fact," it is saying, "it is my belief that this ORANGE has committed treason by shooting. I hereby senten—"

"...you know what? Never mind that."

Almost immediately, Mr. Empath clutches his head. His hair begins to smoulder, and he cries out in pain.

"Priority interrupt!" yells The Computer. "There are unregistered mutants in the facility. Evidence suggests Machine Empathy and Pyrokinesis. Citizens with weapons, please locate and terminate. Prizes will be awarded for the best kill, with bonuses if the best kill is made to the Machine Empath. Thank you for your co-operation."

R&D lab, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R confirms the team's mission, and asks if the device on the table is the one mentioned in their briefing. "Why yes, it is," answers the scientist. "If we've done it right, it should be able to detect flaws in any laser barrels you insert into the slot." Kris-R looks, and finds a slot which might accommodate a laser barrel.

He continues by telling the scientist about the explosion on the transbot, and asks about the sabotage. "I thought that finding out about the sabotage was your mission?"

written by Kristos on Aug 13, 2012 01:38

"Okay, great! Um, yes, that is our mission but I want to keep on top of any relevant information that might have been obtained already."

written by Jam on Aug 13, 2012 03:08

I facepalm...

"From the looks of it, I'd say the Pyrokinesis mutant just terminated the Machine Empath. Pretty good kill too, I'd say..."

And everyclone here is an unregistered mutant, or else we wouldn't be here! I'll bet there is a few pyrokinesis mutants!"

I try to make my way toward the ORANGE clone, dragging whats-his-name-pyro-clone with me if I can.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 13, 2012 06:02

I look at Jam-Y, pleased that I managed to get the stuff sorted.

I look up at Joris-R again, and wonder if he's ever planning on coming down.

"If he doesn't come down soon, we'll just have to leave without him. We don't have much time left..."

I check the time on my PDC.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 13, 2012 11:03

After making sure no saboteurs followed us to the lab, I head down the red stripe after Kris-R and the GREEN scientist. Unless there are saboteurs, that is, or clones who look as though they could potentially be saboteurs, in which case I quickly make note of them prior to doing so.

written by Speeder on Aug 13, 2012 12:38

I go scan stuff...

And any already scanned stuff that is clean and fit the box, I attempt to shove inside it, until there are little to carry with the wheelchair.

written by Gligar on Aug 13, 2012 16:56

R&D lab, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R agrees, and adds that he simply wanted to keep abreast of developments. "Well, as soon as you head over there, you'll know what's going on. As you may have gathered, there is no further information right now."

Cyrus-R looks behind him, out onto the roadway. It seems that he believes that they might have been followed. However, he doesn't see anyclone behind him. Satisfied, he heads into the lab, looking around him as he does to see if he can see anyclone who looks like a saboteur. However, he realises that he would be unable to detect a saboteur even if he saw one, without observing their actions more closely. As such, he sees nothing suspicious.

He eventually reaches Kris-R, the scientist, and the R&D device.

[1148]

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Jam-Y tries to explain about what just happened to The Computer: a Pyrokinetic mutant just (seemingly) terminated the Machine Empath (who is currently collapsed on the ground not moving). And from the looks of it, it's quite a good kill. As for everyone else... they're all unregistered mutants - which is why they're at the registration desk! There's probably more than one Pyrokinetic here, for instance.

The Computer, initially, does not respond. Jam-Y takes the opportunity to push past the other mutants, Pyrokinetic in tow, until he reaches the desk. The ORANGE, apparently still watching the Machine Empath, seems distracted as she addresses them. "Can I help you, Sir?"

Good thing there are no Queue Enforcement Officers in the cloning station. (Do Tech Services even use them?)

Finally, The Computer speaks again. "Well? Have the mutants been terminated?"

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Pleased that he got Jam-Y's stuff sorted, L4-O continues to look at the corpse for a moment, almost as if he's wondering what to do with it.

Wait... wasn't there something else... Joris-R! He's still floating around up there, and shows no signs of ever coming down. Will they have to leave him behind? They don't have the time for this...

Worriedly, he looks at his PDC... it's 16:59.

Speed-Y, however, is still trying to sort out everything that's on that wheelchair... partly by trying to cram more stuff into the quantum box, even though it's already full. And though the box may be special, it isn't any bigger on the inside. As such, he can't fit anything in there.

written by Jam on Aug 13, 2012 17:32

"One sec..." I say to the ORANGE.

I put my laser pistol to the Machine Empath's forehead, and pull the trigger.

Assuming I successfully shoot the Empath, I make an announcement to The Computer.

"The Machine Empath has been terminated! However, we are still in the process of locating the Pyrokinetic mutant.

I have a theory though... Friend Computer, might it have been that the Machine Empath also had Pyrokinesis, and while attempting to terminate our ORANGE MRO clone, accidentally set himself on fire? Perhaps he assumed you were about to give the order to terminate the ORANGE, and lost control of his Pyrokinesis mutation in his haste?"

written by Lightning4 on Aug 13, 2012 19:20

"We need to get a move on, guys. We only have 36 minutecycles to get to the debriefing."

I watch the rest of the group, and slowly start edging my way back towards the main Domescraper. Slowly enough that anyone can catch up and join me, at least.

If everyone is with us, I start moving faster.

written by Speeder on Aug 13, 2012 20:16

I look at L4... Worried.

"Alright!"

I attempt to get out with the wheelchair then.

written by Gligar on Aug 13, 2012 22:04

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Hmmm... The Computer seems to have not noticed that the Machine Empath has already been terminated, seemingly. Jam-Y notices, tells the ORANGE to wait, and takes matters into his own hands, by shooting the Empath himself. Since The Empath doesn't seem to react either way, it's a fair bet to say that, if he wasn't dead before, he is now.

Jam-Y announces to Our Mutual Friend that the Machine Empath has been terminated, but the Pyrokinetic is being worked on. He does claim a theory, though: what if they were the same clone? What if, while trying to terminate the ORANGE, the Empath lost control of his powers and accidentally set himself on fire?

"That is a valid theory, however I was under the impression that there were at least two mutants present. Therefore, logically, there must be two terminations."

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O urges everyclone to get a move on; they have 36 minutes left to get to Debriefing. He begins walking back himself, and is joined by John-R.

Lucas-R agrees as well. "You're right. We need to get going, sir." He starts heading out... at the same time as Speed-Y decides that it's probably a good idea to just push the wheelchair out.

Joris-R just keeps floating up there. "Oh, you want to stay?" asks one of the soldiers.

But the rest of the team don't notice. They're walking away.

Speed-Y notices that it's cold without a jumpsuit.

written by Speeder on Aug 13, 2012 22:37

I frown.

"Can someone borrow me some jumpsuits?"

I look around, maybe there are a jumpsuit on the ground, who knows...

written by Lightning4 on Aug 13, 2012 23:50

I check my inventory for any jumpsuits I might've collected, though I doubt I have any handy.

"Hmm. No jumpsuits, but..."

I hold up some towels.

"I have these..."

written by Gligar on Aug 14, 2012 00:00

Roadway, near Industrial Subsector Quarantine Zone, JHT Sector

Speed-Y stops for a moment, and wonders if someone could lend him a jumpsuit? Or perhaps there's one on the ground? Hmmm... no, but I suppose he could go back and loot one of the corpses if he's that desperate for a jumpsuit...

L4-O checks his own (and Jam-Y's (and Mick-R's...)) equipment, and finds that no, he doesn't have a spare jumpsuit. He does, however, have a stack of small towels, seemingly from Jam-Y's kit.

written by Speeder on Aug 14, 2012 00:03

I see if the wheelchair or somewhere with the team there are duct tape...

If I find it, I try to make some towely jumpsuit.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 14, 2012 01:23

"Don't worry, everyone! The saboteurs are under control, as in they are not here."

I have a look at the device on the table.

"Hey, neat, what is this? Can I try it out?"

I poke lightly at the device.

written by Jam on Aug 14, 2012 01:58

"Uh... Yeah, that's an excellent deduction, Friend Computer! Of course there should be two terminations!"

I turn to the ORANGE...

"I'd like to re-register my Mind Sense mutation, if that's alright. Then I'll be able to interrogate the clones here to find out who our Pyro mutant is!"

written by Kristos on Aug 14, 2012 11:49

I slap Cyrus-R's hand away from the device. "Do not be so careless! This device is for testing laser barrels for flaws."

I take a moment to note the clearance of the device.

written by Gligar on Aug 14, 2012 14:00

Roadway, near Industrial Subsector Quarantine Zone, JHT Sector

Apparently, towels are not quite what Speed-Y was looking for, but he might be able to use them, he believes, to make some sort of... jumpsuit?

Of course, to do that, he'd need something to hold everything together... something like... duct tape, perhaps? Does anyone on the team have any? Well, there's none on the wheelchair, and neither Lucas-R or John-R seem to have any...

R&D lab, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R "reassures" everyone that there are no saboteurs present, and then proceeds to ask if he can try out the laser barrel tester. He starts to poke it, but is stopped by Kris-R.

Probably a good thing... "No, no, no! Please don't try to use it in the lab! For all I know, the thing could explode, terminating all of us and putting you on The Computer's list of Citizens To Be Relocated To HEL Sector Happy Fun Re-Education Centre!" Kind of similar to what Kris-R says about it being for testing laser barrels, when you come to think of it that way...

Speaking of Kris-R, he also regards the tester, but in his case, he's just checking it's clearance. It appears to be mostly GREEN, with RED handles and a RED panel near the laser barrel hole. "Now," the scientist continues, "I'm sure you have plenty to do at the factory, so I won't keep you any longer."

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Jam-Y agrees with The Computer's analysis, which is probably for the best, and turns again to the ORANGE, announcing that he'd like to re-register his Mind Sense mutation. "Finally!" the ORANGE exclaims. "Something that doesn't take forever to do. So... can I have your name, please?"

The others seem to be forcing smiles while they mutter amongst themselves.

written by Speeder on Aug 14, 2012 14:08

I then try to stuff the towels in the reflect in a way to make a skirt using the armor as support.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 14, 2012 15:43

I check my stuff again... didn't I have some duct tape?

If I find some amongst the kits of stuff I'm carrying, I present it to Speed-Y too.

I then realize perhaps we need to get moving too, and start moving in a Domescraper-ward direction again.

written by Jam on Aug 14, 2012 16:22

"Jam-Y-JYR-3."

After silently staring at the ORANGE for a few secondcycles, I hand the ORANGE my ME card. Then I turn around and face the other clones I cut in front of. I give a slight bow to them.

"My deepest apologies, citizens! I'm hope you understand how my registering promptly is, er, necessary for the good of the Complex! I mean, we wouldn't want a potentially dangerous Pyrokinetic mutant in our midst? In order to ensure that things return to normal as quickly as possible, we should have a trustworthy YELLOW clone who can determine who the treasonous mutant is! That clone would be me, of course! Unless some other clone feels they would be better suited for the job?"

[1150]

I look around at the other clones in the room with a smile on my face.

written by Gligar on Aug 14, 2012 18:48

Roadway, near Industrial Subsector Quarantine Zone, JHT Sector

Okay, so Speed-Y lacks even duct tape to fasten towels together... that means he has to resort to just stuffing towels in his reflex to at least cover up... well, that will work, but it's rather uncomfortable.

L4-O sees this and wonders: does he have duct tape? He checks ... and checks... and checks... aha! And he thought he'd run out! It's not much, but hey, it's there, right? He gives it to Speed-Y, and continues heading towards the domescraper.

Looking ahead, he can see the IntSec checkpoint in the distance, near the bunker. It looks to be unmanned.

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Handing over his ME Card, Jam-Y gives his name to the MRO ORANGE and turns to face the other clones. He apologises for delaying them and assures them that it's for the good of the Complex. After all, they wouldn't want a dangerous Pyrokinetic traitor in their midst, would they? Best to have one trustworthy clone - such as, say, a YELLOW registered mutant - who can determine who this traitorous Pyrokinetic is, right? Unless one of them thinks they can do the job, of course.

The clones continue smiling. "Huh?" one clone answers. "We didn't mean to insinuate that you were incapable of the job, sir, it's just that it's unusual to see mutants going after each other... and isn't there usually a delay while the registration goes through?"

"Usually, yes," the ORANGE replies. "But re-registrations are much quicker to process. After all, all the data is still present in the system, and all I need to do is index it back into the new request. You're all set, sir," she adds, offering Jam-Y his ME Card. "I'll get to your friend in a moment."

written by Speeder on Aug 14, 2012 19:28

I take the rest of duct tape and attempt to use it to make the skirt less uncomfortable and more stable. And then I proceed the fast as I can with all broken bones and wheelchair toward where I need to go.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 14, 2012 19:33

"That's odd. You'd think that checkpoint would still be manned..."

I pick up my pace, and check my PDC's time again.

written by Jam on Aug 14, 2012 20:23

"See? Wasn't that easy? I'm already registered! Now, as for that Pyrokinetic..."

I take my laser pistol, and shoot the Empath in the head again.

"There! He's definitely twice as dead as before! I'd say both the Machine Empath and the Pyrokinetic have been terminated, wouldn't you agree, Friend Computer?"⁷⁷⁶ written by Gligar on Aug 14, 2012 23:39⁷⁷⁷

Roadway, near Industrial Subsector Quarantine Zone, JHT Sector

Okay, good. Since Speed-Y now has duct tape, he can sort out those towels properly... at least they're not in any danger of being outside the accepted requirements for comfort for a YELLOW-clearance citizen now.

However, he is still injured, so he cannot move as fast as he would like.

And it seems that L4-O would also like to move faster. He thinks it odd that the checkpoint is unmanned... perhaps they should speed up a bit. At least he is doing so. He also pulls out his PDC: it's now 17:04.

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Having demonstrated how fast it can be to re-register, Jam-Y takes back his ME Card, and switches back to his laser pistol to take care of the Pyrokinetic... by shooting the Machine Empath again. Apparently, he either thinks that the Empath was the Pyrokinetic... or he realised that The Computer might be counting laser blasts.

As he is about to contact Friend Computer to confirm the termination, The Computer does indeed speak up. "Citizens! I have detected additional laser fire. According to my calculations, both mutants should now have been terminated. Report!"

Meanwhile, the ORANGE has started with the "other" Pyrokinetic. "Oh!" she adds to Jam-Y. "You'll need an armband. Here!"

written by Lightning4 on Aug 14, 2012 23:49

I look over at Speed-Y, then decide maybe it would be in everyone's best interest if I help.

If I can, I move over to him and start pushing him myself. I try to keep a decent pace back towards the domescraper...

written by Kristos on Aug 15, 2012 02:19

"Oh, yes, causing the death of higher clearance clones is one of the least FUN things to do. It would be appropriate to then counteract the treason with HEL Sector Happy Fun Re-Education Center. Thank you for the word of warning- we will be sure to use the device only in suitable locations."

⁷⁷⁶ JAM: (ooc: I spend a PP in the hopes that FC will be counting laser hits, rather than counting corpses.)

(ooc: Also, I'll be having corrective jaw surgery on both jaws about 16 hours from now. I probably will be pretty out of it for a few days afterward, so I might not be able to post during that time. Just you let you guys know...)

⁷⁷⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: Jam spends 1pp.)

[1151]

"I was worried about the clearance of the device but now I see that accommodations were made for RED clones. Thank you. I suppose we'll be going now."

I slowly and carefully lift the device, taking care to only contact the low-clearance surfaces.

written by Jam on Aug 15, 2012 03:36

"Thanks. Almost forgot that..."

I take the armband (assuming she offers one) and put it on. Then I report to FC.

"That seems to be the case, Friend Computer! Both mutants have been terminated! Now, about those prizes you mentioned..."

written by Gligar on Aug 15, 2012 14:04

Roadway, near Industrial Subsector Quarantine Zone, JHT Sector

L4-O realises that, if they have to wait for Speed-Y all the time, they're probably not going to make it... perhaps he should go back and help Speed-Y? Yeah, let's do that. Should be able to get there quicker, at least, though with Speed-Y's injuries... is there a better way?

The team (or what's left of it) continues their walk, getting ever closer to the domescraper (and the checkpoint).

And the bot parking area...

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

You know, Jam-Y would probably lose his head if it weren't fastened to his body 😊

Having been reminded about the armband which registered mutants are required to wear, Jam-Y accepts one from the ORANGE and addresses Our Mutual Friend again. After all, it said something about a reward? "Ah yes!" replies the Computer. "A bonus of two thousand credits has been allocated to your account for the termination of two dangerous unregistered mutants. Have a nice daycycle, citizen."

R&D lab, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

As usual, KRis-R agrees with the GREEN. He wouldn't want to inadvertently be involved in the termination of a high-clearance citizen! But what if he wasn't aware that the high-clearance citizen was present? Or if he simply didn't like said high-clearance citizen? Or or or or... He thanks the scientist for the warning.

That done, he makes preparations to get moving to the factory. First, collect the device. This is straightforward due to the RED handles (which alleviate his concerns with regard to clearance) which allow him to pick it up. Almost immediately he discovers that the device is heavy.

written by Speeder on Aug 15, 2012 15:15

I smile happily as people help me.

And proceed with all speed that we can...

I take a look to see if Derek is already here or Nukabot or both

written by Lightning4 on Aug 15, 2012 16:51

I keep a lookout in the bot parking area for anything unusual or dangerous. Seems like a good hiding place for some commie mutant traitors. Maybe.

I proceed onward with as much haste as possible too.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 15, 2012 17:27

I quickly and casually grab the other RED handle of the device, and begin pulling Kris-R in the general direction of the exit with it. I stop a moment to address the GREEN scientist.

"Thanks for the device! We'll be sure to test it thoroughly for you!"

"Oh, while we're here, do you know of an optimal route to the factory? We'd like to get testing right away!"

written by Gligar on Aug 15, 2012 18:32

Roadway, JHT Sector

As they approach, the team passes the entry to the bot parking area. There, Nukabot can be seen. The blast box, however, is conspicuous by its absence.

Oh wait... there it is. A couple of clones, one GREEN, the other YELLOW, have removed it from Nukabot's forks. They have their backs turned, and appear to be opening the box.

R&D lab, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Seeing that Kris-R is apparently having problems, Cyrus-R steps in and takes the other handle. He starts moving towards the exit, but finds it difficult to drag Kris-R when he is also dragging the device.

Speaking of which... Cyrus-R assures the scientist that it will be tested, and asks for the best route to the factory. "Oh yes... it's on the other side of the sector. Just head down Roadway 1 towards JHN Sector, then take a left down Roadway 3. You can't miss it."

written by Speeder on Aug 15, 2012 18:45

I go see what clones are those.

"R&D team? Are you? Speed-Y-3 from Team Epsilon here."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 15, 2012 21:24

I keep my weapon handy for any hostile reaction.

I watch the clones for their reaction to us, and keep an eye on what they're doing with the box.

written by Gligar on Aug 15, 2012 23:28

Roadway, JHT Sector

On seeing the two clones, Speed-Y heads over, albeit slowly, to investigate. He calls out to them, asking if they are from R&D, and identifying himself, while L4-O watches, blaster at the ready.

Bot parking area, below Central Subsector

On hearing Speed-Y, both clones turn, revealing the GREEN to be Derek-G. He looks over at Speed-Y, and asks, "Is this some new regulation, or are you just out of uniform?"

"Do you want me to just take the leg, sir?", the YELLOW asks Derek-G.

"Yes, just take the leg," the GREEN replies. "It should be safe enough without the box."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 15, 2012 23:53

I realize it's Derek-G and put my weapon away quickly.

Since Nukabot is here, I assume a position on Nukabot.

"If you're ready, sir, there should be room on here for you too."

If Speed-Y desires help, I also try to assist him onto Nukabot.

written by Kristos on Aug 16, 2012 01:23

"We'll get right to it!"

Cyrus-R is taking undue initiative for a non-team-leader again, but it is forgivable since he asked a good question. I keep up with his pace (as long as it remains reasonable) holding up my end of the device.

If Cyrus-R doesn't turn the correct way down Roadway 1 then I do.

"Finally we are able to get to our mission duty!"

written by Speeder on Aug 16, 2012 12:08

I smile happily.

"Oh, my uniform was soaked with zombie blood, so it cannot be taken out of a quarantined zone."

I point to the industrial subsectors.

Then I look at the leg, and then at Derek.

"And thanks for retrieving that... I really like helping R&D and I do not think they would appreciate me losing their equipment.

Anyway, if you can add to the report of the leg, this leg proved VERY GOOD for combat, I mean, kicking with it would quickly dispatch any enemy.

And it also works really good in rehabilitating a clone.

Also it is obviously sturdy, I think research based on that leg can allow for the construction of very hard to destroy cyborgs or armoured clones."

I smile happily.

written by 4616599 on Aug 16, 2012 13:56

"Hello, sirs! Just inspecting the air quality up there. We wouldn't want the higher-ups to get unhappy over that. Those zombies were bad enough and all."

I glide down, and try to fit through the scanner.

written by Jam on Aug 16, 2012 16:11

"Wow, two thousand credits! Thanks, Friend Computer!"

I try reading the ORANGE clone's nametag, in case that information will be useful someday.

Then I turn to Cedric-R, the RED Pyro.

"I'm Jam-Y-JYR, by the way. You should call me sometime, we can have a nice chat and discuss mutant stuff and such... Well, see you later, Cedric-R! I've got a debriefing to get to!"

I start jogging toward the exit of the cloning station.⁷⁷⁸

written by Gligar on Aug 16, 2012 17:59

Bot parking area, below Central Subsector

It's nice to see that L4-O trusts the security clearance system. See, he's decided to trust the GREEN - Derek-G - and has put his blaster away. And since Nukabot is still here, why not use it?

He climbs into what's left of the seat, and offers to help Speed-Y board the bot if he needs it.

Before boarding, though, Speed-Y explains about his being out of uniform ("Oh, is that it? Well, I suggest you find yourself a jumpsuit."), and gives one final report concerning the leg. "Glad to hear it. I'll forward your report when I send the leg back to the team responsible. From what I've seen, you've proved yourself to be a good test subject. I think there may be something in this for you - perhaps even an R&D clearance."

R&D lab, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

As they leave, Kris-R notes that Cyrus-R seems to be taking too much of an initiative in the team. He'll let it slide this time, though. That was a good question, after all.

Soon, they're out of the lab. The door begins to close behind them.

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R looks around, seeing if he can find Roadway 1. Ah... there it is. He heads towards it, gently trying to nudge Cyrus-R to do the same.

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Joris-R suddenly snaps out of his "inspection of the air quality", as he puts it, and descends towards the scanner. Unfortunately, it seems that he'll have to dismount in order to pass through the scanner.

Lower area, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

Jam-Y seems overjoyed to receive a bonus from The Computer.

⁷⁷⁸ JAM: (ooc: My surgery went well!)

[1153]

Before he leaves, he once again looks to the ORANGE, and notes that she is wearing a nametag, identifying her as Sharon-O-GVC-3, before turning back to the Pyrokinetic – who is now in the process of getting registered, and whose name is apparently Cedric-R – to suggest that Cedric-R call him. “Sounds good, sir,” Cedric-R replies. “Maybe we can get in a little practice as well.”

After that, he does leave, jogging for the door.

Foyer, JHT Sector Main Cloning Station, below Central Subsector

He continues through the foyer, noting in passing that there seems to be a door in one wall, apparently leading to some stairs.

Interactive Corridor Experience, JHT Sector

As Jam-Y continues jogging, he just barely manages to keep from falling over when the ground moves under him! Wait... falling over? I meant falling off! For when he exited the cloning station, he actually stepped on a Mobile Tile (similar to a Transition, except with a bot brain), which automatically started floating away from the door and downwards!

“Welcome,” its bot brain says, “to the JHT Sector Main Cloning Station Interactive Corridor Experience. This system is designed to take you through the corridor in comfort and style, at a speed appropriate to your security clearance. During the experience, you will have the opportunity to participate in selected promotions tailored especially to you.”

written by Kristos on Aug 16, 2012 18:32

I keep an eye out for Roadway 3. And for everything else, for that matter.

“We really should test the device before we enter the factory.”

I look for a nice empty location while fumbling for a laser barrel with my free hand.

“Do you have any ORANGE or higher clearance barrels we could test, Cyrus-R?”

written by Lightning4 on Aug 16, 2012 18:38

As soon as Speed-Y wishes, I assist him onto Nukabot.

“Ooh.. R&D clearance. That sounds fun. Most Armed Forces clones would love to have an opportunity like that...”

“All those neat experimental weapons and devices...”

I temporarily fall below minimum happiness levels.

“Ones I may never use...”

written by Speeder on Aug 16, 2012 18:46

“Oh, thanks! Now I need to go to a debriefing!”

I attempt to climb in Nukabot with L4 help.

“Alright... now to the debriefing!”

Then I remember the wheelchair.

“Oh, we need to haul that with us... Oh, we have Nukabot, that is a forkbot!”

written by Jam on Aug 16, 2012 22:37

“Cool! I’ve always wanted to ride one of these things!”

I happily ride the Mobile Tile.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 16, 2012 23:19

“Hahaha! Of course not! What would I be doing with orange or higher clearance barrels?” : D

“We really should test it though!”

I stick my red barrel into the device's test chamber. (If I have one, that is. I do have one, right?) : P

written by Gligar on Aug 16, 2012 23:40

Bot parking area, below Central Subsector

With L4-O’s help, Speed-Y climbs onto the back of Nukabot. As he does, he comments that R&D clearance sounds fun! Something that most soldiers would love, given the access to R&D weapons... many of which will never be available to L4-O...

Once he’s on Nukabot, Speed-Y gives the order to move out. Wait... the wheelchair! How will they move – ohhhh, right! Nukabot. As he says that, the bot does indeed move to pick up the wheelchair.

Right! Just... one more thing... where is debriefing?

Roadway 1, JHY Sector

Definitely not in JHY Sector, that’s for sure. What is in JHY Sector, though, is a laser barrel factory, which is where Team Sigma are headed.

Kris-R looks as they walk... what did the scientist say? Oh yes, Roadway 3. They need to head towards JHN Sector... ah, there’s a sign.

But there’s one thing Kris-R wants to do before arriving: test the device. So... does Cyrus-R have an ORANGE laser barrel or something to test it with?

Of course not... he’s RED, after all. But Cyrus-R agrees that they need to test the device. He can just stick his lase- oh. He doesn’t have one. He doesn’t even have a laser pistol! What sort of Troubleshooter is he?

Interactive Corridor Experience, JHT Sector

As has been mentioned before, Jam-Y has wanted to ride the Interactive Corridor Experience ever since he first saw it. As such, he is happy to have the chance now.

“Before we begin,” the tile continues, “would you please give me your intended destination todaycycle?”

written by Lightning4 on Aug 16, 2012 23:55

If I can, I call up the message on my PDC again.

If I successfully do so, I relay the information:

[1154]

"Need to get to J level. Alpha Subsector. Bit of a trip from Epsilon... never been there before."

"Once there, it's room H-12."

written by Speeder on Aug 17, 2012 00:22

I think a bit.

"Alright, Nukabot, find the cargo elevator of Alpha Subsector."

I smile happily.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 17, 2012 02:07

Seeing as I don't actually have a laser barrel to test, I instead just have a closer look at the RED panel on the device, noting any buttons, dials indicators or bells that might be present there.

written by Jam on Aug 17, 2012 02:07

I take a few secondcycles to recall the correct place.

"I need to go to Debriefing Room H-12, J Level, Alpha Subsector, as fast as possible! Please get me as close to that destination as you can, and fast!"

written by Kristos on Aug 17, 2012 03:13

"Not so fast! Efficiency and effectiveness are found in a careful balance of speed and attention. First let us locate a good test site."

I move to the most open, clear looking area away from higher clearance things. Once that is done, I hand Cyrus-R a RED laser barrel.

written by 4616599 on Aug 17, 2012 09:54

I look at the Transition.

"I don't know...I rather like this. Is there anyway to hose it down? It's still a bit...gory on the underside from the zombie ramming earlier, but it's also rented, and I'd really want to leave the sector with it."

While talking, I step through the scanner, and cast another glance at the Transition.

written by Gligar on Aug 17, 2012 13:52⁷⁷⁹

Bot parking area, below Central Subsector

L4-O pulls out his PDC and looks up the debriefing message. Room H-12, J Level, Alpha Subsector... not somewhere they've been before.

Speed-Y thinks, and directs Nukabot to go to Alpha Subsector's cargo lift. "That might be a problem, citizen," Nukabot replies, "since I do not believe that there is a cargo lift in Alpha Subsector."

Roadway 1, JHY Sector

Since he doesn't have a laser barrel Cryo-R, er, I mean Cyrus-R looks at the RED panel. There doesn't seem to be any sort of controls or indicators... just the hole for the barrel.

Kris-R again stops him. Firths, they will need to find a suitable place to test the device... how about that empty parking area over there?

Parking area, Roadway 1, JHY Sector

Okay, now it's a good spot to test it... Kris-R removes the barrel from his spare laser pistol and hands it to Cyrus-R to test.

Interactive Corridor Experience, JHT Sector

Jam-Y takes a moment to recall the location of Debriefing, and states it to the Tile. "We are on our way, citizen," the tile responds, before launching into a sales pitch about flamethrowers.

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Joris-R isn't sure about leaving the Transition behind. He's sure that it would fail the scan, anyway, what with the zombie guts on it from earlier. He asks if there is a way to hose it down. "Sorry, citizen," is the reply. "We don't have the resources right now. You'll have to either wait until the quarantine is lifted, or have the rental agency get in touch with us. Perhaps they can arrange something."

written by Speeder on Aug 17, 2012 16:00

I think a bit...

"Alright, find whatever lift of the Alpha Subsector you might fit inside, otherwise just find a lift..."

I smile happily.

"I like you Nukabot! You are the best bot friend ever! I only wish Massacrebot back too! But they repaired you, this made me happy already! Only they will have to repair you again..."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 17, 2012 16:19

"Seems like every mission, Nukabot gets damaged somehow..."

I frown a little.

"Although we've only been on two missions. But still, that's 100% of missions! That's not good at all!"

written by Jam on Aug 17, 2012 16:51

"That reminds me, I ordered a flamethrower just a couple daycycles ago... It's due tomorrowcycle, if I remember right. So, I won't be ordering another one, unfortunately... But do you know how much a replacement fuel pack for a YELLOW flamethrower costs?"

I also observe how fast we are going, and check the timecycle again.

⁷⁷⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: Enough now, Cryo. You're seriously beginning to annoy me with your LOL SAME CHARACTER shenanigans.)

written by Gligar on Aug 17, 2012 18:23

Bot parking area, below Central Subsector

On hearing this, Speed-Y amends his orders. Given that Nukabot can fit inside some normal lifts, it might be better to simply find one of those - or, at a pinch, any lift.

It's clear that Speed-Y likes having Nukabot around. It's still a pity that Massacrebot isn't around any more, but at least Nukabot could be repaired. And speaking of repairs, Nukabot needs them again. That, as L4-O points out, makes twice in two missions. That's not a good track record.

Nukabot reaches the door to Alpha Subsector, which opens to admit it, and heads on in.

Interactive Corridor Experience, JHT Sector

Flamethrowers... they would have been handy to have on this mission, wouldn't they? And Jam-Y has one on its way to the bunker... should arrive tomorrowcycle. So he can't take advantage of the Tile's offer this time. Though, it would be handy to know the price of a refill. "I do not have the information myself, but I can take you to a FireFun representative to discuss prices," replies the Tile, as it diverts, presumably to head to the sales rep.

Jam-Y initially doesn't seem to notice, as he's checking the time and the Tile's speed. It's 17:11, and the Tile seems to be descending at about a brisk walking pace. Well, if it were possible to walk down a vertical shaft. But I hear R&D are working on that, too.

written by Jam on Aug 17, 2012 19:03

"Hang on, wait, where are you taking me?! No! Keep going to the debriefing room! It is extremely important that I get to the debriefing room as fast as possible! You can take me to a FireFun representative some other time!"

written by Gligar on Aug 17, 2012 23:39

Interactive Corridor Experience, JHT Sector

However, it seems that Jam-Y doesn't actually want to speak to a FireFun rep at this time; he's more interested in getting to Debriefing. "Are you sure, citizen?" asks the Tile. "Surely your debriefing can wait while you speak to FireFun? No? Then perhaps a nice, refreshing B3?" Once again, the Tile changes course, heading for an alcove somewhere in a wall.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 18, 2012 00:01

I keep a lookout for anything or anyone hostile... or anything out of the ordinary.

I also just look around in general since I have actually never been in this part of the sector.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 18, 2012 01:29⁷⁸⁰

I insert the barrel.

written by Kristos on Aug 18, 2012 07:08⁷⁸¹

I monitor the side of the device and see what reactions present themselves to my eyes, hoping for something relatively un-explosive.

written by Gligar on Aug 18, 2012 12:52⁷⁸²

Treason point to Cryoburner!

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

As Nukabot continues on, L4-O keeps a watch for anything... well, anything, really. He's never seen Alpha Subsector before. Nor have any of them, really.

Corridor A2, it seems, is a nice wide ORANGE-clearance corridor, seemingly designed for vehiclebots such as Nukabot, or the cyclebot approaching from the other direction, to travel down. The walls are peppered with the usual advertisements, loyalty slogans, vidscreens... you know the sort of thing. Past the cyclebot, the corridor ends at an intersection with a second corridor. Closer, though, are two doors, seemingly leading to hygiene stations (on the left) and confession booths) on the right).

Nukabot slows, and allows the cyclebot to pass. The cyclebot's operator doesn't seem to notice or care.

Parking area, Roadway 1, JHY Sector

Now that he has a laser barrel, Cyrus-R can insert Barrel A into Hole B, whereupon the device starts to shudder and make an awful amount of noise and light.

And gas.

⁷⁸⁰ CRYOBURNER: (Clearly you are mistaken. Cyrus-R and Cryo-R are nothing alike. Cryo-R would probably be in the ductwork right now, looking for suspicious keys or something. It's just logical to have a proper look at a device that you are about to activate for the first time, no matter who you are, so that it's less likely to catch on fire, and then burn your hands, and then you throw it into the road, and then a vehicle drives over it, and then the device explodes, and then the vehicle explodes, and then you have to pull fragments of exploded device and vehicle out of your face, and then you have no device, all because you didn't wait for the indicator bell to ring, as was clearly printed on the side panel, which you didn't bother to examine.)

⁷⁸¹ KRISTOS: (OOC: Cyrus-R pays moderate attention to detail. Cryo-R was insane about detail. I think Cryo's writing style and choice of words is creating an illusion of more Cryo-R like behavior than actually is happening. And it may not help things that you "play along" in your narration, ensuring that his actions are interpreted as being Cryo-R-lyke. Just my thoughts. :-)

⁷⁸² GLIGAR: (OOC: raises eyebrow at Cryo's OOC comment (if it is OOC - it's not marked, and could easily have been a misconstrued IC comment...) Looks like some people around here need a refresher on Rule Zero, and/or an alteration to their posting style. I should also point out that such arguments are treason; it says so right here in the ULTRAVIOLET section. 😏)

Though a small change of style might be a good idea. Maybe I should start mentioning treason codes every three seconds (👁️👁️👁️)

[1156]

It's a particularly fun kind of gas, the sort that produces hallucinations. Perhaps that orange spybot would agree? Perhaps Cyrus-R should go and say hi to it? 😊

But before he can, The Computer makes an announcement from a loudspeaker somewhere in the area. "Please remain calm. A Fourth Wall Breach has been detected in your area. Everything is under control. Under no circumstances should you attempt to find the Fourth Wall or investigate the breach. Thank you for your co-operation."

written by Jam on Aug 18, 2012 16:19

"Okay, I'll buy a B3, then you'll take me straight to debriefing, with no further delays! Got it?"

If we reach the alcove, I attempt to purchase a YELLOW B3.

written by Gligar on Aug 18, 2012 16:42

Interactive Corridor Experience, below Central Subsector

Jam-Y agrees to buy a B3 on the condition that the Tile takes him to Debriefing immediately afterwards. "I am glad to be of service," the Tile responds, and continues on course.

Soon, the alcove is reached, and Jam-Y buys the B3. (YELLOW B3 is much nicer than RED or ORANGE, as I'm sure he'll agree.) That done, the Tile actually keeps its word and heads for Alpha Subsector.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 18, 2012 17:10

My eyes follow the cyclebot.

"Huh. Suddenly I want to ride one of those..."

To ride freely in the sector, on the clearly designated and mandated routes...

To feel the synthetic wind in my face, but of course without exceeding the mandatory recommendation of maximum velocity..."

Once it gets out of range, my expression soon fades to normal.

"Huh. That was weird. Still kinda want one though."

written by Gligar on Aug 18, 2012 20:44

Corridor A1, Alpha Subsector

The cyclebot's presence seems to have a profound effect on L4-O. He practically zones out as he details how awesome it would be to ride one (and how easy it is to do so while not committing treason)...

But as Nukabot makes a turn into Corridor A2, causing the cyclebot to go out of sight, L4-O comes round. He's not quite sure what happened, but he still kind of wants a cyclebot. Well, for the low low price of just 999.9 credits, he too can own a fantastic used cyclebot courtesy of JHP Sector's Nearly New Bots! Only twelve previous owners!

Er... what was I saying? Ah yes.

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

This corridor's a bit narrower but still navigable, and still ORANGE. There appears to be a lift hall up ahead. And some clones.

written by Jam on Aug 18, 2012 21:56

I silently drink my B3, while making sure we're still on course for Alpha Subsector.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 18, 2012 22:51

I continue to keep an eye out for anything interesting or treasonous.

I also watch for things where viewing is mandatory. Just in case.

written by Gligar on Aug 19, 2012 01:50

Interactive Corridor Experience, below Central Subsector

The Tile continues on towards Alpha Subsector - or at least, that's what the sign indicated on the door the Tile is approaching. In addition, the sign states that it is J Level. Jam-Y says nothing. After all, he's drinking his B3.

Soon, the Tile pulls up at the door. "We have arrived at Alpha Subsector, citizen. Have a pleasant daycycle."

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

Nukabot also continues on, however it has to stop when it comes to the clones, who are blocking the corridor for some reason. L4-O, who remains on lookout, notices that they're holding pamphlets.

written by Speeder on Aug 19, 2012 01:59

I stare at the clones.

"Hey you, bring me here one of that, I want to read the good news you are delivering."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 19, 2012 08:00

I scrutinize the clones holding pamphlets. I also scrutinize Speed-Y, who seems to be accepting something that clearly can only be treasonous. Maybe.

written by Kristos on Aug 19, 2012 08:38

I dutifully hold up my end of the device and weather the consequences. Hallucination gas? No big deal. Fourth wall breach? As if a RED like me would know what that is. I do, however, search for something to breathe through that might filter out some of the gas.

written by Gligar on Aug 19, 2012 13:17

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

Also noticing the clones, Speed-Y asks for one of the pamphlets. "Sure thing, citizen," one replies, and gives him one. "Have a nice daycycle."

L4-O doesn't seem to be doing anything except watching everything. Those clones, for instance... they all seem to be wearing a badge of some sort, with an unusual logo on it. The logo also appears on Speed-Y's pamphlet, and...

[1157]

...you know, now L4-O thinks about it, it kind of looks like a cyborg.

John-R walks up to the clones. "Excuse me, but could you all make way for us? We need to get to the lift."

One clone looks at him, and at his registered mutant armband, and back at him. "And why would we do that?"

John-R smiles. "Because if you don't, Fun will ensue."

Parking area, Roadway 1, JHY Sector

Not really knowing what else to do, Kris-R keeps holding on to the device, trying to endure the hallucinations, and the Fourth Wall Incident... whatever that is.

The orange spybot floats up to Cyrus-R and extends a probe, which seems to go through Cyrus-R's head. Hmm, he seems to have zoned out. Which might explain the hole that opened in the air, allowing a many-sided shape with numbers on it to pass through and strike Cyrus-R on the head. Or it might not...

Suddenly a multicoloured laser beam shines in the air! It almost hits Kris-R... who ducks reflexively and almost drops the device!

Wait... is that a device or an active nuke? Well, whatever it is, it just went "ping" and spat out a laser barrel.

Kris-R continues to try to fight the hallucinations and look for something to reduce the effects of the gas... some sort of cloth, maybe? Hmm... the parking area seems kind of empty, except for a couple of discarded bags of something Kris-R can't figure out.

written by Jam on Aug 19, 2012 16:11

I notice we've arrived.

"Oh, that was fast! Thanks for the ride! I really enjoyed it, and I'll make sure to recommend the Interactive Corridor Experience to any clones that seem to need some extra Fun in their daycycle!"

I step off the Tile, and try to go through the door.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 19, 2012 17:25

I take out Turbo.

"Yes. Fun."

I try my best to look very intimidating.

written by Gligar on Aug 19, 2012 17:27

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y expresses surprise that he has arrived at Alpha Subsector so quickly, and asserts that he will recommend the Interactive Corridor Experience to others before stepping off the Tile and through the door. Once through, he notices that he's in yet another corridor, this one quite short and YELLOW. It seems to exist to join two ORANGE corridors together, as well as to provide access to the Interactive Corridor Experience. A couple of doors are visible in the ORANGE corridors, labelled C-2 and B-6.

written by Jam on Aug 19, 2012 18:18

"Well, if there's a B door and a C door, then the D door must be nearby!"

I walk in the direction of the C-2 door, searching for any more doors.

Also, if I happen to come across any bots, I ask them for directions to the debriefing room.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 19, 2012 21:05

(Heh, I've got "good" timing.)

[insert my previous post here]

written by Gligar on Aug 19, 2012 22:30

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Given that there is a B-6 and a C-2, Jam-Y guesses that there must be a D somewhere. Perhaps he will find out if he heads towards the C?

He heads over there.

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

What he sees isn't all too encouraging: there are C-1 (hiding round the corner from the other corridor) through C-7... then, at the far end, E-1.

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

On John-R's words, L4-O pulls out Turbo, and agrees that Fun will ensue if they don't get out of the way, in a way that suggests that the Fun will be of the explosive variety.

One clone retorts with "We do not fear death. We have that covered. It's a pity you won't see things our way, though..." He pulls out a rather familiar-looking box.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 20, 2012 00:59

"So. You guys are some kind of freaky zombie cult then. Treasonous to the maximum extent... well, no... if you were commies too, THEN you would be treasonous to the maximum extent."

"But you are pretty treasonous. And extremely foolish. Shall I divulge how many zombies, cyborgs, and zombie cyborgs we have killed over the course of this mission? That I alone have killed?"

"We will be happy to increase that tally. NUKABOT, CHARGE! Run them down!"

I try to swap Turbo for my blaster and start blasting at the treasonous clones. I try to focus on the one carrying the box, so he doesn't try to activate it. Maybe.

written by Jam on Aug 20, 2012 01:24

I walk towards E-1, and search for more doors.

"Hmm... I wonder if the others have already arrived... I guess I'll try calling them..."

[1158]

I take out my PDC and try to call Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on Aug 20, 2012 01:49

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

L4-O replies by stating the obvious, then suggesting that the team, and he personally, have terminated a multitude of CMTs this mission, and that they would be happy to add to the number. He finishes by ordering Nukabot to charge. "About time!" the bot exclaims, and powers up with a growl of its motors.

The clone carrying the box suddenly drops it, clutching his head, just before Nukabot hits, shattering his skull and spewing brainstuff everywhere. And he isn't the only one, as two of his companions join him.

Meanwhile L4-O has switched back to his now-cool-again blaster, and would have most likely dropped a fourth clone were it not for the distraction of Speed-Y's PDC ringing.

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

The caller is Jam-Y, who even now is heading to debriefing. He is following the (also ORANGE) corridor round, past the E doors, to doors marked F, and G... and then there's an intersection with a RED corridor. He's kind of wondering if the rest of the team are already there.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 20, 2012 01:53

"Keep it up, Nukabot!"

I continue trying to pepper the clones with blaster fire, as well as trying to shrug off the distraction of Speed-Y's PDC.

written by Kristos on Aug 20, 2012 04:39

"This is overwhelming! Let us set down the device and get out of this gas!"

I lower my end of the device to the ground and then help Cyrus-R set down his end if necessary. Well, as well as I am able in the gas. Then I step out of the gas cloud.

written by Gligar on Aug 20, 2012 13:31

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

Trying desperately to ignore Speed-Y's PDC, L4-O continues firing. He gets off a couple of shots before the traitorous cultists begin to return fire. One, wielding a slugthrower, gets off a lucky shot, which hits him square in the chest... good thing he's wearing kevlar. Pity about his reflex, though; it now has a hole through it.

But L4-O isn't the only clone to act out of Team Epsilon. While Nukabot continues to try and impale clones with hits forks, Lucas-R has also been busy. It looks like he's trying to knock clones to the floor so that they can't retrieve that box... John-R sees what he's doing and lends a hand mentally.

It's a pity there aren't more loyal clones present... say, if King-R were around or something. (I wonder why he hasn't re-cloned yet? Oh yeah...)

Parking area, Roadway 1, JHY Sector

Kris-R decides that he's had enough... this gas is just too much.

Slowly, he lowers his end of... what now resembles an oversized packet of Soylent RED to the ground, and attempts to back away, stumbling over what appears to be a miniaturised scrubot in the process.

written by Jam on Aug 20, 2012 15:07

I look slightly worried.

"That's weird... Speed-Y isn't answering..."

I look both ways down the RED corridor, in case there are any H doors there. If not, I try continuing down the ORANGE corridor.

"Maybe they're in a fight or something... Maybe they even found some Easter Cycle clones! I hope they're okay..."

I also try to check the time again. At this rate, those guys are gonna be late for debriefing!

written by Lightning4 on Aug 20, 2012 17:15

"Woah."

I cough a little bit and try to regain my bearings, getting hit in the chest with a slug certainly shouldn't be fun, even with protection.

If I manage to regather myself enough again, I continue firing at the clones with my blaster. If I get good aim on one, I do a rapid fire volley.

written by Speeder on Aug 20, 2012 17:35

I throw the pamphlet away.

"No need for treason proof since we killed them anyway."

I answer the PDC while the battle rages.

"Speed-Y here."

written by Gligar on Aug 20, 2012 18:21

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y finds it strange that Speed-Y isn't answering his PDC. Perhaps he's in combat?

Regardless of that, though, he has to get to debriefing. Let's see... more G doors down there, aha! H spotted!

Glancing at his PDC, he notices that it's 17:22 - aah! Speed-Y's voice suddenly sounds from the PDC.

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

As it happens, Speed-Y has decided to discard the pamphlet, since he believes that it won't be needed. After all, most of the traitors are now dead, and the others have to contend with L4-O, who is firing back at them. L4-O's still in pain from being shot, but his Armed Forces training helps him push past it, with an end result of one maimed traitor.

Lucas-R, on the other hand, is still not killing anything. He's seen the opportunity to try and grab that box. But he finds that he has a traitor to deal with. Oh well... time for the laser pistol...

[1159]

He manages to narrowly miss, only to be almost shot in the head as his opponent also misses.

written by Speeder on Aug 20, 2012 19:10

I look at some traitors and scream.

“SILENCE!!! unruly clones! I am on the phone here!”

written by Kristos on Aug 20, 2012 20:24

“Ssssssssoylent RREDDDD!!! Ssssoooooo much of it! If only I had a vat of TeaSir to wash it down with! Wait, what is this I am stumbling over? A funny little scrubot? Maybe... no... hey! It’s a can of B3 Extra Fun Limited Mandatory Burns-Like-HEL-Sector Edition! Close enough! After a quick snack break we should get out of this gas before we start hallucinating!”

I attempt to open the ‘can of B3’ using the standard ritual.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 20, 2012 20:32

I reply with the attempt on Lucas’ life with blaster fire of my own directly at the traitorously traitorous clone.

Unless said clone dies soon, in which case I pick a different traitorously traitorous clone to fire at.

written by Jam on Aug 20, 2012 21:03

I stop walking and talk on my PDC.

“Hey Speed-Y, I’m waiting near the debriefing room for you guys! Where are you, and what’s happening? Wait, is that laser fire I hear?!”

written by Gligar on Aug 20, 2012 22:32

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

A stray slug almost hits Speed-Y, causing him to yell at the traitors (or anyclone) to shut up so he can take his call...

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y stops to speak to Speed-Y. He gives them his location, and asks theirs. Also, is that laser fire he can hear?

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

Actually, it’s blaster fire, courtesy of L4-O. This blast is aimed right for the clone who almost shot Lucas-R, and... wham! Right in the ear! That gives Lucas-R a chance to grab the box, and exclaim, “Got it!”

Parking Area, Roadway 1, JHY Sector

Kris-R recovers, and, it seems, finally gives in to the hallucinations. He could really go for some Soy lent RED and TeaSir right now. And hey! They have Soy lent, right? Maybe they could have a snack! Then they really need to get out of the gas.

Or perhaps he’s distracted by this can of B3 he just tripped over. He decides to open it. But he realises that it isn’t, right around the time that he opens it, because, instead of the mandatory fizz, he ends up being sprayed in the face by something rather viscous and foul-smelling. Well, whatever it is, it seems to bring him round.⁷⁸³

written by Speeder on Aug 20, 2012 23:08

I smile and say.

“Oh Jam, don’t worry! There are some annoying traitors here shooting a lot at us, we are in near a lift in Alpha Subsector.

We are coming! Hold our places!

And really, don’t worry, they are not dangerous as zombies, even if they are armed and shooting back a lot, because they can die! It is awesome enemies that actually die! How I love that! Even better that they WON’T rise again!!! If I was in those crazy secret society that has a thing called religion, I would pray for more of those enemies!”

written by Lightning4 on Aug 21, 2012 00:25

I pause to think.

“That’s a good question actually. What if these clones do actually get back up after dying?”

I go back to shooting any of them that are left. I watch the corpses for any activity.

written by Gligar on Aug 21, 2012 01:29

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y’s PDC conversation continues. He’s saying that there is nothing to worry about, it’s just some traitors, which are better than zombies because they’re easier to kill, even if they do shoot back. Plus, they’re not going to spontaneously get back up after being killed...

But L4-O isn’t so sure. What if they do get back up?

After shooting at the three remaining traitors, L4-O watches the bodies for a moment. They do a remarkable job of staying dead.

written by Jam on Aug 21, 2012 02:13

“Oh, good, you took care of them? I guess that’s everything then! Hurry up to debriefing, I’ll be waiting nearby!”

I search for the debriefing room door, but I don’t approach it yet... Being early is treason!

written by Lightning4 on Aug 21, 2012 02:35

After being (and making) sure that the remaining traitors are dead, I decide that checking them for interesting or unusual objects might be a wise decision.

And weapons too, since we can never have enough of those.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 21, 2012 07:35

“Meesa so worry! Weesa got terrrrrible problemo meesa thinks!”⁷⁸⁴

⁷⁸³ GLIGAR: (OOC: 1pp to Kristos 😊)

⁷⁸⁴ CRYOBURNER: (New posting style, or side-effect of hallucinogen? Only

written by Kristos on Aug 21, 2012 12:26

gag cough choke "What is...?!... oh."

I grab Cyrus-R, drag him out from the gas, and wait for the cloud to disperse. Once that is done I visually scan the device to see if anything has changed about it. I also look for the laser barrel.

written by Speeder on Aug 21, 2012 14:01

Since I am a bit hurt, I just wait happily, but I grab anything that they hand to me.

Wait!

I look if any clone is YELLOW.

If not, I see if anyone is ORANGE.

And I wear the jumpsuit that I find.

written by Gligar on Aug 21, 2012 14:58

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Assuming that L4-O and the others have now dealt with the traitors, Jam-Y tells them to join him as soon as they can

But in the meantime, he needs to actually find the debriefing room. He should be close, so... let's see... H-2, H-4, H-6... skip a couple... aha! H-12.

But he doesn't go in just yet. There are still a couple of minutecycles before debriefing, after all.

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

In the meantime, L4-O has shot at the traitors a couple more times, just to be sure. Satisfied, he decides to take advantage of the situation by looting the bodies. Hmm, not much of interest.. .just something that appears to be a Power Services circuit breaker, some pamphlets, a couple of laser pistols, and a slugthrower.

Speed-Y also seems interested in the clone who had the slugthrower... he's YELLOW, after all, and has a YELLOW jumpsuit (though it's now bloodstained and dirty). Speed-Y doesn't have a jumpsuit, so... used is better than nothing, right? He climbs down and strips the body so that he can get dressed.

Parking area, Roadway 1, JHY Sector

Er... can someone explain what just happened to Cyrus-R? It's almost like he's putting on a weird accent or something! Or maybe it's just the gas...

Speaking of which, Kris-R has hold of him and is trying to drag him clear... hmmm, there we go. He's waiting for the gas to clear so that he can check the device, but from what he can already see, the laser barrel has been ejected and now lies on the floor nearby. As for the device itself, it appears unchanged, except that part of the RED panel has opened, revealing a lit smiley face and a "Reset" button.

time may tell...)

written by Speeder on Aug 21, 2012 15:22

I notice the circuit breaker, and decide to take it with me, examine it, also take and read some pamphlets, and see if anyone has interesting ammo for me.

Then I climb again on Nukabot.

written by Jam on Aug 21, 2012 15:39

I count down the minutecycles until debriefing, sipping on my B3 if I have any left.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 21, 2012 17:29

I let Speed-Y take the slugthrower if he desires, but I take the other appropriate clearance weapons as I'm the equipment officer and all...

"That looks familiar... do you think it's from the Industrial Subsectors?"

I get a good look at the clone that had it...

"Hey, sir, maybe you should give this guy's ME card a scan with the reader and your PDC. He might be important."

written by Speeder on Aug 21, 2012 21:27

I take the slugthrower (and the ammo).

And I scan the ME card that L4 gives to me after climbing on Nukabot... (who knows, maybe Nukabot decides to run while I am on the ground scanning...)

written by Gligar on Aug 21, 2012 21:48

256 treason points to Virgin Media! 🍌

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

Noticing the circuit breaker, Speed-Y takes it as well. He notices that it seems similar to the ones used in the power room of Building 2...

He also takes some more of the pamphlets, though they appear to be the same as the one he discarded. Then again, I guess it's evidence?

L4-O doesn't seem too interested in evidence, though. He's more interested in equipment, what with being the Equipment Officer and all. He offers the slugthrower to Speed-Y, and suggests that he scan the YELLOW's ME Card. The YELLOW doesn't seem familiar, but that doesn't mean much, right? Though, that circuit breaker looks familiar...

Speed-Y takes the slugthrower - it's somewhat newer than the "revolver" he had before - and the ME Card, and returns to Nukabot before scanning the card. He discovers that it belongs to Ran-Y-MHL-4, an HPD&MC clone with -408 credits to his name. And... according to this, IntSec are interested in him.

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y starts waiting until debriefing... only 10 minutecycles left... He finishes off his B3 while he waits.

Nine minutecycles... The door opens, allowing a group of clones who look like Troubleshooters to exit.

written by Jam on Aug 21, 2012 21:56

I nod in greeting to the other Troubleshooters (and also note the clearance of their team leader), then continue talking into my PDC.

"Hey Speed-Y, is there anything linking those clones to the Easter Cycle or the zombies?"

Also, you've only got 9 minutecycles left... If you get to J Level, I can guide John-R to me psionically... Or, at least, I think I can."

written by Speeder on Aug 21, 2012 22:43

"I don't know..."

But one clone here has a suspicious circuit breaker..."

I stay on Nukabot waiting for L4 to finish his business and move.

But I do remain fiddling with the circuit breaker.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 21, 2012 23:57

Satisfied with my acquisitions, I get back on Nukabot so we can proceed, and quickly.

written by Kristos on Aug 22, 2012 02:58

"A strong sense of analysis is as good as a well written instruction manual. Let's see... the barrel was ejected. Hallucinogenic gas. Soylet RED. A panel popped open. Aha! The universal satisfaction indicator is illuminated! The barrel is not defective! Now that we know how to expertly operate the device let us proceed to the factory!"

I grab my end of the device.

"Now, on three. One! Two! Thrr-.....what? Cyrus-R? What are you mumbling?...Looks like it is time for an emergency sentient presence verification test; How many fingers am I holding up?"

I hold up three fingers.

written by 4616599 on Aug 22, 2012 04:16

I shrug.

"Sigh. I'll try to get in touch with them later. Hopefully the subsector can be cleared soon."

I pull out my PDC, and check for directions to the debriefing room. Thanking the AF clones, I resume walking towards the domescraper.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 22, 2012 09:03

"Meesa see yousa got da- cough, cough ack..."

"Erm. Where were we? Oh yes, the barrel tester. Hmm... I guess the test was successful? The indicator looks happy, and that ping sound it made sounded kind of happy, so I guess the barrel checks out okay! Or not okay. Maybe the face is just happy at having detected a faulty barrel. Or..."

I squint at the face, trying to determine whether it is happy about the situation, or just happy about doing its job, or maybe even just pretending to be happy to hide its true feelings, or trying to deceive us into thinking it is happy for some devious manipulative plan...

"We should probably test the other one too."

written by Gligar on Aug 22, 2012 14:24

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y nods to the other Troubleshooters and looks for a Team Leader. Oddly, there doesn't seem to be one, though there is a Happiness Officer, and he's ORANGE. Looking past them, it is possible to see a RED and a YELLOW lying flat on the floor in the debriefing room. They aren't moving. Perhaps the big plume of smoke coming from each of them has something to do with it.

But enough of that now. As the other team heads off somewhere, muttering about how their Team Leader was a commie and how there are likely to be promotions for them soon, Jam-Y continues talking on his PDC, wondering if there is a link between these traitors and the Easter Cycle and/or the zombies... oh, and they now only have nine minutecycles to get here. He could probably guide John-R in if they could get to J Level.

Eight minutecycles...

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y isn't sure, but one clone did have a circuit breaker... He continues to fiddle with it as L4-O finishes his business.

And it doesn't take him long. He climbs back up on Nukabot. They're ready to go again!

Parking area, Roadway 1, JHY Sector

Now that he has the opportunity, Kris-R reviews what they have learned about the device: the ejected barrel, the gas... and something about Soylent RED before the panel opened, revealing the smiley face. That must mean that the barrel is not defective. Now that they know that, they can head to the factory.

He begins to pick up his end of the device but notices that Cyrus-R is blabbering about something in that strange accent. He begins to administer a how-many-fingers test, but Cyrus-R reverts to his normal accent - looks like it was due to the gas after all. And ignores the test... Oh well. The main point is that he won't be annoying, right? Let us hope so.

Importantly, he throws into question the meaning of the smiley face. Perhaps it means something else? He looks at it, but it just looks like a smiley face to him. Smiley face = happy, and, as we all know, happiness is mandatory. Which means that the device must be happy! Or maybe the barrel is happy? Then it must be good, right?

Or perhaps they should test the other barrel as well.

Checkpoint, Industrial Subsectors

Joris-R decides to leave the Transition for now, and contact Transition Rentals later. Perhaps the subsectors can be cleared in the meantime.

After thanking the soldiers, he sets off towards the domescraper, with PDC in hand. Now, where was Debriefing? Hmm... Room H-12, J Level, Alpha Subsector... how to get there?

Getting to the domescraper would be a start. And he'd better be quick... he only has eight minutecycles. It would be an enormous help if he could fly there...

written by Speeder on Aug 22, 2012 15:27

"Alright Nukabot, get to the lift."

I see if the circuit breaker has been used before or not, if it has a power services code attached to it, and if it was modified somehow or not.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 22, 2012 16:25

Once we arrive at the lift, I wait for everyone else to get on, then hop off Nukabot and press the J button.

written by Jam on Aug 22, 2012 17:03

Hmm... I guess Speed-Y forgot to hang up. Oh well, I guess I'll listen in for a bit...

I try to follow the team's progress by listening to the various sounds coming from my PDC, as well as any speech I can hear.

written by Gligar on Aug 22, 2012 18:48

Corridor A2, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y orders Nukabot to head to the lift. There's no time to waste!

In the meantime, he has a closer look at the circuit breaker. He realises that, though it bears a Power Services code, the code seems to have been changed at some point. After all, most of the codes don't come on stickers... do they?

Speed-Y's lift, A Level, Alpha Subsector

As it happens, there's a lift here large enough to accommodate Nukabot. As soon as everyone enters, L4-O hops off and instructs the lift to go up.

The doors close.

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

It seems that Speed-Y has not yet hung up his PDC, as Jam-Y is still listening in. From what he can hear, the team has entered a lift.

Meanwhile, a scrubot passes him, and enters the debriefing room. It begins cleaning.

Seven minutecycles...

written by Jam on Aug 22, 2012 22:29

I try to use my mutant power to determine which direction the rest of the team is coming from, then I start walking in that general direction.

Maybe I'll be able to get some of my stuff back before we get to debriefing, or at least my MBD badge and recorder...

written by Kristos on Aug 22, 2012 22:30

"I have already used my loaded laser barrel once. It performed as expected. Grab the other end of the device - we'll continue using it in the factory."

I load the RED barrel into my spare pistol and hand it to Cyrus-R. "Looks like you need one of these. Try to use it in a mandatory way."

"By the way, shouldn't the device have a name?"

written by Speeder on Aug 22, 2012 22:38

I wait with expectation, but I also try to figure if the circuit breaker was ever REMOVED from somewhere.

written by Gligar on Aug 22, 2012 23:05

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y thinks, and casts his mind loose, looking for Speed-Y and the gang... but... there's some kind of interference... er... from below?

Six minutecycles...

Parking area, Roadway 1, JHY Sector

Kris-R points out that he has already used his other laser barrel once. It performed as one might expect from a laser barrel. He also points out that they will be able to test it further in the factory, so will he kindly pick up his side of the device so they can get moving?

In the meantime, though, he can have this laser barrel, as soon as he fits it to his spare pistol... there he goes.

Oh... and shouldn't the device have a name?

Speed-Y's lift, Alpha Subsector

As the lift ascends, Speed-Y continues his investigation. Can he tell if the circuit breaker has ever been removed from anything? Well... hmmm. It kind of looks like the mounting bracket is slightly bent out of shape... and the paint is a bit scuffed up near the screw holes

The lift continues to rise.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 22, 2012 23:22

I get back on my place on Nukabot and wait for the lift.

Remembering my last experience with a lift, I keep my blaster handy. I also check its charge and temperature.

written by Jam on Aug 22, 2012 23:23

"Hmm... That's strange..."

I give up on searching for the team, and instead continue listening to my PDC.

written by Speeder on Aug 23, 2012 00:53

I see if the sticker is pasted over another sticker.

written by Gligar on Aug 23, 2012 17:13*Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector*

Jam-Y gives up. Odd that there's interference...

Five minutecycles...

Speed-Y's lift, Alpha Subsector

The lift continues to rise while Speed-Y continues looking at the breaker. Perhaps he's channeling the late Cryo-R? Hmm... perhaps not. He's focused on the label pretty hard, though. It doesn't look like it was placed over another label, for one thing.

L4-O keeps watching the lift door with his blaster in hand. Checking the charge, he finds that it's at about half, and is quite cool.

The lift shudders and comes to a halt, pausing for a moment before opening its doors, revealing a RED corridor.

Speed-Y heard Jam-Y's voice over his PDC.

written by Speeder on Aug 23, 2012 17:32

While looking at the breaker I conclude that it is strange... then...

I take the PDC.

"What is strange Jam?"

I look at the wall.

"You are not on my head are you? Are you looking the object I am examining? JAM? JAM??? YOU ARE NOT DOING THAT ARE YOU??"

I close my eyes paranoically.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 23, 2012 17:54

I check to make sure this is J-level.

If it is, I give the order to Nukabot.

"Proceed! We need to find... ah..."

"Right. Room H-12."

If we start moving, I look at the signs on the walls to see how close we are.

written by Jam on Aug 23, 2012 19:16

I give a confused look, then I start laughing as I explain things.

"No, no, I'm not in your head, Speed-Y! I just thought it was strange that there was some kind of interference blocking my powers. But anyway, it sounds like you guys are at J-level! I guess I'll see you shortly!"

written by Gligar on Aug 23, 2012 20:57*Speed-Y's lift, Alpha Subsector*

Speed-Y comes to a conclusion regarding the breaker: there's something strange... about... it...

Wait a minute... isn't that what Jam-Y said?

Speed-Y gets back on the PDC and asks Jam-Y what he meant. Then, in a sudden fit of paranoia (heh), he starts accusing him of looking in on Speed-Y's mind. To try to stop him from looking in, he shuts his eyes tightly.

Over the PDC, Jam-Y laughs, and explains that no, he wasn't doing that. He was merely commenting on how there is some sort of interference blocking his powers. But from the sound of things, the team should be meeting up with him seen.⁷⁸⁵

L4-O is less concerned with Jam-Y and more concerned with getting to their destination. He does this by delegating the responsibility to Nukabot... after checking that this is indeed J Level. Well, it is if the sign on the RED clearance stripe outside is anything to go by... apparently, it is Corridor J6.

And Nukabot begins moving again...

Four minutecycles (because CPU Mandate 44/44444 states that I must state it somewhere...)

written by Lightning4 on Aug 23, 2012 21:02

I watch the room numbers as we go by, watching for the correct one and for far we have yet to go.

I look at my PDC and get a little antsy at the time we have left.

written by Speeder on Aug 23, 2012 22:50

After a while, less paranoid, I say.

"Alright... If you say so..."

So, in what corridor are you? We are in J6."

I turn to L4.

"If we know the right corridor I think we can move at the maximum allowed speed for Forkbots here..."

I dunno what the maximum allowed speed is, RED was higher right? I mean, it is not like RED clones object being ran over by accident..."

I look at Nukabot panel.

"Hey Nukabot, you have Forklift speed limits coded on you? Any idea if it is clearance related somehow? Can we go faster here?"

written by Gligar on Aug 23, 2012 23:57*Corridor J6, Alpha Subsector*

L4-O keeps an eye on door numbers... there's Room K-9... K-7... K-5... Worried about time, he glances at his PDC. Three and a half minutecycles...

Nukabot continues on, passing from the Ks into the Js in relative silence, until Speed-Y speaks up. He asks Jam-Y where he is, as they're in Corridor J6. To L4-O, he adds that if they know the corridor, they can have Nukabot accelerate to... say, what's the speed limit? Maybe it's clearance related? He asks Nukabot. "Speed limits are determined by two things," the bot replied. "First, the clearance of the area it is operating in. Second, the clearance of the clones operating the bot. And I have a YELLOW clone aboard," it adds, with its best approximation of amusement.

⁷⁸⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: Mutants... you admire their usefulness (maybe), yet you can barely stand them... since you don't know how they work! They could be in your mind and you couldn't tell! +1pp to Speeder.)

written by Speeder on Aug 24, 2012 00:40

"So... the higher clearance of the area means less speed, while the higher clearance of the operator means more speed?

That is confusing, it remembers my name for some reason, I wonder what reason it is..."

written by Cryoburner on Aug 24, 2012 00:56

I take the loaded pistol and pick up my end of the device, still staring at the smiley face.

"I was thinking, since happiness is mandatory, perhaps the smiley face is smiling simply because it is mandatory to do so, and his doing so bears no relation to the outcome of the test. Maybe that 'ping' sound was indicative of something though. What sort of mechanism do you suppose produced a sound like that, anyway? We probably should have asked that scientist for more details about the device..."

"Oh, and can we be certain your barrel is fully functional just because you fired it once? What if an issue only presents itself on a subsequent firing? And if it is fully functional, it might help us verify what a positive test result should look like."

written by Cryoburner on Aug 24, 2012 03:50

(I think this maaay have been intended for this thread)

Kristos said:

"Do you not think a treasonous laser barrel would best be indicated by a treasonous face?"

"With no spares I cannot afford to expend a laser barrel. Surely we will test both healthy and faulty barrels in the factory and can then verify the indication method. At least it seems the device will not explode."

I walk to the factory and look over the outside.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 24, 2012 07:18

"Just go as fast as you can. Unless you're already going as fast as you can, then just... uh, don't go faster. I'm sure speeding is somewhat treasonous. Maybe."

I shrug.

written by Gligar on Aug 24, 2012 15:02

Corridor J6, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y is confused by Nukabot's explanation. Does that mean that one thing controls how slow it goes, whereas the other defines how fast? Sounds sort of like his own name...

L4-O also seems a little confused, but tells Nukabot to go as fast as it can. Immediately, it accelerates.

Into the Is now... and round a corner...

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

And there's Jam-Y, dead ahead

Only two minutecycles left...

Parking Area, Roadway 1, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R takes the laser pistol and picks up his end of the device. He still doubts that the smiley face really means anything, given that happiness is mandatory. He even doubts the meaning of the ping, and wonders what caused it. Should they have asked? Sure, but what answer would they have gotten? "You aren't cleared for that. Get going."

Cyrus-R starts saying something about Kris-R's other barrel before the latter interrupts him, saying that a treasonous barrel would be more easily depicted with a treasonous face. And he's not giving up his barrel for testing since it would leave him without any form of weapon. Further tests can be carried out at the factory.

At least the device didn't explode.

Now... where's the factory? Oh yes, Roadway 3, which is... right over there, so down there... and there's the factory!

Laser Barrel Factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

As he walks down the roadway, Kris-R is reminded of JHT's Industrial Subsectors, what with the similar-looking buildings and the wire fences. Except without all the Armed Forces on the outside containing a Code Three-Zed situation...

The laser barrel factory is no exception. There's even a checkpoint with a surly guard who asks them to halt.

written by Jam on Aug 24, 2012 15:45

I notice the others and wave to them.

"There you guys are! Hurry, we only have two minutecycles left! You brought my equipment, L4-O? I could tell you wanted to respond to my message, but you were too far away for me to tell what you were saying..."

Quick, find my Loyalty Officer stuff! We can sort the rest out after debriefing."

written by Speeder on Aug 24, 2012 15:53

I check if my badge, helmet, and whatnot is in place, and attempt to move to the door appropriate door.

I ask Jam what door it is if I don't spot it.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 24, 2012 16:42

"Yes, I brought it! I managed to stuff most of it into the..."

I look around to make sure there's no treasonous clones overhearing.

"Special box."

If we arrive at the door, I get in as quickly as I can and take a seat.

written by Gligar on Aug 24, 2012 22:32

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y notices the team and urges them to hurry; they only have two (now one and a half) minutecycles left. Er... they did bring his equipment, right? He'll need his Loyalty Officer stuff, that's the most important. L4-O assures him that it's all in the... "special box."

Speaking of equipment, Speed-Y needs to sort out his. Ah, there he goes.

Right! One minutecycle left! Everyone piles in to the debriefing room...

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

...to find that there is only one seat. And a big empty box marked RETURNED EQUIPMENT.

The debriefing officer is not present.

written by Speeder on Aug 24, 2012 22:40

I look confused.

I do not take the seat, and only wait.

I look at Jam.

"Huh?"

I look at the mighty holy single seat again.

I look at the big empty box.

I check if the empty box somehow takes stuff somewhere or is just a normal box that will be hauled later.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 24, 2012 23:03

I look confused as well, but decide something else is higher priority now.

I give (if he allows) Jam-Y all his stuff back, including the half of the Quantum box.

written by Jam on Aug 25, 2012 01:10

I also look confused.

"Uh... Do we have the right room?"

I notice L4-O offering my stuff back.

"Oh, thanks!"

I take my stuff from L4-O, and start sorting it all out.

written by Kristos on Aug 25, 2012 03:46

"Hello, we are Team Sigma, sent by the Computer to inspect the factory sabotage. JHY R&D have provided this device for laser barrel testing. Here is our paperwork."

I show the guard our paperwork.

written by Gligar on Aug 25, 2012 15:03

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y continues doing what he's been doing for the last few minutecycles: looking confused. He looks between the room, the chair, the box, and Jam-Y, and back at the box. It looks like any other box.

L4-O looks like he wants to say something about it, but decides not to. Instead, he offers Jam-Y his equipment back, including his half of the Quantum Box.

Jam-Y is also confused. He even wonders if they have the correct room for a moment, before he notices L4-O. He accepts his equipment and begins sorting it all out... looks like most, if not all, of his stuff is still here.

As he's doing that, a BLUE clone enters. "You're Team Epsilon, right?"

Laser barrel factory checkpoint, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R identifies the team to the guard, and shows his paperwork. "Yeah, we're expecting a team... head to reception."

written by Jam on Aug 25, 2012 17:48

If Speed-Y doesn't respond to the BLUE, I go ahead and respond myself.

"Yes, that's us! Are you our debriefing officer?"

I also put my reflec on, and attach my Loyalty Officer badge to the reflec.

written by Gligar on Aug 25, 2012 18:26

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y looks at Speed-Y to see if he will respond. He is the Team Leader, after all. When he does not, Jam-Y tells the BLUE that they are Team Epsilon, and asks if he is their debriefing officer. "I am," replies the BLUE. "Rapt-G, who should have been here, was called away to... no, you're not cleared for that. Is this everyone? We're on a tight schedule here." He gestures towards the box, and refers to a list. "First, we'll need to recover your mission equipment, plus any evidence you've found, plus your spent ammunition. MBD Badges, helmets and so forth may be kept. The Loyalty Officer may keep his transcripts recorder; we only need the tape."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 25, 2012 18:46

"Hmm."

I wonder what counts as "spent ammunition", since blasters and such don't really have ammunition as such...

I wonder what else I can put in the box.

"Oh!"

I put that information refusal request into the box, followed by the ID log from the security room.

I look at the ME card scanner, Multipurpose Tool kKt, and Maintenance Supply Kit before deciding they probably need to go in too.

written by Kristos on Aug 25, 2012 19:45

I go to reception and survey reception for snacks or otherwise snacky items. Then I look for any treasonous clones pickpocketing the snacks and attempt to confiscate the stolen goods. Should no clones be found treasonously pickpocketing snacks or otherwise snacky items I locate the nearest vendobot or ring-for-service bell.

...

Heck no! I just go to the reception location and wait to be acknowledged.

written by Jam on Aug 25, 2012 20:05

I put the SDL and ELT cards into the box, as well as the tape from the transcripts recorder.

"Hmm... I guess I don't really have any spent ammunition. I mostly used that emergency light... Anything else need to go in?" I ask to noclone in particular.

written by Gligar on Aug 25, 2012 23:38

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

"Spent ammunition"... what exactly does that mean? Blasters don't really have ammunition, unless you count power packs... do those count? Spent laser barrels certainly do... so those go in. (Do partly-used barrels count?) What else? The tasers? Possibly.

Well, part of that's running through L4-O's mind, I guess... though he's also thinking about things such as the information refusal form he found, and the security logs... oh, and the scanner... the toolkits as well?

To that, Jam-Y adds his SDL and ELT cards. As for the tape... yes, he can rewind it and add the spool to the collection. He doesn't have much ammunition... he mostly used those "emergency lights"... wait, would those count as evidence? Anything else?

"Don't forget those cameras I had you all wear," John-R chimes in. "Speaking of which... I need to report that a certain YELLOW clone caused the destruction of the multicorder..." He adds the Com 1, a set of microphones, the spare cameras, and the remains of said multicorder to the box, as well as a spent laser barrel.

Lucas-R adds, "I should probably add these too," and places his pyrotechnic grenades, Insta-Inflatable Targets, and Authorisation to Initiate Emergency Response Tests form into the box. As well as a spent laser barrel, of course.

"Anything else?" asks the BLUE. "What about additional weapons you might have neglected to use? Why didn't you use them? Are you trying to go lightly on commies? Why? And what about the equipment you were assigned for a Hygiene Officer and Happiness Officer? I don't see them here. And where's your Financial Officer? And what's this I hear about destroyed equipment?"

Roadway, near Epsilon Subsector

Walking down the roadway, that's where. He's nearing the turnoff for the bot parking area.

Reception, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Team Sigma enters reception. It is quite a small place, with one desk, and is clearance INFRARED. A clone sits behind the desk, looking over a bunch of forms. To one side is a door leading deeper into the factory.

If Cryo-R were still here, he's probably be looking for lunch, and/or clones who might conceivable be looking as though they might want to think about pick-pocketing something. Or ring-for-service bells. Or something equally inane. Well, to address those in order, there is a vendobot... but it is currently out of order. And the only clone present, apart from them, is the one at the desk. As for bells... you check if it's that important.

But he's not here, so... whatever.

The clone looks up from his papers. "Yes, can I help you?"

written by Cryoburner on Aug 26, 2012 00:22

I check if there is a ring for service bell, and if so, I press it.

"The question should be, can we help you? The answer to which is probably 'yes', seeing as we are the troubleshooter team that has been sent to do just that, and The Computer wouldn't send a troubleshooter team that was incapable of shooting trouble. Now, where are these faulty laser barrels, so that we might shoot them?"

written by Lightning4 on Aug 26, 2012 00:45

I add the form, the toolkits, my camera, the security logs, the scanner, the empty emergency light box, and my taser to the box.

I try to recall where the Hygiene Officer and Happiness Officer boxes are, shouldn't they be on Nukabot?

I peek out and look at Nukabot to see if they're there.

written by Gligar on Aug 26, 2012 12:55

Reception, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R looks for a ring-for-service bell. Not finding one, he simply informs the clone that they are a Troubleshooter Team, sent to help out.

But he seems to fixate on the "shooting trouble" part, suggesting that they want to shoot the faulty barrels...

The clone shudders. "Have you any idea what might happen if you shot those things? Does 'big explosion' ring any bells with you? Though... I suppose we have the testing area... give me a second, I'll get a supervisor..."

The clone gets up and heads through the door.

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O adds a bunch of equipment to the box, before thinking: what happened to the other equipment?

He looks outside, and realises that the Hygiene Officer kit is still inside the box marked 'Hygiene Officer'... neither Mick-R nor King-R bothered to equip themselves with it.

That is... it's still in the... "special box".

As for the Happiness Officer's kit... that should be with Azir-R's equipment, right? He equipped himself, at least. So... where is that, exactly? Oh yes... it's on the wheelchair. Which is right there, on the forks.

written by 4616599 on Aug 26, 2012 13:31

I look up at the distance ahead, and around, and look troubled.

I try to recall if taxibots exist, and call one if I can.⁷⁸⁶ written by Jam on Aug 26, 2012 15:22⁷⁸⁷

I add my helmet's camera to the box.

"That's odd... L4-O, do you still have my laser pistol barrels?"

I also take all of the Hygiene Officer equipment from the R&D box and place it in the other box.

"Yeah, what happened to King-R and Azir-R? Weren't they with us the whole time?"

written by Gligar on Aug 26, 2012 18:27

Roadway, near Epsilon Subsector

Joris-R looks around. He's not too far from the domescraper now, but it might as well be halfway across the Complex. At this rate, he'll never reach debriefing. If only he could get there faster... wait a minute... taxibots? Or are they autohacks around here? No matter, he can still call one. When he does, he is told that there should be an autohack with him shortly (which answers that question...)

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y also adds some more equipment to the box, and adds that Azir-R and King-R should have been with them. He goes in his box and removes the Hygiene Officer equipment, and asks L4-O whether he still has the laser barrels from his equipment.

He then looks at the laser pistol and barrel he bought at the cloning station. Do those count? Well... it depends on whether they count as mission equipment or not, I guess. He initially put it in, but decides to take it back out.

The BLUE raises his voice. "Why have my questions not been answered?!"

written by Lightning4 on Aug 26, 2012 18:07

"Um, probably."

⁷⁸⁶ 4616599: (I know I haven't been very active of late, and my low activity will probably continue until Wednesday- just keep assuming Joris-R hurries and rushes and runs if I don't post- looking at the pace of things he probably still won't reach the room on Wednesday in any case! My posting should become a bit more regular after that when school break starts)

⁷⁸⁷ JAM: (ooc: Judging by the stats page, I guess I also put that partly used YELLOW laser pistol barrel I just bought into the box?)

Also, the Post Archive makes reviewing the mission so much easier! Thanks!

I fork over the YELLOW laser pistols and the spare YELLOW barrel, and any ORANGE ones if he asks.

I then proceed to gather Azir's equipment from Nukabot, then re-enter the room to add it to the box as well.

"I believe both of them died... haven't seen them since."

written by Cryoburner on Aug 26, 2012 21:19

Seeing as the clone behind the desk gets up and leaves, I take a moment to have a look behind his desk, noting any laser barrels that might be back there, so long as doing so doesn't involve crossing into any higher clearance zones than I am cleared for. I check in the desk drawers as well, if they are RED clearance or lower.

written by Jam on Aug 26, 2012 21:39

I check inside the R&D box for any other mission equipment that can be added to the other box.

"Well, to be honest, we actually didn't encounter many commies during our mission. Mostly, we faced lots and lots of zombies. But we can assure you we used all the weapons at our disposal to terminate the zombies. Or re-terminate them... whatever.

As for the damage to John-R's Multicorder, I know it was damaged when one of Speed-Y's laser pistols exploded... I'm not sure of the cause of the explosion, whether it was just carelessness on Speed-Y's part or whether it was communist sabotage of the laser pistol barrel... but it's unlikely there'd be tampered-with laser barrels being assigned to us, right?

Oh, and I'm afraid I don't know what you mean about additional weapons we failed to use, sir. Unless you are talking about L4-O's cone rifle? But he used that plenty of times... No, that can't be it..."

I trail off, thinking about what the BLUE could mean.

written by Gligar on Aug 26, 2012 23:37

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

To Jam-Y, L4-O replies that he probably does have Jam-Y's laser barrels, and hands over what YELLOW lasers he has; specifically, two loaded laser pistols and one spare barrel. He hesitates with the ORANGE barrels, waiting to see if Jam-Y wants any of them. He then heads out into the corridor.

Jam-Y looks through his box and pulls out a taser, which he places in the collection boxes. To the BLUE, he says that they didn't actually encounter many commies. Zombies aplenty, though, and they did use their weapons against them liberally. He isn't sure what happened to John-R's multicorder... only that Speed-Y suffered a laser pistol malfunction, causing it to explode. He doubts that it was deliberate on Speed-Y's part... but could it have been simple carelessness... or maybe even sabotage? But surely they wouldn't have been assigned defective laser barrels?

And as for additional weapons they didn't use... Jam-Y is at a loss.

L4-O returns with Azir-R's equipment, just in time to hear the BLUE say, "So let me get this straight. You didn't use your weapons on commies because... there weren't any? How did you know that there weren't any? Did you run any loyalty tests? And as for this story about zombies... they're just rumour! You should get yourselves brainscrubbed right away!"

When L4-O tells him that Azir-R and King-R have died, the BLUE just frowns. "Then they should have been decanted by now... so why didn't you make sure they got here?"

"And one other thing. I noticed you carrying YELLOW equipment just now. Would you care to explain why? And why you apparently have a cone rifle?"

Roadway, near Epsilon Subsector

An autohack can be seen travelling down the roadway at speed. As it approaches Joris-R, it decelerates and screeches to a halt. "You called, citizen?"

Reception, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

While the clone is gone, Cyrus-R decides to have a look behind the clone's desk. Dropping the device on the floor with a loud crash, he heads behind it, to find that there's nothing of note behind it, only a chair. There's not even any openable drawers in the desk, since they're locked.

Footsteps from behind the door indicate that a clone is approaching, just before the door itself opens, revealing an ORANGE clone. He notices what Cyrus-R is doing and says, "So this is Team Sigma? I was expecting a team that knew that undue curiosity is insubordination. You can be sure that this will be passed on to Troubleshooter Overwatch."

written by Speeder on Aug 26, 2012 23:47

I finally stop being confused.

"I think that last battle hurt me a lot..."

I start to unload all equipment requested on the box.

Then after a while thinking, I fiddle a bit with my PDC, erasing certain information that I am sure even if correct clearance not all clones are supposed to know, and then I put the PDC on the box, so the information that I collected earlier is given as evidence.

I also put the circuit breaker on the box.

Then I start to ponder if I should put the jumpsuit too... Considering its source, but after a while I decide to keep it.

written by Jam on Aug 27, 2012 02:04

I take the YELLOW barrels and a couple ORANGE ones.

"Sorry, I ordered L4-O to carry my equipment from my previous clone to my current clone, since he is the Equipment Officer after all. As for the cone rifle, I'll let L4-O explain that..."

Also, yes, I did run loyalty tests on many of the clones we encountered, as I'm sure my teammates will confirm... All the clones I tested passed except for one, who I believe was taken into Armed Forces custody. But the main reason the number of commies we found was so low is that most of the clones we encountered were either dead or, er, zombies.

Um, yeah, about that, I have to apologize. Now that I think about it, maybe 'zombies' isn't the proper term for what we were facing. It was more of a nickname we used, since they were so similar to what actual zombies are like... er, I mean, what they would be like if they actually existed. Speed-Y mentioned something about nanobots affecting the clones... I'm sure he can elaborate?"

I look toward Speed-Y.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 27, 2012 02:15

"I have a brevet for the cone rifle, for indefinite use now."

I show it to him if he asks for it.

"And yeah, I am the Equipment Officer. I figured that with the presence of YELLOW clones in my team, this would give me permission to carry, but most certainly not use, YELLOW equipment, so that I always have equipment available for said YELLOWS. I guess it would be kind of like entering higher clearance areas in a mission, if the area is YELLOW and the team has a YELLOW."

written by Cryoburner on Aug 27, 2012 04:46

"Oh, don't worry! No curiosity here. I was simply checking to see if there were any defective laser pistol barrels behind this desk. I decided it would be most efficient to get started right away!"

"You will be pleased to know that there are NO defective laser pistol barrels behind this desk. I can not, however, clear the desk's contents at this time though, as I would probably need some kind of key for that."

written by Kristos on Aug 27, 2012 05:29

I, who have crashed under the sudden weight of the device, push the device to the side and sit up, coughing.

"Cyrus-R! What are you trying to do, kill me and destroy the device? What are you doing over there anyway?!"

Then I notice the presence of the ORANGE clone. "Oh, hello there!"

written by Speeder on Aug 27, 2012 12:36

I look to Jam and then to the Blue clone and nod.

"Yep, most clones were reanimated clones from the reanimator project that I believe you have clearance to know what it is.

I inferred that the BLUE gas used to reanimate clones are nanobots, and this is why it was the chosen weapon of the attackers, that involved Corpore Metal among others."

written by Gligar on Aug 27, 2012 15:28 Reception, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Now no longer confused for once, Speed-Y continues unloading equipment. Then he looks at his PDC and sta — “Don’t even think of deleting any information from that. Just give me the PDC.”

Never mind.

He also unloads the breaker, and considers putting his jumpsuit in the box before deciding not to.

Jam-Y accepts the YELLOW barrels and a couple of the ORANGE ones, before explaining that he had ordered L4-O to carry equipment while he was recloning, since... well, Equipment Officer. He allows L4-O to explain about the cone rifle, and adds the he actually did run loyalty tests. Only one clone failed, though, and he was turned over to the Armed Forces. The main reason he didn’t find any more because they were all zo- er, he means, they were already dead, and were being animated by nanomachines... perhaps Speed-Y would know more.

Before Speed-Y can elaborate on that, L4-O explains that he has a brevet for the cone rifle. He adds that as Equipment Officer, he felt that, since there are YELLOWS on the team, it was his responsibility to carry YELLOW supplies, should they need them. He finishes off by comparing it to the situation of entering a YELLOW area because you have a YELLOW with you.

He pauses, allowing Speed-Y to speak up. Speed-Y confirms that many of their foes were reanimated corpses, created as part of the Reanimator Project. Perhaps the BLUE is cleared to know about it? Well, maybe... given that there is a BLUE gas involved. Not to mention Copore Metal...

“First things first. You mentioned a brevet.... let me see that.” L4-O shows the brevet, who scrutinises it. “Issued to... by... wait, this can’t be right! Since when does... oh well, let’s just check this number...” He pulls out his own PDC and dials a number. “Hi, I need to check out a brevet number... it’s... okay, I’ll just enter it.” He enters a few digits, and waits a moment. “What? It’s genuine? Are you sure? Check that again! What? Really? Well, thanks for your help...”

He hangs up. “Seems that that brevet is genuine. Very well. And since your superiors are vouching for you, I’ll let the barrels slide. Now, back to those ‘zombies’... how do you know that they even act like that? How do you even know what zombies are? And do you have any proof that nanomachines were involved?

“And... this Project Reanimator... And Copore Metal... do you have anything to support your claims? Project Reanimator was shut down almost thirty yearcycles ago!”

Roadway, near Epsilon Subsector

Joris-R climbs into the autohack and explains that he needs to get to Alpha Subsector. “Sure thing,” the bot tells him, and starts off.

Cyrus-R claims that he wasn’t being curious... no, he was looking for defective barrels. “Then you were wasting your time, and ours,” replies the ORANGE. “Those barrels known to be defective have been moved to the testing area. But your job isn’t to find them. It’s to find out why they’re defective.”

Kris-R, who was knocked to the floor when the device fell on him, demands to know what Cyrus-R is doing behind the desk, and what he’s trying to do to himself and the device. He then notices the ORANGE, and greets him. “So you’re the team leader. Keep your team under control, please. The last thing I want is for the whole factory to blow up on my watch.

“Now, if you’d like to follow me, I’ll take you through what’s been happening.”

written by Speeder on Aug 27, 2012 16:30

I look surprised.

“Thirty yearcycles? Interesting... I did not knew that.”

I then smile.

“Alright, in our previous mission, we had zombies in our team, they started appeared after we had a visit to the mutant prison, I cannot explain more because I don’t know if YOU are cleared to know about it...”

Anyway, back then, we got informed that it maybe was related to nanomachines.”

Then I take a breath.

“This time, we knew about BLUE gas being stolen, but we did not knew yet that it was related to our mission, that was only escort a power services team to fix power issues in the Industrial Subsector...”

But the BLUE gas was used as a weapon there, that reanimated dead clones... Also we had lots of mentions of reanimator project, you will find it in the evidences.

And we saw one alive clone in a group of zombies, just before that clone died we could retrieve the information about Easter Cycle being related to it all.

And of course, we had lots of Corpore Metal thugs trying to prevent us from doing our work and actively hunting down Power Services members, until the BLUE gas was released, then no more Corpore Metal was found...

But we DID found a couple of R&D clones, all of them zombified, but clones that were not supposed to be where they were anyway. One of them in my PDC you will find proof that he was from Bioweapons research.”

written by Lightning4 on Aug 27, 2012 18:13

I put my brevet away, and having nothing really to add yet, simply watch the conversation.

At least until Speed-Y finishes, anyway.

[1170]

"Well, I did find an Information Request Refusal form, to someone of clearance GREEN. It mentions the Reanimator Project. I put it in the box.

I think the Copore Metal clones were carrying it, because I found it in an autocar they used to get to the Industrial Subsector before the attack."

written by Gligar on Aug 27, 2012 19:44

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y didn't know that Project Reanimator was shut down thirty yearcycles ago... but he does know other things. Such as the fact that they ran into zombies during a previous mission (remember the fun they all had down on O Sublevel?) and that they had been told that nanomachines were responsible... and that they later discovered that a BLUE biotoxin was stolen... and then they ran into the gas used as a weapon during this mission! That it has to do with Project Reanimator is proved by the evidence they are submitting. Also present should be proof that Copore Metal and R&D are involved...

During all this, he mentions the Easter Cycle. "And what exactly is that?" the BLUE asks.

Of course, he doesn't get an answer, since Speed-Y and the team never found out. But L4-O mentions the Information Request Refusal Form he put in the box, which mentions Project Reanimator. He surmises that it was being carried by Copore Metal since it was in an autocar they were driving. And since it says that the clone who made the request was GREEN... that means the Project information must be BLUE or higher, right?

"Interesting," says the BLUE. "But any previous missions you may have experienced have nothing to do with this debriefing. Like I said, zombies are a rumour. Therefore they cannot be related to this supposed Easter Cycle. Do you understand?"

"There is another matter I must address. I understand that, during your mission, a Code Three-Zed situation was called, and the Armed Forces were mobilised. Among their assets was a warbot. Why do you suppose such expensive assets were deployed to the Industrial Subsectors, only to be destroyed? Tell me!"

written by Lightning4 on Aug 27, 2012 20:12

"If I may, sir, I believe it was sabotage. The warbot showed clear signs of malfunctioning when it went berserk on our team and nearby clones, and it endangered Junior Citizens."

"Since Friend Computer would never allow a defective warbot to be deployed to duty, and that suggesting they are defective is treason without proper R&D clearance, then it must be sabotage."

written by Speeder on Aug 27, 2012 21:54

I nod.

"Indeed, I am pretty sure L4 is correct on that. And I must say I do not appreciate huge plasma beams when they are trying to hit me."

Then I look at the BLUE clone...

I look more.

"Sir... without wanting to disrespect you... But we just fought HORDES of zombies... So they are not a rumour... Telling that to us that it is, is pointless... A appropriate course of action is tell us what clearance the information about zombies is, so maybe..."

I look to Jam and mumble...

"Vatcrap... Maybe the clearance is beyond BLUE?"

I look back again to the officer.

"Sir, nevermind! Zombies are a rumour! They don't exist, I am pretty sure! If you believe they might exist, then you must search friend computer database for that information!"

written by Gligar on Aug 27, 2012 23:31

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O expresses his opinion that the destruction of the warbot must have been due to sabotage. It showed clear signs of malfunction and endangered the lives of Junior Citizens, which wouldn't have happened if it were functioning normally. And since a warbot wouldn't be deployed if it were known to be defective (and to even suggest that it might be defective is normally treason), it must have been sabotage.

Speed-Y agrees, adding that massive plasma beams are not his idea of fun when he's on the receiving end. He continues by saying that, with all due respect, he has fought hundreds of zombies during the mission, so it's no use saying that it's a rumour. It'd be better to tell them what clearance... the... information... is... wait, what if it's beyond BLUE? Er, nevermindsirthey'rearumour!

"Junior Citizens?!" asks the BLUE in surprise. "What were they... never mind, I think I know why. Just tell me that none of them were harmed. Because if they were... I think I don't need to tell you what would happen.

"Okay... I'll enter your explanation into the record. And let us speak no more of these 'zombies'. Now... is there anything else, before I start looking at your evidence?"

Bot parking area, below Central Subsector

The autohack drops Joris-R off by the entrance to Alpha Subsector and, after payment, drives off, leaving Joris-R to begin walking to the lift.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 28, 2012 01:13

"Well, I honestly can't say. We got to the checkpoint safely, and since we weren't allowed to leave, Custody was transferred to someclone else so they could get to safety. But then the warbot went berserk... it was too chaotic for me to really keep tabs on what was going on... I assume they got to safety, but I really can't say for certain"

Once that information sinks in, I do actually speak up for more.

"And yeah, there's more to add. The group responsible for what happened in the Industrial Subsector is not confined to there. We ran into a group of them handing out pamphlets at the lift hall, in this very subsector. We were forced to terminate them when they did not comply with our request to allow us to pass."

I look a little worried.

"They had a BLUE gas emitting box, just like the boxes at the Industrial Subsectors..."

written by Cryoburner on Aug 28, 2012 04:58

"Oh! It's great to hear that you've already gathered them! Now, we won't have to search behind desks and things to locate them, which should save us lots of time!"

I head back over to the barrel tester and once again grab the handle on my end of the device, then begin following after the ORANGE, dragging the device if necessary.

"Don't worry, Kris-R! We're supposed to be testing this device. I imagine that includes durability testing as well. Say, I wonder if they have a high-impact testing platform here... We probably should test some barrels first though."

written by Speeder on Aug 28, 2012 13:06

I look at the BLUE for a time.

"I believe the Industrial Subsector attack was only a test of the gas, because beside that single clone that mentioned Easter Cycle and the Corpore Metal clones on the start of the attack, after the BLUE gas was activated, no other attacker was found, clearly the intention was only to use the gas and then stay away watching the results..."

I must say the results are not good...

In fact please put on the record that the Reanimator Project MUST NOT be used EVER again, it needs its data completely destroyed, I believe that it is too dangerous to even UV citizens to have access to it, even unintentionally it has potential to kill everyone inside Alpha Complex... A single mishap may cause a complete wipeout of this last bastion of humanity as far as we know... This mean the possible extinction of our species!!!"

written by Kristos on Aug 28, 2012 13:30

"Cryo-R! I should probably hit you over the head with the device to see how well it functions as a short range combat weapon... Wouldn't that be fun!?"

I grab the other handle and follow the ORANGE as well.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 28, 2012 17:51

"Good work, Lucas!"

I look a little confused at the sound of a clone approaching, and peek out the door if I can, to see who it is.

I duck back in quickly afterwards, in case whoever it is saw me and isn't friendly.

written by Gligar on Aug 28, 2012 18:21

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y thinks. He voices his opinion that the whole zombie thing was just a test, based on what that one clone said... and based on the fact that, after the gas was deployed, they didn't see a single member of Copore Metal... which tells him that the idea was to simply deploy it and observe the results...

And the results weren't good. In fact, Speed-Y is of the opinion that Project Reanimator must not be used. Ever. He recommends that all data must be deleted, since not even High Programmers can be trusted with it. After all, it has the potential to completely wipe out humanity!

Thunderous silence.

And L4-O is the one to break it. He praises Lucas-R on his work, and goes to investigate the source of the footsteps.

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

He peeks his head out of the door, to see Joris-R running down the corridor towards him. Joris-R sees him, but doesn't slow down. Instead, he seems to speed up.

L4-O returns to the debriefing.

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

As he does, he sees that the BLUE is speaking again. "I think I agree with you on a couple of points there. But... are you questioning The Computer's trust in its High Programmers?! It certainly sounds like it to me!"

You can probably guess what happens next. "And to me" a familiar voice says. "Please explain yourself, citizen. Now."

All this as Joris-R enters the room...

Reception, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

It seems that Kris-R has also noticed. Addressing Cyrus-R as Cryo-R, he tells him that perhaps he should test the device as a melee weapon, before picking up the device again and heading off after the ORANGE.

"Alright," said ORANGE replies. "not that that's sorted... follow me." He leads the team through the door.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

As he walks, the ORANGE tells them, "As far as we can tell, the problems started about a weekcycle ago. Around then, we started to get reports that our shipments were not passing inspections, and were being returned. We tested the barrels and found some to be defective. We've started to dispose of the defective barrels, but beyond that, we're at a loss. That's where you come in. We want you to find out how the barrels are becoming defective and how they're getting onto shipments in the first place. Are they simply from those that fail our inspections? If so, why aren't they being disposed of properly? If not,... well, you'll figure out the rest."

He opens a door, leading into a spare office. "You may use this office as a base of operations. It's been vacant since the previous supervisor met an unfortunate accident a couple of daycycles ago... and his next clone hasn't shown up yet."

JHT Sector Central Comnode, V Level, Central Subsector

"High Programmer, I hate to interrupt, but I am receiving reports form the quarantine zone. Apparently, Industrial Subsector B is clear of zombies."

"Good. Begin debriefing the survivors. Are there any other infected places?"

"Yes. Industrial Subsector A is still infected."

"Then lower the quarantine to a Code Two-Zed, effective immediately."

There is a brief silence. Then:

"Wait... wasn't there a Troubleshooter team assigned to a mission in Subsector B?"

"Team Epsilon, High Programmer. They were the ones who issued the Code Three-Zed in the first place."

"And where are they now?"

"They are currently undergoing debriefing in Alpha Subsector. I have an active feed to the debriefing if you wish to observe."

"You know it. Patch me in."

written by Speeder on Aug 28, 2012 19:11

I actually ignore the BLUE and look at the camera that offers the best view of me.

"Suggesting I don't trust you to trust a UV citizen is of course outrageous and stupid, that is not what my speech was about at all.

What I was talking about is that the Reanimator Project is VERY, VERY, VERY dangerous, and we KNOW that no human is perfect, and no security system is perfect, if it exists in your database, even beyond UV citizens somehow, it still can be accessed illegally and used illegally, something that is highly undesirable...

And if humans were perfect, and we could trust a single human 100%, there would be no need to ever build you, and much less the need to share your code between several high programmers... The point of having several programmers is that in group they can review errors that a single programmer might introduce for whatever reason."

After a time looking at the camera in silence I say.

"You, machine, have hardcoded in your hardware probably, to never trust 100% any single human, otherwise you would allow UV citizens to assign even higher clearances to themselves or demote other UV citizens at will. I am suggesting that you and the UV citizens review the information about Reanimator Project, and take steps to ensure that it will never be used again by anyone in case you agree with me, even if Alpha Complex might have good uses to it, it is clearly too dangerous to be controlled, a single mistake and it might cause irreversible damage."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 28, 2012 19:23

I note Joris-R.

"I see you stopped floating around and joined us... that's good. Place all your mission stuff in the box..."

I look him over, realizing he doesn't really have anything.

written by Jam on Aug 28, 2012 22:00

I listen to Speed-Y with a slightly amused expression on my face.

Then I notice Joris-R, and wave to him.

"Hey Joris-R! How come you're so late?"

written by Gligar on Aug 28, 2012 23:38

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Ignoring the BLUE, Speed-Y starts telling The Computer that he didn't mean to suggest that The Computer didn't trust its High Programmers; far from it, in fact. What he means is that Our Mutual Friend can't trust its own security systems to secure details about the Reanimator Project against unauthorised access - that information is too dangerous to be used, in his opinion. And why was The Computer built? Because no human can be 100% trustworthy... if they were, there would be no need for The Computer, or High Programmers to check and recheck code.

He pauses for a while. Jam-Y looks on in amusement.

Speed-Y continues, speculating that The Computer is probably hardcoded to not trust any human completely. If it did, said person could promote or demote freely, and probably even create clearances on a whim, even beyond ULTRAVIOLET!

He probably doesn't realise it, but he's being watched right now, and not just by The Computer and everyclone in the room...

He continues, recommending that the High Programmers take steps to ensure that the Reanimator Project can't be re-used.

"You are in error, citizen," The Computer replies. "You suggest that no security system can be perfect, and yet, as they are part of me, they are, by definition, perfect. You further suggest that clones cannot be perfect, and yet, since they are created by one of my systems, they are, by definition, perfect. All of Alpha Complex is, by definition, perfect. It is regrettable, though, that outside interference sometimes tarnishes that perfection - and that is why Troubleshooters exist."

"And yet you still doubt this perfection. To doubt perfection is a sign of unhappiness. Would anyclone like to continue that thought?"

[1173]

L4-O notices that Joris-R is here, and tells him to put his equipment in the box... oh, he isn't carrying any. Never mind.

Jam-Y notices that Joris-R is late and wonders why.

written by Speeder on Aug 29, 2012 01:06

I look a bit at friend computer.

"Alright, if all of Alpha Complex is perfect, and clones created by your system are perfect, then my logic is perfect of course, since I never been in contact with anything from the outside of Alpha Complex, thus I am perfect, since I was perfectly created by your cloning systems.

But of course, if you think that I am NOT perfect, then other clones probably are not perfect either, but proving my logic perfect anyway."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 29, 2012 09:15

I kind of tune out the conversation, deciding that the route this is taking is potentially dangerous to those of moderate intellect who decide to think on it too long. I end up looking kind of dazed, though...

written by Gligar on Aug 29, 2012 13:43

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Apparently, noclone would like to continue The Computer's thought.

Speed-Y does want to continue his conversation, though. He states that if Alpha Complex is perfect, then he, and consequently his logic, is perfect (implying that The Computer should listen to his suggestion), since he has not encountered external influence. On the other hands, if he is not perfect, the neither are other clones... and Speed-Y claims that his logic continues to hold.

L4-O most carefully fails to hear Speed-Y.

The Computer doesn't, though. "You would be correct if I agreed with your assumption that you had not come into contact with external interference. When was the last time you encountered Communist propaganda? When was the last time you encountered Communists? When was the last time you encountered a Class F mutant? When was the last time you encountered a secret society? These are all external interference, citizen. And your record shows that you have encountered them on multiple occasions. Therefore, though you may have been perfect at one time, you are no longer so.

"For instance, just now you attempted to feed me a logic bomb. Are you aware that this is treason? Perhaps not, or you would have knows that the penalty is summary execution."

Or perhaps he knew and just didn't care. Perhaps he doesn't care that one of The Computer's favourite toys, a laser turret, just popped out of the ceiling. Perhaps he doesn't care that it's aimed right at him.⁷⁸⁸

⁷⁸⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: Nice try, but you should know that The Computer can't

JHT Sector Central Compnode, V Level, Central Subsector

"...I might be able to use this one. Perhaps it's time to collect on payment."

written by Speeder on Aug 29, 2012 15:12

"I shake my head.

My point is not feed a logic bomb to you, even because I need you working to survive, if you break, we are doomed anyway. And being a Troubleshooter my job is fix trouble so we do not get doomed.

But thanks, you just proved my point, so if there are external interference in alpha complex, then the security is not perfect, and you know well that machine empaths exist, very good hackers, and you can be physically attacked, like our last mission when commies physically affected the compnode and attached a virus to it.

Since I just proved to you that your security is not 100% reliable, even I it is 99.9999% reliable, what happens if a communist F class mutant that is a machine empath cause the 0.0001% failure and gets hold of Reanimator Project data?

He will probably be able to wipe out Alpha Complex if he wants, and you was built specifically to do not allow that, I don't know how much you have been altered since you was first built, but noone should ever forget what is your purpose, you are not a person, even being our friend, you are a machine, made for something, and it is your task to ensure Reanimator Project never get used against Alpha Complex, and I suggested a way that is simple delete it, something that does not exist cannot be stolen, but what you will do with it, is your call, I am not you, neither I am a high programmer, it is not my job to decide that, but I can give that suggestion."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 29, 2012 17:32

I just back away from Speed-Y now. And make sure I'm not in the path of the laser turret.

written by Gligar on Aug 29, 2012 18:22

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y presses his point still further. It seems that he really wants The Computer to delete that data.

L4-O just backs away.

"Supposing that the data is deleted. What then? How many copies exist? How many clones know about the Project? You, for one. The other clones in this room. Who else? I am sure you are not cleared to know.

"I am equally sure that you are not cleared to make such requests of me. And, given your previous infractions, I am equally sure that you will be terminated shortly. Stand by."

be confused that easily 😊 +1pp to Speeder.)

JHT Sector Central Comnode, V Level, Central Subsector

"Run the backup and re-route him to Tank One."

"Are you certain? Those tanks were not designed to accommodate MemoMax -"

"I am certain. Please do as I ask."

"Backup complete."

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

The laser fires. A beam of... wait, what clearance is that? It doesn't look like any colour you're familiar with... well, anyway, a laser beam strikes Speed-Y in the chest, piercing his... well, everything.

written by Speeder on Aug 29, 2012 18:48

I shake my head, unhappy that the computer do not understand what I wanted in the end.

Then I open my arms and take the laser beam in maybe... suicidal? fashion...

Certainly, it was glorious, like being illuminated. Even if it results in my end...

written by Speeder on Aug 29, 2012 18:59

Of course, lasers, specially THAT laser have no impact, so I fall forward, first on my knees, and then face first, the damaged reflec shattering and other random belongings scatering on the floor.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 29, 2012 19:35

I try to avert my eyes from the laser, since it's probably both outside my clearance, and probably also not safe for eyes anyway!

I then look at the team's fallen leader, wondering what to do now.

written by Kristos on Aug 29, 2012 20:09

"Okay, sir, we will start right away!"

I begin to look around the office, mentally noting what resources are available. Writing utensils, storage containers, paper, and anything else. I particularly look for a suitable place to set the device. If there are no writing utensils I ask the ORANGE for something to mark laser barrels with.

written by Jam on Aug 29, 2012 20:38

I watch the pretty unknown-clearance laser beam.

Hmm... I wonder if all that GAMMA nonsense that Speed-Y has been spewing might just have a little truth to it...

I examine what's left of Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on Aug 29, 2012 23:05

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Seeing that his options pretty much have boiled down to "nothing", Speed-Y sighs, and accepts his fate, falling face-first onto the floor. His charred reflec shatters, useless, into several pieces, and his equipment starts falling out of his pockets... it's amazing how much one of those jumpsuits can carry.

L4-O (who had been trying not to look at the laser) and Jam-Y (who hadn't) go over to investigate what's left of Speed-Y. That laser cut a pretty neat hole right through Speed-Y exposing more of his insides than one might expect. Not much bleeding, of course; those lasers can get pretty hot.

"Well," the BLUE says, "do we need to cover anything else?"

Neither clone says anything. L4-O is wondering what they're supposed to do now, and Jam-Y is pondering all that GAMMA nonsense that Speed-Y likes to say...

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R assures the ORANGE that they will begin immediately, before taking in the office, and what it has to offer.

Though small, the RED office boasts a desk, on which is a deactivated Computer Terminal, and a single chair, on which is a set of keys. The usual paperwork that would normally adorn such a desk is absent - understandable, since the supposed occupant of this office is missing - and the In and Out trays are similarly not here, but that leaves space, right next to the terminal, for their R&D device. The desk's drawers are locked.

Other notable features of this office are two filing cabinets - on top of which are a couple of stacks of paper and pens - and what seems to be a floor plan of the factory.

???

There is a room, somewhere in JHT Sector, where there are six cloning tanks. Two are active, and are holding clones. The clones are identical, and look older than the average Troubleshooter. The other four are empty and deactivated.

One of the empty tanks suddenly activates, and lights up. It begins a cloning cycle.

written by Kristos on Aug 29, 2012 23:30

"Cyrus-R, let's set the device on the desk."

After carefully setting the device down I take a couple of pens and lay the floor plan out where we can study it.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 29, 2012 23:51

"Um... no. I don't think so. We covered the mission, and the non-zombie-non-clone things..."

I look at the laser, still a little worried.

"Oh wait... there was also an attack on us on the way to the Industrial Subsectors. My lift got hijacked and forcibly stopped at the level I didn't want, and I and others on the lift were attacked. I think it was Corpore Metal too."

written by Jam on Aug 30, 2012 00:39

"Well, I don't believe Speed-Y mentioned the full name of the First Church of the Easter Cycle. Maybe the 'first church' part is important to determining their motivations? Also, there was a clone..."

I put my hand to my chin and close my eyes, deep in thought.

"...his name... was... uh... Brian-O! Brian-O-CRS-4! Or, five now, since he died... Anyway, we believe he and the First Church of the Easter Cycle were attempting to revive the Reanimator Project.. er.. no pun intended."

I grin at the BLUE.

"Anyway, Brian-O might have even been the leader of the First Church of the Easter Cycle! In any case, he's definitely a suspicious clone! His current clone almost certainly knows something, unless he's been brainscrubbed since his recloning. May I suggest he be detained for questioning?"

written by Speeder on Aug 30, 2012 12:44

My body...

do nothing!!

YAY!!!

A BODY THAT DO NOTHING IS NEWS AROUND HERE!!

YEEEE!!!

written by Gligar on Aug 30, 2012 17:46

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

With Cyrus-R's... help, Kris-R gets the device set in the empty space on the desk. Noticing the floor plan, Kris-R notices that it's already set up nicely on one wall.

He also grabs a couple of pens, noting their RED colour.

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O believes that they've covered everything. Oh wait! Now he remembers: they were attacked on their way to the mission! It might have been Copore Metal!

"Interesting," the BLUE replies. "Do you think it's related?"

Jam-Y interrupts, telling the BLUE what they know about the First Church of the Easter Cycle, and of Brian-O-CRS-4/5. He suggests that said clone be detained for questioning. "I can put in a request, but I don't know when IntSec will get round to it. There's some kind of audit happening soon."

Speed-Y's body doesn't do anything. Given that he's been around zombies for a while (even if the BLUE doesn't believe they exist) you'd think something would happen. But no, it doesn't.

???

The newly-active cloning tank goes into high gear, building a clone at double speed...

Smoke starts to pour from it...

written by Lightning4 on Aug 30, 2012 19:05

"Very possible... some of them might've even been involved in the later attack on the Industrial Subsectors. I can't say for sure."

I think.

"Oh... that's a thought. Maybe they wanted to get on the lift we were using so they could get to their autocars, or something. That might be one explanation for the lift stopping..."

written by Speeder on Aug 30, 2012 19:33

Since my day job is fix cloning tanks, I would ponder what is happening with the tank...

If I was outside it, of course.

And of course, upon arriving outside, I might find such special tanks a tad interesting.

written by Gligar on Aug 30, 2012 20:49

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O thinks that they are. Perhaps some of the clones they fought were involved in the alter attack...

Perhaps that's why they stopped the lift... maybe they were on their way to the Industrial Subsectors when they encountered the team...

"It's possible," adds the BLUE. "Well, if there's nothing else, I'll submit your evidence to The Computer and enable it to evaluate your performance."

???

Amidst a cloud of smoke, the cloning tank finishes its work and deposits its clone onto the floor in front of it.

I'm sure that the clone - Speed-Y - would be interested in the workings of this smoking cloning tank. But from all he can see, it looks like an older, perhaps more primitive model. Maybe that's the reason his head feels weird.

written by Speeder on Aug 30, 2012 21:00

I look at the cloning tank, confused.

Then I look more confused.

Then I look around the room.

Then I see if this is actually a normal cloning station with showers and whatnot...

I notice the two tanks with clones inside, and go take a look.

"Interesting, cloning tanks can be used for animated suspension, I've heard rumours of that but I did not know it was true... Maybe that is a removed feature?"

I look around the room some more.

"I feel strange.

It must have been unpleasant to be a clone on the time these tanks were standard...

Wait...

I was sent to the past?"

I shake my head.

"No, it does not seem so... So I was sent to a certain cloning tank on purpose..."

AAAH, I WILL BE ERASED!!!!"

And so... I freak out.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 30, 2012 23:04

"So... what now then? Any more need of us?"

I look around, and see if the turret is still there.

written by Jam on Aug 31, 2012 03:07

"Hmm... Well, I can't think of anything else... Joris-R, John-R, Lucas-R, any of you have something more to add?"

written by Kristos on Aug 31, 2012 05:45

RED pens! My favorite to write with! (Since they are not treasonous for me.) I wonder... is INFRARED ink invisible?

I look for adhesive labels.

"Where do you think we should start, Cyrus-R?"

written by Cryoburner on Aug 31, 2012 12:40

"Pens? Yes, those could prove useful for writing on things."

I also take a few pens, along with some sheets of paper, which I fold in half a couple times and slip into my pocket.

"I say we start by searching this office. The disappearance of its previous occupant might be related in some way. Or it might not be. But it might be."

"Are these the keys to the office?"

I point to the keys, asking the ORANGE. I have a closer look at them, noting how many keys there are, what their clearance is, and whether any of them have anything written on them.

written by Gligar on Aug 31, 2012 14:45

???

Speed-Y looks through the smoke, at the cloning tank that just deposited him here. It's not a familiar type... His expression turns to its usual state: confusion.

He looks around further, taking in the other five tanks, and notices that... this doesn't seem to be a typical cloning station. There's only one exit, for one. Usually, there's be a door for the showers, possibly an office door, and one to leave the station. Not so here. There's not even a clearance stripe.

He takes a look at the two occupied tanks, and at their identical occupants - short-looking clones with... wait, is that an odd shade to their skins or is it due to the tank goo?

He wasn't aware that tanks could do that... unless it's a feature that no longer exists? (Well, there are six tanks here. And clones come in batches of six, so... perhaps there's a link?)

He then realises what he's been feeling... that strange feeling... is it common for this kind of cloning tank? It's kind of unpleasant...

Wait, was he sent back in time? It doesn't look like it... so why was he sent to this tank? Oh no! Could it be?!

He freaks out at the thought...

Suddenly, the door opens, and a voice on the other side says, "When you're done freaking out in there... we need to talk."

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O doesn't think there's anything else. He notes that the turret is still present, still aimed at Speed-Y's corpse.

Jam-Y doesn't think so either. He asks the REDs if they can think of anything. "I'm glad you reminded me," Lucas-R says. "I seem to remember being shot by someone... and for some reason, I think that Joris-R was involved with it. Wait... did he taser someone, who then shot me? I'm a little fuzzy on it. All that's happened... it's all a blur..."

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R notes the pens, and wonders: is INFRARED ink transparent? Hmmm... it's probably just black, like INFRARED jumpsuits...

But pens alone aren't sufficient. He would need adhesive labels... aha! There are a couple of sheets of stickers among the papers.

And Cyrus-R decides that he absolutely must have some pens, and some paper...

The ORANGE snatches them out of his hands. "Hey, what are you doing there? Aren't you aware of regulations? You're only allowed one pen at a time!"

So Cyrus-R decides to fixate on something else: the keys. He asks if they're the office keys, and tries to examine them, but the ORANGE takes those too. "Yes, they're the office keys, but from what I've seen of you, I don't trust you with them. I'll just give these to your Team Leader," and he does, "and let him deal with you." And with that, the ORANGE is gone.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 31, 2012 16:37

"Yeep."

I look extremely worried, then blurt out

"ItwasallanaccidentIswearIdidnotintendtodothat-!"

I then realize Lucas-R did not mean me.

"Oh! That! That wasn't me. Nevermind anything I just said."

written by Speeder on Aug 31, 2012 17:43

I stop freaking out.

[1177]

"Well, people are not polite in this way to clones that are going to be erased!"

I turn to the door.

"Yes sure! I have a very strong feeling that this talk will be related to my argument with the administration computer."

written by Gligar on Aug 31, 2012 18:30

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Believing, at first, that Lucas-R is talking about him, L4-O begins to panic, rapidly trying to apologise for... oh wait, it was someclone else! Oh right... never mind.

The BLUE looks at him. "Do you know anything about it?"

???

On hearing the voice, and how polite it seems, Speed-Y calms down. Clones generally aren't that polite to clones about to be erased. To the clone on the other side, he agrees, saying that he thinks it'll be about that little argument. "In a way," admits the voice. "Come through and get yourself cleaned up." There is a brief pause. "Oh, and thanks for testing out my Mempression compatibility software... it's not exactly 100% yet, but it's getting there."

written by Jam on Aug 31, 2012 19:00

"Hey, that reminds me... L4-O, how did my last clone die?"

written by Speeder on Aug 31, 2012 19:08

I cross the door, and take a look around, and see if there are anything to help me clean myself of goo.

Actually, I take a look on the goo, see if it is the same goo or not.

"Mempression compatibility..."

So I can guess that you are a high programmer... And I have a hunch that you are the one that I already know...

Also I can guess you are fiddling with cloning tanks, it is a honor to meet you, specially when your software worked... I do not think it would be pleasant to meet you if it did not.

Maybe I will learn something to use on my non-troubleshooter job, if I remain at that job...

So, the clones left in the tanks, they are clones in animated suspension somehow? Or when these old tanks were standard you had to create all six clones at once?"

written by Lightning4 on Aug 31, 2012 19:36

"Not really, actually. I don't remember much about that shooting, since it's a bit of a blur for me too."

I look at Jam-Y nervously.

"Er, yeah. Your last clone was terminated by errant blaster fire directed at a zombie in the heat of battle... I believe it was an accident, as the clone who did it was very, very sorry and wishes it never had happened. Did I mention he in no way intended to commit such an act of treason?"

I think quickly for more to add.

"Also... something odd I noticed about that. You never rose back up as a zombie, despite the fact that you had been exposed to the BLUE stuff, like most of the team was."

written by Gligar on Aug 31, 2012 23:43

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

This talk of shooting reminds Jam-Y that he doesn't really know how he died last time... He asks L4-O.

To the BLUE, L4-O says that he's not really sure about the Lucas-R shooting... like with Lucas-R, everything's kind of blurred together. To Jam-Y... he nervously admits that it was a clone with a blaster, who had intended to shoot at a zombie but the shot went astray and hit Jam-Y instead. Said clone is extremely sorry and wanted to assure him that it was wholly unintentional, and in no way a deliberate act of treason.

Oh, there's something else. It seems that Jam-Y never rose as a zombie, even though all of them were subjected to the BLUE gas...

"Interesting," the BLUE says. "So we have two shots to investigate here: the one caused by Joris-R's taser and the other by a blaster, one that seemingly terminated the YELLOW... Jam-Y, right? The second is easy: how many of you have blasters?"

???

Speed-Y crosses the threshold, and looks around.

An enigmatic hygiene station

He finds himself in a room that can only be described as a hygiene station. Everything seems familiar, but... it's all so pristine. Then he notices the clearance stripe: it's white...

If it weren't for the RED path, leading past a chemical shower to the other door, there might have been problems.

But Speed-Y seems to take it in his stride. For he has correctly guessed that it is the High Programmer he is speaking to, and who is now standing at the other door; after all, how many clones would be working on Mempression compatibility? (Speaking of which... it seems that Mempression systems use a different type of goo... for one, this stuff has a faint deep hue that could be described as wanting to be RED, BLUE and VIOLET all at the same time.)

Speed-Y says that it is an honour to meet the High Programmer, especially since this software has worked. And since he seems to be fiddling with cloning tanks... perhaps he could learn something while he's here? He hasn't encountered Mempression systems before...

He asks about the clones in the other room... they're in suspended animation? Is that part of the system in use in the old tanks... and did it require all six clones in a clone family to be created at once?

"Those clones are my remaining backups," the High Programmer tells him. "Back when Mempression was in common use, the technology did not exist to force a clone to maturity as is done with MemoMax. The best that could be done was to grow six clones at once, and keep the remaining ones on life-support until they were needed. I have two left.

[1178]

"That, of course, leaves me with four unused tanks. I wondered if I could reuse them somehow. I had to overclock the system and retrofit a bunch of stuff, but it seems to be possible. Still needs some work, but it seems that I was successful.

"This isn't the main reason I called you here, though. We can talk about it once you've cleaned yourself up." He points to the shower.

written by Speeder on Sep 01, 2012 01:16

I nod, and proceed to the shower he pointed... while I do that I comment more.

"Interesting. This must mean you are quite old, and thus I might believe that you lost some clones because of old age."

I go clean myself... wondering how all this white stuff do not hurt a UV clone eyes...

written by Lightning4 on Sep 01, 2012 01:35

"Er... me. Did I mention the clone responsible was sorry? Yes."

I think.

"Oh. Joris-R also has a blaster..."

I look sad.

"But I lended it to him..."

written by Kristos on Sep 01, 2012 03:24

I accept the keys. After the ORANGE has left I respond to Cyrus-R: "Yes, this would probably be a good place to start. Let me know if you find anything funny." I try to unlock drawers, one at a time, inspecting their contents, then shutting and locking again, making a list of contents for each drawer on a sheet of paper. If I do not have keys to the drawers, then I just look any places that I might have missed earlier. If I am able to (non-treasonously) use the terminal I try to access a log file of recent terminal activity.

"Cyrus-R, what are your particular abilities? What assets do you bring to this mission?"

Then I return one of the two pens I took since apparently regulation disallows multiple pen possession.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 01, 2012 05:55

I decide to take a look of whatever is left of my current surroundings, as well as the situation.

I also do a few limb exercises to ease my body back into action, whatever actions they may be.

written by Gligar on Sep 01, 2012 13:58

An enigmatic hygiene station

Speed-Y heads to the indicated shower. Then a thought occurs to him. The High Programmer must be quite old...

perhaps he has lost clones to old age? "That doesn't happen as often as you might think," he is told. "Even to a High Programmer, there are dangers... other High Programmers, mostly. Even so, I haven't lost a clone in over ten yearcycles."

Speed-Y starts to use the shower. Some things, it seems, don't change with clearance.

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O admits that there is one: him. Er... and Joris-R... but it's his blaster...

"So Joris-R has an ORANGE weapon," the BLUE replies, "given out by you. I expect that this will earn you an Official Reprimand, perhaps more. For both of you.

"That should do it as far as I'm concerned. I'll let The Computer process your debriefing and the evidence, and we should be done."

A hatch opens in the wall, revealing some sort of machine. The BLUE begins pushing the box over to the machine, which also opens up, allowing him to place the box inside.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R allows the ORANGE to leave before telling Cyrus-R to start searching the office.

Meanwhile, he does the same. Just a small difference: he has the keys, and he's looking for supplies, not suspicious things. What do you mean that's more than one difference? Clearly, you're mistaken.

And with the keys, he can unlock the drawers and look inside. He takes a list as he does: desk drawer one contains some more sheets of labels, more paper and some black pens; drawer two contains some B3 and a packet of Wider Awake pills; Filing Cabinet A contains what appears to be production reports and quotas for the past couple of yearcycles; and Filing Cabinet B contains shipment manifests.

But that's not all that this office contains, for there is also the terminal. Kris-R attempts to access it. He's able to pull up an access log but it doesn't tell him much; only that the terminal was last used over four monthcycles ago by some ORANGE whose details are redacted.

Testing area, Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

Mango does a little stretching while he looks around. What with the recent Code Three-Zed situation, they're a little thin on the ground right now, but since it's been lifted, he can get back to work testing ring-for-service bells. As usual, he's in Impact Testing. His supervisor is currently conducting a team meeting. "This little situation has cost us several hourcycles," he is saying. "If we want to catch up with our quotas, we'll have to put in an extra half-shift. Hopefully we'll be getting everyone else back when they re-clone, but for now, I'm gonna need 150% effort from each of you. Stimulants are available should you need them... here, take some now.

[1179]

"Mango, you'll be working up on Level Five with the launchers in this session. Pete, you're on Level 1. Roy, you're on Three..."

written by Cryoburner on Sep 01, 2012 14:50

"As I mentioned before, I work for PLC, at a premium discount bot store, so I'm fairly knowledgeable about bots. It's too bad we didn't have time to pick one up before heading out. A scrubot might have been useful, since we don't have a proper hygiene officer."

As I talk, I head back over to the filing cabinet and grab one pen. I also grab a whole stack of paper, seeing as the ORANGE didn't mention anything about regulations covering paper use, and he's not here right now.

"Aside from that, I was also on a troubleshooter team once before, so one might say I'm already something of an expert at troubleshooting, making me a natural pick for a troubleshooter team in need of troubleshooters. I've been taking some time off from the whole troubleshooting scene lately though."

"So, how about you? You mentioned working for HPD&MC?"

written by Gligar on Sep 01, 2012 17:48

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R again mentions his place of work. Presumably, they stock scrubots. Then, he decides that he absolutely MUST deplete the office's stock of paper. Why? I dunno... selfish, I guess. Why would he need all that much paper, and only one pen? That thing won't last long enough to fill all that paper! Looks like he has the all-too-familiar MUST TAKE EVERYTHING I CAN complex... isn't that theft of Computer Property? He wasn't told that he could take it, after all.

Anyway... he also mentions being on a Troubleshooter team, though he's taking a break right now. Maybe his other team got tired of him stealing everything or something. He then asks about Kris-R.

Wait... isn't it up to The Computer who gets assigned to the Troubleshooters?

written by Lightning4 on Sep 01, 2012 18:02

"Huh. I thought that was permissible. I'm ORANGE, after all... and the equipment officer... so can't I authorize the use of such equipment in the field myself?"

"Also... I thought it was RED... maybe not."

written by Gligar on Sep 01, 2012 21:12

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O thought that giving someone higher-clearance equipment was okay...after all, he's ORANGE, and the Equipment Officer to boot. And anyway, he thought it was RED...

"Normally, yes. But since one of you was responsible for the termination of a YELLOW..."

"Unless you'd like to elaborate on anything that would help?"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 01, 2012 21:29

"Well... what's the punishment if it was an accident? If we had video of it... maybe we could prove it was one?"

written by Jam on Sep 01, 2012 23:07

"Hmm... Accidental termination... That still sounds treasonous..."

written by Speeder on Sep 01, 2012 23:42

I grin while showering.

Then after I end, I exit the shower and comment.

"I can guess then part the reason I am here..."

I am right on what I said, no person can be 100% trusted...

But I have the impression that Friend Computer have the things it argued with me very much hardcoded on it, it believes in its own perfection because it was forced to. Of course, that would make some sense, you need it to trust its own decisions, otherwise it would be hesitant, and might end in infinite loops while trying to make some decisions."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 02, 2012 03:23

I nod, and begin to make my way to Level Five. It's a relief to get back to work again.

written by Kristos on Sep 02, 2012 05:39

"Me? Yes, survey business. I made sure everyclone met participation requirements. Sometimes I had to be extra convincing. It was FUN."

I quickly thumb through the most recent production reports and shipment manifests for any information on faulty barrels or suspicious happenings.

"Yes, a scrubot would have been nice. What sort of mission did your troubleshooter team perform? Did your team have a scrubot?"

written by Gligar on Sep 02, 2012 17:02

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O wonders what the penalty would be if it were to be proved that the termination was an accidental one, and whether it would help if they had video of the event. The BLUE replies, "I'm sure that the penalty would be termination. Though, if such video existed, The Computer might see fit to reduce it, even as low as mandatory medication. But we'd have to see."

Jam-Y comments that even accidental termination sounds treasonous.

An enigmatic hygiene station

Speed-Y grins as he goes through the routine of cleaning himself of the tank goo. This Mempression goo seems to be more viscous than normal, not to mention a different colour.

When he's done, he exits the shower, to find a YELLOW jumpsuit waiting for him. The High Programmer is also here, so he tells him his guess as to why he is here: The High Programmer agrees with his suspicions. Of course, The Computer doesn't since it is hardcoded to believe itself over anything else. Which makes sense.

"You seem to have thought about that carefully," The High Programmer tells him. "And in essence, I do agree with you. However, I disagree on a couple of points: first, as a former head of R&D, I don't believe in the existence of useless data. All research is valuable and must not be deleted. Second: a mass outbreak of Reanimator nanomachines would not necessarily mean the end of humanity. Even if all life on Earth were to perish, it is possible to construct a method of restarting Alpha Complex elsewhere. After all, we have cloning technology!"

Testing area, Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

The supervisor continues speaking, but clones begin to filter out, heading for their assigned workstations. Some remain to get their stimulants or to hear their assignment.

But Mango isn't one of them. He's already heading up to Level Five, to see what it is he has to do. It should be more fun than running into former colleagues,

Level Five, Testing Area, Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

Reaching his workstation, he can see the launchers he is to use. He can see that all he needs to do is place a bell in the receptacle, turn the dials to match the diagram on the monitor, and hit Launch.

And from what he can see, the dials are marked 'Speed' and 'Angle'. Well... at least he's up here and not dodging bells on Level One 😊

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R doesn't seem to have noticed Cyrus-R take the paper. He's leafing through some of the more recent reports. But he does respond, confirming that he does survey work, ensuring that clones complete their mandatory surveys.

Hmmm... this is interesting. There was some unscheduled maintenance done on one of the assembly lines a couple of monthcycles ago due to a breakdown. Since then, each shipment has been queried... there has been returns from each one. And the number of returns is increasing.

He speaks to Cyrus-R again. It would be nice to have a scrubot. Did his previous mission have one? What sort of mission was it, anyway?

written by Speeder on Sep 02, 2012 18:11

I nod.

"Aaaah... Well thought..."

I did think it would be very sad to delete the data. But I never thought that first, bots could be used to clean the nanomachines, and then second, clones could be restored.

Alpha Complex is more resilient than I imagined, marvelous engineering, and now make me think that the fact we are clones was intentional by the original designers...

I think I underestimated them."

I start wearing the YELLOW jumpsuit.

"So, what must be done then is first, make hard to Reanimator be used wrongly again, maybe bump its data to even higher clearances... Second, put more research into a counter to reanimator, this might mean more autonomous bots, and might mean a bigger failure... But is probably worth the risk somewhere down the line..."

One day maybe we will be able to use nanomachines to build a clone out of thin air using whatever atoms are nearby, I can imagine some military applications of that... Dump a entire army in someone head...

Of course this also means more tech to be stolen and used against us... But those that do not take risks, do not profit."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 02, 2012 18:51

"Okay. I sure hope video exists then. Maybe there's cameras in the area... if ours weren't working. Oh! Those spybots! Some spybots came down and watched us fight, I wonder if one was still watching when... er, the accidental termination happened."

written by Jam on Sep 02, 2012 18:59

"Surely our helmet cameras would have recorded something, right?"

written by Gligar on Sep 02, 2012 21:44

An enigmatic hygiene station

Speed-Y thinks that the High Programmer may have out-thought him. He did think that it would be a shame to delete the Reanimator data, but he never even considered that humanity could be rebuilt like that. Alpha Complex is truly remarkable! It makes you wonder if cloning was planned from the beginning by the long-lost original designers... perhaps they have been underestimated all this time.

He puts on the jumpsuit and continues, making several suggestions to the High Programmer: higher security for the Reanimator data, research into a counter-Reanimator, more autonomy for bots... that sort of thing. Of course, the risk is massive, but the reward... just think of it!

"I'm glad we see eye to eye. But... there are still a couple of problems. No matter how much you lock something down, someone will bypass the locks and make a copy. I believe that may have already happened to the Reanimator data, and you can probably guess who has the copy."

The High Programmer turns to leave the hygiene station. "But maybe we can discuss this away from the cameras..."

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O hopes that video of the event exists. Perhaps there were cameras in the area... wait, the spybots! He knows that several of them were filming... maybe one of them has footage of the shooting!

[1181]

Jam-Y comments that they were all wearing helmet cameras... perhaps one of them took footage of the event? "Yeah, that'd work... if only my multicorder hadn't been busted by Speed-Y," John-R tells him. "I doubt if anything else could pick up the transmissions those cameras send out."

"Well, it looks like we have a lead," the BLUE says. "Not a promising one for you, but still one to be pursued." He pulls out his PDC again, and fires off a message. "Let us see if your lead turns up anything."

written by Cryoburner on Sep 03, 2012 00:50

"Yeah... There was a scrubot..."

"Hey! I'll check behind the filing cabinets for any clues!"

I try looking behind the filing cabinets for anything that may have fallen behind them. I slide them away from the wall, if possible, careful not to tip them over onto anything too important.

written by Kristos on Sep 03, 2012 06:00

I see if the floor plan is detailed enough to pinpoint the location of that assembly line. I look for a piece of paper to write the assembly line identification (and possibly location) on.

"Cyrus-R, do you know where that stack of paper went?"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 03, 2012 06:01

I simply watch and wait, occasionally eying the laser turret to see if it will go away.

written by Speeder on Sep 03, 2012 12:16

I nod, and follow the High Programmer after I am sure my jumpsuit is really on me and fine.

"Yes yes... Actually things I just said I should not have said here... I mean, about the design of a computer."

I grin and follow along.

written by Gligar on Sep 03, 2012 15:53

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R states that there was a scrubot, but then changes the subject, volunteering to look behind the filing cabinets for clues. Meanwhile, Kris-R studies the floor plan, seeing if he can find the production line mentioned in the reports. Hmm... this plan is actually kind of confusing... there are things that might be production lines, and testing areas, and... wait, what was that code again? Ah! This looks like it might be it. He should really write this down. Now, where did the paper go...?

Does Cyrus-R know? He doesn't reply to Kris-R's query, since he's still trying to move the filing cabinets to look behind them. It turns out that filing cabinets full of files are too heavy for him to move.

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O waits nervously for the results of the BLUE's call. That turret doesn't seem to be going away...

"This isn't looking good for you. It's taking a while to get authorisation," the BLUE says. "Some might see this as overly perverse but let's stick with it."

An enigmatic hygiene station

Speed-Y agrees. He's probably said too much already. First though, he checks his jumpsuit. Yep, everything seems to be in order.

He then follows the High Programmer into the other room. And... if there are cameras there, they've been disabled, so I can't show you what's there.

written by Gligar on Sep 03, 2012 20:33

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R eventually does find a sheet of paper. Apparently, when the stack of paper disappeared (i.e. when Cyrus-R took it) a couple of sheets fell onto the floor.

written by Jam on Sep 03, 2012 21:15

I continue waiting for the results to arrive...

written by Kristos on Sep 04, 2012 03:12

I frown and pick up the two sheets of paper on the floor. Then I return to smiling as I write down the identifier and try to sketch the route to the location.

"I found something. It seems the problems started after unscheduled maintenance on this assembly line [tapping the back of the pen on the floor plan] and have become worse ever since. I do not know what you are doing but we should investigate the line now."

After shutting and locking the drawer and taking final glance at the floor plan (hoping to spot vendobot locations), I step out the door and wait for Cyrus-R to follow.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 04, 2012 14:47

"Oh, yeah... I found some paper."

I hand Kris-R twenty-three sheets of paper.

"We might have to dump the files out of these cabinets to move them though."

I glance around the room looking for anyplace else that clues might be hidden. A trash bin maybe?

written by Lightning4 on Sep 04, 2012 18:27

I look around the room a bit, still waiting.

written by Gligar on Sep 04, 2012 21:35⁷⁸⁹

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Now both Jam-Y and L4-O are looking nervous.

But they don't have long to wait. "Well well well... it looks like there is no footage of this supposed accident! I... think you know what that means. Loyalty Officer? Terminate him."

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R picks up the paper and makes a note. He tries to tell Cyrus-R what he found, and suggest that they go check it out, but Cyrus-R is ignoring. Yes, ignoring his team leader. He is still convinced that there may be something behind the filing cabinets, or in a non-existent wastebin. As such, he doesn't see Kris-R step out of the door and wait for him.

written by Jam on Sep 04, 2012 21:51

I aim my laser pistol at L4-O, but hesitate for a few secondcycles...

written by Lightning4 on Sep 04, 2012 22:49

"Wait! What? You're telling me with all those spybots, and surely all those cameras... not to mention the multiple bots in the area... there was no footage at all? None? Not even any security cameras aimed at the area?"

I speak even faster somehow.

"What about witness accounts? There were plenty of witnesses. We also have Nukabot, I'm sure it saw it, maybe there's a visual log there!"

"Maybe we could let Friend Computer decide? I could go to a confession booth or something..."

written by Cryoburner on Sep 05, 2012 01:14

"Hmm... We should really find a trash bin for this office."

I head out into the corridor.

"But yes, inspecting the line might be important too."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 05, 2012 08:57

I concentrate, and begin to match the monitor's display with the dials.

After that, I place a bell in, and hit Launch.

⁷⁸⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: if my GLORIOUS (and inaccurately-named) <airquotes>"Internet" "Service" "Provider"</airquotes> would KINDLY give me a connection... clearly they would like they would like a further set of Treason Points... maybe I should take it up to 2048...)

written by Kristos on Sep 05, 2012 12:27

I lock the office door and take the paper from Cyrus-R. Then I follow my "map" to the assembly line of question.

written by Gligar on Sep 05, 2012 15:24

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y aims his laser pistol at L4-O as if to comply, but... hesitates.

L4-O takes advantage of the hesitation by questioning the accuracy of the result... surely there was a camera somewhere that took a picture of it... Nukabot maybe? What about witnesses?

"I'm sure," the BLUE replies, "that none of them would tell us anything we don't already know. Which is that you must be terminated! Why hasn't that happened yet?!"

Behind the BLUE, a vidscreen blinks into life, showing the Eye of The Computer. It's looking at him.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R tells Kris-R that the office needs a wastebin, but agrees that checking the assembly line might turn up something. It's clear that he still wants to pursue his own line of enquiry, but with Kris-R not helping him, the only thing he can do is leave the office.

That done, Kris-R locks the door and heads off, following the directions he wrote down.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

As the two head off, they are watched by a trio of clones in INFRARED jumpsuits from an adjacent room. They whisper amongst themselves.

Soon, the exit the room and follow, trying to make no noise. Not entirely successfully, I might add.

Level Five, Testing Area, Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

After studying the screen for a while, Mango decides to give it a try. He sets the dials as best they can - finding that the 'Angle' controls are quite stiff, almost as if they don't want to change - and, after loading the launcher, hits Start.

The bell is fired from the launcher in an upwards direction, hits the roof with a sing, and drops back down, through the open space in the middle, down to Level 4, where it keeps falling, all the way down to Level 2, where it just misses the opening.

It does go ding, though.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 05, 2012 17:47

I speak to the BLUE

"Uh, sir, behind you."

I simply watch and wait, then.

written by Gligar on Sep 05, 2012 19:43

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O suggests to the BLUE that he look behind him. "There's nothing beh—"

"Ahem."

That gets the BLUE's attention. He turns... "Friend Computer! To what do I owe this honour?"

"A request for information was just issued with your identification, a request which was granted. The information comprises of several images of a shooting which took place recently. For what reason did you request these images?"

"Ah, yes! I was looking for evidence that citizen L4-O-QKW has terminated his superior, Jam-Y-JYR, without authorisation."

"And yet you just said that such information did not exist..."

written by Jam on Sep 05, 2012 19:46

"Well, I can't go against orders... Sorry, L4-O. I'll fill your next clone in on what else happens in the rest of debri—oh, hello Friend Computer!"

In my excitement, I again forget to actually shoot at L4-O. However, I still keep my laser pistol aimed in the general direction of his head.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 06, 2012 01:13

I whisper to Kris-R rather loudly...

"There seem to be some clones behind us. They look rather helpful. I think they might want to help us. Maybe we should get some help from them."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 06, 2012 02:42

I almost freak out due to Jam-Y wanting to shoot me again, but calm down once the speaking happens.

I smile after Friend Computer finishes speaking. I simply remain quiet though, and watch on.

written by Kristos on Sep 06, 2012 03:37

The sound of something following us convinces me to slow down, step quietly, and listen intently. When I have just begun to distinguish the noises a loud whisper from a familiar voice startles me. I jump about as high as a startled clone can jump. Then I yell-whisper back at Cyrus-R: "You. Need. HELP!"

I ready my laser pistol and turn to face any intruders while sidestepping to not be in the middle of the hall.

"Who's there? What is your purpose?"

And this would be the place where a sudden craving for Soy lent RED spontaneously develops...

written by Gligar on Sep 06, 2012 18:49

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y begins to explain to L4-O that he can't disobey, and that he'll explain everything to his clone, when he gets distracted by Our Mutual Friend and forgets to fire. Again.

L4-O's face is an interesting study: going from freak-out to almost calm in a few seconds as The Computer speaks. He still doesn't reply.

The BLUE looks a little irritated. "Friend Computer, in my experience, Troubleshooters don't react well to being told they can't do something... it's easier to just tell them that there is no information rather than say that they can't get to it."

"Why did you not simply say that it was beyond their security clearance? That is the usual protocol, is it not? Perhaps you have some other reason for wanting Citizen L4-O-QKW-2 terminated. As far as I can calculate, no termination is warranted. You are hereby fined 250 credits for attempted termination without proper evidence."

The Computer continues. "It has not escaped my notice, however, that Citizen L4-O-QKW-2 is still guilty of treason, notably destruction of Computer Property, namely Citizen Jam-Y-JYR-2. He is hereby ordered to submit to mandatory supplementary medication, effective immediately."

"In addition, Citizen Jam-Y-JYR-3 is fined 150 credits for failure to follow orders during Debriefing; and Citizen Joris-R-DNK-5 is fined 100 credits for possession of an unauthorised weapon and is hereby placed on probation. Further processing is required to calculate mission resuklts. Thank you for your co-operation."

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

On hearing the trio approach, Kris-R slows down and begins listening to them. He can briefly hear them whispering to each other about something before Cyrus-R ruins the moment by whispering loudly that they might want to help. In response, Kris-R suggests, even more loudly, that Cyrus-R needs a different kind of help, before turning and demanding to know who is following them.

He is met with the sound of three clones running. Whatever their plan was, it's busted, but was it busted by Cyrus-R, or by Kris-R?

Incidentally, Kris-R would be interested to learn that a vendobot in the nearby break room is programmed to emit a craving-inducing virus, which only targets certain clones (what clones varies from hourcycle to hourcycle). Right now, it's making him want Soy lent RED badly.

Of course, it could just be that this clone simply hasn't eaten since... well, ever.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 06, 2012 19:28

I continue whispering loudly to Kris-R...

"Yes, I agree. We both could have used some help. I think you may have scared those helpful clones off though."

"And to think they only wanted to help us..."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 06, 2012 19:34

I smile.

"Oh. Thank you, Friend Computer!"

I look at Jam-Y.

"And er... sorry about the fine, sir."

Since Friend Computer did say immediately, I look around for a notification of medication, or the medication itself.

written by Jam on Sep 06, 2012 20:54

I facepalm, then look toward the BLUE.

"Well, I guess if I had actually shot L4-O, your punishment would have been much more severe, sir. Maybe it's a good thing I didn't..."

I then talk to L4-O.

"Of course, if I'd terminated you right away as I was ordered, I'd be 150 credits richer right now. I'm sure you'll be able to think of some way to repay me..."

written by Gligar on Sep 06, 2012 23:50

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Never content to be the one to blame (even though "Loyalty Officer" is a lower MBD than "Team Leader") Cyrus-R seems to think that Kris-R scared the "helpful" (even though they didn't do anything helpful) clones away.

Now, maybe they can get going?

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O thanks Our Mutual Friend for sparing his life, and apologises to Jam-Y. He is sort of responsible for his fine, after all.

Then his PDC rings, indicating that he has a message... something about medication.

Jam-Y definitely knows that L4-O is responsible, and he seems to be treating the fine as a sort of loan.

The BLUE has resorted to glowering at everyone. He seems to be fingering something in one pocket of his suit.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 07, 2012 00:04

I read my PDC message, then glance up at the BLUE and his.. suspicious activity.

written by Kristos on Sep 07, 2012 03:00

"Should we investigate the followers or the assembly line? Cyrus-R, I'll let you decide what we do next if you buy some Soylent RED for me! Of course, as team leader, I still have to approve your decision."

written by Cryoburner on Sep 07, 2012 04:36

"Well, the clones following us probably won't want to help us anymore anyway, and we didn't even get a good look at them, so they could just as easily be any helpful-looking clones we come across. So, we'd might as well continue on to the assembly line, as planned. Maybe we'll meet up with them later, and they can help us then."

"Oh, you wanted Soylent RED, too. I suppose I could assist with that."

I continue down the corridor, looking around for any Vendobots as I go.

written by Gligar on Sep 07, 2012 12:58

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O checks his PDC. The message is instructing him to go to the nearest medical bay to pick up his medications pack. Glancing up at the BLUE, L4-O realises that he has a concealed weapon, and he's most likely got his hand on it right now.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R decides to allow Cyrus-R decide which way they should go - either to follow those clones or to head to the assembly line - as long as Cyrus-R buys him some Soylent RED. Cyrus-R decides that they should head to the assembly line, and heads off without waiting for Kris-R to okay it.

Of course, he now has to keep his side of the bargain and buy some Soylent RED. If he had chosen to go follow the clones, he would have passed the break room, and would have been able to do so. Alas.

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Soon, he comes across a large door. Leading away from it, forming a junction with Corridor A, is a wide corridor., wide enough for your typical vehiclebot to drive down.

written by Jam on Sep 07, 2012 12:58

I lower my laser pistol, and I also start to watch the BLUE's suspicious activity.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 07, 2012 16:36

"Sir, may I be dismissed to go collect my medications pack?"

I watch him intensely for a response, ready to attempt a dodge if I need to, if it does me any good.

written by Gligar on Sep 07, 2012 17:42

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y lowers his laser pistol, but it's clear that he thinks that there's a possibility of it being used soon. And from who he's looking at right now...

Not L4-O, that's for sure. He's now asking the BLUE if he can go and get his medications pack, though he seems to want to duck out of the way...

"No," the BLUE replies, but your clone can!"

Zap! The BLUE has pulled a laser pistol from his pocket and fired it at L4-O...

Only to miss. Either he forgot to aim or L4-O's dodging worked.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 07, 2012 18:38

I keep moving, and quickly, in an attempt to keep from being hit just a bit longer.

I try to take out my blaster and try to return with fire of my own, hoping that the laser turret is both still here, and reacts to the BLUE.

written by Jam on Sep 07, 2012 19:30

Hmm... I guess was sort of anticipating this...

I try to silently move to a position behind the BLUE while he is distracted by L4-O.

If I'm successful, I aim my laser at point-blank range to the back of the BLUE's head and announce:

"Sir, Friend Computer specifically said that L4-O was not to be terminated! I'm afraid I'm going to have to ask you to surrender your weapon! Otherwise, if you fail to comply, I believe I am authorized to terminate you!"

If at any point the BLUE looks like he's going to shoot me, I attempt to dodge while firing back at him.

written by Gligar on Sep 07, 2012 20:23

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O rolls away, and pulls out his blaster as the rest of the team also pulls out weapons; mostly laser pistols, though Joris-R still has that blaster.

But only L4-O returns fire at this stage. Even though he misses, his shot is of some benefit to the team, as it allows Jam-Y to get into position behind the BLUE and get his laser pistol right up against the BLUE's head. Whereupon he orders the BLUE to surrender his weapon for treason; namely, ignoring Friend Computer's orders concerning L4-O. Failure to comply will most likely result in summary execution. And it appears that the laser turret agrees, since it stops aiming at Speed-Y's body and starts aiming at the BLUE.

"What's this? You'd charge a superior with treason? You've got guts." He drops his weapon. "But I think I have the upper hand. The Computer will believe me more than you."

"Oh?" asks John-R. "As far as I can see, sir, you're ignoring Our Friend's orders that L4-O not be terminated. Would you like to share your reasoning with us?"

The BLUE falls silent. Apparently, he would not. This causes John-R to try to catch Jam-Y's eye, and tap the side of his head.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 07, 2012 20:44

I lower my blaster now that things are safe again.

"I doubt Friend Computer would believe you, anyway... that laser turret is still around watching, after all..."

I smile seeing the turret is aimed at the BLUE, and back away back to the rest of the team.

written by Kristos on Sep 07, 2012 23:39

I look for something to hide behind in hopes that the three clones will return.

written by Jam on Sep 07, 2012 23:58

I try to angle myself so won't get skewered if the laser turret decides to fire at the BLUE.

I also fire if the BLUE seems to be lunging for his weapon, or turning to attack me, or doing anything like that.

written by Gligar on Sep 08, 2012 14:29

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O lowers his blaster. He doubts that Our Mutual Friend would believe the BLUE, given that the laser turret is now locked on. "Remember who you're talking to, ORANGE. I could easily have you all terminated for causing that accident in the Industrial Subsectors! Remember that!"

Jam-Y tries to get out of the laser's line of fire, though he seems a little distracted.

"I have reached a preliminary conclusion regarding your mission," The Computer announces. "The cause of power loss in the Industrial Subsectors was deliberate sabotage caused by members of Power Services, who may or may not be linked with Copore Metal and the First Church of the Easter Cycle, details of which are restricted to Security Clearance [DFSR] or higher. The purpose seems to have been to test out stolen biotoxin material, ultimately leading to the initiation of Code Three-Zed protocols. Team Epsilon do not seem to be linked to the incident, other than being responsible for the aforementioned initiation of Code Three-Zed protocols. Further details of the Code Three-Zed protocols are not available at this time.

"I find that -"

The Computer is interrupted - yes, interrupted - by the BLUE. He's firing at L4-O again! Jam-Y notices and returns fire, injuring him in one arm!

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Apparently not noticing Cyrus-R's absence, Kris-R tries to find cover, but draws a blank. I suppose he could always head back to the office...

written by Jam on Sep 08, 2012 15:37⁷⁹⁰

"Run, L4-O! John-R, do it now!"

I attempt to push the BLUE over and pin him to the ground.

⁷⁹⁰ JAM: (ooc: Didn't the BLUE just drop his laser pistol?)

written by Gligar on Sep 08, 2012 18:37

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y tells L4-O to run, and orders John-R to "do it now" - I'm sure you can figure out what "it" is - while trying to knock the BLUE to the floor. It turns out that the4 BLUE is stronger than he is, and refuses to go down - until he's hit by John-R's mental assault. It pretty much causes him to lose concentration and assume the my-head-is-about-to-explode position, and drop a second laser pistol...

"Citizen, do NOT interrupt me. You are hereby demoted to Security Clearance GREEN. Your brainscrub has also been upgraded to a termination. Team Epsilon, please carry out the termination."

Lucas-R, seemingly eager to do so, pulls out a laser pistol and shoots... at the same time as Joris-R! Laser and blaster combine to hit the BLU- er, I mean the GREEN, square on the chest... revealing him to be wearing reflec... which is promptly melted by the blaster. He struggles to speak...

written by Jam on Sep 08, 2012 19:32

I press my laser pistol against the GREEN's head and pull the trigger.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 08, 2012 19:48

I am about to sprint out the door, but realize the GREEN has been incapacitated.

"Huh... well. Mental blast is a great thing to have around..."

I take out my blaster again as well, and attempt to assist in the termination. At close range, of course, so I don't end up accidentally injuring or killing a team member. Again.

written by Gligar on Sep 08, 2012 22:15

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y is the next to comply. Of course, he's a little closer to the no-longer-BLUE than the REDs, so he's able to shoot at point-blank range. And again, a laser shot is accompanied by a blaster - this time from L4-O - and again, the two hit the GREEN, but this time, they hit in the head. The GREEN doesn't get to say what he was thinking.

"Termination confirmed," The Computer says. "Now, as I was saying, I find that I am pleased by your efforts. Standard mission bonuses have been applied to your accounts. I am still calculating whether promotions will be - stand by..."

written by Jam on Sep 08, 2012 22:22

I look pleased at the mission bonus, and proceed to stand by.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 09, 2012 00:55

I yell down the corridor...

"Hey, Kris-R-QJT-2! Are we going to the assembly line, or did you decide to look for those helpful-looking clones? Or maybe you found a Vendobot, and are eating lunch or something? Is it even lunch time? I don't think that it is."

I consult my PDC, checking what time it is, and whether or not that time corresponds to lunch time.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 09, 2012 02:39

I wait around as well, and put my blaster away.

I decide to check my credit balance to see how much I have.

"I wonder where Speed-Y is... if he recloned."

written by Kristos on Sep 09, 2012 03:35

"Why? Why?! Grrrr.... Okay. Stabilize. Okay."

I walk quickly to the assembly line to carry out the inspection, but my primary focus is keeping my senses probing for followers, saboteurs, commies, and Cryo-R.

written by Gligar on Sep 09, 2012 13:29

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y looks pleased at receiving a bonus, but continues to wait, as does L4-O, who puts away his blaster. In fact, it looks like everyone is staying put. Well, debriefing's still going on, right?

While he waits, L4-O decides to check his balance. He discovers that he has 2,150 credits remaining. He then wonders what happened to Speed-Y... perhaps he should be wondering what happened to the other two REDs as well... Azir-R and King-R, right?

"I have completed my calculations," The Computer announces. "I have decided to award promotions to citizens Lucas-R-AHK, John-R-SMR, and Joris-R-DNK. They are promoted to Security Clearance ORANGE, effective immediately. This concludes the debriefing. Thank you for your co-operation."

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Before he presumably enters the factory floor, Cyrus-R rather loudly calls back towards Kris-R, asking if he's going to inspect the assembly line, before checking the time: it's 18:03.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

However, a rather loud team member is not what Kris-R wants to have when there are potentially hostile clones around, preparing to do something that may or may not result in their termination. His happiness level is dropping rapidly...

He composes himself and heads down the corridor. It doesn't look like anyone is following him.

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

He finds Cyrus-R waiting by the factory floor entrance (these big double doors right here), but decides to just get on with it and enter. It looks like Cyrus-R is too busy looking at his PDC to notice.

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

As soon as he enters, he is momentarily deafened by what seems to be a wall of noise coming from the place. Machinery is everywhere: massive gears, presses, moulds, that sort of thing. There are at least four assembly lines; that much is certain, since he needs to look at No. 4...

written by Jam on Sep 09, 2012 14:54

I grin.

"Congratulations, Lucas-O and John-O and Joris-O! It's about time you guys got promoted!"

I also try to check how many credits I have.

"Who knows what happened to Speed-Y. Maybe some UV decided he needed questioning or something..."

written by Gligar on Sep 09, 2012 17:16

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y congratulates the three new ORANGEs and checks his balance: 3,128.4.

"Thanks!" John-O replies. "For a while there, I was thinking that my being a mutant stopped me from getting promoted, but apparently not!"

Lucas-O looks a little overwhelmed. "It wasn't all that long ago that I was still in the crèche," he says. "Then I graduate, and a few monthcycles later, there's the whole commie thing, and now this... I can't help but wonder what else is in store... it's all happening so fast..."

Jam-Y replies to L4-O that he doesn't know where Speed-Y is, either. Maybe some UV decided to question him or something... nah, that's an unlikely scenario...

So... what now?

written by Jam on Sep 09, 2012 19:15

I look at the '.4'.

"What am I supposed to do with four-tenths of a credit? Oh well..."

"Also, good thinking with the mind-blast suggestion, John-O! That worked really well!

Hmm... I wonder if I could learn to do something like that..."

I shrug, and start to walk towards the exit of the debriefing room.⁷⁹¹

written by Lightning4 on Sep 09, 2012 19:42

My expression remains neutral.

"Well... I guess the whole accidental killing thing probably prevented me from going up to YELLOW."

Though, I raise an eyebrow in the general direction of Joris-O, but then simply shake my head and dismiss it.

Noticing Jam-Y leaving, I follow.

⁷⁹¹ SPEEDER: (OOC: I am... somewhere hehee, including the house of my mother yesterday, without internet)

written by Jam on Sep 09, 2012 20:52

"Huh... Maybe..."

Hey, what about me? Why didn't I get a promotion? Maybe it's because I'm a mutant? Or maybe it's because... no that couldn't be it..."

written by Gligar on Sep 09, 2012 21:20

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y wonders what he's supposed to do with 0.4 of a credit for a moment, before complimenting John-O on his mindblast suggestion. Which was not spoken out loud. It kind of makes you wonder what else they were saying to each other...

Before heading out, he wonders whether he could learn to do that. Mental Blast, I mean.

L4-O remains neutral... perhaps the accidental termination caused him to be passed over for promotion. He raises an eyebrow in the direction of Joris-R before following Jam-Y.

The rest of the team soon follows. Speed-Y's corpse is left behind, along with his equipment.

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y thinks it might be the case, before wondering why he didn't get a promotion either. He seems to have an idea why, but he is interrupted by Nukabot, which is still parked where they left it. "Greetings, citizens. You may wish to know that there are bots heading in this direction. I do not know why."

written by Jam on Sep 10, 2012 02:14

"Do you know what kind of bots or how fast they are approaching?"

I ready my laser pistol, just in case... (Also, I quickly check how many shots I have left)⁷⁹²

written by Gligar on Sep 10, 2012 16:58

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y asks about the approaching bots. How many are there? What bots are they? How fast are they approaching? "See for yourself," Nukabot replies. "They are almost here."

No sooner than Nukabot says that, three bots come into view: a deliverybot and two docbots. The docbots are carrying a brainscrub box, used to return brainscrub clients back to where they were picked up; from the seals, there is someone inside.

The collectobot approaches the team, and says, "Is this Team Epsilon? I have two deliveries: one for the Team Leader, and one for the Loyalty Officer."

Seems harmless enough, but... you never can tell, and Jam-Y seems nervous. He checks his laser pistol: three shots left.

⁷⁹² JAM: (ooc edit: Whoops, forgot to add quotation marks...)

written by Lightning4 on Sep 10, 2012 17:25

I try to peek at who is inside the brainscrub box.

"Now that's... odd."

written by Jam on Sep 10, 2012 17:43

I step forward.

"I'm the Loyalty Officer."

I attempt to take my delivery.

"As for our team leader, he's currently... uh... somewhere... Hang on a sec, I'll see if I can find him."

written by Kristos on Sep 10, 2012 20:37

First I carefully look around for anything obviously suspicious or strange. Should I come across any clones I greet them and continue about my business.

I go to assembly line #3 and study everything about it in detail, walking slowly around. Once I am satisfied I then likewise study assembly line #4, but taking careful attention for any differences.

If there are laser barrels exiting line #4 I take a few for testing, offering explanation to any clones or bots present if need be.

If Cyrus-R is nearby I tell him to go look for the clones that needed help and question them on what they are doing and why they might need help doing it.

written by Gligar on Sep 10, 2012 22:26

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

L4-O tries to peek inside the brainscrub box, but finds that he cannot do so without opening the seals. And the seals are secured with a tongueprint lock. How odd.

Jam-Y identifies himself as the Loyalty Officer. The Team Leader is... somewhere... He concentrates.

"Sure thing, citizen," the deliverybot says. "I just need your tongueprint here..." It extends a tongueprint scanner.

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Since Cyrus-R has not yet entered the factory floor, Kris-R decides to get started.

Of course, he would first need to inspect a working assembly line, so he knows what a working one should look like. Luckily, there are several such lines available. He chooses No. 3, and memorises the locations of the various machines: the assemblers, the heaters, the rollers with the massive gears...

Cyrus-R still doesn't show up. Good, he can move on to No. 4... and so far, he can't tell anything different about it. Maybe there's something he's missing?

Well, maybe it'd be instructive to take samples. He starts with No. 4. Going to the end, he picks a couple of laser barrels - RED ones - for inspection.

Then someone taps him on the shoulder. It's much too loud to hear him speak, but he seems to be saying that Kris-R can't do that.

written by Jam on Sep 11, 2012 00:33

I get a look of concentration for a few secondcycles... Then I relax, and smile at the others.

"Huh, I'm not sure where Speed-Y is... Oh well, I guess he'll turn up eventually!"

I press my tongue against the scanner.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 11, 2012 01:32

Having surveyed the entrance to the factory floor, and not noticed any vendobots with Soylent RED nearby, I approach Kris-R to get on with the inspection. I yell in an attempt to be heard over the machinery...

"Hey! I think these are laser barrels! We should probably test them! Did you bring the tester?"

I try to estimate how many barrels there are in the room.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 11, 2012 02:04

I simply stand back and wait now, watching the brainscrub box intently.

written by Gligar on Sep 11, 2012 13:43

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y zones out for a moment, before telling everyone that he can't find Speed-Y. That done, he turns to the bot and uses the scanner.

"Hmmm," the bot says. "Are you sure you are doing it correctly? Please try it again..."

L4-O just keeps watching the box.

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The clone talking to Kris-R - an INFRARED - repeats his statement. It becomes clear that, even though he still can't be properly heard, he is disregarding the difference in security clearance.

Over the din of the machinery comes another voice, that of Cyrus-R. He says that there are laser barrels here - winning the Alpha Complex Award for Stating the Obvious - and that they should be tested. He asks if Kris-R brought the scanner, even though he knows full well that the thing takes two clones to move.

It's just as well, really, for there are far too many barrels here for your average clone to even count, let alone test.

written by Jam on Sep 11, 2012 15:09

"Hmm... Let me try that again."

I knock on the side of the box, do a little dance, and slam my face tongue-first into the scanner.

written by Gligar on Sep 11, 2012 17:13*Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector*

Jam-Y thinks... maybe he should try it again.

He does so... in a strange way. First, by knocking on the box, then by dancing in a strange way, and finally by slamming his face into the tongueprint scanner.

The first thing he notices is that the faceplate seems to have split in half. His tongue is now bleeding. Second is that he now has a pretty bad headache.

Third is that the box's seals begin to snap open, culminating in the entire top of the box opening.

There is indeed a clone in the box: a rather groggy-looking Speed-Y.⁷⁹³

written by Speeder on Sep 11, 2012 18:37

"Whoooooow... I am on a boat? This thing rocked hard now!"

Then I see Jam bleeding.

"Awesome, the boat hit a rock that looks like Jam head."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 11, 2012 19:17

"Oh. Hi Speed-Y! I would ask why you're in that... boat... but you wouldn't know either..."

I decide to watch and wait before telling him more details, since it looks like he's a bit... unsteady.

written by Gligar on Sep 11, 2012 21:10*Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector*

It seems that Speed-Y doesn't really know what's going on... he seems to think he's on a boat (how many clones have even seen one that wasn't on a vidscreen?), and it's hit a rock... one that looks like Jam-Y's head. (L4-O decides not to ask why Speed-Y thinks that, since he probably wouldn't know.)

The deliverybot interrupts. "Okay, citizens, that is the Loyalty Officer taken care of. But what do I do about this package for the Team Leader?"

written by Kristos on Sep 11, 2012 21:40

I note Cyrus-R's capacity to project audibly distinguishable messages over significant levels of noise. There is a slight chance that this ability can be used in a useful way some daycycle.

If I have picked up any laser barrels I place them back down. After giving a thumbs up pose to the clone that interrupted me I go to Cyrus-R. But I keep in my mind a picture of the INFRARED clone in case I meet him again. He seems... suspicious. Or, in Cyrus-R's language, "helpful".

written by Jam on Sep 11, 2012 22:05

"Ow, my tongue! My head! Speed-Y, what in Alpha Complex were you doing in a locked brainscrub box with my tongue

⁷⁹³ GLIGAR: (OOC: +1pp to Jam 😊)

as the key? I almost cracked my head open trying to get you out!"

Then I realize Speed-Y just said something really strange...

"What? A rock that looks like my head? Where?"

written by Speeder on Sep 11, 2012 22:07

I get my bearings.. Then I leave the box on my own.

"Oh, I am the Team Leader, this must be for me! And only me! Of course, because there are only one of me, and only one Team Leader, that is, me!"

I take the package and ready my tongue to any scanning if needed.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 11, 2012 23:06

I look at my PDC message again.

"I should pick up the mandatory medication shortly."

I look a little concerned.

"I just hope that GREEN isn't waiting for me there."

written by Gligar on Sep 12, 2012 13:00*Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector*

Kris-R seems interested in Cyrus-R's ability to make himself heard... that could come in handy, perhaps.

He puts down the barrels and looks at the INFRARED. That scar over the left eye is hard to mistake.

The INFRARED glares at him and turns away, allowing Kris-R to head back to Cyrus-R. Looks like they'll have to find some other place to get samples.

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Attempting to recover from his headache, Jam-Y demands to know why Speed-Y was inside a box needing his tongue to open it? He nearly had to knock himself out... wait, a rock the shape of his head? Where? He looks around, but can't see any rocks.

Heaving himself out of the box, Speed-Y realises that the deliverybot has something for him. It must be for him because he's the only Team Leader around. The deliverybot says, "Ah! That sorts that problem. Here is the package, I just need your tongueprint right here..."

L4-O looks at the message again. He needs to go pick up that mandatory medications pack soon... and he hopes he won't have to deal with that GREEN.

written by Speeder on Sep 12, 2012 13:35

I open the package (with the tongueprint) happily.

In fact I do it VERY happily, like if having high expectations! Maybe it is a concealed GREEN promotion after the mission?

written by Lightning4 on Sep 12, 2012 17:44

I consult my PDC for the location of the nearest medical bay.

[1190]

I also look myself over for any injuries I may have sustained anyway, might be a good time to have those checked out. I look at the others to see if they need to be tended to as well.

written by Gligar on Sep 12, 2012 18:19

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Is it possible to be too happy about something? If so, Speed-Y is close to it, as he gives his tongueprint for the package. What does it contain? Perhaps a promotion?

Well... actually, no. But it does contain a Series 1550 PDC and an ME Card. (A 1550! You don't see those very often.)

Meanwhile, L4-O looks for the nearest medical bay. According to his PDC, there's one a couple of corridors over. Apparently, it's near the crèche entrance, in the midst of all the security.

The deliverybot says, "That appears to be everything, citizens. Thank you for your co-operation."

written by Speeder on Sep 12, 2012 18:59

I look very happy.

Then I go check if my body is with any equipment that I can use, and more importantly, if it is still dead.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 12, 2012 19:49

"I guess I'll go get my medications, if that's alright. I'll be back shortly."

I start going in the direction I need to, keeping an eye out for anyone or anything hazardous or treasonous.

written by Jam on Sep 12, 2012 20:25

"I'll come with you, in case our GREEN friend shows up again."

I follow L4-O.

written by Gligar on Sep 12, 2012 21:28

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

While a happy-looking Speed-Y decides to return to the briefing room to check out his corpse, L4-O decides to head to the medical bay to fetch his medication pack. Jam-Y decides to follow him, just in case GREEN shenanigans happen.

Everyone else decides to stay put, with the exception of the docbots and the deliverybot, who decides to leave.

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y is concerned with two things: what equipment he can recover and whether his corpse is still alive (what with the nano-FUN earlier). The latter is answered quite quickly: it is still lying where it fell, surrounded in a pool of blood and broken reflec.

As for his equipment... well, most of it is still on Azir-R's old wheelchair. Only his MBD Badge, his Team Leader's hat, and a slugthrower (complete with a few rounds) is present on his corpse. Oh... and his old ME Card.

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O and Jam-Y continue until they encounter the start of the crèche security area. There's the first checkpoint with its security scanner, and according to L4-O's PDC, they'll need to pass through it.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 12, 2012 22:31

"Thanks, sir. I uh... I guess I owe you quite a bit now. I hope I can find some way of repaying you."

I look at the security checkpoint and prepare to go in.

"I guess we need to go through here."

I go through the scanner if it's safe, while keeping an eye on the surroundings.

written by Speeder on Sep 12, 2012 22:52

I take the old ME card and try to remember any regulations relating to that.

Then I take the hat and badge and attach them properly to my clothing.

Then I take all the equipment that is mine from the wheelchair and the slugthrower from the ground...

And finally, I start to tug the wheelchair around, going outside.

written by Jam on Sep 13, 2012 01:04

I nod, and smile at L4-O.

"I'm sure you'll think of something good! I'm excited to see what you come up with!"

I follow L4-O through the scanner if he goes through.

written by Gligar on Sep 13, 2012 18:32

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O thanks Jam-Y for accompanying him. He guesses that he'll owe even more than before for this. Jam-Y is sure he'll think of some way to pay up.

L4-O looks at the checkpoint. It's your typical scanner system, but... well, more. There are additional goons present, over the usual two, equipped with handheld sensors for... whatever it is they're looking for.

He decides it's safe, and proceeds to go through. One of the goons tells him to halt. "State your destination!"

Jam-Y, who was about to enter the scanner, pauses.

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y starts by taking the old ME Card. Now, what's the protocol... ah yes. He has to take it to the nearest secure disposal facility.

Next up is the slugthrower and MBD-related stuff. That's easy enough.

Finally, there is Azir-R's wheelchair. He'll just have to take that with him, but not before retrieving the rest of his equipment from it.

[1191]

There! Now all he needs to do is return to the team.

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

He finds that the rest of the team is still here, except for Jam-Y and L4-O, who have headed off.

written by Speeder on Sep 13, 2012 18:38

I look at the team, and since they are just hanging out there, I ask.

“Alright, where Jam and L4 went? Anything of note to tell me?”

I start to fiddle with my PDC, trying to figure what new features it has in comparison with the old one.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 13, 2012 18:57

I stop as well.

“Medical bay, sir! I have been ordered to pick up mandatory medication by Friend Computer.”

I watch them and wait for their response.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 13, 2012 21:21

Seeing as we’ve just been standing around watching laser barrels pass by for the last few minutes with nothing noteworthy happening, I decide to see where those laser barrels are headed, namely where they are packaged, and who is packaging them, and what the packages look like, and where the packages are stored, and if there are saboteurs there.

written by Gligar on Sep 13, 2012 22:11

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y looks at the team. They’re not doing much right now. But notably, they’re not all here.

He asks those present what happened to Jam-Y and L4-O. “They went off to find a medical bay, sir,” John-O tells him. “L4-O was assigned a mandatory medications pack, and Jam-Y thought that our ex-debriefing officer might be there.”

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Of course, they aren’t there yet. They’re still dealing with this checkpoint.

L4-O is telling the goon his destination, but the goon doesn’t seem impressed. “You don’t look ill, pal. For all I know, you could be lying, and trying to smuggle weapons or explosives into the crèche.” The other goons start scanning L4-O with a bunch of scanners. The scanners do a lot of beeping.

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

After watching the production lines for several minutecycles, Cyrus-R realises that he’s been watching these production lines for several minutecycles, watching them produce laser barrels... but where are the barrels going? He decides to investigate.

Laser barrel warehouse, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R follows the lines, and soon finds himself in a large, INFRARED-clearance warehouse. Several teams of INFRAREDs are packing laser barrels into crates, which in turn are being taken by forkbots and placed in a labyrinth of shelves too complex for Cyrus-R to figure out. Other forkbots take crates from the shelves and load them onto truckbots, which then leave the factory.

A number of crates seem to go in the other direction: from the truckbots to the shelves...

written by Lightning4 on Sep 13, 2012 22:38

“Oh no, I’m not ill. I was just assigned it as treatment for accidental treason.”

I watch the scanners work, wondering what all the beeping is. I realize that I am, in fact, carrying a small armory. I refrain from saying anything unless they point it out, though.

written by Speeder on Sep 13, 2012 23:30

I look puzzled.

“Why, what is up with the ex-debriefing officer?”

written by Kristos on Sep 14, 2012 00:26

I say to Cyrus-R, “Let’s split up. Meet back at the office,” but he is probably far out of hearing range, especially with the noise around. I turn back, walking towards the office, hoping to find an authoritative looking clone so I can ask for permission to take sample laser barrels from the assembly line. I greet any suspicious looking clones with a nod and a grin.

written by Jam on Sep 14, 2012 06:39

I nod a few times.

“I was there when Friend Computer gave the order, I heard the whole thing! I’m accompanying L4-O to the medical bay...”

...wait, we’re near a crèche?! Ugh... This’ll be fun...”

written by Cryoburner on Sep 14, 2012 08:54

I follow one of the forkbots loading crates from the shelves onto truckbots, noting anything noteworthy. I then follow one of the forkbots unloading crates from the truckbots onto shelves, also noting anything noteworthy.

written by Gligar on Sep 14, 2012 14:19

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

While watching the scanners, L4-O explains to the goon that he was assigned a mandatory medications pack as punishment for accidental treason. “You’d better show me where it says that,” the goon replies.

Jam-Y confirms L4-O’s statement. He was there, after all. He explains that he’s accompanying L4-O.

[1192]

As the scanners move on to Jam-Y, he realises what the goon said about the proximity to the crèche, and gets worried. "That's right," the goon replies. "I'm sure you can imagine why we can't allow clones to go to the crèche carrying weapons. And not just for their sakes, either."

It's just as well the two aren't going there, then, given that they're both carrying the equivalent of a small armoury between them. Well, L4-O is. And nobody seems to want to say anything about it.

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y wonders what's up with the ex-debriefing officer. "Well, he did just try to terminate L4-O after Our Mutual Friend ordered that he shouldn't be terminated," replies John-O. "It got him demoted to GREEN and ultimately terminated himself."

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R would tell Cyrus-R that they should meet back at the office, but he's already gone off on his own. Oh well... he'll turn up. Maybe in the cloning station. Wherever that is.

He begins heading back, nodding at a few clones. Just as he reaches the corridor, he encounters an ORANGE supervisor.

Laser barrel warehouse, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Meanwhile, Cyrus-R seems to want to investigate what the forkbots are doing. Well, they're carrying boxes. What else do forkbots do?

Amongst the shelves, Laser barrel warehouse, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

He tries to follow one through the shelves, and quickly realises that it's easy to get lost in here. Why, he can't even figure out which way he came! It's almost as if the shelves exist in more than just three dimensions or something...

The forkbot, however, seemingly has no trouble. It places its box on a shelf and turns to leave, encountering Cyrus-R as it does. It heads towards him, seemingly unwilling to stop.

written by Speeder on Sep 14, 2012 14:33

I look puzzled.

"That is very crazy..."

I think we should investigate that."

I return to the briefing room and go fiddle with the terminated officer.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 14, 2012 16:34

"I do have the PDC message still, if you want to see it."

I offer to show the PDC message if they still need further proof.

I look a little sheepish.

"Er, yeah. Sorry, guess I didn't really know that rule... it's not like I've been near a crèche for quite some time now."

"We're just fresh from a mission debriefing, see. And I was the Equipment officer."

I think of what to do with our weapons, and talk to Jam-Y:

"Hmm. I could call for Nukabot, and we can put all our weapons on it? Or something like that."

written by Jam on Sep 14, 2012 17:51

"Yeah, that would work... It's not like we're actually going to the crèche though, just to a place that's nearby... Hmm..."

written by Gligar on Sep 14, 2012 18:40

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y thinks that the ex-briefing officer's actions sound crazy, and decides to go and investigate.

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

He approaches the GREEN's corpse (still where it fell... someone should really clean up these bodies...) and looks over it. It turns out that he's not carrying all that much, just his PDC and some weapons.

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O offers to show the goon his PDC. He still has the message on there. "Let's see it," the goon replies.

L4-O then apologises for not being aware of the no-weapons rule. It's not like he's been to a crèche recently, but he has been an Equipment Officer... meaning he's still loaded.

He thinks. Hey, he could call Nukabot and have it hold their weapons while they continue on...

Jam-Y agrees. But it's not like they're actually going to the crèche...

"I was just going to say," the goon replies. "Since you seem to be carrying weapons, you're going to have to leave them here. I suggest you call this Nukabot and drop off your weapons."

written by Speeder on Sep 14, 2012 18:50

I first examine the clearance of all the stuff.

Then I see whatever is on the screen of the PDC if I cannot touch it.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 14, 2012 20:12

If I receive my PDC again, I send a message to Nukabot:

We need you at the crèche entrance... looks like we need to leave some equipment with you.

written by Gligar on Sep 14, 2012 22:15

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y checks the clearance of the debriefing officer's equipment. He has a couple of BLUE laser pistol barrels, and an automatic slugthrower, also BLUE. His ME Card's

[1193]

e-ink display is blinking as it updates itself, changing as he watches to reflect his demotion to GREEN Clearance.

And then there's his PDC: a Series 1500. I guess he never got around to updating to a 1700 or an 1800. Or maybe there's a reason...

Back in the corridor, Nukabot starts up and trundles off.

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

The goon looks at L4-O's message, and hands it back. "Okay, that looks genuine. I'll let you pass, just as long as you don't cross into Corridor J5; that's the crèche entrance. The medical bay is on J6."

Before he does anything else, L4-O calls Nukabot. He receives a reply almost instantly, indicating that the forkbot is on its way.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 14, 2012 23:03

"Okay, thank you."

I simply watch and wait for Nukabot now.

written by Gligar on Sep 15, 2012 14:22

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

As Speed-Y watches, the GREEN's PDC suddenly receives a message and begins to vibrate.

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O thanks the goon. Now all he has to do is wait for Nukabot. And he doesn't have long to wait; here it is now.

Cloning station, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Two cloning tanks suddenly fire up and start forming clones.

written by Jam on Sep 15, 2012 19:30

"Hey Nukabot! Could you hold our weapons for us while we go to the medical bay?"

I put my all my laser pistols, the laser rifle, and the RED reflec into a box on Nukabot (you know the one), then walk towards the checkpoint to be scanned again.

written by Gligar on Sep 15, 2012 20:02

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y requests that Nukabot hold their weapons while they go on to the medical bay, and proceeds to unload his weapons into a box on Nukabot. You know, the one marked "Hygiene Officer"...

The he returns to the checkpoint and lets the goons scan him again.

Cloning station, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

The cloning tanks continue their work.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 15, 2012 20:11

I unload all of my weapons as well. I try to tuck Turbo away where it isn't normally visible.

I make sure things like shells, barrels, and grenades, and also Fredinator get put away too.

written by Jam on Sep 15, 2012 20:43

I wait for the results of the scan, in case there's anything I forgot to unload.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 16, 2012 00:17

If I manage to get everything in order, I also submit to a scan.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 16, 2012 00:24

I call to the approaching forkbot.

"Forkbot! Please stop and let me have a moment of your time! I'm performing an investigation for The Computer, requiring the full cooperation of factory bots and personnel!"

If the forkbot doesn't look as though it will be stopping, I hop over the the side of the aisle and try either sliding onto a shelf if there's room available, or climbing up the side to clear a path.

Either way, I check whether I can recognize the forkbot's make and model.

written by Gligar on Sep 16, 2012 15:29

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

While Jam-Y is scanned, L4-O takes the opportunity to unload all of his weapons as well. All of them: seven laser pistols, sixteen spare barrels, Turbo, a couple of blasters with some power packs, Fredinator, and his backpack (containing a torch, his cone rifle ammunition, his brevets (one for Turbo and the old ORANGE one) and the slugthrower rounds he was carrying. Oh... and his spare reflec. He places them all on Nukabot, taking care to put Turbo out of sight... though I can't really tell whereabouts on Nukabot he's putting all of this. He's still carrying a hammer, but... that's not a weapon, right?

It takes him so long to do this that the goons finish scanning Jam-Y. Notably, there was less beeping this time round. "Okay, you're good to go."

They turn to L4-O and start scanning him.

Cloning station, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

The cloning tanks finish up, and spit out clones of Azir-R and King-R.

Amongst the shelves, Laser barrel warehouse, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R calls out to the forkbot, asking for its cooperation.

For a moment, it looks like it's not going to stop, but, with centimetres to spare, it screeches to a halt. "I do apologise, citizen, but my camera requires maintenance. I was not aware that you were here. Was there something I could help you with?"

written by Jam on Sep 16, 2012 17:29

"Wow L4-O, you really were carrying a small armoury with you!"

I thank the guards and step past the checkpoint.

written by Gligar on Sep 16, 2012 19:13

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

While L4-O goes through his scan, Jam-Y thanks the goon and steps away from the checkpoint, while commenting on how much L4-O was carrying. (The goons don't comment. I guess they're used to Armed Forces clones carrying small armouries around.)

Soon, L4-O's scan is complete. "You're good to go."

written by Speeder on Sep 16, 2012 20:01

I poke the PDC, just enough to allow me to read the message without picking it up.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 16, 2012 22:27

"Thank you."

I start walking in the direction the goons told me to go, towards the medbay. I look around the area while walking though, due to curiosity.

written by Jam on Sep 16, 2012 23:42

I follow L4-O, since he seems to have an idea where he's going.

I also take this chance to look around a bit, in case there happen to be any commies nearby that want to hurt our precious Junior Citizens.

written by Kristos on Sep 17, 2012 03:32

I speak to the ORANGE: "Hello. I am the leader of Team Sigma, here to investigate the suspected sabotage. How might I procure sample barrels from line 3 and line 4?"

written by Gligar on Sep 17, 2012 15:13

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y decides to be nosy and read the message:

Has AF target been eliminated yet?

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O thanks the goons and heads off in the indicated direction. While doing so, he looks around, noting the visible laser turrets. Usually, they're concealed until needed, but here, they're constantly deployed. Not just that, but more goons loiter at doorways, glowering at the two of them.

Jam-Y also looks around, keeping an eye out for anything suspicious. You can never be too careful.

Soon, the two reach a set of double doors, outside which are more goons. The doors are marked MEDICAL BAY.

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R speaks to the ORANGE, asking how he would go about getting samples for testing. "You're here, are you? Well, you can't just take them from the factory floor. You'll have to get them from the warehouse. That's where they're being packed."

written by Speeder on Sep 17, 2012 15:18

I take a photo of that PDC with my own PDC.

I also take some more photos of the scene.

Then I send it to Friend Computer with the text:

"Proof that the already terminated briefing officer has also a count of treason for being member of a secret society.

Requesting detention of that officer for interrogation.

Requesting information about who knew of Team Epsilon assignments"

written by Kristos on Sep 17, 2012 17:16

"Thank you sir!" I say as I turn and jog back to the assembly lines to follow the course of the laser barrels from line 4.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 17, 2012 17:37

I enter the medical bay and take a look around.

If there is a line I need to be in, then I get in the line.

I keep a watch around for anything suspicious, like any very angry GREENs, or other dangerous clones.

written by Jam on Sep 17, 2012 17:53

I follow after L4-O, watching for any clones that are showing a suspicious level of interest in L4-O.

written by Gligar on Sep 17, 2012 19:36

Room H-12, Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y decides that he must make an official report of this.

He takes a few pictures of the scene, including of the PDC showing its message. To those, he adds a request that the GREEN be detained for interrogation, and one for information; specifically who knew about Team Epsilon's assignments...

As soon as he sends it, the other PDC beeps. A soft voice ANNOUNCES, "Self-destruct enabled. Have a nice daycycle."

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O and Jam-Y arrive at the medical bay to discover that the place is a mess. The reason is clear: a group of Junior Citizens has escaped from the crèche. And, well, nobody seems to want to deal with it.

Wait, that's not entirely true... one clone is attempting to tell them to stop what they're doing, but she is rebuffed. "Can't make me, commie! I'll tell the Computer you hit me!"

[1195]

Meanwhile, docbots attempt to maintain order and continue their work, be it sawing off a limb, injecting one of those overly-large syringes they like to use, or even just talking to clones and/or telling them to stay in line.

L4-O and Jam-Y also get in line. The line, incidentally, is one of two that wind their way throughout the medical bay, sticking to the RED line on the floor. A RED line through the GREEN bay...

And on the subject of the colour GREEN, look who is on one of the operating tables...

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R thanks the ORANGE and heads back through the factory floor.

Laser barrel warehouse, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

He follows the lines right to the end, and finds the warehouse, where, as promised, the laser barrels are being packed into boxes. Those boxes are then carried by forklift to a maze of shelves, and them seemingly taken from there by more forklifts to truckbots to be distributed.

Notably, the forklifts seem to be taking boxes off the truckbots as well.

written by Speeder on Sep 17, 2012 19:46

I RUN...

I stop in the corridor panting.

"A PDC will explode there, I think you should cover your ears and hope it is not a nuke or chemical weapon."

I cover my ears and prepare for the bang.

written by Jam on Sep 17, 2012 22:35

I panic when I see the GREEN clone, and move to shield L4-O from the GREEN's vision in case he happens to look our way.

I also start whispering to L4-O.

"Did you see that GREEN clone? Is that who I think it is?! What is he doing here, so soon after recloning?"

I check the GREEN clone again, not believing our unfortunate luck. Maybe I was only seeing things...

written by Lightning4 on Sep 18, 2012 00:27

"I don't know, I guess there's a cloning bay nearby... but why would a freshly cloned clone need to be here?"

I try to remain behind Jam-Y, if possible, so the GREEN can't see me. I also try to avoid stepping out of the RED line, since doing so is treason!

written by Cryoburner on Sep 18, 2012 01:06

"Hello, forklift. Thank you for not horribly impaling me your forks. Yes, I'd like to ask a few questions about the operation of this warehouse. How about I ride along to avoid disrupting loading schedules any further..."

I look for a place to ride along on the forklift, since that seems to be the popular thing to do these days, and because I'm not entirely sure how to get out of this network of shelves on my own. If found, I climb in place so that the forklift can continue back to the loading bay, or wherever it is that forklifts go after dropping off crates on shelves.

"It seems as though you are bringing in crates from those truckbots and loading them onto shelves. Is there some reason for this? Do you know what the crates contain?"

written by Kristos on Sep 18, 2012 01:18

First I go to where assembly line 4 laser barrels are being packed and request to take three barrels for testing. If that is successful, I write on them "line 4 barrel 1 [2, & 3]". Then I do the same for line 3. If I have bags I bag the barrels for each line separately.

I go back to the vendobot. Rubbing my hands together and going "He he he!" I purchase one of each RED product (unless the selection is huge).

I walk back to the warehouse and I ask a forklift, "Hello. Why are[/were] boxes being removed from the truckbots?" Then I take a quick look around for Cyrus-R.

written by Gligar on Sep 18, 2012 13:56

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Running out of the debriefing room (and almost crashing into Nukabot), Speed-Y warns everyone about the PDC explosion... which happens even before he can finish... rather loudly, I might add.

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

It can be heard all the way over in the medical bay, where Jam-Y is in the middle of panicking at the sight of the GREEN. He asks L4-O for a second opinion, but... as far as he can see, it's definitely the same clone!

L4-O guesses that there must be a cloning station nearby, but doesn't know why a freshly-decanted clone would need to be in a medical bay... but whatever the reason, he can at least try to stay as out of sight as he can (which isn't all that much in this medical bay).

The GREEN looks in their direction...

Laser barrel warehouse, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R agrees that the forklift can help, and suggests that he ride back with it so as to not disrupt the forklift's work. "Certainly," the bot replies. "An Efficient Warehouse Is A Happy Warehouse, as citizens say."

Cyrus-R climbs on to the back, and allows the forklift to continue before asking his questions. His first question concerns the boxes that are being unloaded from the truckbots. "I do not know for certain, but I am informed that the boxes contain laser barrels which have been returned due to being defective. There has been a sharp rise in the number of returns recently."

Meanwhile, over at the packing area, Kris-R is negotiating for samples he can test. The supervisor allows him to take no more than five from each line... so he starts with taking just six in total: three from Line 4 and three from Line 3. He doesn't have bags but he does have those labels, so he can at least label them up.

That done, he heads out.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

But he's not going to the office. Instead, he's going to a vendobot. Why? He wants to buy stuff. He ends up buying one B3 Plain, one packet of Cold Fun, and one Vita-Yum Meal Substitute Bar.

Then he realises that he still has work to do in the warehouse, and heads back...

Laser barrel warehouse, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

When he arrives, he locates a forkbot. There are a couple arriving right now. He asks one about the unloaded boxes. "They contain defective laser barrels," the bot replies.

Right, what else? Oh yes! Cyrus-R! Isn't that him, riding on that forkbot over there?

written by Jam on Sep 18, 2012 15:57

I quickly turn away from the GREEN, hoping he didn't see my face. Then I continue whispering to L4-O.

"I bet he came here right after he decanted. Probably remembered you had to pick up your medication. This isn't good..."

Well, I'm guessing he won't be able to terminate you right here, since he probably doesn't have any weapons with him. That doesn't stop him from giving you orders though..."

I start thinking of a plan.

written by Gligar on Sep 18, 2012 18:19

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Hoping that the GREEN didn't recognise him, Jam-Y turns away. He continues speaking to L4-O, suggesting that he might have remembered that L4-O had to come here. He probably doesn't have any weapons on him, but he could still give L4-O orders... hmmm... he'll think of something.

The line moves at a pace that makes PLC's queue look like they're standing still. Because they are, 99.9% of the time.

written by Speeder on Sep 18, 2012 18:29

I cringe at the bang.

Then I look around confused, then at the rest of the team.

"What the?"

I take a look inside the briefing room, trying to figure the damage and what sort of explosive the PDC had.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 18, 2012 19:31

I try to turn away too, if I can without looking odd.

"I wonder if I have to get the medication from this bay, or if I can get it from another in the sector."

"Although, weapons aren't allowed here. So that means he shouldn't be carrying anything either..."

written by Jam on Sep 18, 2012 22:32

I shrug.

"Shouldn't doesn't mean isn't! He probably could have smuggled something in if he wanted. I mean, I walked through the checkpoint carrying a box of laser pistols in plain sight, and the guards didn't do anything. Though, that might be because the laser pistols are technically still with Nukabot. Kinda, in a way..."

written by Gligar on Sep 18, 2012 22:48

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y cringes. That explosion was a little too big.

Glancing into the room, he can see that the place is a mess. There's no sign of the GREEN's corpse, nor his own. Nor of the laser turret. There's just debris and smoke. Whatever explosive that PDC contained was pretty effective.

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O also turns, wondering if he has to get his medications from this medical bay...

Oh hey! There's a notice over there, behind the docbot, reminding clones that no weapons are permitted here. Which means, as L4-O points out, that the GREEN shouldn't have any weapons with him.

Not that it won't stop him if he tries... after all, as Jam-Y admits, they're kind of smuggling in some laser pistols... even though they're kinda-sorta back on Nukabot...

I wonder if anyone heard that? The GREEN's looking over intently. Did he notice something?

The queue moves again.

written by Speeder on Sep 18, 2012 23:02

I also take pics of that and send as new annex to the last message...

written by Lightning4 on Sep 18, 2012 23:12

I lower my voice some.

"Well, there's always improvised weapons too. I have a hammer. I guess it doesn't count as a weapon, though. I can't really imagine any hammer uses relevant to where we are, though."

"Then there's always our fists. Two against one, we could probably take him. Maybe."

[1197]

written by Jam on Sep 18, 2012 23:30

I put some of my towels over the laser pistols in my box, so that it's a bit less obvious I have them.

I also lower my voice.

"I actually forgot that Nukabot's and my box were linked together... Whoops..."

I look around nervously.

"Maybe we should try to find a less violent way to stop him from terminating you... I think punching a GREEN is definitely treasonous, regardless if his last clone tried to terminate you or not..."

written by Kristos on Sep 19, 2012 12:31

I send Cyrus-R a PDC message: "Please collect three laser barrels from the boxes of returned laser barrels and then return to the office."

written by Gligar on Sep 19, 2012 13:23

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Another message gets sent. Speed-Y hasn't done reporting, it seems.

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O lowers his voice, and suggests that they could still take out the GREEN... after all, he has a hammer, and... they have fists...

Jam-Y then realises what he said before, and starts putting his towels into the box. He'd... actually kind of forgotten that the "two" boxes were linked like that. Erm.

Perhaps they could find a less violent way of dealing with the GREEN (who, incidentally, is now fiddling with his PDC). It's probably a bad idea to go around hitting higher-clearance clones.

The queue moves again. They're almost at the docbot.

Laser barrel warehouse, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Noticing Cyrus-R, Kris-R pulls out his PDC and sends a message to him concerning the defective barrels.

Sure enough, while riding through the shelves, Cyrus-R receives the message. As he does, a second forkbot appears from an intersection, deposits a box onto a shelf, and leaves.

written by Jam on Sep 19, 2012 13:42

I panic once I see the GREEN typing on his PDC, and whisper hurriedly to L4-O.

"I have a bad feeling about this... He's either seen you, or he's suspicious about me. Tell Nukabot to try to throw the box off of itself, or somehow get the contents of the box out of the box... If I'm right, the stuff in my box should disappear... Also, make sure it's clear that the box is not to be destroyed.

You might want to prepare yourself for an attack too... If you want anything inside this box, now would be the time to take it."

I take my mutant medications pack, the syringe and bot manipulator, first aid kits, and any other pills I find, out of the box.

written by Speeder on Sep 19, 2012 14:31

I look confused for a while.

I turn to the others.

"Alright! What you plan in doing, just staying here doing nothing?"

I climb on Nukabot.

"Hey Nukabot, time to see you get repairs maybe?"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 19, 2012 17:42

I shrug.

"Okay."

I take out my PDC too and send a message to Nukabot:

This will seem like an odd request, but we need you to somehow knock the special box off of yourself, and spill its contents so they're unobtainable from this end. Well, unobtainable without any work anyway. Or you could just find someone from our team to do so themselves.

written by Gligar on Sep 19, 2012 18:03

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y has a bad feeling... either L4-O has been spotted, or he's suspicious. He tells L4-O to tell Nukabot to ensure the contents of the box can't be access from this end... without destroying the box. But first... there should be all that medical gear in there... let's remove it.

While he's doing that, L4-O sends the message.

The queue moves again. They're finally at the docbot.

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

His report finally done, Speed-Y demands to know what the team's doing now. Standing around doing nothing?

And where's Nukabot?

Right down the corridor, it seems. It's approaching them fast. "I have just received a request form the Equipment Officer that the... special box is to be emptied," it tells them.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 19, 2012 19:13

I keep my voice relatively low.

"Hi, I'm here for my mandatory medication, prescribed by Friend Computer?"

I try to discreetly glance at the GREEN, then look back at the docbot.

written by Speeder on Sep 19, 2012 19:24

I look puzzled at Nukabot.

As soon as I can do it without getting injured, I get the special box, and remove all contents from it, using the very gracious technique of flipping the box upside down over a flat surface, like the floor...

But not too high, I don't want anything actually breaking.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 19, 2012 21:49

I read the message.

"A message! Hmm... I am apparently supposed to retrieve a few laser barrels from the boxes of returned barrels. Do you think there might be some in that crate that has been conveniently placed on that shelf before us, forkbot?"

I look at the crate to see if it looks as though it could contain barrels.

written by Gligar on Sep 19, 2012 22:09

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O speaks to the docbot, requesting his mandatory medications pack. The docbot replies, "Your ME Card identifies you... accidental termination? One moment, please..."

It turns and heads to a cabinet, where it pulls out various medications, and stuffs them into a box. Finished, it carries them back. "Here you are."

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y decides to complete the request himself, using the simplest method possible: emptying the box onto the floor. Quite a lot falls out: three YELLOW laser pistols, a spare YELLOW barrel, a set of RED reflec, a breathing mask, a Mk. II Indestructible Loyalty Transcript Recorder in case (with its key), Jam-Y's old ME Card, Jam-Y's old Series 1300 PDC, Jam-Y's MBD badge, a RED laser pistol, Mick-R's ME Card, and some towels.

Laser barrel warehouse, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R reads his message, and looks at the box ahead. He can see the label, which seems to indicate that the box contains laser barrels. "There is a strong probability that the box contains laser barrels," the forkbot says.

written by Speeder on Sep 19, 2012 22:11

I take one of the towels and make a cool band in the upper left arm.

Then I wear the RED reflec... Better than nothing.

Then I turn to Nukabot.

"Why Jam got rid of his equipment?"

written by Jam on Sep 20, 2012 00:07

I look at the box again to check whether there's anything left in it.

I also try to discreetly look at the GREEN.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 20, 2012 01:17

"Thank you."

I inspect the box, without opening it yet.

If there's a path I can use to walk away discreetly, I use it. Otherwise, I try to use Jam-Y as cover if he moves too.

written by Gligar on Sep 20, 2012 18:32

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y takes one of the towels - a nice RED one - and ties it round his left arm, making a nice armband. (Did you know that before Mandatory Bonus Duties were invented, Team Leaders would wear a red armband to differentiate them from the other members of their team? The practice is all but forgotten now, but is not treasonous.) While he's at it, he takes and wears the RED reflec. It's better than nothing, after all.

But there's something worrying him... why did Jam-Y drop off his equipment? "He and L4-O have headed to the medical bay to permit L4-O to obtain his mandatory medications pack," Nukabot replies. "However, the medical bay is located within the Crèche Control Zone. No weapons are permitted inside the control zone."

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y checks the box, and finds it empty. It looks like L4-O's request got through. He sneaks a peek at the GREEN, to find that he is trying to free himself from a restraint that someone used to stop him from leaving his bed.

L4-O thanks the docbot and glances at the box. It's marked with the logo of Medical Services, and has the text MANDATORY MEDICATION PACK printed on it.

The RED path continues on past the docbot, to another door on the other side of the medical bay (and travels vaguely away from the GREEN in some places... but mostly towards him...) Given that the GREEN is looking at them, L4-O looks at it, and decides to use Jam-Y as a cover.

written by Speeder on Sep 20, 2012 18:39

I look now even more puzzled.

"So... they are near the creche and had to get rid of the stuff inside the box..."

There are rampaging junior citizens again maybe?

I remember the last time a junior citizen was recruited to the leopards and convinced others to join it... They wrecked so much stuff that the damage was bigger than what they all could pay in their entire lifetimes...

If they had lifetimes, I mean, I don't know what Friend Computer did with them..."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 20, 2012 18:58

I notice the GREEN is in restraints and relax a little.

"Ah. He's all tied up, maybe he's not a threat?"

I continue following the path with Jam-Y.

written by Gligar on Sep 20, 2012 23:44⁷⁹⁴

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Nukabot's statement just makes Speed-Y even more confused. If they had to dump the contents of the box, does that mean that there are Junior Citizens on the loose? It reminds him of the time some Junior Citizens got recruited by Death Leopard... they caused so much damage... what exactly happened to them?

"I think... that sounds familiar," Lucas-O tells him. "I... might even have been involved in some ay... but... I don't remember. I guess everyone got brainscrubbed... even Our Mutual Friend won't terminate a Junior Citizen without a real good reason..."

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O relaxes when he sees the restraints and concentrates on walking with Jam-Y.

They do not get far before they hear an almighty SNAP from behind them.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 20, 2012 23:54

I turn around quickly and try to see what is going on. If something or someone is coming at us, I try to dodge accordingly.

written by Jam on Sep 20, 2012 23:58

I try to block the way so that the GREEN I'm assuming in rushing towards us can't get to L4-O.

written by Speeder on Sep 21, 2012 16:07

"I wonder what would warrant that..."

Then I look to the others.

"Alright, any suggestion on what we should do now? Maybe rescue Jam and L4 from the junior citizens?"

written by 4616599 on Sep 21, 2012 16:24

I look bemused.

"Their message might've just been a precaution against any overzealous enforcer of the no-weapons-in-control-zone rule."

"Still, I think we're well equipped to rescue them from the vicious clutches of marauding junior citizens, or anything similarly severe.... we should investigate!"

I begin to climb onboard Nukabot.

⁷⁹⁴ GLIGAR: (OOC: Okay, this update is going to be painful due to a certain ISP's "Super" Hub deciding to develop a hardware fault and basically [DFS]ing itself. I am trying to Kindle this post up instead. Also, we need an airquotes smiley.)

written by Gligar on Sep 21, 2012 16:26⁷⁹⁵

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O turns to see that the GREEN seems to have broken his restraints and is now charging towards him! He ducks at the same time as Jam-Y jumps in front of him. The end result is that the GREEN crashes into Jam-Y instead and knocks him to the floor.

written by Gligar on Sep 21, 2012 16:33⁷⁹⁶

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y wonders why that is in place and asks for suggestions.

Joris-O thinks that it may simply have been a precaution and thinks that the team can handle whatever is happening. Perhaps they could investigate.

He climbs onto Nukabot without waiting for anyone else.

written by Jam on Sep 21, 2012 17:33

"Run L4-O! I'll keep him occupied!"

I attempt to grab the GREEN to stop him reaching L4-O.

"Sir! What are you doing?! Attacking loyal clones is treasonous!"

written by Speeder on Sep 21, 2012 17:46

I look where I left the wheelchair, then I place the stuff on it, and put it on Nukabot forks, and climb again on Nukabot.

"Alright Nukabot, can you take us to Jam and L4?"

Oh, after the entire team is aboard, please..."

written by Cryoburner on Sep 21, 2012 18:18

"Perhaps we should just continue on to the truckbot carrying crates of laser barrels, to make sure that the crate of laser barrels from which we retrieve some laser barrels, is in fact a crate of returned laser barrels, and not just a crate of laser barrels containing laser barrels than have not been returned."

I continue riding.

"Unless you can determine that from the label or something. Whatever is most efficient."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 21, 2012 18:20

I try to back away from the GREEN and Jam-Y, but don't start running yet. I try to dodge if the GREEN comes at me again.

⁷⁹⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: more pain. Would you believe that, as well as a failed Hub, my "service" "provider" have decided to have a "massive fault" causing them to conveniently forget what I already told them about hardware failures? Seethe.)

⁷⁹⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC:sigh. Part 2. I already miss having multiple windows available.)

written by Gligar on Sep 21, 2012 23:53⁷⁹⁷

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y tells L4-O to run for it while he deals with the GREEN and tess said GREEN that he is a traitor for doing this.

"Says you, mutant!" he spits back.

The Junior Citizens notice, and start chanting, "Mutant! Mutant! Mutant!"

Corridor J3, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y sorts out the dropped equipment by putting it all onto Azir-R's wheelchair, which then goes onto Nukabot's forks. Then he boards the bot and tells it to head to where the other two went. Once everyone has boarded, of course. Not long to wait then. Everyone climbs on board, and Nukabot heads off.

Amongst the shelves, Warehouse, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R suggests that they head to a truckbot to be certain tha they are getting returned barrels, but it turns out not to be necessary. "The box's RFID tag indicates that it contains returned barrels," the forkbot explains. "You may obtain your samples from it."

written by Jam on Sep 22, 2012 00:30

I smile suddenly.

"Yes, I am indeed a mutant! Of course, since I'm registered, I have the full backing of The Computer to terminate traitors and secret society scum like you. Isn't Friend Computer smart?!"

My smile starts to slip into what I'm hoping appears to be a creepy, sadistic grin.

"A weaponless traitor against a powerful registered mutant... This is gonna be fun..."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 22, 2012 06:27

I keep just close enough to Jam-Y to assist... should he need it, anyway.

But for now, I just keep my distance and watch.

written by Gligar on Sep 22, 2012 15:59⁷⁹⁸

Note: the turn was posted at http://streyalis.org/~gligar/ppg/Post_archive/TempUpdateA, but is presented here for completeness.

⁷⁹⁷ Gligar: (OOO: So I have to put up with this until the 26th...

...

1792 treason points to Virgin Media!

...someone remind me to update tha when the dust settles 😊) ⁷⁹⁸ GLIGAR: (OOO: ...

Make your mind up. Either I am logged in or I am not. Well, I guess I'll put the turn elsewhere ans aviod the failure.)

written by Gligar on Sep 22, 15:36

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y agrees that he is a mutant; a registered one. That means he can use his mutation to terminate traitors such as the GREEN.

He then grins... But is that really the way to grin around Junior Citizens? Apparently so, since a couple of them start to cheer as Jam-Y says that this will be... Fun.

The GREEN grabs one of them. "Don't bother. You try anything, he dies."

And it looks like L4-O didn't run after all. He seems to want to stick around and watch.

written by Jam on Sep 22, 2012 17:04

I stand up and look at the GREEN with a horrified expression on my face.

"You wouldn't dare!"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 22, 2012 20:30

"Wow. That's bad. That's get demoted straight to INFRARED, vatslime scrubbing duty bad."

I look the GREEN over for weapons. If he doesn't have any visible, I say,

"I don't see any weapons on you. How are you planning on doing that?"

written by Gligar on Sep 23, 2012 16:26⁷⁹⁹

Note: this turn was posted at http://streyalis.org/~gligar/ppg/Post_archive/TempUpdateB/ but is presented here for completeness.

written by Gligar on Sep 23, 17:08

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y looks on in horror. Surely he wouldn't...!

L4-O believes the GREEN's actions to be worthy of vatslime reassignment duty. He also wonders exactly how the GREEN intends to carry out his threat, as he seems to be unarmed. "I don't need weapons to terminate someone!"

The other Junior Citizens have realised that one of their number is in danger, and they start to round on the GREEN. They change their chant: "Commie! Commie! Commie!"

(Well, except for the one who doesn't notice that the others aren't saying "Mutant!" any more.)

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Nukabot carries on its journey... Oy to be stopped at a checkpoint. "Back again, forkbot? And who are these jokers?"

⁷⁹⁹ GLIGAR: (OOO: No OOO today.)

written by Jam on Sep 23, 2012 17:30

"Hmm.. You don't need weapons? Does that mean you're a mutant too? A Commie Mutant Traitor!

But even if you're not a CMT, you'd gain nothing from killing a Junior Citizen... Why die and get demoted when you can die and keep your clearance? I say you're bluffing!"

I grin at the GREEN again.

"Have fun getting your brain melted! Goodbye!"

I stretch my palm out towards the GREEN's head and get a look of concentration on my face."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 23, 2012 19:39

I just watch Jam-Y and the GREEN now. I get a little closer, until I'm about even with Jam-Y again.

written by Kristos on Sep 23, 2012 21:47

I go back to the office and unlock the door and enter, closing the door behind me. While waiting for Cyrus-R to return I sit in a chair (if there is one) and slowly enjoy my B3 Plain and Cold Fun. "Ahh, RED. Just my clearance."

written by Speeder on Sep 24, 2012 00:43

I look at the officer.

"Oh, so Nukabot was here before...

Anyway sir, it is a emergency, our friends are in peril, I don't know what sort of peril, but I've heard that he is weaponless because of the Junior Citizens, and he sent a very dire message without specifying the danger, I guess that the junior citizens escaped the creche and are rampaging... Or something is putting the Junior Citizens in peril, anyway, we need to rescue, or our team FROM the Junior Citizens, or our team AND the Junior Citizens...

I am Speed-Y-4 leader of Team Epsilon"

written by Cryoburner on Sep 24, 2012 04:35

"Thank you, forkbot."

I try opening the crate, and if openable, retrieve a few red barrels from inside.

written by Gligar on Sep 24, 2012 17:42⁸⁰⁰

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y wonders if the GREEN's words mean he's a mutant as well as a commie traitor... a Commie Mutant Traitor! But even if he is... he has nothing to gain from terminating a Junior Citizens... and literally everything to lose. So why do it?

⁸⁰⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC: They actually did something right for once and came early! So this post is a normal one. Though with my luck, it'll go down again tomorrow...)

Unless, of course, he can't! Perhaps he's bluffing! Jam-Y seems to think so. Even as he prepares to attack mentally.

Can he even do that? Well, regardless of whether he can or not, the GREEN lets go of the Junior Citizen and puts his hands to his head. He seems to be mumbling something about Hot Fun. He screws up his eyes as if something is painful...

The Junior Citizen sees the opportunity and runs across the room, hiding behind a docbot.

L4-O decides to rejoin Jam-Y.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R re-enters the office, closing the door behind him. While he waits for Cyrus-R, he sits in the one chair available (which seems to have been taken from elsewhere, as it's black) and takes the time to enjoy a little snack.

The terminal suddenly beeps.

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y explains to the officer that they received a message from their teammates that indicated some sort of emergency, and that they're responding.

"I can't have you pass here with weapons!" barks the goon. "This is the Crèche Control Zone!"

Amongst the shelves, Warehouse, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R thanks the forkbot and looks at the crate. It appears that the lid will just come off, and allow him to remove some barrels if he wants. And, it seems, he does want some barrels, so he selects a few RED ones.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 24, 2012 17:56

I decide to back away, again, but this time to avoid any... pre-soyilent from spattering my way if the GREEN decides to pop.

written by Speeder on Sep 24, 2012 18:04

"Alright...

Then you go there with your weapons to rescue them!"

I grin.

"You are IntSec, it is your job to maintain security, and you have a problem in the Crèche Control Zone, this mean it is your job to fix it anyway, nor ours Troubleshooters."

written by Gligar on Sep 22, 2012 00:15

Sol tr to typr a post only to find that y Kindle had decided to forget my cookies, logging me ot HALFWAY THROUGH TPING.

How am I supposed to work with THIS?

I can't use my phone. Ale apparently hates them because HE MADE THIS SITE USE 53573577235257 NESTED FRAMES.

written by Jam on Sep 24, 2012 20:04

"You're hiding something, I can sense it! You can feel me worming my way into your mind, can't you?!"

I get a crazy grin again and slowly walk closer to the GREEN.

"You know there's no use trying to escape! You can't run, you can't hide! Tell us everything you know, and maybe I'll let you stay sane after I'm done having my fun!"

written by Gligar on Sep 24, 2012 22:15

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O backs away again. Pre-Soylent isn't exactly his cup of TeaSir. It's much better when it's processed Jam-Y doesn't seem to care. He thinks the GREEN's hiding something, and he plans to get it... any way he can. He steps towards the GREEN.

But then the GREEN sneers at him. Lunging, he snarls, "Not working, is it? Heh heh he-ack! Something... in... aaah!"

The GREEN sinks to the floor, obviously in pain, clutching his head. He begins to sweat...

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y then suggests that the goons go and investigate. It's their job, after all, not the Troubleshooters'.

"We were given specific orders," the goon replies. "Remain here until further notice. And we're not about to disobey just because some YELLOW told us to."

written by Speeder on Sep 24, 2012 22:18

"Alright, then what you suggest?"

I keep looking at them.

"If Junior citizens die because of this, I will say that you did nothing about it.."

written by Jam on Sep 24, 2012 23:41

I start to look irritated...

"Of course it didn't work, I've haven't tried anything yet! But it looks like whoever you're working with has turned against you... So annoying..."

...

Ugh, come on L4-O, let's go an get some Hot F- Soylent! Some nice hot Soylent, yes! We can throw a nice fun Soylent party or something, invite all our friends... Surely Cryo-R would be able to figure that out, didn't he say he was an expert at parties? Or was he an expert at Hot Fun... I mean, Soylent! But doesn't Hot Fun sound good right now? I think

And to cap it all off, a cetrtain piece of shitISP apparently won't get this sorted until the 26th.

I can't update under these conditions.

Unless I did something weird like uploading it to a site my phone can handle 😊

written by Kristos on Sep 23, 2012 22:04

(OOC: Waiting until the 26th or reading updates on an external site? I think either option is fine. 😊)

written by Speeder on Sep 24, 2012 00:36

OOC: I can wait your ISP...

Also... sorry for being suddenly gone... friday a very important person to me called, and I went to visit

I could eat about a dozen packs right now... And we should make them extra hot! Extra, extra HOT! And that'll make it extra delicious, right?! BECAUSE EVERYTHING'S BETTER WHEN IT'S HOT! HOT HOT HOT FUN! IT'S MANDATORY AND DELICIOUS!"

Wait, why am I screaming about parties and Hot Fun?

written by Lightning4 on Sep 25, 2012 00:05

I look at Jam-Y with extreme concern on my face, and start backing away from both the GREEN, and Jam-Y.

"Um, sir? Are you okay?"

I start very quietly humming a loyalty jingle...

written by Cryoburner on Sep 25, 2012 01:09

I replace the lid on the crate, and return to my position on the forkbot.

"Oookay!"

written by Kristos on Sep 25, 2012 06:24

I study the terminal screen.

written by Gligar on Sep 25, 2012 14:38

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y wonders if the goon has any suggestions as to what to do. Because if Junior Citizens die... the goon will have done nothing about it.

He is interrupted by a call over the goon's Com unit: "All units, we've got a situation at the medical bay!"

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y's happiness drops. Of course it didn't work... because he didn't do anything! Though the GREEN seems to be having problems with his bosses...

But Jam-Y seems to have had enough. He just wants to go and get some Hot F ~~Hot F~~ Soylent. Not Hot Fun, regardless of how fun it is. Maybe they could throw a party... wasn't Cryo-R an expert at parties? Or something? No matter... they have Hot Fun! No wait, Soylent!

He starts ranting about Hot Fun for a while, before realising what happened... so he did dive in to the GREEN's mind.

L4-O begins backing away... and humming a loyalty jingle to himself. Is there something...?⁸⁰¹

And there's something else here that's hot: the GREEN. He seems to be smouldering now, and not just his head... everything.

⁸⁰¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: don't you just love a good ad jingle? +1pp to Jam.)

that person, and to my own surprise I spent my whole weekend with that person 😊

With only a android that also hate postline frames 😊

Then, with a whoomph, he bursts into flames.

A lot of flames.

Amongst the shelves, Warehouse, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Now he has what he needs, Cyrus-R puts the lid back on and boards the forkbot again. "I am about to return to the warehouse entrance," the forkbot says, just before it starts off through the shelves again.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R looks at the terminal, to find a message addressed to him.

written by Speeder on Sep 25, 2012 15:25

"Team Epsilon to arms!"

I pull my slugthrower, and get ready to move out, but I don't cross the checkpoint without permission yet.

I keep staring at the officer.

"I need to rescue my team... Can please you allow me to do so?"

written by Gligar on Sep 25, 2012 18:32

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y orders his team to get ready, pulling his slugthrower as he does, but makes no move to cross the checkpoint.

Meanwhile, the goon answers his PDC. "Report!"

"A GREEN clone seems to want to attack some Junior Citizens... and there's a registered mutant. Everyone converge."

The goon returns to Speed-Y. "I'm guessing that one of those is one of yours... I hope for your sake it's the GREEN. Stay here, we're going to the medical bay."

And with that, the goons leave.

written by Speeder on Sep 25, 2012 18:58

I facepalm and turn to the team.

"Alright, anyone has any suggestion of what we do now?"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 25, 2012 19:27

"Umm, sir? You don't have pyrokinesis, do you? 'm thinking we need to clear out soon... and quickly."

My nervous loyalty jingle humming gets louder.

written by Jam on Sep 25, 2012 21:55

"What? No, of course I don't have Pyrokinesis! That'd be an unregistered mutation, which is treasonous! Didn't I say there was another clone at work here? The GREEN starting clutching his head in pain before I even started using my mutation, and do you really think I'd be able to- OH VATCRAP, WHAT HAPPENED TO HIM?!"

I stare at the burning remains of the clone in shock. Then I take a second to compose myself.

"L4-O, the most I can do is mess with a clone's brain, and even that's difficult... I was pretty much bluffing the entire time when I was talking about terminating him. I wasn't even sure I'd be able to 'melt' his brain, let alone set his entire body set on fire!"

I watch the fire to make sure it isn't spreading to the Junior Citizens, or anything dangerous like that.

written by Kristos on Sep 26, 2012 00:36

Surprised, I put down my B3 and study the terminal design, the key layout, the interface, and the color of the walls in the room... then I click a button to view the message contents. clicky

written by Gligar on Sep 26, 2012 14:30

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y facepalms. He hasn't done that in a while!

Then he asks no-one in particular what they're supposed to do now.

"Well," John-O points out, "I wouldn't normally suggest this, but... the goons are gone... and they can't see us back here..."

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O looks a bit worried. And more than a bit nervous, as he asks Jam-Y whether he has Pyrokinesis... maybe they should clear out, ASAP.

Jam-Y denies this; it'd be an unregistered mutation. He points out that he said that there was another clone at work.

Then he seems to finally notice the true extent of what has happened.

It takes him a minutecycle to calm down enough to be able to explain that he was largely bluffing. He can really only mess with a clone's head - there's no way he could set one on fire like that. Speaking of which... oh, good. The Junior Citizens are safe, though it seems that one was wearing an Official Junior Troubleshooter hat that caught fire. A docbot is seeing to him, but he'll probably be upset about that hat. Do you know how rare those are?

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R puts down his B3 and gives the terminal a more thorough inspection. He had already seen that it's a recent design, using a relatively recent version of the standard UI, though he can now see that the keyboard is slightly different, with special hotkeys - none of which are labelled. And, instead of using a touchscreen, this terminal uses a pointing device, consisting of a ball that can be used to move a pointer on the screen and a couple of buttons. He also notices the room's RED clearance stripe (the rest of the room is as grey as the synthcrete it is.)

[1204]

Finally, he opens the message. It's The Computer, asking for a status report.

written by Speeder on Sep 26, 2012 16:19

I look to John...

"Still, I think if we go there armed, this might be really treason... I suggest we leave the weapons here on Nukabot, and go rescue Jam..."

If needed you can mind blast people around us anyway...

And I trust my hand-to-hand combat skills."

I go put the weapons in the wheelchair, and then prepare to leave.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 26, 2012 17:30

"What now, Sir?"

I say in the middle of my loyalty jingle.

"I think the GREEN is no longer a threat, at least, but I'm concerned about whoever can do... THAT. And that they could do it to me."

I resume with the nervous humming.

written by Gligar on Sep 26, 2012 18:29

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Looking over at John-O, Speed-Y suggests that, before they go, they should still disarm themselves. After all, they still have fists, and John-O has his mind...

He unloads his weapons onto the wheelchair, while waiting for everyone else to drop theirs as well. "Alright, sir," John-O replies. "Should I call then and let them know we're on our way?"

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O wonders what they should do now... after all, the GREEN is no longer a threat, and there is still the issue of... what happened to him. He's worried that he'll be next.

Just then, goons begin to storm in. "Freeze!"

written by Speeder on Sep 26, 2012 18:39

I shake my head.

"Unless you inform Jam with your mind, I think it is best to just storm by surprise..."

Then I start to run toward the medical bay.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 26, 2012 20:14

I am about to turn around, but then I realize that's breaking orders, so I kind of just twitch for a second and otherwise remain frozen.

My humming stays constant, however, at least until I start speaking to the goons.

"Er, before you start asking, no, we don't really know what happened here either. What we do know is this GREEN tried to attack me. For the second time within this hourcycle.

In defiance of Friend Computer. He's been a very bad clone."

I look over the flaming pile of clone.

"And I think it's not just Friend Computer he's in trouble with."

written by Jam on Sep 26, 2012 20:31

I try to stay as still as possible.

"Just to let you guys know, there seems to be a Pyrokinesis mutant nearby..."

written by Kristos on Sep 26, 2012 23:45

My heart begins to pound rapidly. A personal message directly from the Computer! Oh what a favored troubleshooter I must be!

With sweaty trembling hands, I type the following message:

Friend Computer,

The issue with the faulty barrels started about the same time that assembly line 4 underwent unscheduled maintenance. Strangely, the barrels have been able to pass factory inspection without faults being detected, but are later returned. I have taken samples from lines 3 and 4. Cyrus-R is returning to this office with samples from the crates of returned barrels. Soon we will test them with the device provided by R&D.

Also, there were some suspicious clones following us around for a short time. I am sure you saw them from some of your many eyes. Are they a cause for concern?

Kris-R-QJT-1, Team Leader, Team Sigma

written by Cryoburner on Sep 27, 2012 02:07

ride, ride, ride

I continue riding the forkbot.

written by Gligar on Sep 27, 2012 18:49

Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y tells John-O not to make the call. Unless he mentally contacts Jam-Y, the best call would be to use the element of surprise. "Oh. Since I can't mentally call him, we'll just have to do that."

He runs off after Speed-Y, who has already begun the charge.

They arrive to discover Internal Security goons blockading this exit.

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Inside, L4-O is telling the goons that they don't really know what's happening either. The only thing they know is that this GREEN has attacked him twice now, against Friend Computer's orders. And, from the fact that said GREEN has been reduced to a pile of burning pre-Soylent, he has defied more than just Friend Computer.

[1205]

Jam-Y adds that there's likely to be a Pyrokinetic mutant in the vicinity.

One goon summarises. "So, this GREEN, which conveniently just caught fire, attacked you, did he? And there's apparently a Pyrokinetic around here? When was the last time you were tested? And what's his mutation?"

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel warehouse, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R nervously (he's never received a personal message from The Computer before!) replies, summarising what they have discovered so far. They're currently acquiring samples for testing, and they can begin doing that just as soon as Cyrus-R makes it back to the office.

He reports the suspicious clones he saw earlier following them around, and asks if they are a cause for concern.

The Computer replies,

Thank you for the report, citizen. I am pleased that your mission is proceeding smoothly.

With regard to the citizens you identified as suspicious, I suggest continued vigilance. If they continue to interfere, you may use your judgement concerning how to deal with them. I am confident that you will make the correct decision.

Thank you for your co-operation.

Warehouse door, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The forkbot on which Cyrus-R is riding eventually makes its way out of the shelves and back to the door, ready to receive another box. "I am ready to begin again," it announces.

written by Speeder on Sep 27, 2012 19:51

I scream as I arrive.

"FREEZE!!! TROUBLESHOOTER TEAM EPSILON HERE! WHAT IS GOING ON?"

I notice the burned guy...

"AAAAH WHAT IS THAT???"

I point to it like a shocked junior citizen.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 27, 2012 22:01

I try to respond to the goons, and turn to Jam-Y.

"What was it... mind sense? I think it was Mind Sense. Something involving minds. It's not exactly the kind of thing that causes clones to explode into flames."

I turn back to the goons, trying to explain myself now.

"As for me, I'm pretty sure I'm not a pyro mutant. The Armed Forces may not like mutants much, but I would still register that and use it as a weapon if I had it. I wouldn't let it go unregistered..."

"But no, that's definitely not my work. Either the pyro clone is in here right now, or we're dealing with a..."

I shudder.

"Class-F."

written by Jam on Sep 27, 2012 22:19

"Yeah, Mind Sense... And the GREEN didn't just attack me, he also threatened to terminate a Junior Citizen!

He probably would have done it too, except he got distracted when I pretended to attack his mind... The strange thing is, he acted like he was really being mentally attacked, and seemed to be in a great deal of pain. I thought he was faking it at first, until the whole bursting-into-flames thing happened..."

written by Gligar on Sep 27, 2012 23:03

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

From the corridor, Speed-Y can be heard shouting at everyone to freeze... again. Then he notices the burning remains of a GREEN clone and screams about that, pointing at it much like some of the Junior Citizens are doing. "You freeze!" barks one of the goons. "We'll do the interrogation here!"

L4-O explains that Jam-Y has Mind Sense, not something that could really cause people to burst into flames like that. As for himself... he's pretty sure he's not a Pyrokinetic. Even if he was, he wouldn't let it go unregistered. Which means that either there is a Pyro in the room... or there's a Class F involved.

"Class F? What in Alpha Complex are you even yammering about?" the goon wants to know. "But you have a point." He turns to one of the other goons. "You've got the scanner. Check their ME Cards."

"On it." The second goon pulls out his PDC and does something with it. "Here we are... those two are here. The YELLOW's registration is here, too."

"Good. But that doesn't mean that the ORANGE isn't a mutant."

Jam-Y confirms that he has Mind Sense. He states that the GREEN didn't just attack, but he also threatened to terminate a Junior Citizen! Then he got distracted... he (Jam-Y) was faking messing with his mind when all of a sudden he acted as if his mind really was under attack. Then he burst into flames.

"Interesting," the goon replies. "Let's look at that, shall we? Is this Junior Citizen still here?"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 27, 2012 23:33

I help look around for the Junior Citizen. If I see him, I point him out. Otherwise, I let Jam-Y look too.

"Over there."

written by Speeder on Sep 27, 2012 23:42

I just look confused...

And a bit frightened.

"If you never heard of F class mutant, let's say that it is a thing so scary that you will NOT want to hear about F class mutants..."

I shudder.

Then I comment.

"Actually, I don't think you have clearance to know what is a F class mutant anyway..."

written by Jam on Sep 28, 2012 02:49

"I dunno. Dean, are you still here?"

I look for the Junior Citizen.

written by Kristos on Sep 28, 2012 03:47

Wowie wow! The Computer is pleased! I contain my excitement so that it is only physically manifested by a slight smile and still-trembling hands. Hmm... we should probably test the laser barrels in a less contained area. Perhaps we should take the device back outside in case it delivers another cloud of gas.

written by Gligar on Sep 28, 2012 13:35

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O looks around, but can't see the Junior Citizen. He remembers that the kid went and hid somewhere.

Speed-Y simply states that the goon probably doesn't want to know about Class F mutants. Perhaps he is not even cleared to know. "Then how do you know about them?"

"Excuse me, sir," John-O interjects, "but basic knowledge of Class F mutants is available to anyone who looks. The same with the while classification system... you only have to look it up. As for more detailed information... well, we've run into them before."

Jam-Y is also looking for the Junior Citizen, but he has an advantage: he knows the kid's name. He calls it out - the Junior Citizen is known as Dean - and the Junior Citizen looks out from his hiding place. "Is it safe? Whoa, what happened to him?"

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R is overjoyed to know that The Computer is pleased in their work, but tries to hide most of it. In the meantime, he needs to figure out what to do about the device. The last time they used it, it emitted a big cloud of gas, and it probably wouldn't be a good idea to repeat it in an enclosed space. Perhaps they should go outside again?

But how long would that take? Does he want to risk the device for that?

written by Gligar on Sep 28, 2012 18:01

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y says that it's reasonably safe, and suggests that Dean talk to the nice IntSec clone, who wants to ask a few questions. Dean approaches, hesitantly. "It's okay," the goon says softly. "You're not in trouble."

"Okay..." Dean walks over.

"Alright. Why don't you tell me what happened?"

"Er... that bad GREEN guy said he'd kill me!"

written by Speeder on Sep 28, 2012 19:01

I make a shocked face.

Everyone know that even threatening to kill a junior citizen is bad idea...

written by Jam on Sep 28, 2012 19:52

"What could possibly be so important that the GREEN would risk threatening a Junior Citizen?! That's what I'd like to know..."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 28, 2012 20:24

"And what does he have against me anyway? Friend Computer already gave me my punishment for what I did, it's not like it had anything to do with him..."

I look at my medication package, and decide to peek inside if I can.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 29, 2012 00:12

"Thank you, forkbot! You were quite possibly the most helpful forkbot I've ridden all day, especially the part where you didn't run me over. You probably should get back to your loading and unloading of crates now though, unless you want to help test laser barrels or something. I'm not sure how effective you would be without hands though."

I dismount the forkbot and begin wandering toward the office.

written by Gligar on Sep 29, 2012 14:10

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Gasp! Speed-Y is shocked that anyone would even think about harming a Junior Citizen! As he points out, it's a Very Bad Thing to do so. Jam-Y is thinking much the same thing: what could be so important as to risk the wrath of The Computer over a Junior Citizen? And what does it all have to do with L4-O? The Computer already assessed him for mandatory medication (which, incidentally, he is trying to look in to. There's a lot of small boxes in there, along with a few bottles, and a piece of paper.) so... why terminate him?

L4-O wonders if it has something to do with the mission. What did he do, in particular?

Meanwhile, the goon continues to speak to Dean. "Did the bad GREEN say anything when he tried to kill you?"

[1207]

"Yeah... he said that the YELLOW shouldn't try to hurt him... and he seemed interested in that guy," (pointing at L4-O).

Warehouse entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R thanks the forkbot, saying that he'd better get to the office and test the barrels. "I am pleased to be of service, citizen," the forkbot answers, "but I am unfortunately unable to join you in testing these barrels. I am not programmed for such tasks."

The two part ways; Cyrus-R heading for the office, and the forkbot returning to its boxes.

The trip back to the office is nice and uneventful. He arrives to find the door closed.

written by Jam on Sep 29, 2012 15:58

I suddenly realize Speed-Y probably doesn't know who the GREEN was.

"Oh, that GREEN was our debriefing officer, that defied Friend Computer's orders and tried to terminate L4-O during our debriefing. I terminated him under FC's orders, but apparently his next clone still is trying to terminate L4-O..."

written by Gligar on Sep 29, 2012 17:48

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Realising that Speed-Y might not know who the GREEN is, Jam-Y takes the opportunity to tell him. Naturally, the goon also hears him. "Is that so? Interesting. Well... I think I have enough to make a report about this. And... I wouldn't be surprised if Mr. I Want To Terminate Junior Citizens here is the star of the next Bake The Traitor... or at least of the next termination voucher."

With that, the goons begin to leave.

written by Speeder on Sep 29, 2012 18:08

I nod.

"Oh, I took some photos of him and sent to Friend Computer, I mean, the clone before the roasted one..."

But I still wonder what roasted him..."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 29, 2012 20:20

"Well then. Disaster averted, I guess..."

I address Speed-Y.

"We suspect it might've been a Pyrokinesis mutant... and a very powerful one at that."

"Maybe one of his superiors?"

written by Jam on Sep 29, 2012 22:15

"Hmm... Powerful mutant... Hey, maybe he works for Psion! But what would Psion have against L4-O?"

I think for a bit...

"Hey L4-O, what was the name of your Armed Forces team-squad-thingy again? I thought it had the word 'mutant' in it somewhere..."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 30, 2012 03:45

"Psion? Never heard of them..."

"And yeah... Mutant Mashers. It's mostly just a name, at least to me... but I know there's always mutant distrust in the Armed Forces..."

written by Gligar on Sep 30, 2012 14:06

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Before the goons leave completely, Speed-Y points out that he took pictures of the GREEN's clone-before-last, and that the Computer now has them. "Good," one goon says. "We can use it in our Wanted posters." He then leaves.

Speed-Y wonders how the GREEN's most recent clones was roasted. L4-O suggests that it was a powerful Pyrokinetic mutant; perhaps one of his superiors. Jam-Y adds that it might be a member of Psion... but why would they be after L4-O? Wait... what's his unit called?

L4-O tells him that it's the Mutant Mashers. That's just a name as far as he's concerned, but he knows that there is a lot of anti-mutant sentiment in the ranks. He hasn't heard of Psion, though.

written by Speeder on Sep 30, 2012 14:16

"So... the Psion might be hunting a anti-mutant group?"

But hey, the GREEN was seemly not mutant, otherwise he would not need to shoot L4 like he did in the Briefing Room or threaten to kill a junior citizen like he did now...

Unless he have some stupid useless mutation, like those that are used as reactor shielding that for some reason they don't die."

I look a bit confused.

"Our last mission, with all those mutants was scary no? Last? Or we had another one? I remember of a zombie... Or it was zombies?"

Hey, the box I arrived, was a brainscrub box, was not it?"

I wonder what I did wrong...

Or what I learned that I should have not..."

written by Jam on Sep 30, 2012 15:08

"Hmm... Yeah, you're right, he didn't seem very mutant-y... And the way he called me a mutant when we were talking, I doubt someclone that calls themselves a mutant supporter would use the kind of tone he did. Hmm..."

I think for a bit. Then I look up at Speed-Y.

"Wait, just how much memory did they take out of you?!"

written by Speeder on Sep 30, 2012 16:10

"That question does not make much sense, does it? If I don't have the memory, how can I count the memories that I don't have?"

I look even more confused.

written by Jam on Sep 30, 2012 18:01

I started looking confused too.

"Uh, well... What's the last thing you remember?"

written by Gligar on Sep 30, 2012 18:19

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y guesses that Psion are after an anti-mutant group. (Like, say, Anti-Mutant? 😊) And given his actions, the GREEN didn't seem to be a mutant (unless he has one of those useless ones that always gets used in reactor shielding)...

He then talks about their last mission, with "all the mutants", and how it was frightening. Or was it their last mission. Wasn't there something to do with zombies? Wait... he arrived in a brainscrub box, right? How much did he lose?

Jam-Y agrees that the GREEN doesn't seem to be a mutant, especially how he referred to Jam-Y. Then he realises what Speed-Y just said, and asks how much memory he lost.

That just confuses Speed-Y, who asks how he's supposed to know what he lost. Jam-Y suggests that he tell them the last thing he remembers.

written by Speeder on Sep 30, 2012 19:17

I look at Jam...

"I remember being in a brainscrub box..."

Humm...

I don't know... I think I don't remember dates of my memories."

I tilt my head to the side, like this:

<http://cdn.ebaumsworld.com/mediaFiles/picture/778667/80655217.jpg>

written by Lightning4 on Sep 30, 2012 20:19

"I can't honestly think of any reason why a Mutant group would be after us, other than to make an example... unless the previous leader of the Mutant Mashers did something not nice to them. I mean, there were those explodey things down on O sublevel, but surely they don't count as the common mutant in ordinary Alpha Complex?"

"I wonder..."

I try to think back to the elevator hijacking, long before the zombie mission began, and try to recall whether those clones looked like cyborgs, or maybe some kind of other group...

I do not, however, tilt my head.

written by Jam on Sep 30, 2012 22:24

"Hmm..."

I copy Speed-Y's head tilt.

"Do you remember anything of our debriefing, or of the mission?"

written by Cryoburner on Oct 01, 2012 02:12

knock, knock

I knock at the door.

written by Kristos on Oct 01, 2012 04:13

"Come in" I say to the source of the door knocking.

written by Gligar on Oct 01, 2012 16:04

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y tells Jam-Y that he remembers being in a brainscrub box, but he can't give any dates. he tilts his head. Jam-Y presses him: does he remember the debriefing? Or the mission?

L4-O is still wondering about the whole GREEN thing. Why would a mutant group be after them? To make an example? Or is it something to do with his predecessor in the Mutant Mashers? Because he hasn't targeted many mutants (unless those things in the Underplex count, which he doubts)...

Hmmm...

What about that group who hijacked their lift before the mission? No... they were cyborgs, weren't they? Cybernetics and Psion aren't the sort of thing that generally mix...

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

There is a knock at the door. Kris-R looks over and tells whoever it is to come in. His snack may have to wait.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 01, 2012 17:41

"That O Sublevel mission is really the only thing I can think of... and there's been no evidence of an attack before then."

"I mean, there's the accidental termination of you, sir, but, are you even in Psion? And are they commies? I don't actually know much about them."

written by Jam on Oct 01, 2012 19:57

"Hey, of course I'm not in Psion! But that doesn't mean Psion won't be mad at what might have seemed to be a cruel and unprovoked termination of an innocent mutant... I wonder if I can ask them somehow... Hey, John-O, maybe you know to contact Psion?"

written by Gligar on Oct 01, 2012 20:09

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O can't think of anything other than that mission to O Sublevel... and there's no evidence of anything before that.

[1209]

Wait... there's that accidental termination of Jam-Y. But is Jam-Y a Psion? (Are they commies?)

Jam-Y denies being a member of Psion, but imagines that they would not like the unprovoked termination of a mutant. He wonders how to contact them. Perhaps John-O knows? "How would I know?" the ORANGE asks. "I'm not a member. They're a secret society, remember? I guess that if they wanted to talk to you, they'd do so."

written by Speeder on Oct 01, 2012 20:10

I peer at Jam.

Head not tilted anymore, it is too painful on the neck.

"You are asking some strange questions lately..."

written by Cryoburner on Oct 01, 2012 21:48

I stare at the door.

written by Jam on Oct 01, 2012 22:10

I respond to John-O.

"Hmm... Good point... Well, I guess they must not be trying to avenge my death or anything if they haven't even asked me about it. Or maybe they just don't care what I think..."

I turn and peer back at Speed-Y.

"Strange questions? Oh really? How so?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 02, 2012 00:01

"Weird. Maybe they're just commies then. I dunno."

I shrug and put my medication pack away for now.

written by Speeder on Oct 02, 2012 11:56

I shrug also.

"I don't know... I am not loyalty officer anyway..."

I look to John-O

Then I look to the rest of the team.

Then I look to Junior Citizens.

"Hey, are you all ok? And what are you doing outside the creche?"

written by Gligar on Oct 02, 2012 14:21

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y notes that Jam-Y is asking a lot of strange questions. He also stops tilting his head; turns out it's painful if you keep it up for long.

Jam-Y concludes that Psion probably aren't behind the attacks on L4-O. They may simply not care about Jam-Y. He then asks how his questions are strange.

L4-O concludes that Psion are probably just commies, and puts away his medication pack.

Speed-Y adds that he wouldn't know; he isn't Loyalty Officer, after all.

The he looks over at the Junior Citizens and asks why they're out of the crèche. "Thought it'd be fun," one of them tells him.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Though he has been invited into the room, Cyrus-R continues staring at the door. Perhaps he's unhappy, or needs the attention of the docbot that's currently passing? Or maybe he didn't recognise the voice of the one inside the room? Or maybe he's just being a [REDACTED]...

written by Speeder on Oct 02, 2012 16:17

I raise a eyebrow.

"Wait until you are not junior anymore, then you can have lots of fun..."

You know, I lost my prime clone exploded with a nuke, the second exploded again, not with a nuke, the third terminated by Friend Computer from what I believe...

This is my fourth clone. I must tell you, I had lots of fun! Exploding things, piloting huge combat robots full of weapons, shooting commies, shooting more commies, fighting with extremely powerful mutants, saving the whole sector... Life is fun! But you must prepare for it and wait for it!"

written by Gligar on Oct 02, 2012 18:36

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y responds, suggesting that they wait until they're old enough. He tells them about his three terminations, through explosions and... well, just through The Computer. But it's not all death; he's dealt with commies, combots, mutants... all piles of fun! But... the Junior Citizens need to prepare for it. "Why prepare?" one asks.

A younger Junior Citizen says, "I heard they... put chips in your head when you finish... the Memo... thing. Is that it?"

written by Speeder on Oct 02, 2012 19:13

I think a bit.

"Well, you need to learn everything they teach you properly, you don't want to get terminated in your first day because you cannot remember all the anthems, do you?"

Also it is very good idea to learn some B3 jingles, it saved my team lives more than once! And I am not speaking only about singing it in a mandatory manner... But like when a mutant want to blow up your head with his mind..."

Then I turn to the one of the Memo thing question...

"Memomax? Actually, I don't know how it will work in your generation... But I must say that working in cloning tanks is cool... When I am not shooting trouble I work in Tech Services, in the cloning center! Tech Services I must say is the best group ever. If someone want you to join Power Services, tell them that Tech Services is cooler."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 02, 2012 19:30

"Well, I think we're done here now... other than this, of course."

I look over at the corpse of the GREEN, and see if he's ceased being on fire. If he has, I go over and start looking over the charred remains for anything of interest that might not have been burned in the fire.

written by Kristos on Oct 02, 2012 21:28

I sense the unmistakable presence of a fool, so I get up, open the door, drag Cyrus-R in, and shut the door. "Did you collect the samples?"

written by Jam on Oct 02, 2012 22:04

I also offer a bit of advice to the Junior Citizens.

"Friend Computer knows you guys are just learning things at this point, so it'll be willing to forgive you if you make a few mistakes... Once you graduate, Friend Computer starts punishing you a lot more harshly, but in exchange you get to do a whole lot of fun stuff, like working at PLC, and shooting commies, and buying laser pistols!"

"Also, Speed-Y is right about the B3 thing... I was pretty much helpless against that GREEN clone once he started singing a Hot Fun jingle in his head... So, if you guys ever think a bad mutant is trying to read your mind, just sing the most catchy advertizing jingle you can, and you'll probably be safe!"

"And remember to register your mutation if you find you have one! Nothing makes me sadder than having to terminate a mutant because they were too selfish to use their ability to benefit everyclone in Alpha Complex. It's those clones that give mutants a bad name, and make other clones not trust us... Wouldn't you agree, John-O?"

written by Cryoburner on Oct 03, 2012 02:41

I decide to check if the door is unlocked. If it is, I open the door and burst into the room.

"I have collected three laser barrels from the boxes of returned laser barrels and returned to the office!"

written by Gligar on Oct 03, 2012 14:31

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y advises that the Junior Citizens learn all they can while in the creche. That includes B3 jingles... since you never know when a dangerous mutant will want to invade your mind...

He changes the topic, addressing the question about the "Memo thing". He says that he doesn't know how it will work for them, but can't resist adding that working in CloneServ, and by extension Tech Services, is fun. Tech Services is far better than Power Services, and they should remember that. This causes quite a stir among the Junior Citizens, some of whom were most likely under the impression that Power Services was better. I have no idea how they could have come to that conclusion.

L4-O thinks that they're done. Except for what was left of the GREEN...

He goes over to investigate. It's no longer on fire, so he can search the remains, uncovering a charred ME Card and a small spool of tape.

Jam-Y also offers some advice. He says that The Computer might be willing to forgive their mistakes now, but once they graduate, things will be different. The Computer will start holding them to the same standards as everyone else, but in exchange they get access to more fun things to do!

He confirms Speed-Y's suggestion about the B3, saying that the GREEN's Hot Fun jingle hit him pretty hard. It's a good idea to remember some of the catchier jingles*... just in case. And while he's at it, he decides to be a model mutant and encourages the Juniors to register. It's not a happy thing to have to terminate an unregistered mutant... because that mutation could have been useful.

"That's right," John-O agrees. "Besides, you wouldn't keep a secret from The Computer, would you?"

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Seeing that whoever it is hasn't yet entered, Kris-R thinks he knows who it is. He gets up and opens the door.

Sure enough, Cyrus-R stands before him., his hand on the door handle. KRis-R drags him into the room at the exact same time as Cyrus-R tries to leap in. End result, both clones end up on the floor, with Cyrus-R sprawled on top of his Team Leader. Kris-R asks if Cyrus-R got the barrels, which Cyrus-R proudly confirms.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 03, 2012 17:36

I retrieve the ME card, look over it for a little, and decide to hand it over to Speed-Y.

"Maybe this will be useful? It's awful burnt though..."

written by Gligar on Oct 03, 2012 19:08

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

L4-O looks over the ME Card. Its owner is stated to be Keith-G-CRS-4, and the picture matches that of the GREEN. He asks Speed-Y if it will be useful.

written by Speeder on Oct 03, 2012 19:11

I think...

Then I take the ME card, put it in the charred remains, and send another picture of it all and one of the ME card itself to the last messages I've sent.

"I feel like a sort of detective..."

This is not shooting enough."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 03, 2012 20:34

"Well, stay near me then... I have the feeling our dealings with this GREEN and his group aren't over yet..."

* Not that it's really possible to forget them.

[1211]

I think for a moment then smile.

"Detective, though. I like the sound of that. We're not in a mission anymore, maybe we should get to the bottom of this problem with this GREEN guy? Maybe they're a threat to loyal clones... that should always be investigated!"

written by Kristos on Oct 03, 2012 20:49

"Then get off of me and lay them out on the table. I'll label them."

As soon as Cyrus-R has put the barrels on the table (assuming that he does), I label them "return-1", "return-2", etc.

"Do you think we should test them in here? From our previous experience it seems the device should be allowed some ventilation. But moving the device could carry its own risks."

written by Jam on Oct 04, 2012 01:42

"Detective work? Sounds fun! Especially if there'll be shooting involved..."

written by Cryoburner on Oct 04, 2012 04:16

I get up and put the barrels on the table, in anticipation of them being labeled something along the lines of "return-1", "return-2" and "etc".

"Maybe we should test them someplace more open, such as in the warehouse, or on the conveyor belt, or on the roof of a speeding transbot."

written by Gligar on Oct 04, 2012 17:02

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y takes the card, puts it back with the remains, right next to the spool of tape, and sends it as an addendum to his previous message. All this is sort of making him feel like a detective...

...but this isn't shooting.

L4-O suggests that they stay together, as he's not sure they're done with Keith-G yet. He likes the sound of detective work, though. They might not be on an official mission right now, but maybe it's worth investigating this clone and his associates...

Jam-Y thinks that would be fun, especially if there is shooting involved.

Of course, they can't do that by just standing around here talking, can they?

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R tells Cyrus-R to put the barrels on the table so he can label them.

While Cyrus-R complies, he wonders aloud whether they should move the device somewhere a little better ventilated. Of course, that is itself risky.

He starts labelling the barrels while Cyrus-R suggests some places that, while ventilated, could easily cause death; either from being too busy or through being just plain stupid...

A rattling noise attracts their attention.

written by Speeder on Oct 04, 2012 17:08

"Alright... We still have those cool ME card readers? We might start to figure where this guy came from and go investigate there... Also we might want to know why he was here..."

written by Cryoburner on Oct 04, 2012 19:51

"Say, did you hear that rattling noise?"

I try to determine the direction from which the rattling noise came.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 04, 2012 20:19

"Sadly, I think we put those into the evidence box... we'll need to get one ourselves. Might not be a bad idea to have one for personal use."

I take a step towards the exit.

"Perhaps we should head back to the bunker, we can do all our planning from there... I don't think there's anything else here for us."

written by Gligar on Oct 04, 2012 21:18

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y wonders if they still have the ME Card reader? Perhaps they could figure out where Keith-G-CRS-4 came from.

Probably not, L4-O reminds them. It was part of the Financial Officer's equipment, which should now be in the hands(?) of The Computer. It might be an idea to obtain one, though.

He steps towards the exit, and suggests that they return to the bunker.

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R looks towards the source of the rattling. It seems to be coming from behind the floor plan.

written by Jam on Oct 04, 2012 23:49

I follow L4-O.

"Yeah, the bunker should be safe... Unless they're expecting us, of course..."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 05, 2012 00:56

"Well, I guess we'll have to be ready for that."

I almost reach for Turbo but remember I don't actually have it at the moment.

I proceed out of the exit and start going back to the security checkpoint.

written by Speeder on Oct 05, 2012 01:30

Alright. I will just investigate why he was here.

[1212]

I walk toward the nearest DocBot.

"What was this guy doing here in the medical?"

written by Kristos on Oct 05, 2012 02:34

I pull my laser pistol out and duck behind the desk, peeking around to see what might be causing the noise.

written by Cryoburner on Oct 05, 2012 09:47

I approach the floor plan, and see whether it can be removed from the wall.

written by Gligar on Oct 05, 2012 14:49

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Jam-Y decides to follow L4-O. The bunker should be safe (unless whoever Keith-G is working for is expecting them).

L4-O just says that they'll have to be ready for it. He reaches for Turbo... which isn't there. Well, he'd better go and get it.

He and Jam-Y exit, heading back towards the checkpoint where Nukabot waits. It doesn't take long to get there.

Speed-Y isn't done yet. He asks a docbot about Keith-G's reason for being here. "The citizen was present to allow us to monitor the results of between-clone MemoMax modification. Clearly, the procedure was inadequately performed."

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R pulls out his laser pistol and takes cover while Cyrus-R investigates the floor plan. It turns out that the plan is affixed to a metal plate, which seems to be attached to the wall by a number of small magnets. The rattling is coming from behind it.

written by Speeder on Oct 05, 2012 14:57

I look interested...

VERY interested.

"May I know why it was clearly inadequately performed?"

And what sort of modification was to be done?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 05, 2012 16:25

Once I reach Nukabot I start quickly collecting all my weapons, pitting them in their proper holsters or holders or areas or wherever a clone normally keeps guns.

written by Gligar on Oct 05, 2012 18:19

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

The docbot's words intrigue Speed-Y. He asks why it is clear that the work was inadequate, and what the work was supposed to do. "Many of the details are beyond your security clearance, but I can tell you this:

"You are probably aware that there can be... complications with a traditional brainscrub. These can be avoided by making use of a between-clone MemoMax modification.

As the name suggests, it involves altering a subject's MemoMax records between the termination of one clone and the creation of the next. In this case, the intended effect is to remove treasonous thoughts from the next clone.

"Such a procedure was carried out with Keith-G-CRS. However, it would appear that the target memories were insufficiently purged. Perhaps the technician failed to take into account the MemoMax system's inherent redundancy."

Checkpoint, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Now back at Nukabot, L4-O retrieves his weapons from the bot and puts them back where they should be. He notices that the... special box seems to have been emptied onto Azir-R's old wheelchair.

written by Speeder on Oct 05, 2012 19:03

I nod.

"And thanks for the information..."

Also good to know that there are inherent redundancy systems and that it is a clone, not a machine, that edit MemoMax records..."

I smile happily, and go back to the team, the fastest that I can without hitting a stray junior citizen or sick person...

Oh wait, as soon as I am almost out of view to the Junior citizens, I stop...

"Hey you, remember everything I told you! And be always loyal, I will be very unhappy if I end having to terminate you in any of my next missions! Bye!"

I return to my quick pace back to the team.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 05, 2012 19:29

"I guess Speed-Y did that. That's good."

I put the box upright and start shoving things back into it.

written by Jam on Oct 05, 2012 20:25

I follow L4-O.

"Oh, there's all my stuff!"

I go to the wheelchair and take back my stuff.

"Yeah, It's a good thing Speed-Y was here."

written by Kristos on Oct 06, 2012 01:11

I signal to Cyrus-R to pull the plan off the wall and get back, using hopefully not-cryptic gestures. I speak if necessary.

written by Cryoburner on Oct 06, 2012 02:20

Noticing Kris-R's cryptic gestures, I determine that he wishes to get a better view of the mysteriously rattling floor plan. I try removing it and its metal plate from the wall, and move them directly toward him until the map is right in front of his face, so that he can get a closer look at it.

written by Gligar on Oct 06, 2012 13:34

Medical bay, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y thanks the docbot, secure in the knowledge that some things are... well, perfect. He starts to leave again, before turning back again and giving a final word to the Junior Citizens.

Now he's ready to return to the team.

Checkpoint, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

Pleased that Speed-Y was around to sort things out, L4-O starts putting things back into the box. Jam-Y also takes the opportunity to re-arm himself as well.

Speaking of Speed-Y, here he is now.

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R gestures for Cyrus-R to remove the floor plan from the wall. But Cyrus-R only partly understands... okay, he is able to remove the plan from the wall, but he does so in such a way as to bash Kris-R in the nose with it... and block him in behind the table... and block access to the table in general.

Behind it, it is revealed that the rattling came from an air duct. Behind the grate, a fan can be seen vibrating, causing the grate to rattle.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 06, 2012 19:15

Once I've finished reorganizing the box, I place it on top of Nukabot where it was. I then assume my place on top of Nukabot.

written by Gligar on Oct 06, 2012 20:09

Checkpoint, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

It looks like L4-O is about ready to get moving now. He's cleared up what's left of the box's contents, and has taken his place on Nukabot... so what next?

Building 3, Industrial Subsector B

A buzzer sounds throughout the building. The workcycle is due to end soon.

written by Jam on Oct 06, 2012 21:49

I also try to find a place on Nukabot to ride on.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 07, 2012 00:50

Once everyone has found their place on or around Nukabot, I give Nukabot the order:

"Okay, take us back to the bunker then! We can do planning and stuff there."

written by 4616599 on Oct 07, 2012 00:58

"Let's go. I was a bit stoned in here when I heard all the commotion in there, but I'm glad you're back!"

written by Kristos on Oct 07, 2012 07:20

"My noshe! My noshe!" I hold my nose in pain. "Can you see what is rattling?"

written by Cryoburner on Oct 07, 2012 07:33

I leave Kris-R with his floor plan.

"Hmm... That couldn't have been providing optimal airflow with the vent blocked like that. Who covers a vent with a floor plan, anyway?"

I approach the vent.

"Maybe it's a clue!"

I see if I can determine which direction the air is flowing. I also note any other potential clues that might be visible in the duct, whether they be piles of laser barrels, or severed limbs, or conveniently-located packages of Soylent Red.

written by Gligar on Oct 07, 2012 13:29

Checkpoint, Corridor J4, Alpha Subsector

More of the team piles on to Nukabot. It looks like they're back on the roadway corridor!

L4-O gives the order to return to the bunker, and Nukabot trundles away, back to the lift.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Holding his nose in pain, Kris-R asks what Cyrus-R has found. Ignoring Kris-R's injury, Cyrus-R obliquely informs him that there is an air duct present, and that it might be a Clue.

He is quickly able to determine that the air is currently blowing into the room. A panel near the fan seems to have been designed to hold a control panel, but there isn't one to be seen. Instead, a note informs him that the fan can be controlled from the terminal.

Looking further into the vent, Cyrus-R notices that the vent is clear of obstructions, whether they be clues or otherwise. There's a fan in the way, what did he expect?

written by Lightning4 on Oct 07, 2012 19:41

I keep a lookout for any dangerous clones, or any very angry GREENS, but otherwise just look around as we travel.

written by Gligar on Oct 07, 2012 20:08

J Level, Alpha Subsector

As Nukabot trundles towards the lift, L4-O keeps a look-out. Other than in increased number of IntSec goons at intersections, everything seems normal.

Soon, the lift is in sight.

written by Speeder on Oct 08, 2012 00:45

If I am not boarding on Nukabot... I go toward it (running if needed) and board it.

If I am boarded...

[1214]

Well, I just stay put and alert.

written by Kristos on Oct 08, 2012 03:37

"Hey, if we reverse the airflow, we can use the device with less risk!"

I approach the terminal and try to figure out how to control the fan.

written by Cryoburner on Oct 08, 2012 05:57

"Yes... Unless we somehow manage to get pulled into the fan and horribly diced into tiny pieces. I suppose the grate might offer some protection from that though."

I step away from the vent anyway, and move over by the terminal. I look over the grate covering the vent to determine how sturdy it might be, and whether it looks possible for limbs or fingers to pass through.

written by Jam on Oct 08, 2012 15:47

I very visibly (and audibly) enjoy the ride.

written by Gligar on Oct 08, 2012 16:23

J Level, Alpha Subsector

As Nukabot continues to trundle towards the lift, Speed-Y looks alert as he perches on the back of Nukabot. Jam-Y looks like he's enjoying the ride.

But soon, the ride comes to a temporary stop, as it seems that the lift has left the level.

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R notes that if they could get the air to flow in the opposite direction, they could safely use the device indoors. He pushes past the floor plan and looks at the terminal. In its directory, he sees a folder called Environmental which seems to contain a couple of apps: VF-ctl-491 and LI-ctl-442.

Cyrus-R isn't too sure... he seems to have fallen below minimum happiness level. Why? He is concerned about getting sucked into the fan. But the grate is sturdy enough that, even in the unlikely event that the fan could suck him in, he would only lose a few fingers, maybe a hand. Troubleshooters lose more than that all the time!

written by Lightning4 on Oct 08, 2012 17:35

I look around the room for anything unusual, then focus on the lift.

"A level, I assume? Get to the bunker through the dock?"

written by Speeder on Oct 08, 2012 17:46

I nod.

"Yes... the dock is OUR dock, yay!"

It will be good to be back home... Maybe I can finish my cool weapon, although I don't remember where I left off."

I smile happily.

"Who is for a small commemoration party in the dock? I mean, we are everyone alive, this mean we had success no?"

written by Jam on Oct 08, 2012 19:42

I suddenly look worried.

"You know, I've got a bad feeling about this... Maybe I'm just being paranoid, but wouldn't the lift be the perfect place for our attackers to try to sabotage? Maybe we should send a decoy first or something."

written by Gligar on Oct 08, 2012 19:48

J Level, Alpha Subsector

L4-O looks around, finding nothing suspicious. He turns his attention to the lift, asking if they should just head for A Level, and through the dock. Speed-Y confirms, and asks everyone if they should celebrate their mission when they get back - after all, everyone is still alive, right? "We never did find out what happened to those other two clones... King-R and Azir R, right?" asks John-O. "And as for Mick-R... well, let's not dwell on him."

The lift continues being not here... and this makes Jam-Y worried. He can't help but feel that there's going to be something FUN happening with the lift. Wouldn't it be prudent to send a decoy first?

written by Speeder on Oct 08, 2012 19:53

I nod... And think a bit.

"Yes... I was brainscrubbed, so I have no way to know, but they never showed up on debriefing?"

I mean, that wheelchair belongs to Azir-R right? Why I have that wheelchair and not Azir on it?"

written by Kristos on Oct 08, 2012 23:16

"VF... maybe that's the Vent Fan control... Cyrus-R, do you know what LI might represent? Something about lights, maybe? This is definitely out of my field of expertise, but hopefully not out of my clearance."

I run VF-ctl-491, hoping The Computer will keep me from treason, DLL errors, and, of course, the BSOD.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 08, 2012 23:37

"Well, what would you suggest as a decoy? We don't really have any INFRAREDs handy. And I doubt Nukabot wants to go down J to A levels worth of stairs."

written by Gligar on Oct 09, 2012 14:43

J Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y nods in reply to John-O, though he says he doesn't really remember. He guesses that Azir-R and King-R didn't show up for debriefing. What he does know is that he has Azir-R's wheelchair, so where's Azir-R?

L4-O asks what they should use as a decoy? They don't exactly have any INFRAREDs to use, and he doubts that [1215]

Nukabot would want to traverse all the stairs between here and A Level.

Hmmm... who has the lowest clearance?

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Hoping that it has something to do with the vent fan, Kris-R runs the VF-ctl-491 app. He also wonders about the other app... something to do with lights?

The app takes a moment to start up. When it does, he is presented with a couple of controls: a pair of arrow buttons and a gauge. The left arrow is currently selected, and the gauge reads about a fifth of whatever it is measuring.

written by Speeder on Oct 09, 2012 14:45

I think a bit.

"Well... I am the Team Leader, and I say that we already lost too much members, we stay together, and if needed ,we die together."

written by Kristos on Oct 09, 2012 14:49

I lower the gauge to zero and see if the fan stops. Then I select the right arrow and set the gauge back to about a fifth. (If the fan starts an excessive suction, I lower the gauge value accordingly.) And, of course, I follow that up with executing LI-ctl-442 to see if it should provide any controls usable for Team Sigma purposes.

"Let's try to find a good place for the floor plan away from the vent."

written by Jam on Oct 09, 2012 15:26

I smile at Speed-Y.

"I thought you'd say something like that... Okay, we'll stay together!"

I check the barrel on my laser pistol, and get into a firing position in case there are hostile clones waiting in the lift.

written by Gligar on Oct 09, 2012 19:17

J Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y decides that they remain together. They've lost enough team members, and if they are to lose clones, they should do it together.

Jam-Y likes that suggestion - he apparently thought Speed-Y would say that - and takes the time to check his laser pistol. He has three shots left.

The lift's indicator suddenly changes. It's approaching.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R plays with the displayed controls. First, he drops the gauge to zero. That causes the fan to slow to a stop. Good to know. He then selects the other arrow and sets the gauge again. As expected, the fan starts up again... in reverse. There's a definite suction from the fan, but it doesn't seem to be enough to pull them in.

Well... now he knows what that app does... perhaps he should check the other? He does. After a moment, he is presented with a set of buttons, some of which are depressed.

That only leaves the floorplan... what are they to do with that?

written by Lightning4 on Oct 09, 2012 19:32

I keep a blaster at the ready, just in case...

I watch the lift continue to rise.

written by Cryoburner on Oct 10, 2012 00:10

"Reversing the airflow to vent any undesirable gases might work. I wonder what's on the other end of the vent though."

I look at the floor plan to see if I can somehow ascertain where the vent might now be venting to.

written by Jam on Oct 10, 2012 00:34

I watch the lift indicator, counting down the floors as the lift gets closer and closer.

written by Speeder on Oct 10, 2012 01:34

I check if the slughthrower is loaded, load it if necessary, and wait.

written by Gligar on Oct 10, 2012 16:57

J Level, Alpha Subsector

Everyone starts waiting... looking at the lift indicator... ten levels... checking their weapons... five levels... looking at the door...

Which opens.

What's on the other side turns out to be a heap of smouldering bodies... and a familiar GREEN clone... no, not that one. This one's a registered mutant, and carries a flamethrower and the remains of some sort of small sign. "Looks like I'm late," he says.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R casts yet another doubt over the whole plan... since he doesn't know where the vents come out! He tries to trace it in the floorplan, only to find that there's far more than just the one fan in that mess of ducts. And not only that, but there are multiple exit points... almost as if the system were designed to move gas from place to place. Oh wait, that's because it is.

But why worry? They're here to do a job, after all, and they can't afford to delay! Every minutecycle means hundreds more possibly-defective barrels, and each barrel might mean the difference between a terminated traitor and a Code 7...

written by Speeder on Oct 10, 2012 17:03

I look confused.

"Late for what?"

I try to recognize the clone... Derek?

written by Lightning4 on Oct 10, 2012 19:01

I try to make out who the clone, and the corpses are.

After (if) I realize the clone is Rapt-G, I say:

"Fortunately, looks like we were too..."

written by Kristos on Oct 10, 2012 19:23

"Don't worry- by the time the gas disperses through that network it will be quite diluted. Let's just try one barrel and see what happens."

I use the butt of my laser pistol to push on the edge of the floor plan in an attempt to permanently uncover at least a quarter of the vent opening. The edge of the plan might be sharp, so I turn the pistol so that even if I slip I don't end up cutting myself or shooting something important like the wall Cyrus-R is standing beside.

written by Gligar on Oct 10, 2012 20:03

J Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y doesn't initially recognise the clone, probably because he's wearing a breathing mask. Regardless, he still asks what the clone was late for.

L4-O, who believes that it's actually their briefing officer - Rapt-G - says that it looks like they were, too.

The clone removes his mask, showing that L4-O was correct. Rapt-G replies that he was late for debriefing. "Some traitor decided it'd be funny to switch my medications and treasonously redirect me to the cloning station. I had hoped to get back to your debriefing in time... but it looks like it's already finished. And when I head over here anyway, look who I run in to." He gestures at the blackened remains.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R assures Cyrus-R that it shouldn't matter where the vents go. By the time the gas reaches the outlets, it should have dispersed significantly.

He decides to test just one barrel. Of course, to do that, he'll need ventilation... and the floor plan is in his way. So... he moves it, by poking it with his laser pistol. He manages to move the floor plan enough so that most of the vent is accessible from the desk.

written by Speeder on Oct 10, 2012 21:25

I look at the blackened remains, wondering whole it belongs to.

written by Jam on Oct 10, 2012 22:14

I smile as I recognize our briefing officer.

"Hello, sir!"

I look toward the blackened remains of what I'm assuming was once a clone...

"Er... I can't tell who that was... Maybe... a certain GREEN clone who seems intent on treasonously terminating L4-O?"

Also... If you're okay with me asking, why do you need to use a flamethrower if you can just make fire with your mutation?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 11, 2012 00:09

"Hello, sir!" I reply as well.

I continue after:

"So that ex-BLUE really wasn't supposed to be our debriefing officer then!"

He's a GREEN now. He's been terminated twice, after trying to terminate me the first time, then the second after some very, very powerful pyrokinesis mutant decided he didn't need to live anymore."

"There's some really weird things going on... we want to get to the bottom of it."

written by Kristos on Oct 11, 2012 04:03

"That'll do!" I pop the first defective barrel into the device and step out the office door. "Come quickly, Cyrus-R!"

written by Cryoburner on Oct 11, 2012 12:46

"Perhaps we should have moved the device directly in front of the vent. What if it takes an hourcycle to fully clear the room of gas?"

I follow Kristos-R out of the office at a moderate pace, and look back toward the device.

written by Gligar on Oct 11, 2012 17:16

J Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y looks at the remains but can't identify who they used to be.

Jam-Y smiles and inquires who it was... perhaps a certain GREEN clone? And... why does he need a flamethrower when he's a mutant? "No, it wasn't a GREEN. IT was some ORANGE clone babbling about the Easter Cycle or something. He attacked me, and I retaliated.

"And since you asked... surely you know that it's possible to fatigue yourself by over-using mutant powers? That, and I'm not really the kind of clone who pulls out his mutation for every problem."

L4-O notes that the GREEN wasn't meant to be their briefing officer... well, at least he got terminated. Once by The Computer and again by some mutant. Something's going on and he wants to know what. "Do you think it's related to your mission?" Rapt-G asks.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R places the first defective barrel into the device's receptacle and vacates the room, indicating that Cyrus-R should do the same. However, he doesn't. Perhaps the device is emitting the same gas again, and he is trying to follow some clone who may or not be called Kristos-R instead. Of course, there is no Kristos-R here. And if there was, Kris-R might have some words for him

[1217]

The device starts making its noises and lights again, but different this time. They are more dissonant, more... off... than before. And I'm sure Cyrus-R could vouch for the hallucinations of everything being on fire. All Kris-R sees, though, is an odd shimmering as the lightshow continues.

written by Speeder on Oct 11, 2012 18:33

I think a bit.

"You know... Some very weird things happened to us since the team was formed, many of them seemly always unrelated to our missions, but I think there might be a overarching plot.

For example, the nanomachines they were using to turn people into zombies, they might be trying to find a way to create a new super mutant race, like the annoying Headgrabber mutant that kept pursuing us.

Or for example the commie invasion of the bunker, at first it looked like a normal commie invasion, until we noticed their mission was actually release dangerous mutants from their prison, it is obvious that there was someone manipulating the commies in doing the mutants bidding while still thinking it was a commie thing to do...

If my conjectures are true, we are in grave danger, we might be fighting the wrong enemies while someone is doing the real plan."

written by Jam on Oct 11, 2012 18:47

"Ah, that makes sense...

...wait, did you say Easter Cycle? Those clones are responsible for the nanomachines and zombies and all the troubles we've been having!

Hmm... I wonder if our fake debriefing officer was in on the whole First Church of the Easter Cycle thing... But why would they target L4-O?"

After a few seconds of thinking, I suddenly recall some random fact that might be important.

"Oh, L4-O, remember when we were at briefing (seems like a yearcycle ago...) and you said there was an X-mark on your coaster? Maybe that's related somehow? Or maybe not..."

written by Kristos on Oct 11, 2012 22:41

"Ooo, pretty lights!"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 11, 2012 22:50

I hear Jam-Y and attempt to recall. If I succeed, I reply

"Yeah... yeah, I think I do remember that. That was really odd. But didn't it get drunk anyway? Nobody died from it, unless it was not meant to kill."

I then try to address Rapt-G.

"In light of that, I'm starting to think no, this might not be related to the mission we just did. It's really odd."

I think.

"Unless I managed to get on the wrong side of the Easter Cycle guys before the mission even began!"

"I don't know though..."

written by Cryoburner on Oct 12, 2012 01:26

"Oh the humanity!"

"Quick! Fanning the flames might put them out!"

I kick a burning chair away from the desk and into the wall, then set to work on adjusting the fan speed via the terminal controls. Namely, by randomly jamming down on buttons and cranking gauges back and forth until something happens.

written by Gligar on Oct 12, 2012 14:37

J Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y thinks. The team has encountered plenty of strange things that, though seemingly unrelated to the mission, might hint at some kind of overall scheme. The nanomachines, for instance... perhaps someone is trying to create a whole load of Class F mutants? (As if we needed any more.) And... the commie invasion... they discovered that the commies were trying to release mutants from the prison that's way below them... but that's not a commie thing to do, so they must have been controlled by something!

Putting two and two together and possibly making five, he states that they're in danger. Perhaps the missions are a distraction to allow their real enemy to carry out their plan behind the scenes.

Jam-Y points out that Rapt-G mentioned the Easter Cycle. That means Rapt-G's attacker had something to with the mission! Perhaps their GREEN not-friend was in on it! But why target L4-O?

A neuron fires. Didn't L4-O say something about there being a mark on his drink's coaster, way back in debriefing? Perhaps that's related somehow. But wasn't it Speed-Y who drank from that glass?

L4-O remembers the marked coaster. But no-one died from it... so perhaps it wasn't meant to kill.

Perhaps the problem with the GREEN has nothing to do with the mission, other than being strange. Unless he somehow got on the wrong side of the First Church in the past, and can't remember.

I guess some brainscrubs are just that effective.

"I don't suppose a report would help," Rapt-G replies, "though I was supposed to give your debriefing. Perhaps I should make a report."

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

While Kris-R enjoys the pretty lights, Cyrus-R is having a hard time of it. Convinced that everything is in fire, he throws the chair against a wall, and rushes to the terminal in a vain attempt to put out the fire... he said something about fanning the flames?

He fails to notice that, in fact, the vent controls have been closed because Kris-R opened the other app. His messing around only causes a bunch of lights to turn on and off.

The device suddenly stops making its noises and goes dark again. It then emits a harsh buzzing noise.

But things don't seem to be getting better from Cyrus-R's point of view.

written by Kristos on Oct 12, 2012 15:36

"Ah, that must be the audio indicator for a bad barrel." I look for an illuminated emoticator.

"Cyrus-R! Do try to control yourself! You might start a fire or something!"

written by Speeder on Oct 12, 2012 16:00

I look confused.

"Wait, if you was our debriefing officer, why Friend Computer accepted debriefing from someone else?"

written by Gligar on Oct 12, 2012 19:00

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R decides that the buzzing noise indicates a defective barrel, and peers at the device, looking for a lit indicator of some sort, probably a face symbol. Sure enough, he can see that a sad face has been illuminated.

He tells Cyrus-R to be careful... he might start a fire or something.

Incidentally, that fan seems to be doing a good job of extracting the gas.

J Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y is confused (his default state). He wonders why Our Mutual Friend would accept a debriefing report from someclone who was not the debriefing officer. "The Computer may have selected a replacement debriefing officer," Rapt-G suggests, "based on the fact that I was between clones at the allotted debriefing time. Some commie traitor may have falsified records to get the clone they wanted chosen as my replacement. However, being a Troubleshooter has its advantages... cloning tank priority being one of them." The little sign is blackened and ruined, but you get the feeling that he'd be holding it up right about now.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 12, 2012 21:29

"Hmm. That's very suspicious too. If we knew where we could go, we could investigate for these falsified records, and who issued them."

"In fact, we were on our way to the bunker to possibly plan out a course of investigation, I guess we're going to be doing a little unofficial detective work to figure out what's going on. For the good of the complex, and such!"

written by Gligar on Oct 13, 2012 14:47

J Level, Alpha Subsector

L4-O finds Rapt-G's assertions about falsified records suspicious. If they knew where to go, they could investigate those records. And speaking of investigation, they were on their way back to the bunker to plan one out... just a little unofficial detective work for the good of the complex...

"That could be problematic," Rapt-G tells them. "The records pertaining to briefing officer selection require special clearance, perhaps even above my own. As a briefing officer, I can access records about missions I'm assigned to, but not all of them.

"Well, I'm not going to keep you here any longer. Just try to keep your investigations legal, will you?"

written by Speeder on Oct 13, 2012 17:07

I look to Rapt-G...

"Alright..."

No point in being a loyal investigator while doing treason to do it!"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 13, 2012 19:26

"Well, goodbye then, sir. And be careful..."

I look at the lift again and see if there's room for Nukabot in the lift. Not that it matters, those corpses can just be... compacted a little to make room.

written by Jam on Oct 13, 2012 20:51

I wave goodbye to Rapt-G, and wait for us to enter the lift.

written by Gligar on Oct 13, 2012 21:11

J Level, Alpha Subsector

Speed-Y agrees. Not much point in investigating treason while committing treason yourself or is there?

L4-O tells Rapt-G to be careful, and looks in the lift. That corpse, as it turns out, is right in the middle of the thing. Not that that's too much of a problem. They have Nukabot after all.

Jam-Y just waves.

Rapt-G nods, and exits the lift, walking off into J Level.

written by Cryoburner on Oct 13, 2012 23:59

"This is no good! The fire must have breached the wires to the fan control, and now seems to be effecting the lights as well! Wasn't there another app for the lighting here too? Maybe I can activate the emergency lights while there's still time!"

I quickly close the app and switch to the other one, which someone mentioned was for controlling the lighting system. Once again, I jam on the buttons and crank the dimmer switch back and forth until the emergency lights are adjusted for optimal levels of emergency-viewing.

written by Kristos on Oct 14, 2012 03:37

I spring into the air, tackling Cyrus-R to the ground. "No, you fool, you INFRARED in RED clothing! If the fan settings were changed, I try to restore them.

written by Gligar on Oct 14, 2012 14:40

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, roadway 3, JHY Sector

Still believing that there is a fire, Cyrus-R concludes that the wiring must have been damaged, and that therefore, the best way to proceed is to use the other app. Of course, since he failed to notice that he was using the lighting app in an attempt to control the fan, he ends up switching back to the fan app. He mashes the settings, which causes the fan to suddenly rev to full power, sucking him inexorably towards the grate...

...until Kris-R tackles him to the ground (bruising him in the process), calling him an INFRARED in RED clothing. Fighting against the pull of the fan, Kris-R attempts to rectify Cyrus-R's unhelpful help...

...but is finding it difficult to get to the terminal.

written by Cryoburner on Oct 14, 2012 16:04

I yell to Kris-R...

"THIS IS NOT HOW FIRE IS SUPPOSED TO BEHAVE!"

I check whether my adjustments to the lighting have had any noticeable effect on the visibility of the fire. Keeping fire well lit is a good way to avoid stumbling into it, after all.

I try dragging myself back toward the terminal, using the desk, Kris-R or anything else that can be grabbed onto to pull myself toward it. If I manage to reach the terminal, I continue to adjust the dimmer switch in an attempt to better optimize the level of emergency lighting.

written by Speeder on Oct 14, 2012 16:58

I feel like someone, somewhere is doing something bizarre and funny, and I end suddenly bursting out in laughter.

written by Jam on Oct 14, 2012 17:33

I also start laughing, mainly because I'm thinking I must have missed something funny if Speed-Y is laughing so hard. I wouldn't want other clones thinking I'm not staying alert!

written by Kristos on Oct 14, 2012 18:00

I yell back to Cyrus-R...

"THIS IS NOT HOW YOU ARE SUPPOSED TO BEHAVE!"

I check whether any gas is visible in the present lighting. Keeping gas well lit is a good way to avoid stumbling into it, after all.

I try dragging myself back toward the terminal, using the desk, Cyrus-R, or anything else that can be grabbed onto to pull myself toward it. If I manage to reach the terminal,

I continue to adjust the fan control in an attempt to better optimize the level of ventilating suction.

...

But then again, this is mostly my fault for not allowing Cyrus-R proper time to evacuate the office. And I am the TEAM LEADER. The team leader. That means teamwork.

So I plant my feet firmly wherever I can to prevent being sucked backwards, then assist Cyrus-R in returning to the terminal and just... trust... him to do the right thing.

written by Gligar on Oct 14, 2012 20:11

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, roadway 3, JHY Sector

Though the gas has been dispersed for the last minutecycle or so, Cyrus-R still seems to think the whole place is on fire. As such, he is annoyed that the nonexistent fire isn't acting properly. He attempts to reach the terminal and reset the "lights" so that the "fire" can be seen properly. Of course, since the fan app is still running, he won't be able to do that, will he?

Though Kris-R seems to want to call Cyrus-R out on it, he suppresses it. In the interests of teamwork, he lets Cyrus-R climb around him to reach the terminal. And with his support, Cyrus-R can indeed do so. Still believing that he is controlling the lights, Cyrus-R repeats his low-quality bashing at the controls, causing the fan to shut off.

By the lift, J Level, Alpha Subsector

Everyone... starts... laughing?

Wait... this has happened before, hasn't it? Is this EverLaugh.K again?

Or perhaps Speed-Y finds something hilarious, causing him to burst into laughter for no apparent reason. This causes Jam-Y to believe that he's missing out on something and follow suit. This spreads to everyone else in the team. End result, spontaneous laughter. But spontaneous laughter is good. Laughter indicates happiness, and Our Mutual Friend likes that.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 14, 2012 20:36

I realize I am laughing too and stop.

"Well. That was weird..."

I look ahead to the lift.

"Anyway. Let's go before more of those Easter Cycle guys show up and try to interfere with the lift again. Nukabot... squeeze in, I guess."

written by Speeder on Oct 14, 2012 20:56

I smile happily, and attempt to pay attention to see if I can hear the very pleasurable sound of bones that are not mine cracking when Nukabot drives over them.

written by Jam on Oct 15, 2012 04:09

I suddenly decide to check behind us in case there are any suspicious clones watching.

Also, how many shots did my laser pistol barrel have again? I'd better check one more time, just in case...

written by Gligar on Oct 15, 2012 17:27

By the lift, J Level, Alpha Subsector

L4-O is the first to recover from that bout of laughter. He finds it a bit odd, but dismisses it. They need to get back to the bunker, after all... preferably before anything else related to the Easter Cycle shows up.

He tells Nukabot to squeeze into the lift, which it does. Right over the blackened corpse. This causes a number of snapping and squishing noises, which Speed-Y seems to enjoy.

Jam-Y suddenly looks behind them. He can't shake the feeling that something is going to go wrong... He checks his laser pistol again... three shots left.

written by Speeder on Oct 15, 2012 17:41

I think a bit.

"Are pyro mutants immune to fire?"

I mean, how Rapt-G used a flamethrower inside a lift without catching fire himself?"

written by Jam on Oct 15, 2012 18:01

"I remember reading about that... Only some mutants are immune to fire, I think."

written by Kristos on Oct 15, 2012 18:25

"Good work, Cyrus-R!"

"We already know this is a bad barrel. And the device supported our knowledge with a harsh sound and an illuminated sad face. We should now test the three barrels from the faulty assembly line and see if any of them are bad."

I return the fan to a reasonable suction and close the app.

written by Gligar on Oct 15, 2012 22:24

Speed-Y's lift

As everyone takes their places (as best they can) in the lift, Speed-Y has a thought: how could Rapt-G use the flamethrower in such an enclosed space without catching fire? Are pyros immune to fire?

Jam-Y says that some mutants are, but doesn't say anything about pyros.

So... is anyclone going to press the button?

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser Barrel Factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R compliments Cyrus-R in getting the fan switched off, then explains that they have now figured out what the device does when presented with a defective barrel. They're ready to test the barrels from the suspicious production line.

That done, he heads over to the terminal and resets the fan before closing the app. There.

written by Cryoburner on Oct 15, 2012 23:05

"Yes, our mission to extinguish the fire and dust the furniture was a resounding success! Plus, we were able to get a barrel tested while we were at it."

I look over the office's current state, making special note of how much cleaner and less burning everything is now.

"Maybe we should build a fume hood for the vent though. I got the impression that you might have been affected by leaking fumes, which may have affected your ability to see the fire that was all over the place."

written by Speeder on Oct 16, 2012 00:00

I climb off Nukabot, press the button to the level that we used to enter in first place, and return to the bot, still pondering about the fireproof Rapt-G

written by Lightning4 on Oct 16, 2012 00:03

"Level A, I think? We should go to that level, we can just get into the bunker through there."

written by Jam on Oct 16, 2012 00:05

I suddenly realize I should have been more specific.

"I mean, some pyros are immune, some aren't... I think it's different variations of the mutation or something."

written by Gligar on Oct 16, 2012 15:17

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser Barrel Factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

I... think Cyrus-R may need to see a docbot. Failing that, being shot by a laser barrel a few times might do it. Why? He has failed to realise that the fire was just a hallucination, indicating that he is one of the 35% of clones who, unfortunately, have a secondary reaction to the gas in use in the device. Normally, the gas loses its effectiveness as soon as it is dispersed, but in those 35%... well...

And of those 35%, a total of 10% have an even more severe reaction that causes their skin to turn a bright purple! That is, VIOLET!

It would appear that Cyrus-R is one of them. And you know what happens to clones with a skin colour beyond their clearance? 🤨

Speed-Y's lift

Speed-Y climbs down from Nukabot, and reaches round to the control panel. As L4-O reminds him, they want A Level. He presses the button.

As the lift moves, the team continues to ponder the problem of pyros (not) being immune to fire. Jam-Y elaborates that it's only certain pyros who are immune... something about variances to the mutation. "You're thinking of Fire Affinity," John-O tells him. "That's a variation of Pyrokinesis which allows the mutant to thrive in fire. But if he had that, surely he'd tell us?"

written by Speeder on Oct 16, 2012 16:01

"I wonder if there are something such as sewer affinity and Friend Computer uses them for cleaning the sewers..."

Or if Fire Affinity clones end being used to repair foundry ovens."

written by Kristos on Oct 16, 2012 19:15⁸⁰²

I just received orders from a VIOLET clone to build a fume hood! Something seems strange about it all, but I know better than to ask questions in the presence of a VIOLET.

"Yes sir!" I immediately begin looking for materials that might could be used to build a fume hood. Maybe if we cut the floor plan into pieces, then weld them together...

"I'm sorry about not seeing the fire, sir! It won't happen again, sir!"

written by Gligar on Oct 16, 2012 20:04

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser Barrel Factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

It seems that Kris-R doesn't know what they say about clones with skin beyond their clearance... instead, he seems to believe that he's been given an order by a VIOLET!

Dutifully, he attempts to comply. He realises that he could build a fume hood out of the filing cabinets... or the floor plan... but he has no tools to do it!

But a small part of his mind doubts all this.⁸⁰³

Speed-Y's lift

As the lift descends, Speed-Y wonders if there is such a thing as Sewer Affinity for those who work in waste recycling or something. John-O doubts it, but suggests that they go to waste recycling and ask.

Speaking of that, Speed-Y wonders what it is that Fire Affinity clones get used for. Repairing foundry ovens? "Could be, sir."

written by Speeder on Oct 16, 2012 21:29

I decide to ask the lift...

"Hey lift... How this charred clone here got charred while you are not charred with it?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 16, 2012 21:40

I decide to get off Nukabot for a moment and checked the charred clone for anything useful, as I always do.

"Maybe there's something here that can be a clue..."

written by Jam on Oct 16, 2012 22:30

"Maybe the lift is fireproof? Or maybe our briefing officer is really good at controlling fire! I wish we had a clone like that on our team..."

I look at Lucas-O with a grin on my face.

"You know, it's not to late to go find a vat of toxic waste..."

written by Gligar on Oct 17, 2012 18:57

Speed-Y's lift

Speed-Y has an idea, and asks the lift how the corpse got charred without affecting the lift. "I am not entirely certain, citizen, as I do not have access to the cameras," the lift replies. "My sensors indicated an abrupt increase in temperature within myself, which may have caused the number of occupants to drop from two to one. I was not affected, however. I assume that whatever caused the abrupt increase in temperature was extremely localised."

L4-O decides to do some investigating, and gets off Nukabot. He tries to look at the remains of the charred clone, only to realise that, after being run over by Nukabot, there is not much left.

Jam-Y suggests that the lift might be fireproof. Or maybe Rapt-G is really good at controlling fire, perhaps? It would be cool if someone on their team knew how to do that? Perhaps Lucas-O could go and find a vat of toxic waste?

Lucas-O looks like he wants to punch Jam-Y for even suggesting that he mutate himself, but before he can say anything, John-R reminds Jam-Y about the problems with that method of granting mutations: "For every Pyro or Mental Blast mutant you get, you also get nineteen negative mutations.... you know, tumours and such. And I know that a 5% success rate is good enough for R&D and The Computer, but... remember that you're hypothetically terminating nineteen loyal clones to get one good mutant!"

The lift shudders and comes to a stop. The doors open.

written by Speeder on Oct 17, 2012 20:31

I point the gun outside and take a look on where we are.

written by Jam on Oct 17, 2012 23:40

"Hmm... That's a good point... I'd hate for Lucas-O to be one of the nineteen..."

I try to see what floor we're on... Surely we couldn't have made it to A level that fast?

written by Lightning4 on Oct 18, 2012 00:06

I quickly hop back on Nukabot, and if we are on A level I order the move forward.

If we aren't, however, I take a look around from my vantage point and quickly get my blaster in hand.

⁸⁰² KRISTOS: (OOC: LOL, Speeder. Good stuff!)

⁸⁰³ GLIGAR: (OOC: +1pp to Kristos.)

written by Gligar on Oct 18, 2012 17:16

Speed-Y's lift

Determined to always be the first to act, Speed-Y looks outside. He notices a sign, covered in graffiti, indicating that they are, in fact, on A Level.

Jam-Y admits that John-O has a point. He would hate for Lucas-O to be one of the nineteen.

He also looks outside, and also notices the sign.

L4-O gets back onto Nukabot and gives the order for it to move. It exits the lift and starts back down the corridor.

written by Speeder on Oct 18, 2012 17:26

I keep alert, weapon in hand.

"See? Nothing happened on the lift, no need for decoy!"

written by Jam on Oct 18, 2012 18:01

I also keep alert, ready to shoot at any moment.

But I get distracted briefly by the graffiti covered sign. I try to read what the graffiti says, so I can try to judge who would have written such a thing on a sign.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 18, 2012 20:03

I also keep alert, since the more clones that are alert, the better!

written by Kristos on Oct 18, 2012 21:00

I wait for the VIOLET clone to do or say something...

written by Gligar on Oct 19, 2012 16:12

A level, Alpha Subsector

Alertness is high as Team Epsilon continues its journey towards the bunker. Even though nothing happened in the lift, it is still worth being alert, as Speed-Y says.

Jam-Y is distracted by the graffiti as they pass. It seems to be some sort of Anti-Mutant logo.

Soon, Nukabot comes to the exit, leading out into the bot parking area.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

It looks like Cyrus-R has nothing to say about Kris-R's work. Or about anything, for that matter. Kris-R waits patiently...

While he waits, the tester device ejects the defective barrel, which hits Cyrus-R in the arm.

written by Speeder on Oct 19, 2012 16:35

I look around.

"So Jam, I saw you looking at the sign, anything interesting on it?"

I see if there are any Massacrebot parked nearby.

written by Kristos on Oct 19, 2012 16:43

"No! Bad device, bad! You just assaulted a VIOLET clone! I will accordingly deal with your insubordination."

I place the first barrel from Assembly Line 4 in the device, then I drag Cyrus-R-V out of the office by grasping his RED jumpsuit.

Punishing the device and getting inspection work done at the same time. It's like killing two commie mutant traitors with one can of B3.

written by Jam on Oct 19, 2012 18:06

I look a bit worried.

"Looks like it's Anti-mutant graffiti..."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 19, 2012 18:47

"Seems like there's a lot of extreme anti-mutant or extreme pro-mutant sentiment these days..."

I keep a lookout while we go through the parking area, who knows what could be hiding behind a bot.

written by Gligar on Oct 19, 2012 20:14

Bot parking area, below Central Subsector

Speed-Y maintains his alertness. He notices a large number of Mobile Tiles in motion in the Interactive Corridor Experience, and a number of bots in the parking area, but sadly no ArmourBots. Derek-G must not have finished his work on the X-2 yet.

And no CMTs either. Though that's a good thing.

He asks Jam-Y about the sign. Jam-Y tells him about the graffiti, which prompts L4-O to observe that there has been a lot of pro- or anti-mutant sentiment lately, most of it of the extreme variety.

He also maintains vigilance. After all, there could easily be commies, mutants, traitors, or all three lurking behind that truckbot over there, for instance. Though none make themselves known. But you can never be too sure.

Nukabot quickly passes through the parking area and out onto the roadway.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

To Kris-R, it seems that the device just assaulted a VIOLET! It must be punished. Like, perhaps, being forced to test this barrel from Line 4.

The barrel in place, he drags Cyrus-R from the room.

Almost immediately, the device repeats its recent performance.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 19, 2012 21:52

I decide to shift my gaze in the direction where our bunker is, to see if I can make anything out of the ordinary at the garage entrance.

written by Speeder on Oct 20, 2012 01:20

I smile happily and start to look to Nukabot to see how damaged he still is.

written by Cryoburner on Oct 20, 2012 07:48

"Ei! What the what?"

I look down at what hit me, allowing me to notice my discolored skin.

"Gasp! My skin has turned a nearly treasonous shade of off-red! Perhaps I was burned? I must have been burned! Burned! Burned!"

I look around for any bandages. Failing that, I begin fashioning some from my stack of paper, covering any exposed areas of skin that appear to have been burned.

written by Kristos on Oct 20, 2012 14:17

I offer some labels to Cyrus-R-V.

written by Gligar on Oct 20, 2012 16:10

Roadway, near Epsilon Subsector

Almost before Nukabot finishes turning into the roadway, L4-O casts his gaze towards the bunker. The loading dock's door is still open. A couple of clones look to be lifting things off a nearby truckbot to take them inside.

Meanwhile, Speed-Y assesses the extent of Nukabot's damages. As previously mentioned, its left-side kevlar plating is shredded, as are the manual controls and the seat.

Nukabot continues on its journey.

Outside Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Finally realising that something has happened, Cyrus-R looks down to where he was hit, and realises that he has changed colour. That, of course, means that he must have been burned by the hallucinatory fire! He seems to want to bandage his burns, but only has paper to do it. As he begins covering himself in the nearly-white paper, two things happen. One is that Kris-R hands him some unused labels, and the second is that the device starts making its "bad" noises.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 20, 2012 19:48

"Hmm. I don't suppose we had a delivery scheduled?"

I continue watching the loading dock to see if I can make out who the clones are and what they are doing.

written by Gligar on Oct 20, 2012 21:16

Roadway, near Epsilon Subsector

L4-O wonders: did they have a delivery scheduled?

He watches the clones, and realises that they're unloading... Computer terminals?

As Nukabot gets closer, he remembers... weren't they upgrading the INFRARED dormitory?

Soon, Nukabot arrives at the loading dock.

written by Speeder on Oct 20, 2012 21:17

I look upward a little bit.

"Maybe we had. I don't remember though.

But I think I was responsible for the Bunker now... So I suppose they must talk to me about it, let's check when we arrive.

But for safety, Nukabot should be prepared in case what they are delivering is a bomb, we might need to drive very fast back to the road.

written by Jam on Oct 20, 2012 21:42

I keep an eye out for any suspicious clones...

"Remember... Trust no one. There could be commie mutant traitors anywhere!"

written by Gligar on Oct 21, 2012 15:50

Roadway, near Epsilon Subsector

As Nukabot decelerates, Speed-Y comments that they might have had a delivery due. But in any case, since he's now responsible for the bunker, these clones should talk to him about what they're doing.

Of course, it could be that they're delivering a bomb. In which case, they should be prepared.

Jam-Y reminds everyone about trust, and keeps an eye out.

One of the clones notices the team, and approaches. "A C-3 class forkbot... you don't see many of those around any more. Is this Team Epsilon?"

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

As Team Sigma keeps busy with other things, the device finishes its lightshow and emits a harsh buzzer. The sadface illuminates.

written by Kristos on Oct 21, 2012 17:45

"Aha! I knew it! A bad barrel! Now what, great VIOLET one?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 21, 2012 19:57

Remembering what Speed-Y said, I remain silent to allow him to speak.

written by Gligar on Oct 21, 2012 20:46

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R exclaims that the device confirmed what he already knew, and asks Cyrus-R what to do next.

[1224]

Cyrus-R doesn't say anything. Instead, his skin changes colour. It's now BLUE... no wait, it's RED. No, YELLOW. No...

It keeps changing colour!

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O remains silent, allowing Speed-Y to... speak... if he wants. He's in charge, after all.

When he doesn't, the HPD&MC clone says, "Well? Can one of you YELLOWs answer my question, please?"

written by Jam on Oct 21, 2012 22:46

I look at Speed-Y, then turn to the HPD&MC clone.

"Yeah, we're Team Epsilon. What's with all the Computer terminals?"

written by Cryoburner on Oct 21, 2012 22:57

"You must be mistaken! I am not violet! Only varying shades of off-red. There is a distinct difference!"

I combine Kris-R's labels with my sheets of paper to fashion a stylish bandage-hood, leaving a narrow slot for the eyes, of course. I also fashion an equally stylish pair of bandage-gloves, then wear my newly formed attire.

written by Speeder on Oct 21, 2012 23:48

I smile and say.

"Oh, sorry..."

I was trying to remember what those are for...

Remember Jam? We are converting one INFRARED dormitory to a facility more useful to troubleshooters, since there are no INFRARED troubleshooters."

written by Jam on Oct 22, 2012 00:56

"Oh yeah, that's right! Wow, that was only a couple daycycles ago... It practically feels like it's been a whole yearcycle, what with all the stuff that's been going on."

written by Gligar on Oct 22, 2012 16:43

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y acknowledges, and asks about the Computer terminals. "We've been ordered to install some of them into the new dormitory," the clone answers. "The rest are spares. We had an INDIGO do... something... to the subnode earlier... said something about security and UI updates to go along with both old and new terminals. He updated the confession booths as well, while we redid the doors round there."

Speed-Y apologises; he was trying to remember what the terminals were for. He reminds Jam-Y about the dorm that's being upgraded, causing Jam-Y to remark that it seems like ages ago that they organised that.

"We should be done in an hourcycle or so," the clone replies. "Then we can finalise the clearance upgrade."

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R protests that his skin is off-red, not VIOLET. No... it's more like half-orange-half-blue right now...

But no matter. He gets to work in fashioning "bandage clothing" out of paper and labels. He quickly discovers several things: first, that paper clothing is less comfortable than regular clothing; second, that paper gloves tend to cause papercuts; and third, that the "clothes" seem to want to fall apart.

written by Speeder on Oct 22, 2012 18:07

I nod.

I turn to the others.

"Alright, nothing dangerous here it seems."

I turn to him again.

"Just let me see all the papers and whatnot... The last time a scheduled maintenance was not properly checked by me resulted in parts of this bot being stolen..."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 22, 2012 20:15

"INDIGO huh.... that's pretty high clearance. Wonder what changes he did..."

written by Kristos on Oct 23, 2012 13:08

"Ahhh! I don't know what clearance you are anymore! I'm going to go back to the assembly lines. Why don't you just take care of things in the office? Maybe test the rest of the barrels."

I write down on a sheet of paper:

Line 4 #1 - Bad
Return #1 - Bad

written by Gligar on Oct 23, 2012 15:40

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y nods, and comments that this HPD&MC team doesn't seem dangerous. Still, he'd like to review the paperwork; after all, the last time he failed to do that, a certain nuclear device was stolen. "Of course," the clone replies. "I think Kristos-R has them... I'll go ask."

The clone heads off, through the north door, leaving L4-O to wonder what changes the INDIGO made. Perhaps it's custom software for compatibility reasons?

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Meanwhile, a clone who has a very similar name to Kristos-R but who is very different is bemoaning the fact that he can't tell what clearance Cyrus-R is any more. He suggests that he could head back to the assembly lines while Cyrus-R takes care of the office, and maybe tests the remaining barrels.

Before he forgets, though, he writes down the results of the last two tests.

written by Speeder on Oct 23, 2012 15:44

I nod, and wait for the clone to return with the paperwork.

"I heard that name before somewhere..."

I turn to Jam.

"You remember anyone with that name?"

I turn to L4.

"I hope I won't have to go up there again... The last time we had to do that was quite troublesome..."

written by Cryoburner on Oct 23, 2012 16:16

"That might be for the best. Hmm... Maybe we should build that fume hood first though."

Seeing as my stylish paper bandages don't seem to work all that well. I remove them and crumple them up. Since there isn't a trash bin to dispose of them in, I try stuffing them through the vent grating instead, careful not to poke any fingers through, of course.

written by Kristos on Oct 23, 2012 18:04

I shut and lock the office door, then make my way back to the end of assembly line 4 to trace it back.

written by Gligar on Oct 23, 2012 20:35

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y nods. Again. Kristos-R... he's heard that name before... He turns to Jam-Y... perhaps he knows the name?

To L4-O, he adds that he hopes he doesn't have to go "up there" again (presumably referring to the compnode in Central Subsector), since the last time was... troublesome.

Soon after, a different, and familiar, clone emerges with a sheaf of forms. He approaches Speed-Y, and stops. "Wait... you're Speed-Y, aren't you? I knew this place was familiar."

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

While Cyrus-R busies himself by removing his paper "bandages" (and still wanting to build that fume hood), Kris-R locks the door and heads off.

Hmmm... how does Cyrus-R dispose of the paper, seeing as there is no wastebin?

Aha! The fans are still blowing!

He starts pushing the paper into the grate, letting it get sucked in by the fan... and shredded - ow!

Like the very tip of his finger...

Assembly line 4, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Retracing his steps, Kris-R soon reaches the end of the production line, and starts tracing it backwards... past some of those big gears... past a miscoloured metal box... aha! Here's the start of the production line.

written by Speeder on Oct 23, 2012 21:03

I look at the clone.

Then I look again.

"Who are you again? Yes, I am Speed-Y..."

I squint a bit, trying to remember who that clone was.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 23, 2012 22:37

I look at the clone too to see if he's familiar. Perhaps familiar in a treasonous way?

Either way, I stare maybe just a bit too long trying to process this.

written by Jam on Oct 23, 2012 23:48

"Kristos-R... Ah, I remember, he was on our team during our last mission! You know, the one with the reactor and the compnode?"

written by Gligar on Oct 24, 2012 15:19

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

In between looking at Kristos-R, Speed-Y acknowledges his name, and asks for Kristos'. "I'm Kristos-R, sir. Do you remember me?"

L4-O just keeps staring, trying to see if he's someone they might have shot... nope, it doesn't seem to be.

Jam-Y then remembers: Kristos-R was on their team during the mission to the compnode! Kristos-R looks at him. "Yeah, that was it! My memory's fuzzy, but I remember the mission! Everything before and after is missing, but... the mission!"

written by Speeder on Oct 24, 2012 16:47

I peer at him.

Then I peer again.

Then I send a PDC message to Kristos.

"Hello, this is Speed-Y from Team Epsilon here, tell me your current clone number please."

Then I peer at him again.

"So... if everything else is missing, but the mission is not, tell me something about it. Also what is your full name please?"

written by Kristos on Oct 24, 2012 19:47

I look around for any knowledgeable clones or bots. If I locate one, I ask, "Hello. I am Kris-R, leader of Team Sigma, investigating the laser barrel sabotage. Can you give me any information on repairs made to this assembly line just before faulty barrels began being returned?"

written by Gligar on Oct 24, 2012 20:13

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y still seems suspicious.

He decides to test whether this really is Kristos-R, first by instructing his PDC to send a message to "Kristos-R", then by asking the clone in front of him some questions.

First, he wants to know something about the mission: "I remember helping to refuel the generators here in the bunker. I suggested siphoning fuel from the drums but we ended up just pouring it through hoses." His PDC suddenly rings, indicating a message. "Hang on." He pulls out his PDC and fiddles with it.

While he's doing that, Speed-Y asks for his full name. "I'm Kristos-R-GRU-2. And my clone number, as I'm about to send you right now, is 2." He presses a final button on his PDC. A moment later, Speed-Y's PDC also indicates that he has a message.

"Anyway, you wanted to look at these forms?"

Assembly line 4, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R looks around, and spots an ORANGE supervisor. He goes over and asks about the sabotage. "I know that one of the machines broke - that one," he says, pointing. "I don't really know the details - clearance, you know - but it's the machine that assembles the bulk of the energy array in the barrel. We had to send for a team to repair it, because we can't replace the delicate equipment inside."

written by Speeder on Oct 24, 2012 20:20

I nod.

I take the forms, and start to read them very carefully...

"I wish we still had Cryo around... For that he would be very useful. He was like a walking CPU library."

written by Jam on Oct 24, 2012 20:32

"Yeah, what ever happened to Cryo-R? We should go find him, he can't have wandered too far..."

written by Speeder on Oct 24, 2012 20:58

"Seriously Jam?

By the ease that Cryo wandered, probably right now he already did two laps in the entire Alpha Complex...

If he did wasted all his clones visiting UV areas again, of course..."

written by Kristos on Oct 24, 2012 22:06

"Wow. Do you know how I could find out more information about the repair team?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 24, 2012 23:45

I reply to Speed-Y's initial remarks on Cryo-R.

"You're assuming he wouldn't just try to assess the composition of the ink used in the form. Or the composition of the paper."

I sigh.

"Or the composition of the air between the form and his eyes."

written by Jam on Oct 25, 2012 08:38

"Ha! Yeah, that sounds exactly like Cryo-R!"

written by Gligar on Oct 25, 2012 17:21

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y takes the forms and begins to read them. The first seems to be a copy of the request he made to have the dormitory upgraded. The next is an approval form, authorising the upgrade. This, in turn, seems to have generated a whole bunch of other forms...

He wishes Cryo-R was still with them. He could have used his apparent knowledge of CPU regulations or something, it would have made checking these forms a whole lot easier... "Cryo-R?" Kristos-R asks. "Wasn't he that clone who liked to inspect light fixtures for no reason?"

Jam-Y wonders what happened to Cryo-R. Perhaps they should go and find him? It's not like he could have wandered too far...

Speed-Y disagrees with that. He believes that, given the time that's passed, it's possible for Cryo-R to have walked round the whole of Alpha Complex. Twice. Though if he did, he'd probably have run out of clones by now.

L4-O isn't sure that Cryo-R could even help. After all, he's probably just ignore the form and concentrate on figuring out whether the ink is the proper sort to use when printing forms. Or the paper.

Or the air.

Jam-Y has to concede that that sounds about right.

Assembly line 4, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R asks if he could find out about the repair team. "Well, I'm sure you could put in an Information Request Form for it. Or perhaps check the maintenance logs. Or something."

written by Speeder on Oct 25, 2012 17:35

After expending some more time to make sure there is nothing obviously wrong with the forms, I read my own request, since I actually don't remember what I requested.

written by Gligar on Oct 25, 2012 21:47

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y continues reading through the forms. Everything seems to be in order.

He then realises that he can't actually remember what it was he requested! He goes back and re-reads the request form. It appears that he requested that Dormitory 3 be upgraded to Clearance YELLOW specifications.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 25, 2012 22:54

"I guess we should be getting inside. Or at least, I should be."

I get off Nukabot, but hang around for a little bit for any kind of reply.

written by Speeder on Oct 26, 2012 00:01

I look to L4.

"Well... you are the equipment officer... So the FIRST thing you need to do, is figure how to help Nukabot... Probably this involve forms..."

Then I think a bit.

"We have a meeting room?"

written by Cryoburner on Oct 26, 2012 01:08

"Ow!"

I combine Kris-R's labels with one of my sheets of paper to fashion a stylish finger-bandage, which I use to bandage my injured fingertip.

"So stylish..."

I take a moment to note how stylish my finger-bandage is. I then look around, noting any supplies that could be used to construct a fume hood. I also check how close the device currently is to the vent.

written by Gligar on Oct 26, 2012 15:52

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O guesses that they should get into the bunker proper, and gets off Nukabot. He sticks around, though, which is a good thing. As Speed-Y reminds him, Nukabot is damaged, and, as the team's Equipment Officer, it is his responsibility to see to its repairs. Perhaps that will require forms.

Speaking of which, he's finished with these now. Perhaps Kristos-R would be pleased to know that? He's standing right there, waiting for something after all.

But back to Speed-Y. He seems to be thinking about something... a meeting room? Well, there's either the (unused) food hall on A Level, or the meeting hall up on C Level...

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Hasn't Cyrus-R heard of sticking plasters?

It seems that he's got the basic idea, but... well, paper and stickers just aren't the same. And "style"? He's not cleared for style. Someone tell the Loy —

Oh right.

Anyway, it looks like he still wants to build that fume hood. Out of what? Drawers from the filing cabinets? Parts of the floor plan? But what tools does he have? How will he mount it? And how will he move the4 device into position?

And what about proper room ventilation?

[FINAL SENTENCE DELETED FOR SECURITY REASONS]

written by Speeder on Oct 26, 2012 15:56

I hand the documents back to Kristos.

"So, how the things are going for you? Do you miss the missions?"

written by Speeder on Oct 26, 2012 15:57

"Oh, and of course... When will be everything ready so I can move in and test the systems?"

written by Gligar on Oct 26, 2012 19:39

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y hands back the forms, and asks whether Kristos-R misses the missions. "A little. I'm apparently still on the books, but I haven't been called forward again. Yet."

Next question: when will everything be ready for him to check out? "Should only be an hourcycle or so now, sir."

written by Speeder on Oct 26, 2012 19:52

I turn to L4.

"Level C meeting room then? I also need to go into that security station and check if everything is in order."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 26, 2012 21:17

"Hmm. I'll have to look into repairs then, I doubt I could repair that myself."

I look at how extensive the damage is.

"I'll research that then, maybe once we get to the meeting room. The meeting room is fine... I guess I'll wait there."

I slowly start to proceed to the stairs.

written by Cryoburner on Oct 27, 2012 13:46

I crawl under the desk, looking for any other fume-hoodable supplies that might be there. I also check whether the desk is secured to the floor in any way.

written by Kristos on Oct 27, 2012 15:08

"Where should I go to put in an Information Request form?"

written by Gligar on Oct 27, 2012 16:11

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Once again getting the first word, Speed-Y decides that they should meet up in the C Level meeting hall. Which, as it is close to the control room, will allow him to go there and make sure everything's okay.

L4-O replies that he'll have to look into getting Nukabot repaired. From the look of this, it's not something he could do himself. Well, maybe he could replace the ruined kevlar and the seat, but the controls will need Tech Services attention.

Of course, he'll need to research how to do that. Perhaps once they get to the meeting hall... speaking of which, he's already heading up there.

Corridor A2, Emergency Bunker C-3

Of course, he'll have to get round the tools left by the HPD&MC crew, which are strewn around the corridor...

[1228]

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

In his pursuit of more materials to turn into a fume hood, Cyrus-R crawls under the desk.

Where he finds nothing. Except for the bolts that fasten the desk to the wall. But with no tools, he can't do anything about those.

Assembly line 4, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R asks where he should go to submit the form. "There's a CPU office attached to the factory," he is told. "It's at the far end of Corridor B."

written by Speeder on Oct 27, 2012 16:33

I decide to... suddenly sprint.

"The last one to arrive in the meeting room is a Junior crybaby!"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 27, 2012 19:20

If I hear Speed-Y's remark and sprinting, I start sprinting as well to the Meeting Room.

written by Gligar on Oct 27, 2012 20:27

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y (first, as always) has a sudden idea. Let's make it a race!

He suddenly launches into a sprint, racing past L4-O in the corridor... and the rest of the team follows.

L4-O realises what's going on, and chases along behind.

Through the bunker

It doesn't take all that long to run down two corridors, up the stairs, and through another corridor... though Jam-Y has a sudden idea, and cuts through the medical bay and Dormitory 1! On his way through, he notes two clones sleeping in the dorm...

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Soon, though, the team reaches the meeting hall...

And the winner is... actually not Jam-Y! It turns out to be L4-O, even though he was last to start!

And who was last? Well, it looks like Joris-O...

written by Jam on Oct 27, 2012 20:54

"Wow, L4-O, you're fast! Almost... suspiciously fast..."

I look suspicious for a few secondcycles, then suddenly realize I saw something strange while I was running.

"Ah! Speed-Y, I saw some clones sleeping in one of the dorms while I was running. Seems kind of odd..."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 27, 2012 22:58

I say, somewhat short of breath.

"Well, Armed Forces training requires you to be pretty fast! If you're not fast or well armed, you're dead!"

"Still draining though..."

I spend a few secondcycles recovering from my sprint.

written by Gligar on Oct 28, 2012 15:51

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y is the first to recover.

He congratulates L4-O on his speed, suspicious though it may be. But he remembers the clones sleeping in the dormitory...

L4-O brushes off the suspicion. He's Armed Forces, after all, and that demands quite a bit of physical training.

Now that everyone's here, it becomes apparent that someone else has been here recently. A few documents left near the vidscreen, for one... some chairs out of place... that sort of thing.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 28, 2012 19:42

I look around, and take a look at some of the documents that have been left near the vidscreen.

"Hm... that's odd."

written by Jam on Oct 28, 2012 20:47

I also look at the documents.

"Very odd..."

written by Gligar on Oct 28, 2012 22:23

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Both Jam-Y and L4-O investigate the documents. Both think of them as odd.

Their investigation shows that the documents are part of a mission briefing that took place here while they were out, involving a Team Sigma. The team apparently consists of two members: a 'Kris-R' and a familiar name: Cryo-R. A third name has been crossed out, and is also familiar: Mick-R. The mission itself seems to relate to a laser barrel factory in JHY Sector.

written by Kristos on Oct 28, 2012 22:24

I thank the ORANGE and go to the far end of Corridor B.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 29, 2012 04:15

"Well. That explains where Cryo-R got off to. Odd place to have a briefing though..."

I shrug.

written by Speeder on Oct 29, 2012 15:12

I think a bit.

"Not really..."

I mean, Team Sigma probably is a team related to ours now, since they have no YELLOWS they are probably now under my and Jam command here in the bunker unless they are in a mission from higher clearance clones.

[1229]

But hey, this is a good mission for Cryo! He would love to inspect something as his mission!"

I turn to the others and pant a little bit, since I decided to talk a lot before recovering.

written by 4616599 on Oct 29, 2012 15:34

I pant a little. I haven't ran or slept with my current clone, it almost seems. I let off an involuntary yawn.

"Yawnn..ahem, 'scuse me. Well, that's interesting. Pant. Pant. Need to stay alert. Me does. I do. Pant."

I lean against the wall, fighting a sudden urge to sleep.

written by Gligar on Oct 29, 2012 17:59

Production line 4, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R heads off, looking for this office. First problem: where is Corridor B?

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

How about right here? In fact, it seems that Corridor B is the larger corridor heading right up to the factory floor entrance.

He heads down it.

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

While walking, Kris-R realises that the corridor is also used by vehiclebots, like the one approaching right now.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O shrugs. The meeting hall is an odd place for a briefing, but at least it explains where Cryo-R went.

Speed-Y doesn't think it's odd. In fact, it probably means that Team Sigma is under their command, since they don't have a YELLOW with them. Not that it matters for the mission; it's a good one for Cryo-R, given that he likes to inspect things. (If only they knew...)

He stops to recover from the run, allowing Joris-O to speak. Though he's fighting off sleep and trying to breathe properly, he says that the other mission looks interesting... or it would be if he could remain alert. He leans against the wall and tries to remain awake. It looks to be a battle...

written by Kristos on Oct 29, 2012 18:14

"Hello vehiclebot, fellow friend of The Computer. Might you deliver me to that end of this corridor?"

I point to my destination.

written by Speeder on Oct 29, 2012 18:36

But then I remember Jam and his shortcut.

"Hey, you said you saw someone sleeping... Who was it?

Or better, let's check then we do the meeting..."

I start to walk toward the dormitory that Jam crossed.

written by Gligar on Oct 29, 2012 21:55

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R speaks to the approaching vehiclebot, asking if it could take him to his destination.

But it just ignores him and keeps coming.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y remembers Jam-Y's report about the sleeping clones. He wonders if he saw who it was, but realises it'd probably be a better idea to check it out himself before they have their meeting.

That in mind, he heads over to...

Dormitory 1, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

...the RED dormitory.

Indeed, there are two RED clones asleep here, both of them familiar to Speed-Y. They were notable by their absence at Debriefing, in fact.

written by Speeder on Oct 29, 2012 22:40

I make a surprised face.

"I wonder how they got here."

Then I go back to the meeting room.

"Azir and I forgot the name are sleeping in the dormitory..."

I wonder how they got here..."

I smile.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 29, 2012 23:22

I pull out my PDC and, if I can, I start researching forms, specifically forms involving the repair or maintenance of forkbots.

Alternatively I look into some other way of getting Nukabot repaired.

"I wonder how it got repaired last time... I don't think anyone signed a form. Maybe we just need to place a call or order or something..."

written by Jam on Oct 30, 2012 15:11

"Huh... Strange... I wonder why they didn't come to debriefing. Well, they've probably already been punished for that, I'm guessing."

written by Gligar on Oct 30, 2012 16:44

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y returns to the meeting hall. He's identified the RED clones as Azir-R, and... the other one, whose name he can't remember. (He's probably thinking about that clone... you know, the one who didn't like blood...) He wonders how they got here. Jam-Y wonders why they didn't report to Debriefing... oh well, they've probably already been punished for that.

[1230]

L4-O is researching repairs for Nukabot. He's found a repair request form which needs to be filled out by... hmmm, it looks like two copies are needed. Perhaps he can fill one out, and Speed-Y can fill in the other?

He points out that no-one filled out a form last time; Nukabot was simply... repaired. But it occurs to him that perhaps Derek-G covered it last time. Or something.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 30, 2012 19:38

"Hmm. Two forms. I guess I need both, and I have to sign one, and either Speed-Y or maybe Jam-Y the other?"

I look over the forms to see if it states specifically. I then look for a way of printing the form so we can fill it out and send it off. If that's necessary.

written by Speeder on Oct 30, 2012 19:42

"I will sign the other one..."

written by Gligar on Oct 30, 2012 20:59

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O tells everyone about the forms.

He wonders if he needs to print them out and send them off... hmmm. It says that printed copies are accepted, and that they can be obtained from the nearest Forms Office if no printer is available. Is there a printer in the bunker?

Speed-Y says he'll sign one of them.

written by Kristos on Oct 30, 2012 21:15

I remove myself from the vehiclebot's path and continue walking down the corridor, keeping an eye out for anything suspicious, particularly from the vehiclebot.

written by Gligar on Oct 31, 2012 16:56

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Noticing a distinct lack of response from the vehiclebot, Kris-R attempts to get out of the way. He isn't quite fast enough.

Wham! He's pushed out of the way and against the wall of the corridor with enough force to break a bone or two.

Nonetheless, he attempts to continue, noticing as he does that the vehiclebot seems to be chuckling to itself.

written by Speeder on Oct 31, 2012 17:18

"So... what we must do now?"

Since I have some skills with computers, I might try to gather more intel into Easter Cycle using our shiny new computers, after I check what modifications were done to the subnode, those I can check of course, being YELLOW."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 31, 2012 17:40

I try to print out a couple of those forms, should there be a printer nearby.

"Yeah, we need more information to work on. We also need to locate somewhere where we can figure out who ordered the debriefing officer change. He may or may not be related to this... Easter Cycle, but I'm not sure."

written by Jam on Oct 31, 2012 20:31

"We should have someone guarding L4-O too, just in case..."

written by Kristos on Oct 31, 2012 21:03

"Ah! You junior-INFRA-bot! Grow up! I'm on an important mission for the Computer!" Since when do bots chuckle?

limp limp

I'll get there eventually.

written by Gligar on Oct 31, 2012 21:16

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y wonders what their next move should be. Claiming some skill, he volunteers to do a little research into this Easter Cycle group... and at the same time, he'll see if he can find out what that INDIGO did to the subnode.

L4-O seems to be having a little trouble finding a printer to print those forms with. Wait, what about... aha! There's one in the office down on B Level. He fires off a print request, and points out that they'll need to figure out who ordered the change in debriefing officer, as well.

Jam-Y suggests having someone guard L4-O.

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R admonishes the bot, and notes the chuckle.

Regardless, he continues on.

Soon, he approaches a door on the right, marked FORMS OFFICE.

written by Speeder on Oct 31, 2012 22:36

"It is kinda weird having to guard our most dangerous clone, specially when that clone can probably kill a fly-model spybot with a single blaster shot..."

But I agree."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 31, 2012 23:02

"Aw, you flatter me..."

I smile a little.

"It does seem like some pretty dangerous types are after me though... there's only so much weapons can do when mutants are involved..."

I edge towards the door of the meeting hall.

"I have the forms printed, they're in the office."

written by Gligar on Nov 01, 2012 18:11

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y thinks it's weird having to guard the clone with the most firepower out of them all, but agrees that it is necessary.

L4-O argues that weapons only so far when mutants are involved. Oh, and he has the forms printed. He edges towards the door. John-O starts following.

written by Speeder on Nov 01, 2012 19:52

"I will check that security station now... I will return here when I see that L4 is returning with the forms."

And then I do as I said.

written by Gligar on Nov 01, 2012 22:03

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y decides to head to the control room now; he'll come back when L4-O does.

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

As he enters, he notes that the security monitors are, again, working. Right now they're showing the warehouse on D Level and the loading dock on A Level.

Oh hey, it looks like the terminals have had a UI upgrade! The one in here being an old one, it's still in text mode, but at least it looks like something that could be the standard directory display.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 01, 2012 22:32

I proceed down to the offices, intending to look for the printer and the printed forms.

I also look around the Office to make sure nothing is out of the ordinary in there.

written by Kristos on Nov 02, 2012 01:20

I enter the forms office (provided it is of appropriate clearance, of course) and observe my surroundings. If there is no queue I ask a clone about submitting an Information Request Form.

written by Gligar on Nov 02, 2012 16:22

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

With John-R in tow, L4-O heads downstairs.

Stairwell, Emergency Bunker C-3

As they head down, L4-O and John-R note that some of the HPD&MC crew are accessing B Level. As they approach and enter the concourse, one of the crew passes them, heading for the spare parts storage, carrying something. They follow, since the office is through there.

As they approach, the dull roar of the generators becomes apparent.

The crewmember places what he was carrying in a corner, and leaves.

Forms Office, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R pushes the door open and, noting that the entry area is RED, enters.

A clone at a desk looks up. "Can I help you, citizen? If you're looking for medi--"

Kris-R interrupts, asking about an Information Request Form. "Oh! Right. Have you filled in an Information Request Form Request Form yet?"

written by Speeder on Nov 02, 2012 17:27

I start to get familiarized with the new controls.

First I test anything that does not look too dangerous, and note as needed on my PDC the new controls.

Then I start to check all the cameras, one by one, to see if there are anything new or suspicious happening.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 02, 2012 18:56

I take a look around for the printer and the forms, and take them once I find them.

I also just look around in general, it's been a little while since we've been in the Office, after all.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 02, 2012 20:02

I poke my head out from under the desk.

"It looks like I'm going to have to find me some tools!"

I do a quick final glance at how the bolts are fastened to the wall, along with their size, and see if I can determine what kind of tools would be required to remove them. I then crawl out from under the desk, and wander over to the door.

"Hmm..."

Noting that I lack a key for the door, I check whether I at least have a way to open it, and if opening it will unlock the door, or leave it locked when once again closed.

written by Gligar on Nov 02, 2012 20:30

Control Room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y takes some time to familiarise himself with the new interface. Gone is the command-line the terminal had before... no wait, that still seems to be an option. But by default, the terminal instead gives him a directory, much like other terminals in the complex. As well as other terminal-like functions. But they're all in the monospaced text these terminals use instead of the nice clearance-appropriate themes with different fonts used elsewhere.

That's not all that's been updated. The directory now lists several apps for controlling several aspects of bunker operation, duplicating the control panel. And... like the control panel, the apps aren't labelled, other than with filenames like TRT-485, DR-003, LC-345...

Oh, and CAM-999. Speed-Y starts that one, and discovers that through it, he can select between some of the bunker's cameras. Others seem to be restricted to Clearance BLUE.

Through the cameras he can access, Speed-Y can monitor the corridors, the meeting hall, the office, the loading dock, a few other places...

The HPD&MC crew can be seen continuing their work. One of them seems to have visited B Level to drop something off. He passed L4-O and John-O on their way to the office.

Office, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

The two ORANGES enter the office. He didn't really get a good look at the office during the Communist incident, so it's probably a good thing he gets a chance now. His first priority, of course, is the printer.

He searches the cubicles... yes, there are the terminals. They also seem to be displaying the Directory interface instead of the database they were showing before. And tucked away in the corner is the printer: it's one of those big ones meant for bulk printing that used to be a common sight in offices.⁸⁰⁴ Lying in its output tray are a few printed sheets.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Oh look! Cyrus-R has emerged from under the desk, a little sad that the bolts seem to have been welded in place.

He'll still need to find some tools if he wants to make a fume hood. Of course, to do that, he'll need to get out of the door, which is still locked. He looks to see if he can bypass the lock, and finds that he cannot.

written by Speeder on Nov 02, 2012 20:34

"Good too see this thing upgraded."

I try to see what was dropped on the B level.

Then I try to use the cameras to refresh my memory and see what facilities are available to us, specially anything with computers, weapons, food or interesting equipment.

written by Jam on Nov 02, 2012 20:42

I suddenly decide starting off into space isn't very productive, and decide to try searching for the YELLOW dorm instead...

written by Cryoburner on Nov 02, 2012 20:45

"Hmm... It looks like I'll need a cutting torch! Or a chainsaw..."

I then note that I have been locked inside, making this something of an environment not entirely conducive to laser barrel testing.

"Hmm... It looks like I'll need a cutting torch! Or a chainsaw..."

I then wander over to the vent, and note whether the vent cover looks to be removable, and whether one could crawl past the fan blades, assuming they were stopped. I don't actually attempt to remove the grating yet though.

⁸⁰⁴ GLIGAR: (OOC: similar to an HP Laserjet 4 or something.)

written by Kristos on Nov 02, 2012 21:04

"I have not filled out such a form. How might I procure one?"

I wonder about the rogue-acting vehiclebot. That was very strange behavior. I should report it to the Computer.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 02, 2012 21:44

I take and inspect the forms. Should they look acceptable, I inspect where and what I need to fill out on my form, and start on it.

written by Gligar on Nov 03, 2012 17:21

Control Room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y tries to identify what was dropped. It turns out that he can't zoom the cameras, but from what he can see it's a box of some kind, about the size of one of the new terminals.

He then has a look round the bunker in general, refreshing his memory of what they have. He checks the cloning station and the medical bay on this level, and... ah yes, Maintenance and food stores... and the RED and ORANGE dormitories.

Looking onto B Level, there's the armoury (which seems to have been stocked) with the subnode room past it (though he can't select the cameras in there). That package was dropped in the spare parts stores, north of the generator room. There's also the other store room where he found those tapes, and the office - with its terminals - where L4-O is. North of the office... ah, that's the workshop.

And down on A Level... there's the hygiene station and fuel storage for the generators... the loading dock of course... the food hall they're not using, though it looks like it's ready to use... the incinerator room...

And there's the soon-to-be-YELLOW dormitory. It looks like it's being outfitted to house eight YELLOWS comfortably, with four terminals between them. It looks like Jam-Y decided to have a look in at the progress. The place is a mess right now, since they're still wiring up the terminals, but the beds are in, at least.

And then there's that BLUE office they still can't get to... it's possible that it has full access to the cameras. But it's BLUE, of course, so they can't use it.

Office, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O has a look at those forms. It looks like they've printed okay. There are a few sections he'll need to fill in... and there's a pen on that desk, so... let's see... name, ID of the bot, nature of repairs, the inevitable question linking B3 with it all...

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Meanwhile., Cyrus-R has apparently decided not to test any laser barrels. Instead, he is attempting to remove the vent's grate. It looks like it'll unfasten...

“Citizen! Report!”

... and, of course, that exact time is perfect for a chat with Our Mutual Friend.

Forms Office, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R explains that he hasn't filled out an Information Request Form Request Form, and asks where he can get one. "Oh, that's no problem," the clone replies. "I have several of them right here." The clone turns and rummages in a filing cabinet before turning back with a form. "Here you are."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 03, 2012 19:52

Once I finish filling out the form, I look at John-O.

"Well, back to the meeting hall I guess. Thanks for accompanying me, John-O. Let's head back."

I start making my way back.

written by Gligar on Nov 03, 2012 22:15

Office, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O finishes his copy of the form. So... back to the meeting hall?

He thanks John-O for accompanying him. "It's no problem. I mean, that HPD&MC clone might have been a traitor... say, didn't he leave something out in the store room?" The two exit into there.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 04, 2012 01:26

"Hello, Computer, my dearest friend. I'm happy to be able to speak with you today. May I provide you with further assistance in any way?"

written by Speeder on Nov 04, 2012 04:49

I send a PDC message to L4.

"I saw a suspicious box on B level, I think you saw it too, since is near you, I suspect it is a bomb to kill you, and I suggest you use your army skills to disable it..."

Then I send a message to Jam.

"Can you check if the food storage in A level has bananas?"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 04, 2012 11:16

"Hmm? I think so, we can take a look"

If I receive Speed-Y's message, I read it and continue speaking.

"It seems Speed-Y is concerned about it too. He thinks it could be a bomb... and wants me to disarm it."

"Probably isn't, but I guess it doesn't hurt to check. Well. I guess it would hurt if it was a bomb and it went off."

I begin to walk back towards where the box was.

written by Gligar on Nov 04, 2012 16:37

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R responds, asking how he can assist. "I understand that you are in the process of testing laser barrels to try to identify the source of defects. How many barrels have you tested? Have you made any progress?"

Spare parts storage, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O thinks that the clone left something. Perhaps they could take a look...

His PDC goes off. It's a message from Speed-Y, asking him to take a look at the very same thing. He tells John-O about the message and goes over to investigate.

He finds a cardboard box, labelled as containing a spare terminal. It seems to have been opened.

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y's careful... er, supervision of the workers is interrupted when he receives a PDC message from Speed-Y, asking him to check if the food hall has any bananas.

written by Jam on Nov 04, 2012 18:53

I look at the PDC message.

"Huh? Bananas?"

I wander over to the food storage, and check if there are any bananas there.

"Hmm... I wonder why Speed-Y wants bananas so bad. Well, I guess they are pretty tasty..."

written by Cryoburner on Nov 04, 2012 20:25

Yes, Computer, I am in the process of testing laser barrels. However, it appears that through some misunderstanding of how keys function, my team leader has inadvertently locked me in this room. Unfortunately, our testing device, while great, has a side effect of emitting hazardous gas and/or fire while functioning, producing an environment not all that conducive to the accurate testing of laser barrels. For such testing to occur, one might need to leave the room, or at least have some protective equipment or a fume hood on hand. Otherwise, results of the test might not be accurately recorded and damage to computer property could potentially occur. I was on my way to procure such equipment right away!

Prior to the room being locked, we did test a few barrels though, and found that at least the first we tested coming from assembly line four was defective. Or maybe the testing device just didn't like testing it. I think it was defective though.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 04, 2012 21:14

I cautiously approach the box, with the intent of peeking inside of it.

written by Gligar on Nov 04, 2012 21:38

Food hall, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y enters, and checks the available food supplies. Hmm... it might be more convenient to take down that wall between the eating area and the food preparation area, but... aha! Bananas. But why would Speed-Y want them? Maybe he's just hungry.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R tells The Computer that testing has stalled due to the door being locked, and the fact that the device emits gas, therefore they need to evacuate and/or build more things...

"You are in error, citizen. The door being locked should have no bearing on the testing at all. Requesting extra safety gear suggests that you disagree with my recommendation that no safety gear was required, and is a sign of unhappiness - not to mention the fact that safety gear is beyond your security clearance. There is no evidence that the gas harms Alpha Complex in any way. You are fined fifty credits for insubordination. Continue with your testing as ordered."

Spare parts storage, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Cautiously, L4-O approaches the box... and peeks inside.

The thing inside does not look like a terminal. In fact, it's ticking.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 04, 2012 23:27

I try to assess whether there is a timer on the bomb, due to the sound, and exactly how much time it has left.

I lower my voice.

"Well it's definitely not a terminal. I need to do something... and fast."

written by Cryoburner on Nov 04, 2012 23:51

"Ah... yes. I suppose it should work as is. Perhaps increasing the ventilation fan speed might be enough to adequately ventilate the room. Thank you for your guidance, computer."

I head over to the terminal and check the fan controls, noting what level the fan speed currently appears to be set at.

written by Speeder on Nov 05, 2012 00:58

I start to frantically see if I can read camera logs somehow, to see who left the "terminal", and at the same time search in all cameras where the person that left the "terminal" is.

written by Kristos on Nov 05, 2012 04:56

I glance over the form. If filling it out immediately is practical then I do so (presumably with the pen I used earlier) and ask to turn it in.

written by Gligar on Nov 05, 2012 17:26

Spare parts storage, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O looks over the thing. There's definitely a timing device there. It's one of those old-fashioned ones with hands, and seems to be showing five minutecycles left.

He needs to do something, and fast.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R decides to trust The Computer, saying that he could just increase the fan speed instead.

With that in mind, he returns to the terminal and brings up the fan controls. It looks like the fan is set to about one fifth.

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Noticing that L4-O seems to look worried, Speed-Y tries to rewind the footage. It doesn't look like his clearance will allow him to go back all that far, but he can clearly see that the bomb was placed there only within the last few minutecycles. The clone seems to have covered their face while doing so... is that a Happy Mask? No, it can't be, the mouth is the wrong way round.

Looking round the bunker, Speed-Y finds that he can't locate anyone with such a mask. He can, however, discover that there's someone in the incinerator room, being held at laserpoint by Kristos-R.

Food hall, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

And Jam-Y is close enough to hear him say, "Just what do you think you're doing?"

Forms office, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Meanwhile, as clone with a similar name is doing something that has nothing to do with lasers; namely, he's filling out an Information Request Form Request Form. Those these simple forms are often met with frustration, they are an integral part of the process for requesting information. After all, we need to know who wants information, and what they're going to do with it, don't we? Similarly, we need to know who has been issued with an Information Request Form, so that we can keep track of what they're going to do with it!

It doesn't take Kris-R long to finish. Or rather, he finished before I could finish explaining the importance of the form. Attracting the attention of the clone, he asks about submitting it. "I can do that," the clones says. He takes the forms and feeds it into... wait, is that a blotbot?

written by Lightning4 on Nov 05, 2012 17:50

Assuming that since one clone was capable of carrying it, I grab the box and start running in a direction that will bring me out the garage door.

written by Speeder on Nov 05, 2012 18:10

I look puzzled at L4 decision.

"The army training regarding bombs is sure strange... They never heard of motion sensor detonator?"

I keep watching what Kristos is doing.

Incinerator room? To incinerate what?

written by Gligar on Nov 05, 2012 22:59

Spare parts storage, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

"Something" turns out to be picking it up and running for the loading dock as fast as he can.

The bomb continues to tick.

John-O continues to follow.

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Watching over the cameras, Speed-Y wonders what L4-O is doing. Surely L4-O would remember the existence of motion sensing triggers?

Well, given that the thing fails to explode when L4-O picks it up, it is possible that the thing doesn't have one.

He watches L4-O run down to A Level, and then remembers Kristos-R. What's he doing? He switches cameras...

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Kristos-R continues, "I saw you head upstairs. In the brief, you were told not to go anywhere but A Level. Is there some reason you ignored that?"

"Yeah, I was looking for the hygiene station..."

"Which is right by the stairs. Surely you must have seen it. Or maybe you had another reason...?"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 05, 2012 23:41

I keep sprinting with the box, trying to get out of the garage door and well away from the bunker.

If I make it a safe enough distance away, I put the box down and take a look at the time again.

I try to calm down and assess the situation, if I have enough time.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 06, 2012 05:28

"Hmm..."

I turn the fan up to two-fifths power.

written by Jam on Nov 06, 2012 05:28

I follow Kristos-R's voice. As I get closer, I hear what seems to be an interrogation... I stop before I enter the room, and whisper quietly to myself.

"Oh, we're interrogating clones now? He he, perfect... Now's my time to shine!"

I attempt to read what I can of the mind of the clone Kristos-R is interrogating, using my mutant powers.

written by Speeder on Nov 06, 2012 10:07

When I notice that Jam is stopped right outside the door, I decide to pull something to make a scared clone reveal information.

First I check if the panel has a microphone.

Then I search again for that button to close doors.

I cannot close the garage door if I remember well, sliding and all to kick that button on the dock... But L4 will handle that probably.

So, if I find everything I need, I speak this on the microphone, attempting to be heard in the entire bunker (specially the incinerator room).

"Attention all personel, someone left a bomb in the bunker.

Brace for impact.

Also, Jam from Team Epsilon is the highest clearance Loyalty Officer that we have, he is authorized to do whatever he wish to interrogate everyone he wish that is YELLOW or below to find out about this incident.

And noone is allowed to leave the building, attempting to do so might result in turrets shooting you or L4 and his cone rifle shooting you."

written by Gligar on Nov 06, 2012 17:17

Corridors, A LLevel, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O keeps going. He runs towards the loading dock's main door, only to trip over some discarded packaging and fall over into the loading dock.

The bomb shows four minutecycles.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R fiddles with the fan controls, only to be distracted by a popup for Bouncy Bubble Beverage ("When Was The Last Time You Had A B3 Break? Click Here To Start Yours"), which chooses now as the perfect time to, well, pop up. As a result, the B3 order form appears on the terminal.

Corridor A2, Emergency Bunker C-3

On hearing the conversation between Kristos-R and the as-yet-unnamed clone, Jam-Y decides he'd like to intervene. Of course, he'll need to know what he's dealing with before charging in, so... he does a little probing...

...only to find that this clone seems to know the loyalty jingle trick. A bit hypocritical, if you ask me.

The clone can be heard saying, "I, er... got lost..." in a manner that doesn't sound suspicious at all. Nope. You're imagining things.

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Did you know that the bunker had a PA system? Apparently, it does, which would make sense for when The Computer wants to say something.

[1236]

And it seems that Speed-Y has found it. He is attempting to pull a little tactic called "scare the traitor into talking" by closing doors and such, as well as announcing over the aforementioned PA that there's a bomb, and to co-operate with Jam-Y. Oh, and please don't leave, because getting shot by a laser turret and/or L4-O could ruin your whole daycycle.

(Whether or not he could actually control the turrets from up here is another matter.)

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

The clone begins to look nervous. It seems that he hadn't counted on things like functioning laser turrets in an old bunker such as this, or Loyalty Officers - even if they are trying to fight off a viral loyalty jingle (and that's an odd combination right there, isn't it?)

Kristos-R picks up on this. "Laser turrets! I'd almost forgotten about those. And L4-O... this ought to be good!

"So... want to tell me the truth?"

written by Speeder on Nov 06, 2012 18:49

I then try to remember how we actually used turrets the last time...

It was in another room, wasn't it?

Anyway I keep a eye on the action...

And see L4 faceplanting on the docks.

Of course, see faceplant holding bomb results in facepalm.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 06, 2012 19:34

I try to scramble back to my feet and grab the bomb.

If I secure the bomb again in my grasp, I continue running out the doors with it.

written by Gligar on Nov 06, 2012 21:34

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

While wondering how they controlled the turrets last time (and remembering that the controls are in the subnode room), Speed-Y notices L4-O faceplant on one of the monitors... and facepalms.

As if he'd do anything else.

Corridors, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O doesn't faceplant for too long, though. He gets up again and, making sure to not trip up over anything, continues his bomb-run.

Roadway, outside the bunker

He manages to get outside, to the vicinity of the IntSec checkpoint, before running out of stamina.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 06, 2012 22:43

I try to make sure the bomb isn't too close to the checkpoint, and set it down and start catching my breath.

I take a look at how much time remains.

written by Kristos on Nov 07, 2012 00:40

"Thanks!" I begin walking back to the office to check on Cyrus-R, but, because of my injury, I don't push myself to walk too fast. Speaking of that, I also keep an eye out for rogue bots and study all bots within my range of vision.

written by Speeder on Nov 07, 2012 01:35

I send a message to L4.

"If you do not exploded... I may need someone to operate turrets on the subnode room and someone to at least close the garage door..."

I think about what to do.

Well, I just wait the scared clone to do something.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 07, 2012 04:15

"Wow! I too could make over 4000 credits each monthcycle just by drinking cases of B3 and selling the leftover cans for scrap, all without ever having to leave my terminal!"

I read over the useful advertisement and order form, but decide that I may need to pass on ordering B3 for now, seeing as I'm locked in an office, which might make delivery somewhat difficult. I set the advertisement as the terminal's new start page though, just in case it is needed later.

"Hmm..."

I turn the fan up to three-fifths power.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 07, 2012 19:00

I assess whether there are clones at the checkpoint. I also take the time to take a closer examination of the bomb, utilizing any (if any exists!) knowledge of bombs to assess whether I can disarm the thing without it going off... and if the bomb is really all that complicated.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 07, 2012 21:27

"Hmm..."

I turn the fan up to four-fifths power.

written by Gligar on Nov 07, 2012 22:25

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Kristos-R, it seems, has been thinking. He replies, "How could you get lost on the way to the hygiene station? Couldn't you see the labels? No... I think you had something else in mind... like maybe sabotage!"

Roadway, outside the bunker

L4-O checks the checkpoint, ascertaining that there are no clone present there. He then checks the bomb, ascertaining that there are two and a half minutecycles to do... whatever it is he's about to do.

Looking more closely, he can see that the time is connected to a small hinged box on the top of the bomb. Perhaps that's the detonator? It's sealed shut, but... surely he could pry it open?

[1237]

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

As he rounds the bend into Corridor A, Kris-R hears a sound not unlike a fan being revved up to a higher speed.

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

This is because Cyrus-R has, once again, fiddled with the settings. At four-fifths, the fan is really loud, and seems to want to suck in things like loose paper, pens, and... perhaps heavier objects if they were closer?

written by Kristos on Nov 07, 2012 22:47

"Yahahhhah!"

I panic and run-limp to the office door, unlock and try to open it, keeping a good grip on the door handle in case the fan tries to eat me.

"Turn it down! Turn it down!"

written by Cryoburner on Nov 08, 2012 04:11

"Hmm... PERFECT!"

I insert an untested barrel from assembly line four into the device. If they are even here, that is.

written by Speeder on Nov 08, 2012 10:52

I try to remember if there anything more to do on the lockdown from here.

Otherwise I just do whatever I remember I needed to do to activate the turret system, and run to the subnode.

written by Gligar on Nov 08, 2012 18:46

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The door unlocks. Kris-R limps in and seems to be having problems resisting the pull of the fan due to his injuries. He demands that Cyrus-R turn it down, and grabs hold of the door.

But Cyrus-R refuses, saying that this is perfect, and slams another barrel into the tester.

The tester starts up, and spews its gas, which gets pulled in to the vent. along with some sheets of paper. The device begins making noises indicative of a good barrel.

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y casts his mind back... what happened with the lockdown last time? He seems to recall it being one of the random buttons on the control panel, so... perhaps it's... wait, wasn't it flashing before? No matter. Presumably, it can now be activated from the terminal.

Similarly for the turrets... as far as he can remember, he needed to press a couple of buttons on the control panel: one to enable the turrets, and one to enable targeting... or something. He casts his mind back... which buttons was it? Not those... those are doors, those are lights... maybe those over in DEFN CTL?

Aha! Throughout the bunker, the turrets make themselves known once more.

Satisfied with his work, Speed-Y heads off, down to B Level and the subnode room.

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

When he arrives, he notices that... well, it doesn't look like anything has changed; the turret control stations are the same as before, and the subnode...

He does notice that the turret master controls seem to have a few blinking lights, notably one RED one, next to a button.

written by Speeder on Nov 08, 2012 19:43

Since I don't know how to operate those...

I test, carefully, specially making sure I am not pressing any button when any turret is aiming at anything important.

written by Gligar on Nov 08, 2012 23:18

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y realises that e doesn't really know what he's doing down here. He tentatively tries a few controls but it seems that the turret controls are not responding. The only thing that seems to do anything is that RED blinking light.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 08, 2012 23:56

I realize that there probably isn't much time remaining. I decide that the bomb is in a safe enough location and just sprint for it back to the bunker.

I make sure John-O is following me as well.

Once I get back inside the bunker, I try to close the garage doors as soon as there are no clones outside.

written by Speeder on Nov 09, 2012 00:03

I press the blinking button.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 09, 2012 00:34

I yell over the roar of the fan...

"OH, HELLO! YOU ARRIVED JUST IN TIME! WE'RE TESTING BARRELS!"

I continue watching the barrel test.

written by Jam on Nov 09, 2012 01:08

I walk into the incinerator room, and look at the clone Kristos-R is interrogating.

"Oh, sabotage? Does that mean I can tortu-I mean, interrogate, more clones?"

written by Gligar on Nov 09, 2012 16:53

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

What is it about buttons that makes clones want to press them? Perhaps it is the possibilities inherent in there being a button? What does it do? It could be anything! It could be a light switch, or a B3 button, or a give-me-1000-credits button, or even a dump-toxic-waste-on-my-head button...

But in this case, all the button does is cause the turret controls to come alive.

Roadway, near the bunker

L4-O decides that he just doesn't have enough time to even attempt to defuse the bomb, and just runs back to the bunker. John-O follows him.

It's a pity, really. If he were still looking at the timer, he'd see that he had a whole minutecycle left. Oh well. He'll have to admire the turrets instead.

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y enters, and inquires if there is to be another ~~tert~~ interrogation session. "Only if he doesn't talk, Sir," Kristos-R tells him, indicating the clone.

"What? But I've nothing to tell you!" protests the clone. "I just got lost!"

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R looks over, and welcomes Kris-R back before looking back at the testing. He doesn't seem to be aware that Kris-R is hanging on for his life, or that he's also being pulled towards the fan, or anything like that, oh no... all he can see is the testing device. Which, by the way, has finished with this barrel, and is displaying its smiley face.

written by Speeder on Nov 09, 2012 17:05

I try to make a turret pop in the incinerator room, but not aim at any clone in particular, like if it was happening in the whole bunker and we were still searching for the clone.

written by Kristos on Nov 09, 2012 17:21

I attempt to "climb down" to the terminal and turn down the fan speed (spending 2 PP to not get eaten alive by the swirling metal beast).

If successful, I pull out my sheet of paper and add a line so that it now reads:

Line 4 #1 - Bad
Return #1 - Bad
Line 4 #2 - Good

Then, if Cyrus-R's skin color has returned to normal, I say "Oh my! Did you get demoted back to RED clearance? You should be more careful, like me. I've never been demoted!" I study Cyrus-R's neck very closely to make sure his skin is normal. (VERY closely.)

written by Lightning4 on Nov 09, 2012 18:15

I look for the garage door controls, and start trying to close the garage door before the explosion happens.

written by Gligar on Nov 09, 2012 21:07⁸⁰⁵

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

A laser turret suddenly deploys from the wall, and starts "looking" round, as if inspecting the room's contents: all three clones, the three smaller incinerators, and the one big one. The clone notices it, and stammers, "H-heh. I-I bet that thing doesn't work... look, what am I supposed to say? I know nothing!"

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Almost as soon as L4-O crosses the threshold, he starts frantically looking for the door control. Ahh, there it is... press

The door closes with a ponderous thud, just as an explosion is heard from outside.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Fighting against the pull of the fan (unlike Cyrus-R), Kris-R makes his way to the terminal and attempts to reset the fan... only to run in to the same popup as Cyrus-R. This time, it seems to DEMAND that Kris-R buy some B3.

He looks over at Cyrus-R, and realises that his skin is back to normal. Looking closely, he sees nothing unusual, except for the fact that Cyrus-R is still unaware that he is being pulled towards the fan.

Finally, Kris-R pulls out his piece of paper, only for it to be snatched from his hand by the fan...

written by Kristos on Nov 09, 2012 21:52

"Gahh!! Now is not the time for this! Aaaa! Cyrus-R- what flavor of B3 do you want?" I read off the advertised clearance RED varieties. Then I focus on burning a mental image of what was written on the paper (as well as what I was going to write) so I can rewrite (or type) it later.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 09, 2012 22:04

I press the control again, allowing the door to reopen.

"That was a bit too close... checking that box out was a good idea."

written by Cryoburner on Nov 10, 2012 03:49

"Oh, yeah! We can order some B3 now! Before, the door was locked, making that kind of difficult. The deliveryclone would have probably required a cutting torch, or a chainsaw..."

I try pulling myself back toward the terminal to see what flavors and package sizes of B3 are available.

⁸⁰⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: Kristos spends 2pp.)

[1239]

written by Gligar on Nov 10, 2012 17:05

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R really doesn't need this. But not needing B3 is a sign of unhappiness, and... you know the rest. But what I think he means is that he doesn't need to be interrupted when he's trying to reset the fan to non-Fun levels.

He decides to order some B3 anyway. It looks like they can choose from Plain, Extra Plain, Extra Classic, and Vague Hint of Something Red in either of Regular, Fun, or Extra Fun sizes. Cyrus-R mentions something about not being able to do so earlier as he reads the list (even though Kris-R already read them out) while he tries to pull himself away from the fan, and while Kris-R burns the content of that paper into his mind.

But what B3 does he want? I guess the fact that he's still trying to pull himself towards the terminal means he can't concentrate on that. That fan can really grab hold of you when you get close to it.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O presses the button again.

As the door opens, he can see that several spybots have descended from the swarm to investigate the crater that now exists where the bomb was placed. It was a good idea to check out that box after all... that crater could have been in the bunker. Right near the generators... it could have taken them out!

written by Lightning4 on Nov 10, 2012 20:12

I frown a little bit, and leave the loading dock, intending to find whoever did this.

written by Gligar on Nov 10, 2012 22:52

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Frowning, L4-O leaves the loading dock, with John-O in tow. He intends to find out who is responsible for this.

Wait... didn't Speed-Y lock the doors? Hmmm... something else to investigate, then!

Corridor Junction, Emergency Bunker C-3

As he walks, L4-O hears a commotion coming from A1 West.

written by Kristos on Nov 11, 2012 01:59

I select a B3 Vague Hint of Something Red, Fun size, for myself and anxiously wait for Cyrus-R's selection.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 11, 2012 03:02

I start going in the direction of A1 West, if I can. I draw my blaster and keep it at the ready.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 11, 2012 05:16

"I'll have B3 Extra Classic, Extra Fun Size!"

I try Extra Hard to pull myself toward the terminal, to better observe the ordering process.

written by Gligar on Nov 11, 2012 16:16

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Still battling the fan, Kris-R places an order for a Vague Hint of Something Red, Fun size, while Cyrus-R, still trying to reach the terminal, opts for an Extra-Fun Extra Classic. Satisfied, the terminal beeps, and closes the order form. It still refuses to return to the directory, though.

Kris-R hopes that it sorts itself out soon. After all, he's only holding on with one hand.

Corridor Junction, Emergency Bunker C-3

Blaster in hand, L4-O heads down A1 West, and finds the source of the disturbance:

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

It seems that Kristos-R and Jam-Y have cornered one of the HPD&MC crew here. To his surprise, L4-O recognises him as the one he saw on B Level.

The clone continues to deny that he did anything, though, saying that he got lost.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 11, 2012 21:30

I speak up, keeping a distant position.

"I suppose you want to explain about the package you just left on B level?"

written by Gligar on Nov 11, 2012 21:56

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

From the corridor, L4-O suggests that the clone might want to explain about the package he left on B Level. "Package?" the clone says. "What package? I didn't leave a package on B level, I was just lost!"

"Don't bother," Kristos-R tells him. "You clearly went up there, and some of the other guys were saying that you were carrying something. And now Team Epsilon is also saying it." He steps up, getting in the clone's face. "What was it?"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 11, 2012 23:33

"Well, I know what it is... but I'll wait for his response first..."

I wait and watch the clone, glaring.

written by Speeder on Nov 12, 2012 12:19

I decide to frighten the clone a bit more, waving the turret at his direction, but still being careful to not aim on anyone or anything important.

written by Gligar on Nov 12, 2012 16:52

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O, who knows what the package was, chooses not to answer. He wants to hear it from the clone, as well.

So does the turret ('s operator), it seems, since the turret starts wagging at the clone. It doesn't seem to be aiming at anything in particular, but...

"Er..." The clone looks at the turret. And at L4-O. "You!"

"Yes," Kristos-R says. "Him.. But why do you know him? Does he having something to do with that package?"

"I... I was told to..."

"Do what?"

"...to put it somewhere..."

written by Kristos on Nov 12, 2012 19:14

I'm the TEAM LEADER. Of all the team I am for sure the one that should not panic. In unexpected troubles the entire team relies on the leader to think out the situation and coordinate a counterattack on the trouble. For this, a calm, clear mind is needed. I suppose I'll have to save the panicking for something trivial like somebody spilling TeaSir all over my freshly shined jumpsuit.

I study the terminal screen to see what is now preventing me from preventing the fan from preventing us from preventing the laser barrel sabotage from preventing the factory from providing quality laser barrels, fulfilling its obligations to the Computer and Alpha Complex as part of the program to prevent trouble such as what we are now experiencing.

Should the terminal prove useless for this endeavor I suppose we could block the vent hole with the floor plan; It seemed quite sturdy. My RED-clearance database of knowledge is not aware of such a thing being a danger to the fan motor either.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 12, 2012 20:42

I just continue to glare.

I simply state,

"Keep talking..."

written by Jam on Nov 12, 2012 20:51

I also stare at the clone, hopefully in an intimidating way.

written by Gligar on Nov 12, 2012 21:15

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

As the TEAM LEADER, Kris-R believes that it is his job to remain calm, and resolve problems calmly to assist his team in any way he can. In a calm manner. Freaking out has no place on a mission.

It's a pity that it turns out to be difficult to do when you're almost being sucked up by a fan.

Regaining a hold of the desk with both hands (as Cyrus-R starts slipping), Kris-R glances at the terminal. It seems to be asking for codes, which are apparently printed on the cans of B3 he has just purchased. Delivery, it says, should be within the next five minutecycles.

But that doesn't solve the problem with the fan. No... it looks like they will have to block it until such times as they have terminal access again. Say... that floor-plan was quite sturdy, was it not? Perhaps that will suffice. And, well, they did move it from there.

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Everyone stands around glaring, until L4-O tells the clone to keep talking.

"Well... I was told that one of the clones here was a menace, and had to be wiped out, but not why..."

"It's a pity I don't have a knife or something," Kristos-R says. "Perhaps I could get more out of you that way. Unless... say, does the bunker stock any zybenzaph- er, I mean, SlumberSoft?"

written by Kristos on Nov 12, 2012 21:47

"Cyrus-R, I'm going to get a good grip on the desk. Hold onto my foot and shove the floor plan back in place. Use your foot to shove it - it has sharp edges."

Accordingly, I try to find a secure place to hold onto (on the desk or not).

written by Cryoburner on Nov 12, 2012 22:06

"I'm not so sure that putting my feet near spinning fan blades is such a good idea. If they passed through the grating, they could potentially damage the blades."

I try grabbing onto Kris-R with one hand, while trying to regain my grip on the desk with the other, keeping track of how much distance there is between me and the fan, to avoid lowering myself into it. I also look around to check where the floor plan might be found.

written by Speeder on Nov 13, 2012 16:10

I watch the monitor intently.

I then call Jam on the PDC.

written by Gligar on Nov 13, 2012 17:13

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R tells Cyrus-R to grab hold of his foot and shove the floor plan back into place with his own foot. Not his hands, because, well, sharp, remember?

Cyrus-R complies, but not before expressing concern that he might damage the fan if, say, his foot were to come into contact with it. Looking around, he sees the fan over there and the floor plan there, tantalisingly just out of reach of his foot...

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y looks at the monitor. And looks some more.

Then he calls up Jam-Y.

written by Jam on Nov 13, 2012 18:08

I take a few steps back and answer my PDC once I notice it ringing.

"Hello?"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 13, 2012 19:34

"Wiped out... by who? What group?"

I try to intensify my glare.

written by Speeder on Nov 13, 2012 20:02

"Hello Jam! I am controlling the turrets, can you link with my head so we can act more scary while interrogating that guy?"

Specially since I can only SEE you people in the room, but not hear.

Is he...

cooperating?"

written by Gligar on Nov 13, 2012 22:07

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

While Jam-Y answers his PDC, L4-O demands to know who it is who wants him "wiped out". The clone laughs. "You know who it is... heheh..."

And that PDC call? It's Speed-Y (of course), asking if Jam-Y can make mental contact with him since he can't hear what's going on down there, and he wants to co-ordinate their efforts. He wonders if the clone is co-operating.

Hey... wait a minute... why did I get Speed-Y's earlier input from C Level? He's clearly in the subnode room...

written by Lightning4 on Nov 13, 2012 22:53

I look confused.

"No? No, I don't... this came out of nowhere. I'm really not sure who is trying to do this, and for what reason."

I think for a moment.

"Well... the only thing I can think of... hm..."

I snap back.

"Anyway, explain. Who is this group? I really don't know."

written by Gligar on Nov 14, 2012 17:00

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O seems to have an idea who the clone might be talking about, but shrugs it off. He then demands that the clone tell him. "You really don't get it? You must be stupid to have not noticed them! You were there! You issued the lockdown! If it weren't for that, we wouldn't have to do this!"

The clone reaches for a pocket, only to be pushed against an incinerator by Kristos-R. "Lockdown? What lockdown?" he demands.

"Ask them."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 14, 2012 17:50

"Ohh... yes. But any clone who knew the situation would have done the same thing. Possibly even Friend Computer."

"So. Easter Cycle then..."

I look momentarily confused, though.

"But... how does Corpore Metal factor in?"

I look the clone over at a distance to see if he's cyborg-y. If he isn't, I continue.

"You clearly don't look like a cyborg..."

written by Gligar on Nov 14, 2012 22:07

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O agrees, but says that anyone else would do the same. At least he can confirm who is behind it.

But what's the Copore Metal angle? This clone is clearly not a cyborg... "Maybe you just can't see them."

written by Cryoburner on Nov 14, 2012 22:56

I climb down Kris-R's legs a bit to see if I can reach the floor plan with my feet. If so, I try manipulating it toward the vent, careful to keep my feet a safe distance from the fan.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 15, 2012 07:47

I sneer,

"Hmph... unlikely, knowing Corpore Metal. You know more than you're letting on..."

I growl,

"...not telling us is not good for your health."

written by Speeder on Nov 15, 2012 11:47

As I see (and hear in Jam PDC?) L4 getting upset, I use the turret to shoot away the foot of the guy.

written by Gligar on Nov 15, 2012 18:22

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R tries one more time, adjusting his grip on Kris-R, and manages to nudge the floor plan with his foot.

The effort, however, causes him to lose his grip and fall towards the fan.

Right into the edge of the floor plan.

The sharp edge cleanly severs one of Cyrus-R's feet (the right one) which is promptly sucked through the grate and torn apart by the fan with a loud grinding noise (audible even over the fan). The rest of Cyrus-R ends up falling onto the floor plan, slamming it against the grate, causing both Cyrus-R and Kris-R to fall to the ground with more than one cracking noise.

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O doubts that Copore Metal would use inobtrusive or invisible implants; they prefer to have them on show. This means that the clone must be hiding something. This is likely to be unhealthy for the clone.

The turret suddenly fires, hitting the clone's right foot, and causing him to collapse in pain. Of course, there's nowhere for him to go with Kristos-R practically breathing down his neck.

Speaking of Kristos-R, he joins in with, "I suggest you tell us everything. That is, unless you want to volunteer to hold up targets for the Armed Forces. I hear they're testing a new model of tacnuke."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 15, 2012 19:02

I point my blaster in the direction of the clone too, though this kind of overkill is probably unnecessary at this point.

"Better start talking..."

written by Speeder on Nov 15, 2012 19:03

I speak on the PDC.

"Tell him that instead of terminating him we will cut off all his limbs and then leave him near a creche with deranged junior citizens that love pranks."

written by Gligar on Nov 15, 2012 23:29

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O suggests that the clone start talking. He has his blaster aimed and ready to fire but probably thinks that it's overkill. (But you know what they say about overkill.)

Through the PDC, Speed-Y suggests that they inform the clone that they're actually going to cut off his limbs and leave him outside a creche somewhere, one filled with deranged Junior Citizens who like to pull pranks. (Isn't that basically all of them? Or perhaps he had one in mind? Perhaps one that's close by?)

The clone stammers, "I really don't know anything! Wait... there's Pro Tech and FCCC-P involved... but I really don't know why!"

"Are you sure you don't know any more?" Kristos-R accidentally-on-purpose steps on the clone's injured foot.

"Aaaaaaah! Alright... I think I heard something... something about a Reanimator..."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 16, 2012 01:27

I glance at members of Team Epsilon at the mention of the word "Reanimator"

I go back to focusing on the clone.

"Reanimator, huh? Keep speaking."

written by Jam on Nov 16, 2012 15:20

I consider following Speed-Y's advice to threaten the clone more, but decide to stay quiet, since he's talking...

written by Gligar on Nov 16, 2012 17:33

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

On hearing the word "Reanimator", L4-O glances at the others. Jam-Y also seems to have become interested, choosing not to threaten their captive.

The captive continues: "They tell me things... it started thirty yearcycles ago... trying to bring about this 'Easter cycle' thing... bringing the dead to life! They made the Reanimator project... it was stopped by Troubleshooters... but CRS Sector was all but destroyed.

"But the First Church prevailed. It refined the project, kept going... and now, they're ready."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 16, 2012 19:49

"Hrm. Fascinating... as far as treasonous things are fascinating, anyway. Anything more you'd like to tell us?"

written by Gligar on Nov 16, 2012 22:09

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O thinks that this is as interesting as treason can get, and wonders if their captive would like to give them any more. No-one else says anything.

"No... I can't..."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 17, 2012 01:07

"Can't? Not a very good answer, that. Keep talking!"

I growl again at the end.

written by Kristos on Nov 17, 2012 02:23

"Ohhhhh, I need a B3..."

written by Cryoburner on Nov 17, 2012 03:26

"What kind of floor plan severs feet?!"

I make a face like... : /

"Now we'll have to climb into the duct and recover all my foot fragments so that we can bandage them together. And we don't even have bandages, so we'll have to use sticky labels. Do we even have enough sticky labels?"

I check whether we have enough sticky labels.

written by Gligar on Nov 17, 2012 15:10

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O doesn't like their captive's answer. 'Can't' isn't good enough.

His tone changes. "What are you gonna do? Terminate me? They injected me with nanomachines. And I'm sure you know what that means!"

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

It sounds like things aren't going to well in here.

[1243]

The fan might not be a problem any more (though it is still loud), but Kris-R and Cyrus-R are both injured. And seemingly falling below Mandatory Minimum Happiness Level. Kris-R really wants that B3 now.

Cyrus-R is more concerned about the whereabouts of his foot, suggesting that they crawl into the duct and retrieve it. But it's in pieces, and they don't have the supplies to stick it together like he wants...

And did I mention all the blood? Because it's all running out of Cyrus-R's leg.

But he doesn't have a chance to contemplate this, as there is a knock on the door. "B3 delivery!"

The door opens - B3 deliveries are permitted to enter without waiting for authorisation, per CPU Mandate 214/B3-1 - revealing a deliverybot, holding two cans of B3 and a form. Yes, another one.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 17, 2012 19:25

I smile a little.

"Yeah. It just means we'll have to kill you again after we kill you the first time. We've had quite a bit of experience killing zombies now."

written by Gligar on Nov 17, 2012 20:34

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

It seems that L4-O does know what that means: they'll just have to kill their captive twice. "And then... what about the nanomachines that escape from me?"

written by Jam on Nov 17, 2012 21:57

"No... If you don't talk, we're going to set you on fire and slowly watch you burn... Do you know how painful it is to slowly burn to death? And we won't even have a zombie to take care of! I guess we'll just have to see if your little nanomachines can survive a blazing inferno..."

"Now we just need to find a blazing inferno..."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 18, 2012 07:46

"I think we can arrange the fire..."

I return to a growl.

"So you had better keep talking then. You're giving clear indication that you still know something. Something we'd like to know."

written by Gligar on Nov 18, 2012 16:39

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y tells the captive that they're not just going to kill him... no, they're going to set him on fire. He doubts that the nanomachines can cope with a blazing inferno... if they could find one.

L4-O thinks that they could arrange for an inferno, but repeats his demand for information.

The captive repeats that he can't give it to them. "You don't understand... I can't because... him!"

You know, an inferno sounds nice right about now. And, since this is the incinerator room... and there's the nice big incinerator along with a few smaller ones...

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R continues to bleed. The deliverybot continues to hold its B3.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 18, 2012 20:33

"Him? Who exactly is him? Who, or what is he?"

written by Gligar on Nov 18, 2012 21:18

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O now wants to know who he is. "If I told you, he'd kill me. From where he is."

written by Jam on Nov 18, 2012 21:51

"Well, you're going to end up dead no matter what you do, so you might as well talk... I think you'd prefer just simply dying over being thrown in an incinerator, right? So make the smart choice! Go on, tell us..."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 18, 2012 22:18

I look like I'm about to speak, but after what the clone said I simply remain silent and think.

I watch his reaction to Jam-Y's demands, though.

written by Speeder on Nov 19, 2012 13:22⁸⁰⁶

Since there are a "HIM" somewhere, I start to flick all turrets, searching for someone suspicious, like, a mutant...

Also I see if the YELLOW quarters are fully installed.

written by Gligar on Nov 19, 2012 16:20

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y points out that, since the captive's going to die no matter what, he might as well talk. L4-O wants to say something, but ends up waiting to see what's going to happen.

In response, the captive says, "Okay, so I'm going to die. But you won't hear anything else from me!" And with that, he proceeds to punch Kristos-R in the face.

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

This is seen by Speed-Y as he runs between consoles. The captive's mention of "him" has him flipping between every turret in the bunker, looking for anything suspicious. Like, say, a mutant.

But if the mutant were powerful enough, surely said mutant would know how to stay out of sight?

⁸⁰⁶ SPEEDER: (ooc: my personal computer display is broken, so I might not post sometimes when I can't get near a computer)

[1244]

On the plus side, Dormitory 3 is coming along nicely. The workers are putting the finishing touches into the room and are have called in a jackobot to re-paint the clearance stripe.

written by Speeder on Nov 19, 2012 16:25

I decide to go interrogate the guy myself.

I go in a fast pace, but not fast enough to crash or stumble.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 19, 2012 18:55

I line up a blaster shot, but don't fire yet. I watch to see if things get back under control, first.

written by Gligar on Nov 19, 2012 20:12

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y, it seems, has seen enough. He decides to head down to the incinerator room himself.

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Kristos-R is knock back by the force of the blow, and becomes dazed... enough time for the captive to launch himself against Jam-Y and do the same to him. By the time Speed-Y arrives, L4-O has the captive in his sights.

This leaves enough space for John-O to enter and check the incinerators. They're all ready to use.

written by Speeder on Nov 19, 2012 20:30

I decide to kick the guy until he leaves Jam.

"Hey, you tell us what we want to know, or I will use the incinerators to burn only your limbs.

And then I will leave you near a creche.

You will know a fate WORSE THAN DEATH.

Also I work at cloneserv and I know a clone that can legally mess with your MemoMax... How about your next clone being born stupid? Or with a annoying mutation?"

written by Kristos on Nov 19, 2012 21:12

I reach up and turn the fan completely off, then try to sign the form or whatever is required to accept the B3. Then I take both B3s and collapse back to the floor, pop one open, and start sipping on it.

Oh, wow, that's a lot of blood.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 19, 2012 23:09

I lower my aim if Speed-Y starts kicking the clone, not wishing to accidentally shoot a higher clearance clone. Again.

written by Gligar on Nov 20, 2012 16:55

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y rushes to Jam-Y's rescue, kicking at the captive several times until he lets up. L4-O deliberately lowers his aim in the meantime, unwilling to accidentally terminate another YELLOW.

Now that he's here, and since Jam-Y failed to say it, Speed-Y repeats his threat to the captive. "So you want to spread the nanomachines I'm carrying to Junior Citizens? You're more stupid than you look!"

Speed-Y adds that he works in CloneServ, and knows a clone who can mess with MemoMax templates... perhaps their captive's next clone could be stupid, or perhaps a mutant! That'd be fun! "Just try it!"

The captive turns, now seemingly in pain, and lunges at Speed-Y. Seeing this, John-O decides to open the main incinerator, sending a blast of heat, and the sound of fire, through the room. Then he concentrates. This causes the captive to miss and stagger forwards.

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R reaches up from the floor and takes the B3s while Cyrus-R passes out from blood loss. That just leaves the form, which Kris-R is just able to reach and sign. "Thank you, citizen," the bot replies, and leaves.

Kris-R finally cracks open his B3 and takes a sip. Aaahhhhh...

written by Speeder on Nov 20, 2012 19:45

"I don't need to spread the nanomachines cutting your limbs, I can remove them this way and the machines with it!"

I attempt to grab the guy and shove a random limb (the easiest one) in the incinerator.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 20, 2012 19:47

I watch the struggle, somewhat worried for Speed-Y's safety.

written by Gligar on Nov 20, 2012 21:28

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y corrects the captive: he's not going to cut off his limbs, he's going to burn them off! He proceeds to demonstrate by attempting to shove the captive's left arm into the incinerator.

Of course, the captive isn't just going to let him to that. Instead, he fights back, attempting to shove Speed-Y's head in there instead.

written by Jam on Nov 20, 2012 22:20

"Ow, my face! That hurt!"

I feel my face a bit to see if anything is broken.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 21, 2012 01:14

Seeing that the situation has most definitely escalated, I start trying to line up a good shot with the captive clone again.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 21, 2012 01:43

"And we don't even have enough sticky labels!" is what I would say if I weren't passed out and bleeding. I wait, passed out and bleeding, for the opportunity to stop bleeding, and maybe even regain consciousness. I contemplate, in my passed out state, how convenient it would be if someone were to do something about slowing my blood loss, and perhaps flag down that docbot that passed down the corridor a short while ago, and possibly set up my B3 Extra Classic, Extra Fun Size on an intravenous drip to make consumption possible in my unconscious state.

written by Speeder on Nov 21, 2012 11:51

I attempt to grab the guy genitals, the strongest that I can, and shove one of his legs on the incinerator.

Also if it provides the opportunity, I step on the foot I shot before.

written by Kristos on Nov 21, 2012 17:53

I consider Cyrus-R's present inability to enjoy his B3 so I pop it open and pour some on his leg stub. Then I try to use my PDC to request medical assistance.

written by Gligar on Nov 21, 2012 18:19

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y checks his face, and finds blood on there. It seems to be coming from his nose.

Meanwhile, Speed-Y continues fighting back against the captive. Managing to prevent the incineration of his own head, he aims... lower. Now that's just wrong... not that Speed-Y would know, since he is too low a clearance to know about that sort of thing. Effective, though. It causes the captive to double over in pain, and allows Speed-Y to step on the captive's wounded foot, inflicting even more pain. The captive passes out. L4-O works on getting his aim back while Speed-Y inserts the captive's leg into the incinerator, where the jumpsuit catches fire almost immediately. But that makes the captive wake up again.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R remains unconscious while Kris-R opens the other container of B3. After pouring some of it over Cyrus-R's stump (most likely causing some pain) he calls for a docbot.

Almost immediately afterwards, his PDC receives a message from the Forms Office, containing the Information Request Form he requested.

written by Kristos on Nov 21, 2012 19:03

"Yes, it's finally here!" I say to Cyrus-R. In jubilation I take a large gulp of Cyrus-R's B3 and pour some on his face. Then I excitedly fill out the Information Request Form and request all RED-clearance information on the suspicious Assembly Line 4 repairs and any strange activity just before or any time afterwards, of course stating my authority and purpose as the leader of a Computer-instated troubleshooter team.

written by Speeder on Nov 21, 2012 20:04

Seeing that things got a little out of hand I get away from the flaming terrorist.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 22, 2012 00:14

I keep my aim on the captive, ready to shoot if he starts getting too close to a more loyal clone.

written by Jam on Nov 22, 2012 14:21

I watch everyone else with amusement... They seem to have things handled!

written by Gligar on Nov 22, 2012 18:19

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R tells Cyrus-R that the B3 has arrived as he takes a drink out of Cyrus-R's can, and pours some onto Cyrus-R's face. Given previous incidents involving unconscious clones and food, this has a strong probability of causing him to wake up in the near future.

Kris-R turns his attention to the Information Request Form. He fills it out, making sure to explain why he's requesting the information, and also filling out the B3 Question* to a mandatory standard. Finished, he submits it to be processed.

There is a knock at the door.

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y scrabbles away from the captive, whose jumpsuit is still on fire. It doesn't seem to be spreading past his leg, though.

Not that Speed-Y cares. For once again, the captive has hold of his head.

L4-O has him in his sights, and is ready to fire.

Jam-Y just watches, amused.

written by Speeder on Nov 22, 2012 18:31

"Do not grab my head! John please make him release my head."

I try to not get my head (or any body part of mine) on fire.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 22, 2012 19:13

I finally decide that this captive might no longer be worth the hassle, and fire once where I am aiming.

written by Gligar on Nov 22, 2012 22:10

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y insists that he is not to be grabbed by the head, and asks John-O to make this not happen.

What actually happens is that L4-O makes sure it doesn't happen, by shooting the captive.

Well, it worked...

* There's always a B3 Question. No exceptions.

written by Kristos on Nov 23, 2012 03:16

"Please come in if you are not trouble. If you are trouble, please come in and be shot. Thanks."

written by Speeder on Nov 23, 2012 12:23

I get away a bit from the guy and check if he is dead, if he is I immediately shove him in the incinerator.

If not... I wait.

written by Gligar on Nov 23, 2012 16:45

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R tells whoever it is to come in if they're not trouble... or even if they are; he'd love something to shoot. The door opens, revealing that it's just a docbot. "What is the nature of the medical emergency?" it asks.

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y checks the captive, and finds him to be alive, but unconscious.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 23, 2012 21:27

"He still alive? If we can get more out of him that'd be great."

I slowly start to approach now.

written by Speeder on Nov 23, 2012 21:56

I pant a bit.

"Put off the fire, and restrain him so he does not try to put my head in the incinerator again.

Then we can continue."

written by Gligar on Nov 23, 2012 22:51

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O asks about the captive, not knowing that he's still alive. He states that if he is, they could get extra information from him.

Speed-Y seems to confirm it when he tells everyone to extinguish the fire and restrain him. That way they can get whatever info they need.

He hopes.

Kristos-R moves to grab the captive's arms. "Anyone got any handcuffs or something?"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 24, 2012 00:02

I check myself for handcuffs, vaguely recalling I may have some.

If I find them, I approach and hand them to someone closer.

written by Jam on Nov 24, 2012 00:54

I attempt to put out the fire by repeatedly stepping on it.

"Good thing he survived. He definitely knows a lot more than he's telling us..."

written by Speeder on Nov 24, 2012 10:47

"Hey Jam, I think if you scan his head now, he cannot counter it while he is in that state..."

written by Gligar on Nov 24, 2012 16:09

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Didn't L4-O have some handcuffs? He looks through his stuff. Yes, there they are. He hands them to Kristos-R, who promptly uses them to restrain the captive. Not to Jam-Y, who is busy stamping on the captive's leg, trying to put out the fire (and coincidentally breaking the captive's shinbone).

Once both are done, Jam-Y notes that it's a good thing the captive survived, since he clearly knows more than he is admitting to. Speed-Y suggests that it might be safe to scan the captive's mind while he's unconscious. John-O isn't so sure, though. The captive, he explains, might have received training to resist mental scans even while unconscious. It's rare, but not unknown.

written by Jam on Nov 24, 2012 17:20

"I don't even know if I can extract thoughts when the clone isn't actively thinking about them. I guess I could try though! Hopefully the clone hasn't received special training..."

I attempt to use my mutant power to search the clone's mind for anything interesting, relaying to the rest of the team anything I find.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 24, 2012 19:23

"Just don't let any commie thoughts convert you. Then we'll have to restrain you too..."

written by Speeder on Nov 24, 2012 20:07

"He is loyalty officer, I think he is supposed to know that already..."

But well, it is good to remember anyway.

There are commie danger everywhere, sometimes I think they even might put some sort of commie poison on the B3 to turn everyone into commies."

written by Gligar on Nov 24, 2012 20:46

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y isn't sure if he can even read something that a mind isn't currently thinking about, but agrees to try. He hopes that John-O is wrong about the special training.

While he concentrates, L4-O reminds him not to let any commie thoughts infect him. If he did, they'd have to restrain him as well. Speed-Y points out that Jam-Y should already know that, being Loyalty Officer. But it's worth restating. After all, commie influence is everywhere. What if they put something in the B3?

Or even create an entire new flavour of B3? Have you heard of borscht flavour, for instance? No, of course not; the flavour was discontinued a few yearcycles ago.

Jam-Y continues concentrating. There's definitely something there, but it turns out that he can't read anything that the mind isn't thinking about. But it seems that the clone might be dreaming of something. Something involving... some kind of BLUE gas?

written by Kristos on Nov 24, 2012 22:49

"Most importantly, my subordinate here managed to lose his foot. I believe he inconveniently lost it in several pieces as well. No matter about that; he's bleeding quite profusely and it is making for a rather dangerous work environment, causing the floor to become rather slippery. As you can see, we are having enough trouble standing as it is. Perhaps you can see about reducing the rate of his blood loss to approximately none?"

written by Gligar on Nov 25, 2012 12:06

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R tells the docbot to do something about Cyrus-R's blood loss before anything else. "I see," the docbot replies. "Cauterisation is required."

It thinks for a few moments, then opts for the simplest approach: a laser. It shoots at Cyrus-R's open wound. Within a few moments, the bleeding stops.

written by Gligar on Nov 25, 2012 16:15⁸⁰⁷

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

The captive stirs uneasily, and seems to be trying to escape his restraints.

While still unconscious.

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The docbot turns back to Kris-R. "Do you require my services any further?"

written by Kristos on Nov 25, 2012 20:42

"Excellent! I only have one other request on mind. We seem to have taken damage from a recent fall. Are you able to assess the type and extent of damage to our bodies?"

I follow that up with a sip of Cyrus-R's B3.

written by Gligar on Nov 25, 2012 20:56

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R tells the docbot that they do still need its services; specifically, can it treat their recent fall damage?

The docbot turns Cyrus-R over and around. Did I mention that it has not used anaesthetic because Cyrus-R lacks sufficient security clearance? That means that Cyrus-R can feel each and every movement the docbot puts him through. If he wasn't awake before, he certainly is now.

Presently, the docbot says, "Broken bones I can treat. This clone has further injuries which cannot be treated at his security clearance." It moves over to Kris-R and begins the same process.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 25, 2012 21:00

"Wow... he's still fighting back!"

If there's room, I move in to attempt to help restrain the clone.

written by Jam on Nov 26, 2012 01:03

"Hmm... He's dreaming of BLUE gas.... That's a treasonously high clearance dream, and suspiciously similar to the BLUE nanobot-zombie-gas too!"

written by Gligar on Nov 26, 2012 16:07

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

While L4-O moves in to help Kristos-R restrain the captive, Jam-Y notes that the captive's dream - which involves BLUE gas - is suspicious. That gas, for instance, is too close to the zombie gas for comfort.

The captive continues to struggle against his restraints, but he seems to be getting weaker.

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The docbot continues operating on Kris-R, who also didn't receive anaesthetic. But that's okay, right? You have to take the rough with the smooth, and enjoy it, because The Computer says it's good for you!

Did I mention that Cyrus-R is awake? And B3-less?

written by Lightning4 on Nov 26, 2012 20:13

Once the captive stops struggling, I release him again.

"Blue gas... that doesn't sound good. But maybe we'll find out more about it from the dream..."

written by Gligar on Nov 26, 2012 21:00

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Even though L4-O seems to want the captive to stop struggling, he seems to be taking his own sweet time stopping. It takes until L4-O has finished replying to Jam-Y (and pointing out that they might be able to get more from the dream) for the captive to finally calm down.

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

After one more painful-looking tweak, the docbot finishes its work. "That will be 320 credits in total."

written by Cryoburner on Nov 27, 2012 04:09

"Arrr!"

⁸⁰⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: TTTrrriipppllee pppooossttt...)

[1248]

I now notice my awakensness, as well as my uncomfotableness. I then have a look around for my B3 Extra Classic, Extra Fun Size, and attempt to ascertain its level of funness, as well well as its level of classicness.

written by Gligar on Nov 27, 2012 16:43

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

The now-not-struggling captive remains unconscious.

After a moment, Kristos-R suggests, "We should probably try to wake him again."

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R finally realises that he's awake, and grabs for his B3. He notices that Kris-R has , that it is already open, and that some of it is missing. Taking a sip, he notices with satisfaction that it tastes exactly like B3 Extra Classic.

written by Kristos on Nov 27, 2012 18:42

"Did I... OW! Can- OW! you... OW OW OW OW!!! What should I do for Cyrus-Rrrrrrrrrrrrgggg OW!"

...

"Oh, hey, you're awake. You should drink some more of your B3 - it'll make you feel better."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 27, 2012 19:38

"Think Jam-Y will have more luck with him awake?"

I wait a moment for a response from a superior officer.

written by Gligar on Nov 27, 2012 20:36

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O wonders if perhaps Jam-Y might have better luck with an awake captive? Do either of the YELLOWS know?

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R tries to ask the docbot what he should do about Cyrus-R, but he still hurts all over, which kind of gets in the way of his question... so instead, ht "notices" that Cyrus-R is awake, and suggests that he drink some more of his B3.

The docbot replies, "As long as I receive payment for treatment, it does not matter where the credits come from."

written by Kristos on Nov 28, 2012 00:22

"I mean, in consideration for his physical condition, what should I do? As team leader, is there anything I should know? Will he ever be able to hold his head above the standard wall clearance stripe? Will he never again be able to reach a terminal and purchase his own B3? He looks to be in an awful lot of pain. Maybe I shouldn't move his leg like this?" (I demonstrate, grabbing Cyrus-R's shortened leg and moving it around.)

"Perhaps he can no longer eat solid foods but must resort to predigested soylent or nutrient-enriched vatcrap?"

"He is my precious team member so I need to protect him just as the Computer protects us all!"

"And even if he dies this instant, I still am obligated to extensively detailed reports to the Computer so any facts fit for RED clearance would be appreciated."

I make the payment.

written by Gligar on Nov 28, 2012 16:53

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Since the YELLOWS apparently don't know, John-O speaks up. "I thinks so. I mean, he might be good at blocking but something might still slip through... or, well, I'm sure you know that it's possible to distract someone who is blocking?"

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R clarifies that he actually meant whether Cyrus-R requires special attention after his injuries. Will he be able to stand? Or purchase B3? And... is he in pain? (Apparently so, given how he reacts to Kris-R manipulating that leg.) And dietary requirements? He does pay the docbot, though.

The docbot replies, "Now that you mention it... his blood pressure is very low. This will lead to symptoms such as dizziness and blurred vision unless steps are taken to reduce risk. Further details are beyond your security clearance.

"As for dietary concerns, I recommend that he not be permitted to take part in regular meals. Instead, he should be given smaller amounts of food at a more frequent pace. I recommend VitaYum Meal Substitute Bars for the purpose."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 28, 2012 17:36

"Well, we could sing loyalty jingles full blast. That's pretty distracting to a treasonous clone..."

"What else... hmm..."

I think for a bit.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 28, 2012 19:31

I move my leg away from Kris-R, and respond to his suggestions...

"I'm thinking we should set up that intravenous drip. You know, that one I didn't tell you about? Right after we build that fume hood. We were building a fume hood, weren't we? Things are kind of hazy. I just remember ordering B3, and then drawing up the schematics for a fume hood with the aide of twenty-three esteemed scientists from across the complex, and after three month-cycles of arduous work, the plans were finally completed, and then the B3 arrived, so we had a B3 party, but one of the scientists was really a spy, and turned up the fan speed causing the fume hood schematics to get pulled into the fan blades and destroyed, which wasn't ideal, since we only had one copy of them. I think I remember the basics of how it went together though. It required a chainsaw. Or a cutting torch. Both maybe, welded together? In any case, I somehow injured my foot after that, undoubtedly doing something heroic. I think it might have involved jumping onto the roof of a speeding transbot, which was also burning. Or maybe it was just somehow caused by the edge of a really sharp floorplan, much like that one over there with the blood on it. I'm pretty sure it was the transbot though."

I have a sip of my B3.

written by Gligar on Nov 28, 2012 20:25

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O suggests that, as a distraction, they could sing loyalty jingles at full blast; those are distracting, right? John-O agrees that that will work.

L4-O keeps thinking. Perhaps there is some other method he overlooked?

Nah, probably not.⁸⁰⁸

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Though clearly delirious from blood loss, Cyrus-R responds, suggesting the intravenous drip that Kris-R has no way of knowing about unless her were some kind of treasonous mutant who could read his mind or something.

But first, the fume hood. He can't remember, so the details come out garbled, but he paints an epic tale of himself and a bunch of scientists coming up with the designs for a fume hood, only for them to lose said plans to the fan. He claims that his foot was lost due to an accident, probably involving a transbot...

Or maybe he's just B3-deprived. He sips it. It works, slightly. (Whether one could replace the blood in your veins with B3 is still the subject of some study by some in R&D. Results are... still a long way off.)

"Relax, citizen," the docbot tells him. "Get a Vita-Yum. You will feel better."

written by Kristos on Nov 29, 2012 04:17⁸⁰⁹

"You heard that, Cyrus-R. Go get some VitaYum meal bars. Docbot's orders. While you're doing that I'll lay here and re-cooperate - I seem to have injured myself."

I suddenly have a vision of VIOLET-skinned Cyrus-V working with twenty-three esteemed scientists on a fume hood. "Creeping compnodes! I'm loosing my mind!" I begin chugging down the rest of my B3.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 29, 2012 14:13

"That seems like an excellent plan. You never can be too careful when Vita-Yum meal substitute bars are involved."

I begin dragging myself out into the corridor.

⁸⁰⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: +1pp to L4 😊)

⁸⁰⁹ KRISTOS: (OOC: Haahaaaaaaaahahaha*gasp*haaaaaahahaha! Cryo, you have me busting up laughing now!)

written by Gligar on Nov 29, 2012 18:21

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R tells Cyrus-R to comply with the docbot and go get some Vita-Yum bars while he recuperates from his injuries (and the image of a VIOLET Cyrus working with scientists - that last one has him worried for his own sanity!)

Cyrus-R decides that Kris-R's resting might be a good idea, and sets about getting them. By crawling into the corridor, presumably to find a vendobot.

Remember, though, that there are none in the corridor.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 29, 2012 19:34

I decide to start searching the clone for anything interesting, since he's unconscious again.

written by Gligar on Nov 29, 2012 21:57

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

At a loss, L4-O decides to actually do something and checks through the captive's jumpsuit. Amongst the usual ME Card, PDC, Tella-O hand mirror et cetera he finds a small spool of tape. That kind of looks familiar, don't you think?

written by Cryoburner on Nov 30, 2012 13:09

I look down the corridor in either direction, checking for any doors that I might have not yet passed through. If I notice any such doors, I begin crawling in their direction.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 30, 2012 16:39

"Hmmm..."

I inspect the tape a little closer...

written by Gligar on Nov 30, 2012 18:12

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O looks at the tape a little closer. There's no label on the spool, but the tape itself is remarkably similar to the ones used to restart the compnode: brown on one side, and shiny with multicoloured reflections similar to one of those ancient optical discs on the other. Only... now that he can look closer, he can see that the shiny side seems to be layered, and the layers stack far deeper than the thickness of the tape.

Holographic tape...

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

A crawling Cyrus-R looks for more doors to explore. He finds one that's open, which seems to lead to a break room or a cafeteria or similar.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 30, 2012 18:57

"That's... interesting. We should see what's on this... or if it's stolen or something."

I give it another glance, but give up quickly since it's unlikely I'll find anything else of note with my eyes alone.

[1250]

I put it away safely so the clone can't see it when he wakes up.

written by Gligar on Nov 30, 2012 22:23

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O decides that tape warrants further investigation - it might be stolen, for instance. At any rate, they should see what's on it. And for that, they'll need more than just eyes...

He pockets the tape, just as the captive begins to groan.

written by Gligar on Dec 01, 2012 16:11

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

The captive lifts his head and looks around. "I'm still not-urgh... not telling you anything..."

The room's turret makes itself known once again. Apparently it's still set to do so.

"As if that'll make me talk, hehehe..."

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R contemplates the cafeteria.

While he does that, a scrubot trundles down the corridor. It's using a long attachment to clean the ceiling.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 01, 2012 20:11

I make sure I'm not in the path of the turret's laser.

"Are you sure? These turrets are probably pretty old... I would bet they don't kill quite as efficiently as the turrets you're accustomed to."

I intensify my glare at the captive.

"In other words, I think it will hurt. A lot. You might not even die... you might just experience a whole lot of agony."

written by Gligar on Dec 01, 2012 21:15

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O points out that the turrets here are probably pretty old and wouldn't kill him right away... no, it'd probably be... painful.

"Just try me!"

The turret suddenly swivels round and a RED light illuminates, indicating that the turret is live. A voice booms throughout the bunker: "Troubleshooters! A Commie Mutant Traitor has been detected. Why has this situation not been rectified?"

If anyone was asleep before, they aren't now.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The scrubot continues down the corridor, brushing past Cyrus-R. Its attachment collides with a pipe on the ceiling, dislodges itself from the scrubot, and falls on Cyrus-R's already injured leg.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The docbot asks, "Are my services still required? If not, I have other calls to attend to." It begins trundling to the door.

written by Kristos on Dec 01, 2012 23:18

"That is all. Thank you for your services."

I take three more sips of B3.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 02, 2012 01:34

"Ah, Friend Computer! We have the situation under control... we are finding out what this traitor knows."

"He's been helpful... to a point. He still knows more and isn't quite willing to give in, yet..."

I glare at the traitor.

written by Gligar on Dec 02, 2012 15:31

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R assures the docbot that it is no longer needed, and gets back to his B3. The docbot heads off.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

It pauses as it passes Cyrus-R. "Perhaps a method of locomotion other than crawling will be of benefit to you."

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O assures The Computer that everything is under control and that they are simply finding out what the captive knows. He's just not being co-operative. "What have you learned so far?" inquires our mutual friend.

"Nothing!" the captive replies defiantly. Kristos-R punches him in the face, saying "Speak when spoken to, commie!"

"I need not remind you," The Computer continues, "that termination is authorised - and encouraged - in this instance. That is, unless your captive is willing to step into the incinerator of his own free will?"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 02, 2012 20:40

I glare at the captive.

"You heard Friend Computer. Don't make us push you in."

"As for your inquiry, Friend Computer, I'll relay what we he said shortly. Once this traitor has been taken care of..."

written by Gligar on Dec 02, 2012 20:58

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Reinforcing Friend Computer's suggestion, L4-O tells the captive to get a move on as he wouldn't want to be forced into the incinerator, would he?

Slowly, the captive gets to his uninjured foot, turns towards the incinerator... then turns back and kicks L4-O in the chest with his injured foot!

“Citizen!” Our Mutual Friend bellows. “Comply immediately! Failure to comply will result in summary execution!”

written by Lightning4 on Dec 03, 2012 00:14

I recoil a bit and try to regather myself.

If I manage to regather myself, I try to boot the traitor into the incinerator without ending up in there myself.

written by Jam on Dec 03, 2012 09:07

I try to help L4-O push the traitor into the incinerator.

written by Gligar on Dec 03, 2012 18:00

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Since the captive is still reluctant to happily step into an incinerator just because Friend Computer told him to do so...

Yep, he needs encouragement. By which I mean clones to push him. Luckily, there are several such clones present. Two of them - L4-O and Jam-Y - decide to do just that: help him comply with Friend Computer's orders. This is slightly hindered by the fact that L4-O has fallen to the floor, and has to stand up again, wincing from the pain but with the voice of his drill instructors running through his head.

Together, the clones begin to push. Needless to say, the captive fights back, but to little effect.

Soon, he is pushed into the incinerator... wow. NO clone should be able to scream like that.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 03, 2012 21:38

I back away from the clone and incinerator as quickly as I am able. I look for a way to close the door as well, and do so once nobody else but the clone is in there.

“Well. That's been taken care of!”

I check for any injuries I sustained from that clone, probably nothing serious, but it doesn't hurt to look.

written by Gligar on Dec 03, 2012 21:57

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Pleased that the captive has been taken care of, L4-O steps back and checks himself over. Nothing serious, but wow does it hurt.

“Good,” The Computer says. “Are you now ready to answer my question?”

written by Cryoburner on Dec 03, 2012 22:35

“Arrr...”

I say, in response to having a dislodged pipe impact my leg.

“Arrrrrrr...”

I then respond to the Docbot's suggestion.

“I suppose I probably could ride on top of you, now that you've suggested it.”

For the moment I have a quick look at the fallen pipe, and so long as it's about the right size, and doesn't look as though it will horribly skewer me or anything, I attempt to use it as a crutch, and try standing with it.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 04, 2012 01:12

“Indeed, Friend Computer. He helped elaborate on a few things we already know. Apparently there's this... Reanimator Project that several groups are involved in. Pro Tech, FCCC-P, Corpore Metal is also seemingly involved.”

“Apparently there was this ‘Easter cycle’ church that tried to make the Reanimator project some yearcycles ago... in some sector. But apparently this church survived. And they're reactivating Reanimator.”

I look concerned.

“Some F-class mutants may be involved as well. He suggested that one of them possesses the power to kill him at great range. We witnessed this ourselves with another clone, an Ex-BLUE that posed as our debriefing officer. He spontaneously caught on fire.”

I look more concerned.

“They're trying to kill me because I called the lockdown.”

written by Gligar on Dec 04, 2012 16:00

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R cries out as he realises what just hit him, and replies to the docbot. Apparently, he was under the impression that the docbot was offering him a ride...

No matter. There is, after all, the pipe... or rather, he thought it was a pipe. It turns out that, instead of the attachment dislodging the pipe from the ceiling, the pipe dislodged the cleaning attachment from the scrubot. The scrubot, incidentally, doesn't seem to have noticed that its attachment is missing, and continues down the corridor.

Looking at the attachment, Cyrus-R can see that it is long enough that he could use it to stand upright.

The docbot continues on, apparently ignoring Cyrus-R.

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O agrees that he is ready, and gives his report concerning the “Easter Cycle” and “Reanimator”. After a moment, he adds a possible connection to some Class F Mutants.

“I see,” The Computer replies. “This is troubling news. I have one question: how did you know that your debriefing officer was impersonated?”

written by Speeder on Dec 04, 2012 18:01⁸¹⁰

“Because Rapt-G claimed to be our real debriefing officer.”

Then I think a bit.

“Unless Rapt-G was the impersonating guy one...”

I look confused.

⁸¹⁰ SPEEDER: (ooc: sorry! couple of issues piled up, including laptop that refuses to work anymore, and too much work)

[1252]

"Who we should trust? Our briefing officer that we saw exiting a elevator in a kinda suspicious manner with a flamethrower in hand or the debriefing officer that had higher clearance and tried to kill L4?"

written by Gligar on Dec 04, 2012 20:34

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y answers Our Friend by saying that Rapt-G claimed to be the real debriefing officer.

But now that he thinks of it, that could make Rapt-G the impersonator. Who do they trust, the GREEN who appeared in a lift with a flamethrower or the BLUE who tried to terminate L4-O?

"Your doubts indicate unhappiness, citizen," is the reply. "Both citizens hold higher clearance than you, and can therefore be trusted. You are required to review debriefing officer recognition protocols before the next mission. Thank you for your co-operation."

written by Speeder on Dec 04, 2012 20:36

I look even more confused.

"I see... sorry, my mistake for forgetting those protocols."

Then I whisper into Jam ears.

"Hey... do you remember where I can read about those protocols?"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 05, 2012 01:06

"Well, I do have doubts about the ex-BLUE, but that's because of the whole trying to kill me thing. And the whole threatening to kill a Junior Citizen thing."

"That's pretty much treason and extremely treasonous treason. So I believe Rapt-G..."

written by Gligar on Dec 05, 2012 16:53

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y's confusion gets worse even as he apologises. Er, does Jam-Y know where he can read up on the protocols?

L4-O also admits to having doubts. In his case, it's because the former BLUE, you know, tried to kill him and threatened a Junior Citizen. He's siding with Rapt-G.

"I understand your doubts, citizen. Choosing a citizen who has not visibly committed treason is preferable to choosing one who has definitely committed treason. Is there anything else you would like to discuss?"

written by Speeder on Dec 05, 2012 17:34

"Friend computer..."

May I request more data on the subject that is pursuing us?

I mean, since the subject keeps pursuing us, then it makes sense that we pursue the subject back, and fix down whatever conspiracy that wants to reanimate the reanimator project.

Mostly I am interested in any data you find appropriate to me, that has clones, secret societies and this whole incident related, I would be greatly happy to figure how so much societies ended in this single treasonous project."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 05, 2012 17:38

"Anything I can read would be wonderful too... we're in this investigation together, it seems."

written by Gligar on Dec 05, 2012 20:01

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

It seems that Speed-Y does have something else. Specifically, he wants information regarding the Reanimator Project. L4-O also seems interested.

"You are in error, citizen. Queries relating to the 'Reanimator project' require Security Clearance [DFSR] to even contemplate. You are fined 50 credits for asking the question. That is all."

written by Speeder on Dec 05, 2012 20:30

I turn to L4.

"Your question was wiser.

And mine was very stupid for some reason...

I feel like if I argued about this before...

Did I?"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 05, 2012 21:06

"It's probable. I guess we're dealing with some very treasonous stuff here. We need to tread lightly if we are to investigate and terminate..."

written by Gligar on Dec 06, 2012 17:45

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y feels stupid. He has to admit that L4-O's question was the better one. He also thinks that they might have discussed this before. L4-O points out that it's probable, and that they're dealing with something big. They must be careful.

There is an awkward silence for a moment.

Kristos-R breaks it. "Well... if there's nothing else I'm needed for, I'll head back to my work crew. We'll never get the dormitory done at this rate."

written by Speeder on Dec 06, 2012 17:59

I nod.

"Yes yes... I think we will need that dormitory done..."

I will head now to the subnode and see what changes were made, of course changed that I can see with my clearance.

Anyone else objects or needs me?"

written by Gligar on Dec 06, 2012 20:09

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y gives Kristos-R the all-clear to get back to work, and decides that he's going to check up on the subnode, and see what's been done to it (if he can even access any changes, at least). Unless anyone needs him?

Nobody replies. Kristos-R leaves the room.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 06, 2012 20:18

I present the tape that I confiscated from the clone.

"Now, we just need to figure out what is on this..."

written by Speeder on Dec 06, 2012 20:26

I look at the tape.

"Oh... I think I know how to read those."

I try to remember where the tape player is.

written by Kristos on Dec 06, 2012 21:46

I take four more sips of B3.

written by Gligar on Dec 06, 2012 21:54

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O shows Speed-Y the tape he took from the captive, reminding him that they need to find out what it contains... something that Speed-Y seems to be familiar with. All he needs is a player... didn't they get one installed in the meeting hall after the commie incident?

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R continues to sip his B3. He realises that the fan is still roaring away. Perhaps he can do something about it when he feels a little better... which should be soon; this B3 is working wonders for his morale.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 06, 2012 22:16

I put the tape away again.

"Hmm. That's good then. If you know where a reader is, we should go find it quickly."

written by Speeder on Dec 07, 2012 11:35

I smile brightly.

"Everyone, back to meeting hall!"

written by Gligar on Dec 07, 2012 16:15

Incinerator room, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Putting the tape away, L4-O states that they'll need to find a tape player. He is, of course, unaware that Speed-Y already knows where to look*: the meeting hall. Speed-Y tells everyone that that is their destination.

* unless he's secretly able to read Speed-Y's mind or something. But that would be treason.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 07, 2012 18:37

I start walking towards the meeting hall, but keep pace to make sure I don't leave anyone else behind.

written by Speeder on Dec 07, 2012 19:52

I go back to the meeting hall too.

No race this time...

Oh wait...

Instead I go to the compnode, to turn off those turrets!

written by Kristos on Dec 08, 2012 05:19

I feel so bursting with morale that I take four more sips of B3 and then attempt to stand up, access the terminal, and set the fan to speed zero.

written by Gligar on Dec 08, 2012 16:34

Corridor A2, Emergency Bunker C-3

With L4-O in front, the team heads back to the stairs. A quick glance down the corridor shows that the HPD&MC crew is once again working on the dormitory.

Stairwell, Emergency Bunker C-3

As the team passes B Level, Speed-Y realises something: the turrets are still active. He lets the team go on ahead so he can stop off at the subnode to turn them off.

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

As he does so, Speed-Y notices that one of the turrets is located in Dormitory 3. Its console is showing Kristos-R directing a couple of the work crew in setting up a jackobot. It seems to be equipped to paint something.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R takes a few more sips of B3 before pulling himself to his feet. Slowly, he gets to the terminal and dials up the fan app, setting the speed to zero. Gradually, the fan goes quiet.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 08, 2012 20:01

I continue back to the meeting hall, keeping an eye out for anything out of the ordinary or otherwise suspicious.

written by Gligar on Dec 08, 2012 21:02

Corridor C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O continues leading the rest of them towards the meeting hall. As he walks, the door to the cloning station opens, revealing a scrubot, which exits and starts cleaning the corridor.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Hmmm, looks like this blood loss is making standing up a chore. Cyrus-R seems to have tried but became dizzy and fell back down again.

written by Kristos on Dec 08, 2012 21:18 "Oh, Scrubot!"

Yay! Fan off! I am somewhat afraid to try to move the plan and re-enable the fan so further testing will have to wait.

My morale is now guiding me to see how Cyrus-R is faring, and perhaps help him on his quest.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 09, 2012 07:08

boink

"I need more energy!"

Taking my cleaning attachment with me, I crawl into the break room, or cafeteria, or similar.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 09, 2012 10:55

I look at the scrubot for a moment as I pass, then continue back towards the meeting hall.

If I make it there, I start looking for the tape player.

written by Gligar on Dec 09, 2012 15:34

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Pleased that the fan is now off, Kris-R decides to suspend testing for now. Perhaps he could go and see what Cyrus-R is doing. Wasn't he getting some Vita-Yum bars?

He heads into the corridor.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

It turns out that Cyrus-R hasn't yet made it to the break room/cafeteria/whatever. He's getting there, though. He's crawling along the ground, but it looks like he tried to use what looks like a long scrubot cleaning attachment to stand up. Clearly, it wasn't successful.

If only he had the energy to get through the break room door...

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O, on the other hand, has plenty of energy. He and the rest of the team have made it to the meeting hall, and L4-O is looking for that tape reader. He finds the machine set into the wall near the vidscreen.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 09, 2012 17:58

"Strange... I could have sworn that this door was open the last time I looked at it, allowing me to ascertain that it belonged to a break room, or cafeteria, or similar."

I look at the door again, to see whether it is in fact open, and I'm just unable to get through for some other reason, or if it's been closed in the mean time, or if I just don't have enough energy to pull myself through the open doorway. Or maybe it's one of those fancy transparentlyke doors, that allow one to see inside, but not actually get inside without opening them first...

In any case, I also check whether the scrubot is still around, and if so, call out to him.

written by Gligar on Dec 09, 2012 20:01

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Okay, riddle me this. How can Cyrus-R have the energy to talk normally but not the energy to go through an open door?

But enough of that. He seems to expect the scrubot to still be around, but it's already moved on. Oh hey, there's Kris-R, though.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 09, 2012 21:30

I take out the tape, and look at the tape and the player for a few moments to determine how it goes on.

Once I figure that out, I put it in and attempt to play it.

written by Kristos on Dec 10, 2012 09:29

I noticed Cyrus-R squirming on the floor. "Don't do that! You'll fall below mandatory hygiene requirements!" I attempt to help Cyrus-R to his feet and bring him through the doorway.

written by Speeder on Dec 10, 2012 12:40

I turn off the turrets, and return to the meeting room.

HAPPILY.

written by Gligar on Dec 10, 2012 17:25

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R decides that Cyrus-R shouldn't be crawling around like that for hygiene reasons, and goes to help him up. He's able to guide Cyrus-R into the... let's just call it a cafeteria... and get him to a seat.

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Or at least it serves as one. A bank of vendobots along one wall allows clones to choose food and drink, and then they can go eat at one of the tables. Everything is decorated in shades of RED.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

By the time Speed-Y arrives, L4-O has attempted to play that tape. He seems to be having a little trouble with getting the tape aligned properly through the head block, though. These dual blocks are more tricky to work with than they look.

written by Speeder on Dec 10, 2012 17:29

I go over there like the TAPE MASTER (there was not a vidshow with that name? humm... I think it was too old for me to remember no? I wonder if there was some random technician that used to watch it near my creche...)

and do my tape related stuff, like the comnode reboot stuff.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 10, 2012 21:00

I just simply allow Speed-Y do whatever he can do. If he needs assistance or misses something that I spot, I try to help or correct it.

written by Gligar on Dec 10, 2012 21:43

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

A memory surfaces in Speed-Y's mind. An old, old vidshow... weren't they showing re-runs of it when he was in the crèche? That would be... what, twenty yearcycles ago? At least! But what would a five-year-old be doing watching Tape Master? Oh yes... they sometimes used those old vidshows to show what various jobs did. If nothing else, it showed him how to handle a tape properly. And by "properly" I mean in the most awesome way imaginable.

Of course, that was twenty yearcycles ago. Speed-Y can't exactly remember all the awesome stuff he saw in that episode. But he still knows how to handle a tape! And he knows just what to do when confronted with a dual head block. In next to no time, he has the tape mounted and ready to go. And L4-O just... watches. I guess he never got to see that vidshow.⁸¹¹

As soon as he hits play, the vidscreen powers up, displaying an R&D logo - an old looking one at that. A voiceover says, "The contents of this tape are subject to Lockdown Protocol 34.06z, and should not be accessed except under strict supervision by senior members of Project Reanimator..."

written by Kristos on Dec 10, 2012 21:28

"Cyrus-R- The greatest role of a leader is a servant. First, to serve the computer. Second, to serve the team. That service usually comes in the form of barking orders. But today, just today, I will get your food for you. You wanted VitaYum bars, right?"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 11, 2012 00:15

I look concerned and lower my voice.

"Uh oh. Do you think we should stop now? I'm not sure we should be watching this..."

written by Cryoburner on Dec 11, 2012 03:07

"Yes, you should make yourself useful and bring me some of those. All in the name of service." : 3

While I wait, I have a better look at my cleaning attachment. Is it just a tube? Is there a brush or other cleaning mechanism attached? Is there anything inside the tube? Does it have a flavor?

written by Speeder on Dec 11, 2012 11:35

I turn to L4.

"I don't see a clearance stripe there... Do you?"

Project Reanimator is defunct, I don't think those rules still apply. And we are not R&D anyway."

But I turn off the video.

"But first we have to be sure that ONLY Friend Computer is watching, we don't know who we can trust."

I scoot to the security station.

written by Gligar on Dec 11, 2012 15:33

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R states that, as Team Leader, he is, first and foremost, a servant, both of The Computer and of the team. And although that usually means that he gives them orders, right now he's willing to help Cyrus-R get his Vita-Yum bars.

Cyrus-R says that Kris-R should "make himself useful" while he has a look at this cleaning attachment. Essentially, it's a broom with a hollow handle, through which cleaning fluids can be pumped. The broom's bristles are also hollow, allowing for even application of cleaning fluid. From the stinging sensation Cyrus-R experiences when he touches the bristles, it is likely that there is leftover cleaning fluid present. Tasting is not recommended unless you want holes in your tongue.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L-O becomes worried. He is unsure that they should even be watching this tape. Speed-Y attempts to reassure him by pointing out that there is no clearance stripe visible, and anyway, Project Reanimator is long dead. Still, it's a good idea to make sure that no untrustworthy clones are watching. He stops the tape and heads to the control room.

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

He's stopped in the concourse by Kristos-R. "Hello again sir! I just thought I'd tell you that our jackobot is applying the clearance stripe down in the new dormitory. Once it's done, we'll be finished."

written by Speeder on Dec 11, 2012 16:46

I smile happily!!!

"Oh, thanks!"

I head into the security station.

I see if I can fiddle with the cameras, just like I did one other time, to only allow people on this station or of particularly high clearance to see the video feed of the meeting hall camera.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 11, 2012 18:35

I simply... sit around.

After rapidly getting bored of that, I take a look around the meeting hall for anything out of the ordinary. Can't be too careful.

⁸¹¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: +1pp to Speeder. It's only right 😊)

written by Gligar on Dec 11, 2012 20:05

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y enters, and immediately begins to... what, exactly? It looks like he's attempting to replicate the stunt he pulled during the commie invasion, where he locked the camera feeds to the highest security level... of course, back then he had a template he could use to tell the system "make it like that". But he's having problems remembering the details of the template...

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

And of course, L4-O has nothing much to do right now. He decides to check for anything out of the ordinary. He quickly finds that nothing has changed since he was last here.

written by Speeder on Dec 11, 2012 20:11

I get upset.

And then more resolute, I focus on it like if there was nothing else in the world and try again.

written by Kristos on Dec 11, 2012 21:59

I walk over and see what amazing food products are present.

written by Gligar on Dec 12, 2012 17:39

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Upset that he can't remember* about that template, Speed-Y tries again, attempting to block out everything else... there's a mutation for that, isn't there? (Speed-Y doesn't have it, though. It'd be obvious if he did.)

Eventually, some details come to mind, and he rushes to implement them. To be honest, he's... not entirely sure this will work, but it seems to match what he remembers.

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

While Cyrus-R continues sitting and generally doing nothing, Kris-R investigates the vendobots. Several of them offer food; from Cold Fun to Hot Fun to algae chips... and yes, Vita-Yum bars are there too. Several varieties, in fact: Original, Extra Original, New Original, New Fun, and some varieties Kris-R doesn't even recognise.

written by Speeder on Dec 12, 2012 18:02

I return to the meeting room.

"Done!"

And happily press the play button.

written by Gligar on Dec 12, 2012 20:10

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Returning to the meeting hall, Speed-Y announces that he has completed his task and starts the tape again. The

* Perhaps he is unaware of the idea of self-redacting information? It came about as [DFSR] mutation, in particular, [DFSR]. But [REDACTED] important. Or perhaps the idea of self-redacting information is itself self-redacting.

vidscreen displays the same R&D logo and the voiceover continues its warning, stating that unauthorised viewers should report to the nearest termination centre.

After that, the display changes, displaying another logo and a jaunty tune, which slowly fades into what seems to be a vidlog. An R&D clone appears, standing next to a table. "Trial sixteen, first entry," he says. "It's taken us long enough already, but we think we've finally cracked it: the ability to bring clones back to life! We're about to begin trials of the new batch... nanomachine strain Beta-16 will be injected into the body of Subject 16-1. If all goes well, life and motor functions will be restored, as well as partial brain function..."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 12, 2012 20:34

I watch silently, but look around occasionally to make sure nobody else has joined in that shouldn't be here.

written by Speeder on Dec 12, 2012 20:54

I just keep myself deeply absorbed by the video

written by Gligar on Dec 13, 2012 18:22

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Not much is said as the video entry ends. L4-O sneaks in a quick look around to discover that no-one else has entered the room.

The video continues into a new entry. The screen changes to show the same scientist, only he is now accompanied by what seems to be a dead body. "Trial sixteen, second entry: Initial trials were successful in restoring motor function, though the brain had begun to atrophy before we acquired the body. This means that the nanomachines need external fuel - that is, our reanimated clone requires nourishment. We're now trying to figure out the best way to provide that nourishment... some of the other suggest taking it to the nearest food hall..."

The scientist injects something into the body, and it twitches. Just before the video fades to black, the corpse sits up.

written by Speeder on Dec 13, 2012 19:36

I still stare at the video.

"Why I fell somewhere along the line this will go really wrong?"

Also I wonder why our contact with Reanimator started with Cryo, what that guy had in special?"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 13, 2012 21:34

"Maybe they did some trial nanomachine leaks or something... find the nearest dead body, and infect it..."

written by Gligar on Dec 13, 2012 22:55

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y speaks up, guessing that things will become bad at some point. And what was with the whole Cryo business? L4-O suggests that they may have run additional tests by infecting random bodies.

The tape continues. The scientist is back; the corpse is not. "Trial sixteen, third entry. It seems that taking Subject 16-1 to the food hall was a mistake: a riot broke out, for reasons unknown, during which Subject 16-1 discovered its primary fuel source: cloneflesh, and... brains. The subject was destroyed by Internal Security and an attending Troubleshooter team." The scientist pauses. "There is the possibility that some of 16-1's nanomachines may have detected the unsuitability of their subject's destroyed body, and... migrated. We will have to liaise with the MEMPRESSION maintainers to track it. In the meantime, we have work to do: find an alternate power source, and find more subjects. And... maybe we can work on getting the brain functioning properly."

The screen goes black again.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 14, 2012 00:04

"Well... I guess that explains that. Though... I thought this was many yearcycles ago. So they must've been doing new testing in the sector."

"Unless there's nanomachines just... floating around out there."

written by Gligar on Dec 14, 2012 16:13

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O comments that Speed-Y's question has been answered. But that would mean that, since the tape was made some yearcycles ago, there have been recent Reanimator tests... or perhaps there are still dormant nanomachines floating around.

The tape continues with a different, YELLOW, scientist. "Trial sixteen, fourth entry: There's been a security breach. Somehow, a group of secret societies got hold of some of the reanimator nanomachines... I don't know why they'd work together, but Johan-G has been terminated for treason. I'm in charge now. We've been ordered to move to CRS Sector and continue tests there... apparently, the B4 Project has some spare test subjects."

The video goes black again.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 14, 2012 21:18

"Hmm. CRS sector... that clone mentioned it. Some kind of disaster happened there. Secret societies and troubleshooters were involved..."

written by Cryoburner on Dec 14, 2012 21:29

Noting that Kris-R seems fixated on the vendobots, I try prodding him a few times my cleaning attachment, if he is within range. It's inefficient to have clones examining things too carefully after all, especially when my meal is involved.

written by Gligar on Dec 14, 2012 21:48

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

CRS sector... L4-O has heard that before. Didn't their captive mention that something had happened there?

The video continues in a new location. The scientist is walking down a corridor in a busy building. "Trial sixteen, fifth entry: We're now set up in CRS Sector R&D. As mentioned, the B4 Project has all the test subjects we need." He stops, indicating a window looking into a room, in which a number of clones are being restrained. Some of them are thrashing about rather violently in response to something. "But that security breach remains a problem; we don't know what happened to that canister of nanomachines that was stolen. I, for one, hope that nothing happens to it... those canisters can be rather fragile if handled improperly."

Once again, the video fades to black.

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R suddenly realises that Kris-R seems to be taking his time, despite the fact that it has been less than a couple of minutecycles, and pokes him. Hmmm, I'm sure that's Insubordination Code J or similar...

written by Gligar on Dec 15, 2012 17:26

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

The video continues with the same scientist. The room with the test subjects is still visible, but is now empty. "Trial sixteen, sixth entry: We believe we know who stole the nanomachine canister, and it's not ... er, I mean, I am HAPPY to report it! For some reason, it seems that several societies have banded together on this one: Pro Tech, FCCC-P, Sierra Club... even the Romantics have a stake. They seem to want to try to create something called the Ea—"

A voice from off-camera interrupts. "Sir? The Troubleshooter team's here."

"Oh... thanks. Show them in. Maybe they can get that canister back. Maybe I can ^{con them into} er, ahem. I hope that this is relevant to their mission... something about sporks—"

The video jitters and rolls for a moment before being replaced by a view of the same scientist, now running down the corridor. The quality of the video is also different, as if the camera is being carried by someone. The scientist narrates as he runs: "Trial sixteen, seventh entry: We've got a problem. That canister? Someone opened it. And... it looks like they're using the nanomachines! On the plus side, we have more test subjects."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 15, 2012 21:54

"Oh dear... so looks like CRS was possibly a Code Four-Zed... from what we know of what happened there now..."

"I'm glad we managed to stop the societies here, at least, before it could spread to the rest of the subsector..."

written by Gligar on Dec 15, 2012 22:36 Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O puts two and two together and gets five Code Four-Zed. (Did they call it that back then? Or is it a newer term?) Which, he surmises, must have happened at CRS Sector. Good thing they managed to avert it here.

The video stops, displaying the R&D logo again. Text below the logo states that the rest of the tape - including video and additional files - requires additional authorisation as described under sub-paragraph 17 of Lockdown Protocol 34.06z, and that playback of said remainder may only continue under INDIGO Clearance authorisation or above.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 16, 2012 00:42

"What next... ULTRAVIOLET clearance? But if it will help the investigation..."

written by Gligar on Dec 16, 2012 12:15

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O wonders if they'll be needing ULTRAVIOLET clearance next... probably rationalising things along the lines of "we're already in way over our heads, so why not more if it'll help..." Lucas-O isn't so sure. "Are you sure about that, L4-O? I mean, after this we'll probably end up as Citizens of Interest or something... this is pretty high-clearance stuff we're dealing with."

Jam-Y doesn't say anything. His eyes have that vacant expression one normally associates with My Brain Isn't Here Syndrome...

written by Cryoburner on Dec 16, 2012 21:30

Since Kris-R is completely transfixed on the vendobots, I decide to perform some useful work for the good of the complex while I wait for him to decide on whatever it is he is deciding upon, and begin brushing the table in front of me with the cleaning attachment.

"Scrub, scrub, scrub..."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 16, 2012 21:43

"I'm really not sure either. Maybe if we're lucky there's nothing else on the tape anyway. Can't commit treason if the INDIGO clearance stuff is gone..."

written by Gligar on Dec 16, 2012 21:58

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Given that Kris-R still hasn't sorted out his Vita-Yum bars, Cyrus-R decides to make himself useful for a change. After all, he has a scrubot cleaning attachment to hand, so why can't he use it to, well, clean?

He starts with the nearby table. And yes, it seems that the attachment still contains leftover cleaning fluid, given that the the table begins to give off a little smoke as he cleans.

L4-O confesses that he isn't sure either. But if they're lucky there will be nothing else on the tape; you can't commit treason if the files are absent. Though looking at the tape itself, there's still plenty left on that spool. And anyway, they'd have to restart the tape to watch whatever is left.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 17, 2012 08:36

"Well, it looks like if we intend to watch it, we need to start it back up..."

I look around.

"I don't think I want to be the one to do it..."

written by Speeder on Dec 17, 2012 12:46

I try to leave the thing active with the authorization needed shown "Alright, this way we will never forget that we need to figure how to continue watching this.

But I have a feeling that letting the cameras on the room film that may help us."

written by Gligar on Dec 17, 2012 13:50

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Finally noticing that the tape has stopped, L4-O points out that they'll have to restart the tape to continue... but he doesn't want to be the one to do it.

Speed-Y does something odd. Claiming that he wants them to remember what authorisation is needed, he ensures that the warning screen is still visible - easy enough, as the vidscreen is still on, and is still showing the warning anyway, so he doesn't have to do anything. He adds that having the cameras see it might help them.

Odd... does he know something?

written by Kristos on Dec 17, 2012 15:09

The most effective clone seeks to know everything within his security clearance and nothing outside of it. After contemplating that truth, I purchase four Vita-Yum bars, all of varieties that are unfamiliar to me.

written by Gligar on Dec 17, 2012 20:05

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

While Cyrus-R continues scrubbing the same table over and over (it's pretty clean now), Kris-R walks over. He was apparently contemplating something so important he couldn't use the vendobots... but no matter. He has in his hands four Vita-Yum bars, with diverse flavours: Smilin' Scrubot Edition, Vague Hint of Chocolate, The Seventeenth Flavour, and This Flavour Name Has Been Deleted For Your Convenience.

Cyrus-R doesn't seem to notice.

written by Speeder on Dec 17, 2012 20:08

"Now, I will go inspect the subnode and then the YELLOW dormitory.

Or you have a better idea?"

written by Cryoburner on Dec 17, 2012 20:16

"Scrub, scrub, scrub..."

I move on to scrubbing a nearby chair. Not my own chair though, as it's occupied.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 17, 2012 22:38

I look confused.

"Um... no. I suppose not..."

written by Gligar on Dec 17, 2012 23:34

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y decides not to say anything else about the tape, instead choosing to go and do something else. Specifically, he wants to inspect the subnode (again) and Dormitory 3 on A Level. He wonders if L4-O has any other ideas?

But L4-O, it seems, does not. He seems to be more confused than thoughtful. Perhaps even suspicious at his Team Leader's sudden strange actions?

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Absorbed in his cleaning, Cyrus-R does not notice Kris-R standing there with Vita-Yum Bars (or maybe the blood loss is affecting his perception?) Instead, he starts cleaning a chair. Oblivious to the fact that his cleaning attachment has run out of fluid, and also to the fact that he has to push past Kris-R to get to the chair. If Kris-R were anyone else, he's most likely be standing there annoyed but still smiling because hey, he's HAPPY to be annoyed!

written by Lightning4 on Dec 18, 2012 06:04

I simply wait around again, and look around... again.

written by Speeder on Dec 18, 2012 12:30

"Alright! Off I go!"

I scoot off to the subnode.

written by Gligar on Dec 18, 2012 13:08

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

While Speed-Y heads off downstairs, L4-O is left doing... not all that much. All he can do is... sit around and look around... again.

As he does, the vidscreen dims, going into power-save mode. The room's cameras sweep about in their usual patterns. The vendobots blink their lights at him. And a scrubot enters and begins sweeping the floor.

Not really much happening right now.

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

On arrival, Speed-Y's glance is immediately drawn to the wall of computer hardware that comprises the subnode. He realises that he doesn't really know what he's looking for, but he can tell that new components have been added.

written by Speeder on Dec 18, 2012 13:48

I go take a careful look on the new components, I try to figure what they are...

written by Gligar on Dec 18, 2012 17:46

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Not believing that he can't recognise the upgrades - or perhaps he just wants to waste a little time, or maybe he's channeling Cryo-R - Speed-Y give the upgrades a close inspection.

Hmmm... now that he looks at them... that looks like a memory module, and that thing has an antenna, so presumably an access point - probably needed for the new terminals...

written by Kristos on Dec 18, 2012 20:36

I lay one of the Vita-Yum bars (This Flavour Name Has Been Deleted For Your Convenience) on the table Cyrus-R is sitting at. Turning away, I say, "Rest up and eat some. Be on the lookout for suspicious clones, but try to not be suspicious yourself."

I return to the office.

written by Jam on Dec 18, 2012 20:39

I shake my head a bit.

"Ugh... Weird, I kinda zoned out for a few secondcycles."

I look at L4-O, then at the tape, then back at L4-O.

"Well, are we going to play the tape or not? Maybe we can finally get some answers here..."

written by Gligar on Dec 18, 2012 21:13

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R puts one of the Vita-Yum bars on the table in front of a still-not-paying-attention Cyrus-R, who is still trying to clean the chair. Despite the fact that it's already quite clean by now.

Heading for the door, Kris-R tells Cyrus-R to eat up and not be suspicious.

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Upon returning to the office, Kris-R receives a message on his PDC.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y snaps out of his trance, unaware that the tape has been played, and wonders if they're ever going to play it; he wants some answers.

Then he notices that a) Speed-Y isn't here; and that b) the vidscreen is active (though dimmed). Also c) the tape is mounted on the player, and is partway wound onto the takeup reel.

written by Speeder on Dec 18, 2012 21:08

I look around to see if I have a proper clearance port to connect my PDC.

If I find, I connect to it.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 18, 2012 22:07

"We already did, sir. You zoned out..."

"It seems to be a log of an R&D clone, working on the Reanimator project..."

"We could replay it I guess, if you want."

written by Cryoburner on Dec 19, 2012 00:43

"Wow! There's a Vita-Yum bar here! I should eat it!"

Noticing the Vita-Yum bar on the table in front of me, I decide to unwrap and eat it, and begin doing so. I try to determine what This Flavor Name Has Been Deleted For Your Convenience actually tastes like.

written by Gligar on Dec 19, 2012 13:44

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Having figured out what the additions to the subnode are, Speed-Y wonders if he could connect to the thing and see what else has changed. Well, he could, if he had a standard PDC-to-XQR-57(d) connector cable (clearance INDIGO)...

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O brings Jam-Y up to speed with the contents of the tape, and suggests that they could replay the log if need be.

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R stops scrubbing. He's finally noticed the Vita-Yum bar. And, though it takes him a while, he begins to eat it. He... can't quite place the taste... about all he can say is that has a vague hint of... something familiar. But that doesn't mean that it's not delicious, or... what's the tagline they use... vitalicious? Vita-Yummy? Something like that.

written by Speeder on Dec 19, 2012 14:48

I just keep doing stuff to figure what the stuff is stuffing.

written by Gligar on Dec 19, 2012 17:38

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Despite having been unable to connect to the subnode, Speed-Y remains where he is. He seems interested in something on his PDC

written by Speeder on Dec 19, 2012 17:50

I notice certain curious objects and observe any cables or other sort of connection it might have, to see where it might be leading...

To the subnode maybe? or to outside?

written by Kristos on Dec 19, 2012 19:40

I read the PDC message.

written by Gligar on Dec 19, 2012 21:14

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y turns his attention from his PDC and back to some of the additions. He thinks that perhaps they are connected to something suspicious... but no, they're connected firmly to the subnode. See those cables there? That 52-pin cluster, and the two 17-pin cables? Those go to the subnode.

Team Sigma's office, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Realising that he has a message, Kris-R gets out his PDC.

He discovers that it's from a "Mission Enforcement Office" and reads

COMPLETE YOUR MISSION, CITIZEN, OR BE TERMINATED

written by Lightning4 on Dec 20, 2012 08:27

I simply wait for Speed-Y's return now. I look to be at maximum allowed boredom level.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 20, 2012 17:13

"Wow! Vitastastic! This Vita-Yum bar has given me the sudden urge to complete my mission!"

I finish my Vita-Yum bar and set to work scrubbing the vendobot.

"Scrub, scrub, scrub..."

written by Speeder on Dec 20, 2012 17:18

I peer at the objects again, and resume fiddling with my PDC...

You know, one has to find out what sort of stuff there are in your home.

written by Gligar on Dec 20, 2012 18:27

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

It looks like L4-O is reaching the maximum allowed level of bored- pop ZAP ZAP ZAP

[1261]

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y isn't bored, though, and he certainly didn't just hear what sounded (and looked) like lasers. Instead, he's still puzzling over the extra bits added on to the subnode. And his PDC.

Maybe he should hurry up, though. Just saying.

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Oh, so that's it! I can never remember half of these slogans and taglines. Cyrus-R knows that one, though.

He also knows that the Vita-Yum bar has left him full of energy, and has started poking a vendobot in a manner that suggests cleaning.

The vendobot seems to know it too. "The citizen cleaning me should be aware that the last scrubot who attempted to clean me ended up on the scrap heap. Of course, citizens do not go to the scrap heap when they are junked; they go to the food vats instead. Therefore I suggest that you cease this operation before you are forced to experience the inner workings of a food vat first-hand."

written by Gligar on Dec 20, 2012 22:42

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

The smoke clears. And... nobody responded to the apparent laser pistol blast. Except John-O, who is looking around in confusion. "What in the...?!"

written by Speeder on Dec 20, 2012 23:31

I mutter something along the line:

"Stupid briandead machines."

(yes, briandead)

written by Lightning4 on Dec 20, 2012 23:39

"What!?" I look around in confusion. Unless I'm dead, then I just stay dead in confusion, since I am hopefully not a zombie.

written by Gligar on Dec 21, 2012 14:08

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y mutters something but carries on messing with his PDC.

Also... I don't know if he's realised, but he might want to check the clearance of that area. I know that part of that room is ORANGE and part is YELLOW, but the rest...

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O looks around, startled. It certainly took him long enough to realise that a) he is not dead; and b) that something just happened.

And what just happened? Well, it certainly looked and sounded like a laser pistol, didn't it? But on further inspection, no such weapon has been fired. Instead, there is just an expended pyrotechnics grenade of the sort used by Alertness Officers.

written by Speeder on Dec 21, 2012 16:43

I take a breath and stretch my neck muscles.

Just in case I notice that I am in a wrong area, I step to a correct area, I don't need to be near anything in the room anyway...

written by Gligar on Dec 21, 2012 18:11

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y takes a break from whatever it is he's doing on his PDC. It's odd that he's paying so much attention to it, isn't it? I wonder why he's holding it in such a way that I can't see it on the cameras...?

Well, in any case, he's realised that he's in a BLUE area. Realising that he doesn't actually need to be there (and that he'll probably get reprimanded for it later) he steps back towards the door.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

When nobody else seems to notice the grenade, Lucas-O speaks up. "That could have just as easily been a real laser pistol, you know. One that none of you saw until it was too late. And you Jam-Y, would have been dead. All because nobody stayed alert."

written by Jam on Dec 21, 2012 19:54

"Or maybe I was being so alert that I saw you getting that pyrotechnics grenade ready, and I knew that I didn't need to react to it."

I grin at Lucas-O.

written by Speeder on Dec 21, 2012 20:04

I resume poking on the PDC.

Seemly bored.

written by Speeder on Dec 21, 2012 19:08

I love alertness officers.

Their job is to make people jumpy.

And when they are not jumpy, to scare them until they are jumpy again.

Some people would think I was a alertness officer in real life... (I have a tendency to walk without making sounds, many times not on purpose, so I frequently scare people by accident by "appearing" behind them, from their perspective).

written by Gligar on Dec 21, 2012 22:08

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y tries to save face by claiming that he noticed Lucas-O fiddle with the grenade before he set it off and knew that he didn't have to react to it. "But how did you know it was just me, sir?" Lucas-O counters. "There could've been a real Commie Mutant Traitor in the room, just waiting for me to set off the grenade so that they could use it as cover and shoot you. But since you were focused on me, you didn't see him and he shot you. Being alert means being aware of everything!"

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y goes back to his PDC. He seems a little bored now.

If only there were an Alertness Officer in the room 😊

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R continues to ignore everything as he continues cleaning the vendobot.

As previously hinted, the vendobot does not like being cleaned, and tries to make Cyrus-R realise it, starting with sounding its (very loud) tamper alarm.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 21, 2012 22:45

I raise an eyebrow at both Jam-Y and Lucas-O, then simply shrug and go back to idly looking around the meeting hall.

"Well, I guess that's part of your duties and all..."

written by Gligar on Dec 22, 2012 14:16

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O looks at Jam-Y and Lucas-O for a moment before shrugging it off. Lucas-O's only doing his job, he realises.

Then he resumes looking around, and notices a second grenade with a blinking light.

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y continues doing whatever it is he's doing.

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The vendobot's alarm continues. It seems that it's attracting attention from somewhere as someone can be heard running in the distance. Several someones, in fact.

Cyrus-R remains oblivious.

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The running can be heard in here as well. Though Kris-R seems to have fallen asleep.

written by Gligar on Dec 22, 2012 21:34

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The identities of the someones - what appear to be several of the factory workers - is made clear when they burst into the room. "Oi, what's going on here?" one demands to know.

"Can't you see? It's another of those hygiene people... they think they're human scrubots," another tells him. "And you know that XK14 there doesn't like to be cleaned like that."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 22, 2012 23:04

"Er... Lucas-O, how many grenades did you toss?"

I point at the other grenade.

written by Jam on Dec 23, 2012 01:36

"You can't fool us again so quickly, Lucas-O! We're expecting something now!"

written by Gligar on Dec 23, 2012 14:16

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O points out the second grenade, and asks how many Lucas-O threw. Jam-Y points out that the second can't fool them since they're expecting it.

"I only threw one grenade," Lucas-O tells them. "Which means..."

Suddenly realising, he drops to the floor. "Get down!"

written by Gligar on Dec 23, 2012 20:51

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Ever oblivious, Cyrus-R does his best scrubot impression as he cleans Vendobot XK14... which promptly falls on him.

"See?" says the second worker. "That happens to anything that tries to clean XK14. It's almost like it's got a spring-loaded base or something."

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y smiles. Whatever it is he's doing seems to be working.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 23, 2012 22:45

I take cover as quickly as I can. If I fail that, I just drop down too.

written by Jam on Dec 24, 2012 04:18

I run to the tapes and try to shield them from the grenade's blast with my body.

"Ahhh!"

written by Gligar on Dec 24, 2012 13:59Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

While L4-O tries to take cover from the grenade – those chairs probably won't do it, so he ends up just dropping to the floor – Jam-Y realises that there is something else that needs to be protected: the tape. He rushes over to the tape machine and shields it with his own body as the grenade explodes.

Joris-O, who for some reason failed to duck in time, is hit pretty bad, and collapses to the floor.

John-O seems to have left the room, and only receives minor damage from the blast.

Lucas-O and L4-O are peppered with debris. There's probably going to be some bleeding and quite a bit of pain, but the two are otherwise okay.

Jam-Y, standing as he is near the tape player doesn't get hit as bad as Joris-O, but still ends up falling to the floor. The tape player itself seems to have survived relatively unscathed.

All surviving team members go temporarily deaf from the explosion.⁸¹²

Subnode and turret control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y is interrupted by the grenade's explosion, loud enough to be heard down here.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 24, 2012 21:43

"Uuugh..."

I climb back onto my feet, clutching whatever spot that hurts the most.

"Wha-I can't hear anything!"

I look around in a panic once I get to my feet.

written by Jam on Dec 24, 2012 22:42

I check myself for any injuries.

"I can't hear anything!"

I suddenly notice Joris-O.

"Oh no, Joris-O! He's been hit!"

written by Gligar on Dec 24, 2012 23:01Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O is the first to stir. He rises, and winces when he realises that his left shin is hurting pretty badly. But that's not as important as the fact that he can't hear anything...

Not that he can hear himself say that.

Looking around in a panic, he notices Joris-R face-down on the floor, as well as Jam-Y wincing in pain from what is probably a few broken bones. Jam-Y also notices the lack of hearing and the Joris-O situation. He also notices that Joris-O isn't moving.

written by Gligar on Dec 25, 2012 18:01Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

A couple of minutes pass. The ringing in everyone's ears completely fails to subside.

On the good side, it seems that everyone is still alive... except for Joris-O.

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Hey... shouldn't he have reacted to having a vendobot fall on him?"

"Nah... he may not even have noticed. 'Human bots' tend not to notice things that aren't important to whatever they're doing. Kind of like those Deep Thought mutants. But he isn't one."

"How can you tell?"

"Easy... his eyes aren't glowing."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 25, 2012 22:27

I calm down once I realize everyone is still alive, sans one.

"Okay, I think I-"

I raise my voice higher.

"I think I-"

I shout.

"I THINK I-"

I sigh and give up, and get my blaster out just in case there's a followup attack.

written by Speeder on Dec 26, 2012 12:05

After the startlement scared the hell out of me, I check my PDC to see if whatever I did with it is still running, then I go see the cameras with the turret control and see what happened.

written by Gligar on Dec 26, 2012 14:31Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O calms down, now that it's clear that most of them are okay. He tries to share his thoughts with everyone, but he still can't hear himself speak (though the ringing is beginning to subside). Instead, he pulls out his blaster and gets ready for... what, exactly?

John-O enters, and says something. Lucas-O tries to answer, but it's clear that he can't hear John-O.

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

After being distracted by the explosion, Speed-Y checks his PDC one last time. It seems to be doing whatever it is he told it to do, and apparently doesn't need his constant supervision.

⁸¹² GLIGAR: (OOC: and Jam receives 1pp 😊)

He therefore turns his thoughts to the explosion, starting with its location. He heads over to the turret controls and activates them in sequence, seeing if he can find evidence of the explosion. Let's see... not the loading dock... not the corridors on A Level... not anywhere on A Level, in fact... so let's check B Level... nope, not the corridors, or the generators, or the office, or... or... or...

He keeps checking. Soon, his search reaches C Level. He eventually notices John-O in the concourse, entering the meeting hall... He checks in there. Aha! The meeting hall. It appears that a grenade went off in there, trashing a few chairs and causing some injuries... maybe more.

written by Speeder on Dec 26, 2012 14:54

I look in the video feed if the tape and the reader are safe and sound.

"What the HEL"

written by Gligar on Dec 26, 2012 18:32

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Still wondering exactly what happened, Speed-Y studies the video feed, looking for the tape machine... ah yes, there it is. Jam-Y is standing by it, and it seems not to have sustained any damage. Jam-Y, on the other hand, has some nasty HAPPY-looking injuries.

written by Speeder on Dec 26, 2012 18:41

I take out the slug launcher.

I lock the safety.

I take out the revolving ammo part.

I check if the gun is clean and in proper working condition.

I load ammo in empty chambers (if any).

I put the ammo part back.

I close the gun again.

I unlock the safety.

I walk toward the meeting hall, with maximum alertness.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 26, 2012 22:35

I continue looking around, wondering where the grenade could have come from.

written by Jam on Dec 26, 2012 23:16

I check how badly I'm bleeding, and look around for anything I might be able to use to as a bandage.

written by Gligar on Dec 27, 2012 19:08

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y decides to act.

But before he can act, he needs to make sure he's ready. He takes out his "revolver" and checks it over, including looking for a safety (though that particular search turns out to be futile; it is, after all, a "revolver"). He's able to ensure that the weapon is clean and free of obstructions, as well as fully load it (good thing, as it was empty) before heading off.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

As Speed-Y heads upwards, L4-O starts looking to see if he can find where that grenade came from. Hmm... perhaps the vent? No, too small to crawl through... unless the perpetrator was a bot? Or perhaps it could have been thrown in through the open door, in which case the CMT may still be close? Or maybe - just maybe - one of them threw it?

Jam-Y seems more concerned about his own injuries, and can you blame him? His bleeding looks ugly. He's looking for a bandage or something, and looks all around the room before considering his towels. They'll do... right?

While he bandages himself, Speed-Y enters the room, "revolver" at the ready.

written by Speeder on Dec 27, 2012 19:11

I look around.

"What happened here? I heard an explosion."

I look to Jam.

"Are you alright Jam?"

written by Gligar on Dec 27, 2012 22:08

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Naturally, Speed-Y wants to know what's going on. He can see ruined chairs from the explosion, and Joris-O's unmoving form, and an injured Jam-Y, but what caused the explosion that caused all this?

"Beats me, sir," Lucas-O says. "All I know is that I was running an impromptu Alertness Test with one of my pyrotechnics when L4-O spots a real grenade. No clue where it came from, though."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 27, 2012 23:20

I think I can start hearing again? If so, I respond as well.

"It's really strange. It looks like it got Joris-O, but everyone else is mostly okay. Jam-Y protected the tapes, so he's not in great shape either..."

written by Speeder on Dec 27, 2012 23:34

"I will see if I can get a video of this..."

I stalk off to the security station, weapon still in hand and still alert.

written by Jam on Dec 28, 2012 00:46

"Ow, ow... I think I broke some bones..."

[1265]

I try to determine just which bones are broken, and how badly.

Also, I check how my hearing is doing. Hopefully this deafness isn't permanent...

written by Cryoburner on Dec 28, 2012 01:05

"Ahh! There seems to be a vendobot on me! How did I ever come to be in such a situation as this!?"

I continue my work on the vendobot.

"Scrub, scrub, scrub..."

written by Kristos on Dec 28, 2012 05:09

I wonder about the status of my information request form as I sip my B3 and open a VitaYum bar (Vague Hint of Chocolate).

written by Gligar on Dec 28, 2012 14:56

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Since his hearing is coming back, L4-O replies that the grenade got Joris-O but everyone else is okay (except Jam-Y, who protected the tape).

Speaking of Jam-Y, he tells everyone that his bones are broken before realising that it's most likely to be a couple of his ribs and a shinbone. The ribs are a cause for concern but his shinbone seems to be just fractured. On the plus side, his hearing is returning.

Speed-Y stalks off in search of video evidence

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

However upon arrival at the control room, Speed-Y quickly discovers that the terminal is experiencing a hardware fault.

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Finally!

It took him a while, but Cyrus-R finally realises that he is trapped under a vendobot. However, he seems to have no clue how. He simply cannot see the correlation between him cleaning a vendobot and it falling on top of him. And to add to it all, he attempts to continue cleaning it!

Well, several things happen.

The first is that the attending workers start speaking. "Hey, citizen! Did it ever occur to you that some vendobots might not want to be cleaned? Or maybe they —"

written by Cryoburner on Dec 28, 2012 01:10

Speaking of alertness, I lost power here for a couple days, then was busy with Christmas happenings, and came back to find a vendobot on top of me. >_>

written by Kristos on Dec 28, 2012 05:10

Not fair. I was gone for, what, a week, and yet there are no vendobots on top of me! Paranoia is unfair! Gligar is unfair! What a gloomy way to welcome in the new year!

The second is that the vendobot also speaks. "Warning: this unit has requested that attempts at cleaning be discontinued. Yet my requests have been ignored. I must therefore take additional steps to resolve the problem." It begins to crackle with electricity.

The third? Cyrus-R's cleaning attachment breaks.

" — have anti-tamper mechanisms? Come on, let's get him out of there..."

"Or maybe we could just leave him there, and let his next clone learn his lesson?"

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

By now, Kris-R is getting tired of waiting. He wonders about the status of his Information Request. But as he probably knows, getting the status of a form is not easy, requiring at least fifteen different forms, rendering the status request unneeded since they take so long to process that the original form has been processed by the time the results come back. It's probably better to wait.

In the meantime, he has B3 and Vita-Yum bars... oh, and there seems to be a message waiting for him on the terminal.

written by Speeder on Dec 28, 2012 17:06

I look around for any danger, then close the door and inspect if anyone sabotaged the things.

written by Gligar on Dec 28, 2012 18:36

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y takes the time to check the room for tampering. He checks the control panel and finds it okay. The video monitors appear to be untouched. In fact, the only problem seems to be with the terminal. As mentioned, it is experiencing a hardware fault.

After a brief examination of the terminal, Speed-Y ascertains that the problem lies with the keyboard. It appears to have been forcibly removed from its connection cable, leaving the terminal to complain that there is no keyboard, and asking that the F1 key be pressed for further operation.

written by Speeder on Dec 28, 2012 18:46

I frown.

"I never understood who invented that shit idea to ask for F1 key when keyboard is not present..."

I heard that it is already hundreds of years that this is being done..."

written by Speeder on Dec 28, 2012 14:09

By the way, my laptop broke down about two months ago...

So my only internet device when not at work is the mentioned android that hates frames...

This means that it is very likely that I won't post anything until January 3 (when I get back to work)

[1266]

I take out my PDC and check if it is still doing what I left it doing.

I then check if I can use it as keyboard without disrupting what it was doing before.

If I can't, I try to figure if there are a way to check old video without the keyboard.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 28, 2012 22:40

I discontinue cleaning the vendobot, seeing as I will need a cleaning attachment repair to continue. I take a moment to examine the extent of the cleaning attachment's damage. Also, whether I am being electrocuted, and whether I can crawl out from under the vendobot.

"Oh, I'm sorry vendobot. I did not realize you were tipped over and laying on top of me. Perhaps we should help you back up to return you to a position more conducive to Vita-Yum bar sales. These citizens came running in here to purchase Vita-Yum bars, and it would be tragic and perhaps detrimental to the complex if they were not able to do so due to you being positioned in a less-than-optimal manner and sparking electricity and dirty."

written by Gligar on Dec 28, 2012 23:36

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R stops cleaning when he realises that his tool is broken. Looking at it, he notices that the head has snapped off.

He then realises that he can feel a large electric current running through his body, and realises that the vendobot is wedging him firmly to the ground. This won't do, so, in his usual manner, he apologises to the vendobot and suggests that it will be unable to serve clones in this condition... so why don't they see about getting it into an upright position?

Almost at once, it stops sparking. "I believe that you are correct," it says. "Perhaps I can let your actions slide.... perhaps you were mistaken in assuming that I needed to be cleaned."

The workers aren't sure what to make of this. "That's... really unusual," one says. "I have never seen that bot leave a cleaner alive before. Why this one?"

Another replies. "There must be something happening here... but..." He suddenly realises something and, with a surprised expression, runs out of the room.

The bot doesn't reply.

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

It seems that Speed-Y disagrees with the old practice of pressing F1 when there is no keyboard. That's a sign of unhappiness there, Speed-Y, you might want to get that seen to... perhaps a trip to the confession booths later? In the meantime, perhaps there's another way of controlling the terminal? Or perhaps there's a spare keyboard somewhere?

He checks his PDC. It's still working on whatever it was, but it seems that there's no way he can connect it to the terminal while it's working. And speaking of the terminal, it appears to be unresponsive until he finds a way of pressing F1. This despite the fact that the thing has a touchscreen... I guess it just needs its keyboard that badly. It is one of the old ones, after all.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 28, 2012 23:26

I wince in pain, still recovering from my injuries and other blast-induced pain.

"I had a thought... this is a bunker, right? Why don't we just lock it down? Whoever did this, unless they got away, will still be here in the bunker... maybe."

"And that way, we can actually do something without some CMT interfering..."

written by Cryoburner on Dec 29, 2012 01:38

"That's... really unusual. Maybe it has something to do with me working at a premium discount bot store over in JHP sector. I sell premium discount bots and premium discount bot accessories. Have you ever been to JHP sector, vendobot?"

"In any case, we should get this vendobot upright, so that we can get back to purchasing Vita-Yum bars and dragging our broken bodies across the floor and whatever else we came here for."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 29, 2012 09:03

I take a look in my medkit for what's left, so I can distribute whatever is useful to the injured clones here, including myself.

If there's something for pain, I take that.

written by Gligar on Dec 29, 2012 14:17

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R decides that he was spared due to... no wait, he's infected with WorkplaceAdvert.K again.

He also asks if the bot has ever been to JHP Sector. "I am incapable of moving, citizen. There is no chance that I could have visited JHP Sector."

One of the workers disagrees. "Wait a minute. You say you work at that place that was in the news recently for selling the bot that terminated a High Programmer over in JHZ Sector? That would explain a few things."

Another chimes in. "Now you mention it, don't we get parts from there?"

"Enough" a third says. "We'll need to sort out this bot and get him to the medical bay before our supervisors find out we're late." They set about moving the vendobot.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

While examining what medical supplies he has left - not much - and trying to patch people up, L4-O reminds everyone of what should be obvious: This facility is a bunker. One that, if you will remember, is capable of being locked down. Surely the perpetrator has not gone far enough to escape the lockdown? Maybe?

[1267]

And besides, by locking the place down, they can continue their work without further interruption.

written by Gligar on Dec 29, 2012 19:32

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Just as L4-O runs out of medical supplies, John-O speaks up. "I guess that'd work. But remember that we have an HPD&MC team in here right now. They're not going to like being locked in... not to mention the fact that it'll most likely delay their next jobs. We'll end up with Official Reprimands or something!"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 30, 2012 00:01

"Good point... I guess we just need to weed out the CMTs ourselves and make sure they stop interfering..."

"Hopefully Speed-Y can locate whoever did this."

I put the empty(?) medkit away.

written by Gligar on Dec 30, 2012 13:58

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O accepts John-O's concerns and suggests that they need to weed out CMTs themselves. He hopes that Speed-Y can find out who did it in the video log. Assuming that he can get the terminal working again.

He puts his now-empty medkit away.

"Okay," John-O says. "We can do the lockdown after the HPD&MC team leaves."

written by Cryoburner on Dec 30, 2012 22:03

"If the bot was from our store, that must have been due to post-sale tampering. Our bots are built from only the finest premium discount parts, and undergo a thorough one-step examination prior to being sold. Anyway, thanks for your assistance in lifting this vendobot back into a more vendable position."

I gather up the broken parts of my cleaning attachment, and drag myself back over to the vendobot, where I purchase another Vita-Yum bar, Smilin' Scrubot Edition.

I smile.

written by Gligar on Dec 30, 2012 22:13

Cafeteria, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R puts on his sales hat and assures the workers that any... er, sub-optimal behaviour must be due to events that happened after the bot left his store... after all, all bots are subject to a through one-step inspection prior to sale. To prove his point, he buys another Vita-Yum bar before picking up his attachment.

The workers don't seem so sure, but decide to ignore it, and copy Cyrus-R's smile. "Well, if you say so. But perhaps we can get Tech service to look at it. Now... where were we? Oh yes... the docbot." The workers grab Cyrus-R and head out.⁸¹³

written by Gligar on Dec 31, 2012 14:02

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The workers continue to take Cyrus-R to the med-bay. I would imagine that either Cyrus-R appreciates their assistance or would prefer to be left alone to do... something. Either way, it doesn't seem to matter, since he says absolutely nothing about it.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The terminal continues to try and attract Kris-R's attention. But Kris-R doesn't seem to notice. Which is a shame, given that it's flagged as REALLY IMPORTANT YOU SHOULD HAVE READ THIS FIVE MINUTES AGO...

So, in short, it seems that Team Sigma is ignoring its mission.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Not much happens here, either. It seems that everyone is too busy catching their breath after the grenade went off. Either that or they're waiting for Speed-Y to return with information.

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

But it seems that he has fallen asleep.

In short, nothing much is happening right now in monitored areas. Maybe I should... but no, I doubt anyone would even notice if I implemented the C-shift Protocol.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 31, 2012 17:59

I begin munching on my Vita-Yum bar, Smilin' Scrubot Edition, as I am transported to wherever it is I am being transported to. I note its flavor and texture, and how much they actually taste like scrubots.

written by Kristos on Dec 31, 2012 18:16⁸¹⁴

Why am I so groggy? I can hardly move. I can hardly think. This must be the aftereffects of the fan episode. My adrenaline must be depleted now. I have to break out of this. I slowly move to the terminal and check the message, trying to not collapse.

written by Gligar on Dec 31, 2012 19:43

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

While he's being moved, Cyrus-R takes the opportunity to eat the Vita-Yum bar. It's about the same texture as every other Vita-Yum bar out there, and tastes faintly of cleaning chemicals (though, as the wrapper notes, it contains 99%

⁸¹³ GLIGAR: (OOC: 1pp to Cryo 😊)

⁸¹⁴ KRISTOS: (OCC: Busy busy days, but they should be over now.)

[1268]

less cleaning chemicals than the leading brand... but aren't Vita-Yum the leading brand? None of your business, citizen.)

Also, the bar is shaped like a scrubot.

The workers turn onto Corridor B.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Meanwhile Kris-R is trying to force himself awake. The fan episode must have drained him more than he thought. Or maybe...

Oh yes! The message! As it turns out, it's an important announcement about potential mutant sightings, issued by Internal Security, it seems. It looks like it was sent to everyone in the sector. They do that a lot, actually, giving the identities of known or suspected unregistered mutants in the area, and offering rewards for capture (no mention of whether they want them alive or dead, though.)

Or even if they don't have an identity. For instance, the first paragraph mentions that there may be a Machine Empath in the vicinity.

written by Kristos on Jan 01, 2013 02:35

Machine Empath? Empath... empathetic? No, that's not it. Silly acronyms. How in the compnode should a RED respond to all these vague messages. I guess I should get ready to kill something. Maybe time?

I grab a random laser pistol barrel from the testing supply and put it in the device. Then I look for the power switch on the device.

written by Gligar on Jan 01, 2013 14:36

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R gives up with the message. He knows almost nothing about mutations and doesn't even know what "Machine Empath" means... how is he supposed to reply to something like that?

Oh well. He suspects that he'll have to kill something soon. He might as well start by killing time. And that means testing laser barrels. He grabs one and gets to it. Now where did that power button go...? Ah, there it is.

As before, the device starts with its sound- and light-show... as well as the gas. It looks like this barrel might be a good one.

written by Gligar on Jan 01, 2013 19:42

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R finishes off his Vita-Yum bar as he is escorted to what will presumably be the medical bay. It doesn't take long to get there - in fact, it becomes visible just as the workers stop to allow a vehiclebot to pass.

written by Kristos on Jan 01, 2013 22:08

No! I didn't mean to actually press the button!

I jump out the door to avoid the gas. Though, most likely, I either fail to jump or I collapse at the end of my arc. :-(

written by Cryoburner on Jan 01, 2013 23:19

I neatly fold my Vita-Yum bar wrapper, or wrappers, and return them to my pocket, in case I have further need for them.

"It's great to see that there's a medical bay nearby, what with all the blood loss and limb loss and vendobot-cleaning-related-injuries I've been experiencing lately."

written by Gligar on Jan 01, 2013 23:49

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R panics. He's sure he didn't actually start it up...

He tries to get away from the gas, but trips up over a hallucinatory Computer monitor and falls to the floor.

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Putting the wrapper away, Cyrus-R states his approval of the medical bay.

The group doesn't say anything, and moves him in.

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The medical bay is Clearance INFRARED and full of clones seeking treatment, all INFRARED. The docbot is in, and looks to be having problems dealing with the large volume of patients requesting treatments beyond their security clearance. It looks up, and, noticing Cyrus-R and the workers, says, "Higher clearances receive faster treatment. Come over to the desk, please."

written by Speeder on Jan 02, 2013 12:32

I suddenly wake up.

"Whoa... I wonder if I had some sleep deprivation..."

But now I feel awesome!"

I try to touch the "F1" on the touchscreen.

I look around in the monitors to see if I see anything or anyone suspicious, like a certain clone hiding, running away or trying to get out of the bunker.

written by Gligar on Jan 02, 2013 17:31

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y wakes up with a start, realising that he fell asleep. But it seems that the impromptu nap was what he needed.

He turns his attention back to the terminal (still demanding that he press F1) and decides to do just that - by pressing the F1 text on the screen. Surprisingly, it works.

With that sorted, he's able to access the cameras again, and soon finds someone running towards the loading dock observation platform on B Level.

[1269]

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R is again moved, this time to the desk The docbot looks over him and asks, "What is the nature of your injuries?"

written by Cryoburner on Jan 02, 2013 17:47

"Hello Docbot! I had a vendobot randomly tip over on me. Oh, I also lost a foot in a heroic transbot accident, or something like that."

I look around the room at the various clones waiting for treatment, and note the extent of their injuries.

"Was there some kind of incident? There seem to be a lot of clones here today."

written by Speeder on Jan 02, 2013 17:52

I get the microphone.

"Everyone, pay attention, someone dangerous, possibly wielding more explosives, is currently heading toward the loading dock observation platform in the B level.

That person MUST be stopped, any able clone is authorized to use whatever force is necessary to stop that clone.

Please, only try to make the clone stay alive enough so it can be interrogated."

I hope that the people in the meeting room had heard that, and then I try to figure if I can reach the clone destination first, or the turret control, and break into a run toward the one I can reach first.

written by Kristos on Jan 02, 2013 20:14

I lay on the floor, holding my eyes shut. Maybe if I can't see anything then I won't hallucinate? (Or maybe that just gives more room for imagination...) Come to think of it... it has been a while since I have slept, though I might have tranced off a few times. I try to sleep to avoid reacting to hallucinations. To aid in relaxing myself I think about the most relaxing flavour of B3 that I am aware of.

written by Gligar on Jan 02, 2013 21:58

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R gives a (slightly embellished) account of his injuries, and notes that there seems to be a lot of clones in here today. "There are always plenty of clones requesting treatment," the docbot replies. "It is not unusual here." It takes another look at Cyrus-R's visible injuries. "Very well. Lie down on the bed over there and I will begin treatment

written by Cryoburner on Jan 02, 2013 19:27

1. Tell clones to stop whoever is running toward the loading dock using whatever force is necessary.

2. Run toward loading dock.

>_>

written by Speeder on Jan 02, 2013 19:30

Yeah... That does not sounds that smart now...

appropriate to your security clearance and credit level." Some of the INFRAREDS (and the workers) try not to laugh.

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y gets on the mic and, after ensuring the PA is still online, he tells everyone that there is a dangerous clone running for the loading dock. Force is authorised but the clone must be captured alive if possible.

Then he sets off in pursuit. At a run. After he just told everyone that the clone would be running...

Sure enough, there is the sound of a laser pistol being fired as he runs down the corridor to the stairs.

As he passes, the cloning station door opens a little, revealing that Joris-O has re-cloned and is trying to figure out what's going on. He should really shower before doing do, though.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R lies on the floor, trying to ignore the hallucinations. Perhaps going to sleep would help? Well, not appreciable. Closing his eyes has the effect of him hearing the sound of many approaching jackboots, as well as commie-sounding voices. It'd be difficult to get to sleep with that racket going on.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 03, 2013 00:08

I sprint in the direction of the loading dock, weapon at the ready.

But I slow down once I get closer to the loading dock.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 03, 2013 03:57

"Well, it's good to hear there are lots of accidents to keep you busy. A docbot left idling around with nothing to do would be a waste of the computer's precious resources."

I make my way over to the bed and climb in as instructed.

written by Jam on Jan 03, 2013 04:49

"Ah!"

I also try to run in the direction of the loading dock.

"Don't let the clone get away!"

written by Speeder on Jan 03, 2013 12:47

As I get closer to the loading dock I also slow down, revolver in hand, to make clear I am not the guy fleeing there.

written by Kristos on Jan 03, 2013 14:36

Aahh! I jump up and try to close and lock the door. That sound is just too unsettling.

But maybe you should not have pointed it to Gligar 😊 He might have huh... not noticed... that.

But now reading your post, I am expecting a full scale civil war inside the bunker as several clones heading to the loading dock shoot each other.

written by Gligar on Jan 03, 2013 18:32

Corridor C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Clones begin running (and getting shot at, not that they actually get hit), notably L4-O and Jam-Y, who both struggle to ready weapons on the way. Joris-O still stands by the door in the cloning station wondering just what the HEL is going on.

Concourse B1, Emergency Bunker C-3

After sprinting down the stairs, Speed-Y realises that running might well make him a target, and slows down. This allows L4-O and Jam-Y to catch up, and do the same.

From the southeast comes the sound of a forkbot's engine revving.

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R believes it's a good thing there are lots of accidents (and he's right, due to CPU Mandate... er, is it 214/5847(d) or (e)? Basically, it's the one the states that bots must be in operation for a minimum period of time). He pulls himself over to the bed and climbs onto it as instructed.

The docbot trundles across and starts doing things involving big syringes, splints, pieces of unidentifiable metal (and I mean it this time) and a complete lack of anaesthetic. (Because Cyrus-R is only RED, after all.)

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R panics again, and fumbles to lock the door. Those jackboots are way too distracting. I wonder of the dancing fuzzy hats are any better.

Not that they last long, because as quickly as they appear, they vanish, along with the jackboots, leaving a silent office.

written by Speeder on Jan 03, 2013 19:37

"I hope this is Nukabot, otherwise we will be in trouble...

I would yell to someone stop the forkbot, but what if it is Nukabot?

Shit... massive failure on my part, acting before intel."

I continue moving the docks, and I hope I can stop the forkbot from the high place.

written by Jam on Jan 03, 2013 22:11

I jog toward the sound of the forkbot.

"Nukabot, is that you? What's happening?"

written by Gligar on Jan 03, 2013 22:51

Concourse B1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y hopes that the forkbot is Nukabot. He'd ask someone to stop it if it isn't, but he doesn't know for sure. He berates himself for not knowing the full situation before acting on it. He continues towards the observation platform.

Jam-Y follows him, calling out to Nukabot, asking if it is the origin of the noise.

Loading dock observation platform, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Once they arrive, it become apparent that it's more than one forkbot. One of them is Nukabot, which responds with, "I am here, citizens. As you can see, there seems to be a small problem." It has positioned itself so as to block a second forkbot from leaving. Aboard the second forkbot is a clone who seems to be one of the HPD&MC crew.

The rest of said crew cannot be seen from the platform, but can be heard talking. "Another traitor?" "They'll be hauling us all in next." "Quiet!"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 04, 2013 00:23

I frown, looking at the clone on the forkbot.

I level my blaster straight at him and say.

"Okay, off. It looks like we aren't quite done... extracting information, and you are our new volunteer."

written by Speeder on Jan 04, 2013 12:22

"YAY! MORE CLONES TO INCINERATE ONLY PARTS OF THEIR BODY WHEN THEY DO NOT COOPERATE!

PLEASE MISTER, DO NOT COOPERATE! I WANT TO TEST NEW METHODS OF TORTURE!!!"

written by Gligar on Jan 04, 2013 13:49

Loading dock observation platform, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O frowns and, aiming at the clone, orders him off the forkbot. It seems that they have a new volunteer for their interrogation. Speed-Y enthusiastically agrees, stating that he can attempt his partial incineration technique again.

The clone complies, and slowly gets off the forkbot. He turns, looks at the three Troubleshooters... Suddenly, the three are pulled to the platform, as if their bodies were three times heavier than usual. The clone tries to make a run for it but is cut off by Nukabot, who begins moving its forks to head level. "Where do you think you are going?"

The other HPD&MC workers don't dawdle, either. A few of them rush towards the clone and pile on top of him, in an attempt to stop him from going anywhere. I wonder why they don't use weapons?

written by Speeder on Jan 04, 2013 16:23

"What sort of mutation or tech is that?"

I struggle to stay standing.

written by Gligar on Jan 04, 2013 18:13

Loading dock observation platform, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y hasn't encountered anything - be it mutation or technology - that can make things weigh far more than normal like this. He wonders what could be causing it.

The HPD&MC workers continue attempting to restrain this traitor. However, they find it difficult to do so while floating in the air. Huh? How are they floating like that as if they're weightless? Well, on the plus side, Speed-Y doesn't have to struggle (and almost fail) to stay standing, since it seems the Troubleshooters have gone back to normal.

Hmmm. That might explain what's going on.

written by Speeder on Jan 04, 2013 19:26

"Jam, incapacitate him please?"

Just in case I aim my revolver at the guy, generally in the legs.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 04, 2013 22:03

I get back to my feet, and go back to aiming my blaster at the clone.

Or rather, if there is an empty space near the clone, I aim for it, aiming so I hopefully won't hit any of the HPD&MC workers.

If there's no gap, I just aim at the ceiling.

I pull the trigger, hopefully getting the attention of, or distracting the clone.

written by Kristos on Jan 04, 2013 22:09

I wait for the hallucinations (and gas) to clear, sitting (or laying) in silence.

written by Gligar on Jan 04, 2013 22:36

Loading dock observation platform, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y asks Jam-Y to incapacitate the traitor, but he aims his own "revolver" just to be sure.

Jam-Y does not reply. But L4-O is back on his feet and aiming his blaster. But not at the clone, since there are the HPD&MC clones floating around. No, he aims at the ceiling. It looks like he's more interested in creating a distraction, probably hoping that he'll stop doing the weights thing.

He fires at the ceiling. The result is quite a bot of noise from the blaster itself, as well as some dust from the impact point. Both cause the clone to look up... whereupon the HPD&MC clones fall to the ground. "Think you're clever, huh?" the clone yells up at them.

Whereupon the team starts falling up.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Pleased by the silence but not pleased by the apparent fact that he's still seeing things, Kris-R decides to just wait it out while lying on the floor. Well, since the gas has already cleared out somewhat, it doesn't take long before his vision clears.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 04, 2013 22:53

I look for the loading dock door close button. I start trying to float, or walk, or crawl towards it, whatever method of locomotion is most applicable at the moment.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 05, 2013 01:15

I watch the docbot.

"It's sure great that you have all this fancy medical equipment here. I may have just fashioned something out of office paper and sticky labels otherwise."

written by Gligar on Jan 05, 2013 14:24

Loading dock roof, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O falls onto the roof, noting as he does that he feels lighter than normal. A quick test shows that he can walk around normally up there.

He formulates an idea involving the door close button. It's normally meant to be accessed from A Level, but... perhaps he could get to it from here? Well, he could try to jump low enough to press it... or maybe he could use his length of ladder? It's short, but perhaps...?

He starts making his way over there.

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Ignoring the pain from the syringes and cutting implements - you know, the sort of pain that would make most clones scream and pass out - Cyrus-R tells the docbot that it's a good thing there is all this medical equipment.

The docbot - and some of the INFRAREDs - look at him. The docbot tells him, "Using sticky labels and paper would not appreciably help you, and leans in to perform some delicate work.

The INFRAREDs mutter amongst themselves. "He isn't reacting to the pain..." "that means..." "Quiet!" "I'm gonna..." One of them rushes out of the room.

Treason point to Cryoburner!

written by Jam on Jan 05, 2013 16:29

"Hmm... Gravity manipulation? Interesting... Wish I could do that..."

I try to "land", or at least make sure my head isn't going to hit anything. Then, I realize how awesome being weightless (or, negatively weighted) is...

"Ah ha ha! Hey, this is great! Weeeeeee!"

written by Cryoburner on Jan 05, 2013 18:53

I notice the syringes and cutting implements, and that they are apparently syringing and cutting me already.

"Oh, wow... I mean OW! OW!"

I promptly pass out.

written by Gligar on Jan 05, 2013 19:15

Loading dock roof, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

While L4-O continues to try to press the button from where he is - it turns out that, although the lighting trusses will just about hold his weight, they're rather unstable, not being designed for holding negative weight - Jam-Y seems to be enjoying this bout of weirdness. He seems to recognise the phenomenon as Gravity Manipulation, a mutation he doesn't have. (And a good thing too; he'd probably have to go in for either some severe therapy, or termination and repatterning, just to get under the legal registration limit, if he'd had another mutation on top of what he already has.)

Meanwhile, the clone seems to be trying to get round Nukabot somehow. Either that, or he's trying to alter its gravity and failing. He's distracted when L4-O reaches a spot above the button... but can't quite reach it.

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R proves that there is definitely something abnormal about him. I mean, he'd have to be heavily drugged to not notice those syringes and such before now. Or perhaps his mind is rebelling or something. Either way, he passes out.

The docbot continues to work for a while, then stops, having completed its task. Now, there is the matter of payment. But of course, Cyrus-R decided to be extremely late at passing out...

written by Kristos on Jan 05, 2013 19:47

"Ahhhhhh, that's better. I wonder how Cyro-R is doing? Hopefully his rest is leading to a quick recovery!"

I then remember my Vita-Yum bar and continue eating it and try to clear my mind. But I can't help but feel confused.

What should I do now? Continue testing barrels? I have already determined that there is a fault along the assembly line. Either a fault in the machinery or perhaps a clone causing problems with the assembly. But who could manage that? I guess a clone that has influence over machinery. That sounds like a mutation. What would it be called? I think I've hear this before. Was it... Mechanical Engineering? That sounds like a very dangerous mutation.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 05, 2013 20:54

I try my hardest to reach for the button and press it. If I fail, I just try throwing random stuff in my inventory at it, starting with the empty medkit.

written by Gligar on Jan 05, 2013 23:13

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Feeling a bit better after his lie down, Kris-R wonders what happened to Cryo-R. (He ran out of clones, remember? Or were you thinking of Cyrus-R, who is totally not a clone with suspiciously similar attributes? I guess this is what happens when [DELETED FOR SECURITY REASONS] their hand in the game.) He hopes that he's getting better.

Continuing to eat his Vita-Yum, Kris-R turns his thoughts elsewhere. Like, say, the matter of the laser barrels. Should he continue testing them? He already knows that there is a faulty production line, but how is it faulty? Does the fault lie with the machinery, or is someone deliberately tampering? And if it were someone tampering, how would they do that? Mutation? That... Mechanical thing? No, Machine... something... that would be dangerous. It sounds familiar... like he read it somewhere.

Loading dock roof, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O continues trying to get to the button. It's right there, but just out of reach... perhaps he could... jump! Nope, that doesn't work... how about poking it with something? Nope... to far. Oh wait... maybe it would like an empty medkit!

That works. The medkit collides with the button, pressing it, and causing the door to close. Nukabot rolled forward to allow it to do so, and the clone, tries to dive through the closing door... but only ends up getting his hand wedged between the door and the floor.

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The docbot begins rifling through Cyrus-R's things, finding his ME Card. It is permitted to do so under CPU Mandate 1981/85228[c] "Acceptable forms of payment (Docbot Fees)".

written by Cryoburner on Jan 05, 2013 23:47⁸¹⁵

I try regaining consciousness. After all, it would be most efficient to not take up space in the medical bay for longer than is absolutely necessary, seeing how busy it is around here. Also, I have that mission that I should probably attend to. Attending to missions while unconscious is usually rather difficult, unless perhaps the mission specifically calls for being unconscious.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 06, 2013 01:27

I brace myself for a crash against the floor, since having your hand crushed is probably pretty distracting to a mutant and its powers.

⁸¹⁵ CRYOBURNER: (OOC: Actually, he wondered how "Cyro-R" was doing, whoever that is. So many clones with similar names around here. : P)

written by Gligar on Jan 06, 2013 15:29

Loading dock roof, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O gets a sudden feeling. Normally, it'd be that sinking feeling, but since he's inverted, it's more of a rising feeling... He tries to brace himself...

Sure enough, gravity reasserts itself, and the three Troubleshooters find themselves in midair, with only one way to go: down. The fall to the floor with a crash which most likely hurts. It certainly knocks the wind out of them, though I don't think there'll be any major injuries this time.

The treasonous clone starts yelling obscenities at everyone.

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R stirs while the docbot scans his ME Card, almosty as if he's trying to come round. But in the end, it takes Our Mutual Friend to do it:

"Cyrus-R-NBV-1. My records show that you have not visited a confession booth in some time. Please report to the nearest confession booth immediately. Failure to comply will result in summary execution. Thank you for your co-operation."

written by Jam on Jan 06, 2013 16:41

"Weeeee-oof!"

I pick myself up.

"Aww... Well, that was fun while it lasted..."

I start walking over to the treasonous clone.

written by Gligar on Jan 06, 2013 19:29

Loading dock roof, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y is still a bit winded but is able to get back up. He's a little sad that it didn't last longer, though. Anyway, back to business: this clone. He walks over, causing the clone to glare at him. "Yeah? What do you want?"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 06, 2013 21:57

I attempt get up, wincing in pain, and start walking over to the clone too.

written by Gligar on Jan 06, 2013 23:55

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O recovers next. He makes his way over to the clone. Who, by the way, is still not saying anything, though L4-O does notice that he's trying to change gravity again.

Kristos-R comes over. "What is it with you guys? Is my entire crew made out of traitors? If this keeps up I'll have to report to a confession booth! Oh, by the way," he adds to the team, "we've finished in the dormitory. And the confession booths have been reworked to make them accessible from the corridor. They still need to be tested, though..." He trails off, and looks at the traitor, and smiles. "I think we have a good test subject right here."

written by Cryoburner on Jan 07, 2013 00:59

"Oh, wow! I get to have a talk with friend computer. Talking with friend computer is always fun! Say, where is the nearest confession booth?"

Seeing that the docbot appears to have completed his operations on me, I have a look at what he did.

written by Speeder on Jan 07, 2013 11:55

After I stand again and breathe a little...

"Oh, good idea! I would LOVE to see that!"

written by Gligar on Jan 07, 2013 14:16

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y agrees to Kristos-R's suggestion. It seems that he'd very much like to see the confession booths in use. "Just you try it," the traitor sneers. "Heh heh heh..."

"Oh, you're thinking of running on us if we let you up?" asks Kristos-R. "That's fine, I'm sure someone can remove that hand of yours!"

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R decides that he'd like to speak to The Computer... but that he'll need to know where the confession booths are. Looking over his body, he notes that the docbot seems to have grafted a metal spring where his missing foot used to be, in addition to having poked at him with a number of syringes.

The docbot, still holding Cyrus-R's ME card, replies, "They are down the corridor, citizen."

written by Speeder on Jan 07, 2013 14:27

I take a very careful aim, trying to hit the wrist, specially the bones, with my revolver, in a attempt to remove the guy hand so he can get freed from the door.

written by Gligar on Jan 07, 2013 18:48

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y decides that he should be the one who removes the traitor's hand. Of course, he doesn't want to use medical tools - probably because he has none - but instead uses his "revolver" in his attempt.

A loud noise ensues. Not just from the "revolver" but from the traitor, who now has a slugshot wound to the forearm. But his hand remains stubbornly attached to his arm.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 07, 2013 20:39

"Hmm. I think you're going to need a few more shots than that. Quite a few more."

"If there's any information you'd like to talk to us about, we might stop before your hand is all the way gone..."

written by Kristos on Jan 07, 2013 22:15⁸¹⁶

Perhaps I can learn something if I talk to the machinery. I stand up and stretch a bit and head out of the office, locking the door behind me. Then I begin walking back to the assembly lines. (But I listen carefully for the sound of suspicious clones. I'm starting to get nervous, and maybe even paranoid.)

written by Gligar on Jan 07, 2013 23:10

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O suggests to Speed-Y that removing the hand will take far more than just one slug. Perhaps their captive would like to share information with them before they continue? It would really be in the captive's best interests.

The captive continues screaming.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Perhaps deciding that he should look at the assembly line again, Kris-R gets up and stretches. before stepping out of the office, locking the door.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The corridor is busier than before; that is to say that there are actually a number of clones using it. They all seem to be heading away from the assembly lines. Kris-R seems to be the only one heading towards them.

Factory floor entrance, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Yet more clones are leaving the factory floor, this time heading down Corridor B. What is this?

written by Lightning4 on Jan 08, 2013 11:33

I simply aim my blaster at the clone's head, and wait.

written by Speeder on Jan 08, 2013 11:59

"SHUT YOUR MOUTH!!!"

I shoot his wrist again.

written by Gligar on Jan 08, 2013 14:01

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O joins in with weapons - not firing just yet, but at least with the aiming. In his case, of course, he's using his blaster, and he's aiming at the clone's head.

Speed-Y continues doing what he's doing, adding some yelling of his own into the mix. In his case, it's directed at the captive and telling him to shut up. And as for the shooting... yeah. He fires again. And once again, he his his mark.

The clone's screams die down, but only because he needs to breathe. The lull gives Speed-Y the chance to realise that he kind of looks similar to Mick-R, in a way. It's odd that he didn't note the resemblance before. His voice might be different, but the resemblance is there.

⁸¹⁶ KRISTOS: (OOC: Maybe I should just use the generic term "Crap-R" for all RED clones with names starting with 'C'. XD)

written by Speeder on Jan 08, 2013 14:29

I tilt my head.

"That guy? That guy... guy...?"

NO! I AM SEEING A ERASED CLONE!! AAAAH! I AM NOT SUPPOSED TO REMEMBER A ERASED CLONE!!! AAAH!!! NOOOOOO!! AAAAAAAH!!!"

I start to run in circles while flailing my arms.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 08, 2013 18:38

I look quite confused at Speed-Y's reaction. He seems familiar to me... but does he seem that familiar?

I tilt my head and look at the clone a little more thoroughly.

written by Gligar on Jan 08, 2013 19:16

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y looks at the clone again... and freaks out! He apparently believes that the clone reminds him of someone he shouldn't remember who was erased a couple of weekcycles back! And the thought of that... ugh!

He runs around flailing for a while, and, notably, doesn't shoot at the clone. Or anyone, for that matter.

L4-O, though, isn't so sure. He agrees that the face is familiar, but... now that he gets a closer look, he has to admit that he doesn't know this clone. Sure, it resembles that guy who had an unhealthy obsession with TECHNOLOGY, but wasn't he with R&D? This clones is clearly HPD&MC, and... say, when did they last see Technology Guy? It was... vatslime, it was earlier todaycycle, before the mission! So much has happened that he almost forgot!

Incidentally, this clone is still quiet, though it appears that he's trying his gravity trick again. Also, he's bleeding.⁸¹⁷

written by Lightning4 on Jan 08, 2013 22:00

I try to give him a good whack upside the head with the butt of my blaster, in attempts to stop his gravity altering.

written by Jam on Jan 09, 2013 01:23

I notice L4-O trying to hit the clone, and move to stop him.

"Hey, wait a sec! Why don't we just give him one of those pills that suppress mutations? I mean, it's a bit hard to question a clone if he's unconscious..."

I look toward the clone.

"Hey, you kinda look like Mick-R! Funny, I didn't notice that until now... Maybe you guys share a clone template or something..."

Well, anyway, I've got a question for you, Stefan-R! I should be pretty obvious, but there's always a chance this is all a big misunderstanding... So, why were you running from us?"

⁸¹⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: +1pp to Speeder for some funny freaking out 😊)

written by Kristos on Jan 09, 2013 03:59

I notice the manner in which the clones are leaving the factory floor. Does it look like they are just stopping for a meal? Or perhaps a mandatory drill? Or do they have that state-of-emergency appearance as they vacate the factory floor?

I proceed cautiously.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 09, 2013 09:52

“Oh, wow! I get a spring for a foot and everything. This is way better than my other foot, which isn’t connected to me anymore. Aside from the shooting pain, that is. Thanks, docbot!”

I try walking on my new foot to retrieve my ME card from the docbot, as long as he is done with it.

written by Gligar on Jan 09, 2013 14:27

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O decides to stop the clone from trying the gravity thing again. How? The simplest method, of course: whack him upside the head with his blaster. But Jam-Y stops him, pointing out that they could use mutation suppressants on him instead; it’s difficult to question someone if they’re unconscious, after all.

Jam-Y looks towards the clone and agrees about the resemblance... perhaps they had the same clone template or something. He then proceeds straight to the questioning, calling the clone by name as Stefan-R. He asks why Stefan-R was running. “I was sent to kill you,” he says simply. “I think you know who sent me.”

Factory floor entrance, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R looks at the workers. They don’t seem to be fleeing from anything; no, it’s more like they’re just going for a break. But why all of them at the same time? And besides, this doesn’t seem like the right time for a break. And wouldn’t they be talking amongst themselves? No... something else is happening. Kris-R doubts that it could be a drill due to the lack of blaring alarms and flashing warning lights and such.

He decides to investigate.

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

On entry, he immediately notices that the machinery has been shut down. For a factory floor, the silence is.. unnatural.

As clones continue to leave, Kris-R realises that there might be some stragglers.

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R thanks the docbot in his usual manner and gets up off the bed, intending to try walking on his new foot. He notes as he does that the dizziness previously associated with the action, acquired during the accident that cost him his foot, is gone, indicating that the docbot must have done something about his blood loss. But that is not as important as the fact that yes, he can walk again. This new foot is a bit bouncy, but is far preferable to not having a foot at all. Perhaps with a little practice, he wouldn’t go sproinging into the air as he tries to walk towards the docbot

Don’t worry, though. He doesn’t go so far as to hit his head on the roof or anything like that. He simply needs to grab on to the docbot, waiting as it is to return his ME Card, to steady himself.

written by Speeder on Jan 09, 2013 14:36

I approach the gravity clone guy, now KINDA more calm, only kinda.

I refuse to look on his face.

Sometimes when I know my eyes will cross with his eyes, I put a hand over my own eyes.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 09, 2013 15:40

I keep my blaster handy, just in case the clone does try anything funny... though he probably won’t in his current position.

I do look for any of that medication that can suppress mutations though.

written by Kristos on Jan 09, 2013 15:53

I ask a random clone, “Why is everybody leaving?”

written by Gligar on Jan 09, 2013 19:56

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y stops freaking out. But something in his expression indicates that he’s not completely calm. Maybe he should... but no, the team’s Happiness Officer isn’t here! I mean, he’d benefit from it. Look at how he’s shielding his eyes from time to time as he avoids looking at Stefan-R,

Which means that it’s up to L4-O to keep an eye on Stefan-R. Even while he rummages through his things looking for any of that mutation suppressant, though it becomes clear that he doesn’t seem to have any.

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R stops one of the leaving clones and asks why they’re all leaving. “Dunno,” is the reply. “Got told to by my supervisor.”

written by Cryoburner on Jan 09, 2013 22:32

“Thanks! Bye, everyone! Enjoy your medical treatment!”

I take my ME Card back from the docbot and proceed out the door and into the corridor, careful not to bump my head in the doorway, if that looks like it would be a problem. I then set out down the corridor in search of a confession booth.

written by Speeder on Jan 10, 2013 11:57

I decide that there is a easy way to ensure Stefan won’t run.

I sit on him, but with my face not facing his head.

written by Kristos on Jan 10, 2013 15:39

If I spot a supervisor-looking clone I repeat my question to him/her/it. Otherwise I cautiously continue to the factory floor, keeping my laser pistol ready in case there is a surprise mandatory accuracy and precision exam (or perhaps trouble that needs shooting).

written by Lightning4 on Jan 10, 2013 17:45

I lower my voice and speak only audibly to Jam-Y, hopefully. "It doesn't seem we have any of that medication... we'll need to either get some or think of something else."

written by Gligar on Jan 10, 2013 19:00

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Taking his ME Card back, Cyrus-R thanks the bot and heads out of the door (banging his head on the door frame on his way out).

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The first thing he notices is the large volume of clones heading down the corridor. Looking to where they came from indicates that they've all left the factory floor for some reason. He can tell because of the big doors down that end of the corridor.

Looking in that direction also allows him to see a sign, one that shows the confession booth symbol, pointing off to one side, partway between the medical bay and the factory floor's entrance.

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Meanwhile, on the factory floor itself, Kris-R has been looking for some sort of supervisor to question, without success. Presumably they all left first.

He proceeds further, passing between the assembly lines, until he heard the unmistakable sound of someone following him/

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y, though still freaked out, appears to want to help ensure Stefan-R doesn't get away (despite the fact that his hand is still caught under the main door) via the simple expedient of sitting on him. While not looking at his face.

Meanwhile, L4-O is explaining to Jam-Y (quietly) that he doesn't have any of the mutation suppressants, and believes that none of them do. They'll either need to get some or think of something else.

"Heh," Stefan-R grunts. "I love it when idiots aren't prepared."

written by Speeder on Jan 10, 2013 19:19

"I am prepared."

I take one of the guy legs and do some locking on it, enough to cause pain but not enough to break anything.

written by Jam on Jan 10, 2013 22:33

I facepalm.

"Didn't I have some mutation suppression pills somewhere?"

I search my registered mutant medications pack... Surely that's got some, right?

written by Gligar on Jan 10, 2013 23:18

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

While Speed-Y explains to Stefan-R that he is prepared, and proving it by getting the latter's leg into a painful-looking lock, Jam-Y tells L4-O that he probably has some of the suppressants, being a registered mutant and all. He opens his medication pack to check. There are not many, as it turns out, and they are labelled as being permitted only when directed, but there is a pack of them right down at the bottom - the small gold-coloured square-shaped ones.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 11, 2013 06:52

Since Speed-Y already seems to have the situation under control, I just... stand around now.

"So, I don't suppose you'll tell us what you know?"

written by Gligar on Jan 11, 2013 14:51

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Since Speed-Y seems to have it under control, L4-O takes no action, other than to ask Stefan-R if he'll tell them what he knows. "It takes more than pain to make me talk."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 11, 2013 15:20

"Are you sure? Pain is a pretty good motivator and all..."

I decide to try something a bit more... random. I grab my PDC, pick a random loyalty jingle, jack up the volume, and play it, aiming it at the clone.

written by Speeder on Jan 11, 2013 16:20

And I sing along (still handling the guy leg)

written by Gligar on Jan 11, 2013 19:20

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O doesn't agree with Stefan-R, believing that pain is a good motivator instead. However, with Stefan-R being stubborn, he decides to try something else:

Loyalty jingles at high volume. He's either expecting Stefan-R's treason to make the loyalty stuff repulsive to him, or perhaps the subliminals to make him talk... or maybe just the pain of it being at such a high volume will make him crack.

Of course, it's not just Stefan-R who has to listen to it. Everyone else does as well. A few, Speed-Y included, feel compelled to sing along... why is it just some clones singing? Everyone should be singing! Why isn't the Loyalty Office reacting to any of this?!

Well, Stefan-R is, at least. He's trying to cover his ears and yell "Lalalalala!" at the top of his voice, but of course he only has one hand to do it with. And in that situation, something has to give. His voice quickly gets quieter and his breathing more shallow.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 11, 2013 20:25

I move my PDC a bit closer to his head, and hum quite loudly along with the tune.

written by Jam on Jan 12, 2013 03:15

I start singing too!

Then I stop singing, and say something.

"Well, looks like these pills are YELLOW, and since I'm also a YELLOW, surely I can administer them to this clone... Maybe? Possibly? Oh well..."

I take one of the pills out and walk over to Stefan-R.

"Oh, looks like you're kinda zoned out... Perfect! Well, in you go then!"

I pop the pill into his mouth as far back as I can manage, and hold his mouth shut. I watch to make sure he swallows, and if he doesn't, I start to massage his throat.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 12, 2013 07:04

"Ow, ow, ow."

I start to massage my head where I bumped it, then look to the clones in the corridor.

"Hello random clones, where are you all going?"

written by Gligar on Jan 12, 2013 14:34

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Apparently not wanting Stefan-R to zone out, L4-O moves his PDC in closer, and starts humming along with the tune. But it doesn't seem to be having much effect...

Jam-Y also starts singing, likely hoping to set an example for those who aren't. However, he stops soon after to mention the mutation suppressants he found. It should be okay for him to administer one to Stefan-R, right? After all, Jam-Y is YELLOW, and the gold-coloured pills are apparently YELLOW as well, so there should be no problems!

He approaches with a pull in hand, opens Stefan-R's mouth - finding it not too difficult, as Stefan-R doesn't seem to be resisting - and rams the pill right down his captive's throat. Stefan-R suddenly coughs a bit in an attempt to dislodge the obstruction, but that just makes it go down further and he ends up swallowing it.

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Massaging his head where he bumped it, Cyrus-R approaches one of the clones and asks where they're going. "First," the clone tells him, "I'm not just a random clone. Second, why should I tell you where I'm going?"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 12, 2013 20:12

"I wonder if the pill will help make him more cooperative too... I guess we'll find out!"

I leave the music on, still aimed in Stefan-R's direction.

written by Gligar on Jan 12, 2013 20:37

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O wonders if that pill will do more than just suppress Stefan-R's mutation... perhaps it'll make him more co-operative? He keeps the music up, just to be sure.

Stefan-R doesn't move for a while, though he does open his eyes. "What... what did you do to me? A pill or something? I - I can't... concentrate... no need to..."

written by Cryoburner on Jan 13, 2013 01:01

"That is a very good point, random clone. However, the computer has tasked me with getting to the bottom of a supply issue apparently stemming from this factory, and a lack of cooperation could be viewed as an obstruction of duties. In fact, I was just on my way to hold a discussion with the computer right now..."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 13, 2013 02:04

"Ready to start answering our questions yet? Or rather, ready to start telling us what you know?"

written by Gligar on Jan 13, 2013 13:54

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Stefan-R is awake and speaking to the Troubleshooters. Good. This means that L4-O can begin with the questioning... assuming that Stefan-R will co-operate.

"What am I supposed to say? That I was told to kill you by a guy I've never even seen? That it's likely you'll not get the information you want even if you torture every clone in Alpha Complex? Or something else? Like, say, what if I told you that killing me would result in the destruction of this entire bunker?"

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R, it seems, is ignoring the clone's protests, claiming that his co-operation is required for his mission. "Again. I'm not random. If you were smart enough to ask me, you'd know who I was. And that I outrank you. Well? I'm waiting. Perhaps you can tell Our Mutual Friend that you obstructed me. Or maybe I will. I'm sure that'll go down extremely well."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 13, 2013 17:06

"I somehow doubt that, unless you managed to sneak in something that is far, far above your clearance. Far above mine as well..."

A look of concern does cross my face though. I glance around the loading dock for anything unusual that should not be here.

written by Kristos on Jan 13, 2013 19:26

I casually step around the other side of something nearby and listen to the footsteps, holding my laser pistol at ready. I prepare to question the follower, or fire if necessary to protect myself.

written by Gligar on Jan 13, 2013 20:21Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O doubts Stefan-R's claim. The only things that could cause that are things way above both of their clearances.

Combined.

But still, the tone of his voice indicates that L4-O is worried about it. Not to mention his suspicious glance around the loading dock. To his relief, he doesn't see anything that shouldn't be there (except for the other HPD&MC clones, but really, what's the chance that one of them is secretly a bomb? Right.)

L4-O looks back To Stefan-R, just in time to see the traitor's foot impact his face with considerable force.

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R ducks behind a packing machine and listens to whoever is behind him approach. He can hear the clone speaking, as over a PDC: "He might know I'm here... should I, you know...?"

The clone stops moving.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 13, 2013 23:52

"That is also a very good point. I will avoid wasting any of your time, since it seems you have someplace important to be, and important places are places one should be. I will be sure to put in a good word for you with the computer though. So long, random clone!"

I return to bounding down the corridor.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 14, 2013 01:26

I reel from the hit, unable to do much except attempt to recover.

written by Speeder on Jan 14, 2013 11:28

I attempt to figure who kicked who.

And if a enemy kicked L4, I kick him back.

written by Gligar on Jan 14, 2013 14:29Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

After being hit, there isn't much that L4-O can do except pull himself together. He's Armed Forces, though. He can cope with a boot to the head in about the same time it takes to say "he can cope with a boot to the head".

Speed-Y can't, so it's a good thing he wasn't the target. However, he did see exactly what happened: L4-O turned around, to find Stefan-R already in the process of kicking L4-O. This tells him that, perhaps, it would be in his best interests to intervene at this point, and perform an action such as, say, kick back. This is what he chooses to do.

His foot lands right on Stefan-R's already-injured arm, causing him to swing his other arm in an attempted punch. However, the fact that he has one hand trapped in the door gives him cause for concern when he accidentally breaks a bone in that arm in the attempt. And though the punch did not connect, he was successful in dislodging Speed-Y from on top of him.

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

All this is unimportant to Cyrus-R, though, who is still busy talking to the clone who refuses to be called random and claims to be a higher clearance. He decides to not waste any (more) of the clone's time, and wanders off. This leaves the clone to mutter to himself and pull out his PDC to send a message.

But Cyrus-R doesn't care about that clone. He's more interested in the confession booths, which are coming up just ahead. And look at that, there is no queue! How convenient! He'd better not keep Our Mutual Friend waiting (any longer than he already has).

written by Speeder on Jan 14, 2013 14:35

"Alright, you want to be free?"

I take out my weapon again and discharge it entirely where I had shot before previously.

written by Gligar on Jan 14, 2013 18:05Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

It seems, as Speed-Y observes, that Stefan-R wants to be free. AQnd, well, who is SPeed-Y to deny that request?

However, instead of re-opening the door, Speed-Y decides to take an alternative approach to freeing him; that is, he decides to sever Stefan-R's wounded hand from his arm.

Using slugs. Five of them, to be exact.

And it seems that his quick-fire skills with the "revolver" need some work: two slugs miss their target, and three hit but seem to miss Stefan-R's bones, instead hitting the surrounding soft tissue. That's looking kind of ... well, bad right now. Perhaps Stefan-R should see a docbot? 😊

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

As Kris-R waits, the clone continues talking over his PDC. "Understood. Moving in."

The clone approaches, cautiously, but again, he stops. This time, he reaches for something in his packet, does something to it, and throws it towards where he believes Kris-R to be, revealing it to be a smoke grenade.

An LED blinks a couple of times before the thing cracks open, releasing thick gas everywhere.

written by Speeder on Jan 14, 2013 18:22

I get upset. And kick the guy arm a bit.

[1279]

Until I calm down, then I get away from him and start to load my weapon again, and wonder if I had a slug of god or if it can really chamber 7 rounds.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 14, 2013 18:52

Angry, I get back up and kick Stefan-R in the offending leg.

written by Gligar on Jan 14, 2013 22:53

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

All this mess with Stefan-R is beginning to wear on Speed-Y's happiness level... one could almost say he was angry over it! See, he's responded by kicking at that arm, enough to break a bone or two (Stefan-R's, not his), but he's not so angry that he'd rip the arm off.

After a bit, though, he realises something. Did he fire six slugs from his "revolver", or was it somehow seven? He steps back to reload, and realises that he can't have fired seven, since the weapon can only hold six... yet my records show that he did. Then he notices some odd colour coding on one of the spent slugs, a code he has never seen before.

Meanwhile L4-O has moved in to attack. He's also kicking, but he targets the leg instead, you know, the one that kicked him. But his own kick seems relatively puny, and doesn't seem to do anything. Stefan-R replies with a kick of his own, which, due to the apparent pain he's experiencing, manages to miss.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 15, 2013 00:10

"How convenient!"

I proceed toward the confession booths.

written by Kristos on Jan 15, 2013 03:05

I run around to the side of the packing machine opposite the smoke grenade but try to keep a barrier between myself and the clone as I listen for his actions. Then I ask, "What's this? Who's there?"

If he does not respond but continues around the packing machine, then I attack. (If he is near me I try to land a punch and take his laser pistol if he has one. If he is far away I shoot with the laser pistol.)

written by Speeder on Jan 15, 2013 12:58

I ignore Stefan for now and get interested in trying to figure what is the crazy spent slug, first I touch it lightly to see if my fingers won't get burned, and when it is safe I pick it up and start to examine very closely, like a certain clone we know.

written by Gligar on Jan 15, 2013 14:38

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Seeing that there is no queue, Cyrus-R takes advantage of the convenience and enters a confession booth.

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R moves round the packing machine in an attempt to avoid both the smoke and the clone, while calling out, demanding to know who it is and what is going on. The clone keeps approaching, saying "You're a Troubleshooter! Me and my associates don't like Troubleshooters!"

He continues round the packing machine, only to discover that Kris-R has his fist ready. However, he manages to dodge Kris-R's punch; apparently, he's better at it than Kris-R.

But perhaps Kris-R had anticipated that. His hand moves, aiming down towards the clone's holster. And it seems that the clone hadn't anticipated that, since he is unable to prevent Kris-R from taking his laser pistol.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

On finding the odd spent slug, Speed-Y takes the time to examine it. The outward appearance is of a spent case from an ordinary 9mm slug, with an unfamiliar colour code. He touches it, and realises that it's hot. This prevents him from turning it around in his hand to examine it from all angles like a certain clone might have done, but nonetheless, he can get a good look at it. The colour code continues to elude him, though. Further examination will have to wait until it cools down.

And, of course, there's Stefan-R, who takes the time to try to kick at Speed-Y while he isn't looking.

written by Speeder on Jan 15, 2013 14:43

I get angry at Stefan again.

"Stop kicking me damnit!"

I kick the hot spent shells on his face.

Then I kick his groin.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 15, 2013 18:08

If I can, I try to wrestle Stefan-R into a position where he's prone, then I attempt to just directly stand on his legs so they stop moving quite so much.

I do momentarily think this plan sounded better in my head, but give it a shot anyway.

written by Gligar on Jan 15, 2013 19:30

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Yelling at Stefan-R to not keep kicking him, Speed-Y does some kicking of his own. First, he attempts to make the spent slugs from his "revolver" impact Stefan-R's face. One hits Stefan-R's left eye, causing him to flinch, close his eyes and grunt in pain. But that is irrelevant compared to Speed-Y's next shot... which causes Stefan-R to shriek and pass out. Again. He slumps back to the ground.

L4-O gets in on the action again. Stefan-R is already on the ground - saving L4-O a job - so he just straightens him out and, well, stands on his legs. It probably seemed like a good idea to L4-O.

Stefan-R doesn't react.

written by Speeder on Jan 15, 2013 20:05

"How we interrogate a passed out clone?"

Hey L4, do you have any explosives? I am missing exploding enemies."

written by Gligar on Jan 15, 2013 23:36

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y seems to be at a loss now. As you know, he likes to interrogate prisoners (despite the fact that The Computer, and IntSec, can do it far better and would much prefer that you leave it to them (not that anyone seems to have noticed)). But how does one interrogate an unconscious clone?

Oh well... if he can't interrogate him, he may as well blow him up! He wonders if L4-O has any explosives.

When he doesn't respond, one of the HPD&MC clones offers, "I've got some B3..."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 15, 2013 23:46

"That could work... and sadly, I'm pretty much out.."

I look sad.

"That mission depleted my supply. Also, perhaps we should throw him in the incinerator? What if he's got those nanobots in him too...?"

written by Speeder on Jan 16, 2013 12:14

I nod.

And then I think.

"He said something about if he dies the whole bunker gets screwed up no?"

written by Gligar on Jan 16, 2013 14:35

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O agrees that an explosion would work... but sadly, his supply of explosives is pretty much exhausted. He used a lot during the mission and hasn't had a chance to restock. Why don't they just throw Stefan-R into the incinerator instead? That'd take care of the nanomachines as well, right?

Speed-Y agrees, but remembers that Stefan-R said something about if he dies, the bunker dies too...

Probably nothing though, right? L4-O doesn't really believe it.

written by 4616599 on Jan 16, 2013 15:23

I head for the showers, wondering what all the screaming and loyalty jingles were about. I absent-mindedly start humming one.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 16, 2013 17:12

"Might just be a threat. Doesn't mean much, we already know there are secret societies after us..."

"Wouldn't hurt to take a look around the bunker for anything else out of the ordinary though... one of us should stay here and watch Stefan-R, the rest should examine the bunker."

written by Speeder on Jan 16, 2013 17:51

"Yes sure! I know what I have to examine!"

I suddenly scoot off, and take a look at my PDC.

written by Gligar on Jan 16, 2013 19:25

Cloning station, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Joris-R shakes himself out of his... whatever... and heads off to the showers, unaware of the reason for all the shouting and the loyalty jingle. Right now, all he needs to do is get clean and get himself a jumpsuit and such. And maybe get his equipment back from the meeting hall.

Chemical showers, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

You know the drill by now. Mask. START button. Optional loyalty jingle if one's stuck in your head, as is the case for Joris-O (or even if you just feel like singing, but remember the mask).

Well, that last isn't part of the drill, but what with the loud jingles form downstairs, Joris-O probably thought it was appropriate.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O tells everyone that the part about the bunker exploding or whatever might just be a threat. Not that it changes much; they already know that they're being targeted by secret societies. Though now he thinks about it, it would probably be a good idea to give the bunker the once-over and make sure everything's okay. Someone should stay behind and watch Stefan-R, though.

Obviously, Speed-Y doesn't want to be the one, as he runs off, exclaiming that he wants to check something. And equally obviously, the HPD&MC team don't want to stick around either. Kristos-R asks if they can leave.

written by Speeder on Jan 16, 2013 19:42

I wander toward the meeting hall, still fiddling with the PDC in hand.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 16, 2013 20:33

I look at Jam-Y and wait for a response. If he doesn't response, I do:

"I guess, if everything is complete?"

written by Kristos on Jan 16, 2013 21:33

I jump back and (spending a PP) fire the clone's laser pistol at him (or mine if his doesn't work), but attempt to avoid anything lethal. After all, my mission is solely to gather information.

"Me and my associates don't like trouble... and we suspect you have been causing a lot of it! What are you doing here?"

I sure hope this isn't that machine empath fellow...

written by Gligar on Jan 16, 2013 23:26

Chemical showers, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Joris-O continues humming his loyalty jingle as the shower switches to the rinse cycle.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

While Speed-Y heads upstairs - he's doing something on his PDC again - L4-O looks over at the work crew. Then at Jam-Y - he's higher clearance, after all - to see if he has anything to say about it.

But Jam-Y is staring off into space. He has that vacant expression again...

L4-O turns back. He guess it's okay for the work crew to leave, assuming that they're finished?

"Yeah," Kristos-R says. "We're done now. There's some forms to fill in, but we'll leave them in there. Whoever goes in there can fill them in and send them back himself. Right now, though, we've got another job to go to. And I have to explain to my supervisor why the crew is two clones short. Anyway, see you."

"Er," one worker interrupts. "How do we get out with the door closed?"

"We go up," Kristos-R tells him. "Follow me."

Kristos-R heads out, presumably heading for Concourse C1 and the stairwell to D Level.

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Meanwhile, Kris-R isn't going anywhere. He has this clone to deal with, who, as he points out, is most likely causing trouble, and he's here to shoot such things. So he does. With the captured laser pistol. The shot grazes the clone's shoulder, causing him to yelp in pain.

Kris-R demands to know what the clone is doing here. "Following orders!" is the reply. "Not that I'm telling you what they are!"

written by Jam on Jan 17, 2013 01:52

"..."

I start to drool a bit.

written by Speeder on Jan 17, 2013 11:53

I shout:

"Everyone on Kristos team is to stand-by on the exit, we need to search everyone for more explosives and crazy weapons, also I will request a mutant scanning team."

And then I proceed to continue walking, and attempt to do that request on my PDC and explain why.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 17, 2013 16:26

I look at Jam-Y, a bit worried.

"Um, Sir, are you there?"

written by Gligar on Jan 17, 2013 18:21

Chemical showers, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Though Joris-O doesn't seem to have noticed yet, the shower has finished its cycle and is now draining.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y seems to be having problems, like his brain isn't there or something. He starts drooling. Perhaps it's a mutant thing? Not that L4-O would know; all he can see is that Jam-Y is suddenly drooling idly. And that worries him.

Stefan-R twitches a little.

Stairwell, Emergency Bunker C-3

As Kristos-R's team passes him, Speed-Y tells them that they are to wait by the exit. They'll need to be searched, and he'll be calling in a mutant scanning team.

The team visibly seems to deflate. The prospect of yet more delays does not fill them with happiness.

But one of them tries to motivate the team. "Come on, citizens! If we don't comply, we'll all get terminated as potential Commie Mutant Traitors! And that would be a waste. I'm sure Kristos-R would not like to lose another clone... I mean... Rick-R's on his last clone, and I'm on number five... we can't afford to lose any more!"

"Oh, shut up..."

Speed-Y lets them continue on while he places a PDC call, requesting the mutant scanning team. He is told that there is currently a four-hourcycle waiting time.

written by Speeder on Jan 17, 2013 18:37

"Four-hourcycle?"

They won't wait four-hourcycle... And there was one deranged dangerous unregistered mutant with them, and a clone infected with a very dangerous thing of very high clearance that could kill everyone with a nature that I don't have permission to tell you...

Please, cannot you do anything about it? Maybe a special request, so they wait a little less? Like, three hourcycles instead of four?"

I remain walking.

written by Gligar on Jan 17, 2013 23:19

Corridors, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

As he continues to walk, Speed-Y explains that four hourcycles is too long; the clones won't wait that long. Can they do anything about that? He reiterates the urgency of the request.

He is told that four hourcycles is the mandated queue length. Has he ever been in a PLC queue? They operate on the same principles, and no, there is nothing they can do. Unless he's willing to do something to speed it along, such as make a donation to the office party fund...?

Soon, he reaches the concourse. Kristos-R's team is waiting.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 18, 2013 05:51

I continue keeping my weight on Stefan-R's legs so he doesn't more or flail anymore. Not that it should, he seems to be in pretty bad shape.

written by Speeder on Jan 18, 2013 11:11

I turn to Kristos.

"They want to know if you want to make a donation to the office party fund... You know, just to help them, when they have help they can work faster, and thus make you wait less than four hours, if you get what they are saying."

written by Gligar on Jan 18, 2013 14:22

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y explains the situation to Kristos-R, and mentions the office party fund. "Hmmm, well..." he says, "not really sure I should... what do you guys think?" The HPD&MC team starts to discuss. One points out that this sounds fishy, like there's something up. Another reminds them that it might just be an ordinary party fund, you know, like they have...

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O keeps his weight on Stefan-R's legs so that he won't flail around. It doesn't look like he will, though; he's just twitching.

written by Speeder on Jan 18, 2013 14:26

I take the PDC away from me and mutter.

"Party fund sounds... commie.

Or it is really about throwing parties?"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 18, 2013 14:49

"Are you still with us, sir?"

I continue looking at Jam-Y, wondering what's wrong with him.

written by Gligar on Jan 18, 2013 18:55

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

The team's doubts about the alleged party fund have spread to Speed-Y. He can't decide whether the fund is suspect or really just for throwing parties. "It might not be the commies," Kristos-R says. "It could be someone like Free Enterprise, in which case they're trying to set something up in this sector (if there isn't something here already, I mean I don't know either way)..."

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O looks over at Jam-Y again, the concern now more evident than ever. Just what is up with Jam-Y?

Chemical showers, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

The shower room finishes draining, and the fans fire up. At the same time, the door unlocks.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 18, 2013 19:16

Since I haven't gotten around to this clone yet, I decide to start searching him for anything useful.

written by Speeder on Jan 18, 2013 19:24

I think a bit.

"I wonder why Friend Computer do not help Free Enterprise... I mean, they are not the opposite of commies?"

I talk into my PDC.

"So... what is that... party fund... it is for a party as in, throwing parties, or party as in, commie party, or party as in... something else?"

written by Kristos on Jan 18, 2013 22:11

I shoot at the clone again, this time not taking care to avoid anything but just aiming straight at him. Then I look to see what color the laser barrel is.

written by Gligar on Jan 18, 2013 23:42

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O turns his mind away from Jam-Y for the time being, and back to Stefan-R. He decides that, since Stefan-R isn't going anywhere and is not in a condition to object, he should be searched. And doing so reveals... not much, really. Only an ME Card, a PDC, a laser pistol with an RED barrel, a couple of grenades, and some sort of... well, there are only so many things that have a timer and a power pack connected to something malleable that L4-O can probably guess what it is.

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y wonders why Our Friend doesn't help Free Enterprise... but then he remembers that their methods are... different, to say the least. (Have you seen their money lenders? It's not just the 2000% interest rates, it's what they do to you if you don't pay them...) He also remembers that they're still a secret society; true, they offer useful services but still.

But back to that party fund. It's time to ask directly what the fund is used for. "Oh, it's for parties! You know, parties, those things that make people happy? You never know when you're going to receive a Mandatory Instant Party order, after all. It just pays to be prepared," is the prompt reply.

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R shoots again. It's a nice hit, right in the torso. He'd be dead if it weren't for the reflec. He'll still be dead if he doesn't see a docbot soon, given the way he falls to the floor.

[1283]

Not that that's taken care of, Kris-R can check out the laser's barrel. For some reason he hadn't been able to tell what clearance it was. It turns out that it's RED, and has 3 shots remaining. But there's something odd about the business end... it looks like it's been modified somehow.

Come to think of it... maybe it has something to do with his initial inability to discern the barrel's clearance.

written by Jam on Jan 18, 2013 23:52

I stare blankly... then I suddenly gasp.

"MINE!"

I dive for the RED laser pistol barrel.

"Gimme gimme! I saw it first! It's all mine!"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 19, 2013 02:30

I sigh upon finding the bomb. I at least check to see if it's armed, trying to avoid being distracted or otherwise knocked over by Jam-Y.

written by Gligar on Jan 19, 2013 17:03

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Yep, it's a bomb.

But before L4-O can do anything about it, Jam-Y suddenly comes round and makes a dive for that laser pistol. He really loves laser pistols, doesn't he? L4-O gets out of his way, allowing him to grab it and add it to his collection.

Meanwhile, L4-O looks at the bomb. It doesn't seem to be armed but could certainly blow up good if it were. The question is, what was Stefan-R doing with it? How did he get hold of plastic explosive? That stuff's BLUE Clearance, after all...

written by Speeder on Jan 19, 2013 17:34

"I see..."

Alright...

So, how do they donate to your party fund?"

I look to Kristos.

"He assured me that it is a completely legal fund to make people happy, specially when there are a mandatory instant party order."

written by Jam on Jan 19, 2013 21:14

I look at the bomb.

"That's a bomb!"

I stare blankly at it for a while.

written by Gligar on Jan 19, 2013 21:31

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y relays the information about this Party Fund to Kristos-R, who relaxes a little. Just one more thing he needs: how do they pay into it? "That's easy enough, citizen," his is told. "Just authorise a funds transfer to this office. I'm sending you the details now."

Speed-Y's PDC beeps, indicating that a data packet has arrived. It would have helped if he didn't have his ear right next to the thing, though.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y looks over at the bomb, and correctly identifies it as a bomb. Though, he seems to be at a loss as to what to do about it...

Perhaps it really is a mutant thing. Say, isn't there something that registered mutants are supposed to do occasionally?

written by Speeder on Jan 19, 2013 21:38

I cringe at the beeping noise.

Then I forward the thing to Kristos PDC.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 20, 2013 03:06

"Why yes, sir. It is! I should probably keep this safe."

First, I check the bomb for safety against it accidentally going off. If it's not safe, I try to make it so.

Then I put it away.

written by Jam on Jan 20, 2013 04:57

"We should... oh, I guess you've got it... Carry on..."

I watch L4-O deal with the bomb with a vacant, somewhat-puzzled expression on my face.

written by 4616599 on Jan 20, 2013 13:43

"No forms to fill? Good. Shouty noises..."

(or if there are in fact forms to fill, I do them, while still whistling a loyalty jingle. Those things are catchy.)

I grab a jumpsuit and carefully walk toward the source of the noises.

written by Gligar on Jan 20, 2013 15:05

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Winning at the sudden noise, Speed-Y hits Forward and sends the account information to Kristos-R, who then shows it to his workers. "So what do you all think? Want to contribute?"

They begin to discuss again, only this time the tone is more positive.

Back on the PDC, Speed-Y is told that he must be quick about his reply, as they are nearing the mandatory maximum call length.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O agrees that it's a bomb, and looks it over again. He notes that the timer is just a standard E-Z-Alarm - you know, the one with the touch controls. They sometimes react if you so much as walk past them. (It still passes The Computer's guidelines for safety, as it's easy to use, and any frustration is clearly a sign of commie taint. Only commies would be unhappy with an E-Z-Alarm!

[1284]

He looks at the wires connecting together. They're right there, but there are more than he anticipated; would he like to cut some of them?

Jam-Y wonders what L4-O will do with the bomb. He still stands there with a vacant expression on his face, but he continues to watch L4-O.

Cloning station, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Ah, good. Joris-O has found the cloning forms (on the terminal, as you may remember). It's not as if they're hiding anywhere.

Next order of business: jumpsuits. As luck would have it, they are also in evidence. They may only be RED jumpsuits, but they are at least present. Joris-O grabs one and idly wonders where his equipment went to, before realising that it's probably still on his previous clone.

That leaves one more thing: those shouty noises. He recalls them coming from downstairs...

He heads out, apparently not noticing that he forgot to actually put the jumpsuit on.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 20, 2013 16:08

I take a moment to address Jam-Y.

"Everything okay, Sir?"

I look the bomb over a little more, not deciding on taking an action quite yet.

written by Speeder on Jan 20, 2013 16:16

"I think there will be a contribution."

I turn to them.

"We are nearing mandatory maximum call length, please, can I confirm they will receive a contribution?"

I turn to the PDC again.

"If there are a contribution, then when you will be here?"

written by Jam on Jan 20, 2013 17:43

I blink a few times.

"Yes, of course... Just a bit... uh... muddled..."

I shake my head a bit, trying to clear it.

"Could you go get me a B3? I can hold the bomb if you want."

written by Gligar on Jan 20, 2013 19:37

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Asking if Jam-Y is okay again, L4-O has another look at the bomb. He doesn't learn anything new, except for the fact that there seems to be something else hidden between the E-Z-Alarm and the battery pack. There seem to be several wires leading to it.

Jam-Y says he's okay, just a little muddled for some reason. He asks for a B3, and offers to hold the bomb while L4-O is away. Perhaps the B3 will clear his head - shaking it doesn't seem to work.

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y presses Kristos-R for an answer as they're running out of time, and asks the scanning office what the delay will be if they do make a contribution. "If you're willing to make a contribution, we could probably get a team out in... twenty minutecycles."

Kristos-R speaks up. "We're going to make a... contribution." He does something to his PDC. "And it's sent. I hope this is worth it."

written by Speeder on Jan 20, 2013 19:59

"Alright, he already sent it, thanks!"

I turn to Kristos.

"He said they will be here in twenty minutecycles.

I hope noone of your team attempts to run away, doing that of course means I will have to send people to capture and interrogate.

But I am sure that probably there are no more traitors in your team, and noone will have nanomachines or unregistered mutations, right team?"

I look at them, grinning.

written by Gligar on Jan 21, 2013 14:32

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y does his relaying again, and adds that he hopes that the team won't try to run away, or that any of them have mutations or nanomachines that they're not telling anyone about. But the way that he says it, and that grin... it would make the team worry if worrying were allowed. Instead, they just smile. "No need to worry about that sir!" one says. "I'm sure that there are no ^{more} Commie Mutant Traitors here!"

The clone on the PDC says, "Yes, there we are, I see the payment. Is there anything else I can help you with?"

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Joris-O looks to have made his way down to the loading dock, while still forgetting to actually wear the jumpsuit. Do I have to throw a ring-for-service bell at him?

written by Speeder on Jan 21, 2013 14:40

"No, I don't think so, thanks!"

then I look to them.

profoundly.

And wander off to the camera room.

written by 4616599 on Jan 21, 2013 16:03

I notice the apparent intruder CMT fellow and confidently stride toward him.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 21, 2013 16:09

I try to get a better look at the thing hidden in the bomb.

written by Jam on Jan 21, 2013 18:46

I rub my face a bit, and mumble.

"Didn't I just... Oh, nevermind, I'll get it myself..."

I start searching for a vendobot.

written by Gligar on Jan 21, 2013 19:30

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y happily assures the clone on the other end that there is nothing else, and hangs up.

Wait, did he just hear...

He glares in the direction of the HPD&MC crew, and then wanders off into the control room.

Kristos-R wonders, "What was that about?"

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Joris-O approaches Stefan-R, who is still unconscious and not moving, so he can't see that Joris-O still hasn't put on his jumpsuit. From here, Joris-O can see that Stefan-R has his hand stuck beneath the loading dock's main door. Said hand is partly crushed by the weight of the door.

L4-O seems to be ignoring everything except for the bomb. He tries to figure out what the hidden thing is. By prodding things and moving wires around, he can see that it is some kind of sensor package. As he prods it, something on the bomb beeps.

Jam-Y ignores everything except his lack of B3. He thought he'd asked for some... never mind. He wanders off in search of a vendobot.

Corridor A1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Now, where would a vendobot be...?

written by Speeder on Jan 21, 2013 19:45

I keep a eye on the Concourse, from the camera.

I also attempt to at the same time look into other places to see if I can find anything strange.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 21, 2013 20:10

I look concerned and check the timer on the bomb.

I also start estimating just how much blasting force this kind of bomb should be capable of, since I believe it's rapidly becoming relevant.

written by Jam on Jan 21, 2013 20:13

I suddenly stop searching.

Wait...

That was Joris-O, right?

And... There's a mutant there. A disabled mutant...

That will blow up the bunker if he dies.

And then I won't be able to get my B3.

Uhh...

"Oh no..."

I slowly turn around, and start heading back to Joris-O.

"Waaaaait... Don't blow up B3... Jooris!"

written by Gligar on Jan 21, 2013 23:28

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

While keeping an eye on the concourse on one screen, Speed-Y starts switching the other one through other cameras, looking for anything unusual.

I'm not sure whether Joris-O being out on uniform down on A Level counts, but... there it is.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

It's certainly unusual as far as Jam-Y is concerned. He seems to have realised something about Joris-O - and not just that he's out of uniform. It is a cause of concern to him that Joris-O is so close to a proven mutant... one who could probably blow up the bunker if he dies! He runs back in, yelling at Joris-O not to blow up his B3 (wherever it might be).

L4-O, on the other hand, has other problems. Specifically... the timer on the bomb has just activated! It's showing 20 minutecycles, and starts counting down as he watches. 19:59, 19:58, 19:57...

Which leads to his next question: how powerful is this thing? Perhaps a better question is what plastic explosive is this? Effectiveness ranges from grenade strength up to, well, take out half the bunker! He wracks his mind further, trying to think... it could be that type... he saw a load go off once in a bomb range, and from what he remembers, it easily took out the mockup commie command centre. No wait... it only did that because there were generators nearby...

written by Jam on Jan 22, 2013 00:39

I continue running toward Joris-O.

"Jooooori—"

I suddenly stumble, and end up tripping over my own feet.

"Aaah..."

Strangely, as I fall, my face still seems to have a blank expression, with only a slight hint of surprise. Then it shows a scrunched up expression, gets several new scrapes and bruises, and starts bleeding as it slides across the floor.

"Ow."

After that particularly spectacular faceplant, I decide to stop moving for a bit.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 22, 2013 02:08

I sit down on the hopefully still inactive commie traitor, and start puzzling over the bomb.

"Hm. Not good... not good at all. Looks like the right clearance too..."

I start tracing a few wires from their origin to destination, and start hopefully planning a course of action. Though I'm not exactly a tech clone...

"Hmph... usually I'm accustomed to blowing these up, not figuring out how to stop the explosion..."

written by Kristos on Jan 22, 2013 05:43

I'll have to further study the modified laser barrel later.

"Now what should I do with this troublesome clone? Would you like to bleed to death or would you like to see a docbot?"

I look to see if the clone is wearing or carrying any unusual equipment. I'll have to check his pockets later.

written by Gligar on Jan 22, 2013 14:46

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

I don't know whether Joris-O heard him, but he certainly does not react when Jam-Y continues to run towards him... and suddenly trip over nothing and perform a humorous faceplant somewhere in the vicinity of Nukabot. Strangely, this doesn't seem to surprise Jam-Y. Perhaps he was expecting it? Or maybe he just doesn't care about anything other than consuming some of that delicious, delicious B3 that he was previously going to obtain.⁸¹⁸

Either way, it doesn't matter to L4-O. He's sat on Stefan-R, trying to figure out how to disarm this bomb. He notes several wires leading between the sensor suite, the timer and the explosive. A couple of the explosive-to-timer wires are the same colour as a couple of the timer-to-sensor wires. There are more that are similar colours, but a few that don't seem to match with anything at all.

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R puts the modified laser pistol barrel away. Right now, he has more pressing things to worry about, like this commie mutant traitor. If only his Loyalty Officer were here. Perhaps he could try actually being a Loyalty Officer for a chance... perhaps he could make that rare piece of evidence known as a recording! But he isn't, so he won't get to make the recording... oh well. And given that Kris-R just gave the traitor the opportunity to either bleed to death or go see a docbot, and that the traitor has not responded, he most likely never will have the chance.

Satisfied that he won't be suddenly interrupted by the CMT suddenly waking up or something, Kris-R gives the clone another glance, seeing if he has something... interesting... showing. Hmm... nope, doesn't look like it.

written by Speeder on Jan 22, 2013 15:10

I stare at the screen upon seeing Joris naked.

"Sometimes my team is very... surprising."

I then wander to the meeting hall.

I get bored there, and decide to play the tape and keep looking at the gears of the tape reader, just to see if they are working fine or something.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 22, 2013 20:02

I sigh and start thinking of a relatively safe place nearby to disarm the bomb. Perhaps out on the roadway to the Industrial Subsectors... there shouldn't be many clones out there at the moment...

written by Gligar on Jan 22, 2013 20:06

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y seems surprised at Joris-O's compulsive forgetting-to-put-on-his-jumpsuit...ness. Sometimes, his team just... surprises him.

But, since that is all that seems to be unusual right now, he quickly gets bored and heads back into the meeting hall.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Everything is still as they left it... including Joris-O's corpse, and his equipment (what little he had).

But Speed-Y is not interested in that. He heads over to the tape machine, the tape still mounted and still in pause mode. He restarts it and glances at the tape reels. They're... spinning, and seem to be at a constant speed. It looks like it's working without problems.

The vidscreen comes to life again, displaying the same scientist as before, as well as some other clones, some of which are not R&D. "Trial six... no, scrap that. This is no mere trial..."

"Daycycle 1 after Reanimator release: Though reports from survivors are sketchy at best, I can begin to piece together the events immediately after release. It seems that the canister was stolen, not to release to the sector as a whole, but to revive just one clone: the so-called head of this Church of the Easter Cycle. I still don't have his identity, but it seems that it's the previous clone of a prominent high-clearance clone... I just don't know which one..."

"Anyway, it seems that the revival was successful. Only... the Easter Cycle has... done something. I don't yet know how, but their revived clone somehow retained his mental faculties - "

The scientist is interrupted by the voice of The Computer, the same then as it is now (only distorted by, presumably, the camera): "Attention, citizens! The ratio of living to dead citizens in your current sector has dropped below the minimum viability level. To contain the contagion, CRS Sector will now be sealed off for your comfort and security. Well, not your comfort and security - everyone else's in fact. Thank you for your co-operation."

" - and it looks like we're on our own in dealing with it," the scientist finishes, looking rather deflated. "First, I want to find out how they did it, and duplicate it. That way, if we turn, we can carry on as normal."

⁸¹⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: +1pp to Jam 😊)

[1287]

The tape stops.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O starts thinking about disarming. No, not himself, but the bomb. To do that, of course, he will need space.

Space such as the roadway; they shouldn't be anyone there right now. Yes, that should work. Can he trust Stefan-R to not move while he opens the door?

written by Speeder on Jan 22, 2013 21:50

I look at my PDC, just to see... something.

Maybe if there are no message coming to inform me that I just saw something very weird and treasonous.

Then I start to run around the room kinda panicking for a while.

"AAAAAH, THIS WAS NOT THERE BEFORE!! AAAAAAH!!!"

Then I stop, take a breath and think.

"I think I... pressed play... and..."

AAAAAH!!!"

Then I stop again, and stare at my PDC.

I then check if the tape is ended already or not.

written by Gligar on Jan 22, 2013 23:26

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

When the tape stops, Speed-Y glances at his PDC. He has no messages.

The he realises something, and starts panicking. He's just seen treasonous information! Information that wasn't there before!

He tries to remember where it came from. He pressed play, and there it was...

He calms down slightly and looks at his PDC again. Nothing obvious happens.

He looks back at the tape. There is still more tape to play, but the tape has paused itself again.⁸¹⁹

written by Lightning4 on Jan 22, 2013 23:41

I look at Stefan-R to see if he's still unconscious or not. Or possibly dead... I start to wonder about the sensor and the clone being alive or not...

written by Jam on Jan 23, 2013 00:32

I try to pick myself up...

"Ow... Joris-O... Bomb... B3..."

I unsteadily walk towards Joris-O.

written by Speeder on Jan 23, 2013 11:58

I go sit in a corner, fidgeting, my head facing the corner.

⁸¹⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: +1pp to Speeder 😊)

written by Gligar on Jan 23, 2013 14:22

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O checks over Stefan-R. He's alive, but his breathing is shallow, and his heartbeat is weak. It's only a matter of time, L4-O thinks. Perhaps only twenty minutecycles.

Well, 19 now.

Speaking of 19 minutecycles... L4-O looks back at the sensor. Perhaps it's linked to Stefan-R's life signs? But if that's the case, it can't be something as simple as "life signs" versus "no life signs", since the timer is active, and he's still alive...

Jam-Y struggles to pick himself up. He still has it in his mind that reaching Joris-O is a top priority. Luckily, however unsteady he might be, Joris-O is just standing there, doing nothing. He's able to reach him without too much trouble.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

In his panic, Speed-Y ends up in the corner, staring at the wall...

written by Speeder on Jan 23, 2013 14:30

I suddenly stand. Walk VERY SLOOOOWLY toward the tape.

Then I stay away from it that I can find possible, stretch myself the most that I can, and touch the play button like if it was a dangerous animal, and then as soon it starts playing I recoil and stand back, looking at the screen like if it was a bomb.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 23, 2013 14:59

I get up and decide to risk it. I get my blaster in hand, and go over to the door button.

I look around to see if there are any other clones here that can press the button again after I am out.

written by Jam on Jan 23, 2013 19:48

I search Joris-O, and note that he has neither B3 nor bombs. Then why was I so concerned with getting to him? Oh well...

I walk over to L4-O...

Oh, the bomb has a countdown now? Looks like there's still some time left, I should be able to get some B3 by then. Maybe Speed-Y has some...

I start to head toward C level, since that was the last place I remember Speed-Y being.

written by Gligar on Jan 23, 2013 20:11

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y doesn't look to have calmed down yet, but he still moves.

Back to the tape machine. Though he looks like he doesn't want to.

He stops short, though, and slooooooowly reaches out to hit the play button again. And almost falls flat on his face while doing so, but that is irrelevant. What is relevant is that he recoils the instant he presses it, acting as if the button, and the vidscreen, were on fire.

He half-runs-half-jumps back from the vidscreen and glares at it, almost compelled to watch, but at the same time treating it as if it will explode in, say, 18 minutecycles...

As expected, the tape shows the scientist again. He seems to be in a different location from before. Some assistants are also present - well, they might be assistants, it's difficult to tell. Notably, there are also a few INFRAREDS there as well - I doubt that they're assistants; they might well be survivors.

He dictates, "Daycycle 2 after Reanimator release: The local compnode went down last nightcycle. It's probably been isolated after the outbreak... perhaps the shock caused it to reboot. It hasn't come back yet.

"But that's not all. It seems that the report of intelligent reanimated clones was true; I saw some in R&D after the compnode went down. They look and act just like the living! The only difference is the hunger for brains... but they're researching that difference!

"This is worse than I thought. But their presence suggests a possibility..."

The tape jumps. The scientist is now back in the lab. "I think I know how they did it. It involves preserving the brain somehow after death... and a big jolt of electricity when the nanomachines go online. We're about to test my theory; I was right to assume that we would have ample test subjects." The scientist moves, revealing a body on a table. He tells someone off-screen to "throw the switch."

We don't see the results, because the tape stops at that point.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Meanwhile, L4-O has decided to risk disarming the bomb. He now only has 17 minutecycles to do it, after all.

He readies his blaster and heads for the door control. Before he presses it, though, he looks back. Perhaps either Jam-Y or Joris-O could close the door after him?

Though given the way Jam-Y wanders off, it looks like he is not an option this time. Perhaps Joris-O?

written by Lightning4 on Jan 23, 2013 22:25

I look at Joris-O for a few minutes, but decide he's probably not going to do anything.

"Nukabot, I don't suppose you can hit this button somehow?"

I think for a moment while I await the reply, then realize something.

"Oh, better idea! You can just park on Stefan-R here. He won't be going anywhere with a big heavy forkbot on him... and that'll let us get outside again!"

written by Gligar on Jan 23, 2013 23:14

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O considers Joris-O for a while... but realizes that the naked clone is probably not going to be of much help. Then he has an idea: what if Nukabot could press the button? "That is a possibility," Nukabot says. "However, it will be difficult to get to the button without running over Stefan-R. I am aware that he is a Commie Mutant Traitor and is therefore not protected by my directives, but I am also aware that terminating him may well result in the detonation of the bomb you carry."

But L4-O realises something else: Nukabot could instead park itself on top of Stefan-R! "That will also work. In the interests of keeping him alive while the bomb is dealt with, I propose to park such that my forks are on top of him. The force of my motors should keep him down."

12 minutecycles...

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y finds Speed-Y in the meeting hall... and the HPD&MC team lounging around in the concourse... but Speed-Y is more interesting. Why? He is looking at the vidscreen with an expression suggesting barely-controlled terror. The vidscreen itself is showing a frame from the tape, depicting the scientist with a body on a table. The scientist is looking off-camera.

written by Jam on Jan 24, 2013 01:37

I look at Speed-Y.

Hmm... That's not the expression that someclone would make if they had B3.

I look up at the vidscreen.

Hmm... That doesn't look like a B3 commercial.

I look back at Speed-Y.

"What's with that face? The vidscreen's not going to eat you..."

written by Speeder on Jan 24, 2013 02:13

I SLOOOOWLY turn my face to Jam, yeah, THAT way.

Then I look at the vidscreen again.

And then I point to the play button.

"Can you press that button, PLEASE?"

And then I watch the vidscreen intently, but also almost freezing in terror.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 24, 2013 15:56

"Good. Make it so, then."

I press the button and get ready to bolt out of the loading dock door as soon as it is open enough.

written by Gligar on Jan 24, 2013 18:36Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y looks at Speed-Y, wondering just why he has that expression; it's not like the screen's going to hurt him. (Even though it looks nothing like a B3 commercial.)

Speed-Y responds by turning, slowly, and asking Jam-Y to press play on the tape. He kind of sounds - and looks - like he could use a B3 himself. And from the sudden "B3 is a really, really good idea right now" vibe he's getting, there is an active B3 vendobot in the room. But of course you remembered that, didn't you?

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O decides to allow Nukabot to do its thing as he presses the button.

The door rises, revealing that Stefan-R's fingers will most likely have to be amputated.

It rises further. L4-O doesn't wait for it to get to head height as he rolls under it, gets to his feet, and runs.

written by Speeder on Jan 24, 2013 18:41

I go buy a B3...

If after buying the B3 Jam still did not pressed the PLAY BUTTON, I do so, very calmly this time, probably because of the B3.

I also watch whatever the contents of the tape happily, like if I was in a entertainment movie session...

Maybe because drinking B3 in entertainment session although not mandatory it is HIGHLY RECOMMENDED.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 24, 2013 18:46

I just keep running away from the domescraper, looking for the nearest wide, empty space to conduct the disarming. If I can, I check the time on the bomb again.

written by Jam on Jan 24, 2013 20:18

I notice Speed-Y heading toward the vendobot... Could it be he's buying a B3 for me? Yay!

I start to look especially excited.

Wait, he wanted me to press a button, right? Okay...

I press the play button. Then I notice Speed-Y walking towards me, carrying—

"A B3! Oh, thank you!"

I dive toward him and try to take the B3. If I'm successful, I start drinking it as fast a possible.

written by Gligar on Jan 24, 2013 22:40Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y doesn't bother to resist the vendobot's subliminal advertising and goes to buy one. He is watched intensely by Jam-Y who, as you'll recall, came here to find some.

Dutifully, the vendobot dispenses a can. "Enjoy, citizen," it says in that synthesised cheerful, happy voice. You know the one.

Speed-Y picks it up, and immediately becomes calm. The thought of B3 overrides the terror of watching something way beyond his clearance. He doesn't even hear Jam-Y's assumption that the B3 is for him.

On his way back to his spot, he notices that Jam-Y pressed the button. The vidscreen comes alive again, but this time, he is distracted by Jam-Y attempting to grab the can of delicious, delicious B3. But he refuses to let go!

Unhindered and possibly even ignored, the screen depicts yet another log entry. "Daycycle three after Reanimator release: The local compnode came back online early this morningcycle... but it's allied itself with the... what's the word that everyone's using? Zombies. It's promoted my boss... and I found out the identity of that clone. It's Titus-I... no, Titus-U now... I mean, the dead one! The previous one! With the current one as his lackey!"

He pauses to take a sip of B3. "Okay... must remain calm. I think that the Troubleshooter team is still around, and in contact with the Tituses... maybe they know something. I think they might be trying to meet the leader of the Armed -"

Unseen behind him is the body from the previous entry; now reanimated, and walking towards the scientist with a determined look in its eye. It's smiling.

Someone off-camera - probably someone holding it - tries to speak, but the scientist cuts him off. "Don't interrupt! Now where was I? Oh yes... it looks like my thoughts about the upgraded Reanimators were correct. We were able to reanimate a clone... a zombie... with a full mind. It seems willing to co-oper..."

Willing to co-operate? Grabbing you and trying to drag you away doesn't seem like co-operating, mister scientist. And not just that, but he seems to have friends... The camera operator legs it, and the video shuts off again.

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Still running, L4-O looks for the nearest open space. That's easy; he can go south, off the roadway. There are some signs saying that it's reserved for future development, but he disregards them.

Off the roadway, to the south of the domescraper

Once he's some distance away, L4-O stops to catch his breath. He takes the opportunity to check the timer. Seven minutecycles left...

written by Jam on Jan 24, 2013 23:43

After trying and failing to grab the B3, I somehow manage to think logically enough to realize that it'd be easier to just go buy another B3, rather than try to take the one Speed-Y has.

I run over to the vendobot and buy a B3.

[1290]

Assuming my purchase is successful, I drink the B3.

It feels like there's something important I'm forgetting about though...

written by Lightning4 on Jan 24, 2013 23:54

I catch my breath for a moment more, then look at the bomb again, then the domescraper, and think about if I still need to run a bit further.

If not, I get out Fred and stare at the bomb, trying to think of somewhere to start.

written by Kristos on Jan 25, 2013 12:16

I try to remember what I learned from Cryo-R about pickpocketing and check the clone's pockets.

written by Speeder on Jan 25, 2013 13:08

After Jam let go the B3, I resume watching the video.

Including pressing the play button as necessary, and feeling entertained and very happy, you know, video and B3!

written by Gligar on Jan 25, 2013 15:17

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Realising that Speed-Y isn't letting go, Jam-Y decides that it would be considerably less effort to go and buy his own. While he is off doing that, Speed-Y is able to actually drink some B3... there. That's much better. Now how about that play button?

The video continues. Instead of being terrified by it, though, Speed-Y feels... content. Jam-Y feels... like he's so totally focused on his B3 that he's unaware of the video. Or anything else, for that matter. Though he gets a feeling...

The scene has changed again. It looks to be an INFRARED dormitory somewhere, where some of the scientist's assistants, mostly the INFRAREDs, are gathered. One of them, a RED, is dictating: "If you're wondering what just happened... well, it looks like re-animating that body was the last mistake Pete-Y will ever make; he's out of clones. Wait... what if the zombies decide to re-animate him?"

The RED turns to the others. "What do you think? Should we go back and check?"

One (possibly the camera operator from earlier, from his voice) replies, "And risk getting turned ourselves? You must be crazy!"

"We are assigned to the project," the RED reminds him. "If we abandon it now, The Computer is sure to notice. And look at it this way: by going back, we have a chance to figure out what went wrong. This is all data, you know. The fact that it's bad data is irrelevant."

From their expressions, it's clear that the INFRAREDs don't want to go back. But still, they slowly decided to follow. "Alright. But only because you told me to." "Sure... it's better than not doing anything." And other such statements.

The scene jumps back to the lab, where it turns out that the scientist - Pete-Y (now Pete-G, and also a zombie) has been reanimated. "Supplementary," he says. "My reservations about the processed clones appear to have been false. The clone I processed earlier, in the previous entry - back when I too was not yet processed - has enlightened my on this. He has also revealed that the Tituses have a plan: we are to spread across the Complex! And I am pleased to help! From this daycycle forth, I will research new ways of introducing the Reanimators into unprocessed clones. This way, more clones can be processed more efficiently!

"Also, I am pleased that my assistants have returned, though they remain unprocessed at this time. It is my hope that I can correct this."

The tape stops again.

Factory floor, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R casts his mind back... didn't Cryo-R know how to pick pockets? Did he learn anything from him? Probably... if he does this, he should be able to check this traitor's pockets for anything interesting... aha! There's a PDC with a message on it!

Off the roadway, to the south of the domescraper

After regaining his composure, L4-O has another look at the bomb. The light isn't too great out here, away from the roadway, but the timer's display is luminous, and shows four minutecycles remaining. He should be far enough away, should the worst happen.

He pulls out Fred - still part of Fredinator - and thinks about where to start. The wires? 😊

written by Lightning4 on Jan 25, 2013 16:16

"Okay... gives me a minutecycle or two..."

I look over the bomb, and try to determine whether I can see the wires at all. Specifically, the matching wires.

I talk to myself a little nervously.

"Not sure if they're going for trickery or bluffing with these wires... maybe these turn it off... maybe they explode."

written by Gligar on Jan 25, 2013 19:22

Off the roadway, to the south of the domescraper

L4-O starts getting nervous. He may have a couple of minutecycles to worry about it, but these wires... it's difficult to tell them apart. And what if they're only there to throw him off? And what do they do?

He has another look at the wires. Hmm... it seems that he can at least match some of the matching wires. He hopes that it will be enough.

written by Jam on Jan 25, 2013 20:09

I continue drinking the B3.

Ahh, B3... So delicious... I feel a bit better now, I think! Now what was it I was forgetting? Hmm... Something about Joris-O? Or was is that dying clone? Or, L4-O? Or...

I suddenly gasp.

[1291]

"How could I have forgotten?! Speed-Y, there's a bomb that going to blow up the bunker in a few minutecycles!"

I immediately start running back toward the loading dock as fast as I possibly can, hoping I can find L4-O and the bomb in time to... well, I'll figure out that part later!

written by Lightning4 on Jan 25, 2013 20:17

I hesitate a little bit, holding Fred against one of the matching wires. Preferably a timer to bomb one, if there is one I can find.

I look at the timer again.

written by Gligar on Jan 25, 2013 23:40

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y enjoys his delicious, delicious B3 for a moment, before suddenly remembering what he'd forgotten: the bomb!

He runs out, and legs it towards the loading dock.

Off the roadway, to the south of the domescraper

L4-O, on the other hand, doesn't need to. He's busy choosing a wire - that dark-coloured one (blue?) - connecting the timer to the explosive. Does he cut it? Or the red one next to it? He has three minutecycles to decide...

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y arrives, still running. He finds that L4-O and the bomb are not here. Instead, the main door is open, with Nukabot parked near it, positioned such that it is resting its forks on the unconscious Stefan-R, pinning him down.

written by Jam on Jan 26, 2013 00:23

"Why are you... Where is..."

I look confused for a secondcycle, before realizing L4-O must have left through the main door with the bomb, to get away from the bunker. That was smart thinking!

I also go through the main door. I look for L4-O, and run toward him if I can figure out where he is.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 26, 2013 03:33

I look at the bomb once more, then gently set it on the ground.

"Never was cut out for bomb defusing anyway..."

Then I turn towards the bunker door and run like HEL.

written by Gligar on Jan 26, 2013 15:36

Off the roadway, to the south of the domescraper

L4-O takes another look at the bomb, and realises that there's no way he can do this. He was never cut out for bomb defusal anyway. What was it his instructors said? Something about him probably exploding an inert training device?

He places the bomb on the ground and runs back towards the domescraper.

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

As it happens, Jam-Y has already left the bunker after realising that L4-O had probably taken the bomb outside somewhere. At first, he doesn't see L4-O running back to the roadway, but then, he enters the range of the roadway's lights.

Followed shortly by an explosion in the middle distance.

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Several clones enter through the stairwell from D Level. One, a YELLOW, looks around. "Someone called for a scanning team?"

Confession booths, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The status lights on Cyrus-R's confession booth change, indicating that the door has unlocked, and that the booth is ready for the next citizen who wants to use it. A moment later, Cyrus-R steps out of it, clutching his transcripts recorder.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 26, 2013 15:48

I dive for cover, and wait a few moments for the explosion to pass.

Unless the explosion knocks me off my feet, then there's no much I can do about that.

written by Jam on Jan 26, 2013 17:34

Oh, looks like I'm too late...

Or... maybe I'm right on time! I could have been caught in the explosion or I could have missed it entirely, but this way I still got to (kinda) see it, but didn't get burnt or blown up or anything!

"Good work, L4-O!"

I slow down to jogging speed, and continue heading toward L4-O. I also try to judge the size of the explosion... Would it have been enough to destroy the bunker, or at least severely damage it?

written by Cryoburner on Jan 26, 2013 18:49

"Hmm... Now let's see... Where were those clones coming from? Perhaps there's something worth investigating."

I begin bounding off toward the factory floor, in search of things to investigate.

written by Gligar on Jan 26, 2013 20:33

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O drops to the ground and lets the shockwave pass over him. Jam-Y isn't affected, though he seems pleased that he got to see the explosion without being caught in it. While jogging over to join L4-O, Jam-Y wonders about the size of the explosion, and realises that, if it had gone off in the loading dock, it would most likely have hit the generators one level up (see that overhang on B Level, opposite the main door?). He's not sure it would have hit the fuel stores, but if the generators went up...

[1292]

Confession booths, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R pauses, wondering where all the clones came from, before remembering the factory floor. He heads over there.

Factory floor, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

On arrival, he finds Kris-R standing over a heavily-injured clone who seems near death. The machinery, he notices, is powered down, making the place eerily quiet.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 26, 2013 21:32

I get back up off the ground and dust myself off.

"Thanks sir. I guess defusing or exploding, as long as the bomb is gone safely..."

"Anyway, good to see you're back in reality, sir. You kind of zoned out there a bit... is everything okay?"

written by Cryoburner on Jan 27, 2013 02:36

"Oh, my! It seems there was an accident! This hard-working clone must have discharged a laser barrel at himself, resulting in a work-related injury!"

I approach Kris-R and the injured clone.

"It's a good thing we arrived in time to make sure he receives proper medical attention! I know just where to find the medical bay!"

I grab the injured clone by his leg, and begin dragging him in the direction of the medical bay. I pull Kris-R along by his shirt sleeve as well, if he doesn't follow.

written by Jam on Jan 27, 2013 03:21

"Hmm... Now that I think about it, I did seem a bit muddled back there... But B3 seemed to help! I guess I must have been really craving B3!"

I grin at L4-O.

written by Gligar on Jan 27, 2013 15:21

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O picks himself up again, and points out that it doesn't really matter that the bomb exploded rather than being defused. At least it has been disposed of with no damage to the bunker.

He again asks if Jam-Y is okay. After all, he was zoned out for a while...

Jam-Y agrees, but adds that B3 helped. (Indeed, he still has half a can left.) Perhaps his only problem was an intense craving for B3.

Factory floor, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R surveys the scene and immediately comes to the conclusion that this almost-dead clone somehow got into a work-related injury, and needs treatment. He grabs both the clone and Kris-R, and begins marching towards the medical bay.

The clone sighs once, and it utterly still.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 27, 2013 16:46

"B3 sounds good. Hopefully we don't have anything else to worry about now, I think that clone is finally dead... he had some kind of link to that bomb."

I start walking back towards the bunker.

written by Gligar on Jan 27, 2013 19:36

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O thinks that B3 would be good right around now, since (he hopes) they don't have anything to worry about right now. And Stefan-R is probably dead, given that he was linked to the bomb somehow.

He walks back towards the loading dock.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 27, 2013 19:43

I continue my way back into the bunker, stopping to check Stefan-R when I get to him.

written by Jam on Jan 27, 2013 22:59

I follow L4-O back to the bunker, while slowly savoring the rest of my B3.

written by Speeder on Jan 28, 2013 13:10

I resume my video watching and button pressing.

written by Gligar on Jan 28, 2013 15:45

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O and Jam-Y (who is still drinking his B3) return to the bunker. the first thing that L4-O does is to check Stefan-R. It turns out that Stefan-R isn't breathing, and L4-O can't find a pulse.

The two continue on.

Concourse C-1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Kristos-R tells the scanning team that Speed-Y had called them to scan, well, himself and the HPD&MC team.

"And where is this Speed-Y?" asks the YELLOW. Kris-R indicates the meeting hall.

The YELLOW goes to investigate.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

He enters to find Speed-Y walking over to the tape machine.

Before Speed-Y presses play, he asks, "Are you Speed-Y? Did you send for a scanning team? Because we're ready to set up."

[1293]

He does not get a reply, not yet. Speed-Y is too engrossed in what's happening onscreen:

It's Pete-G again. "Daycycle five after Reanimator release. No results yet as to new ways of spreading Reanimator. On the plus side, we have found a way of improving its potency; this new strain should get to work faster - though there is the side-effect of increasing one's hunger as the temperature increases. There is the possibility that this could cause zombies to turn on each other. I'm sure there's nothing to worry about there; the environmental controls are in with the reactor. And that's sealed..."

The video skips again, and now shows the dormitory. The RED and (some of) the INFRAREDS are present, as are some Troubleshooters. The RED is saying, "Things are getting worse. Most of the higher-ups have been turned, and things are starting to shut down... I guess the compnode kept its databases elsewhere. So far, this dormitory has shown no signs of shutting down -" he says, as the lights begin to dim, "- one sign of shutting down. Does anyone have any power packs?"

A Troubleshooter, wearing the MBD of an Equipment Officer, tells him that the team has none; they've all got Hygiene Officer equipment. "That's just great," the RED replies. "Anyone else?" No-one volunteers any. "Any of the previous occupants of this dormitory?"

The INFRAREDS go and look. Meanwhile, the RED says, "If need be, I may have to take some form R&D. I doubt the zombies care about lights, and heat, and air. Well... maybe heat, if what Pete-G says is true. Hmmm."

Scrabbling noises from a duct get everyone's attention. Suddenly, the duct flies open, and a clone jumps out: a BLUE in a dishevelled IntSec uniform, with what seems to be half his body replaced with cybernetic implants and fresh transplants - he's clearly seen a lot. He's the kind of clone who should have been re-cloned by now, but you get the impression that he won't tolerate some mere copy doing his job. He glowers at the camera. "Turn that thing off! Troubleshooters: I have a plan!"

The video stops.

written by Speeder on Jan 28, 2013 16:04

I look interested in the BLUE guy...

Then I look at the newcomers.

"Oh, hello. Yes, I am Speed-Y, you need to see if the team outside this room has any mutation, concealed weapon or nanomachines on them.

written by Speeder on Jan 28, 2013 13:11

Sorry for suddenly disappearing, it was holiday here and I bricked my android to help.

If you don't know what is the nanomachines, I cannot tell you, since they are of BLUE clearance and I know because of mission related stuff, but you need to scan for them."

I smile happily.

written by Jam on Jan 28, 2013 17:42

I start walking back to Speed-Y's location, so that I can tell him the good news...

written by Gligar on Jan 28, 2013 18:07

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y seems interested in the BLUE. Whoever he is, he should remember that this was thirty yearcycles ago. Though... wait a minute... is it possible to get an ID from that? Part of his tongue tattoo is visible.

He realises that he is not alone, and turns to the YELLOW. He informs him that he and his team is to scan the HPD&MC team for weapons, mutations, and nanomachines (information about nanomachines is not available at their clearance).

"I know what nanomachines are," the YELLOW replies, "so there's no need to take that tone with me, citizen. I don't want to know the specifics. But we'll get set up right away." He turns, to find Jam-Y returning. He looks happy.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 28, 2013 18:19

I g towards the nearest B3 machine and make a clearance-appropriate tasty purchase.

written by Gligar on Jan 28, 2013 22:30

Cafeteria, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

It's L4-O's turn to make a purchase of B3. Of course, to do that, he'll need a vendobot.

There are several here, in the bunker's sorely-neglected cafeteria. They've even been re-stocked since the team took possession of the bunker. As such, there is B3 available at a variety of clearances and flavours. With L4-O being ORANGE, he can pick the only flavour that tastes like a clearance: B3 Tastes Like Something Orange!

written by Lightning4 on Jan 29, 2013 00:11

I thirstily drink it, and continue to drink it occasionally as I make my way out of the cafeteria and start heading towards the direction of the meeting hall.

written by Jam on Jan 29, 2013 00:23

"Why hello, strange clone I don't know! What brings you here?"

I smile at the YELLOW clone while taking my laser pistol out. I keep it pointed at the ground for now...

written by Gligar on Jan 29, 2013 14:20

Cafeteria, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O drinks. It really does taste like something orange. Something like, you know, an orange?

But anyway. It looks like he's heading up to the meeting hall again.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Meanwhile, Jam-Y is wondering who this other clone is and what he's doing here. He has his laser pistol out, but it's just kind of... there. He's not aiming at anything.

"No need to take that tone, mutant," the other YELLOW says. "I'm here with the scanning team to scan that team out there for mutations and such. Perhaps you would like to get scanned?"

written by Speeder on Jan 29, 2013 14:37⁸²⁰

I smile at the clone.

And return to my video watching, but I don't play until he leaves the room.

written by Kristos on Jan 29, 2013 15:11

"Oh, hi Cyrus-R! Can you take this clone to the medical bay. He may have important evidence for our case!"

As I am dragged along I check the message on the traitor's PDC.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 29, 2013 17:34

I continue making my way back up to the meeting hall, B3 in hand.

written by Jam on Jan 29, 2013 17:47

I smile a bit more, in a way I'm hoping is more scary than pleasant.

"Why scan me? Clearly, I'm already registered! Or are you purposely trying to be inefficient? That sounds like something a CMT would do..."

I look closely at the YELLOW clone.

"Hmm... I certainly hope you're not one... Carry on with your work then."

I turn and walk over to Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on Jan 29, 2013 18:30

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y smiles at the YELLOW and looks back at the screen, still frozen displaying that BLUE, the RED and the INFRAREDS, allowing Jam-Y to deal with the YELLOW.

Jam-Y does so by also smiling, albeit in that odd way that makes you unsure as to whether he's going to eat you or

⁸²⁰ SPEEDER: (ooc: erm... I thought I had posted, but I had not... me crazy) just fry your brain... you know, that smile. While doing so, he points out that scanning him would be counterproductive, since he's already registered, as well as inefficient... and inefficiency sounds treasonous. Is the YELLOW a traitor?

Apparently not. "Er... okay. When was the last time you took your control meds?" Though he appears to be uninterested in a reply, since he walks out.

Right past L4-O, who just arrived, having noticed both teams outside; the HPD&MC team waiting to be scanned, and the scanning team setting up their equipment.

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R tells Cyrus-R to continue his dragging, while he checks the traitor's PDC. As mentioned previously, it has a message. It's from someone called "Andrei", and states that the sabotage of the production line proved that their plan worked, and that they should apply the same plan to the other lines.

By the time he has read it, Cyrus-R has reached the medical bay.

written by Speeder on Jan 29, 2013 18:08⁸²¹

I attempt to see if I can get the tongue ID of the BLUE cyborg guy.

Maybe... I should find him.

written by Speeder on Jan 29, 2013 19:10

I try to see if I can see the ID of the BLUE.

After I do that and take note on my PDC, I press the PLAY button again.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 29, 2013 19:25

I look at the screen.

"Oh, you started playing again without me... aw."

I watch the screen, still occasionally sipping my B3. Unless it's empty. Then I just look longingly through the top into the bottom of the can.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 29, 2013 21:14

I enter the medical bay, towing along the others.

"Doctor, doctor! This hardworking clone has apparently been injured in a work-related accident! He requires prompt medical attention, so that he can get back to work at whatever it was he was doing!"

written by Jam on Jan 29, 2013 21:55

I take a few seconds to try to recall what control meds are...

Then I hear L4-O's comment. I look up at the screen, then at Speed-Y, then at L4-O.

"Wait, what did I miss? Was this important?"

⁸²¹ SPEEDER: (ooc: disregard my previous post that was obviously made in distress over finding out that my even previous post was not made...)

written by Gligar on Jan 29, 2013 22:30

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y looks at the BLUE clone's tongue tattoo. It looks like a full picture isn't available, but it should still be possible to get a match based on what there is. He snaps a few pictures on his PDC... at least two, at any rate. Feeding them through his database apps will probably take some time.

L4-O expresses disappointment that Speed-Y started playing the tape without him, but goes back to sipping his B3.

Jam-Y tries to think... control meds? Wouldn't those be the stuff in the mutant medications pack?

Then, he realises that the screen was probably important, and starts watching.

Perhaps someone should... ah, there goes Speed-Y. The tape starts up again.

It now shows a different location, apparently a corridor. The Troubleshooters are present, and the RED clone is narrating. The INFRAREDs are nowhere to be seen. "I guess the R&D report will have to wait... that IntSec clone - no-one'll tell me his name - thinks I'm a Troubleshooter. We're on our way to meet with the zombie High Programmer... Titus? Yeah, him... he's summoned the Troubleshooters. And, I guess, me. I hope he doesn't notice that there's one extra. I wonder if I should keep the camera rolling during the meeting? I wonder if it has anything to do with the INFRAREDs sneaking away last nightcycle? Apparently, one of them found something...

"On second thought, better not push it. I'll add more later."

The tape stops.

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY sector

Cyrus-R, the extremely still clone, and Kris-R enter the medical bay. Loudly, Cyrus-R proclaims that the clone he's dragging has suffered an injury and needs to be treated.

The docbot, and several INFRAREDs, look over. The INFRAREDs are beginning to look... less than happy at all these interruptions (though the docbot is prepared for that, and jabs them with a syringe).

Once it's ready, the docbot trundles over and looks at the group. "Specify," it says. "Which clone requires treatment? The clone with the laser pistol or the dead one?"

written by Kristos on Jan 30, 2013 00:08

I point to the clone on the floor beside me. "Him. Do you think you can bring him back, or is he too far gone?"

With my own PDC I copy the message and the sender's name, and also take a photo of the dead clone. If possible, I forward the message and photo to Friend Computer, along with this information: "A clone wandering in the laser barrel factory attempted to kill me with a pistol with a modified laser barrel. Attached is a photo of him as well as a message on his PDC from someone called Andrei."

written by Jam on Jan 30, 2013 06:39

"Zombie... High Programmer? Wow, I must have really missed a lot. When did that happen?"

I look to Speed-Y for answers.

written by Gligar on Jan 30, 2013 14:20

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY sector

Indicating the other clone, Kris-R asks the docbot if it can do anything for him, or if the clone is simply too far gone. "Unfortunately, this clone is dead," the docbot replies. "There is simply not enough blood remaining in his system. Artificial blood is beyond his security clearance."

Meanwhile Kris-R is sending a message concerning the clone to Our Mutual Friend. He instantly receives a reply:

Thank you for your report, citizen. A free bonus of 50 credits has been applied to your account.

I am aware of the name Andrei. He is a known Communist last seen in JHT Sector, and is a Citizen of Interest across much of the complex.

Perhaps you have seen the relevant episode of Bake That Traitor? The one with the escape? Andrei was to have been erased in that episode.

The fact that this clone has a message from Andrei is proof that he is a Communist.

Please retain the modified laser barrel, and submit it at your debriefing.

Thank you for your co-operation.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y is surprised at the revelation of a zombie High Programmer, and wants to know how it happened. He looks to Speed-Y for answers.

written by Speeder on Jan 30, 2013 14:28

I look to Jam.

"Oh, some play pressings ago.

The leader of the Easter Cycle church is a guy named Titus-U

I don't know his past, I only know that he died and got demoted, to Titus-I

Then Titus-I stole the reanimator technology, and figured how to make intelligent zombies, that is, full resurrection of people, not just the zombies we found so far, and he and the Easter Cycle used that to reanimate Titus-U, that took leadership again.

Thus Titus-U-x and Titus-I-x+1 are the leaders, at least in the time of those videos, of the Easter Cycle group.

[1296]

For some reason their apparent object is to unleash the nanomachines in the entire alpha complex, but I doubt this is their true plan...

But I am yet to figure what Corpore Metal and other secret societies have to do with that...

This is looking more that what is involved is NOT secret societies in full, but a single...

Program Group."

I look to the others.

"You never heard that from me, you understand? And never repeat that last two words again."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 30, 2013 18:23

"Whatever that is, it doesn't sound good. Though a zombie high programmer... that's not good either. Not good at all..."

"But this was thirtyish yearcycles ago, right? A lot can happen in that time... maybe their goals are different."

"And you said... intelligent zombies? The ones we've seen haven't been that intelligent..."

written by Gligar on Jan 30, 2013 19:18

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y gives Jam-Y the short version of what he understands: a High Programmer by the name of Titus-U was demoted and terminated. His next clone then stole the Reanimator tech, improved it, and used it to resurrect his past self. At the time of this recording, the two planned to release the nanomachines throughout the Complex.

But what do the other secret societies want with it? Perhaps it's not the societies who wanted it at all. Maybe it's something else... a Program Group. But you didn't hear it from him.

L4-O hasn't heard of the term (probably a good thing) but agrees that a zombie High Programmer is a bad thing. Though... that was thirty yearcycles ago. Perhaps their plans have changed? And what's this about intelligent zombies?

written by Speeder on Jan 30, 2013 19:24

I nod to L4.

"Yes, our enemy seemly is a zombie ex-high programmer that is still intelligent enough as high programmer.

Titus-I probably is a zombie now too, but being zombie or not, we need to assume it is also highly intelligent.

High or not, never doubt the intelligence of a programmer."

written by Gligar on Jan 30, 2013 22:34

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y confirms it: Titus-U is a former High Programmer who is now a zombie. And quite intelligent. His successor-clone is probably also a zombie by now, but he should be no less intelligent. He was, after all, a programmer.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 30, 2013 23:06

I look around the room at the other clones, not saying anything else on the matter at the moment.

written by Speeder on Jan 31, 2013 12:26

I wait to see if anyone have more to say.

If don't, I press play again.

written by Jam on Jan 31, 2013 17:58

I notice the awkward silence, and figure that means we're about the start the next part of the tape.

written by Gligar on Jan 31, 2013 18:38

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Absolutely nobody has anything to say in response.

Speed-Y waits a moment, and starts the tape again.

The RED R&D clone is narrating as, again, the Troubleshooters "We're heading to R&D... back to R&D in my case. Why? Let me explain. That BLUE clone wants us to distract the secret societies involved in this, and cause dissent, giving him the chance to do... something he didn't really explain at the reactor. First off, Pro Tech - still don't know why them, though. And they're holed up in R&D.

"And... there's another thing. The zombie Tituses? They want us to go remove dissidents... at the reactor. Only it seems that the two don't see eye to eye. The lower one wants us to spread fear, while the High one wants us to do it quietly, using propaganda of all things! Well, I have none.

"What I do have is a reason to get to R&D; I seem to recall something I saw when I worked there..."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 31, 2013 19:33

I look to see if there's any more on the tape. I press play this time if there's more.

written by Jam on Jan 31, 2013 21:30

"Hmm... How long ago was this recorded again?"

written by Gligar on Jan 31, 2013 23:04

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O wonders if there is any more on the tape. Not much, given the amount of tape still present on the supply reel. He decides that it should be his turn to press play.

Jam-Y wonders when this tape was recorded. "Wasn't it about thirty yearcycles ago?" asks John-O.

The tape starts up again, back in R&D. There's a clone present, an INDIGO, with a nametag identifying him as Sax-I-WST. He doesn't look dead but certainly seems to act like it.

"Thank you for coming, Troubleshooters," he says, ignoring the fact that the cameraman isn't one. "Please follow me."

Sax-I leads the team past a number of familiar-looking testing areas. It seems that all research being carried out at the time involves zombies in some way; some things the camera sees are listed as "alternate neural matter source procurement" (which looks like a cloning tank making huge brains), "cerebra pacifier testing" (zombies chewing on various things shaped like brains), "weapons deployment" (dumb zombies with laser pistols - you've seen the results of that), and finally, "Reanimator delivery systems". Sax-I brushes past the rest and goes straight to Delivery Systems.

"That's not good," the RED whispers. "We went right past the place where I saw that thing. And it's not there."

"What?" asks a Troubleshooter.

"A little contingency plan we cooked up."

He doesn't have time to explain: they've stopped.

Right in front of Pete-G.

Who is talking to a zombie version of one of the Troubleshooters. A past clone?

Pete-G turns. "Ah, there you are! And the cameraclone too! You found him!" Pete-G exclaims. "You're just in time! I've found a way to create an airborne version of the Reanimators, and I want you to test its effectiveness. You still have your Hygiene Officer equipment, I trust? Good." He heads over to a huge vat of green liquid. "If you could fill your spraybottles from here, please? It should give you enough for an adequate test. All you'll need to do is spray it on any reasonably-intact corpse, wait three minutecycles, and wham! Instant zombie! Well, that's how it works in the lab. And be careful to only use one spray per corpse, please; overuse can result in spontaneous zombie combustion."

One of the Troubleshooters - the living version of the zombie - gets an odd gleam in his eye.

The tape jumps, and now shows a corridor again. "Well, that went well," the RED says. "We just went to HPD&MC to tell the sector what we're doing in the reactor. And not three minutecycles into it, what happens? Phil-R decides to test that Reanimator spray twice on Ann-I - pity she was already a zombie, really. I have to hand it to him, though; he's confirmed Pete-G's warnings about the spray, and the fact that it can be used as a weapon. That should give us an edge, and should have spread some panic. On to the next leader..."

The tape jumps. "That was easy. The Copore Metal guy... still alive through his implants, but as dead as Sax-I. He told us about an alternate route into the reactor... good."

The RED pauses, and adds, "Oh, and I just noticed that I am somehow in possession of an HPD&MC camera drone. One of the techs must have slipped it into my pocket."

The tape stops.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 01, 2013 15:32

I press play again, if there's any more tape left.

written by Gligar on Feb 01, 2013 16:05

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O presses play again.

Again the RED, and the Troubleshooters, are on the move. "We've met with the other faction leaders. And guess who we met? Titus' last clone!"

The RED pauses. "And it looks like he had the same idea as me: get hold of that thing we built in R&D. Now, you're probably all wondering what it is. Titus believes that it's a 'holy relic' that will wipe out the zombies. Now, I'm not so sure, but I do know that, if it works at all, it will cause the local compnode to reboot. We made it for some project a couple of yearcycles ago. The project got cancelled before we could test it, though. And there's no telling what the compnode will do when it comes online. If we need it, though, it's here.

"We're now on our way to the reactor. It seems we'll have to go below CRS Sector to get to a forgotten access shaft. After that? Well, we've got about five plans happening at once, so... it's anyone's guess."

The tape... well, it doesn't stop moving, but that's only because there is no tape left.

written by Jam on Feb 01, 2013 17:09

I notice there's no tape left.

"Augh! What happened to the ending?! Did they get the relic? Did they stop the zombies? What about the Tituses?"

I look around for any other tapes.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 01, 2013 17:15

"Well, judging from the situation now... probably no to the first two, and who knows to the last one..."

I start looking at my PDC for a map of Alpha Complex... maybe it has CRS sector on it?

written by Speeder on Feb 01, 2013 19:05

I think a bit.

I think more.

"I know what it is. What they want.

And I know why that is kinda... hard... to find."

I look to the others.

"They want an electromagnetic bomb.

It is a bomb, powerful as a small nuke, sometimes it has a small nuke on the components, that bomb generates lots of radiation in a way that interferes with electronic equipment, meaning that yes, it destroys nanites quite well...

But also PDCs, lights, holovids, erase tapes, reboots a compnode, can actually damage the compnode depending on how it was built and where the bomb detonated, can shut down, or even destroy, bot brains...

[1298]

I guess you can figure why this sort of thing cannot be found easily, and why Friend Computer would not approve its use unless it is a severe emergency..."

I think a bit more.

"We need to get rid of that church, and of the reanimator project, before they make that weapon necessary, I am very sure Friend Computer would not appreciate the use of that weapon anywhere near it, and everywhere in Alpha Complex is near it."

written by Jam on Feb 01, 2013 19:07

I gape at Speed-Y.

"How do you know all this?!"

written by Speeder on Feb 01, 2013 19:21

"I work with maintenance of cloning machines right?

Let's say that if someone use that weapon near cloning stations plus a compnode and then proceed to kill everyone in the area, it could be very... fatal...

Specially since it might damage memomax too.

That information is not widely available, but I am better at my job knowing it."

written by Gligar on Feb 01, 2013 20:45

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y is sad that there is no tape left. He still wants to know how all this played out; specifically, the details about the "relic", and the fate of the zombies and/or the Tituses. Perhaps if they had more tapes, it might be on one of those. Alas, they do not.

L4-O speculates that the "relic" was not found, that the zombies were not stopped, but has no clue about the Tituses. He also looks for a map of Alpha Complex, but it turns out that such maps are either heavily censored or beyond his security clearance. And the censored maps don't seem to cover CRS Sector.

Speed has also been speculating about the "relic", and has formulated a hypothesis. According to him, the "relic" might be an EMP device. He explains that it is an explosive that releases a pulse of radiation capable of shutting down electronic devices, such as PDCs, bots, lights, compnodes... even nanomachines. It could even destroy them, depending on exactly how the EMP device was made. Which explains why there are so few of them; using just one could potentially fry a compnode or six. Or twenty. They're just that dangerous.

Which is why they must stop the Church... and Project Reanimator.

Kind of suspicious how he knows about EMPs, isn't it? And Jam-Y, being Loyalty Officer, notices. Speed-Y explains that he knows due to the danger it would cause if one went off in or near a cloning station, shutting down cloning tanks, wiping MemoMax records... shutting down a compnode... that would allow someone to kill off a sector in short order.

Still doesn't really explain how he learned about it, though.

He realises that there is a camera looking right at him.

Treason point to Speeder!⁸²²

written by Kristos on Feb 01, 2013 21:12

I check for any other relevant messages or images on the PDC. I also wonder, What happens when you try to shoot a gun with a faulty laser barrel? Nothing? explosion? Why is this barrel modified? I check if the modification is easily removable, as if intended to use on multiple barrels.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 01, 2013 22:07

"Well... I wonder."

I hesitate a little bit, wondering if I'm having treasonous thoughts.

"I wonder if there's a way of salvaging Reanimator? It was an R&D project, after all, so surely it alone is not treasonous. It just seems that it's been abused, is all. Nothing new when it comes to secret societies."

"I can see how Friend Computer would like loyal, useful clones, even in death..."

written by Cryoburner on Feb 02, 2013 05:29

"Oh, hardworking clone... You will be greatly missed. I will forever remember how hard you worked, and that time you shot yourself, and I had to drag you to the medical bay."

I stand reverently silent for a moment.

"Well, maybe we should see if he has anything good."

I take his jumpsuit, and anything good it might contain.

written by Gligar on Feb 02, 2013 14:10

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R has another look at the clone's PDC, seeing if it holds anything else of interest... hmmm, no, there's nothing else. Almost as if it's been wiped recently.

He also has a look at that laser barrel. It seems to be a one-off modification, perhaps a prototype or illegal hack. The modifications don't seem to be removable for use on other barrels.

Cyrus-R, on the other hand, is having another look at the body of the clone itself. He seems interested in stripping it of anything of value. However, as it turns out, someone seems to have already done that... and jumpsuit doesn't want to come off. Perhaps he should just leave the clone to be recycled.

The docbot asks, "Is there anything else?"

⁸²² GLIGAR: (OOO: Haven't given one out in a while, so it's kind of overdue. But I have given out perversity points relatively recently, so it's no problem to give another one.)

[1299]

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O can't help but wonder if there is any way to salvage Reanimator... after all, it started out as an R&D project, so it is not inherently treasonous. He can certainly see how Friend Computer would like loyal clones to serve even after death.

And it's certainly a thought. But remember, those nanomachines need fuel to sustain themselves, and remember what fuel ended up being the best... it would take work to change that fuel. And how many clones would dare to work on it after the events of CRS Sector?

written by Speeder on Feb 02, 2013 15:14

I look at L4 for a while...

"For some reason, I feel that I had this argument before, and was punished for that..."

Let's not dwell in that, my actions are already bringing too much attention to us, I don't need anything, or anyone, freaking out and terminating us before we save Alpha Complex.

Again.

We save Alpha Complex a lot, don't we?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 02, 2013 17:42

"Well, big parts of it, anyway. I don't think I want to know what it would take to save the entire complex from something... the entire complex really is big..."

written by Kristos on Feb 02, 2013 18:51

"That will be all, docbot."

"Cyrus-R, you seem to be recovering well. Did you find out anything relevant to our mission?"

I grab Cyrus-R's arm and begin dragging him to the office. (Haven't the recent popularity polls reflected a rising trend in clone dragging as a mode of transportation assistance among those of clearance RED?)

written by Gligar on Feb 02, 2013 19:16

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y looks at L4-O for a while. For some reason, he thinks he might have had this conversation already, and if so, he may have been punished for it. Perhaps that is why he was brainscrubbed earlier...?

In any case, he suggests that they drop it. They're already attracting enough attention, and they really don't want to be terminated for something they said before they get a chance to save the day again.

They're doing that a lot, aren't they?

L4-O corrects him, saying that the Complex is rather big, and he wouldn't want to know what it would take to save all of it...

Medical bay, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R tells the docbot that there is nothing else, and asks Cyrus-R if he has found anything important.

And then promptly drags him out of the medical bay, heading back to the office. There's been a lot of dragging going on recently, hasn't there? Some might say that it is the result of clones being coerced into going somewhere, but Team Sigma apparently knows better.

written by Speeder on Feb 02, 2013 19:25

I think a bit.

"You know, I think Friend Computer is awesomely good in choosing people to do their jobs.

I mean, he choose us as Troubleshooters right? It is because it knew we would be good troubleshooters.

Of course, when people do shit and fail, then it is not Friend Computer fault, it is their fault to suddenly change their behavior.

Like... Titus."

I get my PDC, take a look to see if a certain program is still running, and then I start to see if I can find the BLUE IntSec guy.

written by Jam on Feb 02, 2013 22:08

"We just saved a sector before, right? I wonder what'd it be like to save the entirety of Alpha Complex... What would we even be saving it from?"

I take a few secondcycles to think about that.

"But anyway, so, if we had some sort of electrical explosion that ripped through the sector disabling any circuitry within the blast radius... That'd definitely take care of all the nanomachines... It'd probably significantly damage the Computer too... Hmm..."

I think back to our fights with the zombies...

"Hey Speed-Y, did the tape mention anything about heat or fire affecting the nanomachines?"

written by Cryoburner on Feb 03, 2013 02:12

"Hey, I wonder if that docbot could save that hardworking clone if we had blood. There seem to be a lot of infrared clones around here, and they have blood, right? They're bound to have more than enough to spare! Hmm... Do you have a bucket, or something?"

I continue getting dragged.

written by Gligar on Feb 03, 2013 15:40

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y decides that now is a good time for a Spontaneous Demonstration of Loyalty. Spontaneously. By saying that Our Friend is excellent at choosing jobs for people.⁸²³ He offers the team as an example: they were chosen as Troubleshooters because The Computer thought they would be good at it.

⁸²³ GLIGAR: (OOO: Am I the only one who can see that happening in real life within my lifetime? Please tell me I'm the only one...)

[1300]

On the other hand, there are those who perform poorly at their jobs. That's not The Computer's fault, though. It's the fault of the clone for suddenly changing their behaviour. Like, say, Titus.

He looks at his PDC, and notes that it has completed the task he set for it. Satisfied, he runs that BLUE's tongue tattoo through the databases, but is unable to find a match. Whoever it is must have has their details classified.

Jam-Y notes that so far, their accomplishments amount to saving only one sector. He can't help but wonder, though, what saving the entire Complex would be like... but what would they be saving it from?

His thoughts return to EMP weapons. A device that could do that could certainly disable nanomachines, but at the cost of causing significant damage to anything else electrical... such as compnodes.

He thinks back. What about the effects of fire and heat? Did the tape mention those?

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

While being dragged, Cyrus-R wonders if the docbot could save the clone using extra blood? There are INFRAREDS everywhere, after all, and INFRAREDS have blood in them. They'd need a bucket or something to do that, though.

Kris-R remembers seeing something on a vidshow where some high-clearance clone got new blood from someone else, but didn't he have to choose carefully? He didn't want to take from the wrong clone... he might have accidentally taken from an unregistered mutant, or... something beyond Kris-R's security clearance to even know exists!

They two reach the factory floor entrance, and turn onto Corridor A.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 03, 2013 17:16

"I just had a slightly worrying thought... either CRS sector is very close... or they're expanded past it all the way to here."

I look worried, but then think again.

"Either that or this sector was just picked randomly. Hard to tell really."

written by Gligar on Feb 03, 2013 21:49

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O has apparently also been thinking. Where is (or was) CRS sector in relation to JHT Sector? If it's close, it means that they've expanded. Bad. If it's far and they've expanded... that's worse.

But if JHT was simply picked at random... well, he isn't sure. It is difficult to tell in any case.

written by Jam on Feb 04, 2013 01:15

How do we know this same thing hasn't been happening in other sectors too? Maybe the Easter Cycle clones are slowly working their way across Alpha Complex, sector-by-sector..."

I continue waiting for Speed-Y to respond.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 04, 2013 08:59

"That's a... worrying thought. I wonder how we can check..."

I look at my PDC for any alerts or bulletins for other sectors, maybe something that seems out of the ordinary.

written by Speeder on Feb 04, 2013 11:35

I look at Jam.

"No, the tapes don't mention heat, but we already figured that it work.

But what you suggest, that we nuke every infested sector?"

I think a bit.

"They are still machines. Meaning they can run a program. I think the BEST weapon, is make a program that can kill them all at the same time..."

written by Gligar on Feb 04, 2013 14:46

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y wonders if the same thing has been happening in other sectors. Perhaps the Church of the Easter Cycle has been working its way across Alpha Complex?

This gets L4-O worried. He looks on his PDC for news reports, looking for anything out of the ordinary. Nothing catches his eye; it's mostly Funball results, lists of Heroes of Our Complex, wanted posters, notifications that Troubleshooter missions are happening (including a few Mission Alerts)... that sort of thing. Hey, there's a Troubleshooter mission happening a couple of sectors away, in JHY Sector...

Speed-Y finally answers Jam-Y, saying that the tapes don't mention heat - they've figured that out for themselves. Why, what was Jam-Y thinking? Nuke every infestation? No wait... Nanomachines are still machines, right? Therefore, Speed-Y believes that they can be reprogrammed. That means to him that the best course of action would be to reprogram the nanomachines to self-destruct.

"That could work, sir," John-O says. "But are we sure they can be reprogrammed? Is it even possible to make a processor that small?"

written by Speeder on Feb 04, 2013 15:51

I look to John-O.

"If they can obey logic, they can be reprogrammed somehow, maybe they cannot have their program rewritten, but their program can still be somehow interfered with."

I think a bit.

"Of course, to do that we would need a programmer."

written by Jam on Feb 04, 2013 17:01

“Or a Machine Empath... But we all know how treasonous that mutation is...”

I get a troubled look.

“Wasn’t there a mutation that could let a clone call bots to himself? That’s not treasonous, is it? We just need to find a clone like that, then... Or we could just set all the zombies on fire and wait the nanomachines to stop working... But then we’d either need flamethrowers or pyrokinesis mutants... Luckily, we know a clone with both of those, right?”

I grin at Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on Feb 04, 2013 19:46

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y points out that if the nanomachines obey some sort of logic, they can be tampered with, if not outright reprogrammed. Of course, to do that, they would need a programmer.

Or, as Jam-Y adds, a Machine Empath. Though that one has its own problems, notably extreme treason. He thinks for a moment before remembering the Call Bots mutation. “Yes,” John-O confirms. “But Call Bots only really calls a bot. You can’t do anything else with it.”

The final alternative, then, is to kill them with fire. And to do that, they need either flamethrowers or a Pyro. They can get the former, and they know a member of the latter. Who even has a flamethrower! But... would Rapt-G be willing to help them?

written by Speeder on Feb 04, 2013 20:23

I give a quizzical look to Jam.

“No, your brain melting powers might only kill the nanomachines on the head.”

written by Jam on Feb 04, 2013 20:54

I facepalm.

“I’ve got Mind Sense, not Pyrokinesis! And I don’t even have a flamethrower! I was talking about Rapt-G! Rapt-G!”

I pause a bit to think, then turn to John-O.

“So, it would be possible to call all the nanobots in the area into one place, and then set them all on fire at once? Probably with some sort of flamethrower, or maybe an incinerator...”

written by Lightning4 on Feb 04, 2013 21:20

“Well, if I can find more napalm shells, those will be good for clearing out good groups of zombies. And we’ve seen how well zombies seem to spread fire amongst themselves.”

“Though we risk getting set on fire ourselves...”

I listen to Jam-Y’s remark.

“Also.. don’t we have nanobots and stuff in us? That would probably be bad for us, if they left.”

written by Gligar on Feb 05, 2013 14:20

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y doesn’t get the connection, and believes that Jam-Y was talking about himself. He helpfully points out that Jam-Y can only affect brains, not nanomachines (though if he were to melt the brain, he could destroy the nanomachines contained therein).

Jam-Y seems to panic a little, and reminds Speed-Y that he has Mind Sense, not Pyrokinesis. And besides, he was talking about Rapt-G. Also, he doesn’t (yet) have a flamethrower.

He thinks for a moment. To John-O, he asks if a Call Bots mutant could call all of the nanomachines to a single location so that they could burn them. “I... don’t know,” John-O replies. “I don’t even know if we can even call nanos bots...”

L4-O is also thinking about fire, but only along the lines of spreading it. He thinks that if he could get more napalm shells, he could let the zombies do the spreading; zombies are good at spreading fire. Of course, that carries the risk of the fire spreading to them...

To Jam-Y, he suggests that they might also have nanomachines inside them. Calling all nanomachines would therefore affect them as well as the zombies. “Is that true?” asks Lucas-O. “About us having nanomachines inside us? That’s... kind of scary.”

written by Kristos on Feb 05, 2013 14:58⁸²⁴

“Why did I not think of that, Cyrus-R? Oh, I remember... because I don’t have the mind that thinks about those sort of things! I do have an idea, though. We can use your blood!”

I briefly look (and listen) in the factory floor before going back to the office.

written by Speeder on Feb 05, 2013 15:49

I think a bit.

“Calling the bots would be a very bad idea.

How we would burn a zombie army with lots of medbots and scrubots in the middle without destroying them too?

Doing that would make us rack a bill so quickly of destruction of public property that Friend Computer would take back our reaming clones to pay the bill.”

written by Lightning4 on Feb 05, 2013 17:55

“Maybe we could do a simpler lure. Like a sign saying “Free brains here” leading to an incinerator or something very lethal to zombies.”

written by Gligar on Feb 05, 2013 19:13

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R stops for a moment to look into the factory floor. As he looks inside, he tells Cyrus-R that perhaps he would have thought of that, were he the kind of clone who thought about such things. However, perhaps the docbot could have used Cyrus-R's blood instead?

⁸²⁴ KRISTOS: (OOC: New team motto! “Team Sigma knows better!”)

[1302]

Seeing (and hearing) nothing out of the ordinary on the factory floor, Kris-R starts walking again. Soon, he reaches the office.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y thinks that using Call Bots would be a bad idea. After all, wouldn't it call all of the bots in the vicinity? That would mean that applying fire would turn out to be... rather costly. As in, the kind of cost where Our Mutual Friend makes you pay for it using your remaining clones... and that's a repayment you never come back from.

L4-O suggests something simpler: how about a simple sign offering brains, that leads to a source of fire, say an incinerator? It's silly, sure, but you have to admit, it's certainly worth a try, right?⁸²⁵

written by Kristos on Feb 05, 2013 23:32

I jerk the office door open and go "BOO!" to scare any traitors that might be rummaging through our stuff or maiming themselves on the floor plan.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 05, 2013 23:36

(🙄)

"Hmmm. Oh right. Weren't we going to check on some security logs? We should plan a course of action for that one... somehow."

written by Gligar on Feb 05, 2013 23:48

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Unlocking the door, Kris-R decides to startle anyclone who might have treasonously decide to break in and cut themselves on the floorplan or whatever. But strangely, no traitor elected to take advantage of the floorplan to maim themselves todaycycle.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O remembers that they were going to check some security logs. Now... how are they going to do that?

written by Cryoburner on Feb 06, 2013 08:34

"That would be a very good plan, although I was experiencing something of a blood shortage earlier myself, and may still be recovering from that. It's best not to chance it."

"Oh, maybe we could just meet up with that clone's next clone at the nearest cloning station! Assuming he still has clones to spare, we could reunite with him there, and make sure he doesn't accidentally shoot himself or something on his way back to the factory floor. Did you happen to catch his name?"

I look over at the floor plan to see if I can locate the nearest cloning station. I avoid touching the floor plan though, since that seems like something that should be avoided.

written by Speeder on Feb 06, 2013 11:00

I look to L4.

"We were? When?"

written by Gligar on Feb 06, 2013 15:04

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R agrees with Kris-R but reminds him that he lost a lot of blood recently, and may not be back to normal. Instead, he proposes to catch up with him at the nearest cloning station and make sure he gets back safely. (Assuming, of course, that he is a worker, and not, say, a commie mutant traitor, in which case assisting him, to the detriment of the mission, would be treason.)

He has a look at the floorplan, but it soon becomes apparent that there is no cloning station in the factory. After all, the floorplan only covers the factory.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y seems to have forgotten about that. Or perhaps it was decided while he was away?

written by Lightning4 on Feb 06, 2013 15:45

"I... don't know. But I remember something about Rapt-G, and how he was supposed to be our debriefing officer on the mission. And how he ended up being reassigned."

"We could find out exactly how that happened... somehow."

I look a little worried.

"I'm starting to wonder just how many clones are aligned with this big, treasonous conspiracy anyway..."

written by Speeder on Feb 06, 2013 15:51

I think a bit.

"Indeed."

Then it happens like if I suddenly remembered something.

"Oh, I did not checked my new dormitory yet! In fact, I don't know if they put a trap there or not!

Let's go check Jam!"

I walk out, and look how the scanning of Kristos team is doing.

written by Jam on Feb 06, 2013 19:07

"Okay!"

I follow Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on Feb 06, 2013 19:31

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O isn't sure of the details either, but he does remember that it has something to do with Rapt-G. He reminds the team that he was supposed to have been their debriefing officer, but was mysteriously reassigned, leaving them with the BLUE that tried to kill him. Perhaps they could find out how that happened?

⁸²⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: L4 gets 1pp 🙄)

Just how many clones are in with this conspiracy, anyway?

Speed-Y thinks that that's a good idea. But then he remembers he'd said that he would go and check out the work done to Dormitory 3, and decides to go do that. He invites Jam-Y to accompany him, since, well, he'll be living there as well. Jam-Y agrees, and the two exit.

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

As Speed-Y exits, he notices that the scanning team seem to have taken over the concourse, which currently features one of those big walk-through scanning machines. How they got it down the stairs from the warehouse is anyone's guess; there are no visible joins or anything. Right now, it contains one of Kristos-R's crew, and is sending a number of scanning beams at him.

written by Speeder on Feb 07, 2013 13:00

I smile happily seeing the scanning, and proceed toward the dormitories.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 07, 2013 17:35

Now that the tape has been fully played, I take a closer look at the reel for anything of note.

written by Gligar on Feb 07, 2013 17:40

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y smiles as he watches the scanning team do their work. But it's clear that his main goal is still downstairs. All too soon, he is leading Jam-Y down the corridor, heading for A Level.

Corridor A2, Emergency Bunker C-3

They soon reach the door, now handily labelled as being the YELLOW-clearance Dormitory 3. IT sits ajar, giving a tantalising glimpse of a YELLOW clearance stripe, and what looks like an AlphaNet terminal.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

With the YELLOWS gone, L4-O has little else to do. To pass the time, he looks at the now-empty tape reel, and spots a faded label, which seems to indicate that this came from an archive somewhere.

written by Speeder on Feb 07, 2013 18:15

I start to inspect everything the best I can, to see if I can find any bombs, or traps, or any sabotage.

written by Gligar on Feb 07, 2013 23:47

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y enters, and immediately starts looking for signs of sabotage or traps. But while he's doing that, perhaps you'd like to look around the dormitory as well?

It's a far cry from the cramped INFRARED dormitory it was before. For one thing, it is now set up for just eight clones, decorated tastefully in shades of yellow – and none of this locker business, since there are actual cupboards and drawers for each clone. As mentioned, the workers have also installed AlphaNet terminals, and desks to go with them. There are four terminals, and you can bet that Internal Security has its monitoring processes in place on each. But do YELLOWS have anything to hide?

Not just that, but the confession booths, formerly accessible through a door in this dormitory, have been realigned and updated, and are now accessed through a door in the corridor itself. Though to check those out, you'd have to go there.

Ah, good. Speed-Y has finished his sweep and has found nothing. Well, there are quite a few more cameras than before, but this is normal for such a clearance upgrade.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 08, 2013 05:49

I try to see if I can recognize the label, as difficult it may be to do so.

After doing so, whether or not I get any results, I just look around the room again to make sure there's no grenades, or commies, or commie grenades, or happy fun loyalty grenades.

Or bombs either.

written by Speeder on Feb 08, 2013 11:39

I go check the AlphaNet terminals.

Then I sit on one, stretch my back, smile happily, and start to taking a look.

written by Gligar on Feb 08, 2013 14:17

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y looks relieved that there are no surprises waiting for him. He also looks pleased that there are AlphaNet terminals available.

He sits at one and takes a look. There are a few entries in the directory he doesn't recognise, but as for the rest, it appears normal, with the search functions, local and (clearance-appropriate) complex-wide news feeds in place. Oh, and the advertising. And IntSec's monitoring programs. And some treasonous secret society message trying to get his attention.

And the big pop-up (that looks like a wriggling message box) informing him that his ID may have already won him 10,000 credits.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O investigates further, and tries to read the label. He can't make out much, just that the tape comes from R&D's Failed Projects Archive in [DFSR] sector.

He then starts looking around the room. Again. For bombs and such.

Anyone would think he had just survived multiple bombing attempts, the way he keeps looking for bombs. A Happiness Officer might suggest some course of action to deal with it. But of course, the team lost its Happiness Officer hourcycles ago. And the Financial Officer is not being too co-operative either (not to mention not actually doing anything as a Financial Officer).

To L4-O's relief, there are no further surprises.

written by Speeder on Feb 08, 2013 14:38

I ignore the pop-up, and start to see if in my clearance appropriate news feed there are any mention of zombies, or of incidents in place I know there had been zombies.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 08, 2013 15:27

I breathe a sigh of relief. Then I realize something and decide to take off to my dormitory.

Once there, I look around for anyone else, or anyone that might be coming in soon.

written by Jam on Feb 08, 2013 17:47

"Wow! 10,000 credits?! You must be especially lucky today!"

I grin at Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on Feb 08, 2013 19:18

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y ignores the pop-up. He can't see a way of closing it without accidentally setting it off, so ignoring it is probably a good idea. Jam-Y, on the other hand, fails to do so. The subliminals do the rest, resulting in him congratulating Speed-Y for his amazing luck.

Speed-Y doesn't respond; he is busy searching for news of zombies, or perhaps of incidents in formerly-infested areas. The first thing on the list is an article about the recent Code 3-Zed incident in the Industrial Subsectors. It mentions that it was contained thanks to the Troubleshooter team that was there (but doesn't name them), and thanks to the Armed Forces, who are cleaning up the last of the infestation right now.

Dormitory 2, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O enters from the corridor, having satisfied himself about the lack of surprised in the meeting hall. He looks around, as if expecting someone... ah, here are John-O and Lucas-O. They seem to have followed him. The two are carrying a few things, seemingly what they had from the RED dorm.

written by Jam on Feb 08, 2013 20:40

"Oh, they're talking about us, right?!"

I look at the screen excitedly.

written by Gligar on Feb 08, 2013 23:01

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y continues to watch over Speed-Y's shoulder as he searches. He's interested in the article about the Industrial Subsectors; it mentions them, doesn't it? He reads a little closer... yes, there's mention of a forkbot getting shot at by a warbot... and that reminds him, they should get Nukabot repaired again...

And up there... doesn't that say that it was the Troubleshooter team that called in the Armed Forces in the first place by declaring the Code 3-Zed situation in the first place?

written by Lightning4 on Feb 09, 2013 00:11

I simply mill about a little bit. I try not to make it obvious, but I watch or listen for John-O and Lucas-O to leave.

written by Speeder on Feb 09, 2013 00:46

I look, and smile happily.

"I wonder if higher clearance citizens have full information that it was us!"

I keep reading the news.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 09, 2013 03:52

"Hmm... They really should put a cloning station inside this factory. That would be much more convenient for us."

Finding nothing of note through my inspection of the floor plan, I turn to Kris-R.

"Say, might you know where we could find the nearest cloning station?"

I stare at Kris-R, waiting for an answer.

written by Gligar on Feb 09, 2013 14:35

Dormitory 2, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

While Lucas-O and John-O pick out beds and lockers for themselves, L4-O... mills about, seemingly checking his equipment. He looks like he doesn't really want them here, but they don't notice, and apparently don't pay attention to him.

During his "inspection" L4-O comes across the damaged blaster from the communist takeover... and the... thing. You know, that thing. The one he should never ever use. Good thing the other two are over there... hey, looks like they've chosen beds now.... oh, they've chosen beds closer to L4-O. Not that it really matters as they head out to... wherever.

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y seems pleased at the news report. Perhaps higher-clearance clones have access to more details, like their identity?

He keeps reading. There's also the report about the laser barrel factory in JHY Sector, though there isn't much detail there either. Apparently, the assigned team hasn't given a full status report yet.

[1305]

There's also something here about plans to rebuild CRS Sector... apparently, HPD&MC have put forward plans to regenerate the area despite the continued radiation hazard. They claim that the radiation has dropped enough that lower-clearance clones can get in and begin rebuilding.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R seems disappointed that there is no cloning station in the factory. But why would there be? Building cloning stations inside factories has been shown to lead to unhappiness, not to mention that there's probably such a facility in the area already. Perhaps Kris-R knows where it is?

He believes that Kris-R knows the answer to this question, and, though he doesn't say it, seems to demand that he answer.

written by Speeder on Feb 09, 2013 16:34

I think a bit.

"Hey Jam, I think the last time they had a zombie outbreak, they decided to go with your heat solution."

I think a bit more.

"You know, I committed treason I think, when I explained some things to you, I think I will confess..."

I stand, and walk unhappily toward the confession booths.

written by Jam on Feb 09, 2013 17:42

I grab Speed-Y shoulder to try to stop him from leaving.

"Hold up a sec. My solution? But this article says there's radiation in CRS sector. Kinda like what you were saying about that... EMP, was it?"

I look thoughtful...

"I wonder if electrical things aren't damaged if they aren't running. All we'd have to do is shut down the Comnnode and all the bots, and then detonate the EMP! I mean, how hard could it be? Even the commies could do it, and we're definitely smarter than they are!"

I suddenly frown.

"No, what am I saying... That'd be so treasonous, I can't even imagine what Friend Computer would do to us."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 09, 2013 18:35

Satisfied that it is still there, I close and secure my locker.

I look deep in thought for a few moments, then decide to start making my way back to the meeting hall.

written by Gligar on Feb 09, 2013 20:21

Dormitory 2, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Satisfied that the... thing is still in place, L4-O decides to head back to the meeting hall.

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

On his way back, he notices that the scanning team (the one called in by Speed-Y) is still working on Kristos-R's team.

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y surmises that the last zombie outbreak resulted in the use of Jam-Y's solution: kill it with fire.

He then realises that, during his explanations earlier, he committed treason - he has knowledge of high clearance information - and this must be rectified. He stands and starts to head for the door, with the intention of heading for the confession booths.

But Jam-Y stops him. He isn't sure that his solution was employed at all; the article mentions radiation. That would imply that Speed-Y's "EMP" solution was used instead.

And that gets him thinking. Would an EMP affect deactivated equipment? If so, then all they would need to do is deactivate the local comnnode and the bots, and then bam! Fried nanomachines! But... that would involve deactivating the comnnode, and if that isn't treasonous, what is?!

But seriously, how hard can it be? The commies did it, after all.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 10, 2013 05:26

I stare even more, my eyes growing ever wider. I note what Kris-R is doing. Is he doing something suspicious? Staring, perhaps?

written by Kristos on Feb 10, 2013 09:55

"If we donate all of your blood then you might rather quickly find out where the nearest cloning station is..."

I check if it is possible to fit the modified laser barrel in the testing device. If so, I start the device and clear out of the room, dragging Cyrus-R along.

written by Speeder on Feb 10, 2013 12:02

I look at Jam.

"You need to head to confession booths too!"

I mean, the loyalty officer giving ideas about shutting down a comnnode! What are you thinking?

And using the same methods that the commies used even! Are you crazy? You want to put a virus on the comnnode? What if it spreads to other comnnodes? You want to risk shutting down the computer entirely? If that happens EVERYONE DIES, the computer runs the city life support!"

written by Gligar on Feb 10, 2013 15:18

Team Sigma's office, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R continues looking at Kris-R. Is he, perhaps... staring?

No, as it turns out. He's actually contemplating ways to find the cloning station. He suggests that they donate all of Cyrus-R's blood. Then, Cyrus-R could find the cloning station rather quickly.

[1306]

But he has more to think about. For example, this modified laser barrel. As it turns out, the modifications do not interfere with installing it into the testing device - okay, it might take more force than usual, but it goes in fine. He fires up the tester and drags Cyrus-R out of the room.

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y glares at Jam-Y. It looks like they both need to go to the confession booths... what is Jam-Y thinking? Offering ideas about disabling a compnode? Ideas that match what the commies did?! And he's the Loyalty Officer! Imagine they uploaded a virus; what if it spread? What if The Computer crashed?! If that happened... what then!

written by Cryoburner on Feb 10, 2013 17:03

I stare.

written by Jam on Feb 10, 2013 17:05

I get a guilty look.

"Er... Hey, I didn't say we'd forcefully do it! I meant, try to convince the High Programmers, that's all..."

written by Speeder on Feb 10, 2013 17:59

I give Jam a quizzical look.

"To your plan work, it would be needed to completely remove all the power from everything we wanted to not destroy.

I doubt that this is easy to do, because it would also mean grabbing all bots and removing their batteries.

Also it would make the sector a very big target for commie invasion.

Also, why you are thinking about that? For now no sectors are overran!"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 10, 2013 18:55

Once back to the Meeting Hall, I decide to browse my PDC for any information regarding cone rifle shell acquisitions.

written by Gligar on Feb 10, 2013 19:43

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R continues to look at Kris-R as he is dragged into the corridor. It's making Kris-R feeling less than mandatory as he waits for the testing device's lights, sounds and gas to die down. It seems, however, that the device is having difficulties with this barrel.

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y looks apologetic, and rather guiltily exclaims that he never said that they would do it. They could convince the High Programmers or something...

But Speed-Y states that, even if they did convince someone to do it, it would involve shutting down everything that they didn't want to destroy... including disconnecting the power sources of every bot... and all of that would render the sector vulnerable to attack! And why is eh even thinking about it? No sectors have been overrun...

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Entering the meeting hall, L4-O decides to do a little research of his own; specifically, he wonders how he would get hold of extra cone rifle shells. He pulls out his PDC and runs a search. It looks like there are three armouries to choose from: JHY Armouries, JHP Guns, and JHT Defence Company; all PLC service forms with contracts with the Armed Forces. The latter is familiar to him - they run the local range.

written by Jam on Feb 11, 2013 04:46

Huh... Oh, I guess the sector hasn't actually been overrun yet, has it? I guess I was just thinking of the worst-case scenario. It probably wouldn't work anyways..."

written by Gligar on Feb 11, 2013 14:00

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Soon enough, the device finishes its entirely necessary lights and such, and... displays several emote indicators at once. Apparently, it can't make up its mind about this barrel.

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y tries to cover for himself, claiming that he only suggested the whole thing as a worst-case scenario. But the fact remains that he suggested it, and if he would suggest it, what else if he thinking about? How much of it is treasonous? Who is he working with, and what do they want? Are they commies? Why? Why not?

written by Speeder on Feb 11, 2013 16:06

I peer at Jam.

Then I peer more.

"Alright, I will see if... I can find anything here that might appease your fears.

But as Team Leader that want a loyal loyalty officer, I want you to do that trip to the confession booths, while I look for more information."

I plop down again in front of a terminal.

written by Jam on Feb 11, 2013 17:29

"Okay..."

I start walking toward the confession booths.

"Hey, wait a second... Weren't you heading toward the confession booths too?"

I walk back to Speed-Y, and give him a questioning look.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 11, 2013 18:42

I look into procuring shells from JHT Defense Company, and if they handle (or even suggest) walking in to collect ammo.

[1307]

I also check, if I can, if they have shells that are quite fun to use. Such as explosive, or napalm, or maybe something even more exotic that uses fire or explosions. Or otherwise lethal amounts of damage.

written by Speeder on Feb 11, 2013 18:50

"I will, right after I find more information about how they killed the zombies last time."

Probably I will get into the booths before you leave.

written by Gligar on Feb 11, 2013 19:51

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y looks at Jam-Y for a long moment.

Then he declares that he'll do some more searching, and see if he can find out anything else that might alleviate Jam-Y's fears. In the meantime, Jam-Y can make that trip to the confession booths.

Jam-Y is about to comply, when he remembers that Speed-Y said that he would also make the trip, and turns back, waiting for Speed-Y. The latter confirms that he will do so, just as soon as he is finished investigating what happened last time. With luck, he'll get to the booths while Jam-Y is still speaking with Our Mutual Friend.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O weighs up his options and decides to go with the familiar option. He notices from their site that they are reluctant to ship cone rifle shells to individual citizens, and that those wishing to purchase them should have valid IDs and/or brevets handy when collecting them. Understandable when you consider that they stock, or can obtain, pretty much any shell payload you could imagine - such as napalm, gas, EMP, gauss, pyrotechnic, even tacnuke if you're high enough clearance - and even multiple varieties of trigger - impact, timed, temperature, radiation...

They also offer a weapon repair service, and can dispose of damaged ammunition. For a fee, of course.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 11, 2013 21:20

I look up their location in JHT, though I may already be familiar with it.

After doing so, I start making my way back to my dorm. Again.

written by Jam on Feb 11, 2013 23:02

"Okay..."

I turn back around and enter one of the confession booths.

written by Gligar on Feb 11, 2013 23:14

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y accepts Speed-Y's assurances and once again heads out towards the confession booths.

Confession booth, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

And, seeing as none of them are in use right now, he has his choice of booth. He picks the one nearest the door to the corridor, on the left.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Having confirmed that JHT Defence Co. offers cone rifle shells, L4-O wonders where exactly they are. And as it turns out, the warehouse is situated in Iota Subsector - that building on the roadway between the domescraper and the Industrial Subsectors - and isn't far from the IntSec station.

That sorted, L4-O once again heads back to the dorm.

written by Gligar on Feb 12, 2013 14:27

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

With Jam-Y gone, Speed-Y continues his research... specifically, why was that sector irradiated?

The answer, as it happens, is quite simple: the reactor was set to meltdown. Why? Well, you know. The article doesn't say, but, still... you know.

written by Speeder on Feb 12, 2013 14:58

I smile happily.

Then I try to find how much time the meltdown was triggered after the "incident" with R&D, and if there are any related news of the time (specially, news of escapees, spreading stuff, or of a cyborg BLUE)

written by Lightning4 on Feb 12, 2013 18:00

Once back at the dorm, I look around to see if there is anyone who can see in my locker.

If not, I go over to it, open it up, and quickly grab my damaged blaster.

I then quickly close the locker again.

written by Gligar on Feb 12, 2013 19:21

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y continues searching. It shouldn't be a surprise that many of the news articles concerning the last daycycles of CRS Sector have been redacted, expunged or are just plain unwritten... but a few clues remain. For instance, this article here... it states that CRS Sector was quarantined due to an unknown disease spreading among its populace. The Armed Forces established a cordon, but after... some number of days - the number is covered by a censor bar - the reactor was set to meltdown from the inside. From the size of the censor bar, it can't be covering anything other than a single digit.

Another article suggests that rumours persisted of escapees (though, of course, those spreading the rumour were reported to IntSec and are either on the other side of the Complex with a new name, or no longer exist) but gives no details. However, it goes on to say that several citizens originating from CRS Sector were later discovered attempting to access the neighbouring CRT Sector through the ducts.

[1308]

Dormitory 2, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

On entering, L4-O once again looks around. Finding the dormitory empty, he opens his locker again, and grabs the damaged blaster, before closing the locker. He really doesn't want anyone seeing what else is in there.

written by Speeder on Feb 12, 2013 20:04

I try to figure what happened with the citizens that sneaked into CRT and effects on CRT... Did it get obsoleted to LCD sector somehow?

written by Kristos on Feb 12, 2013 21:17

"How remarkably traitorous... something that is both good and bad at the same time. Must be some sort of mutation. Cyrus-R, how much do you know about mechanical mutations?"

written by Cryoburner on Feb 12, 2013 21:30

I stop staring, and now just look at Kris-R.

"Oh... what? Yes I do think it's time for a mandatory loyalty test!"

I drag Kris-R back into the office, and begin setting up for a mandatory loyalty test. Namely, I set the Indestructible Loyalty Transcripts Recorder on the desk and open its case, and adjust my loyalty officer badge.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 12, 2013 21:35

I put the damaged blaster away, and make my way back to the meeting hall once more.

While passing by, if they are still there, I check up on the scanner team to see what they are up to.

written by Gligar on Feb 12, 2013 23:40

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y continues searching... again. Only now, he wants to know about those survivors. Of course, since there are no names attached to these articles, it is difficult to tell. All he can find out is that there were no appreciable effects on CRT Sector, or at least, none that he has clearance to know about. Except for a recent decrease in the number of CRTs produced by that sector, of course.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Having stowed the blaster, L4-O has returned here. He notes as he passes that there is only one of the HPD&MC crew left to scan. One of the others has been flagged as "questionable".

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

At the door, Kris-R wonders about the lights on the device... clearly, something is wrong, and quite possibly treasonous. And maybe even a mutation. He wonders if Cyrus-R knows anything about mechanical mutations.

Cyrus-R wasn't paying attention, though. He seems to think that it's a good time for a Mandatory Loyalty Test - of course, it's always a good time for a Mandatory Loyalty Test.

To do that, he'll need to set up. And to do that, he needs to drag Kris-R into the gas-filled room and plop his transcripts recorder right next to the device. And straighten his badge. Anything else? Perhaps the sudden appearance of 69,105 toothpicks has something to do with it? Or maybe it's the gas?

written by Speeder on Feb 13, 2013 01:16

I attempt to figure how much damage the reactor caused.

And what sort of reactor it was (at least, how big).

Then I try again to find mentions to a BLUE Cyborg, maybe a hero.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 13, 2013 08:18

Feeling a bit hungry, I take a look at the vendobot's stock.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 13, 2013 14:48

"Wow. That's a lot of toothpicks."

I continue my preparations for the test, checking whether I have any other loyalty test equipment, such as Emergency Loyalty Tests or Demonstrations of Loyalty Cards or Loyalty Toothpicks.

written by Gligar on Feb 13, 2013 15:02

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y is still at it.

Now, he's researching the CRS reactor. How big was it, and what was the damage?

He can't find the answer. If it was in those articles, he can't find it, or is not permitted to find it. And the response he's getting suggests that it might be the latter.

He turns his attention to the BLUE. Just who was he? Again, there is no clue. Though there is a hint that whoever it is had their own name removed from the record...

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

It seems that L4-O is bored.

Why? Well, he seems to be idling around by the vendobots, wondering whether to get algae chips or a VitaYum bar... or perhaps some chocolyke.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 13, 2013 15:34

Feeling like experimenting a little, I obtain a clearance-appropriate chocolyke.

I then promptly start consuming it.

written by Speeder on Feb 13, 2013 16:00

I stare at the screen, frustated.

But not unhappy, it is very important to not be unhappy.

written by Gligar on Feb 13, 2013 19:39⁸²⁶

Dormitory 3, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y looks a little frustrated. Which automatically means that he must be feeling unhappy (despite not looking it) at being stonewalled. What was he expecting? That all the data would just... be there? He's been around long enough to know that that isn't the case.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O, on the other hand, is happy, at least enough to try something new: chocolyke. As he discovers, it's even possible to get chocolyke that tastes like something orange!

From outside the room he can hear that the scanning team has finished with Kristos-R's team.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R notices the toothpicks, though he can't decide whether they're real or not. What is real, though, is the fact that he has to set up his loyalty test equipment - the Emergency Loyalty Tests, and the Demonstrations of Loyalty Cards, but notably not the Loyalty Toothpicks; he tries to grab hold of some but finds them to be illusory.

...wait a minute. Where did those cards come from? Cyrus-R wasn't carrying them... are they illusory as well?

written by Speeder on Feb 13, 2013 22:02

I decide to give up and go to the confession booth.

written by Gligar on Feb 13, 2013 23:10

Confession booths, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Having given up on his search for now, Speed-Y finally decides that it's time to visit the confession booths. There's only the one in use right now, so Speed-Y can choose any of the others - how about the one at the back, on the right?

Not long after he enters, the occupied one unlocks.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 14, 2013 01:25

"Wow. That's a lot of mysteriously appearing loyalty materials."

I try to determine whether I can actually read the Loyalty Tests and Cards.

written by Kristos on Feb 14, 2013 01:42

"Yes, a loyalty test is always a good..." I trail off as I look around the room.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 14, 2013 18:13

I munch on my chocolyke, and watch through the doors activity from either the scanning team or Kristos-R's team.

written by Gligar on Feb 14, 2013 19:42

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R seems to notice that he didn't actually have the equipment necessary to do his job... but tries to use the illusory ones anyway. It turns out that, since these aren't real cards, they only contain gibberish.

Kris-R notices as well. He starts to agree that loyalty tests are a good idea, but then gets a look at all the toothpicks. What... the...?

They (the toothpicks, and the materials) begin to fade. The gas must be dissipating.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

While he finishes off his chocolyke, L4-O watches the scanning team as they speak to Kristos-R. Apparently, those who scanned positive are to be taken for... questioning... as soon as IntSec get there. Kristos-R asks about the rest of them, and is told that, though they are clean, they will also have to wait for IntSec. Kristos-R can't help but worry about whether they will be able to get to their next job without incurring penalties... oh well, if all else fails, the commies did it!

written by Lightning4 on Feb 14, 2013 21:11

I mill about for a few more moments, then I decide I've waited long enough.

I start making my way down towards the Loading Dock.

written by Gligar on Feb 14, 2013 23:21

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O decides, as he watches both teams do not very much, that he's done watching, and heads out, back towards the loading dock.

As he leaves, he hears the sound of someone scraping metal against synthcrete.

Not that it matters for long.

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

As L4-O returns to the loading dock, he notices a couple of scrubots with jet nozzle attachments, and tanks of something or other - milling about.

written by Jam on Feb 15, 2013 02:41

I exit the confession booth, and go looking for Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on Feb 15, 2013 14:31

Confession booths, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y notes that one of the other confession booths is in use before going to look for Speed-Y. Now, where would he be? He was still doing research in the dormitory when he left him; perhaps he's there now?

He heads next door.

⁸²⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: I thought I'd tweak the location formatting a little.)

[1310]

Dormitory 3, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Entering, Jam-Y looks around, and notes that Speed-Y has left the room. His terminal is vacant.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 15, 2013 15:53

I look for, and hop onto Nukabot.

"Okay, looks like I need to go to Iota Subsector. Probably faster if I just take you, if you don't mind."

written by Jam on Feb 15, 2013 16:48

"Hmm... Strange..."

I decide to go looking for L4-O instead.

"Now where could he be..."

written by Gligar on Feb 15, 2013 19:36

Dormitory 3, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Perhaps forgetting what Speed-Y said he'd do after his research - or perhaps he remembered, and realised where Speed-Y might be - Jam-Y decides instead to go and look for L4-O.

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

He finds him quite easily. He's climbing on board Nukabot, which starts up. "Iota Subsector, you say?"

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The toothpicks, loyalty cards, and so on fade away completely as the gas dissipates into ineffectiveness. I imagine Cyrus-R is somewhat disappointed.

written by Jam on Feb 15, 2013 21:13

I look up at L4-O.

"Oh, you're going somewhere?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 15, 2013 22:30

"Yep! Oh, looks like Jam-Y is saying something, hold on..."

I look towards Jam-Y and address him:

"Indeed, sir, if you don't mind. I'm headed to Iota Subsector to pick up some more cone rifle ammo... get a blaster repaired... maybe I'll see if I can bring back some other equipment too."

written by Jam on Feb 16, 2013 07:48

"Oh, Iota Subsector? Cone rifle shells? Okay then! Try to get back quickly, and preferably not via a cloning tank!"

I smile at L4-O, wave goodbye, and start looking for Joris-O.

written by Gligar on Feb 16, 2013 11:43

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O is about to give the order to Nukabot before Jam-Y calls to him, asking where he's going. He says that he's going to Iota Subsector to get some ammunition... if that's okay. Jam-Y decides that it is - he is the Equipment Officer, after all - and tells him to come back alive.

That sorted, Jam-Y goes to look for Joris-O. He starts with A Level... no, he's not down here.

written by 4616599 on Feb 16, 2013 14:09

Still not bothering too much with a jumpsuit, I watch the scrubots.

written by Gligar on Feb 16, 2013 15:22

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Probably chuckling to himself because a) he was in the loading dock the whole time, behind this stack of pallets; and b) he's still not wearing the jumpsuit he picked up in the cloning station, Joris-O watches the scrubots at work. By now, they have disposed of the body of Stefan-R via their usual chemical spray method - you know, the one that causes bodies to melt. It's really rather disgusting, not to mention a little frightening.

As he watches, the scrubots start spraying other things, such as the walls, floor, the place Nukabot is usually parked. They try to spray Nukabot, but the bot decides not to wait for orders and heads out the door.

One of the scrubots heads towards the pallets.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 16, 2013 19:13

"Okay Nukabot, let's go-oh wait, we're already going."

I look around the loading dock as we leave, then watch the path ahead for anything interesting as we travel.

written by Gligar on Feb 16, 2013 19:20

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Noticing that Nukabot is already moving, L4-O looks around. He notices that a scrubot just tries to clean Nukabot with some sort of spray, the same spray that just melted Stefan-R's body. Ugh. Another is heading to that stack of pallets over there, its spray nozzle at the ready.

As Nukabot crosses the threshold onto the roadway, the second scrubot begins spraying.

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

As Nukabot continues, L4-O keeps watching for anything interesting. And he can't help but glance south, in the direction of where that bomb exploded, where he sees some Internal Security clones investigating the mess it made. Of course, if they're investigating that, it means that the checkpoint up ahead is unmanned.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 16, 2013 20:52

"Hopefully that was just an explosive, and didn't have any other properties..."

I continue to look around, still shooting the occasional glance over towards where the explosion was.

written by Gligar on Feb 16, 2013 23:09

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Hmmm... it looks like that spray isn't compatible with woodyke. As the scrubot sprays, the pallets start to hiss and steam and give off heat.

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

As Nukabot continues towards Iota Subsector, L4-O still can't help glancing at the site of the explosion. From the way those IntSec clones are acting, there don't seem to have been any visible side effects from the explosion.

Nukabot passes through the checkpoint and approaches the building housing Iota Subsector. It's approximately halfway between the domescraper and the Industrial Subsectors.

written by Gligar on Feb 17, 2013 14:56

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

And all too soon, Nukabot comes to a halt outside the Iota Subsector building. I guess that having transport really helps.

written by 4616599 on Feb 17, 2013 16:44

I rather quickly run away once I see and hear all the steam and hissing.

"What is that you're spraying, Scrubot?"

written by Gligar on Feb 17, 2013 18:16

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

The hissing gets Joris-O's attention, and causes him to run out of the way, all the while asking exactly what is it that the scrubot is using in its spray. "The spray is a sterilising agent," the scrubot replies. "This bunker has been sealed for so long that it has missed the last two scheduled sterilisation sweeps, which take place once every eight yearcycles. Clones need not worry as the procedure has been deemed safe by The Computer, as long as standard precautions are taken."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 17, 2013 19:31

"Thanks for the lift, Nukabot. I shouldn't be long, I hope..."

I get off Nukabot and head towards the entrance. I look for any signs advertising the defense company.

written by Jam on Feb 17, 2013 19:46

I look harder for Joris-O.

"Joris-O, where are you?"

written by Gligar on Feb 17, 2013 21:56

Internal Security Station, Iota Subsector

L4-O enters, to find a guard asking for his ME Card. He shows it and is allowed to pass.

Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

He finds himself in a RED corridor similar to many he has seen in the past. This one seems to serve as a commercial hub: many service firms having stores here, ranging from Transition Rentals to Happy Bot Maintenance to JMF Algae Burgers... aha! JHT Defence Company... right down there.

He heads that way, to find that the door leading to it is locked. A ring-for-service bell is fastened to the wall next to it. (If he were still alive, I'm sure a certain clone would love to stare at it for hours on end...)

A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Not content with his initial sweep of A Level, Jam-Y tries again. This time, he manages to catch the tail end of the scrubot's answer, and heads for it.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

He soon finds out why it was answering: it is using some sort of chemical spray to clean the place, one which seems to react with the woodyke pallets stacked near a corner, causing them to smoke and give off heat. Joris-O seems to have been near them, and is now trying to keep his distance.

And all this time, he seems to have forgotten to wear the RED jumpsuit he has in his hands.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 18, 2013 00:29⁸²⁷

"Well, that is no good. How is one supposed to perform a loyalty test when their mysteriously appearing unreadable loyalty materials mysteriously disappear? Even the loyalty toothpicks! I'll need to improvise..."

I sit down at the desk, pull out a sheet of paper and my pen, and begin jotting down some replacement materials.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 18, 2013 01:18

I attempt to give the bell a smack, well within the mandatory regulation levels for bell-ringing, as defined by the ring-for-service bell testing guidelines!

⁸²⁷ CRYOBURNER: (Maybe it isn't even a jumpsuit at all...)

written by Speeder on Feb 18, 2013 12:50

Yay!

I disappeared again!

And with another bricked device yay!

This time thursday a flood happened, and flooded my room, and destroyed my devices on it (and pretty much anything else that I could not wash, like clothes...)

So yeah 😊

written by Gligar on Feb 18, 2013 14:25

Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

It's a good thing that L4-O isn't that certain citizen, since ring-for-service bells are made for just one thing, and that one thing does not involve inspecting them. It involves pressing them with a certain amount of force, so that they go ding, as L4-O demonstrates. Although just how L4-O knew the exact amount of force needed to fall within testing guidelines is anyone's guess.

Not that it matters. The bell does its job, which is to alert other clones that the clone ringing the bell require service. Within a minutecycle, the door is opened, and L4-O finds himself face-to-face with an armed jackobot. "What business do you have here?" it asks.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

That settles it: Cyrus-R is definitely unhappy about the lack of materials. That means he'll have to do it from memory! He sets out to write down as much loyalty material as he can remember.

It's a pity he can only think of one loyalty test: sing the second verse of the Alpha Complex Anthem.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 18, 2013 15:44

"Hi! I'm here looking into the procurement of some cone rifle shells. I'm also looking into getting a blaster repaired..."

"Maybe also look at your other equipment, and see what else I can obtain..."

written by Gligar on Feb 18, 2013 19:27

Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O explains his presence to the jackobot and request entry. The jackobot replies. "Citizen identified as L4-O-QKW: a brevet is required for cone rifle use. Present your brevet at the counter for access to cone rifle related goods. Further services are permitted by your security clearance." The bot begins to move aside. The counter is visible inside the door.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 18, 2013 19:32

"Thank you."

I proceed towards the counter, and start fishing out my brevet.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 18, 2013 18:41

Makes note:

Do not let Speeder borrow devices.

written by Gligar on Feb 18, 2013 23:54

JHT Defence Company, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

On entry, L4-O immediately starts looking for his brevet while simultaneously looking around and walking towards the counter. He immediately notices that this room is Clearance RED and seems to be dedicated to lower-clearance weapons and armour: laser weapons, truncheons, blasters, reflex, kevlar, some simple slugthrowers... even a couple of flamethrowers. There is, however, a prominent door near the counter, marked "Admittance to Citizens of Clearance BLUE or Higher Unless Accompanied".

On the other side of the counter is a clone, a rather big, bulky one, wearing BLUE reflex and a jumpsuit. "Yeah? What do you want?" he asks in a not-quite-unfriendly tone.

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

As Jam-Y and Joris-O stand there, the bots continue to spray. One seems to be humming the Mandatory Team Troubleshooter theme.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Though Cyrus-R seems to want to think about more loyalty tests he can do, it's just no use. He is too distracted by the loss of the illusory materials.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 19, 2013 01:26

"Hi... I'm looking into a few orders of business for me and my team. I need to get some more cone rifle shells for myself... see what to do with my damaged shells... repair a blaster..."

"And maybe see what else is in stock for general shooting use."

I keep my brevet handy when he asks for it.

written by Gligar on Feb 19, 2013 14:18

JHT Defence Company, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O explains his presence to the clone, mentioning that he'd like access to the cone rifle ammunition. "Cone rifle gear? No no, you need to be either BLUE or have a brevet." L4-O already has the brevet ready to show him. "Lemme see that... yeah, that looks genuine. You can come in." The clone reaches behind the counter and presses a button, unlocking the BLUE door. "But since we're at the counter... you wanted to have a blaster repaired?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 19, 2013 18:14

"Sure."

[1313]

I put away the brevet, and exchange it for the broken blaster.

Once obtained, I present it.

written by Jam on Feb 19, 2013 18:37

I also hum the Mandatory Team Troubleshooter theme.

"What are you cleaning?" I ask the scrubot.

I also look at Joris-O.

"And why aren't you wearing your jumpsuit, Joris-O?"

written by Gligar on Feb 19, 2013 18:43

JHT Defence Company, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O hands over the damaged blaster.

"Wow," the BLUE remarks as he inspects it. "I've honestly never seen that happen to a blaster... those heatsinks never fail... I should be able to repair it, though."

He grabs a toolkit and starts dismantling the blaster. As he does, L4-O can clearly see that the heatsink has sheared right off the firing chamber. "You know, it makes you wonder if there'd be a benefit to having replaceable heatsinks."

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

The bots continue spraying, somehow not noticing that the stack of pallets is trying to catch fire in their quest to make the spray cover everything.

And "everything", by the looks of it, includes clones. The spray touches Joris-O's leg...

written by Lightning4 on Feb 19, 2013 19:26

"To be fair, I don't think I've seen that happen either! I saw... quite a bit of use though."

I listen to the BLUE's idea.

"That's not a bad idea... maybe something R&D should hear about. If anything, it'd give the Armed Forces more toys to play with."

I continue to watch the clone work.

written by 4616599 on Feb 19, 2013 19:34

I look nervous and glance at the pallets. I try getting the stuff of my legs.

"Well, if I wear my jumpsuit and inadvertently catch a fire in the process it might damage Computer property!"

I look at the pallets again.

"Somehow I don't think cleaning things usually involves setting them on fire..."

written by Jam on Feb 19, 2013 20:45

I take a few steps away from the scrubot.

"I wonder if that spray would be effective against zombies..."

written by Gligar on Feb 19, 2013 23:28

JHT Defence Company, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O says he hasn't seen that happen, either.

But that idea about the heatsinks sounds good... maybe they could send it to R&D? Then maybe R&D could give them more toys to play with!

"More toys is always nice," the BLUE says, and gets back to work. It looks like he'll have to strip the entire cooling assembly and fit a new one.

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Joris-O looks nervous. If that stuff does that to a stack of pallets, what's it going to do to his legs? He tries to remove it.

While he does, he answers Jam-Y, saying that wearing a jumpsuit might inadvertently cause fire. Speaking of which, he's not sure that cleaning things usually involves fire.

Well, if he had been wearing his jumpsuit, he wouldn't have got that spray on his skin. And it wouldn't start to eat away at his skin, because it would be eating his jumpsuit instead!

Jam-Y steps back, and wonders if this stuff would work on zombies. Well, given how it's eating through Joris-O's skin, my money is on "yes".

written by Lightning4 on Feb 20, 2013 01:07

I check my credit balance to make sure I can actually afford anything.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 20, 2013 01:55

"Hmm... This will have to do for now."

I press the record button on the transcripts recorder.

"Kris-R, I have selected a loyalty test from the wide selection of loyalty tests that I have memorized. For this test, I will need you to sing the second verse of the Alpha Complex Anthem."

written by Gligar on Feb 20, 2013 14:31

JHT Defence Company, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

While the BLUE works, L4-O looks at his PDC, checking his credit balance... hmmm... a little under a thousand credits. He hopes that will be enough.

The BLUE mutters to himself about what he's going to charge for the repair.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R decides that the one will have to do. Starting his recorder, he instructs Kris-R to sing the second verse of the anthem.

He claims that he knows more than just the one. But will that claim stand up under scrutiny? Only time will tell.

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

As Joris-O stands there trying to remove the spray, it continues to eat through his leg... and now his hands. That must be painful.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 20, 2013 17:03

I look around the room while the BLUE continues to work. I see if there are any interesting weapons for acquisition out here.

written by Kristos on Feb 20, 2013 17:35

"Wait a second... How can I trust you to test my loyalty if you haven't ever proven yours? Why don't you sing a verse?"

written by 4616599 on Feb 20, 2013 17:49

"Ow ow ow ow ow!"

I try to rub away the fluid with my jumpsuit.

If all else fails, I desperately rub myself on Jam-Y's sleeve.

written by Gligar on Feb 20, 2013 19:08

JHT Defence Company, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

The BLUE is still busy with the blaster. How long is this going to take?

No matter. L4-O can always look around in the meantime. See? It's paid off already; in addition to the usual lasers, he's found a selection of knives and swords. And not only that but he could opt to buy some stun weaponry (either plain tasers, or sonic stuff) or even some grenades.

Or, if he's interested in armour, there is always kevlar, or an asbestos suit. Or, failing that, there is reflec.

Aha! It looks like the BLUE is almost done now.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R isn't sure if he should obey Cyrus-R. After all, it's not like Cyrus-R has proved his loyalty yet. So why doesn't he do the singing first?

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Reacting to the pain, Joris-O desperately tries to get the flesh-eating spray off himself, using his jumpsuit of need be, or failing that, Jam-Y's. Jam-Y, of course, wants none of it. It is therefore a good thing that it doesn't come to that, as Joris-O is able to clean it all off using his own, revealing an extremely RED-looking leg and hands. Oh wait, they're bleeding.

written by Jam on Feb 20, 2013 21:35

"That looks painful..."

I back away a bit more.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 20, 2013 21:58

I wait just a bit longer, watching the BLUE do the finishing touches on the blaster.

written by Gligar on Feb 20, 2013 22:08

JHT Defence Company, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

Having finished looking around, L4-O turns his attention back to the BLUE, who is now reassembling the blaster. "That'll do it," the BLUE says.

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Noticing the blood, Jam-Y moves back a bit. He's now back by the door.

Joris-O still doesn't move from his spot, though. I think he might be distracted by a) the pain coming from his leg and hands; and b) how the spray is dissolving his jumpsuit.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 20, 2013 22:15

"So, how much will this run me back? Looked like quite a fix..."

written by Cryoburner on Feb 21, 2013 05:04

"I do not believe that is how the second verse goes. Also, your tune is way off."

written by 4616599 on Feb 21, 2013 17:21

"My jumpsuit!" I say miserably, and also back away a bit. "It's ruined! I'll have to get a new one somehow."

written by Gligar on Feb 21, 2013 19:14

JHT Defence Company, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O wonders how much the repairs will cost; they seem to have been extensive. "I'll have to charge a hundred and fifty credits," the BLUE replies. "Those heatsinks certainly aren't cheap."

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R points out that Kris-R got it wrong in both the words and the tune.

He doesn't seem to have noticed what Kris-R said, only that it deviated from the anthem. However, to a trained Loyalty Officer, that could make all the difference.

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Joris-O finally steps back, a little sad that the jumpsuit (that he didn't even bother to wear) was ruined. He'll have to get a new one (an possibly pay for it with his own money).

The scrubots continue their work, thankfully staying away from the clones for now.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 21, 2013 23:33

"Hm... I guess I can afford that."

I do what I need to complete the transaction.

"Hmm.... next on the agenda are cone rifle shells, I guess."

written by Kristos on Feb 22, 2013 00:09

"That's because I was singing the first verse. It has different words and a completely different tune. Doesn't it seem unloyal to sing the second verse without first singing the first verse?"

[1315]

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2013 00:21

JHT Defence Company, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

Of course, the BLUE hasn't explained how to pay for anything here... how about just using the contactless method like everyone else? He holds out his ME Card to the BLUE, who scans it with his PDC. "Thanks, citizen. What else? Oh yeah, cone rifle shells. Through the door, please."

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R points out that he wasn't actually getting it wrong, it's just that it's only proper to sing the first verse before singing the second. And as Cyrus-R should know, the first verse has completely different lyrics (and tune) to the second. Does Cyrus-R really want him to be disloyal? Because that's not a Loyalty Officer thing to do!

written by Lightning4 on Feb 22, 2013 07:22

I go through the door, or follow the BLUE if he is leading me through.

I look around once I'm through.

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2013 15:15

JHT Defence Company, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O passes through the door.

JHT Defence Company High-Clearance Area, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

Looking around, the first thing L4-O notices are the promised cone rifle shells. Many kinds of shells are available, from regular solid slugs, to explosives, to gas... you name it. Triggers of varying kinds are also here.

Also present are other high-clearance weapons: hand flamers, nailguns, plasma generators, and even some Armed Forces kit that has been authorised for civilian use - things like autocannons, heavy slugthrowers (such as the one formerly mounted on Massacrebot), and static restraint systems. There is even a display advertising the availability of the big laser cannons (please wait six monthcycles for delivery). All of which are available for personal use to citizens of Clearance BLUE or higher.

And in case it isn't clear: yes, the room is Clearance BLUE.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 22, 2013 15:43

"Oooh. Lots of neat stuff!"

I look a little sad.

"Lots of neat stuff I can't even use, look at all these clearances... well, maybe the Armed Forces stuff."

I go over to the shells, if I can, and start looking through them.

"How much are these anyway? Going to need quite a few again..."

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2013 19:42

JHT Defence Company High-Clearance Area, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O thinks that all this equipment must be marvellous... it's just a pity that he can't use much of it. Except through the Armed Forces.

He heads over to the cone rifle shells. He finds that they are graded according to lethality and overall damage output, and that there are shells here with colour codes he's never even seen before - most of them in the "Kilokill" range, and, more importantly, Clearance VIOLET.

He realises that the BLUE is looking at him, and asks about prices. "It's a hundred credits for the lowest grade. Each grade above that costs more per shell. We also have a buy-back option for spare shells if you want. Triggers have a fixed cost of a hundred credits each."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 22, 2013 19:59

"Hmm."

I glance in my backpack.

"Can you do anything with damaged shells? I have a bunch of those, but don't really want them blowing up in my face if I try to use them."

"I mean, I'm sure I could use it like a grenade and just toss it at an enemy and shoot it with a blaster or pistol... but I'd rather have functioning shells. And exploding shells seem like they'd be pretty unpredictable..."

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2013 21:49

JHT Defence Company High-Clearance Area, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O thinks... what about these damaged shells? He's sure he could use them as grenades, sort of, but...

"That might work, but... hmmm. I'll tell you what. I could buy those damaged shells from you. Then you could use that to buy a few more working shells."

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

The scrubots finish their sweep of the loading dock, and file through a door to start with the rest of the bunker.

Joris-O realises that it's cold down here.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R's transcripts recorder continues to record. Not that there is anything for it to record right now except for the ambient sounds of the factory... it's a pity that Cyrus-R and Kris-R are doing nothing more interesting than glaring at each other.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 22, 2013 22:00

"That'll work, I guess."

I start retrieving the damaged shells from my backpack, unloading them onto a table or desk or whatever is handy.

written by Gligar on Feb 23, 2013 14:15

JHT Defence Company High-Clearance Area, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O decides that selling the damaged shells would work, and starts fishing them out. There are, of course, tables back ere, and one of them is relatively clear, so... yeah, a good place to put them so that the BLUE can appraise them. In total, L4-O places 23 damaged cone rifle shells on the table.

The BLUE starts examining them. "It's a miracle these haven't gone off already... How did they get like this?"

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

From the corridors comes the sound of spraying as the scrubots continue their sweep. And a not-all-that-quiet hissing noise.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The recorder continues to record... nothing. Except the sound of footsteps in the distance.

written by Kristos on Feb 23, 2013 18:17

"Listen! I think I hear the distinct sound of a transcripts recorder recording footsteps in the distance! We should probably stop glaring at each other. After all, the transcripts recorder doesn't record glaring very well and glaring at team members (especially a LOYALTY OFFICER or a TEAM LEADER) is not a valid demonstration of loyalty."

I remove myself from a vulnerable location and wait for the footsteps to enter the office. If they pass by, I peek out to see who it is.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 23, 2013 19:13

"No idea. I found them like this... I've salvaged most of my shells from commies, actually. Better off in the hands of a loyal clone, I say..."

written by Gligar on Feb 23, 2013 19:26

JHT Defence Company High-Clearance Area, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

The BLUE continues examining the damaged shells. "Well? Are you going to answer me?"

L4-O replies that he doesn't know. In actual fact, he found them like this. Salvaged them from the bodies of dead communists, the same way he found most of his shells.

"I see," the BLUE replies. "That's the best kind of ammo, the way I see it. "Ammo that you didn't have to pay for!

"Alright," he adds. "I can pay you... let's see, it was going to be half face value, but I like the way you think, so let's say 75%? That would come to... 2250."

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

In the distance, the sound of running water can be heard from the direction of the bunker's hygiene station.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R ends the stalemate by suggesting that they stop glaring at each other, since he can hear (the recorder recording) footsteps in the distance. That, and the fact that the recorder doesn't pick up glaring very well.

He moves away from the door and listens as the footprints approach... and then recede. But not before someone outside can say, "That was even easier than JHT Sector!"

That gets Kris-R's attention. He heads back over to the door and peeks outside... and notices several clones wearing fuzzy hats strolling by as if they own the place.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 24, 2013 03:05

Noticing that Kris-R seems to be wandering off, rather than completing his loyalty test, I press the button to stop recording, and wander over to the door.

"Oh look! More hardworking clones! Hey! You guys! You look like just the clones who could help us!"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 24, 2013 03:33

"Thanks! That sounds good then. I guess I should use some of that for some shells I need more of..."

If the BLUE wants me to complete the transaction, I do that first.

Then I go over to the good cone rifle shells, and start looking through them.

"Hrm. I need a few more explosive shells. Maybe some napalm... they seem to be very effective against enemies I've been fighting."

written by Gligar on Feb 24, 2013 15:17

JHT Defence Company High-Clearance Area, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O agrees to the BLUE's offer. He can use at least some of that for the shells he needs. "Just remember to keep some for the triggers," the BLUE reminds him, and holds out the PDC scanner again.

One card scan later, L4-O begins to decide what he wants. Perhaps explosive shells, or napalm? "That's up to you. Standard explosive shells are two hundred each... napalm shells are 300."

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R turns off the recorder and goes to see what the fuss is about.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

He also notices the fuzzy-hatted clones, and asks for their assistance.

One of them turns. "You weren't at the meeting!" he exclaims in a non-standard, but still familiar, accent. "That means you aren't with the Party and are an enemy! Prepare to die!"

[1317]

He produces a slugthrower and shoots.

It's just a pity for him that he forgot to aim.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 24, 2013 18:44

"Hmm. I can also sell a few shells I don't use as frequently, I have triggers for those..."

I start searching my pack for aforementioned shells, identifying ones not terribly useful against zombies.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 24, 2013 19:32

"Do not worry, fellow hardworking clone! We are here to provide assistance! In fact, we were just in the process of affirming our loyalty, and were hoping you could assist us with doing so!"

written by Gligar on Feb 24, 2013 19:43

JHT Defence Company High-Clearance Area, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L$-O suggests that, instead of buying more triggers for his new purchases, he could sell some of his unused shells instead, and use their triggers. "Yeah, that could work," the BLUE replies, "but are you sure you want to deprive yourself of shells you might need?"

But L4-O has already picked out a few he doesn't think he'll need: EMP shells, tranquiliser shells, and pyrotechnic shells - in total, he places ten on the table. "Well, it's your clone family... I can offer 850 in total for those."

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Apparently ignoring the fact that one of the clones just shot at him with, Cyrus-R tries to reassure that that they only want to help, say, with proving their loyalty. "Loyalty to what?" replies the clone. "If you two are loyal to the Computerists, we have to kill you!"

Another fuzzy-hat clone turns round. "Comrade, just shoot them. They are clearly opposing the Glorious Revolution." She also shoots, and it seems that her aim is closer. And it's a good thing that Cyrus-R's hand was where it was, otherwise the slug would have continued on into Kris-R's body.

written by Jam on Feb 24, 2013 19:46

"Hmm..."

I decide to go check on Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on Feb 25, 2013 00:17

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Seemingly bored of staring at nothing (or perhaps he was inspecting the light fixtures? 😊), Jam-Y starts wondering what happened to Speed-Y... after all, he entered that confession booth... when, exactly, Did he even enter a booth?

He decides to go and check.

Confession booths, Corridor A2, Emergency Bunker C-3

He arrives to find that there is a confession booth in use.

Which might be a good thing. If Speed-Y had been terminated by the booth, surely the booth would have vaporised him before opening again? Which leaves two possibilities. Either Speed-Y is in the booth, taking his time talking to Our Mutual Friend, or that's someone else in there.

Or perhaps he was terminated, but wasn't vaporised for some reason...

written by Gligar on Feb 25, 2013 15:26

Confession booths, Corridor A2, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y decides to continue to search for Speed-Y. If he's not in the confession booths, he'll probably be elsewhere in the bunker.

Dormitory 3, Corridor A2, Emergency Bunker C-3

On the off chance that he returned there, Jam-Y checks in here. Nope, he must be elsewhere.

Corridor A1, Emergency Bunker C-3

He isn't here, though those scrubots are. It seems that they are spraying down the corridors before moving on to the other rooms. The floor is damp with spray, but it doesn't seem to be doing anything to Jam-Y's boots.

Subnode and Turret Control, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Up on B Level, Jam-Y looks in here first. Speed-Y isn't here either.

The subnode purrs to itself quietly as it operates.

Jam-Y gets an idea, and moves on.

Office, B Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Well, there are terminals in here, right? Perhaps Speed-Y wanted some privacy or something. (Ha! Privacy in Alpha Complex?!) But no.

written by Gligar on Feb 25, 2013 15:32

Yes, I just posted a wall of text. It's been a while since we had one.

Perhaps we could have more?

written by Kristos on Feb 25, 2013 17:20

Wall of text is fine as long as it is decorated with the appropriate clearance stripe.

[1318]

As Jam-Y leaves, he notes that nothing is out of the ordinary in the store room.

Corridor A1, Emergency Bunker C-3

As he exits the stairwell, Jam-Y notices King-R entering food storage. Perhaps he's hungry.

Speed-Y, it seems, is not.

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

And finally, Jam-Y arrives at the concourse. Looking into the control room, he can see some messages on the terminal in there, but no Speed-Y.

Looking into the meeting hall turns up even less. Well, unless you count Lucas-O and John-O chatting.

written by Jam on Feb 25, 2013 17:00

"I can't find Speed-Y anywhere!"

I look worriedly at Lucas-O and John-O.

"Where could he be? I've looked everywhere! I've even tried... oh, wait, I haven't tried that yet."

I facepalm.

"Right, I can sense minds."

I attempt to do just that with Speed-Y's mind.

written by Kristos on Feb 25, 2013 17:18

"You have no idea who we are. Any true revolutionary knows that nothing is as it seems! Cryo, use your mutation!"

I pull Cyrus-R back into the office, pulling the door shut, and try to quickly load the modified barrel back onto my laser pistol. If I have time to, I also (safely) force the floor plan away from the fan duct again.

If I cannot get back into the office and shut the door, then I try firing at the clones with my other pistol and kicking one if necessary to clear the doorway. Then I attempt to escape into the office.

written by Gligar on Feb 25, 2013 17:43

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Still looking into the meeting hall, Jam-Y interrupts the two ORANGES, saying that he can't find Speed-Y anywhere, and thus has no clue where he could be. John-O is about to suggest that he try to mentally find him when Jam-Y realises that, actually, he hasn't tried that yet, and he can do it, can't he?

Facepalming ensues, followed by Jam-Y lapsing into silence as he concentrates.

Okay, let's see... there's the five of them on C Level... nobody on B Level... aha! There he is, on A Level. It looks like he's near Dormitory 3.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R decides to roll with it, and claims that of course the fuzzy-hats don't know who they are. It's because no revolutionary should assume that anything is as it seems. Ordering "Cryo" to use his power, he pulls Cyrus-R into the office and slams the door shut.

One fuzzy-hat is confused. "Who's Cryo?"

"Doesn't matter. Get ready to attack."

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

But Kris-R is already busy with two things: first, reloading his laser pistol (making sure to pick the modified barrel); and second, attempting to move the floorplan again.

He doesn't get time to move it all the way, though. The door flies open as he's doing it, pushing him away.

The fuzzy-hats barge in, only to realise that the room is rather small. Perhaps if there had been less than six of them, the pressure of all of them forcing their way in wouldn't have caused one of them to press against the side of the floorplan and split open...

written by Lightning4 on Feb 25, 2013 18:30

I look at the EMP shells and think about the discussions we were having about EMPs and such...

"Hm. On second thought... maybe those WILL be useful?"

I recollect my EMP shells, but leave the rest.

I check how many triggers I have extra due to that selling, and how much the BLUE is willing to offer me now.

written by Gligar on Feb 25, 2013 20:54

JHT Defence Company High-Clearance Area, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

Perhaps the BLUE has the right idea. I mean, L4-O seems to have reconsidered his offer... and it looks like he has decided that, considering the discussion held by the team earlier, in which Speed-Y proposed that EMPs might be effective against the nanomachines reanimating the zombies, the EMP shells could be of use to him after all. They're designed for handling (more specifically, for deactivating) troublesome bots, after all. (The verdict is still out on whether nanomachines are actually bots or not, but I guess it never hurts to be prepared.)

He picks up the four EMP shells he placed on the table. That leaves the six that aren't EMP shells... which means that he has an extra six triggers he won't have to buy.

"Alright," the BLUE says. "I can give you 550 for what's left."

written by Jam on Feb 25, 2013 20:55

"Ah! Found him!"

I leave the room and start heading toward A Level, near Dormitory 3.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 25, 2013 21:24

"Sounds about fair then!"

[1319]

I complete the transaction, and start looking through the selection of explosive shells and napalm shells.

I think, then take 4 explosive shells, 4 napalm shells, and two extra triggers. (assuming there are that many of each kind, anyway)

I wonder to myself what other shells here are good for killing zombies, so I don't finish the purchase quite yet.

written by Kristos on Feb 25, 2013 21:32

I fire the modified laser pistol at any fuzzy hat clones as I try to turn on the fan from the terminal.⁸²⁸

They seem to know that Cyrus-R is not some clone called Cryo. I hope Cyrus-R joins in the fun. Here is trouble, waiting to be shot, and he's crumpled over there with that usual dumb look on his face.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 26, 2013 06:09

"Well, I'm glad you all decided to help us, as there has been some question over where some clones loyalty lies! I think we can clear this up with a little test!"

I once again begin recording on the Indestructible Loyalty Transcripts Recorder.

"Now, if we could all sing verse two of our anthem. And a one, and a two..."

Noting that my one hand may be a bit sore, I take a moment to examine it.

written by Gligar on Feb 26, 2013 14:28

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y announces that he has found Speed-Y, and rushes off.

Confession booths, Corridor A2, Emergency Bunker C-3

He follows the trail... back here. The same booth is still in use.

JHT Defence Company High-Clearance Area, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O offers his ME Card for scanning again. He seems to be making a habit of that.

That done, he has a look at the shells on offer. Hmm... let's see... four of the napalm shells... four explosive shells... and he'll need another two triggers.

The BLUE lets him know that that comes to 2200. But L4-O continues browsing. Specifically, he's looking at the other kinds of explosive shells on offer.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The two Troubleshooters get to work.

Kris-R is the first. He's lining up a shot at the fuzzy-hats with the laser pistol he just reloaded. It looks like he's putting everything he's got into this shot...

And he shoots.

There is no zapping noise. There is no visible beam. The only indication that he hits his target is a brief flash on one of my cameras. And a sudden laser wound in the head of one of the fuzzy-hats. Who quickly looks surprised and falls to the floor.

Cyrus-R is second. And he is still unsure as to whether the fuzzy-hats are loyal.

And he is still determined to get this loyalty test out of the way.

Therefore, he decides to kill two commies with one laser shot, and starts up the recorder again, and, once again, requests a rendition of Verse Two.

Notice that he doesn't start singing himself. As a Loyalty Officer, Cyrus-R should understand the value of proving your loyalty, and who has more to prove than the Loyalty Officer? The only difference is that, instead of proving it to a Loyalty Officer, he is proving it to the rest of the team. But no. He is instead checking out his slug wound, with the slug still embedded into the wound. It hurts.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 26, 2013 19:32

"Hmm."

I think for a few moments, but then decide against getting any more shells.

"I should save some for some other tools of the trade..."

I look around at the other kinds of weapons on display back here. At least, ones that I (or the two YELLOWs) can use.

written by Gligar on Feb 26, 2013 19:53

Confession booths, Corridor A2, Emergency Bunker C-3

The occupied booth opens, and its status lights indicate that it is ready for use.

Jam-Y peeks into the booth, revealing that Speed-Y was here all along. It is slightly unusual that he would spend so long in a confession booth, but there are stranger things. Zombies, for one.

JHT Defence Company High-Clearance Area, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O decides against getting any more cone rifle shells, and instead looks at other items. "So are you still buying those eight, and the triggers?"

While he ponders, L4-O notices a few YELLOW items in a corner: a couple more flamethrowers, some energy pistols (like blasters, but better), and a couple of slugthrowers.

written by Speeder on Feb 26, 2013 20:41

I turn around.

"Hello Jam! So, how it went with your confession?"

⁸²⁸ KRISTOS: (OOC: In desperation, I rapidly spend 2 PP for those actions as I catch my breath.)

written by Lightning4 on Feb 26, 2013 23:31

"Yep. I think that's it for cone rifle shells. I'm seeing if there's anything good for my superior officers. They're both YELLOW."

I focus on the flamethrowers.

"Those look nice."

written by Gligar on Feb 27, 2013 01:47

Confession booths, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y notices Jam-Y and asks how his confession went. Jam-Y is yet to respond, but one thing is for sure: it took far less time than Speed-Y's confession. Also, given that Jam-Y is still alive and not waiting to reclone, it is a safe bet that the confession went well.

JHT Defence Company High Clearance Area, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O assures the BLUE that he is still buying the shells; he is simply looking for anything the YELLOWS might like. The BLUE nods. "So that'll be 2200 credits, then."

Noticing the flamethrowers, L4-O points them out. "I think your YELLOWS will like them. They're brand new, not reconditioned like many you find like the ones in the low-clearance area. And we have a money-back guarantee if the flamethrower blows up your clone!*" Money-back guarantee does not refund the cost of the flamethrower or clone. They'll cost your YELLOWS 500 credits each." He holds out his PDC again for card scanning.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 27, 2013 03:47

"Hmm. Well, I'll have to let them know about them then, I'd rather not be found holding a YELLOW weapon again, even if it was technically justified as an equipment officer, maybe... though I'd like to use one myself sometime..."

My voice trails off, and I snap to after a moment.

"Oh right, the shells. I'll just get those for now."

I finally decide to complete the purchase of my shells and triggers, and start putting them away once the transaction is complete.

written by Jam on Feb 27, 2013 07:10

I greet Speed-Y.

"My confession went well, how about yours?"

written by Gligar on Feb 27, 2013 11:22

Confession booths, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y confirms that his confession went well and asks about Speed-Y's own confession. He'd better have a good reason for taking more than the mandatory amount of time. Though... given that he is also alive, it is clear that, whatever happened in there, it did not culminate in him losing a clone for treason.

Though he still could, of course.

JHT Defence Company High Clearance Area, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

With another look at the flamethrowers, L4-O says that he'll have to inform his superiors of their existence. Even though he is the Equipment Officer, it would raise less suspicion if they were to purchase the flamethrowers themselves. "Too right," agrees the BLUE. "It'd only take one INFRARED to get suspicious of you carrying equipment beyond your clearance, and suddenly you're waking up in the cloning station with nothing. And another Troubleshooter appears, ready to be shot at. Not that that's a bad thing; the sector always needs more Troubleshooters..."

Then L4-O notices that he still needs to pay, and does so, picking up his purchases. "Is that everything, then?" the BLUE asks.

written by Speeder on Feb 27, 2013 13:34

I smile and say.

"Oh, I am not terminated, erased or brainscrubbed! This is good, ins't it?"

I look HAPPY.

"So, anything new? What the rest of the team is doing? Any new attacks?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 27, 2013 15:31

"Hmm. I suppose, unless there's another interesting sidearm or something that an ORANGE like myself can use."

"Though I suppose blasters might be enough, I've gotten to be a pretty decent shot."

I take one last look around the room at the non cone-rifle ORANGE weapons, if there are any.

written by Gligar on Feb 27, 2013 15:40

Confession booths, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y exclaims that he is not to be subject to termination or brainscrub, or anything like that. So that's good, right?

Except that he still hasn't explained what took him so long.

JHT Defence Company High Clearance Area, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O decides that he's done. Unless there's an interesting ORANGE weapon available. Or failing that, he'll stick to the blaster; he's getting good at it.

"Oh yeah," the BLUE says. "That'd explain that..." He hands back the repaired blaster.

L4-O looks around one last time, and ascertains that there are no ORANGE Clearance weapons in the high clearance area.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 27, 2013 18:20

I put the blaster away.

"Looks like I'm done back here then, thanks for the repair and shells."

[1321]

I start making my way back out.

written by Jam on Feb 27, 2013 19:14

"Hmm... Not much is happening... L4-O went to get more cone-rifle shells, and there's a scrubot trying to set some pallets on fire, but beyond that, things have been pretty uneventful..."

written by Speeder on Feb 27, 2013 19:27

"I see..."

Oh, the pallets caught on fire?"

written by Gligar on Feb 27, 2013 20:44

Confession booths, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y explains what's been happening while he's been confessing. That is to say, not really all that much. Oh, there's the pallets that got set on fire by the scrubot, and L4-O going out for some cone rifle shells, but that's about it.

Speed-Y inquires about the pallet fire.

JHT Defence Company High Clearance Area, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

L4-O decides that he's now done, thanks the BLUE, and heads out.

JHT Defence Company, Corridor A1, Iota Subsector

The jackobot, noticing him leaving, moves out of the way to allow him to do so, before taking up its position at the door.

L4-O retraces his steps, soon finding himself outside Iota Subsector.

Roadway, by the Iota Subsector entrance

He finds Nukabot still here waiting for him.

written by Kristos on Feb 27, 2013 21:08

Hoping Cyrus-R's little stunt proves distracting enough, I attempt to turn on the fan from the terminal, too rushed to note whether I'm setting the direction positive or negative.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 27, 2013 22:05

I hop back on Nukabot.

"Okay, looks like I'm done here! Back to the bunker then."

written by Cryoburner on Feb 28, 2013 01:51

"Arrrrrr! Arrrrrrrr!! Arrrrrrrrrrr!!!"

I clench my injured hand, Arring arredly.

written by Gligar on Feb 28, 2013 18:15

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

While the commies debate whether to shoot just Cyrus-R or both of the Troubleshooters, Kris-R gets to work, gunning the vent fan to full power. It obliges, and roars to life once again.

It turns out that he set it to suck! And the commies are close... in fact, one of them gets pulled into it almost before the commies can react. There is a sickening grinding sound as the commie is torn up by the whirling fan.

The other commies try their best to escape, but it is difficult, and they get drawn closer to the blades of Fun™ ...

Meanwhile, Cyrus-R does nothing but wail asnoyngly because his hand is hurting.

Roadway, by the Iota Subsector entrance

L4-O hops back on to the forkbot and instructs it to return.

"I assume everything went well?" the forkbot inquires as it starts turning back onto the roadway, and heading back down it.

written by 4616599 on Feb 28, 2013 19:48

I wave as soon as L4-O comes in sight.

written by Gligar on Feb 28, 2013 22:23

Loading dock, A Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

With the scrubots elsewhere, the loading dock is almost back to its normal state... well, except for the burning pallets. They continue to burn. The good thing is, the woodyke in the pallets appears to have been treated to increase its fire resistance. With just one small side effect, namely all of this reddish smoke.

The smoke doesn't seem to be spreading all that fast, though. It is still possible for a clone to look across the loading dock and out of the still-open main door to see the approaching Nukabot.

And of course, there is a clone to do just that: Joris-O. He still hasn't bothered to go get another jumpsuit; it's almost like he wants to be fined for being out of uniform. Or maybe he has a mutation, you know, one of those that causes you to explode if you wear clothes? I hear those are fun!

Regardless of the reasons, he's there, and out of uniform. He takes the opportunity to wave as Nukabot gets closer.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 01, 2013 00:04

I grab hold of the desk, mostly with my uninjured hand.

"Hey, Kris-R! The ventilation fan seems to be acting up again. This is making it difficult for the test subjects to sing. Also, there seems to be a slug in my hand. I think someone's weapon may have malfunctioned. Might you have any more sticky labels?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 01, 2013 00:35

"Quite. I got my spare blaster repaired and picked up some extra shells. Got rid of the risky damaged ones too... shouldn't be at risk of randomly exploding while I walk around anymore."

"Well, above the normal chance, anyway."

written by Gligar on Mar 01, 2013 12:03

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O continues chatting to Nukabot about his actions in Iota Subsector. He got his blaster repaired, and sorted out his cone rifle shells - including those damaged ones. That means less chance of a spontaneous explosion.

"I approve," Nukabot says. "Spontaneous explosions tend to cause too much damage to Computer Property to be entirely non-treasonous. On the other hand, they are a large part of Troubleshooter missions."

Nukabot slows down as it approaches the bunker. "My cameras are picking up some sort of smoke," it observes.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

While he was wailing about his hand, Cyrus-R seems to have failed to notice Kris-R operating the terminal, and so attributes the fan turning on to a malfunction. Speaking of the fan, there is another grinding sound as another communist is diced.

And speaking of the communists themselves, Cyrus-R seems to have not realised that they are communists. Or maybe he's one of those clones who... gasp... doesn't believe in communists! Or maybe he just wanted to run that test so badly that he put off his own judgement.

And speaking of judgement, he has also failed to notice that he was, well, shot at, and attributes the slug in his hand to another malfunction. He request some more sticky labels.

Perhaps he is a good example of why CPU Mandate 413 exists. You've probably heard of that one: it is an extensive list of items of Computer Property and the correct manner in which they may be used. I'm pretty sure that using something in a manner not permitted under CPU Mandate 413 is most likely treason.* If Cyrus-R were a model Loyalty Officer, he would know this.

written by Speeder on Mar 01, 2013 15:25

After some time playing stare contest with Jam...

I decide to walk off.

Out of curiosity I decide to see if the office with creepy freezing clone still exists and if the creepy clone is still there.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 01, 2013 15:33

I sigh.

"What now?"

Once Nukabot stops, I get off and look for the source of the smoke.

* Funny, perhaps but still treason.

written by Gligar on Mar 01, 2013 16:12

Confession booths, Corridor A2, Emergency Bunker C-3

It seems that Speed-Y is getting bored of waiting for a reply, or anything, from Jam-Y. Or perhaps he simply does not want to explain what happened in the booth...

Whatever the reason, Jam-Y will have to wait for the answers, as Speed-Y heads off.

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Not too far away, Nukabot comes to a halt, just inside the entrance, allowing L4-O to disembark and investigate the smoke. And it does not take him long to identify the source: a stack of woodlyke pallets has been set on fire and is releasing a cloud of faintly RED smoke.

Near to the pallets, L4-O can spot evidence that scrubots have been here. And that they've been spraying something.

And then there's Joris-O by one of the inner doors, still out of uniform.

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

Emerging from the warehouse after noting that the scanning team has left, Speed-Y goes looking a specific office. You might remember it as the "home" of the Station Monitor. And so deos he.

The office itself is easy to find, situated as it is right next to the warehouse. However, when he puts his hand on the door handle to open it, he finds that it is incredibly cold - painfully so.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 01, 2013 19:17

"Well... that's not really normal."

I wonder to myself what was in the crates. I keep my distance and see if the crates are near where Stephan-R died.

If not, I wonder again to myself why the scrubots were spraying so close to the crates.

written by Jam on Mar 01, 2013 19:36

"Hmm..."

I try to follow the same way Speed-Y went.

written by Gligar on Mar 01, 2013 21:45

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Initially assuming that the pallets are, in fact, crates, L4-O investigates, wondering what might have been inside. Of course, they're not crates, just pallets. He quickly realises this, which leaves the question of why the scrubots were spraying there in the first place.

And for what it's worth, Stephan-R was near the door. These burning pallets are closer to the B Level overhang above the north and west walls (the west wall, in this case).

He also notes in passing that Joris-O seems to have sustained some sort of burns.

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

It seems that Jam-Y wondered where Speed-Y ran off to, and followed him here. He finds Speed-Y recoiling from the Station Monitor's door near the warehouse. Perhaps he wanted to go in, but something stopped him from doing so?

written by Lightning4 on Mar 01, 2013 22:04

I momentarily wonder why I thought they were crates, then just leave the thought be.

I look for a fire suppressant device.

written by Gligar on Mar 02, 2013 14:07

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O stops to think for a moment. Now, why did he mistake the pallets for crates? Perhaps because crates are made from the same type of woodlyke as the pallets, perhaps? Or perhaps he thought that the pallets were holding woodlyke crates? Or... something else?

Not that it matters. L4-O gives up on that thought and moves on to more important things, like this fire. The woodlyke, he guesses, must have been treated with something to reduce the spread of the fire, given that the fire isn't spreading, but it still needs to be extinguished. And to do that, he would need some sort of device... like, perhaps, a fire extinguisher.

But there doesn't appear to be one.

Or... what about sprinklers? There were some in the meeting hall, right? He looks up... hmmm... there are things on the ceiling that might be sprinklers. Maybe.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 02, 2013 18:57

I look around the room for anything that could be damaged by the sprinklers, if they were activated.

Though, I also wonder why the sprinklers aren't active in the first place...

written by Jam on Mar 02, 2013 20:00

'Er, are you okay?'

I also try to open the door, since it looks like that's what Speed-Y was doing.

written by Gligar on Mar 02, 2013 20:22

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

So, there are sprinklers.

But L4-O has a couple of thoughts about them. First: is there anything in the room that could be damaged if they were activated? Well, yes. There is Nukabot, and as it pointed out a weekcycle ago, it is not exactly waterproof. Okay, the team has been lucky so far, but how far do they want to press their luck like that?

Second, why haven't the sprinklers already fired up? L4-O realises that he won't get answers by just looking at them. He'll have to investigate elsewhere.

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

Jam-Y looks at Speed-Y, and wonders if he's okay. He did just run off for whatever reason, and now he's cradling his hand...

Perhaps he wanted to open the door?

Jam-Y also tries it, and quite quickly finds out that the door handle is painfully cold.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 03, 2013 00:46

I make my way to the bunker's control room. Well, outside of it anyway, I don't quite remember what clearance it was anymore...

written by Speeder on Mar 03, 2013 13:13

I look at Jam.

"What is that room? I am... curious."

I try to open the door again, using a loose part of Jam jumpsuit as glove of sorts.

written by Gligar on Mar 03, 2013 13:44

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

If he wants to find out why the sprinklers have not activated, L4-O realises that he will need to ask the subnode. Surely it knows the answer?

As such, he has made his way upstairs. The problem is, he cannot remember the security clearance required to enter the control room... That is an easy one, though. The door is open, revealing the control room's RED and ORANGE sections

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y, now recovered from the shock of the incredibly cold handle, admits to curiosity about the room, and wants to know what is inside.

He decides to try again. This time, however, he takes a small precaution, and uses some cloth to insulate himself from the cold metal. So prepared, he finds that the handle moves easily. The door, however, appears to be stuck. On trying to open it, the faint sounds of something cracking can be heard. Perhaps whatever it is could be shifted?

In doing this, Speed-Y accidentally exposes Jam-Y's hand to the handle again. Why? Well, it might have something to do with the fact that he used Jam-Y's jumpsuit as the cloth.

written by Speeder on Mar 03, 2013 15:39

I release Jam.

"oops, sorry."

I then stare down at the door like if this would open it.

written by Gligar on Mar 03, 2013 18:28

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

It may take a little while, but it looks like Speed-Y does eventually realise that he just use Jam-Y's jumpsuit as an insulator to let him try the handle. And to his credit, he does apologise. And it appears that he still wants to open the door... the problem is, how? It's not like he has any equipment to do the job... does he? So all that is left is to stare at the door. And that has about as much effect as you might imagine - that is, no effect at all. Well, one effect: he gets angry.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

As the Troubleshooters watch, another commie is sucked into the fan (griiiiind...)

That leaves one left, and he's trying to simultaneously get away, and get a weapon ready, obviously intending to shoot them. Of course, it's difficult to both shoot and avoid getting pulled into an industrial-strength fan like this...

And all the while, Cyrus-R does absolutely nothing to remedy the situation.

Come to think of it, Kris-R seems to have spaced out as well.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 03, 2013 19:12

"Ah. Right. The security room is what's BLUE..."

I look around the control room for the sprinkler controls and/or a sprinkler status notice.

written by Speeder on Mar 03, 2013 19:52

I just outright punch the door, squarely in the middle, in frustration, not much expecting anything to happen.

But hey, it might be more effective than a stare.

written by Jam on Mar 03, 2013 23:22

I look at Speed-Y with a puzzled expression.

"For what?"

written by Cryoburner on Mar 04, 2013 04:58

"This hardworking clone looks as though he is in need of assistance. Maybe this computer terminal could help."

I try messing with the controls on the computer terminal using my injured hand, while continuing to hold firmly onto the desk with my uninjured hand.

written by Gligar on Mar 04, 2013 13:45

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O realises that he was thinking of the security office down on A Level - you know, the one place in the bunker that none of them can enter since it's BLUE - and enters.

He immediately notices a flashing notice on the terminal, which states that the scrubots' spray is prohibiting the sprinklers from activating for reasons beyond L4-O's security clearance.

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y punches the door in his anger, right in the middle. There is more cracking from inside, seeming to come from around the edges of the door, and the door does budge a little, but remains mostly closed.

An extremely cold white mist begins seeping out from around the door.

Jam-Y asks Speed-Y why. Just... why.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Still not realising that the commie is a commie, Cyrus-R decides that he... might need help.

And the help he has in mind is to shut down the fan. Of course, to do that, he would need access to the terminal. So, he pushes Kris-R out of the way (sending him towards the fan), and mashes on the keyboard with his injured hand. Ow ow ow ow ow ow.

His mashing causes a message to appear on the screen:

Please do not mash the keyboard again.

In addition, the fan somehow gets even louder. Not to mention that it is now becoming difficult for Cyrus-R to hold on to the table...

written by Speeder on Mar 04, 2013 14:59

As I see the door CAN open from violence, I just get more violent and outright kick the door with all my might, like if I wanted the door to die in a fire.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 04, 2013 15:38

I look around the room for any other interesting notices, and decide there's not much I can do here.

If there is a camera for the Loading Dock, I look for it and check the burning pallets for any nearby burnables.

written by Gligar on Mar 04, 2013 17:14

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Looking at the message, and once more around the control room (and finding no more messages) L4-O decided that there's not really much he can do here.

Except, perhaps, to glance at the two vidscreens and watch the camera feeds. As he watches, one screen cycles to a loading dock camera, showing the burning pallets. Hmm... there doesn't look to be much burnable down there... except perhaps Joris-R, who is still spacing out by the A1 inner door...

And still hasn't put on a jumpsuit.

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

Seeing the door move, even only a little, has Speed-Y thinking. If violence can move the door, he reasons, then a lot of violence will really move it. He therefore backs up for a quick run-up and kicks as hard as he can.

Now, I'm not going to lie, that did shift the door somewhat. But it seems that Speed-Y lacks the strength to move it. I wonder how he feels about that?

written by Lightning4 on Mar 04, 2013 17:23

I decide the fire probably isn't that much of a concern, and cease my watching of the loading dock and Joris-R's nudity.

I head back to the meeting hall.

written by Speeder on Mar 04, 2013 17:36

I look at the door, flustered.

I decide to do a double plate kick (ie: turn back to the door, put both hands on the ground, and spring with entire body trying to hit booth feet at the door).

written by Jam on Mar 04, 2013 20:37

I watch Speed-Y continue to try to open the door.

"We could really could use that flamethrower about now..."

written by Gligar on Mar 04, 2013 20:49

Control room, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

As he watches the camera feed, L4-O comes to the realisation that, not only is there not much he can do about it, but also that the fire probably isn't all that important a concern anyway. It'll probably burn itself out, given time. No clue as to what to do with Joris-O, but again, that'll probably sort itself out as well.

He heads back to the meeting hall.

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

He arrives to find John-O and Lucas-O chatting about their recent mission.

John-O looks up. "Hi, L4-O!"

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y tries again, only with both feet this time. He's getting really angry at this door... and CRACK! Whatever was holding the door gives way, and the door flies open, letting a blast of supercooled air out into the corridor.

Jam-Y comments that having a flamethrower would have been really nice right about now.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 04, 2013 21:23

"Hello, John-O, Lucas-O!"

I look around.

"Where are the YELLOWS? Just wondering, I've got some information they'd probably like to hear.

"Also picked up a few more shells and got rid of the damaged ones. Should be able to do quite a bit of damage..."

I sigh a little.

"Though I had no idea cone rifle ammo was that expensive..."

written by Jam on Mar 04, 2013 21:23

"Hey, you got it open!"

I peer inside the room while shivering uncontrollably.

written by Speeder on Mar 04, 2013 23:18

I smile happily.

"Yay! It opened!!!!"

I look inside.

"Why this thing is so cold?"

written by Kristos on Mar 05, 2013 05:54

Wow! That was super-effective! I was just trying to make a distraction but suddenly I don't even see most of the fuzzy hats anymore. I attempt to brace myself on the wall around the fan and probably struggle over survival with the remaining commie.

"Cyrus-R, turn the fan off!"

written by Gligar on Mar 05, 2013 12:12

Meeting hall, C Level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O greets the two ORANGES and wonders where they YELLOWS went; he picked up some information for them. "I think they went to the confession booths," John-O tells him. "But that was a few minutecycles ago, so I don't know if they're still there."

L4-O adds that he sorted out his shells - he had no idea they cost so much. "Well, that's normal. I mean, the cone rifle's BLUE, right? And BLUEs get paid more than us."

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

Pleased that Speed-Y managed to open the door, Jam-Y looks inside, though he can't help shivering from the sudden blast of cold.

He sees that the inside is dark, with a single dim light illuminating a table, on which is a ring-for-service bell, a sheet of paper, and a pen. The pen, table and bell are covered in a clear, cold slippery substance, the same stuff that might be found in areas where the temperature controls are stuck on "super cold".

There is writing on the paper.

Speed-Y also looks inside, and wonders why it's so cold in there.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The force of the fan pulls Kris-R in, forcing him to grab hold of something on the wall while simultaneously fending off the commie, who is trying to do much the same thing. He had no idea that the fan would be this effective!

Of course, it's probably a bit too effective right now, what with him being in danger of being pulled in and all. As such, he orders Cyrus-R to shut it off.

written by Speeder on Mar 05, 2013 14:17

I look around to see if I see anyone, or anything interesting... Then I test how slippery the ground is, to know if I can actually walk without falling.

And then, I go read the paper.

written by Gligar on Mar 05, 2013 16:58

Dark Office, Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

Cautiously entering, Speed-Y looks around for anything interesting. As it turns out, the room is too dark to see anything other than the table and what it holds. There does not appear to be anyone else here.

Acting tentatively, Speed-Y takes a couple of steps, and ascertains that he will be able to walk safely as long as he is careful; the floor is extremely slippery. He is able to get to the table without falling over.

Once there, he examines the sheet of paper. It reads

MISSION ALERT MISSION ALERT MISSION ALERT

Clearance: RED

To: Team Epsilon, JHT Sector

Greetings, Troubleshooters! You have been selected for a mission of utmost importance!

Purpose of mission: CLASSIFIED

Briefing location: Transbot HK-33-2201, Platform H, JHT Sector Transtube station

Time of briefing: 23:30

Please make your way to the briefing location immediately for mission briefing. Remember, do not discuss any mission details with any unauthorised citizen.

MISSION ALERT MISSION ALERT MISSION ALERT

written by Speeder on Mar 05, 2013 17:18

I look very, very, very confused.

I take the paper with me, and walk back toward the outside.

"Hey Jam, we received a mission alert, but in a paper printed in a out of the way room... Why is that?"

I show it to him.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 05, 2013 18:10

"Good point there. Though at least we get some money as Troubleshooters."

"Maybe someday I'll get up to BLUE. But I can voice my dreams about that until I'm... BLUE in the face."

I laugh at my own bad joke,

"Hehehehee. Hehehe. Heh... Heh?"

written by Cryoburner on Mar 05, 2013 18:16

I yell over to Kris-R, "Hey, maybe you could try kicking that floorplan over the vent! It seems like that would be a surefire way to reduce the fan's speed!"

Now hanging on to the desk with both my hands, I once again try pulling myself toward the computer terminal. This time though, I try using my nose to more accurately adjust the fan speed, hopefully to levels that produce a more pleasant work environment, one more conducive to singing. I attempt to avoid mashing the buttons, but rather manipulating them precisely with my deft nasal appendage.

written by Gligar on Mar 05, 2013 20:06

Dark Office, Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

To say that Speed-Y is confused by the presence of this piece of paper - this mission alert - is an understatement, to say the least. Why did they get it here, and not through official channels? Did someone know they would be here, and leave the Mission Alert?

Though, considering the Station Monitor, that idea might not be too far fetched.

Speed-Y exits the office and returns top Jam-Y outside, still confused. He shows the notice to Jam-Y.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O accepts John-O's suggestion. They may get some pay as Troubleshooters, but...

His thoughts drift off into wishing he were BLUE. And making bad jokes about BLUEness. And such like that. But only he seems to find them funny. OH well.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Instead of actually following orders and doing anything about it, Cyrus-R suggests to Kris-R that he could just kick the floorplan over the vent.

Of course, there's a small problem with that: Kris-R is on the other side of the floorplan already, and can't reach it.

While Kris-R is unable to follow Cyrus-R's suggestion, Cyrus-R turns his attention to the terminal... and attempts to use it with his nose. Syntax error, it reports.

written by Jam on Mar 06, 2013 06:53

I stare at the mission alert, mouth agape.

"Well, that's just... I mean... Wha?"

I take the paper and read it carefully. Then, I read it again.

"I... guess we should tell the others? How much time do we even have?"

I try to check the time on my PDC.

written by Gligar on Mar 06, 2013 13:35

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

It is clear that Jam-Y is also confused. To find a Mission Alert, just randomly in some random room... just leaves way too many questions. How did it get there? Who knew they would be there? And so on. Jam-Y looks over the paper for a while, but can't find anything else written on it, or anything unusual. Except for the fact that they found it there.

But the fact is, they have it now. And since they have it, they can, at the very least, let the rest of the team know about it. But... they have until 23:30 to get to the station. What time is it now? Jam-Y checks, and learns that it is 22:30.

written by Speeder on Mar 06, 2013 13:59

I think a bit.

"Take the paper, go tell the others, I will scout ahead."

I take my PDC, just to see if I can find a map or directions about where the station is.

written by Jam on Mar 06, 2013 17:26

"Okay, we've got one hourcycle!"

I take the paper.

"I can't imagine how anyone knew we'd go into that room... Did Friend Computer tell you to go looking there or something? Or can the Uvs see into the future now? Or... Well, for all we know, they could be making the future! I'm sure they could probably mind-control a clone if they wanted, or maybe even change Memomax records. Maybe they've been carefully crafting everything that's been happening to everyone in the sector, just for their own entertainment."

I suddenly look back at Speed-Y.

"What if the only reason there's commies and mutants and zombies is that things would get really boring without them, and we'd all have nothing to do? It's almost like... CMTs only exist so we can have fun terminating them! Is it just so that all the loyal clones can be happy?!"

I think about that for a bit.

"Nah, that's crazy... Uhh, just forget I said that, okay?"

written by Gligar on Mar 06, 2013 17:53

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y gives Jam-Y the mission alert, and tells him to alert the rest of the team. In the meantime, he will scout ahead.

Jam-Y observes that they have one hourcycle to get there.

He also gets a thought. How did anyone know they'd be there? Was Speed-Y ordered to go there by Friend Computer when he was in the confession booth? Or is it something more outlandish, like the High Programmers having the ability to see into the future? Or perhaps... they could make the future! Perhaps they can use mind control, or rewrite MemoMax records, or something! Maybe they're in control of absolutely everything that is going on, just for fun! Maybe, he continues, they are even in control of the zombies, the commies, the traitors... everything! Maybe the only reason the CMTs exist is to give them something to shoot at!

He then realises what he's saying and tells Speed-Y to forget it. But still, he can't help but notice several cameras looking at him.

Treason point to Jam!⁸²⁹

Meanwhile, Speed-Y has been researching the transtube station on his PDC. He has discovered that it is located at the far end of the roadway, past Kappa Subsector.

written by Speeder on Mar 06, 2013 18:27

I frown.

"Roadways..."

I then look at Jam.

"You used the confession booth to take some illegal drug or something?"

You did not used...

ALCOHOL, DID YOU?

You know it is only for cleaning, not drinking, and that obtaining it by whatever means, specially means relating to infrared market or free enterprise is illegal, don't you know?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 06, 2013 18:36

I appear to have started napping a bit.

written by Jam on Mar 06, 2013 21:03

I take a step back as I notice the cameras pointing towards me.

"Alcohol? Clones actually drink that? Sounds dangerous... Isn't it supposed to be poisonous?"

written by Kristos on Mar 07, 2013 02:03

I continue to struggle with the clone. I consider attempting a punch or kick but decide my hold on life is plenty weak enough already with the fan at such high power.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 07, 2013 07:03

I try once again to alter the fan's speed while still holding on with both hands, this time using my tongue.

I note the keyboard's flavor.

⁸²⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: also 1PP to jam for a funny rant 😊)

written by Gligar on Mar 07, 2013 18:24

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

Speed-Y looks up from his PDC and over at Jam-Y. The way Jam-Y is speaking, it makes him think that Jam-Y might be under the influence of unapproved drugs, or even alcohol. As in, one of the major cleaning fluids.

Jam-Y seems taken aback by this, claiming that he didn't even know that alcohol was consumable. Though given that Speed-Y seems to think so, he may well be mistaken by that one.

A good thing, then, that he doesn't know what some of the high clearance clones get up to. Or the commies. Or the Mystics.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

It seems that L4-O has drifted off. Well, it has been a long daycycle.

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R once again tries to get the terminal to work... this time with his tongue. Blech! Horrible!

He notes that it is difficult to see what you're doing this way. And not seeing what you are doing can cause mishaps, such as the terminal crashing.

Meanwhile, Kris-R is having problems of his own, what with the communist trying to knock him off the wall and into the fan. And it seems that both of them are weakening...

GRIIIND

There they go. Cyrus-R has failed to save either the "hardworking clone" or his team leader.

written by Speeder on Mar 07, 2013 18:29

I look at Jam.

"Yes, it IS poisonous, and one of the effects is make people speak funny stuff, like you did now..."

I decide to start walking toward the roadway.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 07, 2013 19:29

"Snrk-Wha?"

I wake up suddenly and get my bearings.

"Oh... maybe that wasn't a dream. Seemed too... real."

I get up.

"Sounds like we need to meet the YELLOWs up on D level. Something about... a mission alert?"

written by Kristos on Mar 07, 2013 20:41

I throw the laser pistol with the modified barrel away from me (to preserve evidence) as I'm helplessly sucked in. I try to think of the fan as a teleporter to the nearest cloning station and not an instrument of bloody painful death.

written by Jam on Mar 07, 2013 22:31

"Well, I definitely didn't drink any!"

I follow Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on Mar 07, 2013 22:38

Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector

How Speed-Y knows so much about alcohol is a mystery. Perhaps it is used in the cleaning of cloning tanks? He informs Jam-Y that it is a poison, and can cause affected clones to start talking like Jam-Y just did.

Among other things.

That said, he heads off towards the roadway on A Level. Jam-Y follows, maintaining that he did not drink any alcohol.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O awakes with a start, apparently from a dream. Apparently, he heard someone tell him to go to D Level. Wait... that was too real...

John-O confirms it. "I heard it too," he says. "A definite message, not a dream. We have to go to D Level because of a mission."

"And me," Lucas-O adds.

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

While Cyrus-R continues to fail to stop the fan, a few chunks of undifferentiated cloneflesh - perhaps more, but it is impossible to detect over the roar of the fan - fall from the fan grate.

Cloning station, somewhere in JHY Sector

A clone forms in a tank. As you may have guessed, the clone is Kris-R. His third clone.

Soon, he is ready, and the tank opens.

His first look at the cloning station reveals a large number of other such tanks stretching out as far as he can see. From the colour of the floor grates outside, this is the RED Clearance cloning area. As he watches, a strip lights, reaching from his tank to... somewhere.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 07, 2013 23:34

"Well then, I guess we should go."

I start making my way out of the meeting hall, but reroute to a nearby vendobot first.

I obtain a pack of clearance appropriate algae chips.

written by Speeder on Mar 08, 2013 14:05

I stop.

"I guess you will keep following me?"

Alright... Then I will not scout ahead, I will seek the others."

I turn around and start to stroll toward the meeting hall.

written by Gligar on Mar 08, 2013 14:59*Corridor D1, Epsilon Subsector*

Speed-Y notices that Jam-Y is following him, and decides to instead look for the others. He turns round and heads for the bunker.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O tells the other two ORANGES that it's time to get going. But first, he needs something to eat. He exits the meeting hall.

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

His search takes him to a vendobot out on the concourse, where he gets himself a bag of algae chips.

The sound of footsteps on the stairwell indicates someone entering from the warehouse. And, as the door opens, it is revealed to be Jam-Y and Speed-Y.

written by Jam on Mar 08, 2013 14:59

"I already contacted them all! They should be getting here soon, I hope..."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 08, 2013 16:58

"Oh! Hi, Sirs. We were just about to meet you."

I open and start munching my algae chips.

"What's this munch munch about a mission alert?"

written by Speeder on Mar 08, 2013 17:03

I look at Jam.

"I see... that is creepy sometimes."

I take the paper from Jam if I can, and show to the others.

"I found this on that creepy freezing room on the D level."

written by Gligar on Mar 08, 2013 18:23*Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3*

Jam-Y explains to Speed-Y that he has already contacted everyone; they should be here soon. And look, L4-O, Lucas-O and John-O are already here.

No word on King-R, Azir-R, or Joris-O yet, though. He is certain he contacted them, but he doesn't know if they've responded.

In between mouthfuls of algae chips, L4-O confirms that they were just on their way to meet with the YELLOWS, and asks about the mission alert.

Speed-Y looks at Jam-Y for a moment. It seems that he still finds mental communication a little creepy at times. Which is probably for the best, given the kind of people who can also use mental communication...

But anyway. He takes the mission alert back from Jam-Y and passes it to L4-O and the other ORANGES, saying that he found it in the dark office upstairs. "But what was it doing there?" Lucas-O wonders. "Surely Our Friend would have... actually, you know what? I don't want to know."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 08, 2013 18:34

"That's really munch odd. I wonder if there's a reason for this amount of secrecy..."

munch

I pass the alert on after reading it.

written by Kristos on Mar 08, 2013 18:39

Teleportation complete. That wasn't so bad. I follow the shiny lights on the floor, looking around for chemical showers and jumpsuits.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 08, 2013 19:44

"Oh no! I'll need to gather up their pieces and take them to see the docbot! I sure hope he can sort them out alright! But first I'll have to take care of that fan..."

I try crawling onto the side of the desk opposite the fan and while still hanging on, have a look over the edge to see if I can spot any power cables going to the fan, and whether they might be reachable. I also check the current state of the terminal if it is visible from my position, to determine whether it has crashed, and whether it is in the process of rebooting, has already rebooted, or is just sitting there not doing much of anything.

written by Gligar on Mar 09, 2013 14:12*Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3*

L4-O reads the mission alert and finds it odd. What's the reason behind this secrecy? It must really be important... He passes the note to Lucas-O.

As a side note, does anyone else find his munching distracting?

Cloning station, somewhere in JHY Sector

Kris-R follows the lighted strip. He'll need a chemical shower and a jumpsuit, he realises.

The strip takes him through the rows of tanks and over to a wall, where there is a door. The chemical showers, it seems, can be found through there.

How do we know? Simple: there's a sign on the door.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R tries to see if the terminal has any cables leading from it. However, as it turns out, he can't get round to the back of the terminal from here. His attempts to do so results in his grip on the table weakening.

The terminal, by the way, doesn't seem to be doing anything meaningful. It has crashed, after all.

written by Kristos on Mar 09, 2013 21:20

Pleased at not being blinded by super thick mutation suppressing goop, I enter the chemical shower, put on a mask, and push the button. Out of a strange habit I actually double-press the button.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 09, 2013 22:50

I continue eating my algae chips. Probably running out by now...

"So we should probably get going? It doesn't appear to be too far away."

written by Gligar on Mar 10, 2013 13:52

Chemical Showers, Cloning station, somewhere in JHY Sector

Kris-R enters, grateful that the clone tank goo isn't the strange thick stuff they use in JHP Sector - you remember, it's the stuff that they use to try and suppress mutations. But still, tank goo isn't exactly the best thing to be covered by, and it's generally a good idea to clean it off as fast as possible. That's what the chemical showers are for.

Kris-R enters one of the booths - oddly, there are only a few dozen here; perhaps there are other shower facilities - and takes the necessary precautions. The only break from protocol is the fact that he presses the button twice.

The shower starts as normal. However, the lighted panel turns RED and starts emitting a beeping noise.

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O inquires as to whether they should get a move on. After all, the briefing isn't too far away, is it?

He keeps dipping into the bag of algae chips, seemingly not noticing that he has run out.

written by Jam on Mar 10, 2013 18:10

"Okay, let's go! Lead the way, Speed-Y!"

written by Gligar on Mar 10, 2013 19:59

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y agrees with L4-O: they should get going.

Of course, Jam-Y doesn't really know the way, or if he does, he's not ready to just head there by himself. He believes that, as Team Leader, it is Speed-Y's job to lead the team to the briefing. As such, he suggests that Speed-Y do just that and, well, lead them.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 10, 2013 19:59

I finally notice my bag of algae chips is empty, putting an end to my munching.

I look for the closest place to discard my bag, then get into normal following position with the group.

written by Jam on Mar 10, 2013 23:26

"Uh... Speed-Y?"

I wave my hand in front of his face.

"Hello? Anyone home?"

written by Gligar on Mar 11, 2013 13:59

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y proceeds to... do nothing.

Really. He's just standing there with a glassy-eyed stare. We may have seen this sort of thing before (WAY too many times), but it never ceases to be... weird.

Jam-Y tries to coax a response by waving his hand up and down in front of those eyes. But in the end, it's like trying to get a response out of pre-Soylent.

Meanwhile, L4-O is looking for a trash receptacle... ah, there's one. He doesn't seem to have noticed Speed-Y spacing out.

John-O seems to have noticed, though. He moves over and asks, "Sir? Are you there? Are you in control? Are you being controlled? Under attack? Your brain been bricked or something?"

written by Speeder on Mar 11, 2013 14:17

I suddenly "BOOH" on Jam face.

"Hey, just wanting to scare you! Yay! Now, off to work!"

I turn to L4.

"We need Nukabot, we need to take the roadway to reach the transtube station, where is it?"

written by Jam on Mar 11, 2013 16:52

"YAHAAH!!"

I fling myself backwards in surprise.

"Ah, don't do that!"

written by Gligar on Mar 11, 2013 18:23

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

While Jam-Y continues to try and get a response out of Speed-Y, Speed-Y... gives him a response. Specifically, by

written by Gligar on Mar 11, 2013 14:00

Let me guess: Speeder bricked his devices again.

written by Speeder on Mar 11, 2013 14:15

No! I spend the weekend away with a woman this time 😊

[1331]

frightening him, and claiming that that was his intention all along! Jam-Y doesn't take it too well, and ends up tripping over his feet and falling to the floor.

But that's not all that relevant, as Speed-Y is actually ready to get going. However to do that, they'll need Nukabot (which they haven't had a chance to repair after its encounter with a warbot earlier). He turns to L4-O and asks where it is.

Chemical shower, Cloning station, somewhere in JHY Sector

Kris-R continues his shower, seemingly wanting to take extra care to get the goo off his body. The RED light doesn't go away, and actually feels rather warm. A bit too warm, to be honest.

The light remains even after the rest of the shower shuts down.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The pull of the fan loosens Cyrus-R's grip on the table, and he just barely manages to hold on...

The terminal suddenly beeps.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 11, 2013 20:17

"Nukabot is at the loading dock. I just went for a little ride out to pick up some cone rifle shells for myself, and get my spare blaster fixed..."

"Oh, there's YELLOW flamethrowers there too. 500 credits each. Just thought I'd mention... though now we probably don't have any more time to go there..."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 11, 2013 20:51

"A beep! That can only mean good things!"

I try improving my grip on the desk, and if possible to see the terminal screen from my present location, have a look at that. I also note whether the door to the corridor is open, and if not, where the air is coming from to replace that pumped out by the fan.

written by Speeder on Mar 11, 2013 20:56

I smile happily.

"Sure... If we have time, next time I will see to get that. But now we need to get to that transtube station... I have a hunch, that something will happen that, and I am not referring to the briefing."

I start to walk toward the loading dock.

written by Gligar on Mar 11, 2013 23:42

Concourse C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O lets everyone know that Nukabot is where it should be: in the loading dock. He just took it for a spin to go sort out his spare blaster and cone rifle shells.

He also tells the YELLOWS that the weapons place he visited also had flamethrowers for sale at 500cr each. They probably don't have the time to visit, though, since they have this briefing to attend.

Speed-Y decides that perhaps he will go and visit the place... later. Right now they need to get to the transtube station., And he has a hunch that something will happen there other than their briefing...

He starts walking through the bunker, towards the loading dock.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

On hearing the terminal beep, Cyrus-R decides to investigate. First, though, he needs to not be pulled into the fan...

There. That's sorted out his grip. From where he is now, he can see that the terminal appears to have rebooted, and is back at the directory. He can also look forward and see the door. Why? Because the door is open. It was not closed again after the commies entered, remember?

written by Jam on Mar 12, 2013 16:27

I follow Speed-Y towards wherever it is we're going.

written by Gligar on Mar 12, 2013 18:15

Emergency Bunker C-3

Jam-Y joins Speed-Y in walking towards the loading dock, followed shortly by the two ORANGES - but not L4-O, for some reason. Perhaps he is contemplating the taste of those algae chips? Maybe he's still hungry? In any case, he remains behind.

It becomes clear as they walk that the two REDs, currently somewhere on C Level, are not following them.

As they near the loading dock, they catch sight of Joris-O - who has still not put on a jumpsuit - standing around near one of the doors.

Finally, the team reaches the loading dock. That pallet fire is still burning, but does not seem to want to spread. Probably a good thing, in the long run. It is being... well, "watched" I guess, by Nukabot.

The main door remains open.

written by Speeder on Mar 12, 2013 18:26

I look at Nukabot.

"Nukabot! We need you..."

And you are not even repaired! This pains me... You are a good friend! I hope you remain with us longer, losing Massacrebot makes me unhappy enough already."

I look at Joris, and tilt my head to the side, trying to understand what I am seeing.

Then look at the pallets.

"What happened there?"

I point to the fire.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 12, 2013 20:53

Realizing I'm being left behind, I scamper to catch up with the rest.

written by Gligar on Mar 12, 2013 23:29

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Passing Joris-O, Speed-Y calls out to Nukabot, telling it that its services are needed once again. Even though they have not yet managed to get it repaired after last mission. That last is a cause for concern to Speed-Y; after all, they've already lost one bot, they can't really afford to lose another. In more ways than one.

He looks back at Joris-O, trying to ascertain exactly what his problem is. Joris-O, incidentally, seems to be looking at Jam-Y with suspicion.

He (Speed-Y) then looks at the pallets, and wonders what happened. "Your best source of information regarding the pallets would be the scrubots who sprayed them with cleaning solution," Nukabot answers. "They claim that the spray is due to routine cleaning that the bunker has missed, due to being sealed for so long."

As Nukabot is speaking, L4-O pushes past Joris-O, clearly not wanting to be left behind. It is quite possible that they will need as many Troubleshooters as they can get.

Which makes you wonder about those REDs. Why haven't they shown themselves?

written by Speeder on Mar 12, 2013 23:36

I notice the missing REDs.

"Strange..."

I look around.

"Can someone go fetch the RED troubleshooters please? I know we used to call the team LightSpeedJam but I guess we need everyone... Even you!"

I stare at the clone missing mandatory basic environmental protection equipment.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 13, 2013 09:03

"I guess I can go look. I won't guarantee bringing them back though, if they're going to need some dragging."

I make my way back into the bunker, and the last place I remember seeing the REDs.

written by Trad.a on Mar 13, 2013 12:40

I'm just super impressed by how long you guys have been playing this game.

written by Gligar on Mar 13, 2013 12:56

It helps that there are players who want to keep playing. But more are always welcome.

Or perhaps some of our idlers would like to start playing again? I'm looking at you 4616599, Alibeymakir, Azirphael, E_ned4, Malkom, Megapun, Mepamung031, Sebbo and Starcheer

written by Gligar on Mar 13, 2013 13:42

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y wonders why the REDs are missing. All he really knows is that their not being here is strange. Perhaps he will need to file a Suspicious Activity Report concerning the strangeness?

Maybe later. Right now, he just wants them here. To that end, he asks someone to go and get them. And in the meantime, he can glare meaningfully at the clone who doesn't seem to understand the hygiene regulations concerning wearing one's jumpsuit, namely Joris-O.

L4-O volunteers to go find the REDs, but can't guarantee that he will be able to get them to come here since it might involve dragging. (And we all know that dragging is a Team Sigma thing, not a Team Epsilon thing) He heads back upstairs.

Corridor C1, Emergency Bunker C-3

Following his memory, L4-O manages to find the two REDs. They seems to be walking in the direction of the meeting hall.

written by Speeder on Mar 13, 2013 19:30

I get upset, and decide to put Joris jumpsuit on Joris.

written by Gligar on Mar 13, 2013 19:49

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y continues to glare at Joris-O for a while... and then acts.

He approaches, and forces Joris-O's jumpsuit out of his grip, taking possession of it. It turns out that it's a RED jumpsuit, and has been partially dissolved by something - there are holes in it, consistent with the sorts of cleaning chemicals used by the scrubots.

But even a damaged jumpsuit is better than no jumpsuit, right? Speed-Y could probably tell us a few things about the sentimental value of such jumpsuits, after all, and, even though it would still fail a hygiene inspection, it's better than wandering around naked.

But does Joris-O even care? I doubt it. He seems more interested in glaring at Jam-Y with distaste. That's why he doesn't react when Speed-Y knocks him to the floor and begins forcing him into the jumpsuit. And if there were a BLUE or higher here who had cut his hormone suppressants, he'd probably find something wrong with that statement.

[1333]

It turns out that it's difficult to force someone into a jumpsuit when you don't have help. Or maybe Speed-Y just doesn't have much experience in forcing someone into a jumpsuit. He does make some progress, though.

written by Jam on Mar 13, 2013 20:37

I notice Joris-O glaring at me, and glare back at him.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 13, 2013 21:16

I notice the REDs and follow them.

"Hello? You two should be joining us for the mission. We'll need everybody on the team, after all..."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 13, 2013 22:02

I try using my legs, along with my spring-foot, to improve my grip on the desk even further. If I'm able to get a better grip than from just using my hands, I reach for the terminal with my uninjured hand and use it to try shutting down the fan.

written by Speeder on Mar 13, 2013 22:27

I keep wrestling Joris and his jumpsuit.

"What happened to this jumpsuit? Why is it full of holes? What happened to Joris leg?"

written by Gligar on Mar 13, 2013 23:11

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Joris-O continues to glare at Jam-Y (and Jam-Y at Joris-O) even as Speed-Y continues to force him into the damaged jumpsuit. While also wondering how it got into that state... and how Joris-O got injured. He manages to mostly get Joris-O dressed... that'll have to do; the damage to the jumpsuit ensures that the front zip won't close all the way up. So that's about as sorted as it's going to get.

Jam-Y and Joris-O continue to glare at each other. There is a definite air of distrust between the two.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

As the two REDs enter the meeting hall, L4-O closes the distance, entering as they sit down and begin eating something.

He tells them that they should be joining the team for the mission - they'll be needing everyone. "I'm not even sure I'm really part of the team," King-R says. "I don't even know where I am! Azir-R says that this is your base, but... where is that?"

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R still wants to turn that fan off. And to do that, he'll need access to the terminal. He tries to secure that... hmmm, it's a bit of a stretch, but if he does that he'll be able to use the terminal and not go anywhere.

He hopes.

He gives it a try. Yup... there we go. The fan control app.

He tries manipulating the controls. Hopefully it won't crash this time.

Ah, there we go. It'll take some time for the fan to spin down, though. It was kind of in overdrive mode, after all.

written by Speeder on Mar 13, 2013 23:49

I stand, cross my arms, and nod, satisfied.

written by Jam on Mar 14, 2013 05:43

I continue to glare at Joris-O.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 14, 2013 09:03

"You're in JHT sector. Subsector Epsilon... C level. And yeah, it's our base. It was some kind of apparently rarely-used emergency bunker up until we were allowed to take over..."

written by Kristos on Mar 14, 2013 17:30

If the shower has ceased, then I exit and look for a jumpsuit. I also look for any other free items. That beeping and flashing red light is really annoying.

written by Gligar on Mar 14, 2013 18:22

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y looks satisfied with his work.

Joris-O still hasn't noticed due to continuing to glare at Jam-Y.

Jam-Y glares back.

Are any of them going to do anything?

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O explains, in brief, about the bunker to King-R. "It's a bit odd that they'd let you take over a bunker like this, but okay," he replies. "But I still don't know whether I'm in the team properly."

Chemical showers, Cloning station, somewhere in JHY Sector

Noticing that the shower has finished its job, Kris-R steps out of it, and is relieved to learn that that red light and the heat only seem to affect the shower itself.

He begins looking for supplies, and notices that the lighted strip is back.

Outfitting room, Cloning station, somewhere in JHY Sector

Following it through a door takes him to what seems to be an outfitting room, clearance RED. Present are racks of jumpsuits and laser pistols, as well as vendobots containing PDCs, ME Cards, post-decanting forms, and a few refreshments.

written by Speeder on Mar 14, 2013 19:39

While L4 does not come back, I see if there anything that I can quickly repair on Nukabot.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 14, 2013 21:41

"Well, the question isn't whether you're in the team properly, but rather, do you want to be in the team? We can use pretty much any help we can get, and I'm sure Friend Computer will recognize you..."

written by Gligar on Mar 14, 2013 22:51

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Well, it looks like someone is doing something other than just standing around! And no prizes for guessing that it's Speed-Y.

Specifically, he has a quick look at Nukabot. He can easily see that the kevlar plating is something they can't fix in the bunker; they just don't have the spares. The same for the seat, though with a bit of work, maybe they could rework some other seat to fit in there...

There are a couple of lights he could replace, though. And maybe they have some spare parts they could use to replace some of the manual controls? With a bit of work, of course.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O asks King-R whether he wants to be part of the team. Because if so, they can use all the help they can get. And, well, he is a Troubleshooter...

"I guess you're right," King-R says. "I'm not sure what help I could be, but I guess I could tag along."

written by Speeder on Mar 14, 2013 23:12

I see if any of the spare parts are available around the dock.

written by Jam on Mar 14, 2013 23:35

I glare even harder!

"Thinking of treasonous things again, Joris-O?"

written by Cryoburner on Mar 15, 2013 00:05

I return to holding on to the desk with both hands until the fan has slowed to a suitably safe speed.

"Well, it's a good thing I got that shut off before anyone got hurt. Well, aside from Kris-R and all those hardworking clones. But aside from them, that is. Hmm..."

I look if there appear to be any recoverable parts of Kris-R or the other clones and their inventories laying around, and analyze the current state of the office. I also note whether the indestructible loyalty transcripts recorder is still recording, and whether its non-slip rubberlyke feet managed to hold it in place throughout that little ordeal.

written by Kristos on Mar 14, 2013 17:26

Speeder said:

No! I spend the weekend away with a woman this time

That was my first guess...

written by Gligar on Mar 14, 2013 22:57

Anyone think it's worth creating a (re-)signup thread?

written by Lightning4 on Mar 15, 2013 00:37

"Well, we should probably go then. We have to get to a briefing right away."

I check to make sure both REDs will come along, then if they are, start making my way back to the loading dock.

written by Gligar on Mar 15, 2013 14:38

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

While Jam-Y continues his glaring session with Joris-O (who, he says, might be having treasonous thoughts again), Speed-Y has a quick look around the loading dock, just to see if there are any parts he could use down here. He finds some light bulbs that had not yet been moved up to storage.

Meeting hall, C level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O decides that they should probably get going, and heads for the door before looking back at the REDs. As mentioned, King-R has decided to tag along, but what about Azir-R? He didn't say anything earlier, though he is part of the team already...

Yes, it looks like he wants to come along as well. Which might be a good thing; his throwing skills may come in handy.

Team Sigma's office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Now that the fan has spun down to something resembling normal, Cyrus-R reveals that he doesn't really regard his team leader as someone to be respected... almost as if he were a commie. I hope he has evidence to back that up, or else his report will look a little false.

(Speaking of reports... that transcripts recorder has not moved from where he placed it. It is even still recording. They're called Indestructible for a reason: namely, they're... well, indestructible. Well, as far as Cyrus-R can tell.)

Now that he believes that it is safe to do so, Cyrus-R decides to investigate the remains of Kris-R and the commies. An initial assessment is easy: there appears to be nothing left but a pile of pre-Soylent. Raw, and unhygienic. And, as Cyrus-R should know, failing a hygiene inspection is insubordination.

written by Speeder on Mar 15, 2013 14:46

"Alright, better than nothing."

I decide then to fix Nukabot lights.

written by Gligar on Mar 15, 2013 19:39Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Guess what? Joris-O and Jam-Y are still glaring at each other? Will either of them, you know, do something?

Speed-Y is doing something. As you might have guessed, he is having a go at repairing Nukabot's broken lights. And to be honest, he's doing a pretty good job of it. It's a shame that the colours don't exactly match any more, but when you get right down to it, does it really matter? And even if it does, they can be changed again later. Better to have a set of working lights that don't match than a set of matching, non-working ones.

There. That should do it.

Stairwell, B level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O and the two REDs continue towards the loading dock.

Outfitting room, Cloning station, somewhere in JHY Sector

A lighted strip appears on the floor, indicating several of the vendobots, as well as the jumpsuit rack.

written by Speeder on Mar 15, 2013 19:44

I know see if there are any broken part that is better to remove for our team safety or Nukabot own safety, like any damaged dangling parts that might get caught on tires or other moving parts if they fall off.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 15, 2013 21:45

"Hmm... It looks like Kris-R's injuries are extensive. I will have to see the docbot about this. It's too bad there isn't a wastepaper basket here to transport him to the medical bay in."

I switch off the transcripts recorder, close its case, and take it with me as I head off toward the medical bay.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 15, 2013 21:48

I continue until I reach the loading dock proper.

written by Gligar on Mar 15, 2013 23:55Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

While Jam-Y and Joris-O continue their EPIC STARING MATCH involving doing absolutely nothing of interest, Speed-Y continues working on Nukabot. He's done with the lights, but a couple of the roof supports are damaged, and could potentially cause injury to the driver. Friend Computer's guidelines say not to mess with them, but... they're not really necessary, are they? There are way more than Nukabot needs, surely 😊

He inspects them, and realises that they could be removed relatively easily. The remaining supports will surely be sufficient.

He starts working on it. After all, equipment maintenance is important... it might even be the difference between a successful mission and a Code 7.

While he's working on that, L4-O arrives with the REDs.

Team Sigma's Office, Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Clearly, Cyrus-R is ignorant of the "chunky soylent rule": if a clone is injured such that his head, or more of him, is the the consistency of chunky Soylent, the only way to get him back is to wait for his next clone.

To his credit, though, he does want to get Kris-R back, and would be prepared to take that mass of pre-Soylent to the docbot. He just doesn't have the means and the docbot would not be able to help anyway so all he can do is go and fetch the docbot and most likely get charged a huge amount for being a complete [DFSR]. He picks up the recorder, turning it off as he does, and heads out.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

On entering the corridor, Cyrus-R notices more fuzzy-hatted communists, talking loudly in a language he is not cleared to know.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 16, 2013 08:59

"Two REDs, ready to go!"

I notice Speed-Y working on Nukabot.

"Anything I can do to assist?"

I assess Nukabot's damage as well, to determine what else may need to be fixed before the mission starts.

written by Gligar on Mar 16, 2013 14:30Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O notices Speed-Y working on Nukabot and offers to assist. From what he can see, Speed-Y has repaired the bot's lights - they look to be slightly different colours, but they should be okay - and has moved on to some of the roof supports. Specifically, he's removing them - they must have become damaged during the warbot incident. Let's hope they aren't needed.

Beyond that, there are the kevlar plates on the left side - they'll need to find replacements for those as there are none in the bunker - as well as the operator's seat (which they could probably replace with another seat with a bit

written by Kristos on Mar 16, 2013 17:56

Well, it can't hurt. If nobody replies appropriately we can just derail the topic as always. XD of work) and the controls themselves. L4-O isn't too sure about them. And besides, Nukabot can drive itself.

[1336]

written by Kristos on Mar 16, 2013 17:52

Post-decanting forms? That sounds bothersome. I ask the vendobot what the post-decanting forms are for. At least that annoying red light is gone. Oh, refreshments! But they're not free, are they? Vatcrap.

written by Gligar on Mar 16, 2013 18:12

Outfitting room, Cloning station, somewhere in JHY Sector

Noticing the forms, Kris-R asks the vendobot what they are for. "The Post Decanting forms," the vendobot tells him, "allow you, the freshly-decanted clone, to give a full self-assessment of the functioning of your freshly-cloned body, which in turn may highlight potential issues with the cloning process such as the addition or deletion of mutations, alteration to thought patterns, or insanity. Such issues are not the fault of Cloning Services and are caused by outside influence, including but not limited to secret society sabotage, power loss, Internal Security profiling, and [DFSR]. Once completed, the form is then used by Cloning Services to determine whether your clone is fit to be released into Alpha Complex as a whole."

Kris-R notices the refreshments but realises that he has no way to pay for them. Perhaps if he had an ME Card...?

"I must add," the vendobot continues, "that if the post-decanting forms are not completed, Cloning Services retain ownership of your clone, and may act as they see fit."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 16, 2013 19:37

"Hello, helpful clones. Might you know where I could find a wastepaper basket?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 16, 2013 21:07

I decide to start looking for a good replacement to the operator's seat. After all, I'll need a place to sit if I'm the one in that position most of the time!

written by Gligar on Mar 16, 2013 22:09

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O decides to tackle the seat. After all, he's the one who is going to be sitting in it!

Of course, to do that, he'll need a replacement. Hmm... there are none in the loading... hang about, what about that box in the corner? It was put there by the HPD&MC crew and is labelled as containing chairs from the old confession booths.

While L4-O investigates the box, finding that it does indeed contain two chairs (clearly from a confession booth, although the usual restraints, injectors, and other doodads have been removed), Speed-Y finishes removing the damaged supports from Nukabot.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R asks the commies whether they know where he could find a wastepaper basket.

Er... he's talking to commies... surely that would attract attention...? Yes, there's a camera or fifty looking at him.

But clearly, he doesn't care about the cameras. All he cares about are his own thoughts.

Hmmm... I suspect foul play here.

And not just because the commies clearly have no interest in telling Cyrus-R where his precious wastepaper basket can be found (one even claims that there is no such thing)...

written by Jam on Mar 16, 2013 22:48

I continue staring at Joris-O.

"Well, you should really get going. How about you go help Speed-Y with whatever it is he's doing? Just don't do anything treasonous, I'll be watching you..."

written by Kristos on Mar 17, 2013 01:31

Hmmph. Satisfactory answer. I put on a jumpsuit and take a laser pistol. I attempt to obtain a PDC, a ME Card, and a post-decanting form. Then I look for something to write with.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 17, 2013 10:41

"Hmm. This will do... I guess. Just hope it hasn't been used too much."

I grab one of the chairs and bring it over to Nukabot, and start determining just how I'm going to attach it to Nukabot.

written by Gligar on Mar 17, 2013 13:57

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O decides that the confession booth chair will be sufficient for installing onto Nukabot. He just hopes that it hasn't seen too much use.

He pulls one over to Nukabot. After a quick look, he determines that he'll have to dismount the remains of the old chair before installing this one - and it'll need a little alteration to fit the forkbot's mounting holes.

Just how much time do they have left?

written by Gligar on Mar 16, 2013 23:45

And done! Let's see if this has any effect 😊

Outfitting room, Cloning station, somewhere in JHY Sector

Apparently deciding that the vendobot's explanation of the post-decanting form is acceptable, Kris-R sets about equipping himself - he grabs a jumpsuit and wears it; he presses his tongue against the ME Card dispenser's scanner to get his card; he then uses the ME Card to get himself a PDC, a laser pistol with a RED barrel, and a post-decanting form - causing the vendobot to also dispense a disposable black pen...

As he does that, the lighted strips change, indicating another door on the opposite wall.

written by Speeder on Mar 17, 2013 18:42

I look at the bot without a chair, and see if there are space for someone to sit on it chairless anyway.

"L4, since the controls don't work, I don't think we need now a chair..."

written by Gligar on Mar 17, 2013 19:25

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y looks at what L4-O is doing. It's clear that he thinks that they don't need a chair now that the controls are inoperative.

Does that mean that he's questioning Friend Computer's decision to put a chair on a forkbot? I think it does! And not only that, but Friend Computer also decided to put working controls on a forkbot... controls which have not yet been repaired! In its current state, Nukabot would get them fined for failing to maintain their equipment!

That being said, there is definitely space to sit even without a chair, though it would fall below mandatory seating arrangements to leave the chair out.

Though... their time is short, so...

... oh, right. It looks like L4-O is almost done with his modifications.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 17, 2013 19:33

I finish up adding the new chair, and admire my handiwork.

I then get into the chair and wait to go.

written by Speeder on Mar 17, 2013 19:43

I climb into my usual spot.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 18, 2013 03:41

"Well, that's troublesome. I'll certainly have a difficult time locating a wastepaper basket if they don't exist. Thanks, anyway!"

I continue on down the corridor.

written by Kristos on Mar 18, 2013 15:35

Why is the floor so demanding? I frown and follow the lights.

written by Gligar on Mar 18, 2013 15:37

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

L4-O finishes the modifications and mounts the chair. It doesn't look as neat as the original mounting, but it's actually not all that bad... and to be quite honest, it kind of gives Nukabot that unique touch it was lacking.

Now done, L4-O climbs into the seat. Speed-Y may well have been right, he thinks, about it not really being necessary until they can repair the controls, but at least Nukabot has a visible operator this way. Right?

Speed-Y also climbs up onto Nukabot. This causes Lucas-O to ask, "Are we ready? We must be..."

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R thanks the commies and heads off. Apparently, he still believes that Kris-R can be saved. Either that or he was ignoring the commies when they said that wastepaper baskets don't exist.

As he walks, the commies look on. "What's his deal? Asking about things that don't exist...?"

"Be still comrade. And be alert. He may be an intruder. Fake stupidity is a sign of Computerism."

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R reaches the intersection and notices that there are now armed guards at the doors. They're carrying slughtrowers and wearing ill-fitting armour that looks like it was taken from someone's dead body. In short, they're trying to look like Internal Security but failing.

written by Gligar on Mar 18, 2013 19:14

Outfitting room, Cloning station, somewhere in JHY Sector

Kris-R wonders about these lighted strips. How can they be so demanding? Why are they so demanding?

Not that it... well, actually it probably does matter. Kris-R notes that he hasn't seen another clone in the station yet. Surely the place should be staffed? If so, he would have seen the staff by now. So is the light system to replace the staff? Why?

He puts the thoughts behind him for a moment, and follows the lights.

Release office, Cloning station, somewhere in JHY Sector

Following them takes Kris-R to what seems to be an office.

It certainly looks like one, with the desks, chairs, terminals, miscellaneous forms, pieces of paper, empty cups, pens, etc. arranged such that a team of perhaps ten clones could go about their work comfortably. And perhaps the clones were going about their business recently, given the terminal displays, forms, pens, and such. But... there is no sign of the clones themselves.

written by Speeder on Mar 18, 2013 19:25

I look at Lucas.

[1338]

"Ready? Well, no, but we don't have time."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 18, 2013 19:58

"Let's do this then."

I check the time on my PDC.

"Okay Nukabot, our goal was... the transtube station here, platform H? We should probably get there."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 18, 2013 21:18

I continue toward the medical bay. I stop at the entrance if it happens to be guarded.

written by Kristos on Mar 18, 2013 22:19

The lights of destiny have failed me. I look for any unfinished food or drinks to counteract the disappointing atmosphere. Not that I really care. Then I look over my form, noting all the sections present.

written by Gligar on Mar 18, 2013 23:14

Loading dock, A level, Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y informs Lucas-O that no, they aren't ready. Getting ready would take time they just don't have. "Oh..."

The two ORANGES take their place on Nukabot. As for the REDs... well, I guess there are places to hang on there. But what about Jam-Y? And Joris-O?

L4-O thinks that they should get going. After all, it's... 22:50, according to his PDC. And they have to get to the transtube station...

Nukabot replies by starting up and rolling out.

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

It doesn't take long for Cyrus-R to reach the medical bay. However, there is a problem: the door has been locked. At least there are no guards.

Release office, Cloning station, somewhere in JHY Sector

Looking disappointed, Kris-R looks for something, anything, to lift his spirits, and finds a can of B3 (Extra Classic, RED clearance, if you were wondering) in a desk drawer. Perhaps he can drink it while filling out his form? There appears to be three sections: one for his personal evaluation of his new clone, one to identify possible anomalies or mutations, and one which is a simple feedback questionnaire. As for submitting it, the office appears to be equipped with a blotbot - he can simply insert his form into the slot and have the bot process the form.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 19, 2013 00:14

I simply start watching the path ahead for anything interesting.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 19, 2013 01:49

"Well, this problem is problematic. I suppose the Docbot might have some difficulty getting Kris-R's parts out of the vent anyway, now that I think of it. Even so, a medical bay that is locked is not a very effective medical bay."

I have a closer look at my hand injury, and see if I can pull the slug out, while heading back toward the front desk near the factory entrance.

written by Gligar on Mar 19, 2013 13:43

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

As Nukabot continues its journey, L4-O keeps his usual eye out for any signs of trouble. Or movement. Or, well, anything at all.

Glancing in the direction of the earlier explosion, he can see that IntSec are still swarming the place. Even though there's nothing actually there except a crater.

This, of course, means that the upcoming checkpoint remains unmanned. Nukabot decides to just pass right through.

Corridor B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Seemingly abandoning his plan, Cyrus-R looks at his injured hand. IT looks like the slug is easy to remove OW OW OW

It also causes the hand to hurt like... well, like something that really hurts... when he pulls it out.

Still in pain, he starts walking down the corridors, passing guards and fuzzy-hatted communists alike, until he...

...almost reaches the front desk.

There, he encounters an obstacle in the form of more fuzzy-hatted commies. All pointing slugthrowers at him.

"So it is you, intruder."

written by Speeder on Mar 19, 2013 14:15

I look again at the explosion.

"Weird... why IntSec is so interested on that?"

written by Kristos on Mar 19, 2013 15:17

I fill out the form...

In the personal evaluation I state that my new clone seems to be performing as intended, though other clones that should be in the area do not seem to be performing as intended.

In the anomaly/mutation section I indicate that there are no reference clones present so I cannot tell what might be considered an anomaly or mutation.

If there is a place for additional feedback, I state that complementary B3 is more Fun than bought B3.

Then I submit the form to the blotbot.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 19, 2013 18:14

"Oh, that's where I tried disarming that bomb. I just let it blow up since I ran out of time and there was nothing else to damage in the area except me."

I look at the explosion for a little bit longer, then start checking to see if we're leaving anyone behind.

[1339]

written by Gligar on Mar 19, 2013 18:21

Roadway, near Emergency Bunker C-3

Speed-Y can't help but look back at the IntSec swarming around the crater as they continue on. He wonders why they would be so interested in a crater... perhaps there's something special about it? but for the life of him he can't think of a reason why it would be so special...

L4-O points out that the crater is where the bomb exploded; he ran out of time when trying to disarm it, and, well, there was nothing to damage over there. Except him, but he managed to get away in time.

Nukabot continues on, past Iota Subsector, and out of sight of the crater. Ahead, the Industrial Subsectors loom, with the ever-present smog as thick as ever.

L4-O looks back along the roadway, and realises that Jam-Y and Joris-O are just kind of running along behind...

Release office, Cloning station, somewhere in JHY Sector

Kris-R fills out his form. On it, he states that he has been hampered by lack of clones in the station, meaning that, clearly, they aren't doing their job of ensuring the smooth operation of the cloning station and/or providing references for mutation tests.

And yes, buried somewhere among seemingly-unrelated questions is one about B3. He notes that free B3 is better than B3 you have to pay for. For nothing better to add, he also puts that in the "any other comments" box.

That done, the form is posted at the blotbot, which promptly makes noises at him, and blinks its lights in strange patterns.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 19, 2013 22:29

"OW OW OW OW! ARRRR!"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 19, 2013 23:41

I start keeping a vigilant eye on the surroundings, especially as we approach the Industrial Subsectors. No doubt I still think there might still be a zombie here or there...

written by Gligar on Mar 20, 2013 14:25

Roadway, near Industrial Subsectors

As they approach, L4-O maintains his vigilance. After all, it was only a few hourcycles ago that the Subsectors were crawling with zombies; there might still be a few around.

As he watches, a big flatbed truckbot comes into view through the smog, slowly crawling forward under the weight of the remains of the malfunctioning warbot. Some of the Mutant Mashers remain in the vicinity, making sure it doesn't spontaneously reactivate or get attacked by mad cyborgs or something.

Soon, Nukabot reaches the checkpoint. But that truckbot is also heading in this direction.

Corridor A, near the entryway, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Instead of reacting to the communists, Cyrus-R is too busy feeling sorry for himself (and screaming his lungs out) to notice that one of the communists just fired at him. Specifically, his other hand.

Well, on the plus side, he now has matching slug wounds (well, not quite matching, given that they're in completely different places on each hand, and at different angles, and because Cyrus-R pulled one of the slugs out... actually, forget I mentioned it.)

written by Lightning4 on Mar 20, 2013 15:50

I attempt to show my ID, unless the truckbot gets close enough to warrant Nukabot getting out of the way.

written by Speeder on Mar 20, 2013 16:11

I look at the warbot.

"I also wonder what happened to that warbot..."

written by Gligar on Mar 20, 2013 19:28

Checkpoint 1, Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

As Nukabot slows to navigate the checkpoint, a guard appears - not one of the Mutant Mashers, just an IntSec checkpoint guard, so nothing serious. And L4-O seems to think so, as he presents his ME Card.

But before the guard can wave Nukabot through, the truckbot arrives. "Obstruction in path," it notes. "I detect an obstruction."

Speed-Y casts his eyes over the warbot once more. exactly what happened to it? He knows that it somehow got out of control, but... how? Someone overriding its systems, perhaps? Perhaps the bot brain just decided to go on a rampage? Who knows?

written by Speeder on Mar 20, 2013 19:57

I look confused.

I know it got out of control? How? I was not brainscrubbed?

If I was a bot probably I would go into kernel panic.

Since I am not a bot, I consider going normal panic, but I ultimately decide against it.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 20, 2013 22:03

"Well, let them through, I guess they have priority..."

I watch the warbot for any signs of "life".

written by Jam on Mar 20, 2013 23:41

"Ah!"

I wake up with a jolt.

"Where... am I?"

I try to piece together what happened.

"I was staring at Joris-O, and then... And then... I woke up. I remember running too, but it's almost like I was dreaming."

I come to a conclusion.

"This is clearly the work of a treasonous mutant! A treasonous mutant named Joris-O!"

written by Cryoburner on Mar 21, 2013 01:40

"OW OW OW OW! ARRRR!"

Noticing that my other hand is now matching the first (to some degree), I decide to move away from the not-so-helpful clones whose slugthrowers seem to be malfunctioning, and run back down the corridor toward the factory floor, flailing my hands about in the air as I do so.

written by Gligar on Mar 21, 2013 18:11

Checkpoint 1, Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y continues to look at the warbot, confused. He has realised that he has no way of knowing that the warbot went out of control, and yet... he knows. How does he know? He doesn't know...

Probably best to forget it.

L4-O decides that it is probably best for the truckbot to go first, and instructs Nukabot to back up.

As this is happening, and the truckbot is rolling past, he watches the ruined warbot for any signs of activity. But apart from a few wisps of smoke, the giant metal beast is inert.

As the truckbot continues, Jam-Y (and Joris-O) catch up with them. Jam-Y, in particular, seems concerned about something. He claims that he remembers staring at Joris-O, then... some sort of dream about running... and then he's here! Almost as if... there's some sort of treasonous mutant at work! He blames Joris-O.

The truckbot passes completely through the checkpoint and continues down the roadway.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Finally realising that the commies are hostile, Cyrus-R runs away, flailing his arms around like some sort of uncomplexly [REDACTED]. The commies follow, continuing to shoot. It is worth noting that they miss a lot.

But Cyrus-R doesn't notice. He's too busy running.

He ends up back near the door to the office.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 21, 2013 18:13

If I didn't successfully show my ID, I show it again, and wait for clearance to go through the checkpoint.

written by Speeder on Mar 21, 2013 18:48

I wonder if anyone can draw again Team Epsilon on the now damaged and modified Nukabot.

I think it would probably look crazy, ridiculous and badass at the same time.

written by Speeder on Mar 21, 2013 18:47

I look at Jam coming running.

"Why you are running instead of hanging on your usual place on the bot?"

written by Kristos on Mar 21, 2013 21:09

This place appears to have no more need of me. I take my complementary B3 and look for lights on the floor again. What, am I becoming a mindless light-following bot now?

written by Gligar on Mar 21, 2013 23:14

Checkpoint 1, Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y once again gets the first word by asking Jam-Y why he's not at his usual perch on Nukabot... and then realises what Jam-Y said about there possibly being a(nother) mutant. Presumably, it affected Jam-Y enough that he failed to properly notice that he wasn't on Nukabot... or something.

Meanwhile, Nukabot has re-entered the checkpoint, allowing L4-O to show his ME Card to the guard. The guard looks at it, and nods. "Go on through. Just watch out for the odd stray zombie."

Release Office, Cloning station, somewhere in JHY Sector

Apparently deciding that there is nothing left for him in the station, and that the form has been accepted, Kris-R looks around for yet another light strip.

There is none.

The only other thing visible is another door, which is partly open, revealing the roadway outside.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 21, 2013 23:46

"Still a few shambling around, eh? Well, we'll be glad to take out any we see..."

I nod to the guard, then look forward again.

"Onward then... let's keep a lookout."

written by Gligar on Mar 22, 2013 14:31

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O assures the guard that they are happy to help take out any stragglers, and gives the order for Nukabot to continue. It does, exiting the checkpoint.

The Industrial Subsectors... it was only a few hourcycles ago that they were here, but it seems like much longer... with any luck, though, they won't be here for long.

Like the Mutant Mashers, really. Most of them seems to have already left, leaving only a few behind, who seem to be setting up a mobile command post near Building 2, Subsector B. They seem to have taken possession of the cyborgs' vehiclebots.

[1341]

As they continue, L4-O catches sight of something shambling between buildings.

written by Speeder on Mar 22, 2013 15:18

When zombies are mentioned, just to make sure there is nothing jammed or not ready in general I unload and load completely again the revolver.

And keep it in hand.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 22, 2013 17:02

"Hold up, I see something. Let's go towards it..."

I get out a blaster and get ready.

written by Gligar on Mar 22, 2013 19:36

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Sounds from Speed-Y's perch indicate that he's checking his "revolver", loading it as necessary, and making sure that it loaded properly.

L4-O doesn't need to do that, of course; he's using a blaster. Specifically, the one in his hand when he tells the rest of the team about the thing he has seen.

Nukabot slows, allowing the team a better look at the shambler. It's one of the stray zombies mentioned by the guard. It stumbles towards Nukabot, with that all-too-familiar hungry look in what's left of its eyes.

written by Speeder on Mar 22, 2013 19:38

I just make a very careful aim at its neck.

But I only fire if after everyone firing at it the thing still survives.

written by Jam on Mar 22, 2013 19:38

I try to grab on to my usual spot on Nukabot.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 22, 2013 22:23

I shoot first, if possible. I try to make my aim good at least.

written by Gligar on Mar 22, 2013 23:50

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y takes aim, and waits.

Jam-Y doesn't have a weapon ready. He's more interested in getting into place on Nukabot. The zombie is apparently not as important as getting into place. Is it more or less important than his accusation that Joris-O is a mutant, I wonder?

But no time to dwell on that. L4-O has just opened fire, hitting the zombie square in the chest, and pushing it back a little.

That gives King-R an opening to fire his dual laser pistols. he aims at the head, totally ruining the zombie's eyes, and causing it to fall to the floor... only to be hit by another laser shot from Lucas-O.

But even that doesn't finish it off. In the end, it takes a slug from Speed-Y's "revolver", right in the neck, to cause it to stop completely.

written by Speeder on Mar 23, 2013 00:18

I spin my gun, and blow the smoke away from the barrel.

written by Jam on Mar 23, 2013 02:22

"Oh, a zombie! Uh... Good work guys!"

I smile, and give a thumbs up in the general direction of the group.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 23, 2013 03:14

"ARRRRRRR!"

I continue running toward the factory floor, still flailing my arms about in the air.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 23, 2013 06:37

"Good shot guys."

I put my blaster away for now, but keep my eyes out for any other stragglers shambling around in the fog.

written by Gligar on Mar 23, 2013 16:41

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Only now does Jam-Y realise that the team has eliminated another zombie. He compliments them from his perch, giving the thumbs-up.

Meanwhile Speed-Y simply cannot resist posing with his "revolver", blowing away the smoke in a dramatic fashion.

Then again, who can't?⁸³⁰

L4-O puts away his blaster and goes back to being on the lookout.

Nukabot speeds up again, now that the zombie has been dealt with. Soon, it reaches the second checkpoint. There appears to be someone in the gatehouse as scrabbling noises can be heard.

Corridor A, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R-R chooses to ignore the office and continue to act like some sort of eldritch thing on mods as eh continues running. Soon, he has reached the intersection, where more commies have gathered, apparently with the intent of entering the factory floor.

Of course, they stop and turn when they hear Cyrus-R coming. "Halt!" one shouts.

written by Speeder on Mar 23, 2013 18:22

I actually start to blow the gun until it is cool enough to me load one more bullet without burning my hand

⁸³⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC: +1pp.)

written by Lightning4 on Mar 23, 2013 20:30

"Hmmm? Hello? Anyone in there?"

I watch the gatehouse for any activity.

written by Kristos on Mar 23, 2013 20:39

I step outside and take a look around. If there is a bot nearby, I ask for directions to the nearest laser barrel factory.

written by Gligar on Mar 23, 2013 21:07

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

L4-O investigates the gatehouse without dismounting Nukabot. The scrabbling noise gets louder even as he asks if everything's okay.

Speed-Y is more concerned with his "revolver". It looks like he's allowing it to cool down before reloading the thing. (But why would he reload after firing only one slug? Surely he has another five loaded?)

Then again, there are several mandates that require armed clones to have fully-loaded weapons, so perhaps he's thinking about one of them.)

Luckily, it doesn't take long.

L4-O continues to watch the gatehouse, which might be a good thing, since the door bursts open, revealing... two zombies.

Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R exits the cloning station, to find himself back on the roadway again...

Only this time, the roadway is occupied. Perhaps ten dead bodies lie in the immediate vicinity, all with slug wounds to the back of the head. Their jumpsuits all feature the logo of Cloning Services.

Off in the distance, music can be heard... the same music that is heard when the communists override vidshow broadcasts.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 23, 2013 21:47

I grab my blaster again and immediately start shooting at the zombies.

written by Kristos on Mar 23, 2013 23:01

Those guys, huh? I must be close to where I died. Why weren't the Cloning Services clones being re-cloned when I was re-cloned? I guess that's beyond my security clearance. Why aren't there any commies posted at this station? I guess because they are stupid. Now I'm really annoyed. What should I do?

I step back into the cloning station and speak to a security camera. "Computer. I was defeated by some fuzzy-hats and perhaps my teammate. The vicinity I have cloned into seems to be quite taken by the commies. What should I do?"

I hope that the commies haven't taken the security camera network.

written by Speeder on Mar 24, 2013 00:38

I finish assembling my weapon again.

Two zombies might be more dangerous... So I aim, and shoot zombie number two in the neck.

written by Gligar on Mar 24, 2013 14:12

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

More shooting ensues.

First, L4-O lets loose with his blaster again. His aim's a little off, though, and he only manages to graze one of them in the arm to little effect.

Second, King-R and his twin laser pistols. He's a little more accurate, but the laser blasts don't seem to do much to them.

Third, Speed-Y. He has his "revolver" ready again, so he lets loose with a single slug, aiming for the "second" zombie out of the two. He manages to cause it to stumble and trip over its companion.

Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The music just raises more questions for Kris-R. Why weren't the cloning station staff re-cloned? Why didn't the commies station anyone at the cloning station? He guesses that he will never know.

But something must be done about this. The question is, what? Perhaps Our Mutual Friend might know? Kris-R intends to ask, and for that, he'll need a camera. He re-enters the cloning station.

Release office, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

He picks one of thirty or so visible cameras and speaks into it, asking what should be done about the commies, who terminated him and probably Cyrus-R (or is Cyrus-R a commie? Food for thought.)

There is no answer.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 24, 2013 15:21

I halt.

"Hello! It seems as though I may have been injured in a slugthrower-related accident. Twice, actually."

written by Jam on Mar 24, 2013 15:59

"Oh, more zombies!"

I fire my laser pistol at the head of one of the zombies.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 24, 2013 19:40

I try for some headshots with my blaster too.

written by Gligar on Mar 24, 2013 20:30 Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Time for Jam-Y to get in on the action! He has a laser pistol ready to go.

He gets off just one shot, but it counts. It hits the collapsed zombie square in the back of the head, causing it to collapse further and be still.

L4-O continues shooting. Out of three shots, two end up going to the standing zombie - both in the head - pushing it back and causing it to stumble over its collapsed friend, who receives the third shot.

Though it was probably unnecessary.

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

For once, Cyrus-R does as ordered. He halts.

He then proceeds to explain that he has been injured in "slugthrower-related accidents". One of the communists notes, "So I see. But how did it happen? Who are you? What is your allegiance?"

written by Speeder on Mar 24, 2013 21:06

"Bloody blasted bastard zombies.

They never end?

I wonder what the adjectives I used mean, I saw it once in a very old vidshow,"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 24, 2013 21:23

To make sure the zombies are both certainly dead, I continue shooting at the one that just stumbled.

written by Kristos on Mar 25, 2013 04:23

I leave the cloning station and run directly away from the music.

written by Gligar on Mar 25, 2013 11:35

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Speed-Y spouts some old words at the zombies, wondering why they stubbornly refuse to let up. The team should be done with them by now.

Wait... what do those words even mean? It is clear that Speed-Y does not know; he heard them in a vidshow once and apparently thought they were cool or something. He does seem to have figured out that their meanings are negative, so I'll give him that. But really, he shouldn't be using them at all; those words were deprecated long ago.

L4-O certainly does not comment about them; he is too busy ensuring that these zombies return to a state of non-functionality. He is doing this by what must be the simplest method available: shooting them repeatedly until they stop moving. It is certainly effective in completing this task.

In the absence of guidance from Friend Computer, Kris-R is at a loss. How is he to know that he should terminate as many communists as he can before they take him out? How is he to know that he should keep doing that until all the communists are dead (or until he runs out of clones, whichever comes sooner)? Simple: he has no way of knowing.

So he takes another option, and runs for it in the general direction of "away from the music".

As he runs, he cannot help but notice that none of the buildings he is passing, and indeed, none he can see, seem to be the laser barrel factory. Instead, he is approaching a tall wall, with an opening for the roadway. Just before that, however, is an intersection with another roadway.

written by Gligar on Mar 25, 2013 18:34

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

The now-inert zombies fail to do anything of note. Speed-Y and co. will be pleased to note that there are no other visible zombies in the vicinity.

Intersection, Roadways 3 and 4, JHY Sector

Stopping to catch his breath, Kris-R notices that the wall's opening is actually a checkpoint, the sort that vehicles must pass through when travelling between sectors. But there's something... odd about this one... surely there should be no bloodstains around the area that the guards would normally occupy...

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R stands still, ignoring the commie's questions.

In response, the commie raises his slugthrower. "I think I know what those incidents were," he says. "They were another team of comrades attempting to terminate you!"

written by Speeder on Mar 25, 2013 18:59

Now that the thing is probably cold again, I load it again.

Yes, blowing up yourself with a laser pistol make you OCD with your ammo.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 25, 2013 21:08

"Okay, looks like they're dead. I guess we can finally move on now!"

I put my blaster away again, and go back to looking for any more zombies hanging around the area.

written by Gligar on Mar 25, 2013 23:11

Roadway, Industrial Subsectors

Now that he has the opportunity, Speed-Y... reloads. Again.

Seriously. What's the point of having a six-shot weapon if you're just going to reload after each shot? Are you telling me that Friend Computer made a mistake when it decided to give "revolvers" six slugs? Are you, perhaps, so frightened of malfunctions happening that you have to reload after each shot? If so, may I interest you in the exiting opportunities on offer in the food vats?

Does anyone notice this? I really can't tell. What I can tell is that L4-O wants to get moving again. And, since there are no apparent zombies to delay the team any longer, perhaps this is a good time to do so. He puts his blaster away.

Everyone else stows their weapons as well, as Nukabot traverses the second checkpoint, leaving the Industrial Subsectors behind.

Roadway, past the Industrial Subsectors

Soon, the smog of the Industrial Subsectors gives way to a view of Kappa Subsector - a collection of buildings including offices, dormitories and such - beyond which looms the transtube station itself, nestled right up against the edge of the dome.

written by Kristos on Mar 26, 2013 00:07

I slow down and peek around the corner of the intersection.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 26, 2013 01:09

"Haven't been this far from the main JHT sectors before..."

I look to see if I can spot where we are supposed to go from here. Of course, this probably won't be very successful, given the distance and given my unfamiliarity with the area.

written by Speeder on Mar 26, 2013 01:10

I attempt to figure if the crazy hole made in the exterior wall of our sector by a certain clone that exploded a armoury can be seen from here.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 26, 2013 04:34

"Oh, allegiance! I'm clearly an ally of hard-working clones, such as I assume you yourselves are! There's nothing quite like hardworking clones to work hard toward accomplishing various important goals!"

"As for the slugthrower-related accidents, slugs were thrown, presumably on accident, by slugthrowers that were apparently malfunctioning. You should be aware that there seems to be a problem with that, lately, so be careful where you aim those."

I proceed to tap on the hard-working clone's slugthrower with my spring foot as I say this.

"Perhaps we should pay a visit to the nearest slugthrower factory to investigate!"

written by Gligar on Mar 26, 2013 13:27

Intersection, Roadways 3 and 4, JHY Sector

Catching his breath, Kris-R slows down to look around. He focuses his attention on Roadway 4.

What he sees is troubling. There are a number of fuzzy-hatted clones removing loyalty posters from the walls of buildings and replacing them with propaganda for the Communists, and what is worse, they seem to be enjoying it. And dotted at intervals along the roadway are... tractors. Not vehiclebots, tractors, those vehicles that communists seem to love building and repairing. (Not a bot brain in sight! Everything is done manually!)

Looking the other way, Kris-R sees more of the same, except... is that a group of loyal citizens lined up against the wall?

Factory floor entrance, Corridors A and B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R claims to be an ally of hardworking clones, which seems to mollify the communists. He maintains that the slugthrowers used to shoot him were malfunctioning, and proceeds to suggest that the communists take care with their own slugthrowers. To underline his point, he kicks the slugthrower out of the communists' hand, and suggests that they go and visit a slugthrower factory to check it out.

This gets him punched in the face. "Not so fast! You'd better explain how communist-built slugthrowers can be malfunctioning! Only shoddy Computer-made slugthrowers break!"

Roadway, past the Industrial Subsectors

L4-O observes that this is the furthest he's gone from the main domescraper, and starts looking for their destination.

Wait, don't they need to go to the transtube station? Then that would be right at the back over there...

Speed-Y, on the other hand, is looking for that hole, you know the one, it was made by... wasn't it Joris-O, when he blew open an entire armoury? He realises, though, that the hole was back in the domescraper. Weren't they able to see some other sector through the hole?

Nukabot continues on, approaching Kappa Subsector. Up ahead, the roadway intersects with another, forming a crossroad.

written by Speeder on Mar 26, 2013 13:31

I wonder how much cost to repairs all the stuff we exploded in our first mission.

written by Speeder on Mar 26, 2013 15:11

Cryo posts always entertain me.

And scare me.

His illogical logic is always illogical and logical at the same time, I think he can convince a duck that it is a bear or something like that.

Or better, I will not wonder, lest Friend Computer decide to charge the repairs from us.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 26, 2013 14:56

"Hmm... Communist-built slugthrowers, eh? Ohhhh..."

I rub my somewhat-sore face a bit.

"Maybe... A TRAITOR IS INTERFERING WITH THE SUPPLY CHAIN! We should really have a look into it! Just think of the problems that might result from having weapons that don't fire when they should, or that fire when they shouldn't. We could all get shot in the hands, or maybe not get shot in the hands at those times when we should! I say we begin a thorough investigation into the source of the defective slugthrowers!"

written by Kristos on Mar 26, 2013 17:30

Looking one direction, initially I am fascinated by the concept of manually doing everything without bots. What a revolutionary idea! But then, when I look the other direction, and see so many innocent-looking clones lined up, presumably to be shot, I'm enraged. My temper really has been delicate ever since my recent recloning. Perhaps that quality will be useful here. Perhaps the Great Computer purposely cloned me with this trait for such a moment as this.

I go berserk and start shooting at every fuzzy hat I see while yelling "FOR FUN! FOR THE COMPLEX!! FOR THE COMPUTER!!!" and taking no care for my personal protection. Probably a stupid plan, but I can't really help it.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 26, 2013 18:12

I wonder to myself how far that warbot beam got down here, and start looking for scorch marks or scars on the ground around us and behind us.

written by Gligar on Mar 26, 2013 18:22

Roadway, near Kappa Subsector

As Nukabot continues down the roadway, Speed-Y can't help but wonder exactly how much the damage they caused during the communist uprising is costing in terms of repairs. He gets into the hundreds of thousands of credits before realising that it is probably better not to speculate on such things. If he mentioned it out loud, the team might end up being billed for it all. And with that amount of credits involved... well, let's just say that none of them would survive it.

Nukabot slows down. Kappa Subsector is just ahead.

Factory floor entrance, Corridors A and B, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

It seems that Cyrus-R does remember the mission!

Unfortunately, he is applying it to the communists, suggesting that their own supply lines might have been compromised. He adds that perhaps they should check them out.

"Or perhaps," says a voice behind him, "you could explain what in the name of communism you are doing here! You have not identified yourself."

"Wait," another communist says. "He has a point. How can we know that our slugthrowers are communist-made? They look exactly the same as –"

He doesn't get a chance to reply, since one of his comrade promptly shoots him in the head. "Do not question the methods of the Revolution!"

Intersection, Roadways 3 and 4, JHT Sector

Initially marvelling at the idea of manual labour, Kris-R becomes appalled when he sees the loyal clones against the wall... they're going to be shot!

This sets off something inside him. Ever since he decanted in the cloning station, he's been feeling... a bit unhappy. And there is no clue as to why... or is there? Perhaps... Our Mutual Friend deliberately gave him a temper, just so he could be more useful in a fight? Perhaps... perhaps not. But what he does know is that there will be a fight: him against the communists! Right here, right now!

He pulls out his laser pistol and starts shooting. One fuzzy hat, one (or more) shots. He doesn't really care about things like being shot at, the fact that he only has one laser barrel, the fact that he has no armour...

Well, the communists notice him around the point where one of them dies. And they start shooting back. Most of the slugs miss widely. But one hits him. Right there, in the leg. He doesn't seem to notice, he just keeps shooting. And ignoring the squealing coming from his barrel.

written by Kristos on Mar 26, 2013 18:34

I try to run to the densest group of commies while still shooting. Perhaps I can do physical damage whenever I run out of shots. However unlikely that may be, what else can I do? And I'm enraged, remember? It's not like I'm thinking clearly.

written by Gligar on Mar 27, 2013 13:02

Roadway, Kappa Subsector

L4-O realises something. That plasma beam earlier... it reached out this far, didn't it? What damage did it do?

From what he can see, the roadway was damaged by the beam. He seems to recall part of it becoming sticky back at the Industrial Subsectors; if it happened out here as well, it has cooled since then. On further inspection, some of the surface has in fact been deformed by the beam. And from the look of the deformation pattern, the beam reached almost as far as the crossroads – speaking of which, they have arrived there. The beam – or rather, the heat radiating from it, appears to have damaged some of the buildings, causing stress to the synthcrete. Anything on the roadway itself would most likely have been vaporised – signs included; there appear to be a few missing.

Roadway 4, JHY Sector

Still ignoring his squealing barrel (and everything else), Kris-R charges forward, firing his laser⁸³¹ wildly at the communists. He shoots five times, hitting with two shots, both of which cause a communist to collapse to the roadway.

Noticing, some of the loyal clones round on the communists, and start taking their weapons and joining in the fight.

Kris-R's already-overstressed barrel's squealing increases in volume and pitch.

written by Speeder on Mar 27, 2013 13:53

I look a amazed at the damage.

"What happened to this place? What sort of weapon can do that? It is explosive?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 27, 2013 15:37

"It was the warbot. Rather, when the warbot overloaded and fired a gigantic beam all the way down the road..."

I marvel at the damage.

"I hope nobody standing out here was on their last clone!"

written by Kristos on Mar 27, 2013 15:50

I let out a frightened "Yah!" as I throw the pistol with the squealing barrel away and fall to the ground (probably not intentionally). That high-pitched sound is really getting to my nerves, and... is that a slugthrower wound?

written by Gligar on Mar 27, 2013 17:47

Roadway, Kappa Subsector

Speed-Y is amazed at the damage pattern - you will recall that he did not witness the giant plasma beam. As such, he has no idea what could have caused it, and guesses that it could have been a bomb, or something.

L4-O, of course, did witness the plasma beam, and as such is able to fill Speed-Y in on what happened. He just hopes that there was no-one on the roadway with no backup clones left...

Thinking about it, he realises that the beam also took out Checkpoint 2 back at the Industrial Subsectors... and since they went through there to find an intact checkpoint, they must have already replaced it. Wow, that's efficient.

Nukabot reaches the crossroad, and slows to a stop. "We have arrived at Kappa Subsector," it says. "I believe that you should be able to walk to your briefing from here."

Roadway 4, JHY Sector

Kris-R finally realises that his barrel is squealing and drops the pistol... before falling on it - remember that he was shot. This makes him realise that the he was shot, whereupon his wound begins to hurt.

The squealing barrel continues to squeal as the communists approach, still shooting - though they appear to miss this time. Some of them are killed as the loyal clones continue their own attack.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 27, 2013 18:54

"Okay, thanks Nukabot."

I hop off and start moving in the direction of the Transtube station, but keep my movement slow until I am sure everyone in the group is also moving in that direction.

written by Jam on Mar 27, 2013 19:17

"Okay!"

I also hop off of Nukabot, and start following L4-O.

written by Speeder on Mar 27, 2013 20:24

I smile, and take the lead (of course, I am team leader, no?)

written by Gligar on Mar 27, 2013 21:49

Crossroad, Kappa Subsector

L4-O is the first to disembark Nukabot. He thanks the bot, and starts walking towards the transtube station. Nice and slow, so that everyone can catch up.

Jam-Y is next. He catches up to L4-O just after the ORANGE crosses the other roadway. There is no traffic right now, so that is not a problem.

Speed-Y and the rest of the team follow. Speed-Y decides that, since he is team leader, he should take the lead.

Everyone else forms up behind.

As it happens, the transtube station is only a minutecycle away from the crossroad: a large, three-level building constructed, unusually, of brick - it must be an old building. As mentioned, it is tucked in right at the edge of the dome; the back wall of the station actually touches the dome's superstructure.

Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

The first visible thing, even before entering the station (since it is prominently displayed above the door) is a clock display, indicating that it is now 22:58 on the 19th of Tenmonth, yearcycle 214.

On entering the station proper, the first noticeable thing is the ticker counter, situated right in front of the entrance. Other notable features are the clearance (INFRARED with higher-clearance sections) and a number of vendobots.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 27, 2013 21:59

I look around for anything else that indicates where we should be.

If I don't see anything, I approach the counter.

written by Speeder on Mar 27, 2013 22:29

Yep, what L4-O did.

written by Jam on Mar 28, 2013 01:15

Yep, what Speed-Y did.

⁸³¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: and spending 1pp)

[1347]

written by Kristos on Mar 28, 2013 15:23

Vatcrap! I meant to throw the pistol away from myself. Whatever.

I again try to throw the squealer at the commies.

written by Gligar on Mar 28, 2013 19:41

Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

L4-O starts looking around for... some indication of where they should go. He is a little concerned that they need to find the transbot before 23:30...

He is helped by the rest of the team except Joris-O, who keeps staring at Jam-Y.

Aha! A door leading to an overbridge. Also, an opening leading to another corridor, where there appears to be a hygiene station and a bank of confession booths.

Roadway 4, JHY Sector

Kris-R seems unhappy that he didn't manage to get rid of the barrel, and tries again.

By this time, of course, the commies have closed to a shorter range and are quite close to him. So it turns out that that squealing pistol hits its target rather quickly.

Whereupon it explodes... taking out more than one clone, and my spybot. Bear with me, citizens. Let me get another over there...

written by Speeder on Mar 28, 2013 19:45

I hike to the overbridge, and hope it is the fastest way to where we should go.

written by Kristos on Mar 28, 2013 22:56

Can I see? Can I move? Where did I leave my B3? Cyrus-R, what ever did you do this time?

written by Gligar on Mar 28, 2013 23:44

Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

Speed-Y leads the way onto the overbridge.

Overbridge, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

The overbridge looks out over six platforms of varying clearance, each of which are accessible via stairs. On some of them, clones can be seen waiting, or getting on or off transbots.

The platforms seem to be labelled A through F.

At the far end, a door can be seen, leading further into the station.

Roadway 4, JHY Sector

Looks like I don't need to send another spybot after all; I've found a feed from one of the nearby JHY cameras. Let's see...

It looks like that explosion took out four of the communists, a loyal clone... and Kris-R. It looks like he was trying to reach for his can of B3 before being thrown to the ground and cracking his head open. Ironically, the can was right there the whole time.

I wonder what Cyrus-R is doing?

written by Lightning4 on Mar 29, 2013 03:32

I try to catch up and follow

"I think we were supposed to go to... platform F, right? Maybe? I don't know..."

I try to look at Platform F and see if I can see anything interesting (or hazardous) there.

Then I question whether it was the right platform anyway...

written by Gligar on Mar 29, 2013 13:43

Cyrus-R can wait, though. I'm sure he and the communists are getting along just fine. Remind me to increase surveillance by another ten notches. It's a shame I can't reassign him to reactor shielding, or demote him, any more. Someone pushed through a CPU mandate while I wasn't looking, meaning that INFRAREDS and most of the reactor shielding crew are considered too unimportant for my vid feeds.

Overbridge, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

Catching up with Speed-Y, L4-O tries to remember what platform they need... perhaps F?

He looks at Platform F. It's Clearance RED, and is packed with clones waiting for a transbot. It seems that an HPD&MC crew is down there, conducting some sort of test with the schedule display.

He begins to wonder whether F is the right platform... anyone else got any ideas? Any other platforms, perhaps?

Release office, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

A message appears on a terminal indicating that Kris-R is re-cloning. Again. Apparently, the clone is about 50% formed right now.

written by Speeder on Mar 29, 2013 14:14

I wonder a bit.

"Alright, I guess it is that crew that we must talk to! It is a hunch!"

I go there.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 29, 2013 15:40

"Why don't we just check the mission alert again? Someone still has it... right?"

I look around for it.

written by Gligar on Mar 29, 2013 17:44

Overbridge, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

On seeing the HPD&MC team, Speed-Y decides that it is they that they must speak to, and begins to head down there.

[1348]

L4-O isn't so sure. He suggests checking the mission alert again... er, does anyone still have it?

"I've got it!" Lucas-O tells him. "You gave it to me, remember?" He checks the sheet. "It says to go to platform H... where's Platform H?"

Platform F, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

Fighting his way through the crowd (and counting himself lucky that there are no Queue Enforcement Officers present to tell him otherwise), Speed-Y makes his way over to the team by the display. It looks like they are installing a device into the display's bot brain, and don't initially notice him.

Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

In the midst of the cloning tanks, one tank in particular is busy. If you've been reading recent posts, you'll know that the tank contains Kris-R. Again.

Soon, the tank is finished, and deposits the slimy new Kris-R on the floor.

Almost immediately, the lighted strips get to work in pointing him through the process.

Again.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 29, 2013 18:15

"Thanks. I better go tell Speed-Y..."

I try to catch up to Speed-Y.

If I do, I say,

"Wrong platform, Sir! We need to be at H, not F. Sorry, I knew it was a letter around there somewhere..."

written by Speeder on Mar 29, 2013 18:16

I poke one random guy.

written by Kristos on Mar 29, 2013 21:17

Where am I? Oh, look at the lights! So beautiful! And so familiar! They are wonderful!

I follow the lights.

written by Gligar on Mar 30, 2013 00:45

Overbridge, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

I don't know if L4-O knows where Platform H is, but he does know that it is not Platform F. Therefore, he rushes off to catch up with Speed-Y and tell him.

Platform F, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

As it happens, Speed-Y has attracted the attention of one of the HPD&MC clones. Said clone turns round rather quickly. "Yes yes, can I help you, citizen? Or... maybe you could help me?" Speed-Y can't help but notice the clone's eyepiece.

L4-O catches up with Speed-Y. He informs him that they don't want Platform F. "Platform H?" the HPD&MC clone asks. "That's one level down." He turns back to Speed-Y. "Now, what was it you wanted?"

Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R doesn't seem to remember much of the cloning station, other than the lighted strips...

He follows this one to the showers. Nothing has changed. Except for his mood.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 30, 2013 01:13

"Karl!"

After staring silently for what felt like days, I respond to the clone's inquiry. I once again continue staring.

written by Speeder on Mar 30, 2013 01:23

I look at the eyepiece.

"That is a interesting piece of technology you have there! What is it exactly? What it do? How it work?"

I look more interested in the tech thingy than whatever L4 told me.

written by Jam on Mar 30, 2013 07:41

I follow after Speed-Y and L4-O.

written by Gligar on Mar 30, 2013 14:57

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

After staring at the communists for a while, Cyrus-R seems to have realised that they want his name, and claims that it is Karl.

One of the communists lowers is weapon. "Karl... I know that name... were you involved in the glorious attack on SKI Sector?"

The others aren't so sure, but they don't seem to be getting ready to fire. Any more ready then they are, anyway. One might even say that they're getting less ready.

Platform F, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

Ignoring the rest of the team, Speed-Y asks about the clone's eyepiece. "This? Oh, it lets me trace electrical paths... you know, see where they go and all that. And yes, it is very interesting... they're aren't too many things that can read EM fields." He peers at Speed-Y, and his eyepiece blinks. "Say, you're Speed-Y, aren't you? I think I saw your name earlier on a list of clones who were behind on their surveys. What's that about?"

Jam-Y appears on the platform behind Speed-Y.

written by Kristos on Mar 30, 2013 15:08

What an ethereal atmosphere! I could follow these lights forever. I wonder where they go...

I look around.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 30, 2013 19:12

I... guess I just wait for a response from Speed-Y. I watch the conversation.

written by Gligar on Mar 30, 2013 19:25

Cloning station, JHY Sector

This Kris-R seems to have a much happier disposition than the last. For one, he seems to like the atmosphere now. Looking around, he sees the same cloning station as before, but it no longer seems as deserted, no longer as bleak.

As before, though, there is the light strip. It leads him to the same chemical shower as before. I wonder what he will make of it this time?

Platform F, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

L4-O waits for Speed-Y to respond to the HPD&MC clone's assertion about his surveys. It is notable that he is paying attention to this conversation.

written by Speeder on Mar 30, 2013 20:11

I nod.

Yes, I am Speed-Y...

I am that easy to recognize?

I turn to L4.

"I heard you shouting earlier... I guess this is not where the mission briefing is to happen?"

I turn to the clone.

"Yes, as for the survey, I think I got a message some time ago about it..."

Since you recognized me, I guess you have the survey forms with you, the ones that I need to fill?"

written by Kristos on Mar 30, 2013 23:28

What fortune! I was just thinking I needed a good shower!

I enter the chemical showers, push the button, and begin to loudly sing some song popular among the junior citizens.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 31, 2013 01:12

"Yeah, we're supposed to go to Platform H... which he just notified me is a level down, so..."

I check my PDC for the time.

written by Gligar on Mar 31, 2013 13:02

Platform F, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

Speed-Y confirms his identity and wonders how recognisable he is. He doesn't get an answer to that.

He turns to L4-O and says that he heard him; this must not be the place for the briefing.

Back to the clone. Speed-Y says that he received a message some time ago about the survey... perhaps the clone has the forms at hand for him to fill out? "Now that you mention it, yes I do," the clone replies. "But we can't exactly fill them out on a crowded platform; there's no room to perform the mandatory checks. Not only that, but I'm not sure if I have a pen..."

"I'll tell you what," he adds. "If you will accompany me back to the office, you can fill them out there."

L4-O reminds Speed-Y that they need to go to Platform H, which is down one level. And... what time is it? 23:02. They have plenty of time.

Chemical showers, Cloning station, JHY Sector

Kris-R's happiness continues as he starts the shower. See, he's even singing. Perhaps it reminds him of his days as a Junior Citizen? Or perhaps he's just singing the first thing that comes to mind? No matter, it shows that he's happy. And the best part? There are no other clones around to interrupt while he's singing!

All too soon, though, the shower cycle finishes, and the lighted strip lights up one more time, indicating that he should go to the Outfitting Room.

written by Speeder on Mar 31, 2013 19:44

I turn to L4.

"I will go to the office with this guy... I will be back in time for the briefing! I think I remembered that on the alert it was written it was H platform!"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 31, 2013 20:05

"Well, okay then... I guess we'll wait? Unless you want us to come with you..."

I look at the rest of the members of our team and shrug, not entirely sure what just happened here.

written by Gligar on Mar 31, 2013 21:11

Platform F, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

Speed-Y decides that he will accompany the HPD&MC clone to fill out his forms. He goes on to assure L4-O that he will return in time for the briefing, and that he knows that it will take place on Platform H.

L4-O isn't sure what to do about that. Perhaps they can wait for Speed-Y, or... maybe someone could accompany him? He looks at the rest of the team, unsure about what is happening. John-O thinks that he's seen this sort of thing happen before. "If it's at all possible, citizen, could we possibly see this form?"

"Oh, yes, of course," the clone replies. "I have it right here." From a pocket of his jumpsuit he produces a form. It appears to be an R&D participation feedback form. "The quicker this gets filed out, the quicker Speed-Y can get to your briefing. When you're ready, sir?"

He packs up a few tools and starts walking to the stairs.

written by Kristos on Mar 31, 2013 21:18

I return to following the lights forever.

written by Speeder on Mar 31, 2013 23:25

I nod.

I turn to Joris.

[1350]

"Don't worry, it happens with people that for example had robotic legs or operated huge robots."

I turn to the survey clone.

"Sure sure!"

I follow him.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 01, 2013 00:52

"Ah, yes... The glorious one... I think that might have been me. It was very... very... very... glorious."

I continue staring.

written by Gligar on Apr 01, 2013 12:21

Outfitting room, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Following the lights, Kris-R enters here. In the interest of expediency, he proceeds to obtain much the same equipment as before. Only in a happy manner.

The lights make themselves known again, and he follows them back into the office.

Release office, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

He arrives to find that the blotbot is still blinking its lights in some unreadable pattern.

Platform F, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

Speed-Y explains that it's normal for clones who have tested big bots, or robotic legs, to have to fill in survey forms, and agrees to follow the clone.

Overbridge, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

The clone leads him across the overbridge and through the door at the end, revealing that it leads to the offices.

Reception, Transtube station offices, nest Kappa Subsector

He takes him right through reception and through another door.

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R, posing as "Karl", agrees that he might have been responsible for the "very glorious" event.

The communists seems to be a little disturbed by his staring, but manages to say, "Could... could you tell us how you did that? I'm sure it would be a very inspiring story!"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 01, 2013 15:38

I walk out to the Overbridge, but stop walking.

I turn to the rest of the group if they're with me.

"Hmm. That was... odd. Who knew my mistake would have Speed-Y getting dragged off to sign a form..."

written by Kristos on Apr 01, 2013 16:56

I fill out the form, including:

Personal Evaluation: "I've never been better!"

Possible Mutations: "Sometimes I see this beautiful red thread when I close my eyes. I'm so pleased that my imaginary thread is the same clearance as I am! We were meant to be together!"

Any other comments: "Who am I?"

Then I insert the form into the blotbot.

written by Gligar on Apr 01, 2013 18:11

Overbridge, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

L4-O and the others follow, at least this far.

L4-O himself is still a little confused. How could a simple mistake on his part lead to someone being dragged away to sign a form? (Would it have helped if The Computer had made the request? It most likely knows that Spewed-Y needs to fill in the form, after all.)

But enough of that. What now? They still need to find this Platform H...

Release office, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

As before, Kris-R fills out his forms. As you might imagine, he fills this one out in a much more positive tone, even going into more details in a few things this time.

Then, it's to the blotbot. It continues to blink its lights as he submits his form, only this time there are few more RED lights in evidence...

written by Lightning4 on Apr 01, 2013 20:09

Since we've lost track of Speed-Y anyway, I start looking for the path down to the next level of Platforms.

written by Gligar on Apr 01, 2013 22:15

Overbridge, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

L4-O realises that, apart from "one level down", he has no idea where Platform H even is... so a good place to start would be... find a way to get one level down?

That'd be a good idea. Doesn't look like there is a stairwell on the Overpass, though...

Hold on. Is there a lift somewhere?

Perhaps. But it'd be back by the ticket desk, right?

Or... perhaps the offices?

Nah.

written by Kristos on Apr 02, 2013 02:30

I guess I'm done here. Where is everybody? I guess I should go outside and make some new friends!

In accordance with my thoughts I step outside and look for clones.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 02, 2013 08:40

I decide to backtrack towards the ticket desk, and look for a lift or stairwell.

written by Gligar on Apr 02, 2013 11:55*Roadway 3, JHY Sector*

Like his previous clone, Kris-R exits the cloning station in search of other clones. And, like his previous clones, Kris-R can hear the commies' music from here.

But unlike his previous clone, Kris-R actually finds some clones: the loyal ones that his previous clones helped to save. One of them is surprised that the cloning systems are still working.

Overbridge, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

L4-O decides to look over near the ticket desk for the assumed lift. The rest of the team, sans Speed-Y who is not present, follows.

Foyer, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

As it turns out, there are a couple of doors he didn't notice before. One is locked; the other opens as he approaches, revealing...

As it turns out, it isn't a lift, but a stairwell, leading down.

written by Kristos on Apr 02, 2013 14:01

"Hello. How are you doing, friends? Can I help you with something?"

written by Gligar on Apr 02, 2013 16:27*Roadway 3, JHY Sector*

Kris-R asks how the clones are doing, and if there is something he can do to help. "Just fine, thank you, citizen.

"Say, aren't you one of the Troubleshooters who went to the factory? Got any idea what's happening there?"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 02, 2013 18:06

I head downstairs, and immediately start looking for Platform H.

written by Gligar on Apr 02, 2013 21:08*Stairwell, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector*

L4-O and the team decided to head down a level to try and find Platform H.

Lower Overbridge, Transtube station, ear Kappa Subsector

They arrive on an INFRARED overbridge which doesn't look like it has been used much in a few yearcycles; the styling resembles an older version of the bunker, and everything on the bridge is covered with dust. Footprints indicate that at least some clones come down here. Word is still out on scrubots doing the rounds, but I'm leaning towards "no".

The bridge overlooks several more transtube lines. These, however, looks like ballistic tubes from the old TUBE system, still in use for long-range journeys across distance exceeding half of the Complex! It doesn't look like they stop at JHT Sector very often.

Several sets of footprints lead to one of the platforms below: Platform H. The dust doesn't seem quite so thick there.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 02, 2013 21:19

I continue making my way to Platform H, keeping an eye on my surroundings.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 03, 2013 01:51

I avert my stare to the ceiling as I recall the circumstances surrounding my glorious attack.

"Let's see... SKI sector... That was the one involving the... uh... clones... wasn't it? I have been involved with so many glorious attacks... Ah, yes, I think that was the one. I recall that we... used the ventilation system to avert security... Then we were able to take them by surprise in a glorious attack!"

I return my attention to the clones.

written by Gligar on Apr 03, 2013 12:40*Platform H, Transtube station, ear Kappa Subsector*

L4-O and the team arrive on the platform. From here, they can see more evidence of the general state of disuse: the discarded B3 cans left untouched, the peeling clearance stripe (RED, if you were wondering), the dust covering the floor and benches, the dust covering the mostly-out-of-date loyalty posters, the non-working schedule displays...

On the plus side, the track looks to be in good condition. Indeed, it's the only thing not covered with dust.

Looking down the track in both directions, it can be seen disappearing into the tunnels, from which a strong breeze flows, blowing from one tunnel, over the track, and down the other tunnel.

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" tries to "recall" the details of the "glorious attack" ... and it is possible to use more quotes there? Probably.

He tells them that he used the ventilation system to bypass defenses. "Surely that must have been hard.. how did you do it?" asks one commie.

Another commie isn't so sure. "It almost sounds like you don't know," he says. "Surely you weren't captured and given false information?"

A third seems to be having problems with his slugthrower. "Say, could someone have a look at this for me? It seems to have loaded a slug by itself."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 03, 2013 15:34

"Well... I guess this is the place. Looks like we're kinda early though!"

With nothing much to do except wait, I poke around the platform at anything remotely interesting that isn't dust.

written by Gligar on Apr 03, 2013 16:59

Platform H, Transtube station, ear Kappa Subsector

It seems that the team has arrived early.

With not much else to do, L4-O decides to have a poke around at... well, anything. Just not the dust.

He looks at the B3 cans, but they are just that: discarded B3 cans. They, too, are covered with dust, suggesting that they were discarded long ago.

He looks at the old posters... hey, there's one here with an old map of the sector! It only shows the domescraper and the Industrial Subsectors... oh wait, and something else which has faded over time... the only readable words are Under... and testing..... situated to the north of the Industrial Subsectors.

He looks at the tunnels... hmmm... it looks like there are lights above each. None of them are active right now.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 03, 2013 17:06

"Hmmm... what is there, I wonder?"

I try to get a better look at the map, and cross reference it with a JHT Sector map, if I can get one on my PDC.

written by Gligar on Apr 03, 2013 22:17

Platform H, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

L4-O sees the faded text and is intrigued by it. What does it mean? Is there something there?

He pulls up a more modern sector map on his PDC. However, he discovers that it does not show anything to the north of the Industrial Subsectors... except for a black square, and the notation "C-1".

The breeze from the transtube tunnel begins to pick up.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 03, 2013 22:42

"C-1? Anyone know what that is? Kinda curious..."

I start becoming distracted by the breeze from the transtube tunnel, though.

written by Kristos on Apr 04, 2013 01:12

I think silently for several seconds...

"Oh, yes! I was investigating a suspected sabotage, and the last thing I remember were some clones with fuzzy hats. I think they must have killed me. My team member must still be there, valiantly battling those clones. That's all I know. Do you guys know anything? Where are you going now?"

written by Gligar on Apr 04, 2013 16:49

Platform H, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

L4-O wonders about the "C-1". Does anyone know what it is?

The notation seems familiar... where has he seen notation like that before?

But his musings are cut short as he is distracted by the breeze from the tunnel. It seems to be getting stronger.

Above the tunnel, one of the lights, a YELLOW one, begins flashing.

Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R thinks. Memories come to him, and he explains that he was researching sabotage. But the sudden arrival of fuzzy hats interrupted him, and he was presumably killed. "Yes... we saw you attack the communists who were about to execute us. You died taking some of them out."

He adds that his other team member is still in the factory and is probably fighting right now.

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

In fact, he is staring at a communist right now.

Said communist is fiddling with a slugthrower, trying to figure out why it suddenly loaded itself. "It must be one of the shoddy Computerist slugthrowers... oh no it's firing!"

And indeed it does... right through Cyrus-R.

Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R asks what the clones are doing now. "We're trying to reach the Armed Forces garrison... hopefully it is still in operation."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 04, 2013 18:10

I make sure I'm not standing near the tube, and keep watching for activity.

written by Gligar on Apr 04, 2013 18:59

Platform H, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

L4-O backs away from the tunnel - easy enough - and then watches for activity.

As he does, the breeze picks up even more, and the YELLOW light starts beeping.

Also, one of the off-line schedule boards suddenly comes online, and displays the message

T.U.B.E Transbot D7-48-DF-AC-A8-96 approaching

Mind the blast

written by Jam on Apr 04, 2013 19:19

I try very hard not to fall into the tube and die a horrible bloody death.

"Let's hope Speed-Y gets back soon..."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 04, 2013 19:42

I brace for, well, a blast, since I don't know quite what to expect.

written by Gligar on Apr 04, 2013 21:34

Platform H, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

Unsure as to what to expect, Jam-Y simply does his best to avoid being pulled into the other tunnel, while hoping fervently that Speed-Y will get here soon.

L4-O is also unsure what to expect. He just braces for this blast, whatever it is.

The YELLOW light gives way to a RED light, and there is a sudden RUSH of air down the tunnel, knocking everyone to the floor (except L4-O).

One could even say a blast of air.

It doesn't take long for the source of the blast to appear: a flat-nosed TUBE transbot. It pulls to a sudden stop exactly in line with the platform.

Overbridge, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

Speed-Y emerges from the offices at a run, heading for the stairwell in the foyer. As he does the noise of a sudden blast of air comes from somewhere below.

written by Speeder on Apr 04, 2013 22:29

"Whoa, I wonder what was that..."

I continue running following the directions of the guy that I asked the directions.

written by Gligar on Apr 04, 2013 22:42

Stairwell, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

Wondering just what that noise was, Speed-Y keeps running.

Lower overbridge, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

He exits the stairwell to find another overbridge, an older-looking one, also looking over transtube platforms. Only one of the platforms is in use right now: a TUBE transbot has stopped at the platform.

Near to the transbot are several familiar-looking clones, most of whom have fallen to the floor.

Everything except for the transbot and the clones is covered in dust.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 04, 2013 23:34

"Hmm. Interesting..."

I look at the TUBE transbot, and see if I can see anything inside it yet.

I remain cautious.

written by Speeder on Apr 04, 2013 23:37

I stop. Then I do my best to walk regally like a true awesome leader that does not get breathless after running. Or better, like a true leader that is never late.

I go to L4 that way.

"Hello... Interesting place this one, ins't it? Anything curious to report?"

written by Kristos on Apr 05, 2013 00:25

"Oh. I'm glad that went well!" I say with a smile on my face.

I attempt to call Cyrus-R's PDC as I follow the clones.

written by Gligar on Apr 05, 2013 12:41

Platform H, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

L4-O investigates the transbot. He finds that it is cylindrical, with a flat nose and two visible doors. The bot is emblazoned with the logo of the TUBE network. There are no windows.

As he watches, the closest door opens.

The sudden sound of footsteps on the lower overbridge soon gives way to the voice of Speed-Y, asking if they have anything to report.

Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R is pleased that his stunt went well.

He turns his attention to his PDC, and attempts to call Cyrus-R.

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The sound of a PDC emanating for the once-again-injured Cyrus-R attracts the attention - and the slugthrowers - of the communists. "You have a PDC! Why do you have that? Don't you deny that you not an Anti-Computerist? ! Why? ! Why not?!"

written by Cryoburner on Apr 05, 2013 15:08

"OW OW OW OW! ARRRR!"

I briefly flail my hands in the air, noting just where I was shot, and then my PDC.

"Oh, this? I have this because I have been undercover for my latest glorious mission! It has been necessary to pose as one of the... err... computerists, to infiltrate their ranks and gather information!"

I proceed to answer the call.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 05, 2013 15:39

"Hello?"

I approach the doors, attempting to see who or what is inside.

written by Gligar on Apr 05, 2013 16:32

Platform H, Transtube station, near Kappa Subsector

More investigating happens. This time, L4-O is looking inside the now-open door.

He can see that, instead of the seats facing forward, they are set against the sides of the transbot facing inward. Each is equipped with a Safe-T-Lyke harness.

On one of the seats is a tape recorder. There does not seem to be anyclone present. Nor is there a clearance stripe. Or much of anything else inside.

[1354]

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

More flailing happens, causing one of the communists to pistol-whip Cyrus-R. This snaps him out of it, and he notices that his left thigh now has a fresh slug wound. One that is bleeding.

He hastily explains that his PDC is from a previous mission, and proceeds to answer it. It turns out to be Kris-R.

A communist tells him, "You will say that there is no problem here. The sector has been liberated."

written by Speeder on Apr 05, 2013 17:14

I see the transbot and also move toward it.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 05, 2013 18:02

I decide to be the first to enter, looking around the transbot for anything else of note other than the tape recorder.

written by Speeder on Apr 05, 2013 18:04

Also I have the distinct feeling that I was plainly ignored.

written by Jam on Apr 05, 2013 18:13

I also decide to enter the transbot.

written by Gligar on Apr 05, 2013 19:31

TUBE Transbot D7-48-DF-AC-A8-96, Platform H, Transtube station, near Kappa Subector

L4-O is the first to enter, and gives the transbot another rlook. He can now see that the bot is fitted with signboards, which are presumably for displaying destination information, advertisements, loyalty messages, advertisements - that sort of thing. One of them is currently active, and indicates that the bot is at JHT Sector, waiting for Troubleshooter Team Epsilon. Departure will be at 23:30. There are also the "door open" buttons and light fixtures which you would find in any transbot.

Notably absent is dust of any sort, except where the team have tracked it in. I bet King-R wishes he had supplies right now. He's probably be cleaning it up or something... or perhaps fining people for tracking it in. I can't really tell.

Also absent is any sort of briefing officer.

Behind L4-O, Speed-Y enters, looking a little less-than-happy about being ignored. He notices the seats, the signboards, the tape recorder... the lights... the lack of briefing officer...

And then there's Jam-Y and the rest of the team. They follow behind Speed-Y.

written by Kristos on Apr 05, 2013 19:28

"Hello, Cyrus-R. How are you? Things are magnificent over here! I feel so... free! Almost like I just had a fresh start. How are you doing? Did you ever complete the fume hood?"

written by Speeder on Apr 05, 2013 20:06

I look around.

"Whoa..."

I then take the tape recorder, choose a spot and sit. Who knows if the thing will not start shooting itself as soon as I press the play button.

After everyone is secured (sitting or standing) and paying attention, I finally press the play button.

written by Gligar on Apr 05, 2013 22:19

TUBE Transbot D7-48-DF-AC-A8-96, Platform H, Transtube station, near Kappa Subector

Seemingly impressed by the transbot (or perhaps it's something else? Being impressed is the proper reaction, though) Speed-Y picks up the tape recorder and grabs a seat. Off his cue, the rest of the team does the same. He doesn't start the tape yet. For some reason, he has his feeling that something might happen when he does.

It takes a minutecycle, but eventually everyone is seated and harnessed. Only now does Speed-Y press play.

As he does, the transbot's door closes, and the tape begins to play. "This briefing is Security Clearance RED," a voice from the tape begins. "It is not suited for citizens of Security Clearance INFRARED, or any citizens not a part of Troubleshooter Team Epsilon of JHT Sector. If any such citizen is listening to this, they are to report for termination immediately.

"Team Epsilon: you have been chosen for a mission of utmost importance! An important object must be transferred from DIG Sector to HOL Sector. You are tasked with ensuring that it reaches its destination."

Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Kris-R and the survivors continue down the roadway, passing the laser barrel factory as they do. As you know, Kris-R is speaking on the PDC, to Cyrus-R, telling him that everything's fine out here... almost as if he had a fresh start. He inquires as to the status of things in the factory, including Cyrus-R's fume hood project.

He may have to wait for a reply...

written by Speeder on Apr 05, 2013 22:23

I feel a urge to comment about how being a secure transport with a program group trying to kill you is bad idea...

But I decide against it, you know, Friend Computer know what it is doing.

Or I hope so.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 06, 2013 04:47

"Ooh. Two sectors we've never been to. This should be interesting..."

I listen on...

written by Gligar on Apr 06, 2013 12:42

TUBE Transbot D7-48-DF-AC-A8-96, Platform H, Transtube station, near Kappa Subector

Speed-Y looks like he wants to say something... but thinks better of it. After all, The Computer knows what it's doing. And don't you forget it. If you do, it can make you remember.

L4-O is more interested in the fact that they get to visit two entirely new sectors. He continues paying attention to the tape.

Nobody else says anything as the tape continues. "You are not cleared to know what the object is, or any details about it. Suffice to say, it must be protected at all costs. It is believed that you will encounter interference during your mission. But, given your track record, that should not be a problem for you. You are authorised to terminate anyone who attempts to interfere with your mission, but remember that collateral damage is forbidden.

"Once this transbot gets underway, it will take you to Outfitting, where your equipment, and the object in question, are waiting. You will receive additional instructions there."

written by Speeder on Apr 06, 2013 14:23

I look sad.

"Damnit... no collateral damage allowed this mission..."

I look at L4

"This mean explosions!"

I look at Joris... Joris? Joris is here right?

"Specially, no explosions that punch holes in domescrapers!"

I smile.

"At least this guarantees that I won't die in blazing glory again. Of course, this mean I will try very hard to not die, since dieing in a boring way is very unglorious...

and boring."

written by Gligar on Apr 06, 2013 16:16

TUBE Transbot D7-48-DF-AC-A8-96, Platform H, Transtube station, near Kappa Subector

More action from Speed-Y.

It seems that he is upset that no collateral damage is permitted. After all, that means that the can't use explosions... (L4-O, please take note) especially none that blow big holes in the sides of domescrapers (as Joris-O can remember doing... and he doesn't seem guilty about it as he sits there in his harness).

On the plus side, it means that there is less chance of another "blazing glory" event, and more chance of him staying alive... boring deaths are not fun. As are pointless deaths. Or self-termination...

The tape continues. "A password will be required to gain custody of the object in question. As its keepers for the time being, you are authorised to know that the password is 'the RED one with teeth'. Do not give this password to unauthorised clones. Failure to comply will result in termination."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 06, 2013 20:58

"No explosions makes me sad... oh well. I guess I can just use my blasters more..."

I determine how many charged power packs I have for my blasters, including the ones currently in the blasters.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 07, 2013 03:14

"Ah, Boris! The mission has been proceeding... err... gloriously! However, it seems there may have been tampering with the supply of slugthrowers, and some comrades have been getting injured as a result. I was just recommending to the others that it might be worth having a look at the slugthrower factory to determine the source of the problem."

written by Gligar on Apr 07, 2013 13:09

TUBE Transbot D7-48-DF-AC-A8-96, Platform H, Transtube station, near Kappa Subector

L4-O is sad that he can't use any of his explosive equipment. But that's okay, since he has blasters.

He decides to check them, and discovers that he has one half-charged pack in one blaster, a full one in the other, and two spare.

The tape finishes, "If you have any questions, please feel free to keep them to yourself. You can file an Information Request Form later." And then it stops.

Which is probably a good thing, as the transbot suddenly accelerates into the tunnel.

Factory floor entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R answers Kris-R, though he calls him "Boris", by saying that things are going gloriously. He relays his "problem" with slugthrowers, and suggests that he and the comrades might be going to check out the slugthrower factory.

Wait... does that suggest that he has turned? Or is he merely confirming [REDACTED] ignoring the mission for something that he THINKS is the mission? Oh well. If he can pull it off, the commies will be distracted. And that will help the loyal clones with their work.

written by Speeder on Apr 07, 2013 17:47

I make sure I have the harness correctly, just in case.

written by Gligar on Apr 07, 2013 18:21

TUBE Transbot D7-48-DF-AC-A8-96, in a tunnel near Kappa Subector

As the transbot accelerates, Speed-Y takes the time to check his harness, and make sure he has fastened it properly. Everything seems to be alright.

And it's probably a good thing that he did, as the transbot's acceleration increases, pushing the team towards the back of the transbot... how's everyone's harness?

Within moments, the transbot leaves the sector.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 07, 2013 19:34

I try to make sure my harness is secure too.

written by Kristos on Apr 07, 2013 21:50

I'm initially startled by Cyrus-R's reply. Boris? He must be in the presence of the fuzzies, convincing them of things... and I should probably play along.

I put on my most serious face and say, with a deep monotone voice, "Excellent. I give my full recommendation as well." Then I cover the microphone with my hand and snicker.

written by Jam on Apr 08, 2013 05:13

I check my harness, since I seem to have been in a bit of a daze when (if) I put it on.

Also, I check to see if the transbot has any windows, and try to judge roughly how fast we're going.

written by Speeder on Apr 08, 2013 12:14

"This thing is faaaaaaaaaaast!"

written by Gligar on Apr 08, 2013 12:31

TUBE Transbot D7-48-DF-AC-A8-96, in a tunnel, somewhere past JHT Sector

More clones check their harnesses. All of them, except for that of King-R, are set up properly; King-R ends up falling to the floor, and sliding towards the rear of the bot.

Jam-Y is pleased that he got that harness right. After all, he wasn't really paying attention when he put it on. He looks around for windows but, sadly, there are none. When you fit the seats to the side and add harnesses, there isn't really much room for windows.

As such, it is up to Speed-Y to point out that the bot is travelling fast. How fast? It is difficult to tell.

Soon, the acceleration fades away, as does all sensation of... well, weight.

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

As he and the survivors turn onto Roadway 2, Kris-R comes to a decision regarding Cyrus-R's message, and decides that he is simply under communist surveillance. As such, he decides to play along. His reply is that he can recommend Cyrus-R's plan. In as plain, and as low, a voice as he can muster.

Privately, he seems amused by it. As do the survivors he is accompanying. One of them touches his arm, and points out a building - one with impressive-looking defences: the Armed Forces garrison. And from the look of it, there are clones inside.

written by Speeder on Apr 08, 2013 13:27

"Alright...

First, King-R, get back to your seat, I guess we are in freefall now, of course this mean that soon we won't be anymore, and I don't want smashed King-R on the walls..."

I smile happily, and creepily somehow too.

"So, we can already talk about some stuff related to the mission, first, although you are still authorised to use explosives, PLEASE try to explode only your target.

Second, no B3 or laser barrel grenades unless it is a serious emergency, those are too unpredictable.

Yes, I know they are FUN, but if we explode our cargo, or cause collateral damage, we won't have any FUN.

Finally, I am very sure that the Easter Cycle are still after us... So stay alert, always, ALWAYS, we MUST stay alert, I don't want any surprise grenades, suitcase bombs or stuff like that exploding us, or our cargo.

Who was the alertness officer, again?"

written by Gligar on Apr 08, 2013 16:03

TUBE Transbot D7-48-DF-AC-A8-96, in a tunnel, somewhere past JHT Sector

As the transbot continues, Speed-Y takes the time to give the team a mini-briefing of his own - though he first takes the time to tell King-R to sort himself out.

He notes that, though they are not permitted to cause collateral damage, they are not prohibited to use explosives. So that means that they can still use them to explode their targets... as long as they don't explode anything else. As such, he has decided to restrict their explosive use to real explosives; no B3 grenades or laser barrel grenades will be permitted during the mission, as they are unpredictable, and could easily take out their cargo even if they are careful.

And speaking of explosions... he is convinced that the First Church of the Easter Cycle still has them in their sights and might be planning to use explosives against them - which, again, could take out their cargo. They should keep their alertness up for this sort of thing.

Wait... who is the Alertness Officer?

Lucas-O, of course. "That's me, sir," he says. "Unless we're changing the assignments for this mission?"

King-R seems to be having trouble getting back to his seat.

written by Jam on Apr 08, 2013 16:05

"Wait, if we're in free fall, what happens when we finally hit something? Do we all just go 'splat' and die?"

I start a count in my head of roughly how many secondcycles we've been floating for.

written by Speeder on Apr 08, 2013 17:13

I first reply to Jam.

"This is a TUBE, we won't hit anything, we will just brake, probably a bit more violently than people would like.

[1357]

Also we might just change direction, of course this mean some incredible forces toward some directions.

Of course this mean that King-R that is still not seated is still risking get turned into some splattered tissue."

I smile and look at Lucas.

"No no... We should keep as we are now. But I demand that you improve your performance, the Easter Cycle thugs caused several close calls in our bunker... If they could do that in our bunker, imagine now that we are NOT in our territory."

written by Gligar on Apr 08, 2013 18:21

TUBE Transbot D7-48-DF-AC-A8-96, in a tunnel, somewhere past JHT Sector

Jam-Y is worried about something. If they're in free fall, what happens when they collide with something? Do they just go splat? Well, given that it's been over a minutecycle since they stopped accelerating, and that they haven't hit anything yet...

Speed-Y doesn't think that they will hit anything; he seems to be somewhat familiar with the TUBE network. As he explains, all that will happen is a rapid deceleration - just not an instant one. But even so, forces will be... violent. And that includes changing direction - which he is sure will happen.

And that means that King-R had better strap himself into his chair to avoid a sudden impact event with the transbot... one that will cause injury at the very least.

To Lucas-O, he adds that they will not be changing MBD assignments for this mission. And that means that Lucas-O must improve his performance. After all, if the Easter Cycle can hit them in the bunker, think what they could do out here!

"Got it, sir," he replies, "but I must remind you that the same also applies to the rest of you. And you know that I'll be testing you."

The transbot continues on its way. King-R manages to pull himself into his seat, and is working on his harness when there is a sudden jolt, throwing everyone to the left.

written by Speeder on Apr 08, 2013 18:31

"I guess is no coincidence that this system got phased out and is used only for long distance transport."

I puke.

"NOOO, I WANT MY B3 WITH SOYLENT BAAAAACK!!! BANANAAAAAS!!!"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 08, 2013 20:04

I try to avoid what Speed-Y just did. And avoid looking at it.

If he did anything, anyway.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 08, 2013 20:32

I respond to the others.

"Ah, yes, Boris gives his full recommendation. And if you know Boris, you'll know that his recommendations are fully recommended!"

written by Gligar on Apr 08, 2013 22:09

TUBE Transbot D7-48-DF-AC-A8-96, in a tunnel, somewhere past JHT Sector

Speed-Y comments that it is no mystery why the TUBE isn't used except for long-distance journeys. After all, look at the effects the thing can have: it can cause clones to lose the contents of their stomach.

Which promptly goes everywhere, spreading over everything.

Speed-Y is upset at this. He liked that Soylent!

L4-O just tries to avoid the nasty stuff. Difficult when it decides to spread like it does, but he somehow manages it.

King-R isn't so lucky. He looks sharply at Speed-Y. "Was that really necessary, sir? Someone's going to have to clean that up! And I'll be making sure of it!"

The transbot makes a sudden shift upwards, and one of the displays changes to read

Approaching DIG Sector

Factory Floor Entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" relays "Boris'" recommendation that they go investigate the slugthrower factory. This causes the commies to whisper quietly.

Eventually, one says, "We'll have to verify your claim. These slugthrowers have been verified by our comrades - "

BLAM

"Oh no! My slugthrower fired itself again!"

And fire it did... right into "Karl's" torso. He falls to the ground and drops his PDC.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 09, 2013 05:23

"OW OW OW OW! ARRRR!"

written by Speeder on Apr 09, 2013 12:52

OW OW OW ARRRRR!

I think we should trademark that phrase and make t-shirts with them.

[1358]

I flail my hands in the air as best as I can, having been shot several times.

“Comrades, we should probably see about getting me some bandages, as it’s becoming somewhat difficult to further our glorious causes in my present condition. Also, directing your weapons in some direction other than directly at me might also help.”

written by Lightning4 on Apr 09, 2013 07:00

“Almost there! Too bad we couldn’t take Nukabot with us. In fact, perhaps I should notify Nukabot to just head back to the bunker... I have the feeling we’ll be gone for a while.”

I wait to take out my PDC though, since I probably won’t be able to hold my grip if the TUBE bot suddenly stops.

written by Speeder on Apr 09, 2013 12:50

“In fact, even better, request for his maintenance.

Although I fear he might be sabotaged again... He might also get repaired finely.”

written by Gligar on Apr 09, 2013 13:14

Factory Floor Entrance, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

“Karl” realises that he is finding it hard to breathe after that last shot, but nonetheless insists on flailing again. That gets the commies confused. Why would he be acting normally under those conditions? And why would he be speechifying, wasting his air on words?

Actually, he’s just saying that they might want to administer aid and/or point their weapons elsewhere, but he takes so long in saying it that he passes out almost before he can finish saying it.

“You know,” one of them says, “maybe we should help him.”

“I guess. Anyone know where the medical bay is around here?”

“Nope. Anyone got any supplies?”

“Nope.”

TUBE Transbot D7-48-DF-AC-A8-96, in a tunnel, somewhere near DIG Sector

L4-O is sad that they can’t take Nukabot with them. Perhaps he should send a message back to tell it to return to the bunker. (If it weren’t for the risk of sudden deceleration causing him to lose his PDC, he’d do it now.)

Speed-Y suggests that L4-O instead organise repairs. Though... given the what happened last time, he’s not so sure whether a repair team would repair Nukabot or cause even more damage...

There is a big jolt as the transbot suddenly decelerates. A display lights up, indicating that the bot has indeed arrived at DIG Sector.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 09, 2013 18:18

I undo my harness, and head to the door. I look around, if I can.

written by Speeder on Apr 09, 2013 18:35

I also quickly reach for the door (but don’t exit yet, I look outside)

What is the thing decide to leave the station again before I leave it?

written by Gligar on Apr 09, 2013 18:59

TUBE Transbot D7-48-DF-AC-A8-96, at a station, DIG Sector

L4-O and Speed-Y both unstrap themselves and head for the door. L4-O wonders why it doesn’t open for a moment before Speed-Y helps him out by pressing the button.

The door opens, revealing what appears to be another RED TUBE platform, similar to the one they just left.

Unlike the one at JHT Sector, however, this one features not only a group of PLC clones, but also a pair of forklifts carrying some boxes. How they got here is a mystery until Speed-Y looks around a little further and spots a vehiclebot door a bit further down.

One of the clones, a GREEN, looks over. “Identify yourselves! This is a restricted platform limited to PLC employees only. What is your business here?”

“Is it that team?” asks another, a RED.

“We don’t know yet!” replies the GREEN. “It could be anyone.”

written by Jam on Apr 10, 2013 05:41

I unstrap myself and exit the transbot.

“Yes, we’re the team!”

I smile at the clones waiting for us.

written by Gligar on Apr 10, 2013 12:15

TUBE Transbot D7-48-DF-AC-A8-96, at a station, DIG Sector

Jam-Y unstraps himself. He joins L4-O and Speed-Y... and then steps onto the platform.

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

He looks at the GREEN and, smiling, assures him that they are the team.

“How do I know that?” the GREEN wants to know. “A TUBE transbot pulls up, and clones get out... do you know how many transbots pull into here? How do I know that you’re the right team? What are you here for?”

Behind him, another clone pulls out her PDC and checks something.

written by Speeder on Apr 10, 2013 14:24

I look at him and smile in a friendly manner.

[1359]

"Hello! I am Speed-Y, Team Leader of Team Epsilon, I heard we are to escort your cargo.

Now, how I know that YOU are the ones that are supposed to give our the correct cargo, and not a team of infiltrators giving false cargo?"

written by Kristos on Apr 10, 2013 15:33

I follow the clones into the Armed Forces garrison and, naturally, look around.⁸³²

written by Gligar on Apr 10, 2013 16:16

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

Speed-Y also smiles. In as friendly a tone as he can, he turns the statement around: how can the team know that the PLC crew are genuine?

"Simple," the GREEN replies. "You should have received a password with your briefing. Give it to us, and we'll give you the package. It's then up to you to get it to its destination. You will, of course, have to arrange transport.

"Now, I'll ask again: what are you here for?"

The RED gets off her PDC. "I've got confirmation that Team Epsilon left JHT Sector a few minutecycles ago... this is most likely them."

Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R continues following the survivors as they enter the garrison.

Security checkpoint, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Of course, when one enters a military installation, the first thing to be done is to pass through security.

And in this case, security is handled by a couple of YELLOW clones, armed with laser rifles and possibly other things hidden away in their armour.

One commands the survivors to halt. "Identify yourselves!" he barks.

written by Speeder on Apr 10, 2013 16:20

I frown.

"I can only give the password to authorised clones, with the penalty of instant termination otherwise.

Please, show me your authorisation to receive the password."

written by Cryoburner on Apr 10, 2013 17:28

I try to un-pass out. >_>

written by Gligar on Apr 10, 2013 18:30

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

Speed-Y doesn't budge from his standpoint and insists that the PLC team show some sort of authorisation. Only then will he give the password.

The GREEN sighs. "Alright, who has the form?"

⁸³² KRISTOS: (OOC: lol@Kar!!)

"I've got it," a YELLOW, one with a clipboard, replies. He flips through a few sheets. "Here it is." He walks over, removing something from his clipboard, and shows it to Speed-Y. It does indeed appear to be an Authorisation to Co-operate with Troubleshooter Team form, which can be used when sensitive matters are dealt with during a mission. This one authorises DIG Sector PLC to co-operate in a mission with Team Epsilon of JHT Sector.

Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Somewhere in the factory, a group of communists is dragging someone.

That someone, of course, is the injured Cyrus-R. Cyrus would probably approve of being dragged, if it weren't for the fact that he is unconscious. Though it looks like he wants to wake up.

Impromptu command centre, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

He actually manages to do that, briefly, as he is dragged into another room and placed on a table. Just before he drifts off again, he sees a communist retrieving a medkit from somewhere.

written by Speeder on Apr 10, 2013 18:37

"Alright!

So, who is the RED one with teeth?"

I am smiling again.

written by Jam on Apr 10, 2013 20:02

Surprised by Speed-Y's sudden question, I look closely at the one of the RED clones to see if there's anything odd with their teeth.

"I don't see anything wrong with their teeth... Speed-Y, what are you talking about?"

I look incredibly puzzled, until I suddenly realize what Speed-Y meant.

Then I facepalm.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 10, 2013 21:48

I simply watch for now. I do glance around the station though, to see if there's anything else interesting about. Or any traitors spying on us...

written by Gligar on Apr 10, 2013 22:49

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

Speed-Y accepts the form as genuine, looks around, and gives the password ("the RED one with teeth"), phrasing it as if it is a question.

That is enough to throw Jam-Y, at least, who initially thinks Speed-Y is asking about one of the RED clones. He has a quick look at them before realising the true meaning of Speed-Y's question, and facepalms. (Does Speed-Y have anything to say about that facepalm? 😊)

[1360]

The GREEN perks up. "Right over here." He heads over to an area behind the forkbots, beckoning for Speed-Y, and possibly the rest of the team, to follow.

L4-O doesn't follow, not just yet. He decides to remain where he is and simply look around the platform. He notices a crate behind the forkbots – presumably what the GREEN is referring to – and notices that it's big. And kind of reinforced, as if what is inside is dangerous. (Indeed, there is also a sign affixed to the crate, reading VERY DANGEROUS – DO NOT OPEN EXCEPT AS PER PROTOCOL PM-66778-BLUE.

He also notices a smaller door near the vehiclebot door, at the end of the platform, as well as a stairwell, probably leading to the rest of the station.

written by Kristos on Apr 11, 2013 04:18

I wait for another clone to identify the group as I am not really familiar with them.

written by Jam on Apr 11, 2013 04:29

I start to follow the GREEN clone.

written by Speeder on Apr 11, 2013 12:57

I also follow the GREEN clone, frown at Jam and facepalm.

written by Gligar on Apr 11, 2013 17:10

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

Speed-Y begins to catch up to the GREEN (but not before facepalming at Jam-Y), and notices the big crate. "As I said," the GREEN says, "you'll have to arrange your own transport from here. There's a used vehiclebot store not too far from here; I'm sure you'll find something there."

Jam-Y also catches up, and sees The Crate. He also notes its size.

The GREEN continues. "As to your team's equipment, that has already been sorted. Forkbots?"

The forkbots seem to grumble. They turn, and lower their forks before backing away.

"I think you'll find that everything you need is in the boxes."

Security checkpoint, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R makes no attempt to say anything, as he doesn't know any of the survivors.

One of the survivors seems to know the YELLOWS, though. He steps forward and says, "Sirs, I'm Private Phil-R-MAL-2. These are survivors of the communist attack, and we'd like to gain entry."

One of the YELLOWS says, "Yeah? I'll need some ID from all of them. ME Cards, tongueprints, whatever." He fishes around in his armour and pulls out a tongueprint scanner.

written by Speeder on Apr 11, 2013 19:31

I look at the GREEN clone.

"The equipment has a map, of where we are supposed to go at least?"

I peer at the boxes, seeing how heavy they are, and if they can be carried by hand, and if they are labelled.

written by Gligar on Apr 11, 2013 22:12

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

Speed-Y wonders if "everything they need" includes a map. "Er... yes," the GREEN replies, "I think there is a map telling you how to get to the destination in HOL Sector."

He then investigates the boxes. From the look of them, they are large enough to contain equipment for the whole team, if said equipment were to be stored in individual boxes and copious amounts of Packy-Foam, as they were in the previous mission. As such, it would be difficult to move them by hand. Unless they were to sort out the team's equipment right now?

Joris-O is startled by his PDC suddenly vibrating at him.

written by Speeder on Apr 11, 2013 22:34

I approach the boxes, and carefully open one, hoping that packy-foam won't spring out like crazy and make me get fined for littering.

written by Kristos on Apr 11, 2013 23:00

When my turn comes, I present my ID.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 11, 2013 23:37

I notice the equipment and job over to the team.

"Oh, oops. I'm the equipment officer, so I guess this should be my duty too."

I assist Speed-Y with the sorting through the equipment boxes.

written by Jam on Apr 12, 2013 04:53

"And I'm the Loyalty Officer!"

I proceed to watch various clones to confirm that they are being loyal and unsuspecting.

written by Gligar on Apr 12, 2013 12:52

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

As always, one clone is the fastest to react to the boxes. Care to guess who?

If you guessed "Speed-Y", you were right. (Everyone else clearly needs an eye test. And probably a period of re-education.)

In this case, he is attempting to open one of the boxes to see what is inside. The most obvious thing is Packy-Foam – as he opens the box, a little of it falls out – which conceals a number of other items. Most obvious are the Team Leader's Hat, the pack of MBD badges, and the box of laser barrels.

L4-O, being rather slow to react, hurriedly rushes over to help Speed-Y with the boxes, and is able to open the other box, which seems to contain... well, Packy-Foam, but also a number of smaller boxes.

[1361]

Seem familiar?

There might be more, but you'd have to dig through the Packy-Foam to find it.

Jam-Y prefers to hang back a little, and keep a lookout for treason. He notes that he cannot see anything that could be described as an act of treason. Only L4-O and Speed-Y looking through the boxes, Joris-O fiddling with his PDC, and the forkbots continuing to grumble at something.

Speaking of PDCs, Speed-Y's makes itself known.

Security checkpoint, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

The YELLOW soldier continues to check IDs. It becomes clear that he is checking both ME Cards and tongueprints against some database he is accessing on his PDC.

Soon, it is Kris-R's turn. He gives his card to the soldier, leaving his hands free to grasp the scanner and apply his tongue to the sensors, sweeping it right across in as close to a regulation lick as he can manage.

After a moment, the scanner beeps. The soldier looks at his PDC and says, "Alright, you're who you say you are. You're with Troubleshooter Team Sigma of JHT Sector, correct?"

written by Kristos on Apr 12, 2013 14:50

"Team Sigma Leader, Kris-R, sir!"

I consider telling the soldier about my other team member who is still back in the commie-infested factory. But I don't want to hold up the line, and there's probably a more appropriate clone to talk to further in the garrison.

written by Speeder on Apr 12, 2013 15:03

I take the hat (since it is easy to reach) drop all packy foam back on the box, and put it on my head

Then I take the PDC and answer it, leaving the equipment sorting to equipment officer.

"Speed-Y here!"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 12, 2013 15:36

I start taking out and placing boxes next to me.

I call out for what officer each box is for, and place it next to me. Same as before!

written by Gligar on Apr 12, 2013 16:14

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

Speed-Y looks like he wanted to properly equip himself before answering his PDC. But whatever it is probably won't wait that long, so he decides on a compromise, wherein he only takes the hat for now, and puts the Packy-Foam in its place.

Then he answers his PDC.

L4-O handles the rest of the equipment from the other box. As mentioned, it consists of other boxes, and, as with the previous mission, they are labelled. He follows the same procedure he did last time, and names the boxes: Team Leader, Equipment Officer - hey, that's him! - Loyalty Officer, Hygiene Officer, Communications and Recording Officer, Financial Officer, Alertness Officer...

Joris-O, having finished fiddling with his PDC, approaches, and takes the Financial Officer box. Maybe he'll get some use out of it this time.

Security checkpoint, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R confirms his membership of Team Sigma, causing the soldier to nod. "First mission, right? Bet you weren't expecting something this big." He moves on, soon coming to the end of the survivors. "Alright, you all check out. Head into the main building, and go to the mess hall. You'll have a chance to serve The Computer later."

Odd that he doesn't mention the rest of Team Sigma, but that's probably for the best - Mick-R never showed up, and Cyrus-R... where is Cyrus-R, anyway?

Impromptu command centre, Laser barrel factory, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Right where we left him, it seems. It looks like he's coming around again. I'm sure the stimulants the communists injected him with have helped. (Surely they should have killed him by now. But I guess they still think he is this "Karl" person.)

So it is that he is awake when an impending attack on the Armed Forces garrison is announced.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 12, 2013 17:02

I keep digging, looking for any more boxes or equipment that needs to be distributed. If this box is empty, I move to one of the ones that haven't been checked yet. If there are any.

written by Jam on Apr 12, 2013 21:22

"Cool! A box!"

I run up to the Loyalty Officer's box, open it, and look inside.

written by Gligar on Apr 12, 2013 21:53

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

L4-O keeps looking through the box and, finding only Packy-Foam, moves on to the other box.

Apart from what has already been mentioned, L4-O also finds several laser rifles with barrels, and also some slugthrower ammunition. No slugthrowers, though. Finally, he finds some Troubleshooter helmets and several sets of reflex.

Jam-Y runs to the Loyalty Officer box and opens it. In there, he finds some tapes for his Loyalty Transcripts Recorder, as well as SDL and ELT cards as in the previous mission. He also finds an external microphone.

John-O also decides to investigate a box - the Communications and Recording Officer box, of course. Inside, he finds another Multicorder and a number of lights and camera attachments.

Interestingly, there seem to be more of them than there are team members.

Lucas-O starts to head towards a box, but is distracted by his PDC.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 12, 2013 22:00

I get a little concerned about all the PDCs going off. I don't say anything though, preferring to just momentarily glance at the clones who have had them ring so far.

I resume looking through the box, checking to see if there's anything else.

written by Jam on Apr 13, 2013 06:06

I take the tapes and the cards, and look at the microphone closer to try to determine what I'm supposed to do with it. Then I suddenly remember something important, and start looking in my box again.

"Laser pistol, laser pistol..."

I excitedly search my box for any signs of a laser pistol or barrel.

written by Gligar on Apr 13, 2013 13:19

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station. DIG Sector

L4-O notes all the PDCs going off... he is starting to get concerned by it all... isn't it a bit suspicious? But he still has this box to sort out, and besides, he hasn't had his PDC go off, so it's not like it is of any concern to him, right?

He goes back to the box, fishing through all the Packy-Foam, and finds a few additional laser pistol bodies and - oh hey, there is a slugthrower in there after all!

Meanwhile, Jam-Y is searching through the Packy-Foam in his on box. After all, there was a laser pistol in the previous one. But... doesn't he already have one? Well, I guess he has two now, since there's one in there.

But he also has to worry about the rest of the contents of the box. The tapes and the cards are simple enough, but what about this microphone? Doesn't he already have one with his transcripts recorder? Is this one meant to be a replacement? An extra? It does have a trailing lead...

written by Speeder on Apr 13, 2013 13:35

I finish hearing my PDC.

"Odd... message."

I shrug, and approach the equipment boxes again and start to grab my own equipment and wear whatever I am supposed to wear (like, armor).

"My message was about how our cargo should not fall at the hands of traitors from secret societies, so I guess we can expect them."

written by Gligar on Apr 13, 2013 17:46

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station. DIG Sector

Speed-Y puts away his PDC. Apparently, he was just told that their cargo was too important to allow to fall into the hands of a secret society. Which basically told him what they already know: that the secret societies will attempt to stop them.

He also approaches the boxes, at the same time as Joris-O, and sorts out his own equipment: reflec, laser pistol, slugthrower...

...well, he would if he didn't already have reflec, a laser pistol and a slugthrower. But a spare barrel never went amiss, so he grabs one. But... hmm, the slugthrower... does he want another one? Or maybe let their other YELLOW have it?

Said YELLOW seems to still be pondering the microphone he found. Why would he need another?

Well, it must be alright, since The Computer approved the equipment, right? Therefore he must need it for something.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 13, 2013 18:55

If this large box is complete, I look for any other equipment boxes I am supposed to look through.

If there is one, I immediately open it and start looking through it.

written by Kristos on Apr 14, 2013 00:00

Serve the computer... Hearing that phrase I begin to feel guilty. How strange. I whisper to the clone beside me, "Hey-" then forget what I was going to say. How awkward. So I cap the silence off with "-what's your name?"

I head into the main building, and go to the mess hall.

written by Speeder on Apr 14, 2013 00:14

I leave the other slugthrower.

But I check if it is one of those legendary "revolvers" too, or something newer and less cool.

written by Jam on Apr 14, 2013 05:42

I stop looking at the microphone for now and go take the slugthrower.

I also put on my reflec (if I'm not already wearing it), then check the reflec in Speed-Y's box, the compare it to the reflec that Speed-Y's wearing.

written by Gligar on Apr 14, 2013 11:56

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station. DIG Sector

Now done with the large boxes, L4-O turns his attention to the smaller ones. As mentioned, there is a box for each Mandatory Bonus Duty here, including one for the Equipment Officer. He opens it, revealing a helmet, laser pistol, repair kits... you know, the usual. Oh, and a fresh set of reflec.

[1363]

Speaking of reflec, Jam-Y seems a little concerned over the state of Speed-Y's reflec; the set in his box seems to be in better condition. Speed-Y doesn't seem to have noticed due to being interested in that slugthrower.

No wait, he has left it alone. That might be due to the fact that it isn't a "revolver" but a regular, more modern weapon which is not as interesting in his opinion. Oh well, that just means that Jam-Y can take it and the ammunition (35 slugs in total), and sort out his own reflec. There, all better.

Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, Emergency Bunker C-3

Feeling a little guilty for no apparent reason, Kris-R follows the other clones towards the mess hall. He attracts the attention of one of them, and is about to say something before thinking better of it. He instead settles on asking the clone's name. "Josh-R-JHY-2 at your service, citizen! And you?"

The group continues into the main building, where they are escorted to the mess hall.

Mess hall, Main building, Armed Forces Garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

The mess hall is a large room resembling many food halls in the rest of the complex: long benches where clones can sit and eat, serving hatches in one wall, vendobots along another... you know the sort of place. This one is different in that there are no vidscreens, only Armed Forces posters reminding the soldiers who eat here to remain alert for commie mutant traitors.

It doesn't appear to be in use right now, meantime being hourcycles ago.

Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Another cloning tank begins its cloning cycle.

written by Speeder on Apr 14, 2013 16:00

I check my box again, see what objects are there.

And if I find barrels, I already take them (but continue the checking of stuff).

written by Gligar on Apr 14, 2013 19:29

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

Speed-Y has another look in his box.

Hmmm. let's see... there is the reflec - seemingly better quality than the reflec he has - as well as a laser pistol with a YELLOW barrel, a folder marked "Additional Instructions"... and that's about it.

The GREEN looks over at them. "Are you all ready?"

Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The tank finishes its cycle and deposits a rather confused-looking Cyrus-R onto the floor.

Wait... Cyrus-R? Why would he be decanted? The last time I saw him, he was resting on a table in the impromptu command centre the communists were using in the factory. So why is he suddne;y here? Let me see...

Ah! Here it is. It turns out that the communists used the wrong medication... apparently they did not realise that Cyrus-R had low blood pressure, and his heart failed.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 14, 2013 19:50

I decide to swap out my reflec for the new reflec, putting the old armor into the box.

written by Speeder on Apr 14, 2013 21:13

I swap my reflect, and take the laser pistol with barrels (who knows, maybe I want wield two at the same time?)

And I read the folder, just in case something make me want to question the GREEN.

written by Gligar on Apr 14, 2013 23:00

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

As other clones sort out their boxes, L4-O decides to swap out his reflec. Probably a good idea after the zombie episode...

Speed-Y seems to think the same way, as he swaps out his own reflec. There we go. (He also takes the extra laser pistol, because why not?)

He also has a look at that folder. Inside, he finds several sheets of paper; the first reiterates what the GREEN told him about transport, namely that they should probably obtain it themselves. The reason for this becomes obvious when he looks at one of the other sheets, which seems to be a list of suggested routes to take to get to HOL Sector. Most of them make use of roadways.

The remaining sheets summarise their possible foes, and a couple of protocols for use if The Crate is opened. But... given that they seem to revolve around dying...

written by Lightning4 on Apr 15, 2013 01:12

I don my helmet, and any badges and such. I also put the laser pistol and repair kits away for safekeeping.

I then assess how many extra weapons are left.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 15, 2013 02:38

"Hmm... How troublesome... I'll need to get my pen back."

I wander over to the nearest shower, and following the procedures outlined in the "Decanting and You!" instructional video training series, don an air mask and begin a shower cycle, so long as the showers are cycling as expected.

written by Speeder on Apr 15, 2013 11:04

I turn to the GREEN.

"In case of emergency, if the crate is stolen, can I explode it if I think it cannot be retrieved?"

written by Gligar on Apr 15, 2013 13:41

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

L4-O continues sorting out his equipment. Helmet... badge... extra laser pistol... the repair kits...

[1364]

That leaves one laser rifle per team member plus two spare barrels each, and the same for laser pistols. They're being generous with the weapons this time.

Speed-Y, it seems, has noticed an omission with the instructions: what are they to do if The Crate is stolen? Can they explode it? "You can't," is the response. "The contents are immune to conventional explosives... and nukes are so far beyond your clearance that you wouldn't be here if you had one. If it is stolen, you will simply have to get it back."

Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R realises what has happened and notes the inconvenience. He'll have to get his pen back.

He proceeds to follow the lighted strips, starting with the one which takes him to the showers.

Chemical showers, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Once there, he's able to start showering. He notes that the showers are working normally.

written by Speeder on Apr 15, 2013 15:04

I nod.

"That... complicates... things.

But, nukes CAN explode it?"

I look around to see if there are still any equipment to be sorted out (by me, or anyone else in the team)

written by Lightning4 on Apr 15, 2013 15:32

I also grab my laser rifle and barrels, and the spare laser pistol.

"Quite a few weapons. I'm a little concerned that you're indicating how many CMTs we're going to come across later... we didn't get anywhere near this many on our last mission and, hoo boy, we were killing a lot of things."

"Oh well. More things to shoot isn't a bad thing."

written by Gligar on Apr 15, 2013 16:54

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

Speed-Y seems a little worried. Being unable to explode The Crate makes things... complicated. But wait... he said that nukes would work? "I think I've said enough now," the GREEN replies. "Any more and I'll have to haul you all away for brainscrub."

Speed-Y turns to the remaining equipment, and spots the pile of lasers that L4-O has taken out of one of the boxes. L4-O, incidentally, has added one of the rifles to his already-formidable arsenal, but he also seems... concerned. This is quite the loadout they have been given. Far more than the last mission, where they would have definitely appreciated all this. (But then, The Computer didn't know that there would be zombies.) And that tells him that they will have... opposition.

Not that that is a bad thing. And at least they have proper warning this time.

There! It looks like everything is ready (except for all the spare weapons)... so, what now?

Oh yes! The cameras and such. John-O looks like he wants to say something...

written by Speeder on Apr 15, 2013 17:00

I look to John-O

"Yes?"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 15, 2013 19:10

If there are extras like before, I grab a camera and put it on my helmet. I don't turn it on quite yet.

"If nobody wants any spare weapons, I can carry them. I'd rather not be weighed down TOO much though..."

written by Gligar on Apr 16, 2013 12:41

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

Speed-Y (of course) is the first to say something to John-O. Okay, it's just him asking what John-O wants, but still.

But from John-O's point of view, it's probably a good thing he did. "I just wanted to remind everyone that I'll be taking video logs again," he says. "I'll need you to take a light and a camera each."

L4-O grabs a camera and mounts it to his helmet. He doesn't turn it on yet.

He adds that if no-one wants any of the other weapons, he can carry them. But it's rather a lot; he doesn't want to be weighed down.

Everyone gets busy with cameras and light, but it seems that the weapons are not going anywhere. I guess L4-O will be carrying them.

"I have to hurry you," the GREEN says. "We have to get back to work, and we're pushing time as it is. If we get fined for lateness, you can bet that you will as well."

written by Speeder on Apr 16, 2013 12:56

I nod to the GREEN.

"Alright! Off we go, just tell me where is the abandoned vehicle you saw again."

I get John-O equipment he want me to use, and setup it on my Leader hat properly.

Then I smile happily. Who would not be happy when you are following the procedures correctly?

written by Gligar on Apr 16, 2013 18:09

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

Speed-Y nods, and agrees that they should go. He asks about an abandoned vehiclebot. While he sorts out his helmet with a camera and light, the GREEN answers him.

[1365]

"Abandoned vehiclebot? I think I said something about a used vehiclebot store, didn't I? And nothing about vehicles being abandoned... but it wouldn't surprise me, the way things are going. In any case, you go out of the door and head past S.H.A.F.T 4... and try not to fall in."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 16, 2013 18:15

I grab all of the spare weapons and put them away. I try to rebalance my load so I'm not weighed down too much.

written by Speeder on Apr 16, 2013 18:19

"Alright Team!"

I grab the rest of the stuff that I can and stuff into my hammerspace, I mean, jumpsuit.

Then I turn the others.

"Everyone ready to roll?"

I approach the crate... It does not like it will move by itself.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 16, 2013 18:52

I continue showering.

written by Kristos on Apr 16, 2013 20:40

I say my "full name" (ooc: whatever the blazes my name is) and ask Josh-R what he was doing before the commies struck.

written by Gligar on Apr 16, 2013 22:51

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

L4-O decides that, since no-one is taking the weapons, he should carry them, as befits the Equipment Guy. Of course, there are a lot of spare weapons and, even with the copious amounts of storage space offered by the standard-issue jumpsuit and backpack, it takes a little rebalancing for everything to fit snugly and not try to tip him over.

Speed-Y decides to help, and also grabs a few things that everyone else was ignoring, specifically the leftover cameras, his own extra equipment, and such. He then asks if everyone is ready. "Yep." "Sir!" "Ready." etc.

There is just one more thing: The Crate. That's not going to move on its own... they'll have to sort out some way of transporting it. Perhaps some sort of bot?

Chemical showers, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Ah! Looks like Cyrus-R has just about finished in the shower... and look! Another lit strip on the floor! He follows it to the outfitting room, noting that the strip breaks there.

Outfitting room, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

It looks like the vendobots are still working: ME Cards, jumpsuits, laser pistols, PDCs... just remember to get them in the correct order. Not that you could do otherwise, of course.

Mess hall, Armed forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R replies by giving his name (Kris-R-QJT-4) and asks what Josh-R was doing before the attack.

"I was working," Josh-R replies, "at an Internal Security processing station. I start the process for suspicious activity reports," he adds, "making sure that the correct department is notified and all that. Well, as you can imagine, things were very busy in there just as the commies hit!"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 16, 2013 23:40

"Too bad we don't have Nukabot with us... oh well."

"Oh right, I was going to tell Nukabot to head back to the bunker."

I get out my PDC and immediately start typing up a message to Nukabot:

Looks like we're going to be out here for a while.

You should probably head back to the bunker for now.

written by Gligar on Apr 17, 2013 12:24

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

L4-O thinks that it's a pity that they don't have Nukabot with them.

Speaking of Nukabot... wasn't L4-O going to tell it to head back to the bunker? They'll be out here for a while, it seems. (He was, but everyone got distracted, I think.)

He sends the message.

Crossroad, Kappa Subsector

Nukabot wakes up from power-save mode and fires up its motors. It executes a U-turn and starts back down the roadway.

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

L4-O receives a reply:

On my way.

written by Speeder on Apr 17, 2013 13:00

I think a bit.

"Alright, let's see if we can move this crate now... If not the plan is leave someone guarding the crate while others go search for transportation and a forkbot that we can use."

I attempt to lift, push, or whatever, carefully, just to test the weight of the crate without damaging my muscles.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 17, 2013 15:33

I watch Speed-Y and the crate for any reaction.

written by Gligar on Apr 17, 2013 16:45

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

Speed-Y comes up with a plan: if they can't move The Crate, they will have to leave someone here while they arrange transportation of their own... perhaps a forkbot and something else. "The forkbots can remain here if it will help," the GREEN offers.

[1366]

Speed-Y steps up to the crate to see if he can move it.

Well... given how large – and heavy – the thing is, it's possible that you'd need a forkbot just to lift it. Speed-Y is able to ascertain that he won't be able to move it by himself, at the very least.

He becomes aware, as he strains against The Crate, that both L4-O and the GREEN are watching. The GREEN looks amused.

written by Speeder on Apr 17, 2013 17:00

I nod.

"Yes, we will need the forkbots, I am very sure of that now."

written by Jam on Apr 17, 2013 19:17

"Really?"

I also try to lift the crate.

"Wow, this is heavy..."

written by Gligar on Apr 17, 2013 21:46

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

Speed-Y agrees that they will need the forkbots, given how heavy The Crate is. Did I also mention that it's also quite large? Because it is.

The forkbots seem to have their own ideas, though. "My directive binds me to this sector," one says. "I will assist you as far as the sector boundary, but no further." The other just grumbles.

Jam-Y wonders if Speed-Y is telling the truth, and checks The Crate himself. He ascertains that yes, it is very heavy, and yes, it is large.

It kind of makes you wonder why they even tried, but some clones seem to think that all crates are the same size 😊

Or maybe the size information was only just declassified from [DFSR] Clearance, and their minds were unable to process the crate properly 😊

written by Cryoburner on Apr 17, 2013 22:46

I acquire an ME Card, jumpsuit, laser pistol and PDC, as outlined in the "Decanting and You!" instructional video training series. If all that works as intended, I don my jumpsuit and make my way toward the next station.

written by Speeder on Apr 18, 2013 00:57

I look at the bots.

"Alright..."

I look to the team.

"Let's split, someone come with me, I will search for a vehicle that can take that crate around.

The rest please escort the crate to the roadway."

I smile.

"So, who is coming with me?"

written by Gligar on Apr 18, 2013 16:45

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

Speed-Y makes the decision to split the team. He, and one other, will secure transportation, and the rest will stay with The Crate and ensure that it gets at least as far as the roadway outside.

He then asks for a volunteer to accompany him. "I'll go," offers John-O.

"The roadway, huh?" asks one of the forkbots. "That lies within the sector, I believe that I could assist with that."

Outfitting Room, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Remembering his orientation vids, Cyrus-R collects his equipment in the correct order, more or less.

That leaves one vendobot, but that seems to be empty. It's marked as containing release forms, but there are none evident.

Satisfied that he has what he needs, Cyrus-R follows lights again.

Release office, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

On entering, he notes that, instead of the ten or so clones who seem to be required to staff the desks and terminals, there are none.

There is, however, a printer and a blotbot. The printer seems to have finished printing something.

written by Speeder on Apr 18, 2013 17:06

"Alright!"

I start to look for the exit.

written by Jam on Apr 18, 2013 17:36

"Okay then! Let's go to the roadway!"

I keep a look out for any commie mutant traitors that might try to steal the crate, and start walking in the general direction of where I think the roadway is.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 18, 2013 18:13

I look around the room, since I guess I will be guarding the crate from any treasonous treasondoers that would try to commit treason.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 18, 2013 19:08

I check whether there is a ring-for-service bell present, that could be used to get the staff's attention. I also note whether there are any release forms or other useful things around, and have a look at what was just printed.

written by Gligar on Apr 18, 2013 20:07

PLC TUBE Platform, at a station, DIG Sector

Speed-Y is the first to move. And since the people door is not far from the vehicle door, he and John-O end up walking ahead of the rest of the team, who, with the aid of the forkbot, are slowly making their way towards the vehicle door, The Crate in tow. Impressively, the forkbots are able to lift the large Crate by itself without needing the help of the other (though the other would probably refuse to help anyway, given its grumpiness).

[1367]

As it moves, Jam-Y and L4-O keep their eyes peeled for any signs of potential commie mutant traitors. What they see is the PLC team crowding around a section of wall. As he watches, the wall opens up, revealing a passageway, through which the PLC team exits.

Eventually, everyone gets to their exits, and Team Epsilon reaches the roadway.

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

It actually doesn't look all that much like a roadway; if it weren't for the tracks made by vehiclebots passing over the synthcrete, it would just look like a corridor without walls. And without a ceiling. The roadway stretches for a distance in either direction, passing various buildings on one side, and several holes, each at least 10m across, on the other. The holes are numbered; on the other side, more buildings can be seen.

Release office, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Meanwhile, in another part of Alpha Complex, Cyrus-R is looking for things. Things that might be used to call for the attention of staff, or that might be potentially useful for a kleptomaniac, or that might potentially be release forms. Sadly, he finds none of those. Only the printout, which he now goes to investigate.

It turns out that he was hasty in assuming that there might not be release forms present, since that is what the printout turns out to be.

written by Speeder on Apr 18, 2013 20:19

I look at John.

"So, what side we go first? And I don't remember what are those holes..."

And if I remember well, falling from this thing is not pleasant, how high are we?"

written by Cryoburner on Apr 18, 2013 20:32

"How very convenient!"

I check whether there might be a pen around.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 18, 2013 21:58

I follow along with the crate, noting the sector ahead.

"Interesting looking sector... wonder what's in those holes..."

written by Kristos on Apr 19, 2013 02:03

"I was investigating a suspected factory sabotage..."

I pause to point at my team leader hat, but realize it is not there.

"Anyway, I'm the team leader. My loyalty officer is there now, fighting the communists in a remarkable way! I should buy him a B3 for being so loyal!"

I look briefly around the mess hall and wonder what we are supposed to do next.

written by Gligar on Apr 19, 2013 15:00

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y wonders which side of the holes - or the Systematic High Acceleration Filtration Tunnels (S.H.A.F.T.) according to a nearby sign - they should check first. And as for the holes themselves... he's not sure what is in them, or how deep they go, but he is certain that falling would be... unpleasant.

"Well, the GREEN mentioned that we need to go past S.H.A.F.T. Four," John-O reminds him. He looks around, and says, "And that looks to be S.H.A.F.T. Four over there." He points in that direction.

A short distance away, L4-O is also wondering about the holes. He spots a sign that at least tells him what the acronym stands for, and that the S.H.A.F.T. system is part of an even larger underground construction built during the Old Reckoning, the purpose of which is unknown.

Release office, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Now that he has the release form, Cyrus-R is all set - except for one thing: he needs a pen.

Looking around, he finds that, actually, he isn't the first to come here; someone has carelessly left a couple of disposable black pens lying around next to a terminal.

Mess hall, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R starts to give an account of his mission to Josh-R. He is about to point to his Team Leader Hat when he realises that he no longer has it.

He finishes by pointing out that his Loyalty Officer is still active, and still fighting. (If only he knew.)

"That's interesting!" Josh-R says. "The takeover started at the factory... any ideas how it started?"

Kris-R looks around, to see the other survivors talking amongst themselves.

written by Speeder on Apr 19, 2013 15:11

"I wonder if someone on R&D ever jumped down one of those shafts with special equipment..."

I smile happily.

"Alright John!"

I go where John suggested. Making damn sure I won't fall into any mysterious holes.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 19, 2013 15:39

I continue following along with the crate, keeping an eye out for any commies or such clones.

written by Gligar on Apr 19, 2013 19:07*S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector*

It seems that Speed-Y is being curious.

If Internal Security were watching, they would probably think he was being a bit too curious... but they aren't. At least, not that he can see.

More specifically, he is wondering if anyone from R&D used special equipment to protect themselves when jumping down. If they had, at least, he is most likely too low a clearance to know the answer.

In any case, has has no special equipment. As such, he must be careful when dealing with holes such as these, and try not to fall in, as the GREEN suggested.

S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

It doesn't take long for Speed-Y and John-O to reach S.H.A.F.T. Four, which, as mentioned, is 10m across. And not really all that far from Three and Five... it looks like there is less than 1m of clearance each side of the S.H.A.F.T.

So... wait. There appears to be another crossing: a narrow bridge spanning the shaft, which seems to be slight wider, and probably more stable, than the lip.

So, who wants to go first? Speed-Y or John-O?

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Back with The Crate, L4-O continues to tag along. He notices a few clones in the distance, both this side and on the other side of the S.H.A.F.T.s, but they don't appear to be paying any attention to them.

He also notices Speed-Y and John-O, who seems to have reached S.H.A.F.T. Four, and are contemplating how best to get across.

Soon, the forkbot stops. "Where now?" it asks.

written by Speeder on Apr 19, 2013 19:08

"I really hope I won't die doing this..."

I carefully cross the thing.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 19, 2013 19:41

"Looks like we need to get across here."

I look back at those clones I saw before, preferring to not cross the bridge quite yet.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 19, 2013 22:11

"How very convenient!"

I take both of the pens, and use one to begin filling out my release forms. As I do so, I briefly examine the quality of the printout, as well as the quality of the pens.

written by Gligar on Apr 19, 2013 22:41*S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector*

Speed-Y decides to cross first.

Cautiously, he makes his way across the bridge. It's quite smooth, and, as it turns out, there are no handrails. Rest assured that it is quite safe as long as you don't accidentally (or "accidentally") slip (or "slip") and fall off.

Speaking of slipping, Speed-Y almost does (and almost falls into the hole) as he crosses the halfway point. Naturally, he stops at that point.

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

L4-O decides that they need to get across to the other side somehow. But he's at a loss as to how...

In his confusion, he glances around at the various clones before settling on Speed-Y and John-O. He sees that they have started across the S.H.A.F.T.'s narrow bridge. Speed-Y, in the lead, seems to have stopped halfway through.

Release Office, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R takes both of the pens (but what if someone else needed one?), but only uses one to fill out the form. Which, by the way, is legible, and the pen allows him to write acceptably well.

He finishes the form quickly enough - it seems fairly straightforward - so now what?

written by Speeder on Apr 19, 2013 22:43

I take a breath, and then press on forward, courageous but cautious, doing my best to avoid panic.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 19, 2013 23:16

I get a little nervous.

"I wonder what's down there..."

written by Gligar on Apr 20, 2013 13:56*S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector*

A little nervous after his near-fall, Speed-Y presses onward, while simultaneously trying to project an air of confidence and trying to suppress his own fear of falling off. And you know what? He does a pretty good job of it!

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

He is watched by L4-O, still near The Crate, who is also a little nervous. Though in his case, it's partly because he doesn't know what is down there.

S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Finally, Speed-Y makes it across... it may not have been far but still, with seemingly-bottomless shafts...

Now it's John-O's turn. He manages to not slip up at all.

But even though the two have survived, there is a distinct air of... disappointment emanating from somewhere.

written by Speeder on Apr 20, 2013 16:39

I smile happily.

"Whoa, we made it! But for some reason, I feel that someone, somewhere, wished that we would fall. It is almost as we had to cross this during our mission only for that purpose...

But well, what next?"

written by Kristos on Apr 20, 2013 18:02

"I don't know how it started. All the workers began leaving the factory. I was working with some special equipment- THE EQUIPMENT! What if they find the..."

I then realize what might happen if the commies try to operate the laser barrel tester, and grin widely.

"Never mind that. The equipment will take care of itself. Anyway, after everybody left the factory, I was attacked by a clone with a laser pistol with a modified RED barrel. I managed to discapacitate him and take his PDC, which connected him with a significant Communist named Andrei. A message from Andrei stated that the sabotage of the production line proved that their plan worked, and that they should apply the same plan to the other lines. Soon after that, red fuzzy hat clones attacked my team. Do you know anything else about the takeover?"

"I need to get back to the laser barrel factory and retrieve my loyalty officer as well as an important piece of evidence."

Pulling my PDC out I send this message to Cyrus-R: "Karl, Your mission has been altered for glorious reasons: You are to secure and bring a faulty slugthrower and a modified laser pistol barrel to the rendezvous point."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 20, 2013 19:46

I remember that I had spotted some clones in the distance earlier, and see if I can spot them again.

written by Gligar on Apr 20, 2013 20:46

S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Though he is pleased that they made it, Speed-Y is still aware of that... well, disappointment. Almost as if someone watching them was hoping that someone would fall in... perhaps that was the sole reason they had to cross the S.H.A.F.T.?

A more important question, though, is what they should do next. John-O has the answer: "We should be somewhere near the vehicle place, right? The GREEN said it would be past the hole."

He looks around, and soon spots a parking area with what looks to be a covered office out front. "Perhaps that's it."

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Realising that he doesn't need to keep looking at Speed-Y, L4-O looks around for the other clones he spotted earlier. He soon finds them, near S.H.A.F.T. Two. There appears to be four clones, with three dragging the fourth.

Mess hall, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R admits that he doesn't now how it started. All he knows is that the workers left while he was working with some "special equipment" (i.e. the laser barrel tester) that, he indicates, is of importance. He then realises that the equipment can take care of itself, and goes back to summarising what has happened so far: the attack of the clone with the modified barrel, the message found on the clone's PDC, the second attack... Does Josh-R know anything else?

"Andrei... I think I've heard that name before," Josh-R admits. "Wasn't he behind the communist takeover of JHT Sector a couple of weekcycles back?"

Kris-R states that he needs to get back to the factory. He needs to retrieve some evidence... and his Loyalty Officer.

He pulls out his PDC, and fiddles with it for a moment.

Almost as soon as he can finish, a soldier enters the mess hall. "Alright, how many of you want to serve The Computer?"

Release Office, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

I'm... not sure what Cyrus-R is doing, but he isn't filling out his form. Probably because he already finished it. So why isn't it being processed by the blotbot yet?

Perhaps he can deal with it, as soon as he deals with his PDC, which is now indicating that it has a message.

written by Speeder on Apr 20, 2013 22:36

I look at the place, and move there. Making sure to not fall into any holes on the way, specially invisible holes that come from nowhere.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 21, 2013 04:17

"How very legible!"

I take a moment to check the message on my PDC, then hand my forms over to the desk-clone, as outlined in the "Decanting and You!" instructional video training series.

"Hmm... rendezvous point..."

written by Gligar on Apr 21, 2013 12:48

Past S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y has another look at the vehiclebot store, if you could call it that. Seeing a clone in duty, he decides to head over there. Ensuring, as he does, that he doesn't accidentally fall in any holes, visible or invisible, such as might spontaneously appear for reasons beyond his security clearance. No such holes appear at this time, and he continues to the store... well, parking area.

As he approaches, he can see a sign above the entrance, identifying this as "DIG For The Road Vehiclebots (Est. 214)"

DIG For The Road Vehiclebots, past S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

As Speed-Y and John-O approaches the clone's desk, she looks up. "Yes? How can I help you todaycycle?"

[1370]

Release Office, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R checks his PDC. It's Kris-R, telling him to bring a faulty slugthrower and a modified laser barrel to the "rendezvous point", wherever that is.

That done, Cyrus-R gets back to the form. It is clear that he still expects things to go exactly as depicted in his instructional vids, since he heads to a desk, and hands his form to a clo-

There is no desk clone. There are no clones in the station at all except for him, and probably more still to be decanted.

So... what now?

written by Speeder on Apr 21, 2013 15:24

"I am Speed-Y, leader of troubleshooting team Epsilon, we need a vehicle to carry a very heavy crate from here to another sector, and probably all secret societies will try to steal that crate."

written by Cryoburner on Apr 21, 2013 20:22

"How very unexpected!"

I have a look around to see if I can determine what to do with my forms. The blotbot perhaps? I have a look at it.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 21, 2013 20:34

I continue watching the clones dragging the other clone, wondering just what they are doing.

"Wonder if that's treasonous activity, over there... or if they're disposing of a treasonous clone."

"Hmm."

written by Gligar on Apr 21, 2013 21:01

DIG For The Road Vehiclebots, past S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y identifies himself to the clone, and requests a vehiclebot capable of carrying a heavy crate... and that they're expecting heavy resistance. "Hmmm," the clone says. "I think you'd need something with armour, but they're either restricted to GREEN or above, or they get appropriated by the S.H.A.F.T. teams... so, long story short, I don't have anything with proper armour right now. As for carrying heavy crates, I think I can help with that. How many of there are you? And how big's this crate?"

Release Office, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Slightly taken aback by the lack of staff, Cyrus-R looks around for alternative ways of processing his form, and notices the blotbot. He may well have seen them before; they're a staple of CPU offices everywhere. In brief, they are box-shaped with a plethora of blinking lights and slot capable of accepting a form. Usually, when a form is inserted, the bot blinks its lights very fast for a while. When the lights stop, it's done - if there's more red than not red, you've forgotten to tick a mandatory box or, worse, ticked a box you shouldn't have. Or something.

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

L4-O keeps watching the clones. Is this suspicious activity? Or are they merely terminating a traitor?

As if in answer, a voice begins to boom at them. It is distorted by distance, but it is clearly The Computer. It is asking the clones what is going on.

written by Speeder on Apr 21, 2013 22:12

"Humm..."

Let me see...

Me, John, L4, Jam, Joris, Lucas... I am forgetting anyone John?"

Then I try to describe the crate.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 22, 2013 03:08

I doublepluscheck my forms to verify that boxes are ticked and unticked as intended, and that everything else is in order, then insert them into the blotbot. I stare intently at any flashing lights that may follow.

written by Kristos on Apr 22, 2013 03:20

I happily raise my hand. "Pick me, pick me!"

written by Gligar on Apr 22, 2013 16:28

DIG For The Road Vehiclebots, past S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y starts listing names: himself, John-O, L4-O, Jam-Y, Joris-O, Lucas-O... anyone else? "There's also, Azir-R and King-R, sir," John-O supplies.

He then moves on to The Crate, describing it the best he can. This causes the clone to comment, "Hmmm... I think we have something in stock. Follow me, please."

She leads the two of them into the parking area, and over to a pair of vehiclebots: one an autovan; the other, one of the smaller truckbots, of the sort that has an open - and uncovered - back.

Release Office, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R takes the opportunity to double-check his form. Finding everything in order, he posts it into the slot on the blotbot.

It immediately starts blinking its lights in rapid, incomprehensible fashions. IT does so for a couple of minutecycles, and then stops. There doesn't appear to be much red.

Mess hall, Armed forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R eagerly volunteers to serve The Computer. He is one of several who do so.

The soldier looks at those who have volunteered, then looks at the rest. He makes up his mind: "Everyone who just put their hands up: well volunteered! Everyone who didn't: you've still volunteered! We need everyone for our latest operation! If you'll please follow me..."

written by Speeder on Apr 22, 2013 16:33

I look at the autovan.

“Discrete, good for a mission that we must not draw attention... yet...”

I walk over to the truck.

“This allows the entire team to see if there are incoming targets, and might allow to some more efficient and fun gun fighting.

You know, gun fights must be fun, I guess it is mandatory. At least for the winners... I guess the losers are already terminated, so they don't need to be punished for not having fun.”

written by Lightning4 on Apr 22, 2013 16:59

I continue watching the clones getting yelled at by Friend Computer.

I watch intently, waiting for the possibility of a laser turret popping out.

written by Gligar on Apr 22, 2013 21:10

DIG For The Road Vehiclebots, past S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y takes a look at both of the bots and gives his opinion.

First, the autovan. It is discreet, capable of carrying The Crate without attracting too much attention, and might be a good choice. The bodywork looks to be in good condition, with no major rust areas.

Second, the truckbot. Its open back affords good visibility if the team were to perch back there (probably on top of The Crate), which would allow them to watch for trouble. And since they're expecting trouble, the truckbot would help out there. Hey, it'd probably more fun with all the visibility. And from the look of it, this one has already seen its share of Fun, given the repair work already done to it. Doesn't look like much was done to the bodywork, but it looks solid.

The clone says, “I take it you want the truckbot?”

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

L4-O continues to watch as The Computer continues to speak - rather forcefully - at the clones in the distance. They appear to be having... a couple of problems.

Problems of the laser turret variety: two have appeared from somewhere.

written by Speeder on Apr 22, 2013 21:53

I look at John.

“What do you think? Also, who is our financial officer? I mean, how the team will pay for that? We have a team account right?”

written by Lightning4 on Apr 23, 2013 08:56

“Hm, oh dear. Looks like some clones got themselves into a bit of trouble...”

I continue watching, waiting for the eventual laser blasts.

written by Gligar on Apr 23, 2013 14:02

DIG For The Road Vehiclebots, past S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y asks John-O for his opinion. “The truckbot is probably heavier duty than the autovan, and looks like it can take a little more punishment as well. I say go with the truckbot.”

Speed-Y also asks a couple of finance questions: who is their Financial Officer, and do they have a team account. “Financial Officer? That's Joris-O... I think. Surely he'd know if we have a team account or not.”

Which, of course, raises the question of why he isn't here.

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Probably because he is continuing to stare at Jam-Y like someone whose brain is elsewhere. Jam-Y doesn't seem to be too much better, either.

L4-O is still in control of himself, though. He's watching the group down the roadway, as they talk to The Computer. As he watches, one of the laser turrets opens fire, terminating one of them almost instantly. Notably, the one it terminated was not the one who was being dragged.

written by Speeder on Apr 23, 2013 14:20

“I guess we will take that truckbot, and let Joris sort out this later?”

I smile happily.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 23, 2013 16:21

“How very unred!”

Seeing as my forms appear to be in order, I look for an exit, and set off in that direction.

written by Gligar on Apr 23, 2013 18:15

DIG For The Road Vehiclebots, past S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y wonders if they could just take the truckbot now and let Joris-O sort out payment later. “I'm sorry sir,” the clone replies, “but I'll need payment before I can let you take the truckbot.”

“Thought so,” says John-O. “Is it possible to arrange for some method of payment that's not just one big lump sum? And why do I have to do Joris-O's job for him? Oh well, I can just inform The Computer that he has failed to do his job later...”

“Yeah, sure,” the clone replies. “We offer alternative payment methods, such as splitting into four easy payments over one monthcycle, or eight over two, if you prefer. If you could just make the first payment now and give me the contact details of your Financial Officer, I can sort it out for you, and you can take the truckbot."

[1372]

Release office, Cloning station, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Noticing that the blotbot seems to have accepted his form, Cyrus-R takes the obvious exit - the other door.

Roadway 3, JHY Sector

He finds himself right next to a pile of about ten bodies. Which quite handily explains where the staff of the cloning station went.

As for the roadway itself, he can see a few tractors using it, heading between buildings. Most of them seem to be coming from or going to the laser barrel factory, seen to one side.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 23, 2013 18:06

"Wonder if they have anything we should loot..."

I continue watching.

written by Speeder on Apr 23, 2013 18:21

"Alright!

Now... where is our equipment officer to drive this thing?

I did it all wrong no John?

I mean, L4 and Joris should be here, and I leading the team taking care of the crate...

Although L4 is also our best sharpshooter, so leaving him near the create also makes sense..."

written by Kristos on Apr 24, 2013 02:49

Thrilled to be specially selected for this mission, I follow the soldier.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 24, 2013 04:12

"Hmm... The cloning station staff must have piled up these bodies before heading out to lunch, and just left them here. They really should have found a better place for them. Someone might trip over them."

"Now let's see... I need to recover my pen, among other things."

I begin wandering off toward the laser barrel factory, careful not to trip over any bodies.

written by Gligar on Apr 24, 2013 11:09

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Idly wondering if they should go and loot the bodies, L4-O continues watching the laser turret incident. As he watches, another clone is terminated by the turrets. Again, it is one of the draggers, not the dragee. (Is that even a word? Well, it is now.)

Hmmm... probably best not to get involved.

DIG For The Road Vehiclebots, past S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Initially pleased that they have a solution, Speed-Y quickly realises that their best driver is also not present.

He becomes convinced that he is making bad decisions, what with Joris-O and L45-O not being present, when they really should be the ones making the purchase (Joris-O to make the payment, and L4-O to take possession), with him staying back to protect The Crate.

But then again, L4-O is the best shooter they have, so he needs to be at The Crate...

"Don't beat yourself up over it, sir," John-O says. "I'm sure we can drive the truckbot back to the team ourselves."

"So can one of you make the first payment?" asks the salesclone.

Mess hall, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R eagerly jumps up and follows the soldier. Behind him, others do the same.

Briefing room, Armed forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

They are led into another room, which Kris-R recognises as a RED briefing room. Prominently displayed are maps of the sector, and of the factory.

"We'll be starting the briefing momentarily," the solder tells them. "Take a seat, everyone."

Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R seems to agree that the pile of corpses explains where the staff went, however he gets the details completely wrong.

Disregarding this, Cyrus-R heads towards the factory.

As he approaches, he discovers that the boundary fence has been fortified; it's not just a regular chainlink fence any more. Instead, metal plates have been installed, complete with a gatehouse.

It almost looks like they're turning the factory into their own garrison.

written by Speeder on Apr 24, 2013 13:11

"How much it is?"

I cringe in anticipation.

written by Gligar on Apr 24, 2013 15:36

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y decides to put away his fears about doing everything wrong, and concentrates on the task at hand: paying the clone. He asks how much it is, clearly expecting that it will be some unpleasantly large value. "Assuming that payment will be over two monthcycles," she replies, tapping on her PDC, "I believe that the first payment will come to one thousand credits."

written by Speeder on Apr 24, 2013 17:20

I sigh and look to John.

"Do you have any better idea? I don't think the team has sufficient money for that..."

But I am very sure the computer would not give us a mission that we cannot complete somehow."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 24, 2013 18:16

"Wonder what's keeping Speed-Y and John-R..."

I look in the direction of the place where they went.

I then decide to keep alert again, and start looking around the general area for anything of interest. Or anything that could be a threat.

written by Kristos on Apr 24, 2013 21:39

I remember something the Computer told me about paying more attention to details, so I use the moment to carefully study a chair as I sit on it.

written by Gligar on Apr 24, 2013 21:42

DIG For The Road Vehiclebots, past S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y looks a little worried... he doesn't think the team even has a thousand credits. He is sure that The Computer wouldn't assign a mission that they couldn't do, though.

"Are you sure?" John-O asks. "Didn't you get a mission bonus a few hourcycles ago from the whole Code Three-Zed thing?"

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIF Sector

L4-O is starting to get worried about Speed-Y and John-O. Surely they should have been back by now?

Idly, he looks over in the direction of S.H.A.F.T. Four, but can't see them. He is sure that they made it to the vehiclebot place... isn't that it over there?

But anyway. He also has to stay alert, since the rest of the team doesn't seem to be. He looks around, and... hey, isn't that an autocar coming towards them? It's accelerating!

written by Speeder on Apr 24, 2013 21:45

I nod.

"I got... a bonus... yes.

But that was me personally, and the other payments?

Well, but we can sort this later."

I grab my PDC and prepare to pay.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 24, 2013 21:52

I approach the gatehouse, waving hello to any clones I encounter along the way.

written by Kristos on Apr 24, 2013 22:00

I remember something the Computer told me about paying more attention to details, so I use the moment to carefully study a chair as I sit on it.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 25, 2013 18:13

"Um, guys, stay alert."

I watch the autocar and draw one of my blasters.

written by Gligar on Apr 25, 2013 18:15

DIG For The Road Vehiclebots, past S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y confirms that he received a bonus... but that was just him, right? What about the other payments? Oh well, they can sort that out later.

"More like Joris-O can sort it out later," John-O reminds him.

He gets out his PDC, ready to pay. The salesclone does the same, and fiddles with hers. "Okay, just send the payment to this account..."

Gatehouse, Communist Headquarters (formerly Laser barrel factory), Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Cyrus-R makes a bold move, and just saunters on through the entrance, waving at the commie guards.

Naturally, they stop him. "Halt! Identify yourself! Prove your allegiance!"

RED briefing room, Armed forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

While Kris-R waits for the briefing to start, he remembers that The Computer asked him to be observant. With that in mind, he begins inspecting the chair in which he is sitting. He quickly discovers that he is sitting on a nice RED chair, which is perfectly adequate for sitting in.

Soon, the soldier is joined by a GREEN soldier, who addresses the assembled clones. "Greetings, citizens. The Armed Forces finds itself undermanned, and so we need YOU! We plan to take back this sector, starting right at the source: the laser barrel factory!

"You are probably aware that the factory reported some sabotage recently. We believe that te two are related somehow."

written by Speeder on Apr 25, 2013 18:22

I send the payment, and as soon as I am allowed to, I get into the back of the truck, revolver in hand, and tell John to drive.

written by Gligar on Apr 25, 2013 22:33

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

L4-O reminds everyone that they should be staying alert, and draws a blaster. Lucas-O also ends up drawing a laser pistol, along with Azir-R. King-R looks a little worried... there's going to be blood, isn't there?

Probably. And the occupants of the autocar seem to think so too, as they also arm themselves. The windows roll down, and they start shooting lasers of their own.

One shot hits Joris-O in the head, and he goes down.

The autocar keeps coming. It looks like it's going to ram The Crate!

DIG For The Road Vehiclebots, past S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y transfers the credits as the clone watches her PDC.

After a moment, she says, "That does it. It's all yours now."

Speed-Y climbs into the back of the truckbot. It seems that John-O will be driving. "Got it," John-O replies, and climbs into the operator's cabin.

Truckbot's operator's cabin, DIG For The Road Vehiclebots, past S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

John-O takes a quick look around, and discovers that the controls seem to be similar enough to an autocar that he has some idea of what to do. So... turn that, press that, change that...

"Self-test complete," the bot reports. "It seems that I have a new operator. Another one."

"That's right," John-O replies. "You're now under the command of Troubleshooter Team Epsilon of JHT Sector."

"Great," it says. "Another Troubleshooter team."

Only now does it start its engine - good thing there's fuel in the tank.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 26, 2013 05:58

"No no no NO! Forkbot! Get out of its path!"

I level my blaster at the driver, if I can, and start blasting at him. If there's fire coming in my direction, I try to avoid it.

written by Gligar on Apr 26, 2013 13:26

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

L4-O tells the forkbot to avoid being hit and, as it backs up, opens fire on the approaching autocar. He somehow manages to miss twice, with the autocar closing fast, before scoring a hit on the driver. It causes him to slump forward in his seat, causing the autocar to veer off towards one of the S.H.A.F.T.s.

But that doesn't seem to stop the occupants. While one fights to regain control, the others keep shooting. And the sheer volume of laser fire causes a couple of results: first, that Lucas-R ends up being knocked to the floor by a laser shot to the reflec; and second, that someone throws what looks to be a laser barrel out of the autocar as it passes the group.

The autocar reaches a S.H.A.F.T. and attempts to avoid falling in, but it is going too fast. Gravity makes itself felt, and the bot falls down into the depths below.

written by Speeder on Apr 26, 2013 17:34

I hear the commotion.

And look in direction of it, trying to figure what is going on.

If I spot a autocar falling down, I immediately get curious and wanting to hear how much time it will take to hear the car hitting the bottom.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 26, 2013 17:59

"Laser barrel!"

I assess whether I'm too close to it and if it is going to explode.

I try to get away from it, either way.

written by Gligar on Apr 26, 2013 18:19

Back of the truckbot, DIG For The Road Vehiclebots, past S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Hearing noise from the brief battle, Speed-Y looks over, and spots the autocar falling into S.H.A.F.T... er, is that Three or Five? Probably Three. From the state of its windscreen, it looks like someone has shot at it, possibly killing the driver.

As he watches, it disappears from view. He begins counting seconds.

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Meanwhile, L4-O has that laser barrel to deal with. Noticing that he is within blast radius, he immediately tries to get out of it. And, noticing him running, everyone else also tries to do so.

Except Joris-O. He continues lying on the floor.

Then the inevitable happens, and the barrel explodes.

It tears through Joris-O, killing him for the last time. Or, you know, until someone decides to arrange for more clones for him. But until then, he's out.

Truckbot operator's cabin, DIG For The Road Vehiclebots, past S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

"So what exactly are we waiting for?" the truckbot asks. "And where are we going when we stop waiting?"

John-O replies, "For now, the transbot station. Any ideas?"

"Indeed," the bot replies. "Avoid the holes."

John-O manipulates the controls, driving the bot out of the parking area. Perhaps he can go past the holes and come back?

written by Lightning4 on Apr 26, 2013 20:35

I look at what's left of Joris-O.

"Ouch. I don't think he's going to even become a zombie from that one..."

I look at Lucas-O to make sure he's okay too written by Gligar on Apr 26, 2013 22:32*Back of the truckbot, near S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector*

Speed-Y reaches more than ninety secondcycles before he hears the muffled sound of an impact from the S.H.A.F.T.

The truckbot turns, and starts running alongside the holes.

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

L4-O goes and looks at what's left of Joris-O. Not much is left, by the looks of things... not even much equipment remains.

On the plus side, it is unlikely that what remains will rise as a zombie.

As he turns to look at Lucas-O, he sees a truckbot turn and travel parallel to the roadway, on the other side of the S.H.A.F.T.s. Maybe it's important, maybe not. What L4-O is more interested in is the state of Lucas-O. He's actually not sustained much damage from the laser, just some pain is all.

RED briefing room, Armed forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

The GREEN continues. "No questions so far? Good. Our objectives are twofold: first, teams will enter the factory and ascertain whether the takeover is linked to the sabotage; then second, we will eliminate the communists by any means necessary. Any questions?"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 26, 2013 23:07

"Looks like you're still with us, good. Anything severe?"

I look up at the truckbot, and watch it intently, keeping my blaster in hand.

written by Speeder on Apr 27, 2013 00:40

"Whoaaaaaaa!

If my mental calculations are right, the shaft must have around 39716.9325 meters in height!

I wonder how they did it...

Or in fact, better not wonder, I might conclude something treasonous or get paranoid, fearing lava will come from those shafts...

Or there are some anti-gravity technology on the shafts that make the fall slower?

Damn, I wish I was R&D with high clearance, just to figure that.

But I am not... so... Back to mission before I really start thinking treasonous stuff."

I return to being alert and point my gun around. I notice L4 looking at my direction and wave, and wonder why I am seemly seeing some dead clones there... related to the falling car maybe?

written by Cryoburner on Apr 27, 2013 12:44

"Greetings, comrades. It is I, Karl! I am just stopping in to continue my investigation into the potentially sabotaged slugthrowers that may have found their way into our supply chain. Due to the interference of our adversaries, my progress has already been impeded, so I must get back to work right away before any further incidents occur."

written by Gligar on Apr 27, 2013 13:26*S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector*

L4-O asks Lucas-O how he's doing. "Nothing serious, I guess," Lucas-O tells him. "But I wouldn't mind something for the pain."

But L4-O is already looking over at the truckbot. There's a clone standing on its back, waving at him. As the truckbot continues, L4-O realises that it looks like Speed-Y.

Back of the truckbot, near S.H.A.F.T. Four, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

He might be waving, but a few things are troubling him. According to his calculations, the shaft should be... almost forty kilometres deep! How is that even possible? No... best not to think about it. Or why there isn't molten death pouring up from it. His calculations could easily be wrong, or there could be technology beyond his comprehension or security clearance down there. There are just too many possibilities.

There is also something else. Can he see... dead bodies over there by the team? Is it related to the autocar somehow? Probably.

The truckbot finds a gap between shafts, and turns.

Gatehouse, Communist Headquarters (formerly Laser barrel factory), Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Falling back into his assumed identity, "Karl" identifies himself, and tells the guards that he is continuing his investigation into the alleged faulty slugthrowers. "Faulty slugthrowers?" one says. "Are you sure you aren't confusing things with the laser barrel sabotage we did earlier?"

"Wait," his comrade says. "I think a few have been reported. He can go on through."

written by Kristos on Apr 27, 2013 19:14

"Yes, what is the significance of the order of those objectives?"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 27, 2013 19:59

I check for a medkit on my person, and if I find it, I hand it over to Lucas-O.

"You can just hold onto it for now, I guess. I already am carrying quite a bit..."

written by Gligar on Apr 27, 2013 22:18*RED briefing room, Armed forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector*

Kris-R asks about the significance of the order of their objectives. "Simple: getting teams into place will enable us to eliminate the communists more effectively. We have limited ammunition and must preserve it. Perhaps the communists' own weapons can be used against them."

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

L4-O looks for a medkit. Doesn't he have one? Yes, there it is. He hands it over to Lucas-O, who looks through it and pulls out a tube of pain pills.

Among the S.H.A.F.T.s, the truckbot can be seen traversing a gap between holes. It's taking things slow due to limited traction or something, but is able to get across to the team's side.

written by Speeder on Apr 27, 2013 22:40

After the truckbot manages to get to the other side, I relax again, and I notice I was paralyzed by tension.

Then I smile happily, and look at the team again.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 27, 2013 23:47

Now realizing that the truckbot isn't a threat, I put my blaster away.

"Looks like we have transportation... that's good."

While the truckbot finishes motion, I take another quick look around the surroundings to make sure there are no more autocars or the like speeding towards us.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 27, 2013 23:53

"I see... Thank you for the assistance! In the mean time, you should probably avoid pointing your slugthrowers at other clones, until we find the source of the faulty units, and have a chance to thoroughly test them all. Otherwise, they might go off when not intended, or maybe not go off when intended. It might be best to avoid such a situation entirely, by unloading them right away. That way, if any computerists show up, you can still bludgeon them with the handles without the possibility of accidentally shooting yourself!"

I continue on through the gatehouse.

written by Gligar on Apr 28, 2013 13:31

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

L4-O puts his blaster away. If Speed-Y is riding a truckbot like that, it means he has obtained it, and therefore it must not be a threat.

The truckbot approaches the team and comes to a stop nearby. Speed-Y looks to be relaxing again, after tensing up during the traversal. It's not exactly fun to have huge holes to either side of you like that...

L4-O keeps a lookout. After the incident with the autocar, it is clear that he is expecting more attacks. Thankfully none make themselves apparent during the minutecycle or so he watches.

Gatehouse, Communist Headquarters (formerly Laser barrel factory), Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" thanks the communists and reinforces his story about the faulty slugthrowers. He advises that they not use them until it is known where they came from.

One of the communists looks confused, as if he thinks something is off.

But "Karl" ignores him, saying that they should unload their slugthrowers, and proceeds to pass through the gatehouse and into the factory proper.

Reception, Communist Headquarters (formerly Laser barrel factory), Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Once inside, he finds that not much has changed. Well, the reception area is now missing its desk, as well as being devoid of clones, but other than that.

The communists don't seem to have got around to sorting out all these "useless" clearance stripes yet. Or perhaps they just don't care.

written by Speeder on Apr 28, 2013 15:56

I notice dead Joris.

"What happened?"

What was that autocar that fell into one of those holes that is 40 kilometers deep? Or at least it took 90 secondcycles for it to hit the bottom..."

written by Gligar on Apr 28, 2013 18:28

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y notices the remains of Joris-O, and wonders what happened. Perhaps it had something to do with that autocar which just fell almost 40 kilometres? Or at least, it fell for 90 seconds or so... "I think it did," Lucas-O tells him. "They attacked us, so we had to fight back. I think we got the driver."

John-O exits the truckbot's operator's compartment. "And by the look of it... they got Joris-O. Wasn't he on his last clone? That could be a problem..."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 28, 2013 19:09

"Yeah, he got it good. Laser blast to the head, then a laser barrel exploded and finished the job."

"Was he really on his last clone? Well, that's not good..."

written by Gligar on Apr 28, 2013 21:15

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

L4-O elaborates. Joris-O took a laser shot to the head, and was then exploded by a laser barrel.

He didn't know that Joris-O had run out of clones, though. This could be a problem.

"So what do we do now?" asks John-O. "He was the Financial Officer..."

"Can't we get him more clones or something? You can do that, I think..."

"You can," Lucas-O tells him, "but you have to buy them in six-packs, and the cost varies... I think the current rate's somewhere near six thousand credits."

Six thousand... does the team even have that much?

written by Speeder on Apr 29, 2013 02:43

I think a bit.

“Six thousand is not THAT much... I mean, I paid one thousand for only the first installment of the payment of this truck... Thus the life of someone is cheaper than a truck.”

I think a bit more.

“Say, why we don’t have some UV clones with clone 28, 30, or 60? It must be cheap for them... Or clones get more features and more pricey as you get more clearance?”

written by Cryoburner on Apr 29, 2013 04:10

I head on through the reception area and into the corridor, so long as doing so appears reasonably safe.

written by Gligar on Apr 29, 2013 13:32

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y thinks. Six thousand isn’t really all that much... the truckbot’s first payment was one thousand after all. That means that a six-pack is worth less than a truckbot.

Unless... perhaps it is more expensive with clearance? Or maybe there are high-clearance clones with clone numbers in the double digits, say near 30? Either’s possible...

“Could be both,” Lucas-O says. “I know there’s genetic drift as the numbers go up, but you can get that cleaned up if you’re high enough clearance. I guess if you’re high enough, you could have your clones tailored to your specifications... but I don’t think I heard of anyone doing that.

“Then again, would I rememebr if I had?”

“This is all very interesting,” John-O interrupts, “but don’t you think we’d better load up and get going before we get attacked again? We wouldn’t want to lose anyone else.”

Corridor A, Communist Headquarters (formerly Laser barrel factory), Roadway 3, JHY Sector

“Karl” keeps moving. He passes a couple of communists who seem to be guarding... something, perhaps the scrubot, or the vendobots, in the cafeteria, before once more finding himself outside the team’s office.

written by Speeder on Apr 29, 2013 13:50

I nod.

“Alright, where is the forkbot with the crate?”

I open the back of the truckbot, so we can load the crate on it.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 29, 2013 06:08

Is knowledge of air friction beyond yellow clearance?

Otherwise, one might expect the fall to be somewhere in the range of just several kilometers or so, as it shouldn’t take long for the vehicle to reach its terminal velocity. The exact velocity would depend on things like the size, shape, weight and surface friction of the vehicle and its contents though, so a somewhat accurate result would require those details. Unfortunately, Cryo-R could not make it there. 😊

Also, don’t forget the speed of sound. If the shaft were 40,000 meters deep, it would take more than 90 seconds just for the sound to travel through the air to reach you. Of course its also possible that the sound could reverberate faster through the surface of the shaft, which would be required if the autocar were traveling through a vacuum, as such a calculation would imply. :3

written by Gligar on Apr 29, 2013 08:40

Well, how would he know any different? He isn’t trained for that sort of calculation.

And besides, how do you know it’s a plain drop? 😊

written by Lightning4 on Apr 29, 2013 16:13

I loot anything salvageable from what’s left of Joris-O.

I also look for anything that might’ve fallen from the attackers as their autocar careened into the S.H.A.F.T.

written by Gligar on Apr 29, 2013 17:54

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y agrees that they should get moving. Where did that forkbot get to? It’s a small distance away, where it still holds The Crate, waiting for further instructions. On hearing that they will be leaving soon, it begins to approach.

As it does so, Speed-Y opens the back of the truckbot, giving the forkbot a clear path to drop off The Crate. It proceeds to do so, and it becomes apparent that there is not much clearance either side of The Crate when it is in place.

Meanwhile L4-O decides to salvage what he can from Joris-O, plus whatever else he can find. That turns out to be... not much. Just another ME card scanner with a memory card containing the scanner app, a bunch of forms used to give him authority as a Financial Officer, a laser pistol with two RED barrels, and a helmet.

Well, there’s also a PDC, but that’s about it.

written by Speeder on Apr 29, 2013 18:59

After the truckbot is cleared I close the truck.

And then I take notice if it is a box truck or a open back one.

I don’t remember for some weird reason.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 29, 2013 20:34

I look for a spot in the bed of the truckbot. If I can find a good perch, I quickly assume it.

written by Kristos on Apr 29, 2013 21:03

I wait for the GREEN to answer any other questions and move on to whatever he is saying next.

written by Gligar on Apr 29, 2013 22:14

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

The forkbot backs away from the truckbot, allowing Speed-Y to close the back again.

Well, I say “close the back” but all that really means is that he puts the tailgate up. After all, it’s one of those where the back is open. That’s why he chose it, right? To allow them to shoot things better!

written by Speeder on Apr 29, 2013 13:49

I was going to comment too about the speed of sound.

A 40km meters deep shaft and speed of sound 1225 kilometers per hour means that it would take a long time for the sound to reach out of the shaft...

But I was not going to calculate air friction, terminal velocity, speed of sound and that sort of stuff 😊

[1378]

That done, L4-O hops up and finds a spot right next to Speed-Y. (Unless he'd prefer to drive? I seem to recall Speed-Y lamenting the fact that he hadn't taken L4-O with him to the vehiclebot place.)

Other team members also find spots around, and on top of, The Crate. It's a snug fit up there. Perhaps someone would like to take the other seat next to the driver? King-R? Azir-R? Anyone else?

RED briefing room, Armed forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R waits for any more questions. That is, he remains quiet.

As it happens, there is another question, from someone else. "Sir, will we be getting weapons and armour for this?"

"Yes," replies the GREEN, "but like I said, we don't have much available... laser rifles and reflec, mostly. Once we're done here, we will issue you all with what we have.

"Now... I'm going to need to split you into teams. You, you, you and you, you're a team..." he says, pointing at various clones, "then you, you, you and you..."

written by Speeder on Apr 29, 2013 23:27

I decide that I am better being leader than sharpshooter and decide to get on the passenger seat.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 30, 2013 00:40

I look around once more, then realize that maybe someone should be driving.

"Right, this is my kind of job too..."

I hop down from my spot and find my way to the driver's seat.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 30, 2013 03:21

I open the door to the office and have a quick look inside, without actually going inside.

written by Gligar on Apr 30, 2013 14:03

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y realises that, since he is the team Leader, he should probably do some actual leading, and he can do that better from the passenger's seat. He heads there.

At the same time, L4-O also realises that, even though he might be the one with all the weapons, he is also the best driver. He also heads for the operator's compartment, and takes over at the driver's seat.

And a 40km tall shaft sounded very crazy and bizarre and impossible, very paranoia-ish

written by Kristos on Apr 29, 2013 21:01

Or there could be a fiber optic system to relay sound from one end of the shaft to the other... at the speed of light!

This leaves John-O, who clammers up and into the freshly-vacant spot.

Imagine how much more cramped it would have been is Joris-O were still alive. Though knowing him, he would have gone along with speed-Y and bought a Transition for himself. So perhaps there would have been no difference.

Is everyone ready to go?

Corridor A, Communist Headquarters (formerly Laser barrel factory), Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" tries to open the door to the office, only to find that it is locked.

written by Jam on Apr 30, 2013 14:22

I suddenly notice Joris-O died somehow.

"Oh, well, that's... unfortunate."

I seem to be grinning a bit wider than usual at the moment.

written by Speeder on Apr 30, 2013 14:36

I suddenly decide to get out of the truckbot again.

"I will make sure he does not become a zombie!"

I grab his remains (at least, what I can grab of his remains), and go throw them down the nearest shaft.

Then I get back to my seat.

written by Kristos on Apr 30, 2013 17:12

I note my assigned teammates and, if others are doing so, join them in a group.

written by Gligar on Apr 30, 2013 17:36

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Jam-Y observes that it is unfortunate that Joris-O died. He remains happy, though. Which is good to see. Happiness is Mandatory and all that.

Recalling other incidents in which Joris-O has dies, Speed-Y once again exists the truckbot. He grabs Joris-O's remains and drags him over to the nearest S.H.A.F.T. before... er, running an impromptu experiment concerning how long his corpse will take to reach the bottom. Yeah, that's the ticket!

Of course, a corpse is a bit smaller than an autocar... can anyone hear anything as it falls?

Perhaps not Speed-Y, who is already returning to his seat.

RED briefing room, Armed forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R looks around, and notes that he is with three other REDs. They are already moving to team up, so he decides to join them.

To his pleasant surprise, one of his new teammates is Josh-R, the IntSec clone he spoke with earlier.

written by Speeder on Apr 30, 2013 17:44

I smile happily.

Wondering if I will hear some sort of "splat"

written by Gligar on Apr 30, 2013 22:46

Truckbot's operator's cabin, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Now back in his seat, Speed-Y can't help but wonder if he will hear anything from Joris-O's corpse hitting the bottom of the shaft.

Of course, it's already been muffled by the fact that he is inside a truckbot, and by the fact that any such impact would be (he assumes) 40km away...

A minutecycle passes...

Speed-Y continues to listen.

Another minutecycle passes...

There is a sudden roar from the S.H.A.F.T. accompanied by a brief column of flames.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 30, 2013 23:01

I am startled by the column of flames.

"What in the Complex did you do, sir?!"

I watch until the flames dissipate, now wondering more about the purpose of the S.H.A.F.Ts than ever.

written by Speeder on Apr 30, 2013 23:10

I look impressed.

Very impressed.

"EXPLOSION!"

Well, I have no idea what that was actually...

But if we can ever repeat this, it would be fun to see it happen when a commie is crossing the SHAFT by a ramp in the middle... don't you think?

But I also guess we should be going before all our racket attract IntSec... We do not even started our trip and are already shooting trouble too much."

written by Cryoburner on May 01, 2013 10:00

"Hmm... How very... locked."

I continue on toward the factory floor.

written by Gligar on May 01, 2013 13:39

Truckbot's operator's cabin, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Surprised at the sudden flames, L4-O wonders aloud just what Speed-Y did! This just raises more questions about the true nature of the S.H.A.F.T.s... questions that may never get answered.

As he watches, the flames die down.

Speed-Y seems pleased. He seems to have caused an explosion!

Okay, he's not really sure what happened, but it would be fun to repeat that with, say, some commie that happened to be walking across the bridge of one of the S.H.A.F.T.s...

That said, it is likely that they have already attracted attention, not from commies, but from IntSec. They are probably going to wait to investigate what just happened, and it might not be a good idea to stick around.

Corridor A, Communist garrison (formerly the laser barrel factory), Roadway 3, JHY Sector Disappointed that the office is locked, "Karl" heads onwards, to the factory floor.

He soon reaches the entrance, where he finds two guards. Naturally, they stop him and demand to know what he is doing.

written by Lightning4 on May 01, 2013 15:50

I check to see if we're missing anything.

"Okay, I guess we should get going then? Though I'm not sure which way yet... was there a map?"

I try to recall if I saw a map in the equipment boxes, and if I have it in my possession.

written by Speeder on May 01, 2013 16:10

I will see if I can find a public map on the PDC...

I search on my PDC for a public road map, and see if I have a path tracing software installed or not, and attempt to trace a path to our destination with YELLOW clearance limit.

written by Gligar on May 01, 2013 18:04

Truckbot's operator's cabin, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

L4-O has a quick look out back. Good. Everything (and everyone) seems to be where they should be.

Well, there is the small matter of all the spare weapons which L4-O is carrying. But he's always carrying a small armoury around, so no real difference there.

So... what now? Was there a map with the equipment? He seems to recall Speed-Y finding some route plans with his own equipment. There may well have been a map there as well.

But Speed-Y either needs more information or has forgotten about them, as he runs a search on his PDC. He is able to find a route that should take them to HOL Sector, assuming that they are not interrupted. Now, what he could really do with is some sort of real-time navigation app, but those are Clearance BLUE.

[1380]

He'll just have to make do with what he has. Happily, of course.

written by Lightning4 on May 01, 2013 19:20

"I think you have the directions, sir..."

"So, I guess you'll be our navigator then! Which direction?"

I scan around for anything that might also give me a clue where to go, like any signs or something of the sort.

written by Speeder on May 01, 2013 20:49

"I have the directions... Oh yes! I have! In fact several!"

I grab all my team leader papers, and start reading all possible paths.

written by Gligar on May 01, 2013 22:34

Truckbot's operator's cabin, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

L4-O helpfully reminds Speed-Y that he has the directions, so... that makes Speed-Y their navigator? Yeah, that'll work.

So, does the navigator have any guidance for him? Or will he have to resort to just reading road signs? (Speaking of which, there is one visible, which indicates the direction of Highway R26(D).)

Speed-Y fishes around in his equipment, and pulls out some documents. See? He does have the directions! Several, in fact. He starts reading them, and discovers that most of them point to Highway R26(D). Others tell him to pass the highway and pick up O514(C), and a single one tells him to turn around and head for IR9142 instead.

See? Directions! Choose your path wisely.

written by Speeder on May 01, 2013 23:20

I see if any of them have any detail and information telling me what to expect, or at least the route size, otherwise I pick one at random...

Say... O514(C) and explain that route to L4.

written by Kristos on May 02, 2013 04:41

I wait for our next order.

written by Lightning4 on May 02, 2013 05:08

I try my best to start following Speed-Y's guidance, and start moving the truckbot.

written by Gligar on May 02, 2013 16:56

Truckbot's operator's cabin, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y looks at the routes in more detail, looking for what he can expect in terms of the length of the route, any projected obstacles, that sort of thing. A lot of them seem to be about the same in terms of length and such, but one stands out. It might be longer, but it makes use of YELLOW expressways which the others do not use, and is therefore a bit faster. To start along that route, they need to head to Highway O514(C) and carry on for a few exits.

He shares this information with L4-O, who, finally, can begin driving. He starts off by heading towards R26(D), past where The Computer terminated those clones.

RED briefing room, Armed forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Feeling a littler bored, Kris-R realises that there is not much he can do until he is given an order.

Thankfully, he does not have long to wait. The GREEN speaks up, telling everyone to line up, as equipment is about to be issued.

written by Speeder on May 02, 2013 17:21

I see the terminated clones.

"What happened with them?"

written by Lightning4 on May 02, 2013 19:40

"They were dragging a presumably dead clone around... Friend Computer apparently took notice."

I slow down, and possibly stop if we're going to be right next to the clones. Perhaps we need to investigate?

written by Gligar on May 02, 2013 21:37

Truckbot's operator's cabin, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Seeing as he wasn't with the team when the incident happened, Speed-Y does not know what happened with the terminated clones. He asked L4-O about it.

L4-O, of course, was watching the whole time, so he is able to tell Speed-Y about it. He begins to slow the truckbot and pull to a stop nearby.

Looking out of the window, the team can notice that... there is a clone missing. Specifically, the clone who was being dragged.

written by Kristos on May 02, 2013 23:42

I hop into line among my team members. Hmm... does this mean I am no longer a team leader? Or am I just a member of two teams. Hmm... Hmm... I hope we get some Soylent and TeaSir!

written by Lightning4 on May 02, 2013 23:59

"Huh... the clone they were dragging must've been still alive. He's not here anymore..."

I decide to get out and cautiously approach the terminated clones.

written by Speeder on May 03, 2013 01:35

I look at L4.

"This might be worse.

Maybe he WAS dead.

If you get what I am saying.

[1381]

Crazy world this one, where we cannot trust the dead...

Or his body was valuable enough to people steal it... I mean, why it was being dragged around?

But let's continue, mulling over disappearing bodies won't help with our mission, or the group that is hunting us."

written by Gligar on May 03, 2013 13:08

RED briefing room, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R gets into line with his team.

Wait, isn't he already part of a team? Yes, but that's a Troubleshooter team, he realises. This is an impromptu Armed Forces team, and though they may look similar, they're actually quite different.

Wondering if they'll get Soylent and TeaSir, he continues waiting.

He doesn't have long to wait. Not long after, a soldier starts walking down the line, issuing each clone with a laser rifle, two clearance-appropriate barrels, and reflec. A second issues a can of B3 to each clone.

Truckbot's operator's cabin, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

L4-O gets out of the truckbot. Clearly, the clone they were dragging must have been alive, as he is nowhere to be found. They, however, are right here.

He investigates further, finding PDCs, ME cards, laser pistols, and a couple of Tella-O hand mirrors. The clones themselves don't do anything except lie there.

Speed-Y disagrees with him. Perhaps the clone was dead... but still walked off.

Or someone else could have walked off with the body. Or something.

Probably best not to dwell on it, though.

written by Speeder on May 03, 2013 14:12

"Alright, take the ammo and useful equipment and come back. Or..."

I also get out, and try to quickly fiddle with their PDCs to see if they are minimally interesting to us or not.

written by Lightning4 on May 03, 2013 15:47

I take the laser pistols, of course... adding to my armory even further.

I then read the ME cards, to see if they're anyclone I already might be familiar with.

written by Gligar on May 03, 2013 18:37

Near the truckbot, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y tells L4-O to take the ammunition and come back.

In saying that, he gets an idea, and joins him. He takes the clones' PDCs and fiddles with them, ascertaining that there is little of interest on any of them, except for a couple of games.

Meanwhile L4-O is looking at the clones' ME Cards. It turns out the the clones are Simon-R-DIG, Jordan-R-DIG, and... wait a minute, this third card is unreadable!

written by Speeder on May 03, 2013 19:27

I see if there any crazy shaft nearby.

If there is, I throw the PDC on it.

For some reason I feel like a urge to throw things down there.

And see how to trigger the crazy fire thing.

written by Lightning4 on May 03, 2013 19:27

"Well, this is.. interesting."

I look at the card a few moments longer, and then show it to Speed-Y.

"I'm not sure what this means..."

written by Gligar on May 03, 2013 22:08

Near the truckbot, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y, it seems, has had an odd idea...

He looks around, and spots the nearest S.H.A.F.T. Walking over to it, he throws in what ends up being Simon-R's PDC, trying not to watch it fall while at the same time watching it fall (if that makes any sense)...

Then he waits. Is he trying to trigger another explosion, perhaps?

L4-O is more interested in this unreadable ME Card. He notes that the e-ink display appears damaged and glitchy as he walks over to Speed-Y to show it to him. He's not sure what it could mean, though.

And come to think of it, has anyone ever seen an ME Card with a damaged e-ink display before?

written by Speeder on May 03, 2013 22:14

I look at the ME Card...

I then examine it, first trying to see if is trapped and will destroy itself or something if we tamper ot read it.

If it looks safe I suggest to L4 that we use the Financial Officer scanner on it.

written by Lightning4 on May 03, 2013 23:03

I glance at the clone the ME card came from, looking at him/it to see if there's anything out of the ordinary about the clone.

Unless this ME card came from the clone who was dragged...

written by Cryoburner on May 04, 2013 00:35

"Greetings, comrades! It is I, Karl. I have returned to continue the investigation into faulty slugthrowers that may have worked their way into our supply chain, due to computerist interference! Unfortunately, during this investigation, I was struck down as a result of the tampering, but have returned to complete this glorious mission! Might you know where they took my last clone? It is in our best interest that I recover my supplies and get back to work immediately.”

[1382]

written by Gligar on May 04, 2013 13:35

Near the truckbot, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

As the S.H.A.F.T. fails to do anything interesting, Speed-Y proceeds to examine this anomalous ME Card. Would there be any obstacle to them scanning it with their now-unused* Financial Officer equipment? (As I recall, Speed-Y has the apps for it on his PDC... he would just need the scanner.) Hmm... well, the card's chip contacts don't appear to have been tampered with, and seem to be original, and there are no signs of tampering near the "contactless" logo... perhaps the active electronics are intact?

He tells this to L4-O, and suggests the use of the ME Card scanner.

L4-O looks over at the clone he salvaged the card from. There doesn't seem to be anything unusual about him... except for the fact that he had the card.

But perhaps the card came from the dragged clone instead? If that is the case, why didn't he come back for it?

Factory floor entrance, Corridor A/B intersection, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" informs the guard that he is returning to his investigation into the slugthrower supply line. "I wasn't aware that there was a problem, comrade..."

He continues, saying that he was terminated, and need to find his body. "I'm not sure," the guard says. "But I think I heard reports of a body in the command centre... does that sound familiar?"

written by Speeder on May 04, 2013 15:04

I ask L4 to hand over the scanner.

As soon as he do it, I attach it to my PDC and scan the card with all apps I can.

written by Kristos on May 04, 2013 16:17

B3! Close enough! I put on the reflec. Don't I already have a loaded laser rifle? In that case, I stow the spares.

written by Lightning4 on May 04, 2013 18:38

I look for the scanner and give it to Speed-Y.

I then watch intently for any reaction to the card.

written by Gligar on May 04, 2013 19:01

Near the truckbot, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y ignores the issue of exactly where the card came from for now. He simply wants to see who it belongs to, and to do that, he'll need the Financial Officer's card scanner. He asks L4-O for it.

It is a good thing that L4-O took it from Joris-O's corpse, then. Since he did, he can hand it over and let Speed-Y hook it up to his PDC in order to scan it.

Hmmm... that's odd... the card gives a read error the first time Speed-Y tries it. Maybe the clone spilled B3 on it or something? (But wouldn't Speed-Y have noticed? Since he looked and saw nothing wrong, it must have been a glitch.) The second time works, though, and identified the cards owner as Jordan-R-DIG-2, Power Services. According to what he can read, the clone was recently transferred from Tech Services for some reason... and he recently received an Official Reprimand for equally-unspecified reasons. Perhaps the two are related?

RED briefing room, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Finding B3 to be a suitable alternative to TeaSir and Soylect (as he should), Kris-R prepares himself for... whatever they're about to be doing. He wards his reflec, and wonders. Doesn't he already have a laser rifle? No, he has a laser pistol... but I guess it's irrelevant. He puts the rifle away for now and waits.

Again, he doesn't have long to wait. The two soldiers get to the end of the line, and the GREEN announces, "Alright! We're about ready. Each team will be sent via an alternate route. This will enable us to -"

Suddenly, there is an alarm. "Alert: communist attack in progress!" intones a voice from somewhere.

The GREEN reacts. "Everyone to the outer fence! We need to get you deployed now!"

written by Speeder on May 04, 2013 20:37

Since he is Tech Services and RED, I try to see if I can read the Tech Services database using my YELLOW clearance and see if I find any detail on his transfer.

written by Lightning4 on May 04, 2013 21:25

I simply continue watching. I also glance around, keeping alert for any potential threat against us or the crate.

written by Gligar on May 05, 2013 13:20

Near the truckbot, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

While L4-O keeps watch over both Speed-Y and the roadway (and Jam-Y proceeds to space out again... and everyone else also fails to do anything useful 😊) Speed-Y keeps trying to get useful information. Specifically, he wants to know why Jordan-R was transferred.

He's able to access some of the Tech Services databases using his clearance, including some of the personnel assignments. However, as he discovers, those are only useful if the clone you want to investigate is still with Tech services. If they've been transferred elsewhere, Tech Services doesn't want to know.

Such is the case with Jordan-R. Since he is no longer Tech Services, the databases he can access have little information about him. If he wanted the information, he'd have to go * as if Joris-O did anything related to being a Financial Officer...

[1383]

through other channels. Perhaps he could fill out a form for permission to fill out the form to request the information...

Or perhaps he could get interrupted by The Computer: "Team Epsilon! Why have you not left DIG Sector?"

written by Speeder on May 05, 2013 15:19

"Speed-Y reporting!

We had a attempt on our life and decided to do a quick investigation here.

Sorry for straying from the mission, I know we are to carry the crate, not find out who are trying to kill us, but I thought this might make us faster later as we can predict attacks, but we are already going!"

I pocket the weird ME card, and return to the vehicle, happily. Very happily.

written by Gligar on May 05, 2013 18:36

Near the truckbot, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y reports that they were attacked, and are running a quick investigation. He is aware about their mission but thought it appropriate to do some research in order to better predict future attacks. "I see," The Computer replies as Speed-Y returns to the truckbot. "Kindly remember that you do have a mission, and please complete it. It is important that you reach your destination. Thank you for your co-operation."

written by Kristos on May 05, 2013 19:24

*Oh, was that a laser rifle? Sweet founder of B3! Let's get some gear on that baby!*

I take the laser rifle back out and load it as I stow the laser pistol, and I quickly follow my team to the outer fence.

written by Lightning4 on May 05, 2013 19:43

"I guess we should go then... we can probably investigate into the clone later, if he's relevant to our mission, or the attacks on JHT."

I start heading back to the truckbot, with the intent of getting into the driver's seat again.

written by Cryoburner on May 05, 2013 21:51

"Ah, yes... That does sound familiar. Might you know the quickest route to the command center from here?"

written by Gligar on May 05, 2013 23:11

RED briefing room, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

It seems that, when Kris-R received the laser rifle, he did not ignore the fact that it was a laser rifle, he simply did not notice, despite the difference in size. Belatedly realising (and pleased at the fact that it's a more powerful weapon) he quickly switches weapons and loads the laser rifle.

That done, he follows everyone else to the outer fence.

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

What he sees when he arrives is not pleasing. It involves part of the fence being forced inwards, allowing communists to pour in through the breach. Clones on both sides are already shooting each other.

Hopefully, Kris-R's laser rifle will make a difference.

Near the truckbot, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

L4-O agrees that they should get going. Perhaps they can investigate closer later. Who knows? Maybe these clones have something to do with something they've been up against... the zombie attack, perhaps, or the commies. Or maybe even the mission.

He climbs back aboard the truckbot. "Can we get moving?" it asks.

Factory floor entrance, Corridor A/B intersection, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" agrees that the command centre sounds familiar, and asks for directions. "Through there," the guard tells him, pointing at the big doors, "and into what was the overseer's office."

"Are you sure we should be -" begins the other guard.

"He was there already, wasn't he?" Guard 1 replies.

"But shouldn't he know whrrew it is?"

"Who cares? Maybe the Computerists did something to his mind? Or the mutants?"

written by Lightning4 on May 05, 2013 23:14

I wait for Speed-Y and anyone else who got off to get back into the truckbot.

Once everyone is in place, I resume driving.

written by Cryoburner on May 06, 2013 01:33

"Yes, those doors! Thank you for the assistance. It's always good to see hardworking clones working hard toward everyone's benefit and so on."

I continue on through the doors toward the command center.

written by Gligar on May 06, 2013 12:51

Factory floor entrance, Corridor A/B intersection, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" thanks the guard and heads on through the doors.

Factory floor, Corridor A/B intersection, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

On entering, he notices that the machinery is silent and powered down. Why would this be? Surely the communists would want to put it to use?

Then he remembers the sabotage. Perhaps they simply don't care about lasers? In that case... shouldn't they still be doing something in here? But no... the only clones on the factory floor, other than himself, are two more communist guards, guarding a door off to one side, one marked "Overseer".

[1384]

They see "Karl" and ready their weapons. On seeing who he is, however, they relax again. "Ah! Comrade! We have been ordered to admit you."

Truckbot's operator's cabin, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Before continuing, L4-O waits for Speed-Y to return to his seat - looks like no-one else had moved.

And soon, Speed-Y joins him, and it is time to continue.

S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

The truckbot soon leaves the S.H.A.F.T.s, and the majority of DIG Sector, behind. There are a few buildings to either side of the roadway that appear reinforced, as if explosions occur inside, as well as a couple of vehiclebot garages.

And up ahead, a junction. According to the sign, it leads to Highway R26(D).

written by Speeder on May 06, 2013 13:33

I take my map out, and read aloud the path again to the YELLOW road.

written by Kristos on May 06, 2013 17:45

If our team does not have leadership (or if I am that leadership), I yell "Okay team, stay together!"

I look for a strategically located defense to duck behind and shoot from.

written by Gligar on May 06, 2013 18:25

Truckbot's operator's cabin, S.H.A.F.T. Roadway, DIG Sector

Speed-Y notices the sign, and looks at the map. Hmm... no, not that one. They want the next one, O514(C), and then... it looks like four exits down that highway is the YELLOW expressway. He relays this information to L4-O, who keeps driving.

Notably, the journey to the next junction is quick and free of people shooting at them.

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Noticing that his team doesn't seem to have a leader, Kris-R steps up and orders them to stay together, before ducking behind a sign.

The other three on his team scramble to comply. One of them gets a shot off at the commies but doesn't manage to hit anything.

Speaking of the commies, it looks like they've lost a few of their number, but there are still plenty more where those came from. And what's worse, they're afflicting casualties on the loyal side, too.

written by Kristos on May 06, 2013 19:19

I yell silently (wouldn't want to draw too much attention) and carefully aim and fire from behind the sign, taking care to only shoot at commies, and trying to make every shot count.

written by Speeder on May 06, 2013 19:29

While the vehicle moves, I regularly check we are in the right route, and the conditions of the road.

But when not doing that, I keep fiddling with the mystery card, trying to figure how it was made blank, and how it was made hard to read.

written by Lightning4 on May 06, 2013 20:25

I continue following any additional instructions from Speed-Y.

I keep a lookout when I can for anything up ahead, though part of me hopes for clear sailing from here on out.

written by Gligar on May 06, 2013 23:09

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Peeking out from behind the sign, Kris-R starts shooting. But it almost looks like he hasn't used a laser rifle before, given how he misses the communists...

Oh well. At least one of the others in his team seems to know what they're doing, as he manages to drill one of the communists right through the head with a laser shot.

The communists return fire. One slug hits the sign near where Kris-R is hiding.

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Highway O514(C), DIG Sector

L4-O directs the truckbot onto the highway, and continues to keep an eye out for... well, anything.

The first thing he notices, of course, are the advertising boards. They seem to be having trouble locking on to a specific clone to target their advertising, so it looks like they're compromising and just showing B3 ads.

The second is the vehiclebot up ahead on their carriageway. It looks to be another truckbot. As he watches, he glimpses a flash of light from it.

As they continue to drive, Speed-Y keeps an eye out for their exit. It hasn't appeared yet, but it pays to stay alert. After all, how will he tell L4-O about it if he doesn't notice it?

But he is soon distracted by that strange ME Card. He wants to know how it was blanked out like this, and why it is hard to read. Hmm... perhaps it has something to do with the card's chip? Might it have been reprogrammed in some way?

written by Lightning4 on May 07, 2013 01:40

"Hmm. I saw a flash of light from that truckbot... that's unusual."

I continue watching the truckbot, though I try to maintain my attention on my driving duties as well.

written by Speeder on May 07, 2013 02:40

After L4 comment I notice that it is better to focus on what I should be doing.

I put the weird ME card back, and take out a YELLOW laser, and keep looking for the correct route and unusual things.

written by Gligar on May 07, 2013 13:02

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Highway 0514(C), DIG Sector

L4-O reports the flash of light to Speed-Y, and continues to watch...

There is another flash of light, followed by the distinct zap of a laser shot.

I should make it clear that none of the team have fired their laser. Speed-Y might have his ready, but no. The laser shot isn't even visible from the truckbot, and seems to be internal to the other truckbot up ahead.

As they pass a junction, the second truckbot begins to swerve violently.

written by Speeder on May 07, 2013 13:12

"Ignore it unless it becomes a threat.

If we stop to investigate every weird thing we see, we will never complete your mission...

I mean, anyone in Alpha Complex that does not know that weird things happen all the time, is probably a commie intruder from outside, or very dumb.

If nothing weird happened, troubleshooters would not be necessary."

I smile happily. TOO happy, you know, like those smiles of when you are thinking about the most creative ways to torture a commie, or what to shoot first in an enemy vehicle so that they die in the most painful way as possible, or scary way, like falling down into a shaft, or crashing into a wall full of spikes... Wall of spikes DO exist in Alpha Complex I hope?

written by Gligar on May 07, 2013 17:31

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Highway 0514(C), DIG Sector

Speed-Y tells L4-O that the other truckbot is not a threat and should be ignored. After all, it has nothing to do with their mission as far as he can see, and if they stop to investigate everything, not only will they not accomplish their mission, but it will make them look like crazies from the Outside. Lots of things happen in Alpha Complex, most of which are beyond their clearance and/or concern. And besides, they have to leave things for other Troubleshooters to investigate and/or shoot.

Their truckbot continues, slowing down to allow the second truckbot to cross over the central reservation and flip onto its roof.

Back of the truckbot, Highway 0514(C), DIG Sector

John-O fiddles with his Multicorder. "That's a good shot of the truckbot flipping," he comments. I just wish we had some more lights on it. Maybe I should tell them to repair it and try again."

"And then fail to notice the laser shot that pierced our windscreen," Lucas-O says. "The one which would have killed Speed-Y if it actually happened."

"But it didn't happen," argues King-R.

"True," is the reply. "But it might have done. And, since you clearly didn't notice, it would have been your fault for failing to take action to protect your team leader."

"Except that we had cameras on it," argues John-O. "So, naturally, I would have noticed, if nothing else."

"Yes, and while you had your eyes glued to that thing, another laser shot hit you in the back."

written by Lightning4 on May 07, 2013 18:05

As commanded, I just continue driving, and now that we're possibly past the second truckbot, I keep my eyes open for any new oddities that might swerve out onto the highway.

written by Speeder on May 07, 2013 20:10

I keep looking around.

"Hey L4, how you made that car fall into the shaft that explodes?"

written by Gligar on May 07, 2013 22:28

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Highway 0514(C), on the edge of DIG Sector

L4-O does as ordered, and just keeps driving, leaving the second truckbot behind them. Naturally, he keeps his eyes out for anything interesting happening ahead.

Speed-Y also keeps looking around, and notices some of the team having a conversation as they sit near/on The Crate.

He can't help but wonder aloud how L4-O got that autocar to fall into the S.H.A.F.T. earlier.

The truckbot passes another junction. Far above, the dome's command centre comes into view.

Back of the truckbot, Highway 0514(C), on the edge of DIG Sector

"Well what am I supposed to do about that?" John-O demands to know. "I'm a Mental Blast mutant, not an Eyes In The Back Of My Head mutant."

"That doesn't mean you shouldn't be aware of what's happeni-"

Lucas-O is cut off when John-O glares at him. "Aware of what's happening? Yes, I'm aware. I'm aware that you just set off one of your pyrotechnic grenades on the roadway behind us. Not a good one, I have to say; if that's supposed to be a taser, the lightshow is wrong."

"Remind me to take that up with PLC when I get back... unless Jam-Y wants to make a note of it?"

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

It is Josh-R's turn to fire. He lets off a quick laser blast, hitting a communist's fuzzy hat dead on, causing it to start burning. The communist fails to notice for a while, before suddenly looking dazed and confused, and more than a little dizzy. He falls to his knees, causing the hat to fall off his head.

Whereupon the communist's dizziness seems to fade. "What just happened?" He looks around. "Wha- commies?! And - hats! What is this!"

written by Lightning4 on May 07, 2013 23:43

"Oh, I shot the driver through the front window. He just slumped right over and their autocar drove straight into the S.H.A.F.T!"

"I wonder who they were anyway. I'm hoping we never need to find out, but I kind of doubt that's the last time we'll see them or clones like them..."

written by Speeder on May 07, 2013 23:59

I think a bit.

"I really hope we don't have enemies that shoot like that... Now I am feeling rather more exposed.

Remember how the mind control fuzzy hats affected the commies aim? What happen if we find enemies that are NOT mind controlled? Worse, what if they are ex-troubleshooters? Or even traitor torubleshooters?"

written by Gligar on May 08, 2013 13:46

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Highway 0514(C), on the edge of DIG Sector

L4-O explains about how the autocar was dispatched: he shot the driver. That resulted in the car veering off and falling of its own accord. Simple, really.

He still doesn't know who they were, and hopes that they don't need to find out. But he kind of doubts that they've seem the last of them.

The truckbot approaches a third junction. From the signs, they are approaching the sector boundary, and are about to cross into DIF Sector.

Back of the truckbot, Highway 0514(C), on the edge of DIG Sector

Jam-Y doesn't seem to want to make a note concerning the seemingly-faulty pyrotechnics, probably because he is too busy dozing off.

Lucas-O looks over. "Maybe I'll have to make the note... sleeping during a mission? What if someone attacked you in your sleep?"

"That's why there are more of us," Azir-R says. "And besides, if eh doesn't sleep now, he's liable to fall asleep later, say during a firefight, and fail to notice the tacnuke grenade being thrown at him."

"Like that'll ever happen... oh hey, there's the command centre! Can we have someone look at it? Thanks."

written by Speeder on May 08, 2013 15:53

I yell from the inside of the bot.

"Hey, regarding tacnuke grenades, seeing them, or not, does not make much a difference heh? You get blown up the same way!"

written by Kristos on May 08, 2013 16:36

"Do you see that?! The hats, the hats are doing something to them!"

My mind runs through the possibilities. Perhaps the hats were used to motivate loyal clones to sabotage the laser barrel factory. Or maybe the events are not so directly related. But, regardless, we have to remove the hats somehow. Perhaps we can blow them off? Eh, I don't see any giant fans sitting around. So I guess we'll have to do this the hard way.

"Anybody who can aim well: Shoot the hats, but don't shoot the clones! Everybody else: Hold your fire! Only shoot clones if you absolutely have to!"

I refrain from further shooting for obvious reasons (I can't shoot the broad side of a warehouse with a laser rifle) and yell to the startled clone, "Hey, you, knock their hats off!".

Then I swap the laser rifle for my laser pistol and peek around the sign. I believe I can aim better with my familiar old friend. Well, actually, this one is quite new, but laser pistols in concept are a familiar old friend to me. If I see any commies trying to shoot the startled clone I attempt to shoot that commie, preferably in the hat. (I would like to spend a PP on this action.)

written by Lightning4 on May 08, 2013 18:04

I wonder just how far we have to go if we have to traverse one sector at a time...

"Looks like we might have a pretty long drive ahead! But I'm sure I can do it."

written by Gligar on May 08, 2013 18:10

Back of the truckbot, Highway 0514(C), on the edge of DIG Sector

From inside the cabin, Speed-Y points out that it doesn't really matter whether you see a tacnuke grenade coming or not; given the blast radius, you'll be dead either way.

As the truckbot passes the sector boundary wall, Azir-R replies, "True that. But given Jam-Y's abilities, he could get off a warning, surely."

"At least tacnukes are painless," King-R says, "well, if you're right there when it goes off. Further out, not so much. And there tends to be blood involved." He looks uneasy at that.

Up ahead, another junction looms. From the cabin, L4-O can be heard saying that it'll be a long drive. But he is confident that he can do it.

[1387]

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R notices the clone, and comes to a conclusion regarding the hats. The hats are doing things to them!

He thinks for a moment. The best thing to do would most likely be to remove the hats, but how? They don't have the luxury of an industrial fan this time, so they will have to use other methods, like the one he suggests to the others: shoot off their hats.

He includes the recently de-hatted clone in this as well. The clone still looks confused, but complies.

As it turns out, there are a few loyal clones who can shoot straight. Including Kris-R, though he has switched to his laser pistol. Two more communists are de-hatted before the other commies can organise enough to shoot back. "No! You will not shoot!" one yells, and fires in Kris-R's direction.

He ends up missing Kris-R, but only because Josh-R is in the way. Said clone yells out in pain as a slug pierces his left arm.

written by Speeder on May 08, 2013 19:09

I reply to L4.

"We are going to use the YELLOW expressway remember? I am sure it will make our trip much faster, that is, if this truck can go fast..."

Or if the expressway has some device to help us move fast..

I heard some of them the ground moves! It must be really awesome."

I look upward, trying to see as we have the sector if I can see the ceiling of alpha complex.

"I wonder how big the city really is."

I try to get the population number of Alpha Complex on my PDC.

written by Gligar on May 08, 2013 22:26

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Highway 0514(C), on the edge of DIF Sector

Speed-Y reminds L4-O that they'll be taking a YELLOW expressway, which should hopefully make their journey faster. Assuming that this truckbot can go that fast.

While he thinks about it, though, he seems to remember hearing about expressways with integrated devices to make the journey even faster - indeed, he seems to have heard about the rolling roadway project from a few yearcycles ago, wherein a few expressways were modified to essentially become rolling belts to allow vehiclebots to attain higher speeds with lesser fuel expenditure. They still exist, in fact, and further retrofits are planned, but have been shelved due to massive budget overruns and infiltration by... well, you know.

As the junction looms even closer, Speed-Y idly wonders just how big Alpha Complex is. This dome alone is so large that he cannot even see the superstructure from here, only the control centre suspended below it - and even then only due to the fact that it has powerful spotlights trained on it. And just how many citizens can the city support? I'm sorry, citizen, but that number is beyond your security clearance.

As for the junction... here it is. Your exit, I believe.

written by Lightning4 on May 08, 2013 22:26

"Well, there's probably a maximum mandated speed, even on the YELLOW expressway."

"Though hopefully it's pretty fast..."

written by Speeder on May 09, 2013 15:11

"And CAN this truck reach that maximum speed? Hey, the exit, there!"

I point to the exist.

written by Gligar on May 09, 2013 17:11

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Highway 0514(C), on the edge of DIF Sector

L4-O points out that the expressway most likely has a maximum mandated speed - hopefully, a fast enough one that they can reach their destination quickly.

This causes Speed-Y to wonder if the truckbot could even reach the limit. "It has been some time since I have travelled on an expressway," the truckbot replies, "but I am pretty sure I will be able to reach the top speed."

Speaking of the expressway, exitrightnowgo! The lane is already splitting off!

written by Cryoburner on May 09, 2013 17:35

poink

"Oh, thank you! I'll be right along then."

I wander over to the door marked 'Overseer' and enter, so long as it seems to be fine with the guards.

written by Gligar on May 09, 2013 20:30

Factory floor, Corridor A/B intersection, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

I probably don't need to explain what happens between "Karl" and the commie guards. That's right: he thanks them and moves on.

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Corridor A/B intersection, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

Upon entering he immediately notices two things.

The first is that (almost) every surface is covered in maps of the factory, the sector, other buildings in the sector, and plans for how to control them.

The second is his own dead body, lying on a table with an empty syringe stuck in its chest.

[1388]

Several commies are still clustered around it, seemingly wondering how to properly dispose of this body in some way that benefits the people as a whole.

written by Lightning4 on May 09, 2013 22:07

I take the exit. If I can.

I then start looking for anything that denotes the maximum speed, and, if we're below it, start accelerating to meet it.

written by Gligar on May 09, 2013 22:48

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Highway 0514(C), on the edge of DIF Sector

Belatedly noticing the exit, L4-O makes a hard turn, making the truckbot cut over the dividing markings in a desperate attempt to traverse the junction... and makes it just before it hits the separator barriers appear. Then, it's another hard turn to get back in line, and a gentler turn as the roadway curves round to meet the expressway. Whew!

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, DIF Sector

Did he notice the speed limit signs? This section of the expressway seems to have a 80 kph speed limit.

Apparently, he did. He guns the truckbot's engine, causing it to accelerate. It seems to take its time, but then again, they do have a heavy Crate on board.

I wonder how the other team members are coping with this?

written by Lightning4 on May 09, 2013 23:57

I continue accelerating as much as the truckbot will go. Well, at least until I reach 80 kph.

If I reach it...

written by Gligar on May 10, 2013 12:29

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, DIF Sector

L4-O isn't thinking about the others in, or on, the truckbot. He just wants to see if the truckbot can reach the speed limit.

Well, it looks like it might... but the a small problem: one called "traffic" that stops them from going any faster than 70 kph. It seems to consist mostly of autocars with the odd cyclebot weaving through.

Looking ahead, the cause of the traffic becomes clear, and you can probably guess what it is without me telling you:

Roadworks.

Or rather, there would be roadworks if there was anyone working in the coned-off area. As it is, there is no indication of any progress other than a bunch of cones, and a sign from Tech Services apologising for the inconvenience.

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

The other two de-hatted clones look around, confused. One realises what is happening, and joins in with the de-hatting.

The other does not, and attempts to stop the first from doing so.

Meanwhile, Kris-R and the loyal clones are continuing their attempt while getting shot in return. It's slow going, and three loyal clones are lost, but three more communists are de-hatted.

written by Gligar on May 10, 2013 17:44

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, DIF Sector

The roadwork continue for... quite a distance, it seems. Even though there are no tools, machines, bots, clones... you get the idea.

Out of the corner of his eye, Speed-Y notices a nearby autocar roll down its window, allowing an occupant to stick something out of it. It's aimed in their direction.

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

The shootout continues. One communist throws a grenade, which explodes into a wall of noise and light.

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Corridor A/B intersection, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

One of the communists arguing over "Karl"'s body straightens up, noticing "Karl"'s clone, and says, "Ah! Our comrade has returned. Have you any suggestions as to how to deal with this?"

written by Lightning4 on May 10, 2013 22:35

I sigh and regulate my speed so we can get through this roadwork safely, without running into any autocars, cyclebots, or the like.

written by Gligar on May 10, 2013 22:59

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, DIF Sector

It is clear that L4-O would prefer that the roadworks not be present at this time. He'd rather just go as fast as he can to HOL Sector, and get this mission done, I think. Alas.

He slots the truckbot in between a couple of autocars in the next lane over, and is able to keep up with the traffic as the roadworks continue to hog lanes that would be welcome if they were not coned off.

It looks like the roadworks won't last much longer, though. I'm sure everyone will be pleased to see that. Except, perhaps, for the occupants of the nearby autocar, one of whom seems to be pointing something their way through the window, and seems to have made up his mind about something.

Back of the truckbot, Expressway Y489, DIF Sector

John-O has spotted him. "We've got company," he shouts, over the rushing air. "Possibly hostile -"

ZAP! A laser shot grazes his left ear.

"Good catch," Lucas-O says, readying his pistol. "But next time, perhaps you should be quicker about it." He returns fire, managing to miss. "You could have avoided injury that way."

[1389]

written by Lightning4 on May 11, 2013 00:21

I hear the commotion, but drive, being unable to do anything about it.

Though I do glance at the autocar and wonder if ramming it from the side might be a good idea...

I do try my best to keep the shooter from getting a shot at me or Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on May 11, 2013 11:21

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, DIF Sector

L4-O keeps driving. There not much he can do to help while doing so, except for the occasional glance at the autocar to determine whether he could ram it. He ascertains that doing so would be problematic, as there are other autocars between him and the enemy. If he could solve that problem, though, it might work.

In the meantime, all he can do is try to minimise the number of casualties on their side by driving in such a way that no-one is hit. Well, that's the plan, but it is hampered by the, well, traffic. There is always an autocar right where he wants to go...

At least he has the full expressway to drive across, now that they're past the roadworks.

Back of the truckbot, Expressway Y489, DIF Sector

By now, John-O has also readies a laser pistol. He fires a couple of times at the other autocar, and manages to puncture a hole in the side. There is no indication as to what that does to the occupants, but hey, he hit his target. That has to count for something, eight?

Lucas-O fires again, scoring a hit on one tyre. It punctures, causing the driver to start fighting the controls to try to keep in the fight.

written by Kristos on May 11, 2013 13:48

Surely the grenade has stirred up some dust? If there is the cover of dust, I try to run to another obstacle to get closer to the commies. The closer, the better.

written by Gligar on May 11, 2013 15:08

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Hmmm, doesn't look like there are many injuries from that grenade. Perhaps its purpose was not to cause harm, but to merely stun? If so, it was not very successful at even that.

But what it did do was throw up quite a bit of dust, and at least one clone has taken advantage of that to move forward. One of them is Kris-R, who, under cover of the dust, is able to move out from behind the sign and take cover behind a shipping crate. (It looks like a communist had the same idea, but a laser blast to the chest from somewhere further back ensures that he does not make it.)

Once he has cover again, Kris-R becomes aware that his PDC is vibrating at him.

written by Gligar on May 11, 2013 21:45

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

But Kris-R doesn't have time to worry about it, since another grenade has been thrown. This time, it lands right next to him.

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Corridor A/B intersection, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" doesn't answer. Any particular reason? Probably just My Brain Isn't Here Syndrome.

The communists don't notice, though. They talk amongst themselves, and come to the decision to just burn the body.

"What about the equipment?" one communist asks.

"Just burn it," he is told. "It is of inferior computerist make and is no good to us."

Back of the truckbot, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIF Sector

It's King-R's turn to join in with the shooting. However the thoughts of what all this is doing to the autocar's hygiene level seems to be distracting him, causing him to miss. What's worse, the occupants have resumed shooting, catching him right in the reflex.

written by Lightning4 on May 11, 2013 22:21

I continue driving and swerving as much as I can. Since the full expressway is now open, I try to find any gaps I can squeeze into so I can start accelerating rapidly.

written by Gligar on May 12, 2013 11:14

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIF Sector

Now that he has the space to do so, L4-O can step up the driving. He can change lanes to fit into a gap there, change back, change the other way... all in the name of avoiding weapons fire. Does it help? Probably. All he knows is that Speed-Y isn't getting hit. (Nor is he helping in any way.)

On the occasions that he glances over at the other autocar, L4-O can see that the driver is still fighting to keep it under control despite its burst tyre. He almost loses it and collides with another vehicle but manages to come out of it with only minor damage. (The other vehicle isn't so lucky, and ends up crashing through the central barrier and cause an incident over there.)

A status light appears on the dashboard.

Back of the truckbot, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIF Sector

"At least that wasn't us," Azir-R yells as he shoots. He scores a hit to the windscreen, causing the autocar to become even more erratic. He gets shot in the arm as a result, though.

[1390]

"True," John-O replies. "And we're getting some nice footage. Should be some good evidence against these guys."

written by Lightning4 on May 12, 2013 16:12

"Uh oh."

I look at the status light, wondering what it says.

written by Gligar on May 12, 2013 18:23

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIF Sector

Fearing the worst, L4-O looks down at the dashboard, and at the status light. It turns out that it is simply a low-fuel indicator.

As he looks at it, there is a zap as a laser blast pierces the windscreen at an angle, passes over his head, and exits through the driver's side window.

written by Lightning4 on May 12, 2013 21:14

"Eep."

I jerk a little in reflex, but try to keep the truckbot under control.

I shout.

"Someone kill those guys already!"

written by Kristos on May 13, 2013 03:00

Eh, okay, grenade right beside me? I jump and roll to the side, covering my ears.

written by Gligar on May 13, 2013 11:06

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIF Sector

L4-O is a little startled by the laser blast, and so naturally twitches somewhat, causing the controls to read that he wants to steer into a nearby autocar. He's able to keep it from colliding, though, and yells for someone to just kill them already!

From behind comes the sound of another laser blast - this one aimed at the enemy autocar. It bursts another of its tyres, which ends up being too much for the driver, who loses control and ends up crashing into the central barrier.

Causing, in turn, another autocar to crash into it.

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R seems strangely calm about there being a grenade right beside him, but still reacts by rolling away and covering his ears. It explodes, pelting him with debris.

Of course, in escaping the grenade he is now out of cover, giving a communist a good line of fire. Said communist sho-

Tries to shoot. It turns out that his slugthrower jams instead.

written by Cryoburner on May 13, 2013 17:44

"Oh, comrades! It is good to see that you have recovered my body, and not yet burned it, or anything like that! I've been using that shoddy computerist equipment to better blend in during covert missions in computerist territory. It is a disguise, as one of their own loyalty officers! Hahahaha!"

I approach my prior clone's body, and begin recovering my equipment.

written by Gligar on May 13, 2013 18:24

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIF Sector

As the truckbot continues, the enemy autocar is hit by another autocar. It's rapidly becoming a major incident back there.

Up ahead, signs indicate another junction.

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Corridor A/B intersection, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" finally answers the communists's question by saying that he was using Computerist equipment in order to blend in when he is in Computerist territory. Specifically, he is a Loyalty Officer - well, they think he is.

Without waiting for a response, he takes back his equipment from his body. Everything seems to be still there, including his transcripts recorder.

The communists seem to think. "That's... actually a good idea! But I insist that you get superior Communist equipment for regular use. Come, I'll get you a slugthrower..."

written by Lightning4 on May 13, 2013 21:55

I breathe a sigh of relief now that the enemy is gone.

"Good shooting, guys. Keep an eye out for any others like that..."

I glance around to make sure there's nothing else dangerous nearby, then go back to focusing on the junction. And driving, of course.

written by Gligar on May 13, 2013 22:16

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIF Sector

L4-O congratulates the shooter, telling whoever it was to keep an eye out for any more enemies.

He doesn't look back, of course. He's busy driving, and that involves keeping his full concentration on the expressway. The traffic might not be as bad, but he still needs to pay attention. And then there's the junction...

Say, which way do they need to go? Straight through? Or take the junction?

Speed-Y? Are you there, citizen? You have the journey plan, do you not?

written by Lightning4 on May 14, 2013 00:51

I slow down and wait for directions.

written by Cryoburner on May 14, 2013 01:11

"Yes, a slugthrower would be grand!"

I glance back at my prior, slightly-less-than-alive clone.

“Speaking of slugthrowers though, has anyone taken a look into the potential sabotage of our arsenal? It would be best to have all the weapons tested as soon as possible, with misfiring units taken out of active use.”

After gathering all my supplies (aside from the jumpsuit itself, which might be overkill), I also take the empty syringe, careful not to poke myself in the process, and follow after the slugthrower-offering clone.

written by Gligar on May 14, 2013 13:03

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Corridor A/B intersection, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

“Karl” accepts the offer of a slugthrower, but asks about the progress of the “sabotage” investigation (still under the belief that his previous clone’s death was somehow caused by “malfunctions” with the slugthrowers, as you’ll recall; he seems to have planted the idea with the communists that there really are malfunctions). “Little progress as yet, comrade,” is the reply. “There are many slugthrowers in use, and to investigate them all would take time.”

Former laser barrel warehouse, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

He follows the communist out of the command centre, through the factory floor, and into the factory’s warehouse, which now seems to be set up as an armoury, and leads him through the shelves. There are a number of slugthrowers, grenades, and other weapons here.

The communists stops at a selection of slugthrowers. “Take one,” he says.

Truckbot’s operator’s cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIF Sector

L4-O slows the truckbot, waiting for direction from Speed-Y. But Speed-Y seems to have spaced out...

written by Speeder on May 14, 2013 15:44

I finally find the correct map and state the correct direction.

“Sorry, I was having trouble with all that paper.”⁸³³

written by Gligar on May 14, 2013 16:10

Truckbot’s operator’s cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIF Sector

...but not for long.

Quickly, he claims to be having problems with all the pieces of paper he has, and digs out the directions again.

According to the sheet, they need to go... straight on into DIE Sector! It’s the next junction they need to worry about. He quickly tells this to L4-O.

written by Kristos on May 14, 2013 21:05

I run to the next cover, preferably closer to the commies (and preferable larger than the sign), and answer my PDC.

written by Gligar on May 14, 2013 22:14

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R moves again, this time to a nearby autocar just left there by the fence, narrowly missing a slugshot to the face which ends up embedding itself into the head of another loyal clone instead. (Which promptly gets answered by a volley of laser fire from other loyalists, costing the communists three of their own).

Then, finally realising that his PDC wants his attention, answers it.

It’s The Computer, asking for a status report. Have they ascertained the source of the sabotage? And what about this report of communists overrunning the sector?

written by Lightning4 on May 14, 2013 22:19

I take my orders and proceed as ordered through the junction.

Well, I proceed as ordered when it’s my turn to proceed, anyway. Can’t be going into any junctions when it’s not your turn to proceed, that could cause a collision!

written by Cryoburner on May 14, 2013 23:58

I grab a particularly nice-looking slugthrower, aim it at the ceiling, and pull the trigger.

written by Gligar on May 15, 2013 10:12

Truckbot’s operator’s cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIF Sector

L4-O follows Speed-Y’s instructions, and directs the truckbot through the junction, noting as he does that a lot of traffic is getting off the expressway here, to be replaced by more traffic. Not as much, though, so there’s less to worry about.

That low fuel light is still lit.

“Well, this takes me back,” says the truckbot. “A shootout on an expressway. You tend to remember those.”

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Corridor A/B intersection, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

“Karl” picks a nice semi-automatic slugthrower – normally GREEN Clearance, but the communists don’t care – and proceeds to aim it at the ceiling and pull the trigger.

BANG! Tinkle tinkle.

Oops, looks like he shot out one of the light fixtures.

The communist laughs. “As you can see, these slugthrowers work perfectly. Though, I am concerned that they were left here still loaded...”

written by Lightning4 on May 15, 2013 11:27

“Hmm, you’ve been in shootouts, you say?”

⁸³³ SPEEDER: (OOC: sorry, I went to a trip to see my mom in Brazillian Mothers day and totally forgot to check here in other devices!)

[1392]

I notice the low fuel light.

"Er... we're going to need to find somewhere to get more fuel. We're running low."

I start looking around.

written by Speeder on May 15, 2013 13:47

I try to see on my charts maps and PDC if there are a reasonably close refueling station on the route.

written by Gligar on May 15, 2013 15:06

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIE Sector

L4-O begins to ask the truckbot about the shootouts it's seen, but notices the fuel light. They'll need to refuel soon. He looks around outside for a fuelling station, but can't see one.

Speed-Y also has a look, although he's using his maps. Hmm... they're here, so... the nearest station is... there, off the expressway at the next junction, then it should be... just there. Should only be a couple of minutcycles or so away.

written by Speeder on May 15, 2013 15:46

I explain to L4 where the station is.

Then I look for any more suspicious people trying to shoot us in the middle of the expressway.

written by Gligar on May 15, 2013 19:10

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIE Sector

Speed-Y tells L4-O about the refuelling station, and starts looking around outside for... well, anything. But mostly anything that looks like it could harm them. And isn't obviously meant to be there.

Hmmm... apart from the ad displays still being unable to lock on to any of them in particular - hey, does that one say something about the situation being under control in JHY Sector, with there definitely not being a communist army there taking it over? - there's not much to see, other than the other vehiclebots, and none of them seem to be interested in the truckbot. Far from it, in fact: many of the vehiclebots seem to be deliberately avoiding the truckbot for some reason.

Soon, the next junction starts to appear.

written by Speeder on May 15, 2013 19:50

I yell to a random vehiclebot that passes nearby and looks like it is not on manual control.

"Why you are avoiding us?"

written by Lightning4 on May 15, 2013 22:24

"Anyway, back to my question..."

I address the truckbot again.

"Shootouts, huh? Sounds like you've seen some action!"

While listening, I make sure to keep on the path described to me by Speed-Y.

written by Kristos on May 15, 2013 23:28

"Hello computer! The communists have indeed overrun the sector and right now they are breaking into the armed forces garrison before my very eyes! But we are fighting back. It really is a spectacular battle! A battle with regrettable losses of loyal clones on both sides; We discovered that many of the communists seem to actually be loyal clones who are being controlled by the red fuzzy hats they are wearing! What should we do, F.C.?"

I take a quick look around to make sure I am not in immediate danger.

"I do not have any new information clearly related to the sabotage. My loyalty officer I believe is still researching that matter."

written by Gligar on May 16, 2013 17:36

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIE Sector

While Speed-Y tries to get responses from passing vehiclebots about why they are avoiding the Troubleshooters (and getting avoided more) L4-O repeats his question to the truckbot. "That is correct, citizen," the truckbot replies. "The last one I remember involves a group of commies with Transitions... it is a good things that commies cannot shoot straight... perhaps their hats get in the way of thinking."

The truckbot approaches the junction, and L4-O directs the bot to exit here. As it does, he can see signs for the refuelling station. How convenient.

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R tells The Computer that the reports of communism are true, and that they are attacking the garrison. He adds that they are defending, albeit at a cost, and that the commies are being controlled by the fuzzy hats they are wearing. "Fuzzy hats that control their wearer?" inquires The Computer. "That is interesting information. Such hats have been seen in use during at least one previous communist invasion, but we have few examples of such a hat, and thus cannot conduct much meaningful research. Please attempt to obtain an example for me."

Kris-R looks around, and notices that the communists are starting to focus on his position more intently. He's not yet in immediate danger, though.

He adds that he is not sure about any links to the sabotage, though his Loyalty Officer is currently investigating... he thinks. "Very well. Continue to assist the Armed Forces, and make contact with your Loyalty Officer as soon as possible. Thank you for your co-operation."

The Computer hangs up. Or it would if it were a clone. But it isn't, so... you get the picture.

[1393]

written by Lightning4 on May 16, 2013 22:51

"Hats? They wouldn't happen to be... fuzzy hats?"

I think.

"Of course they are, what am I thinking... that means there's more commies out there. That's not good..."

I follow the directions to the refueling station.

written by Gligar on May 16, 2013 23:03

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Roadway B, DIE Sector

L4-O comments about the hats. Were they, perhaps, fuzzy?

Of course they are, he corrects himself. But that means there are more out there.

Just when you thought it was safe...

But is it ever truly safe? No, of course not. And the truckbot confirms: "They were indeed fuzzy hats. They seemed to make them confused or something. It makes me wonder why exactly they used them."

L4-O continues driving. The refuelling station is only a short drive away - and a good thing it is, for the low fuel light is beginning to blink.

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Refuelling station, Roadway C, DIE Sector

The refuelling station appears to be safe enough: only a couple of unmanned vehiclebots receiving fuel from the stationary pumpbots. Neither appear to be armed.

A RED walkway links the pumpbots together, and to a small building, seemingly a PLC outlet.

written by Kristos on May 17, 2013 01:07

There's got to be a better way to do this. Why isn't one of those brilliant armed forces guys relaying tactics? Laser barrel sabotage. Fuzzy hats. This makes no sense. And I don't have time to think about it.

Peeking around the autocar I fire at some more hats with my laser pistol, switching barrels whenever necessary.

written by Lightning4 on May 17, 2013 02:28

"We had a fuzzy hat problem in JHT. Emphasis on had, however!"

I worriedly look at the low fuel light, and the distance to the refuelling station. I continue looking worried until either we run out of fuel, or make it to the station.

written by Gligar on May 17, 2013 10:16

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Behind his autocar, Kris-R can't help but be confused. None of this makes sense to him: the fact that the Armed Forces don't seem to be relaying any sort of tactics or anything, the fuzzy hats, the sabotage... wait a minute, are there actually any of the Armed Forces here with them? He sneaks a quick peek, and sees a few, but they're all low-clearance.

On the plus side, their battle does seem to be wearing the communists down.

Kris-R pops out again and fires a few shots, enough to fell a couple of communists. And enough to deplete the barrel in his laser pistol. That leaves him out of pistol barrels.

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Refuelling station, Roadway C, DIE Sector

L4-O tells the truckbot that they had a fuzzy hat problem recently, though it's been dealt with.

Eyeing the low fuel light, he hurries up and enters the station, parking near one of the pumpbots. As the truckbot stops, the pumpbot extends its arm, looking for the fuel cap. It finds and opens it, and announces, "Ready to begin fuel transfer. What account will handle the payment?"

written by Cryoburner on May 17, 2013 12:48

"Yes, a fine slugthrower! I suppose it's better to have them loaded than sabotaged though! Or loaded and sabotaged, I guess."

I stare at the slugthrower for a moment.

"Anyway, I take it there's spare ammunition as well?"

I look to see if there is any spare ammunition around, and check the slugthrower's clip to determine how loaded it already is. I avoid pointing it at myself though.

written by Gligar on May 17, 2013 16:05

Former laser barrel warehouse, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" agrees that the slugthrower is in working order, and points out that it is better that the slugthrowers be loaded than sabotaged...

But there is one more question: ammunition. Checking the clip, he finds thirteen slugs currently loaded out of what looks to be twenty that could be loaded. He wonders if there is any more. "There is," the communist replies. "One extra clip is available to you right now." He points to another shelf, where there are some clips. "You make take one."

written by Gligar on May 17, 2013 21:49

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Hold on a minute...

I don't know if Kris-R has noticed, but it almost seems as if the communists are fighting themselves! No wait... the fuzzy hats are fighting the non-fuzzy hats... or... wait, I thought they were wearing fuzzy hats...

Oh yes, that's right. Kris-R told everyone to aim up there, didn't he? So as a result, a lot of the surviving clones along the fence aren't wearing one. They still look confused, but they seem to have figured out what's happening.

It might be over soon.

written by Lightning4 on May 18, 2013 12:22

"Hmmm... how much does it usually run?"

I check my own finances first, knowing that they've been depleted a bit due to my recent weapon maintenance and purchases.

writtn by Gligar on May 18, 2013 12:47

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Refuelling station, Roadway C, DIE Sector

Before he can decide if he'll be the one paying, L4-O asks how much it normally costs for fuel. "At current prices," replies the truckbot, "the cost of a full refuel is 60 credits."

"Not including service surcharge," adds the pumpbot. "DIE Sector regulations require that a 20% surcharge be added."

Now that he knows that, L4-O can check his own balance... there he goes... 94 credits.

Of course, if their Financial Officer were still alive⁸³⁴, he could have assisted with this transaction. Ah well...

And that's not the end of it: there's still the matter of the remaining payments for the truckbot.

Outside, Azir-R comes into view, heading towards the PLC outlet. He's probably headed to get some B3 or something (as if he doesn't have enough already).

written by Speeder on May 18, 2013 16:59

I attempt to give Joris ME Card.

If I don't have it, I suggest L4 to see if he has Joris ME card and give to the bot.

If that does not work either, then I hand my personal ME card.

written by Gligar on May 18, 2013 18:06

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Refuelling station, Roadway C, DIE Sector

Speed-Y decides that, as Team Leader, it is his responsibility to sort out the payment.

To that end, he looks for an ME Card... no, not his own, but Joris-O's. Does he have it? Sadly, no. But, if you'll recall, it was L4-O who salvaged Joris-O's equipment... perhaps he has it? Well, he doesn't remember finding it, but he did salvage a bunch of forms... and aha! It's right there.

The pumpbot extends an antenna and begins scanning. "Citizen identified as Joris-O-DNK: payment accepted. You are reminded to keep your ME Card handy at all times." Only now does it extend the nozzle from its arm and begin pumping fuel.⁸³⁵

written by Kristos on May 18, 2013 21:20

I stow the laser pistol and take out the laser rifle. Our plan seems to be working. Since my hands are not very well acquainted with laser rifles I save the precision shooting for the other clones. Turning around I look for my team and try to determine if I can return to any of them.

written by Lightning4 on May 18, 2013 22:16

"Thanks, sir. I was a bit low on credits..."

While the fuel is being pumped, I take the time to survey the surroundings. This is an unfamiliar sector to us all... I assume, anyway.

written by Gligar on May 19, 2013 12:50

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R switches weapons once again, but chooses not to continue with precision shooting; after all, he is not really all that skilled with laser rifles.

Instead, he looks back, trying to find the rest of his team. That is easy: Josh-R and the rest are advancing behind him and are trying to join him behind the autocar; they're just having problems with the commies shooting at them.

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Refuelling station, Roadway C, DIE Sector

L4-O thanks Speed-Y. Though he could have afforded the fuel, he is running low on credits, so using someone else's credits helps. (Using a dead clone's credits helps even better.)

That sorted, he waits. And keeps looking around. Aha, there's Azir-R returning from the outlet. Looks like he did buy some more B3 after all.

Apart from that... what else is there to see? More buildings than JHT Sector, at least. It looks like the nearby buildings are warehouses. Further away, two large JHT-style domescrapers are prominently visible.

As he watches, a few vehiclebots travel the roadway, going to wherever it is they are going. None seem interested in them.

written by Gligar on May 19, 2013 22:07

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Eventually, though, they manage to make it, albeit not without being shot themselves. Josh-R falls to the floor but manages to bet back up and join Kris-R.

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Refuelling station, Roadway C, DIE Sector

Soon, the pumpbot finishes its work. It closes the fuel cap and withdraws its arm. "Refuelling complete," it announces. "Have a pleasant daycycle, Joris-O."

written by Lightning4 on May 19, 2013 23:29

"Let's do this then..."

I check to make sure that everyone is back on board. If not, I wait.

If everyone is in place again, I start driving according to my directions again... backtracking back to the expressway if necessary.

⁸³⁴ GLIGAR: (OOC: and, you know, not idle)

⁸³⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: A pretty neat way of doing it, Speeder. +1pp for you.)

written by Gligar on May 20, 2013 10:02*Truckbot's operator's cabin, Refuelling station, Roadway C, DIE Sector*

Looks like Team Epsilon are done here.

Noting that Azir-R has returned, and that everyone is where they should be, L4-O starts up the bot again, and heads back towards the expressway.

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Roadway B, DIE Sector

Turning onto Roadway B, they encounter a vehiclebot travelling erratically. It seems to be under manual control, but the operator seems to be unable to keep it pointed straight. Not to mention the fact that the thing is running almost as slow as a PLC queue.

This could take a while. But remember, tardiness is treason.

written by Lightning4 on May 20, 2013 10:34

"What in the complex is going on here..."

I continue watching the vehiclebot intently, though I try to maintain my attention on driving as well.

written by Speeder on May 20, 2013 13:39

"Overtake it, and if it threatens us, then of course, we will do with it what troubleshooters do when someone try to put them in trouble."

I smile happily. Maybe TOO happy.⁸³⁶ written by Gligar on May 20, 2013 14:19*Truckbot's operator's cabin, Roadway B, DIE Sector*

L4-O wants to know what is going on with the vehiclebot. He starts watching it, and notes that the operator's troubles don't seem to be related to any problem with the bot itself as the bot looks to be in good condition. So why is it being driven like this? It must have to do with the clone. Is he drugged or something? (More than normal, I mean.)

Speed-Y suggests that they just overtake the vehiclebot and move on. If he causes trouble... well, they're Troubleshooters. So no problem there. (Speed-Y doesn't see any problems, at least. In fact, he seems happy about it... almost creepily so.)

The vehiclebot continues to swerve across two lanes in front of them. Now, it seems to accelerate and decelerate erratically.

written by Cryoburner on May 20, 2013 17:39

"Yes, a fine clip!"

I take a clip, and continue following after the clone.

written by Kristos on May 20, 2013 18:31

Wow, my team, following me even in the face of certain danger. It makes me feel all proud and leadery.

"Thanks team. Who's hurt? How badly?"

⁸³⁶ SPEEDER: (OOC: for some unknown reason to me, seemly the ISP cut off my internet, for now I can only post from work)

"The Computer contacted me. Whenever we can we need to obtain one of the red fuzzy hats. It goes without saying, but, should you find one, DO NOT put it on."

"Our defense seems to be going well. I'll contact my Loyalty Officer once the action dies down and see how well his investigation is going."

I think I partially remember how I died now. It really was clever of him to kill me in order to gain the trust of the commies.

written by Gligar on May 20, 2013 18:57*Former laser barrel warehouse, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector*

"Karl" takes one of the offered clips - just one, as instructed - and then has a look at the slugthrower again. Everything else about it looks normal.

The communist says, "I would also offer a set of kevlar, but we are waiting on a shipment. In the meantime, let us return to the command centre."

And with that, he heads back through the shelves. "Karl" follows him.

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Roadway B, DIE Sector

The vehiclebot's operator seems to finally realise that there is another vehiclebot behind him, and accelerates to a steady speed. There is still the problem with him weaving around, though. It's a good thing that, though there are other vehiclebots around, they are keeping their distance.

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Looking back at the rest of his team, Kris-R can't help but feel proud as they join him. He feels so much like a leader! (Well, he is a leader. But this makes him feel like it.)

And since he is a leader, it is his responsibility to check on the status of his team. He asks if any are injured. "I took a laser to the reflec. I'll live."

"Got shot in the shoulder," another says. "Reflec doesn't work against slugs."

"Managed to avoid the slugs," the third replies. "Somehow."

Kris-R fills them in on Our Mutual Friend's orders concerning the fuzzy hats. "That's odd," Josh-R replies, "but if that's what The Computer wants, we'll do it." Kris-R adds that he plans to contact Cyrus-R for a status report. "Yeah, good idea."

I should probably remind everyone that the communists are still shooting. But as previously mentioned, enough have been de-hatted that they are suffering from heavy in-fighting. There are more than a few fuzzy hats that have been either damaged by laser fire or simply knocked off.

While Kris-R observes this, his thoughts turn back to Cyrus-R. He seems to be remembering things... and he seems to like it.

written by Lightning4 on May 20, 2013 22:37

I decide to try to take Speed-Y's advice, and start trying to overtake the other vehiclebot. If I can find means to do so.

written by Gligar on May 21, 2013 13:34

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Roadway B, DIE Sector

L4-O keeps watching the erratic vehiclebot for a chance to overtake.

After a moment, it has shifted over into the next lane. L4-O decides that now is a good time, and hits the accelerator.

Just as he is doing it, though, the vehiclebot starts to move back, and makes contact with the truckbot. But the truckbot is moving fast enough that it can simply push past.

written by Lightning4 on May 21, 2013 13:41

I keep on the accelerator, making sure I get past the strange driver and his vehiclebot.

written by Speeder on May 21, 2013 16:01

I stare at the driver, and if I can (and if he is not above my clearance...) I yell.

"YOU SON OF A BROKEN TANK!"

written by Gligar on May 21, 2013 18:20

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Roadway B, DIE Sector

L4-O keeps accelerating, even as the vehiclebot proceeds to steer into them. But the truckbot, plus The Crate and the entire team, are heavier than the other bot, so...

Speed-Y takes the opportunity to peer into the other bot, at its operator. It appears to be BLUE Clearance, and is staring straight ahead with a grin that is... kind of creepy, really.

Actually, now that he thinks about it, it almost looks like that face can't move.

Thankfully, it passes out of view as L4-O manages to get past. The junction is just up ahead.

written by Speeder on May 21, 2013 18:23

I look forward like if I had seen a ghost.

"What was that?"

written by Lightning4 on May 21, 2013 23:19

"What was what? I didn't see anything... too busy focusing on driving."

I try to recall where Speed-Y wanted me to go in this junction, if he stated so.

written by Gligar on May 22, 2013 09:14

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Roadway B, DIE Sector

Speed-Y snaps his head back, a little shocked. Did L4-O see that? Perhaps he has any ideas about what it could be?

Apparently, he did not see it. He says he was too busy driving to notice. Right now, he is trying to remember what to do with this junction. Well, Speed-Y didn't say anything about it with regards to going to HOL Sector, which means that it must have only been for the refuelling station. So the best course of action would be to get back onto the expressway.

written by Lightning4 on May 22, 2013 09:20

I proceed back onto the expressway as soon as we get to the junction.

I also make sure I don't get rear ended by that vehiclebot.

written by Speeder on May 22, 2013 13:51

"I saw the most creepy BLUE clone I ever saw... And you KNOW how creepy BLUE clones can be..."

written by Gligar on May 22, 2013 14:57

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Roadway B, DIE Sector

As they reach the junction, L4-O directs the truckbot to rejoin the expressway. As he does, the vehiclebot begins to accelerate again. It completely fails to hit the truckbot as it joins the expressway, leaving the vehiclebot to meander along around the junction.

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, DIE Sector

Speed-Y relays what he saw to L4-O - namely, the creepiest BLUE he ever saw. And given the BLUEs that L4-O has encountered... that must be pretty creepy.

Now, if Speed-Y remembers, they should have some distance to go on this expressway before switching to another.

written by Speeder on May 22, 2013 16:12

I take my maps again and think about our next steps on the route, and if anything important comes up I inform L4.

I do that in fact in a almost obsessive manner, like if paying attention to maps and the road will make me not remember the creepy BLUE

written by Gligar on May 22, 2013 20:05

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, DIE Sector

As if trying to forget the creepy BLUE (perhaps he should speak to the Happiness Officer?) Speed-Y pulls out his maps and examines them intently.

Let's see... from here, we need junction 38 onto Y86... then either junction 16 onto O8814(h) or 19 onto O218(c)... either of them will take them to... G428? That can't be right... how about R6624(z)?

No wait... according to this, Y86 is blocked between 17 and 18... if they plan to take O218(c) they'll have to figure an alternate route between the junctions.

From below, an explosion can be heard.

written by Speeder on May 22, 2013 20:47

The explosion startle me, making me throw papers all over the cabin.

Then I start to look around trying to see what is going on.

“Don’t stop, unless the road in front of us cave in...”

For everything else I think it is safer to not stop, for example if a huge radioactive zombie horde is on the front, we can just trample them.”

written by Lightning4 on May 22, 2013 23:16

“Okay...”

I look a little nervous, and reply to the remark about the BLUE.

“I can’t say that I’ve seen very many BLUEs, so I can’t really say I’ve met any creepy ones. But I’ll trust you that he was very creepy. Something wasn’t right with whoever that clone was...”

written by Gligar on May 23, 2013 07:22

Truckbot’s operator’s cabin, Expressway Y489, DIE Sector

The explosion causes Speed-Y to throw papers everywhere in surprise, and order L4-O to... just keep driving. Anything that happens, they can just run it over. And from what he’s saying, he’s half expecting that the explosion was a nuke.

That makes L4-O nervous. He decides to ignore it by focusing on the creepy BLUE - a slightly less dubious topic - or rather, the fact that he hasn’t met many BLUEs, meaning he hasn’t really met any that were creepy. He will just have to take Speed-Y’s word for it on this one.

Though he does admit that something was... off about that vehiclebot. Or perhaps the BLUE.

He continues driving as ordered. The road fails to collapse in front of him, something that Tech Services will probably be pleased to learn. They approach another junction.

written by Speeder on May 23, 2013 13:57

First I try to figure what the explosion was about, and if it puts us in danger.

If not, I try to explain our route, including the fact we might need a certain detour, while I attempt to get back all my papers without disrupting L4 driving.

written by Gligar on May 23, 2013 18:11

Truckbot’s operator’s cabin, Expressway Y489, DIE Sector

Speed-Y is still thinking about the explosion. What was it? It seemed close by, but the fact that it didn’t affect them means that it must have been small? (Or, of course, it could have been big and far away. But something that could sound like that...)

He puts that out of his mind and starts gathering up his papers again. After all, he needs to tell L4-O about the next steps of their route. He mentions a detour in order to circumvent a closed section of expressway on Y86... looks like he has decided to go via O218(c) after all. So how are they going to make the detour? I guess he’ll think of that closer to the time.

Speaking of which, that’s junction 35 up ahead. The truckbot is heading out of DIE Sector.

written by Cryoburner on May 23, 2013 19:29

I look around as I continue following through the shelves toward the command center.

“There wouldn’t happen to be a spare backpack around here, would there? A backpack could be useful for carrying things in... Preferably not one of those backpack/jumpsuit hybrids I’ve seen a clone or two wearing recently though.”

written by Lightning4 on May 23, 2013 21:50

I keep a lookout for any other odd happenings that might be... happening nearby.

written by Gligar on May 23, 2013 22:04

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

As the two return to the command centre, “Karl” inquires as to the availability of backpacks. “We’re waiting on a delivery,” is the reply. The computerists are interfering with our supply lines. We are far from our comrades, though that will soon change.”

The communist returns to his comrades, who gather round a table. “Now, is there any news from the attack on the computerist garrison?”

Truckbot’s operator’s cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIE Sector

As he drives, L4-O keeps an eye out for anything unusual... explosions, creepy clones, mutants, zombies, commies, commie mutant zombies... that sort of thing. It’s almost disappointing that the roadway turns out to be clear, even as far as junction 36.

written by Gligar on May 24, 2013 13:27

Truckbot’s operator’s cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DIE Sector

Junctions 35 and 36 pass without incident.

From the sound of things, Lucas-O has continued his conversation about keeping alert to avoid being terminated by commies, rogue bots, traitors, et cetera. John-O seems to agree, but points out that even alertness might not save you from a sudden attack by a powerful mutant, such as the ones they encountered during their first mission.

King-R interrupts. He wasn’t around at the time, so he doesn’t know what sort of mutants they are talking about, and has to be told about... Class F.

written by Gligar on May 24, 2013 19:55

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DID Sector

King-R goes kind of pale. Some of the descriptions given by John-O – especially the description of someclone's brain leaking out of their ears as a sticky liquid mess – might well be too much for him. "Is... is there any way that they could be made to not do that?" he wonders.

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

It looks like the battle might be winding down... there are few hatted communists remaining, and they are unable to affect the loyal clones due to the recently-dehatted clones attacking them.

From one of the dead communists, a voice can be heard, demanding a status report.

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

If Kris-R were here instead of fighting the commies, he would know that the voice belongs to a communist in the command centre. He is talking on a Com 1, trying to ascertain how the attack is going.

written by Speeder on May 24, 2013 20:16⁸³⁷

I hear the conversation again, and yell enough to win against the wind.

"John, you did NOT needed to remind me of the existance of such clones... Now I will have to remember all those jingles again...Although that is not much hard..."

In fact, suddenly Speed-Y get really happy and starts to sing one of his favourite jingles about Infrared B3, the one you can already hear when you are a junior citizen.

written by Kristos on May 24, 2013 21:34

If it is nearby I grab the Com 1 and respond in a gruff voice: "Boris reporting, sir. Your friend here is dead and some of the slugthrowers seem to be malfunctioning... but we managed to secure the complex and are proceeding with the next stage of our, of course, glorious plans."

written by Lightning4 on May 24, 2013 21:54

I just keep driving for now, listening to the conversation the other clones are having.

Though I do add:

"I wonder if, and how many Class F mutants are loyal..."

written by Gligar on May 25, 2013 09:45

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, on the edge of DID Sector

Speed-Y did not want to be reminded of the existence of Class F mutants... now he'll have to start remembering the advertising jingles again!

Though admittedly, that is neither hard to do nor a bad thing, since those jingles are designed to induce happy thoughts in loyal citizens. Especially the one about B3 Plain... you know the one, you've only been hearing it all the time since you were a Junior Citizen, after all... see, Speed-Y's singing it right now.

(Though it makes me wonder... perhaps it's not just the jingle that does it...)

Jam-Y finds it too catchy to ignore, and decides to sing along. He glares at other clones in the back, and they also join in.

L4-O doesn't join in just yet as he is concentrating on driving. But he does voice his thoughts. It turns out he is wondering if any Class F mutants are loyal... and how many are loyal.

Casting his mind back, he does recall that one of the ones they encountered seemed to be, at the very least, non-hostile towards them. Perhaps he was loyal?

The truckbot continues. It is nearing junction 37.

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R looks in the direction of the voice, and spots the dead communist. He goes over and, checking the body, discovers the Com 1 that is the source of the voice. He decides to reply, assuming the role of "Boris", saying that the mission was a success, though they are having problems with faulty slugthrowers, and some of them are dead. "Excellent news!" replies the communist on the other side. "We can proceed with Step Three as soon as the next shipment arrives!"

There is a sudden silence. Everyone seems to have stopped fighting.

The reason should be clear: there are no remaining communists.

One of the de-hatted clones – a large individual – taps Kris-R on the shoulder and tells him, "Hey, that's a good impression of me there! And how did you know that they assigned me the name Boris?"

The voice is almost identical to Kris-R's impersonation.

written by Gligar on May 25, 2013 17:51

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

The communist with the Com 1 looks over at everyone else. "I have good news! Boris reports that the attack on the computerist garrison has succeeded! We should have no obstacles to spreading our influence! Well, except for the slugthrowers... he mentions that they are having faulty slugthrowers as well... perhaps Karl was right to warn us."

"Indeed," another replies. "Regrettable that we can't check them all."

⁸³⁷ SPEEDER: (OOC: speed-Y grumbles and wonder what happened to his last post, that clearly do not got posted at all)

written by Lightning4 on May 26, 2013 03:00

Since I don't recall this junction ever being mentioned, I simply continue driving through it.

written by Cryoburner on May 26, 2013 04:46

Yes, this is excellent news! Even with faulty slugthrowers, the computerist resistance didn't stand a chance. Maybe now, we can get that shipment of backpacks that our continued success may hinge upon."

written by Speeder on May 26, 2013 08:23

I check if I collected all my maps again, and double check the path.

"Class F mutants, by definition are traitors... Or are considered traitors, but probably some of them might display one-sided loyalty toward us.

written by Gligar on May 26, 2013 10:12

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" comments that, since the strike team (supposedly) had little trouble with the "resistance" despite the (apparent) slugthrower problems. He adds that maybe the backpack shipment can now get through.

"More importantly," replies a communist, "we can get new supplies of weapons to better clean out the resistance. And don't forget, we are still waiting for the supplies for Operation Glorious Compnode Liberation!"

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, DID Sector

L4-O keeps driving through the junction. They don't need this one, right?

Speed-Y, having finished with picking up his maps again, checks them. That's right... they need the next junction.

He adds that, by definition, Class F mutants are traitors (recall that anything over a Class C is considered too powerful, or too dangerous, to register). Any loyalty among the Class Fs must therefore be one-sided...

Speaking of Junction 38... here it is.

written by Lightning4 on May 26, 2013 11:59

I take whatever path leads me onto Y86, keeping an eye out for anything out of the ordinary, or any obstructions in the truckbot's path.

written by Gligar on May 26, 2013 16:58

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y489, DID Sector

L4-O directs the truckbot onto the junction to take them to Y86.

As he does, he notices an autocar take an interest in them. It follows them through the junction, and starts tailing them as they join Y86 proper.

written by Speeder on May 26, 2013 17:33

I try to pay attention to see if the car is really tailing or not.

If it is, I look for any signal that the car is of a loyal clone or something, if I don't find a sign of that, I start shooting the car tires with the revolver.

written by Kristos on May 26, 2013 22:17

"Oh, wow! I had no idea. I am Kris-R, team leader of Troubleshooter Team Sigma of JHT sector. My loyalty officer suggested my identity to be 'Boris' during a surprise undercover improvisation in the laser barrel factory. Can you give me a few details: Where were you assigned before the communists captured you? How did they capture and subject you to the hatting? Do you know any of their plans?"

I turn to my more recent team. "Good work, everyclone. I suppose we should look to the armed forces to find out what to do next." As I wait for "the real Boris's" response, I pick up an undamaged hat (if I can find one) and inspect it.

I look around for any armed forces personnel.

written by Lightning4 on May 26, 2013 22:43

I drive carefully, trying to dodge any potential shots if it comes to that. If no shots happen yet, I pay some more attention to road signs since the directions here seem to be a little fuzzy.

written by Gligar on May 27, 2013 11:43

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, DID Sector

Speed-Y watches the autocar for a moment, wondering if they are really tailing... and whether they're going to attack.

Well, he will probably be pleased to know that, while the occupants of the autocar don't seem to be attacking, they do seem to be following them. And they seem interested in The Crate.

Speed-Y keeps watching. Eventually, he spots a CPU Cargo Assessors logo on the front of the vehiclebot.

Meanwhile, L4-O concentrates on driving. He notices a nearby sign indicate that the next junction is numbered 12, and could take them into DJD Sector if they wished.

Back of the truckbot, Expressway Y86, DID Sector

"CPU Cargo Assessors," notes Lucas-O. "Anyone know anything about them?"

"Other than that they probably assess cargo?" asks John-O. "Not much."

Jam-Y remembers that he's seen messages from them before. From what he's seen, Cargo Assessors like to check what sort of vehiclebot is being used to transport what cargo, and ensure that their statistics match up with whatever CPU Mandate they're focusing on this weekcycle. Sometimes, they're ensuring that truckbots are filled appropriately; other times, they want to keep a certain amount of space free for mandate reasons. Other times, it's almost as if they can't find anything right about cargo transport.

[1400]

He lets everyone know. "Oh," Lucas-O says. "Just normal CPU then."

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R obviously didn't know that there was a real "Boris"...

He introduces himself and explains that his loyalty officer came up with the name as part of an improvised deception before asking for a few details. "Well, I'm Ken-R-JHY-1, with the JHY Pulverisers. You know, the Funball team? We were practicing on the pitch, and... well, let's just say that there were traitors on the team. From what I remember, they let the commies in when they attacked. I tried to fight, but they pinned me down, and the next thing I know, I'm wearing a hat!"

While he's saying that, Kris-R looks around for an intact hat. There's one... He picks it up...

"All I remember is feeling really dizzy when they put it on me, and then I'm suddenly hearing... no don't touch it! They make you dizzy when you touch them!"

written by Lightning4 on May 27, 2013 13:01

I continue driving then. If I overheard the conversation coming from the back of the truckbot, I remark:

"Not much to worry about then, eh? Well, unless they decide to try inspecting our cargo... since we don't even know what we're transporting, I really doubt we're supposed to let them know either!"

written by Speeder on May 27, 2013 13:53

Upon seeing the CPU, I see if I have any documentation to show to them explaining that the cargo is secret.

If not, I take those papers explaining what to do when the cargo contents are found out... Maybe CPU would enjoy testing the protocols?

written by Gligar on May 27, 2013 15:15

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, DID Sector

On hearing the conversation, L4-O comments that they shouldn't have anything to worry about from the autocar.

Unless, of course, the occupants want to inspect their cargo? After all, they don't even know what they're transporting! And he's certain that if they don't know, the inspectors shouldn't know either.

Speed-Y checks his paperwork. Hmm... directions to HOL Sector, more directions, even more, authorisation to co-operate with PLC, emergency protocols... aha! There's an Authorisation to Transport Secured Cargo Form here. The box for "Cargo Manifest" has been entirely redacted, and only reads, "Deleted for Security Reasons". Below it is a matrix barcode.

If that doesn't indicate that the cargo is secret, perhaps CPU would like to test the emergency protocols?

The truckbot continues past junction 12. The CPU autocar continues to follow them.

"The autocar indicates that the occupants of the vehiclebot are concerned that we might be an unscheduled cargo transfer," the truckbot reveals. "And, by some mandate or other, all unscheduled transfers must be inspected. I should have pulled off at the junction, but I have explained that I cannot due to the sensitive nature of our cargo. The autocar is relaying."

written by Speeder on May 27, 2013 16:00

"L4, please slow down a bit, and pair ourselves with the autocar, I will show the paper in the window."

With one hand I prepare to show the paper, the other I hold a laser pistol, but concealed, just in case I have to really shoot them.

written by Lightning4 on May 27, 2013 22:00

"Roger."

I slow down a little bit., and keep a steady pace after doing so.

written by Gligar on May 27, 2013 22:14

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, DID Sector

Speed-Y orders L4-O to slow the truckbot down a little and allow the autocar to pull alongside as he wants to show them this form. Either that or shoot them, whichever works.

L4-O complies. The occupants of the autocar also comply, and the autocar co-operates with them. (Or maybe it's the other way round? Nah.)

It pulls alongside, and a voice is heard over an external loudspeaker. "Unscheduled traffic, you are directed to submit for inspection."

Speed-Y shows the form, putting it in his window so they can see it. Seemingly as a result, one of the autocar's windows rolls down, and someone holds out a PDC, seemingly scanning the form. "I see," says the unidentified clone on the loudspeaker. "We'll need to verify this. Don't go anywhere."

written by Lightning4 on May 28, 2013 04:52

I maintain a steady speed compared to the autocar, though I keep an eye on the road ahead for any potential obstructions.

"Should be good for a bit, I don't think we need to leave this expressway yet."

written by Speeder on May 28, 2013 05:36

I put the form back, and wait for the Autocar people finish their stuff....

Hidden pistol still in hand though.

written by Gligar on May 28, 2013 12:45

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, DID Sector

L4-O keeps their speed nice and steady. There doesn't appear to be anything much up ahead... just a couple of cyclebots, and their operators are ignoring them.

He adds that they should be okay for a bit. After all, they haven't reached the point where the need to exit the expressway.

Speed-Y puts his form away, and waits. He keeps his laser pistol ready, just in case...

Soon, the loudspeaker comes alive again. "We've verified your form, and are sat..."

ZAP.

A laser suddenly shines behind them, aiming at the autocar's rear window. It strikes and passes through, hitting one of the occupants. That... kind of looks terminal. Heads aren't supposed to just explode like that.

written by Lightning4 on May 28, 2013 13:08

"Great, looks like more action."

I try to swerve a little to avoid any potential shots coming at our truckbot.

If I can, I try to glance at where the shot came from in the mirrors (if the truckbot has any).

written by Speeder on May 28, 2013 14:21

I immediately use the pistol I already have in hand to return fire. Although the first shot I make on purpose to miss, so I can take a look on what I am shooting at, if it looks like an enemy, I aim better the next ones.

written by Gligar on May 28, 2013 15:50

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, DID Sector

As ever, L4-O concentrates on driving. He starts swerving the truckbot in an attempt to dodge incoming fire, while at the same time looking in the mirrors to see where the laser blast came from. It turns out that the answer to that one is very simple: a forkbot, crammed with clones, is approaching behind them. Fast.

Seem familiar to anyone?

I might be familiar to Speed-Y, but right now he is more interested in returning fire than finding anything familiar. See, he already has a laser pistol ready!

His first shot misses, though, and he has the opportunity to look at the forkbot a little closer. It doesn't look to be a C-3 model like Nukabot, so there's that. Also notable is the fact that it seems to have sturdier tyres.

Speed-Y fires a couple of times more, and, since he is actually aiming this time, manages to hit one of the occupants just as they fire on the autocar again. Said occupant loses her grip and falls to the roadway.

Meanwhile the others seem to have woken up, and are also firing. Lucas-O manages to miss with his shot, unlike Jam-Y, who manages to bust one of the forkbot's headlights.

The autocar looks to be having trouble with all this, and seems to be losing control.

written by Speeder on May 28, 2013 15:57

I scream to the autocar people.

"Stay steady damnit! Or slam your brakes really hard now!"

I try to shoot the forkbot driver.

"Do not attempt to shoot its tires, it probably has the standard tires for higher clearance forkbots, those are completely solid, you cannot puncture them!"

written by Kristos on May 28, 2013 21:06⁸³⁸

I immediately drop the hat and take note of how I feel.

written by Gligar on May 28, 2013 22:12

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, DID Sector

Speed-Y yells to the CPU clones to get that autocar under control. Either that, or just hit the brakes.

It seems that they picked the latter. The autocar falls off behind as Speed-Y lines up a shot at the forkbot's driver.

He somehow manages to miss and hits one of the others. As with the first, he loses his grip and falls off, onto the roadway.

Undeterred, he prepares another shot. As he does, he warns people about the forkbot's tyres: they are most likely the solid kind and cannot be punctured.

Either John-O heard him or he was not shooting at them anyway. Instead, he was shooting at the driver, and manages to blast a hole through the driver's hand.

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Startled by the sudden dizziness, Kris-R drops the hat. He notes as he does that the dizziness fades.

"Felling better?" Ken-R asks. "Did that brief exposure do anything to you?"

Kris-R thinks. He doesn't feel any different now that the dizziness has gone.

written by Speeder on May 28, 2013 22:28

"L4, go faster! I think a forkbot cannot keep up with us."

I shoot until I run out of ammo.

I consider throwing a squealing barrel on them, but I remember my own orders to not use improvised explosives this mission, and settle to just detach the barrel and store it safely with me.

Instead of taking my time to load another barrel, I just grab the revolver and continue shooting.

written by Gligar on May 29, 2013 12:57

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, DID Sector

Speed-Y orders L4-O to accelerate. He's guessing that the forkbot can't keep up with a truckbot at top speed.

⁸³⁸ KRISTOS: (OOC: It's mine! My very own. Myyyy precciousssssssss.)

[1402]

He continues shooting, getting off another two shots before depleting the barrel. Both of them strike the driver, but do little or no damage.

He briefly contemplates overstressing the barrel and using it as a grenade, but decides against it. As you'll recall, he ordered everyone not to use improvised explosives, and yes, that includes overstressed laser barrels.

Luckily, he has other weapons with him, such as his "revolver", meaning that he can simply switch over, and not need to reload his laser pistol. He starts firing, getting off another two shots. Both shots hit clones on the forkbot, though they manage to keep their position.

written by Speeder on May 29, 2013 13:26

"Die already damnit!"

Instead of wasting all my ammo, I aim carefully and see if I can hit the eyes, or between them, of the driver.

If he is some sort of mutant or robot and survives this, at least he won't see properly...

written by Gligar on May 29, 2013 18:27

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, DID Sector

Speed-Y continues to shoot. He takes his time though; he doesn't want to waste his slugs on some random traitor on an expressway.

It pays off: his slug hits the driver's left eye. He suddenly jerks back, yanking the wheel round and causing the forkbot to swerve across the roadway and into the central barrier, where the forkbot's forks slice right into the synthcrete, and the rest of the traitors lose their grip on the forkbot...

End result, there are a few clones back there who look to be losing in the life department.

written by Speeder on May 29, 2013 18:32

I grin, and calmly reload my weapons and stash the used barrel properly (so it does not explode randomly, and later I can trade it in, or use it was explosive if really needed).

"Hey L4, I am not good at shooting as you are, but I will get there!"

written by Kristos on May 29, 2013 22:13

"I'm not sure. I feel fine now. Does that only happen from skin contact? Maybe we can bag it up. Does anybody have a plastic bag?"

I send a message to Cyrus-R: "We are witnessing many slugthrower malfunctions but the fuzzy hats are working perfectly. Every computerist clone, once hatted, becomes

written by Speeder on May 29, 2013 18:34

Do gligar still tally kill counts? I wonder who is the biggest murderer so far 😊 (I remember last count L4 had 4 or 5 times the second place...)

written by Gligar on May 29, 2013 19:09

Are you thinking of this page? 😊

written by Speeder on May 29, 2013 20:26

Yes!

There is a typo (it is written The copmuter)

And the clone draggers are listed twice (As unammed clone draggers, and with their own names)

written by Kristos on May 29, 2013 21:54

One day L4 will have as many kills as Headgrabber!

I am about to move across the U.S.A. and I don't know how long it will take me to get settled in and get internet, or how often I will be able to use the internet.

perfectly obedient to our glorious cause. Have there been any alterations to Step Three?"

written by Lightning4 on May 30, 2013 02:39

I continue swerving a little, if some shots try to hit us. I try to pull ahead a little bit too, by command of Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on May 30, 2013 17:24

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, DID Sector

Now that the forkbot is taken care of, Speed-Y takes the time to reload his weapons, nice and calmly: first, he fits a nice new YELLOW laser barrel to his pistol, then he reloads his "revolver", taking him back up to six shots.

He remarks that he may not be as good as L4-O, but he's getting there.

L4-O doesn't reply. He is still keeping up the swerving, though he now accelerates as well, as ordered (though a little late to be of use). He notes that they are coming up on junction 14.

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R replies that he is feeling fine now. Perhaps the dizziness only happens from skin contact?

"Yes, that was what I was trying to say," Ken-R replies. "It gets worse with time. Eventually, you start thinking like them."

Kris-R wonders if they could use a plastic bag or something. Does anyone have one?

"I have," Josh-R offers. "We could bag it up." He proceeds to turn his bag - a standard IntSec evidence bag - inside out and use it to pick up the hat, turning the bag the right way out in the process. "There we go. And no dizziness!"

That done, Kris-R fires off a message to "Boris" (no, not Ken-R) reinforcing the "slugthrower malfunctions" but praising the fuzzy hats, and asking about Step Three.

written by Speeder on May 30, 2013 17:55

I take my papers again, and read to L4 whatever relevant information related to Junction 14, then I resume looking backwards to see if our enemies are really dead and not chasing us.

written by Cryoburner on May 30, 2013 21:52

"A glorious message!"

I check my glorious message, and send a reply.

My Paranoia activity may not change at all, or it might drastically decrease... :O

written by Lightning4 on May 30, 2013 05:24

I just need to figure out how to kill things with the truckbot, then I'm set.

[1403]

[Step three? You must mean the backpacks? It sounds like their shipment may be coming through soon. Also maybe weapons.]

written by Gligar on May 30, 2013 22:15

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, on the edge of DID Sector

Junction 14... is that important?

Speed-Y seems to think so. He pulls out his papers again and checks. Hmm... access to DHD Sector... probably a convenient rest area given the proximity of a PLC hub to the junction. There's a cloning station nearby too. But nothing about getting to HOL Sector, and nothing about O8814(h). Or the closed section of expressway, for that matter. That's not in this sector, it seems.

He tells this to L4-O.

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" (not "Boris"... somehow the previous message was tampered with) acknowledges the message in his usual fashion: by announcing it out loud. He sends a quick response involving his precious backpacks.

A communist looks at him. "Perhaps you could share this glorious message? It might be important."

written by Cryoburner on May 30, 2013 23:48

"Ah, yes! A comrade was just relaying information that our progress was progressing progressively. Also, they want backpacks."

written by Lightning4 on May 31, 2013 06:07

"Hmm. Doesn't sound like it'll get us closer to where we need to go... guess we'll just keep on this expressway, unless you want to take a detour?"

I look into the mirrors. If I notice that the forkbot is now no longer a threat, I slow down and stop swerving.

"Oh, looks like you got them. Good shooting indeed, sir."

written by Gligar on May 31, 2013 12:43

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" reveals that "a comrade" has reported... something... and that they want backpacks. "Perhaps there are more details? What sort of progress are they making? And tell them to wait until we actually get the backpacks. These aren't shoddily made Computerist backpacks that can only store things, after all!"

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, on the edge of DID Sector

L4-O suggests that, unless they want to take a detour, they should stay on this expressway. The junction doesn't seem to lead where they want to go.

He then notices that the forkbot has been dealt with and stops with the swerving he's been doing. It's no longer needed, after all.

They pass through the junction without incident.

written by Gligar on May 31, 2013 19:00

Outer fence, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

As everyone recovers from the recent battle, it becomes apparent that few of the Armed Forces personnel are present.

The reason for that becomes clear when one, a GREEN, appears from the main building. "Good work, everyone!" he says. "Wait... is it me are are there more of you than there were before?"

Josh-R explains. "There are, sir. It looks like they were being controlled against their will by these hats." He hold up the evidence bag. "The Computer asked for a sample for study."

"I see. Well, let's get you all back inside. And... it looks like we'll need the loyalty tests..."

written by Lightning4 on May 31, 2013 22:42

I continue driving normally now, occasionally glancing in the mirrors or around the area ahead for any other potential threats.

written by Gligar on Jun 01, 2013 13:18

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, on the edge of DIC Sector

With not much left to do now that the forkbot has been dealt with, L4-O continues driving, ever on the lookout for undesirables.

It would help, of course, if there were undesirables to look for. Of course, as Our Mutual Friend is always saying, there are always undesirables, even if you can't see them.

And L4-O can't see any right now.

He continues to not see any even as the truckbot reaches Junction 16.

written by Speeder on Jun 01, 2013 17:16

I read to L4 whatever is relevant regarding Junction 16.

Then I seek where is the next junction we are to take anyway, to stop reading about junctions every junction...

"That was intense. I hope the CPU people are alright..."

No, not really... CPU people can go to HEL"

written by Gligar on Jun 01, 2013 19:38

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, on the edge of DIC Sector

Speed-Y checks his notes, and tells L4-O that this is the junction they should take if they want to use O8814(h), which, as he should remember, is one of the ways to proceed. The other, O218(c), can be accessed through Junction 19, but they'd have to negotiate the closed section of expressway past junction 17.

Either way would lead to R6624(z) (via Junction 6 or 22, respectively). G428 is also available (junction 9 or 16), but, you know, GREEN. And from there... they'd have to go to another dome, it seems.

Speed-Y hopes that the CPU people are alright...

...wait, no he doesn't. He hates CPU, it seems.

That is, he hates a service firm set up by The Computer. Does that mean that he hates more things that The Computer set up? Perhaps he is hiding something that Internal Security would like to hear about? Or perhaps Jam-Y?

written by Lightning4 on Jun 01, 2013 23:34

"Well, looks like we have to either leave at 16 or 17. Unless we just go off-roading past the closed section..."

I start slowing down a little bit so we have more time to decide our course of action, since the closed section is coming up soon.

written by Gligar on Jun 02, 2013 11:23

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, on the edge of DIC Sector

L4-O summarises: they will be turning off, there's no argument there. It'll either be Junction 16, Junction 17... or they could go off-road.

He slows the truckbot. If they want to take Junction 16... well, it's right here.... they should probably turn off.

If they want 17, it's up ahead.

If they want to go off-road... wait, can they go off-road? Looking past the junction, it can be seen that barriers have been erected. Apparently, some construction work is happening either side of the roadway.

written by Speeder on Jun 02, 2013 15:54

I think a bit.

"We will off-road! I doubt anyone will expect that, so we will only have to dodge construction machines instead of bullets!"

written by Gligar on Jun 02, 2013 18:49

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, DIC Sector

Speed-Y makes the decision that they should go off-road, stating that it is the last thing that anyone would expect. That, and they won't have to deal with traitors shooting at them, only construction machines.

Presumably, then, he is intent on getting to Junction 19, and Roadway O218(c).

In the time it takes him to say that, Junction 16 passes. It's now too late to use it.

Mess hall, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

An in the time it has taken Team Epsilon to decide that, one half of Team Sigma has been led back to a mess hall in the garrison along with the rest of the survivors. Along the way, the de-hatted communists were led off to another area, where they are presumably having their loyalty tested.

The GREEN briefing officer has returned and seems to be ready to make an announcement. Kris-R can easily figure this out by the way that a YELLOW sergeant is saying, "Alright, listen up! We're about to continue your briefing!" rather loudly.

written by Kristos on Jun 02, 2013 20:46

I listen to the announcement.⁸³⁹

written by Lightning4 on Jun 02, 2013 23:30

I start looking for ways of jumping off the expressway, and also look for a safe path through the construction.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 03, 2013 00:39

"Hmm... more details? Ah yes, comrade Boris mentioned something about hats, though the details were a bit fuzzy."

I stare upward at a light fixture for a few seconds.

"Oh yes, and he mentioned having a number of slughtrowers malfunction, though I believe we were already aware of that possibility, and it didn't seem to affect their progress too significantly.

written by Gligar on Jun 03, 2013 12:51

Mess hall, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

The GREEN continues - well, more like he begins - the briefing by saying, "Well done, citizens! The Computer will be proud of you.

"Now, I'm sure some of you will have something interesting to say about what just happened, but before we go into that, let me tell you about our planned assault on their garrison - the laser barrel factory.

"As some of you may have been aware, the factory was recently sabotaged. It appears that they used the sabotaged to get agents into the sector, under the guise of repairclones."

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, DIC Sector

L4-O starts looking for a way off the expressway, but ends up draeing a blank.

Well, unless you count Junction 17... which is right here.

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" offers more details... by basically just repeating the message in a vague way.

"Yes, we know that already," replies the communist. "So are you saying that Boris failed to give you any details? Or... perhaps you are lying?"

⁸³⁹ KRISTOS: (OOC: Successfully moved, and now have internet.)

written by Cryoburner on Jun 03, 2013 13:26

"Ah, let me see here..."

I check my PDC again to see if there were any details I had missed.

"Ah yes, he was simply relaying information that they were distributing hats to former computerists, which they found to be SIMPLY FABULOUS, causing them to join our glorious cause. He also asked about "Step Three", which I believe is the one where they get their backpacks. I asked if this was correct, and didn't yet get a response, so I am assuming that it was."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 03, 2013 13:56

I slow down further and start seeing if I can see ways around or through the construction, maybe ones using junction 17.

If I see a way, I change course towards it. Either way, since it seems we don't have much choice, I take Junction 17 if I find no such path.

written by Speeder on Jun 03, 2013 13:58

I also look around trying to help L4.

written by Gligar on Jun 03, 2013 16:25

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" checks his message again, and tells the communists that "Boris" was also distributing the hats, which did an excellent job of converting computerists. There is also the request about Step Three. Since he did not receive a reply, "Karl" is assuming that it has something to do with the one thing on his mind right now: backpacks.

"Partly," a communist admits. "As we said, they are not your computerist thing-to-carry-things-in sort of backpack. They contain explosives, and they will be taken to the compnode!"

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, DIC Sector

L4-O starts looking at the junction approaches. From what he can see, the fences extend for some distance. But there appears to be an opening, marked "Works Access Only" near to the junction.

He navigates on to the junction.

Speed-Y notices something else: there are no visible clones around the Works Access.

written by Speeder on Jun 03, 2013 22:42

I point the work access area to L4.

I also mention that there are no clones there, this is great, or horrible... Depends on the reason that they are not there.

written by Kristos on Jun 03, 2013 23:55

Hmm... but we still are not sure how they pulled off the sabotage. Anyway, the malfunctioning barrels seems inconsequential now, but the modified barrel we found could be important. I hope Cyrus-R was able to retrieve it. It might have been destroyed in the fan incident. Details for later. Now- now we fight.

I continue listening.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 04, 2013 00:08

I start directing my path until we go through the work access area, and keep a lookout for anything or anyone that would not like us being in the work area.

written by Gligar on Jun 04, 2013 13:40

Truckbot's operator's cabin, Expressway Y86, DIC Sector

Speed-Y points out that there are no clones around the works access. That's either a good thing or a bad thing, depending on why the clones are missing.

L4-O drives. As if he had anything else to do. He heads towards the Works Access.

Works Access, off Expressway Y86, DIC Sector

As the truckbot leaves the paved road, it instantly becomes apparent that the surface is not exactly even. But L4-O continues on.

He can't help but notice that, despite the lack of clones, there is an abundance of tools.

Mess hall, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

The GREEN continues. "The repairclones, as you can probably guess, then proceeded to take control of the factory, which they have since fortified. They have also taken control of PLC Central and the R&D labs. The compnode is still ours, so there is that.

"I recall someone saying something about the hats they wear? Does anyone have anything to say about them before we continue?"

written by Speeder on Jun 04, 2013 14:17

I keep alert for any enemies... Or anything dangerous in the construction site.

written by Gligar on Jun 04, 2013 18:27

Construction site, off Expressway Y86, DIC Sector

As the truckbot continues, Speed-Y keeps a lookout.

Soon, he spots something amidst a pile of tools: a jackobot. It seems to be carrying some sort of package.

written by Speeder on Jun 04, 2013 18:40

I point the bot to L4 and ask him to avoid it.

But I keep a eye on it anyway, trying to identify the package, I also observe if there is any other things there.

And I mull on how it was that the mission call was on the monitor office thing...

written by Cryoburner on Jun 04, 2013 19:06

“Oh wow... that sounds like it would be super-useful if someone at the comnode wanted to blow something up. Not so much so if they just wanted to carry around a bunch of paper and stuff though.”

written by Gligar on Jun 04, 2013 22:11

Construction site, off Expressway Y86, DIC Sector

Speed-Y points out the jackobot to L4-O, and tells him to avoid it.

Good luck with that. Why? Well, it's simple: as soon as he is done saying it, the jackobot powers up and starts trundling towards the truckbot.

This doesn't go unnoticed in the back, as the clones back there ready weapons.

It does give Speed-Y the chance to look at the package a little closer. He notices that the package is a box with a couple of visible LEDs. One is lit, and is RED. The other is unlit.

The jackobot seems to be the only thing moving (except for the truckbot) right now. Strange.

But that is not the only strange thing... there is still the matter of the mission alert. Why did it appear in the Station Monitor's office? It's being there implies that someone knew they would visit... the Station Monitor himself, perhaps? But still, why would he have it?

Well, I guess his job is to gather information.

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

“Kat!” decides that such backpacks would be useful for blowing something up at the comnode. “That's the idea,” the communist replies. “We get the backpacks to the comnode, then we blow them up.”

written by Speeder on Jun 04, 2013 22:33

I shout “ALRIGHT, SINCE THE THING ALREADY HAS A EXPLOSIVE, YOU ARE CLEARED TO EXPLODE IT!”

I start to shoot its box...

And hope the explosive is not strong enough to take us out from this far...

written by Lightning4 on Jun 05, 2013 00:42

I try to see where the jackobot is relative to the truckbot. If it is passing, and behind us, I floor it.

written by Kristos on Jun 05, 2013 01:36

I expect “the real Boris” to give explanation, but if nobody speaks up (or gives all the details), I say “The hats have a dizzying influence on contact, eventually gaining access to the host's mind and generally infusing them with communist sentiments- though the effect only holds as long as skin contact is maintained.”

I send a message to Cyrus-R: “Comrade?”

written by Gligar on Jun 05, 2013 13:27

Construction site, off Expressway Y86, DIC Sector

To Speed-Y, a box with a couple of LEDs can only be one thing: a bomb. And since it is already here, it must be okay to explode it... right?

Right. Or at least, Speed-Y seems to think so.

He gives the all-clear to explode it, and starts shooting. He is joined by the others in the back, who add their laser pistols to his “revolver”. In the end, everyone (except L4-O, who is driving) gets off a shot, with everyone except John-O scoring a hit. The combined onslaught causes the box to start beeping, and the other LED to blink. The jackobot itself takes a hit to its sensor dome, and drops the box, trundling around erratically, passing the truckbot...

L4-O floors it. As the truckbot accelerates, the box beeps faster and faster before finally exploding behind it. The jackobot is caught in the explosion, falls backwards onto its back, and is still.

Mess hall, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

Kris-R seems to want Ken-R to explain about the fuzzy heat, but he realises that Ken-R isn't here (perhaps he is still having his loyalty tested), and decides to explain about the hats himself. “Interesting,” the GREEN replies. “Perhaps we can obtain samples for testing -”

“We have one, sir,” Josh-R interjects. “Kris-R told us that The Computer wants one recovered.”

“I see... Kris-R?” the GREEN replies. “One of the Troubleshooters?”

“Yes, sir.”

“In that case, he should make sure that it gets to debriefing. In the meantime, let's talk about our plan.”

As the GREEN continues, explaining that the teams will be sent to different targets, Josh-R offers the bag containing the fuzzy hat to Kris-R, who has pulled out his PDC, trying to send a message.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 05, 2013 13:59

I maintain this speed until we are clearly safe from the explosion, then I slow down adequately so we have time to assess and address any other potential threats.

“That was weird. It's almost as if someone knew we were going to pass through this construction zone... jackobots don't normally carry around bombs...”

written by Speeder on Jun 05, 2013 14:26

I stare forward for a while.

“What was that?”

This is getting more dangerous that I expected...

Clearly, someone knows everything that I will decide beforehand, this is very troublesome.

I remember that it was my decision too, to take a peek into station monitor office."

written by Cryoburner on Jun 05, 2013 14:46

"I see... that would if fact be glorious, wouldn't it? Wouldn't one have to get past the compnode's defenses first though? What are the plans for that?"

If I receive a message on my PDC, I take a moment to answer it.

written by Gligar on Jun 05, 2013 18:18

Construction site, off Expressway Y86, DIC Sector

L4-O keeps up the pace, at least until he notices that the explosion has finished being... well, explodey. (Yes, that's a word, according to The Computer's Approved Dictionary of Approved Words. What do you mean you haven't read the edition that was released five minutecycles ago?) He then proceeds to slow down, back to the point where the uneven ground doesn't make their brains bounce around in their skulls.

The bomb, he points out, was weird. Almost as if someone knew that they would be coming through this way... jackobots don't normally carry bombs, after all.

Speed-Y thinks that things are getting more dangerous. Things seem to be proceeding as if someone knows what he will be doing before he does! And this isn't the first time this has happened; recall, if you will, that it was Speed-Y's decision to look inside the Station Monitor's office, and he found the Mission Alert inside there. It was as if someone knew that he would look in there.

The truckbot continues. It is now level with the construction work happening on the expressway.

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl" points out that blowing up the compnode would be glorious, but there may be a problem with getting past the defences. Perhaps there is a plan?

"Indeed there is," he is told. "It involves repairs, which are scheduled to take place any moment now."

"Karl" would probably be responding if it weren't for the fact that his PDC just vibrated at him. Checking it, he finds that it is "Boris" attracting his attention.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 06, 2013 00:11

I keep pace, glancing around occasionally as I am able for any other threats. I also keep an eye on anything that could obstruct our continued forward driving.

written by Speeder on Jun 06, 2013 14:19

I load my gun...

And keep wondering what the HEL just happened.

Sometimes it is like destiny DIG us into a HOL

written by Gligar on Jun 06, 2013 17:54

Construction site, off Expressway Y86, DIC Sector

While Speed-Y continues his obsession with making sure that his primary weapon is 100% loaded at all times, L4-O keeps a lookout for anything else that might obstruct their path. There's a deactivated forkbot, but that's easy enough to drive around.

Oh, and threats... looks clear for now.

Speed-Y is still confused at what just happened. So confused, in fact, that his mind cannot help but make an awful⁸⁴⁰ pun...

The construction site finally ends at another fence, with a Works Access leading to another roadway. It seems to be Junction 18.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 07, 2013 00:26

I drive in the direction of the Works Access, attempting to merge back onto Junction 18 so we can get back on Y86.

written by Gligar on Jun 07, 2013 09:57

Construction site, off Expressway Y86, DIC Sector

Though he is still cautious of... well, everything, L4-O continues driving. He reaches the Works Access, and exits to Junction 18.

Junction 18, Expressway Y86, DIC Sector

Once there, he discovers that there is a queue to enter the expressway here; seemingly, traffic calming measures are being used to ensure that expressway speeds are kept high. This of course means that queues are moved from the expressway to the junctions... but rest assured, citizen, that this has been found to decrease journey times by as much as 1%! Don't you feel better knowing that you'll arrive at your destination one minutecycle earlier than you would without these measures?

written by Lightning4 on Jun 07, 2013 12:23

I slow to the appropriate speed to avoid collisions, waiting for our chance to enter the expressway.

written by Gligar on Jun 07, 2013 15:51

Junction 18, Expressway Y86, DIC Sector

L4-O decides that it would be best to avoid collision. After all, The Crate might be able to survive, but they might not - and they're supposed to be protecting it while taking it to HOL Sector, right?

He decelerates to the appropriate speed - which turns out to be pretty slow. The traffic calming system seems to be only allowing one vehiclebot onto the expressway every thirty secondcycles or so, and is regulating speeds to ensure that this is the case. In fact, according to the truckbot's

⁸⁴⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC: but obvious, to the point where I was waiting for someone to make it) status lights, it actually received a deceleration command, but ignored it due to being in manual mode.

Ahead, the queue continues. A couple of vehiclebots decide that they'd rather go elsewhere and try to turn round, only to find that their path is blocked by other vehiclebots.

written by Gligar on Jun 07, 2013 22:26

Junction 18, Expressway Y86, DIC Sector

The queue moves forward. Slowly.

In the back, it looks like Jam-Y has fallen asleep. Lucas-O, on the other hand, is not. He seems to be readying something.

I wonder if anyone is even paying attention back there?

Impromptu command centre, Factory floor, Communist garrison, Roadway 3, JHY Sector

"Karl"'s PDC continues to display the word "Comrade?" sent by "Boris".

Another communist looks at it. "Perhaps your attention is required?" he suggests.

Mess hall, Armed Forces garrison, Roadway 2, JHY Sector

The GREEN continues. "I will require volunteers for each target: the communist garrison in the factory, the R&D labs, and PLC Central. If there are clones left over, they can be sent to reinforce the comnode if we need it. So... what will it be?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 08, 2013 00:26

I continue just sitting in the queue, starting to relax a little since it's at such a relaxing pace.

written by Kristos on Jun 08, 2013 03:42

I take the bag containing the hat.

If I were to make my way into the factory again, perhaps I could retrieve the modified laser barrel. However, I may be able to gather more new data if I go to a new place. Cyrus-R is already posted in the factory. Undecided, I watch to see a few other clones volunteer.