Okay guys, let's try again. If this dies, we might as well bury the entire Forum Games forum.

Rules, such as they are

- You are all playing this game. Yes, even you.
- Stats will be rolled up as and when they are needed. For the start, there will be no character sheets since nothing's been defined.
- There's no time limits involved. I will post updates when I consider there to be enough material.
- Perversity points will work as before. Players start with 10 and can win them for interesting posts.
- Trolls, munchkins, minmaxers, etc. etc. are classed as Commie Mutant Traitors and will be erased.

You are awakened by the harsh light of...

...where exactly are you? It seems to be some sort of RED-clearance meeting hall. A large Computer vidscreen is at one end. It's currently blank.

You're wearing a RED jumpsuit, so, presumably, you're cleared to be here. But you don't remember anything, other than your name. Even your service group escapes you.

In the pockets of your jumpsuit you find a Series 1300 PDC and an ME Card. And that's it. The ME card has your name on it, and confirms that you're RED Clearance.

The Computer Monitor comes on, and displays the text, "Now loading..."

written by Selbio on Feb 02, 2010 23:16

Feeling a bit hungry, I gnaw on my ME card.

written by Gligar on Feb 02, 2010 23:38

ME Cards, it seems, don't taste too appetising. Fortunately, though, gnawing on one doesn't seem to have any negative effects.

Selbio-R's ME Card is now a little chewed up on one end. The sector code is now harder to read, and I can't make it out from my cameras.

Looking around the room some more, he sees that the place is pretty bare, apart from the bewildered clones, and a stack of plastilyke folding chairs. There's also the grey synthcrete walls, and the clearance stripe denoting the room as RED Clearance. There might be doors, but if there are, you can't see them.

The Computer Monitor still displays it's loading message.

written by E_net4 on Feb 03, 2010 00:38

Check the PDC.

written by Gligar on Feb 03, 2010 01:51

E_net-R's PDC seems to be having a problem getting a signal. How strange.¹

written by Selbio on Feb 03, 2010 02:08

I ask around to see if anyone else has anything to eat.

¹ GLIGAR: And why is there an underscore in the name? Perhaps E_net-R's ME card is in a different name?

written by Albeyamakiir on Feb 03, 2010 03:12

"It's too bad that eating clones is a traitorous thing to do, because I don't think there is any food here at all. Luckily, I'm not even hungry!"

written by Selbio on Feb 03, 2010 03:19

"Well then I guess I'll just have to find a commie mutie traitor to eat, huh? Anybody here a commie mutie traitor? Because I'm starving."

written by E_net4 on Feb 03, 2010 11:30

Perform an interesting dance.²

written by 4616599 on Feb 03, 2010 12:47

I lean back, with a slight smile. Sipping some B3*, I wait for Friend Computer's instructions to come out.

"Hmm....," I mumble to no one in particular, "Somehow I have the strange feeling I was higher ranked before the last brainscrub. What was my clearance? Doris-Y or something?"

written by Starchaser on Feb 03, 2010 13:04³

I view my ME Card and then place it in the jumpsuits left breast pocket for safe keeping.

written by Gligar on Feb 03, 2010 13:18

It seems that Doris-R (formerly Y?) got hold of some B3. While you were talking, a panel opened in the wall, revealing a couple of vendobots. Presumably, one of them carries B3.

Star-R-CSR's ME card tells him just that: his name 😊

The mystery of the underscore remains unanswered.

* well, there must certainly be some of the complex's most famous beverage lying around somewhere...

² E_NET4:

Gligar said:

And why is there an underscore in the name? Perhaps E_net-R's ME card is in a different name?

Where the heck did you get that modified name...

³ STARCHASER: OOC: Maybe it is friend computers way of coping with ASCII/Unicode characters? Depending on what character encoding he uses. 😊

Finally, a silhouette of a... something replaces the "Now Loading" text on the Computer monitor. It seems to be some sort of head, or perhaps a helmet of some kind?

Whatever it is, it has a voice: "Is anyone awake down there yet?"

written by Gligar on Feb 04, 2010 00:27

Hearing no reply, the voice continues, "Can anyone even hear me? Reply, or do something noticeable if you can."

written by Starchaser on Feb 04, 2010 00:38

Unsure of what is going on Star-R waves at the screen and says in a nervous voice "I am here"

written by Albeyamakiir on Feb 04, 2010 01:06

"Hello!" I wave enthusiastically.

written by 4616599 on Feb 04, 2010 11:58⁴

Anyway, I look at the screen and reply, trying to appear confident ,

"Yes, we're all awake, ready to receive Friend Computer's instructions."

written by Gligar on Feb 04, 2010 12:56⁵

The figure responds. "Ah, excellent! By now, you'll have realised that your memory is gone. This is due to a Communist attack on this sector's compnode, causing a massive loss of data and of the compnode itself. Among the lost data are the MemoMax records of this sector's residents. Therefore, Emergency Protocol 214/57/[DFSR] was initiated, and here you are.

"Your mission will be to find a way to terminate the Communists and power up the backup compnode.

Any questions?"

written by Megagun on Feb 04, 2010 12:58

"Uuh, how do we identify Commies? Are they wearing red clothes or something!?"

written by Gligar on Feb 04, 2010 13:04

"That is correct. They wear red jumpsuits without insignia."

written by 4616599 on Feb 04, 2010 13:08⁶

"Well," I reply "that explains why I seem to have gone through a brainscrub that seems to fall under the Friend Computer's usual high standards." and add, more quietly, "Makes me wonder about how it happened...I seem to have the strange desire to laser a scrubot..."

"I don't have too many questions presently, but where's our equipment, what's known about that Communist group

⁴ 4616599: (OOO: err...Gligar, I actually meant Joris-O there as a reference to the previous game, but he(or is it now a she?)'s obviously gone through a thorough brainscrub, so still has a pretty muddled memory.)

⁵ GLIGAR: (OOO: Well, I haven't seen your ME card, and those jumpsuits don't give any sort of indication of gender, so... 😊)

⁶ 4616599: (OOO: Don't mind too much Gligar, anything goes) and will we be assisted by any higher ranked troubleshooters or Intsec?"

written by Gligar on Feb 04, 2010 14:03

"Unfortunately, little information relating to the Communist group is available at this time. They are known to be heavily armed, and have occupied the sector's main PLC warehouse, along with other installations. You will have to obtain equipment yourself. All other personnel have been either evacuated or terminated, You must rely on your own resources, plus whatever you can procure.

"I suggest making your way to Troubleshooter Headquarters, which isn't too far from where you are now.

Now... time for one more question, I think."

You hear clicking, as of doors unlocking.

written by Speeder on Feb 04, 2010 23:43

I (Stu-O? or Speeder-UV? 😊) enters the room, in a noisy manner, that is, making the doors that just unlocked open violently.

"HELLO THERE!!! NOONE IS FORGETTING ME, ARE YOU?"

written by Gligar on Feb 05, 2010 00:06⁷

When Speed-R has finished playing with the doors, the figure says, "No further questions? Right then, get to it! If you need to contact me, my PDC number is 49302."

The silhouette disappears from the screen.

written by Speeder on Feb 05, 2010 00:18

I want a PDC too! Give me one!

Oh... I have one, nevermind...

Hum... those brainscrubs should be less scrubbing, they make us not remember stuff... I don't remember from what sector I am...

* peer at the ME card *

Crap, something damaged the place where my sector was written... So... I am just Speed-R now, officially nomad. In fact, since that information was erased from me and from the card, I suppose that my sector of origin is a important matter that the friend computer choose to not disclose.

written by Selbio on Feb 05, 2010 00:21

"All right then, guys. Let's go find something to eat."

I walk out and look for a map to the nearest place to get some food, or a food dispenser, or wherever we eat. I mean, it's not like I'd remember anyway. I just want food.

written by 4616599 on Feb 05, 2010 10:10

I watch as the clones walk out . "Go on," I call "I don't mind not taking the lead in a sector infested with CMTs, or whatever threat that's out there."

⁷ GLIGAR: (OOO: you were already in the room 😊 Everyone starts there.

Let's assume that you decided to test the doors, then. Of course, they're unlocked, so they opened rather loudly 😊)

I then follow them cautiously. Surely there should be a utility center nearby?

written by Albeyamakiir on Feb 05, 2010 10:28

"Ok, you follow. I'll go in the middle... or, unless... no, I think it's safer if I'm last. Or, wait! I'll stand in the middle and walk sideways! Yes. Just in case..."

written by Gligar on Feb 05, 2010 11:34

The six of you enter what seems to be a small RED concourse, with a few vendobots. There are three other doors leading off.

Strangely, there are no chairs or anything here.⁸

written by 4616599 on Feb 05, 2010 12:17

I approach a vendobot, motioning for some others to follow. "Hey, vendobot, we're just passing through after hearing the evacuation call. What's new?"

written by Gligar on Feb 05, 2010 14:22

"You probably know more than I do. Nobody tells me anything," the vendobot replies. "All I know is, there was a general alarm, then my Computer link was disconnected. Then, there was a bunch of noise, then you arrived a bit later."

written by Speeder on Feb 05, 2010 16:14

I know what happened!

* Makes a techi engineer face, thinks a lot pulls the inexistant beard in a wisdom demonstration and finishes the phrase *

The Computer...

SNEEZED!

written by Selbio on Feb 05, 2010 17:13

I get some food from the vendobot, or at least try.⁹

written by Starchaser on Feb 05, 2010 18:05

Star-R scurries after the others in fear of being abandoned.

He (she?) attempts to get a bag of Algae Chips and if successful they place them in one of their jumpsuits pockets.

written by Gligar on Feb 05, 2010 18:34

Selbio-R and Star-R both get a bag of algae chips each.¹⁰

⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: Please note that any new players will still start in the meeting hall.)

¹⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC edit: Also:

I like this.)

written by Selbio on Feb 05, 2010 20:13

I eat a few of the chips, then somehow manage to stow away the rest of the open bag on my jumpsuit-clad person without crushing the chips.

"All right, I guess we'd better go find some weapons, huh? Hey vendobot, do you dispense weaponry?"

written by Speeder on Feb 05, 2010 21:26

"One rocket launcher please. With rockets of course."

I peer at the machine and then say.

"And computer anti-flu stuff..."

Then I smile happily and says.

"Oh, I want the rockets with marshmellow!"

written by Gligar on Feb 05, 2010 23:22

"Sorry, citizens, I don't have any weapons."

written by Speeder on Feb 05, 2010 23:37

"So, can I still have the marshmallows?"

written by Gligar on Feb 05, 2010 23:39

"Sorry, they're beyond your clearance."

written by Albeyamakiir on Feb 05, 2010 23:45

"Hunger is a weakness. I refuse to eat in such a bad situation!"

written by Speeder on Feb 05, 2010 23:53

"Aaah crap... I am not hungry, the marshmallows are a great glue, but I think that they are beyond our clearance specially because of that..."

Then I look at the vendobot

"But computer anti-flu is not a weapon, can I have some?"

written by Gligar on Feb 05, 2010 23:57

"I'm sorry, but due to Emergency Protocol 214/57/[DFSR], that item is not available."

written by Speeder on Feb 06, 2010 00:11

"I see... So I give up, just give me some bag of ships like everyone else..."

Can vendobots detect letter differences? Having a ship would be uber cool...

written by Albeyamakiir on Feb 06, 2010 00:13

"You're all going to be killed by Commies with poison food! Do you realise nothing!?"

written by Gligar on Feb 06, 2010 00:19

The vendobot dispenses a bag of algae chips. I guess it didn't catch the difference.

written by Selbio on Feb 06, 2010 02:15

Unfortunately, I don't catch the difference either, and holster the bag of chips.

written by Speeder on Feb 06, 2010 05:39

I stuff my bag of chips on my bag.

I have a bag right? Or a backpack, or whatever?

Humm...

Or I have some cool pockets?

Because if not, I wonder where my PDV and ME card are stored...

written by 4616599 on Feb 06, 2010 10:44

I'm not hungry, so I just stand beside an exit and wait.

written by Gligar on Feb 06, 2010 12:24¹¹

From somewhere beyond the exit opposite the meeting hall, you can hear the sound of patrolling jackboots.

written by Speeder on Feb 06, 2010 17:33

"So I have no weapon, and no bag..."

I wield the bag of chips. Who know, maybe they are a good weapon.

Then I await for whatever is coming (what is... jackboot?)

written by Albeyamakiir on Feb 07, 2010 00:18

I dart behind a vendobot. Or try to. I want to be out of sight of the jackboots.

written by Gligar on Feb 07, 2010 00:32

After a few minutes... nothing happens.

Maybe they're not interested in coming in here, and are just... patrolling out there?

written by Cryoburner on Feb 07, 2010 06:35

I note that several others have exited into the concourse, and stroll out there as well. Upon entering the concourse, I carefully examine the ceiling.

written by Gligar on Feb 07, 2010 13:37

The ceiling holds the usual light fixtures and cameras.

The sound of jackboots fades.

written by Speeder on Feb 08, 2010 02:12

"Behold! Follow your leader!"

Then I still wielding the bag of chips, open the door that is in front of the door of the hall.

written by Albeyamakiir on Feb 08, 2010 06:32

"I don't believe in leaders, unless they're higher clearance. Unless they're traitors. Unless they're only pretending..."

After a moment, I creep up to follow Speeder-R anyway.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 08, 2010 09:14

Not entirely certain of Speed-R's trustworthiness or potential for ineptitude, I don't immediately follow, and instead put my ear to the door on the (presumable) west end of the room, to listen to what might be on the other side.

written by 4616599 on Feb 08, 2010 13:49

Hugely uncertain of the rest, I huddle near a vendobot and wait.

written by Gligar on Feb 08, 2010 14:02

Speed-R and Albey-R find a flight of stairs on the other side of the door leading up, and ending at a horizontal blast door, which is partly open. From what they can see, it looks like a damaged PLC warehouse.

Cryo-R hears a faint humming noise on the other side of his door.

written by Selbio on Feb 08, 2010 23:53

I wait around with Cryo, occasionally pulling a chip from my pocket and munching on it.

written by Gligar on Feb 09, 2010 16:50

Cryo's door suddenly opens partway, revealing a darkened room beyond. A scrubot leaves the room and starts cleaning. The door closes.

written by Speeder on Feb 09, 2010 16:55

"See! A warehouse! It must have weapons here, so we can defend ourselves with something better than... Algae chips."

Anyway, I approach cautiously the blast door, and peer inside, trying to not be seen by whatever is inside, staying in the shadows of the staircase. And I continue wielding the mighty bag of +0 hunger mitigation algae chips.

written by Gligar on Feb 09, 2010 19:51

On further inspection, there doesn't seem to be anyone in the warehouse (except for Speed-R 😊)

The warehouse itself seems to be multi-clearance, with areas designated RED through GREEN. Some of the shelving has been overturned, seemingly during the fighting, but equipment still remains.

In the distance, Speed-R can hear someone wearing jackboots - what should be Internal Security, but with the Communist attack, is probably the People's Revolutionary Enforcers or something - marching from somewhere to somewhere else.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 09, 2010 20:30

L4-R stands around drooling in the meeting hall, completely oblivious. It looks like he may have been brainscrubbed a little TOO thoroughly.

I finally take notice of the open doors south and bumble my way to the main concourse.

Unfortunately, I seem to have forgotten how to stop. I stumble in a southward direction upon reaching the concourse.

¹¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: I did mention: your jumpsuits have pockets 😊)

written by Speeder on Feb 09, 2010 21:37

I just allow L4 continue forward and inside the warehouse in case he keeps walking...

And I keep observing, and also awaiting the other guy that was following me.

written by Gligar on Feb 09, 2010 21:58

L4-R (what is it with names these days? Do I have to assign a Troubleshooter team to it?) crashes into some shelves full of light bulbs. Tinkle tinkle smash.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 09, 2010 23:33

The impact seems to have knocked a little sense into me.

I brush off the bits of glass and look at my surroundings.

Seeing people crowding to the west and south, I decided to be the trendbreaker and attempt to learn how to open doors again with the east door.

written by Gligar on Feb 09, 2010 23:38

Apparently deciding to backtrack (since the stairs are south of the concourse), L4-R finds the east door of the concourse to be locked.

written by Albeyamakiir on Feb 10, 2010 00:42

I sneak carefully up the stairs, into the warehouse and over to a RED equipment area to look for weapons.

written by Speeder on Feb 10, 2010 04:49

I cringe so much at all the crashing that I end smashing some chips inside my bag.

Anyway I follow Al after L4 leaves, while looking around for other entrances on the warehouse, specially checking to see if noone is going to check the warehouse after all L4 ruckus.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 10, 2010 07:43

I note that the humming room may be a little too dark to safely enter, and head into the warehouse instead.

"Perhaps there might be something to connect these light bulbs with to let us see inside that room- Oh look! Shelves!"

Finding a collapsed shelving unit in the red clearance area, I slide a shelf out of its frame and examine it carefully.

Albey-R finds some knives. Well, it's a start, I guess.

Cryo-R detaches and inspects one of the shelves. It's your typical metal shelf common to just about every warehouse in the Complex. It measures 75 x 30 x 0.3cm, with clips to let it connect to the shelving unit. It's also quite heavy.

written by 4616599 on Feb 10, 2010 14:32

I walk into the warehouse. Knives against a horde of CMTs? Far from adequate. I head for the higher clearance stores. Normally I would consider this treasonous, but desperate times do call for desperate measures.

written by Starchaser on Feb 10, 2010 15:59

I suddenly snap out of my temporary daze, broken by the crashing sound coming from the room the others had just entered. I quickly attempt to get a B3 from the machine, stuff it one of my other pockets and run to see if the others are okay.

written by Gligar on Feb 10, 2010 16:02

It turns out that Joris-R doesn't need to go to the high-clearance areas, as he finds some RED grenades, and takes six of them.

Star-R enters the warehouse at a run and notes the broken light bulbs.

written by Speeder on Feb 10, 2010 17:10

I search for a rocket launcher, and whatever else cool weapon that don't cause explosions (like shotguns, rifles, machineguns... that sort of thing...).

Also I grab 2 grenades from where Joris go his 6.¹²

written by Gligar on Feb 10, 2010 17:31

Unfortunately, it looks like this warehouse has already been picked over for weapons. All that can be found are the knives and grenades, Plus the B3 and whatever else can be improvised...

written by Lightning4 on Feb 10, 2010 19:40

My attention focuses on a shiny knife. I snatch it quickly and pet it while saying "Shiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiiny"

After a while I get bored and start looking around the warehouse for any other shinies.

written by Selbio on Feb 10, 2010 21:55

I grab a few grenades and begin using them against Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R while shouting "TRAITOR! KILL THE TRAITOR!" I also grab a knife just in case he's still alive by the time I'm done with the grenades.

written by Gligar on Feb 10, 2010 22:29

There's nobody called Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R here, but it's worth taking some grenades for if you run into him - he might be a Communist after all 😊¹³

written by Speeder on Feb 11, 2010 00:11

So, I grab two grenades anyway...

Then I proceed to grab two knives too.

Then I get a spare maintenance cooper tube, and some silvertape, insert the knife handle inside the tube, and use the silvertape there, thus making a cool totally awesome "Speeder's Spear™" or called SS.

Then I go searching for whatever expands and contracts (like elastics, balloons, rubber... whatever like that...)

¹² SPEEDER: (ooc: although we are finding grenades, I still think that maybe B3 are a more powerfull weapon... I wonder what they are made off...)

¹³ GLIGAR: also known as "sure, why not..." 😊

written by Gligar on Feb 11, 2010 00:32

See? Improvisation! 😊

Anyway, there's half a box of those Party Pop-R balloons that young Junior Citizens are sometimes given – you know the ones, with the loyalty slogans on them. These ones say “I [heart] IntSec”.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 11, 2010 00:36

I grab a couple, being utterly fascinated with them.

I accidentally pop one with Fred the knife.

DON'T JUDGE ME. HE'S MY SHINY!

written by Gligar on Feb 11, 2010 00:51

Hmmm... naming one's weapons... that's done by Armed Forces personnel, right?

Jackboots are marching this way again.

written by Speeder on Feb 11, 2010 02:10

I thought that the balloons were not inflated...

Anyway, I grab two shorter copper tubes, fit the stretched balloons in one end, and look around for small objects that fit inside the other end, even better if I find a plastic bag with metal spheres, like those used in bearings and other equipment. But beans, nuts or bolts can work too.

As I hear the Jackboots, I shove the bag of chips in a pocket, in other pocket I shove the grenades, and finally I tuck the knife carefully in my boots, in a way to not cut anything, and proceed to do whatever I was doing, but still holding the SS.

written by Albeyamakiir on Feb 11, 2010 02:46

I grab two knives and put them in my inventory. I was about to grab more stuff, but upon hearing the Jackboots, I dart back to the vending-machine room, grab 4 B3 cans and put them in my inventory too.¹⁴

I head back to the stairs to listen for the boots while staying out of sight.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 11, 2010 03:55

Deciding that the sound of jackboots is a sound I might not like hearing up close, I decide to head back into the concourse, grabbing a couple unbroken light bulbs off the shelf as I leave.

“I'm going to check if E_Net-R is alright. We can't afford to leave anyone alone for too long when Communists are all over the place.”¹⁵ ¹⁶

¹⁴ ALBEYAMAKIIR: (By the way, are our inventories like those of adventure game characters? ie. infinite within semi-reason?)

¹⁵ CRYOBURNER: (I suspect you can only comfortably carry as much as can fit in your hands or pockets. Otherwise, you might drop items or have difficult accomplishing things.)

¹⁶ SPEEDER: (OOC: I wonder if in paranoia world there are a machine that has access to hammerspace... maybe experimental... 😊)

written by 4616599 on Feb 11, 2010 09:26

Jackboots again? Perhaps it could be that traitorous Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R that Selbio-R mentioned earlier. And CMTs sure have poor choices of clone names...

I go to a corner of the warehouse, slightly nervous, and then look at some of the maintenance tubes, wondering whether any were blastproof, or sturdy enough to hold a can of exploding B3.

written by Gligar on Feb 11, 2010 13:17

It's amazing how many small items you can cram into the pockets of a jumpsuit (well, I guess it helps that there are plenty of pockets)...

Though I'm not sure Speed-R could carry anything else now.

By the way, none of those metal spheres, but there is a box of nuts.¹⁷

Those tubes actually don't look like they could hold an explosion.

Those jackboots are getting closer. You can now hear voices speaking quietly.

written by 4616599 on Feb 11, 2010 13:52

I retreat back into the concourse, B3 ready, attempting to use the scrubot for cover.

“Do you mind participating in an IntSec live firing test?”, I uneasily blurt out to the scrubot.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 11, 2010 18:52

I mutter to myself about traitorous manually-inflating balloons.

My instincts take over as the jackboots approach. I holster my knife for now and grab some grenades.

I covertly crouch behind an overturned shelf.

Unfortunately, despite my clever hiding spot, I fail to notice my lovely RED balloon clearly floating above my position.

written by Gligar on Feb 11, 2010 21:49

Damaged Warehouse

The wearers of the jackboots make themselves known: two... well, I hesitate to call them “Internal Security”, even though they're wearing the requisite armour and weapons. See, the armour doesn't fit, and they're wearing RED jumpsuits with no IntSec patch. I guess they're the People's Revolutionary Police Force.

One of them notices those of you who aren't hidden. “What are you doing here? You should be attending the People's Glorious Victory Parade! Attendance is mandatory!”

Well, that answers that question.

¹⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: goes off to update stuff)

Concourse C1

The scrubot responds, "I regret that I cannot be of assistance, citizen."

written by Speeder on Feb 11, 2010 22:38

I mutter to whatever person is near me, trying to not allow them to hear.

"People's Glorious Victory Parade? That sound commie... It is not the commies that say that all that people do is good? That cannot be good, Friend Computer exists to protect us from people stupidity!"

Then I look around for a safe route back to the stairs. I carefully put my spear hidden in a standing position in a shelf, and carefully hidden I get one of my tubes with balloon in one side, I put a nut inside it, then I pull the nut while holding the balloon in place, and shoot the nut at a box near other door. Then I quickly put it back in place, and hold the spear again, hoping that I drew their attention away from me and other friendly troubleshooters.

written by 4616599 on Feb 12, 2010 05:33¹⁸

While still cowering near the scrubot, I inexplicably whisper, "Mary Lou-UV is corrupt and leads them!"

I raise my voice a little, "The vendobots, and this scrubot, are broken! I'm doing a service for the people and repairing them."

written by Gligar on Feb 12, 2010 11:09¹⁹

Speed-R thinks that trying to head for the stairs would be risky, though with him behind a shelf already, it's not too bad. But he'd need a distraction before he could begin. Like, maybe, a nut hitting a box...²⁰

But he doesn't pull it off right, and gets spotted when he launches the nut. This is too much for the PRPF members, who ready automatic slugthrowers and fire them in Speed-R's direction.

It's a good thing they didn't hit Speed-R with them. I guess they went to the People's Glorious Marksmanship Training Seminar, which was of course mandatory.

As such, they didn't pay attention to Joris-R.

written by Speeder on Feb 12, 2010 16:35

Yay! Mess!

Anyway, slugthrowers are known to be slow, and are known to do a quite mess... So I run to the blast doors (holding my SS again, of course, and taking care to it not stuck in anything) aiming to return to the concourse. All that while the dust and debris of the slugthrowers are still flying.

¹⁸ 4616599: (OOC: hmmm...according to the 'who is online' bar, apparently Mary Lou is pomelising Friend Computer.)

¹⁹ GLIGAR: Hey, the first die rolls of the game!

²⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC: !)

For some reason, in my mind some strange ancient music from humanity come to my mind, maybe it was a imprint from friend computer, or a joke of a scientist...

"RUN TOoooo THE HIIIIIIIISSSS!!!"²¹

written by Gligar on Feb 12, 2010 22:38

As previously established, the PRPF members' aim isn't up to much, which they proceed to demonstrate further, as Speed-R manages to use the cover of the shelves to get to the blast door, down the stairs, and into the concourse.

However, one stray slug hits L4-R's balloon, popping it.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 13, 2010 00:38

I yelp as soon as my balloon pops.

I pull the pin on a grenade and toss it in the direction of the PRPF members, before ducking for cover again.

written by Gligar on Feb 13, 2010 00:58

"Pull pin and throw", that's what the instructions say...

And of course, L4-R throws the pin...

Which promptly explodes.

BOOM

The PRPF members fall to the ground. Maybe dead.

There's another problem... that of shrapnel.

All four of you in the warehouse get hit by stuff flying around, and sustain a wound.²² written by Speeder on Feb 13, 2010 01:09²³

I hear a explosion as I am reaching the concourse.

"Vatcrap! I hope that all the grenades there don't have the habit to chain explode..."

I look at a vendbot.

"And I hope that there are no B3 stored there too."

written by Gligar on Feb 13, 2010 01:23²⁴

And for what it's worth, grenades almost never chain-detonate. To suggest otherwise is a sign of unhappiness. Are you unhappy, citizen?

written by Lightning4 on Feb 13, 2010 01:27²⁵

I check myself over for any damage.

I ready Fred and come out from my cover, and cautiously approach the PRPF members.

²¹ SPEEDER: (OOC: for some reason that Iron Maiden music came to my mind... and I am not even a Iron Maiden fan, the last time I heard it was 3 years ago)

²² GLIGAR: (OOC: Grenades + die rolls = Fun™ 😊)

²³ SPEEDER: (OOC: the PIN explodes? Or... L4 explodes?)

²⁴ GLIGAR: (OOC: The pin, yes. 😊)

²⁵ LIGHTNING4: (OOC: Yeah, I should certainly hope not me. 😊)

written by Gligar on Feb 13, 2010 01:30

After he checks himself over (cuts and bruises, and pain, and bleeding) L4-R finds that the PRPF members do not react when he gets close.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 13, 2010 01:41

Fred still at the ready, I kneel down next to each of them and start checking them for signs of life.

written by Speeder on Feb 13, 2010 02:10

Not hearing any other explosion, I say.

"Well... One side was wiped out... Or both."

Then I look around for people in my room.

"Let's go check the people upstairs! There are commies there... If they are dead or alive now is a good question."

written by Selbio on Feb 13, 2010 05:27

I push L4 aside and, instead of being a commie about it, proceed to stab them until we can be good and sure they're dead. I then check to see if they have any weapons we could take.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 13, 2010 10:43

"I.. um, I was gonna do that!"

I join Selbio in rooting through the now fully deceased PRPF members.

written by Gligar on Feb 13, 2010 13:47

The PRPF members don't react as L4-R checks them out. If they're still alive after the explosion, they certainly aren't after Selbio-R is done with them.

Searching the bodies reveals: two automatic slugthrowers (BLUE clearance), six ammunition cartridges (AP rounds - GREEN clearance), two neurowhips (also GREEN), and two truncheons (RED, for a change).

written by Selbio on Feb 13, 2010 17:58

I grab a truncheon, and guard the higher-clearance items from anyone in the team who would dare be a traitor and try to take them.

written by Speeder on Feb 13, 2010 19:43

I climb upstairs, slowly, when I see that they are looting the two bodies I smile.

"So, you managed to kill them! Good work! Now let's see the clearance of the slugthrowers!"

As I approach and see that the slugthrowers are blue, I take the other truncheon.

"Humm... That is bad..."

I look to the others.

"So, the computer don't sneezed, he was shut down, our mission is then find the server room, and clear it of commies, and reboot our friend computer... The problem is that the server room is UV, and I have no idea on how to get there."

written by Gligar on Feb 13, 2010 23:21

Don't you think you're already carrying enough? 😊

written by Speeder on Feb 13, 2010 23:25

In fact, I had no idea of what is a truncheon, I confused it with trenchcoat...

So, indeed, I don't want a truncheon, I leave it there.

Also I go searching in the warehouse for something that I can use as armor...

written by Lightning4 on Feb 13, 2010 23:56

"Well, we'll just have to kill those filthy commies one by one until we DO find Friend Computer... now won't we?"

I give the high clearance items a second look, but shake my head as I go to investigate the direction the commies came from.

written by Gligar on Feb 14, 2010 12:40

Speed-R isn't successful in his search.

L4-R opens the door the PRPF used, and finds an INFRARED corridor beyond.

written by Speeder on Feb 14, 2010 16:52

Oh yeahs, I tweak my nut launchers...

I put more rubber (coming from the balloons) in them, and test to see if I can still pull it, then after it is strong enough, I instead of holding it with two hands when firing like I did, I just fit it properly using my silvertape.

Shiny!

Then I fit the two side by side.

Now I have a two barreled object launcher!

"What you did found there?"

written by 4616599 on Feb 14, 2010 17:38

I walk back into the warehouse, and half-facepalm at the scene on the floor.

After a while, I ask "Are we just going to leave them lying in the middle of the warehouse?". I advance further, looking at their equipment, "Well, it would be treasonous to take higher clearance stuff, but I'm sure Friend Computer would pardon us in a situation like this. Anyone agrees?"

written by Selbio on Feb 14, 2010 19:04

"No. We're not traitors."

written by Gligar on Feb 14, 2010 20:37

Joris-R, as he looks at the equipments, spots something else: a Com 1 unit mounted inside the armour of one of the PRPF members. You could probably detach it.

Of course, it helps that the Com 1 suddenly crackles to life with "Comrades Aleksandr and Pitr, report!"

written by 4616599 on Feb 15, 2010 06:53

I quickly respond, somehow putting on a stereotypical accent "Err...oh, yesh Comrade, cannot dizcolse full deetails in the open, but our local bot agent haz rezported anz attempt by Intssek to reegainn control of SUX sector, with thze incusion occurring about seven sectors east of here. We zont have any forces there, so I recommend we mobilize all available uneetz in thiz area tzo move there. I wudd ask the bot to give you more details, but he'z just crashed. Might bze another Intssec attempt. Over."

written by Gligar on Feb 15, 2010 14:13

"Ah, Aleksandr! I was not aware that you had a bot... Did Pitr free one from its Capitalist pig-dog programming? Over."

written by Speeder on Feb 15, 2010 17:44

I nod with the head, several times to 4k.

Then I smile and give a thumbs up.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 15, 2010 20:08

Noting that others have returned to the warehouse following the explosion, I approach the stairs, but stop short upon hearing communist voices... Might the warehouse be full of communists!?

Looking about the concourse, I see the scrubot going about cleaning an already clean floor, and get an idea...

"Scrubot, how would you like an upgrade?"

Finding a random hole on the scrubot, I insert one of the light bulbs I'm carrying, and screw it firmly into place.

written by 4616599 on Feb 16, 2010 03:24

I return the thumbs-up gesture to Speed-R, and watch quizzically as he nods at a box marked '4000'. =P

I then reply, "I wudd suppose he did...must have been pretty tuff for him, given Fool Computer's greedy capitalist programming methods. All I know is that he did something to a scrubot. He's searching a warehouse at the moment, kan't really make out what he's found. What is the status of our other local patrols?"

written by Gligar on Feb 16, 2010 13:26

Concourse C1

The light bulb is a pretty good fit.

As soon as Cryo-R is done, the lightbulb lights up... a bit too brightly. And promptly breaks. Oh well.

Damaged warehouse

"Comrade, I can't give you that information over the com. The capitalist enemy could be listening in.

"However, I am pleased at Pitr's success in liberating a scrubot. Tell him -"

There is silence on the other tend for a moment.

"- I must cur this short. The base is under attack. Follow your glorious orders. Out."

written by Speeder on Feb 16, 2010 16:53

"Huh... They believed us, should we keep the communicator?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 16, 2010 18:54

I've already disappeared into the corridor. I cautiously look around for dangers and/or exits.

Or things of use.

written by Gligar on Feb 16, 2010 20:37

The corridor sports four other doors and is empty of clones... well, living ones. There's a dead INFRARED not far away. You can tell she's dead because of the gaping hole in her chest. Looks like the Communists have lasers.

The corridor seems to exist to connect another corridor - a RED one, with one door that you can see - with what appears to be an INFRARED concourse, where there are a lot of clones. Presumably, they're there for the parade.²⁶
²⁷

written by Gligar on Feb 17, 2010 19:55

Loud pompous music starts blaring from the concourse. It's the sort of thing you only hear when the Communists break into a vidshow feed, and even then only for a few seconds. Only now they're in control, so you now hear the whole thing.

But relax! Communist music has been found to be completely ineffective in imparting Communist propoganda on the citizens of Alpha Complex in 99.5% of recorded cases! You have nothing to worry about!

written by Speeder on Feb 17, 2010 20:54

"Hey, what happen if we dump all our explosives and B3 in the middle of their parade? We would wipe a wide amount of commies! Maybe friend computer would even promote us!"

written by Gligar on Feb 18, 2010 00:03

Damaged Warehouse

A security camera swivels round and focuses on Speed-R.

A speaker activates and a voice says, "Ah! Have you made any progress?"

It sounds like the clone seen on the Computer monitor in the meeting hall.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 18, 2010 00:37

Nonetheless, I cover my ears and stumble back into the warehouse saying "LA LA LA LA LA LA LA" to block out the sound.

²⁶ SPEEDER: (OOC: it is two map releases already that I am in the wrong place... Gligar?)

²⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC, sort of: You are in error, the information is 100% accurate. All evidence to the contrary is due to Communist interference 😊)

After I notice the music has stopped and everyone is looking at me like I'm a commie, I blurt out "Commies... many commies!"

I look at the camera.

"Oh yes!"

I point to the two dead commies.

"Also I've got some improvised equipment, and the warehouse had grenades... A parade is happening down in the corridor, I was thinking in tossing a couple of explosives there, but maybe it is bad idea... It would just anger them and put the mission in jeopardy..."

Wow, why I know all these difficult words?

Anyway! We have no idea where is the HQ that you mentioned previously, care to tell me? Also, just to report, some people are scouting the corridor from where these two commies entered the warehouse, and some are in the lower level, and the communists believe that these two guys are still alive and well, thus we still have the surprise element."

written by Gligar on Feb 18, 2010 15:14

"This sector's Troubleshooter Headquarters is accessible from Corridor D2. Like I said, it's not far.

"As for the terminated Communists: I was monitoring transmissions just now. Apparently, one Communist, designated 'Pitr' has reprogrammed a scrubot. Have you heard anything about this?"

written by Speeder on Feb 18, 2010 15:42

"Huh... My partner by some stupidity said that the bot was helping these two dead commies, the person on the other side asked if Pitr reprogrammed a bot, and so we said that yes... But he is here dead..."

I point to Pitr.

"No need to worry, at least that we know, no bot was reprogrammed."

written by 4616599 on Feb 18, 2010 16:28

I walk down to Speed-R. Hearing his comments, I whisper "Stupidity? I was checking if the scrubot had been modified by them... also, there's no need to be too concise and specific on that thing. He may be an agent, or CMTs may be monitoring."

"By the way, is anyone going to do anything about Alexandr and Pitr?"

written by Gligar on Feb 18, 2010 19:16

"Very good. Keep up the ruse as long as you can. And try to get to Troubleshooter Headquarters quickly - I can only use each channel for a limited amount of time before my signal is intercepted and traced. I have to keep moving as well. Now, get going."

The speaker falls silent.

written by Speeder on Feb 18, 2010 20:39

I stare at 4kk.

"Are you nuts? Are you a commie traitor believing that our superior that gave the mission is a traitor?"

Then I look around and say. "First, we have to get rid of the bodies, so commies don't discover that we killed them, also you should keep the communicator, and continue posing as Alexandr, and then we search for the headquarters, it is in the D2 corridor."

I look around. "Where is everyone else?"

written by Gligar on Feb 19, 2010 15:56

Over in Concourse D1, people seem to be cheering. It's rather quiet, though, like only a small fraction of people are actually taking part.

Then there's the sound of slugfire. Someone speaks, but you can't hear what they're saying.

The cheering starts again, louder this time.

written by Gligar on Feb 20, 2010 00:48

The Com 1 comes to life again. "Pitr, Aleksandr, you are not at the parade! Why is this? Do you not know it is mandatory?"^{28 29}

written by 4616599 on Feb 20, 2010 17:09

"Well, I'm stating the obvious here, but that obviously means they have surveillance cameras, or have tracking equipment. We'll have to think of something."

I then pull up the Com 1 and reply, still with the stereotypical accent, "Ah yes komrade! Of course we know tze glorious pawade is mandatory! All the people knowit! We are scouring the area for any more trases of Capitalist/Computer interfewence! We tze united komrades cannot affod any of their further meddling. The Glorious peeples parade cannot be interrupted, we understand!"

written by Speeder on Feb 20, 2010 17:16

I scratch my beard while waiting for the response from the other side.

Well, I don't have a beard, but I scratch my chin as if I had a beard.

²⁸ GLIGAR: OOCish: Clearly, someone has altered my stats files to remove all mention of one entire player. This gross example of treason has been fixed.

²⁹ SPEEDER: OOC: I wonder who did it...

Also I wonder where are everyone, playing me and gligar is not much fun... or gligar playing with himself..

Please, other people, show up again! I know my love for paranoia (I have one of the books even, I bought it immediately when I stopped in a store... here in Brazil paranoia is not popular, so it does not exist in stores, that one for some reason had a english copy on the shelf, a really old copy, its pages were already yellow-ish)

Also I know Gligar love for paranoia... But only me and Gligar player is no fun..

Maybe Gligar should ressurect Xeno, at least it would make us 3 😊

written by Gligar on Feb 20, 2010 18:06

Ah, I see that yet another clone has fallen victim to the dreaded Hair Growth (Facial) Approval Form... did you know that they only have a 0.0001% approval rate?

But anyway.

The voice on the other side of the com says, "Very well. Finish your sweep and return to the parade. We will send a replacement team within five minutecycles. Do not take longer than that time. People's Control out."

Yes, you'll have company in five minutecycles. You'll probably want to move out before then.

written by Speeder on Feb 20, 2010 18:34

"So, let's stick with the plan, we get rid of them, you keep the communicator, and continue the ruse, and we search for the headquarters in the D2 corridor."

I look around for some place that I can get rid of them... We have dump slots on the warehouse? Or... vents that go down?

written by Gligar on Feb 20, 2010 19:57

Unfortunately, the only thing that goes down is the stairway to C level.

But there's the dark room, and the locked room... maybe there's something there?

written by Speeder on Feb 20, 2010 20:48

I scratch my head, then I just grab the two by their legs, see if they will not splatter blood everywhere as I pull them, and then I run toward the concourse while pulling them along.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 21, 2010 00:35

Seeing as how dragging one corpse is tough enough, I decide to aid Speed by grabbing the legs of the other corpse and follow his lead.

written by Gligar on Feb 21, 2010 00:42

You have to squeeze past Albey-R as you go, but you get them to C-level.³⁰

So... which is it going to be? The dark room, or are you going to try the locked door again?

written by Speeder on Feb 21, 2010 01:59³¹

I look around, then I see what there are a exploded lightbulb in the vendbot. "Hey vendbot, do you have a socked that is compatible with the lightbulb so it does not explode?"

Then after some time, I say. "Doh, why noone thought of that before... Vendbot, do you have a map, or can you inform what exists behind these two doors?" I point to the dark room and the locked door.

³⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC: I could have had you take them to the IR concourse instead, since you didn't specify, you know 😊)

³¹ SPEEDER: (ooc: gligar ooc comment made me shiver... good that he is not a sadistic gm...)

written by Gligar on Feb 21, 2010 13:54

The vendobot replies, "Sorry, no, to both questions."

The scrubot doesn't answer.

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2010 19:27³²

It seems that, in your indecision, you have wasted your five minutes.

A squad of six members of the PRPF, presumably arrived to relieve Aleksandr and Pitr, bursts in through the warehouse door. They notice the GREEN and BLUE items on the floor from their fallen comrades, and the bloodstains, and put two and two together. They take the safetys off their weapons. "You are all under arrest in the name of the People's Glorious Revolution!"

written by Speeder on Feb 22, 2010 19:56

I close quietly the door to the stairs, then I put both commies near Cryo, walk toward the dark room, and hide there.

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2010 19:58

On the wall in the dark room, Speed-R can feel something that feels suspiciously like a switch.

written by Speeder on Feb 22, 2010 20:02

I... press the switch!

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2010 20:07

Who wouldn't? 😊

Even though crecheclones are told repeatedly to not press random switches, since you don't know what they could do. And they might be beyond your clearance.

Luckily, this isn't one of those switches. It's just a light switch.

It reveals that the room is a sort of control room, maybe a security station. There are a couple of deactivated monitors, a Computer terminal (also deactivated), and a control panel.

written by Speeder on Feb 22, 2010 20:14

Oooh I found the node that I am supposed to fix?

I just check around what stuff is only one way communication to inside the room, and activate them.

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2010 20:18

Sadly, it doesn't seem to be the comnode. If it were, it'd be high clearance, right? 😊

This control room (or security station) is a mix of RED and ORANGE clearance. The Computer terminal and control panel are in the ORANGE section (though the panel has RED buttons, and is close to the RED section of the room).

written by Speeder on Feb 22, 2010 20:43

So, like those shiny RED buttons usually written "don't press" that noone resist the urge to press, I press them 😊

³² GLIGAR: (OOC: Apparently, I'm playing by myself now.)

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2010 20:50

A few things happen.

First, those monitors activate. They appear to be showing camera feeds from the stairs (pointing at the blast doors) and the warehouse (a wide view, again favouring the blast doors).

Second, some motors whir. One the monitors, you can see the blast doors closing. Albey-R steps back to avoid being crushed by them.

Third, the Computer terminal activates. Apparently, this is Emergency Bunker C-3.

And fourth... remember that locked door? That's now open.

written by Speeder on Feb 22, 2010 21:08

I look at the terminal, and press the button of the locked door again in hope to relock it.

Then I look at the monitors to see what is happening in the warehouse.

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2010 21:41

That seems to have worked.

Damaged Warehouse

The PRPF squad opens fire!

Four of them miss their marks, and end up trashing up some of the supplies in the warehouse. Notably, some stray bullets hit the grenades.

Joris-R manages to find some cover and avoid the remaining two's fire.

Selbio-R isn't so lucky, taking a shot in his right leg.

Star-R doesn't manage to get out of the way, but still avoids being shot.

written by Selbio on Feb 22, 2010 21:51

written by Cryoburner on Feb 22, 2010 21:52

The Scrubot modification didn't quite work as desired, so I decided to stand guard with my shelf in case any communists happened to enter. It wasn't long before they did, dragged behind Speed-R and L4-R, who proceeded to drop them off in front of me. I hear communist voices again, this time apparently arresting the other team members, as Speed-R recklessly runs off into to the dark room, flips on a light switch, and begins randomly pressing buttons.

"Perhaps you should be a little more careful about what you do in there."

As the locked door opens, I look inside, without actually entering the doorway.

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2010 22:00

In the time the door was open, a RED corridor was visible. There are at least two exits.

The clearance stripe has peeling paint, though. I guess this area hasn't been used in a while. Where the RED paint has peeded, BLUE paint is visible underneath, indicating that the area has dropped in clearance.

written by Speeder on Feb 22, 2010 23:21

I turn to Cryo and say. "Oh, good, you woke up! So, let's say what happened, we killed two Commies, they thought that they were not dead, as we faked that they were alive, until they asked the two to come to the parade, that mean that we had five minutes to hide the bodies, but for some reason noone did anything but me that dragged them down here, so I left them near you so you can get rid of them, while I went figure see what this console do... I know that it is dangerous, but is better than getting shot..."

I peer at the cameras.

"Crap, I locked three people inside the warehouse, they are being shot at..."

I think for a while and say.

"I think that I will leave them there until they finish off the commies... While that we get rid of the bodies."

I open the concourse locked door again.

"Let's drag them there! And stuff somewhere..."

I leave the room, and promptly get one of them.

"You two" I point to L4 and E_Net. "Stay guarding the room, better if someone get over there" I point the room that I just left "And watch the monitors and help the people upstairs, you can unlock the blast doors if you want" I point the blast doors button "But only do so if you are sure that no commie will come downstairs until I and him" I point to Cryo "Get rid of the bodies."

I proceed toward the ex-BLUE now RED corridor.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 22, 2010 23:37

I nod to Speed and drop my corpse.

I enter the control room and watch the monitors, hoping the people in the warehouse fight back.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 23, 2010 00:18

"Hmm... Those sounded like gunshots... I wonder if the others will be alright on their own."

I prop one of the bodies up on top of the scrubot.

"Look in there, Scrubot! Red paint has 'peeded' all over the floor. What a mess! If only someone were able to clean it up..."

written by Gligar on Feb 23, 2010 00:50Corridor C1

Speed-R inspects the two doors and finds that they're labelled "Dormitory" and "Maintenance".

The corridor makes a left turn past the room.

The corridor is covered in a layer of dust, though it's clear that scrubots come through here occasionally.

Control Room*

The Computer Terminal beeps and displays an error... something about not being able to connect to the Computer network. That's understandable, what with the comnode being down and all.

Concourse C1

The scrubot moves its dome, causing the corpse to fall off and land in a comical position. "Yes, this won't do... it won't do at all..."

It starts spraying cleaning fluid on the bloodstains and the corpse. From the bubbling and the dissolving and such, that stuff's acidic. It would be a good idea to not be near it.

Damaged Warehouse

Selbio-R hasn't moved after collapsing. This makes a nice target for the PRPF, who... well, that's interesting... one of them seems to have shot herself in the foot...

Two of them succeed in hitting Selbio-R, one on the other leg, one in the chest. If he doesn't get medical attention soon...

The other two miss their mark again. Despite him being right there... A stray bullet makes its way towards Star-R, but ends up whizzing past and embedding itself into the blast doors. You know, I don't even think they know about the bunker...

written by Speeder on Feb 23, 2010 00:57

I smile as I see the bot dissolving the body, and drop the other one in the red corridor, right in the middle of the dust. Then I observe the bot as it melt away corpses. Then I open one of the dormitory doors.

"Maybe there are still decent weapons or even armor stashed here. And hey! You got a great idea, I loved it... Let's make the bot dissolve all the corpses."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 23, 2010 01:00

I look over the console for any other buttons that might be of use... and are of my clearance.

Dormitory

The dormitory looks like it could hold twenty-four RED clones. (At some point, it probably held one BLUE clone. It must be great to have a room to yourself.) There are those lockers you find in all RED dormitories. The whole room is basically four normal RED dorm rooms in one. I suppose you check through all the lockers if you really wanted.

* (let's just skip the "or Security Station" bit)

³³ GLIGAR: (OOO: there's only one dormitory and one maintenance room, at least as far as you can see 😊)

Control room

The panel is split into several sections: DOOR CTL, MONIT CTL, SERV CTL, and DEFN CTL. The former two are largely RED clearance, the latter two are mostly ORANGE with a smattering of higher-clearance buttons.

Some of the buttons are depressed, presumably meaning that they're activated.

But other than that, the panel is unlabelled.

Damaged warehouse

The wounded PRPF member yells and drops her slugthrower before falling backwards.

The other five... hmmm, they seem to be ignoring Selbio-R. Instead, they're concentrating on Star-R...

...wait a minute... they seem to be out of ammunition! There's the ammo on the floor, but it'd take them a minute to reload...

One of them has another idea, and pulls what looks like a stun grenade off his belt, pulls the pin, and throws.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 23, 2010 01:52

I shrug and press a few of the non-activated RED buttons, SERV and DEFN CTL if there any available.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 23, 2010 02:10

I keep my distance, making my way around the pool of bubbling cleaning fluid and into the newly opened corridor. Finding the other body lying there, I slide it back into the concourse, and kick it into the edge of the pool of cleaning solution before heading back to the dormitory.

written by Speeder on Feb 23, 2010 03:24

I hear the kicking and look to Cryo.

"No damnit! We are not supposed to leave molten commies in a visibly public area where they may visit... But I am not going to recover it..."

I just start to check all the lockers searching for a RED reflex armor or any other usefull equipment.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 23, 2010 06:05

"I believe you sealed the blast doors, and this seems to be an emergency bunker, so unless there are communists already in here, or someone lets them in, I don't think anyone should really care. Besides, the scrubot should have them fully de-communized soon enough!"

written by 4616599 on Feb 23, 2010 06:17

"Wait, comrades! Hold your fire! I'm Scru-R, a bot engineer and servicer . Most of your fellow comrades you see here are from my team. I had helped comrade Pitr in his glorious cause of removing the Capatalist components from the scrubot. However, we had no idea that Intsec had rigged the scrubot with alarms and an emergency static programming system. So they were discovered by Intsec and fought gloriously for the people, but unfortunately went out as heroic martyrs of the People's complex. Then you showed up."

written by Speeder on Feb 23, 2010 12:26

I awnser from inside the room that I am messing with lockers.

"Huh... Indeed, you have a point, or two... hail the glorious de-comunizing bot... We should take it with us and tell him to clean any communist that it sees..."

written by Gligar on Feb 23, 2010 15:36

Control Room

There don't seem to be any RED SERV CTL or DEFN CTL buttons. Pressing the other RED buttons results in some clicking elsewhere in the bunker.

The Computer terminal beeps.

You can't help but wonder about the high-clearance buttons.

Concourse C1

That partly-dissolved corpse looks pretty disgusting now. The scrubot sees what you're doing, and mutters something that my camera can't pick up. It sprays more of the acidic cleaning fluid.

Dormitory

One of the buttons on the control panel must have unlocked the door on the far wall, since it just clicked.

A search of a few of the lockers reveals some RED jumpsuits - it seems like they all have a jumpsuit - and, so far, four sets of reflec. Not that they're any good against bullets.

There's still plenty of lockers to check, though.

Damaged Warehouse

The PRPF had just picked up their ammunition when Joris-R interrupts. They hold their fire, but are still suspicious. One of them asks, "If you are part of the Glorious Revolution, what is the Revolutionary Recognition Sign?"

Sadly, this seems to be a little too late for Selbio-R...

It seems that they're too far away to hear Speed-R.

written by Speeder on Feb 23, 2010 15:47³⁴

As the door clicks, I rush there and open it, just to make sure that it will not get locked again, then I peer inside to see if it is safe to leave the door open.

written by 4616599 on Feb 23, 2010 16:48

Hoping Star-R or those in the bunker would do something, I respond, "Well, it's a long story. I always did like the Commies at heart, but never got to experience or come into contact with life with my other glorious equal comrades. Every day I was forced to toil for the so-called Friend Computer. Then I met comrades Alesandr and Pitr on a transbot just before the revolution began. Needless to say

I found that they shared the same good ideals for the people and was quickly inducted into their squad. Unfortunately due to urgent circumstances I was not offered the badge...and just when I was about to put in on the revolution started and there were people shooting everywhere. I subsequently helped them in their glorious servitude. Then this happened."

I feign a depressed expression, but suddenly declare," But fear not, comrades! We shall do our glorious duties!" I then break into an impromptu song and dance.

"Commies, oh the glorious revolution!

I love those comrades, and shall together do what the people require!

Oh honourable comrades, I am..."

written by Gligar on Feb 23, 2010 18:08

Dormitory

Through the door is what appears to be a medical bay. There's just one problem... it's YELLOW clearance.

There is, however, a marked RED path from this door to another door, presumably one that leads back to the corridor. Predictably, it takes the long way round, and goes nowhere near the medical supplies the bay undoubtedly has.

There is also an old model docbot, sitting deactivated on a counter.

Damaged warehouse

There is silence for a moment. The PRPF squad's impromptu spokesclone seems to be thinking about this. "Comrades Pitr and Aleksandr didn't report anything about starting a cell, but then again, we have been proceeding rapidly. And besides, perhaps they thought you needed to be tested further. Please, follow us to the parade. There, you can be tested."

The spokesclone waits for you to step forward.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 23, 2010 18:51

I silently look around. Not seeing anyone currently in the control room, I quickly reach over and start pressing the higher clearance buttons while muttering "Friend computer forgive me, friend computer forgive me, for the glory of friend computer..."

written by Speeder on Feb 23, 2010 20:18

I don't wake up the docbot (just in case it want to re-communify the de-communified commies...)

And then I return to the dormitory, and proceed again to open each locker to find usefull equipment. (or any assorted cool item...)

written by 4616599 on Feb 23, 2010 21:45

I nervously continue with my poorly-done dance moves. Somehow I don't feel quite myself.

³⁴ SPEEDER: (OOC: I was talking with Cryo... Oo)

I attempt to get them to come forward and dance, too. Medical bay
 "Come on, dance with me! Do the people's dance!"

written by Gligar on Feb 23, 2010 22:47

Somewhere in the bunker, generators can be heard powering up, followed by the thrum of equipment.

Control room

The Computer Terminal acknowledges the button presses with

MAIN GENERATORS      [ONLINE]
LOCAL SERVICES       [ONLINE]
DEFENSIVE SYSTEMS    [ONLINE]
```

```
ESTIMATED FUEL REMAINING: [==-----]
TIME TO FUEL EXHAUSTION:  [22:25]
```

Damaged warehouse

The PRPF notice the noises. "What is this?" muses the spokesclone, presumably the leader. "No matter."

He gestures, and his squadmates move to surround Joris-R and Star-R. "To the parade!"

Dormitory

A further search of the lockers reveals three RED laser pistol bodies (but no barrels) and a Multicorder 1, seemingly set up for audiovisual recording.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 23, 2010 23:07

Figuring I've probably done enough treason, I vacate the control room.

I reach Corridor C1 and see if the Maintenance door is unlocked.

written by 4616599 on Feb 24, 2010 00:14

"Aye, glorious comrades!" I say, attempting to sound confident. Won't those other clones in the bunker do something?

written by Speeder on Feb 24, 2010 00:24

I get startled at the noises. Then I look around, and seeing nothing I just take one of the reflacs and wear it, then I set the multicorder to play the last recording.

As it records, I walk using the red lines on the medical room to the door on the other side.

written by Gligar on Feb 24, 2010 01:10

Maintenance is indeed unlocked.

Maintenance

The room is filled with equipment, mostly air filtration. There is a ladder heading down to what is presumably B-level, possibly for access to more equipment.

The room is split between RED, ORANGE, and GREEN clearances. The ladder is accessible from the ORANGE zone, and there is a desk, on which is a Computer terminal, in the GREEN zone. The terminal is on.

As mentioned, the RED path takes the long way round, but eventually, it reaches the other door...

Corridor C1

...which leads back to the corridor. You can now see that it turns again past the medical bay. There are two more exits to worry about that can be seen.

Damaged Warehouse

Star-R and Joris-R are escorted from the warehouse into the corridor.

Corridor D1

They continue into the concourse. As they get there, they note that the door to the concourse has been destroyed.

Concourse D1

The concourse is simply a big space where, in usual times, INFRAREDs could congregate and watch the huge Computer Monitors which are against the far wall. Now, however, the monitors are showing some clone who is presumably an officer of the Communists.

There are three (intact) doors leading off elsewhere. There is a distinct lack of chairs.

On noticing your PRPF escorts arriving, citizens (or rather, comrades, I guess) begin to shear, though it sounds a little forced.

The spokesclone announces, "Comrades! Here we have found two more who are loyal to our cause! They will be joining us for the Pledge of Communism!"

The clone on the monitors answers, "Excellent! The Pledge will take place momentarily. Any news of our Glorious Comrades Pitr and Aleksandr?"³⁵

written by Speeder on Feb 24, 2010 03:09

I peer at the corridor, like disappointed. Then I attempt to open another door.

written by 4616599 on Feb 24, 2010 04:44

"Ugh! Commie vatslim- err...I mean, Computer vatslime!" I mumble under my breath.

"Good comrade, I'm afraid the capitalist computer enemy got them. They fought for our cause heroically." I respond to the person on the monitor, though I suppose that wasn't really needed. I add, "How's the status of this sector? Any more enemy forces incoming? I'd be willing to take them on to avenge my glorious comrades!"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 24, 2010 07:07

I exit the maintenance room, and upon seeing Speed-R, choose the door he doesn't.

³⁵ GLIGAR: (OOO edit: Is the map getting too wide for people? If so, I'll change the format. Also, if people want mutations and secret societies, PM me. Reading tiny text is treason.)

written by Gligar on Feb 24, 2010 15:42³⁶ Cloning station

Corridor C1

Speed-R's door proves to lead to a cloning station. One of L4-R's button presses most likely activated it.

L4-R's door leads onto another dormitory, this one ORANGE. It's possible that higher-clearance clones used it as well.

Concourse D1

The figure responds, "As was stated earlier during the parade, this sector is now free of Capitalist control! However, there are still Capitalist elements remaining in the sector who will attempt to undermine the Glorious Revolution and the path of Communism through the Complex. Indeed, I have received word that a High Programmer may still be operating here!"

Some of the comrades gasp.

"But he can be dealt with later. For now, let us recite the Oath."

The stomach of my otherwise inert body growls.^{37 38}

written by Lightning4 on Feb 24, 2010 20:17

Naturally, I continue down corridor C1. Looks like there's more to explore!

written by Cryoburner on Feb 25, 2010 02:32

I inspect the dormitory beds, and take a look underneath them as well.

written by Speeder on Feb 25, 2010 11:14

I try to figure if I can make the cloning station room smooth, and maybe even re-activate, even if using some emergy protocols, its mind downloader, so come people can revive without any problems³⁹

If it is all fine, I examine to see if I find interesting stuff there.

written by Gligar on Feb 25, 2010 14:23

Corridor C1

Carrying on down the corridor, L4-R finds one door, before the corridor ends in another door.

Dormitory 1

An inspection of the beds reveals the usual mattresses (made of recycled packing material), pillows (same), and a metallic frame. There doesn't seem to be anything of note under the beds.

³⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: What with the map continuing to increase in size, I've taken the liberty of rearranging it.)

³⁷ SELBIO: (OOC: It's what you get for that confusing list of stats 😊)

³⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: You know, you could reclone if you wanted 😊)

³⁹ SPEEDER: (OOC: Bensel 😊)

Speed-R enters the cloning station. As he does, he suddenly remember that he actually works in a cloning station anyway, and, as such, knows the restart sequence. After all, cloning stations need restarting periodically in order to keep them running at peak efficiency.

Finding a Computer terminal, he inputs the code to initiate the restart, then, after a minute, goes to the tanks and flips a few switches. There! All done. Hopefully, nothing should go wrong...

Concourse D1

The officer on the Computer monitors continues. "Repeat after me: I, state your Party name, do hereby declare undying loyalty to the Communist Party..."

written by 4616599 on Feb 25, 2010 15:48

I discretely cross my fingers and mumble quietly, "Friend Computer will not be pleased. But I'm doing this for its sake..."

"I, Scru-R of Secondary Sector Logistics, declare undying loyalty to the Communist Party..."

"...subject to any terms and conditions I may come up with...". I whisper, only loud enough to be heard by Star-R.

written by Gligar on Feb 25, 2010 20:53

"...and further declare my undying hatred for The Computer and its capitalist pig-dog lackeys. I will do my best to terminate any high-clearance lackeys I encounter, in order to liberate the INFRARED masses..."

Alarms sound in the bunker. Computer Terminals and monitors show

--- WARNING ---

REVISED TIME TO FUEL EXHAUSTION DUE TO INCREASED POWER LOAD

TIME TO FUEL EXHAUSTION [03:59]

SUGGESTED COURSE OF ACTION:

- * REFUEL GENERATORS
- * REDUCE POWER LOAD

written by Speeder on Feb 26, 2010 15:52

I leave the cloning station running. Then I grab stuff from the lockers in the dorm, and leave them at the cloning station (in case someone resurrect... they would need it, right?)

Then I open the northmost door of the C1 corridor.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 26, 2010 20:02

Hearing the alarm, I grab a pillow off one of the beds, and head back out into the corridor. I wander down the hall past a cloning station and medical bay, and notice Speed-R opening another door as I round the corner.

written by Gligar on Feb 26, 2010 20:37

Speed-R can't carry all 24 jumpsuits, so he only takes a few.

Corridor C1, far end

The door opens, revealing a stairwell, leading down, presumably to B level.

The alarms continue blaring.

written by Speeder on Feb 26, 2010 23:56

I open even other door.. If there are more doors (I want to explore the entire level before heading down).

In case we checked all doors already, I climb down the stairs.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 27, 2010 00:46

Alerted by the alarms, I hasten my pace. I try the final remaining door in hopes of finding something we can either turn off or the generators themselves.

written by Gligar on Feb 27, 2010 14:48*Corridor C1, far end*

There's only one more door on this level, so Speed-R opens it, revealing a storage room - oddly, there's no clearance stripe visible. There's mostly food in there, with a microwave to heat things if needed.

L4-R seems a little disappointed when he finds no more doors to open.

The alarm continues to blare.

Concourse D1

The Oath continues. Wow, that thing's long.

written by Speeder on Feb 27, 2010 17:00

I carefully walk downstairs.

written by Gligar on Feb 27, 2010 22:42

The stairs haven't been used in some time. It seems that the scrubots' War on Dust has been lost here.

It turns out that the stairwell goes down past B level, down to what you can only assume to be A level. At each level, there's a door, leading to the level proper.

The stairwell's RED, but, like Corridor C1, was once a higher clearance, and it shows through the peeling paint on the clearance stripe.

written by Speeder on Feb 27, 2010 22:57

I open the door to the B level and wander inside.

written by Gligar on Feb 27, 2010 23:10

The door leads into another concourse. Let's call this one Concourse B1.

There are three doors... all ORANGE, or so it seems.

If anything, the alarm seems louder down here.

written by Speeder on Feb 28, 2010 06:38

I return to the stairs, go to the medical lab, and climb down the staircase there.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 28, 2010 09:17

I quizzically glance at what Speed-R is attempting to do in the medical bay, and wonder if he's been keeping track of the floor's layout. 😊

I head down the two flights of stairs and try the door at level A.

written by Gligar on Feb 28, 2010 11:47*Medical bay*

There are no stairs in the medical bay. Speed-R may need medication, though 😊

Corridor A1

Cryo-R finds yet another corridor, bisected by still another. Both corridors are INFRARED and have four doors each. And dust. And that infernal alarm.

written by 4616599 on Feb 28, 2010 14:27

I continue taking the oath quietly(; deliberately mispronouncing and substituting several words).

written by Speeder on Feb 28, 2010 21:14

I facepalm, and run to the maintenance, and climb the downstairs THERE.

written by Gligar on Mar 01, 2010 00:02*Generator room*

Huzzah! It's the generator room! It's mixed RED/ORANGE clearance.

There are three large diesel generators bolted to the floor, connected to a central fuel tank. All three of them are on, making an awful racket. But that's not as bad as the alarm...

The generators are connected, via some heavy duty cabling, to a power distribution unit which takes up a large portion of one wall, next to which is a Computer terminal.

You've probably guessed that there's no extra fuel in the room.

There's also a door.

written by Speeder on Mar 01, 2010 01:35

I open the door, and peek outside, then I read the monitor.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 01, 2010 07:09

I go down the stairs to A level and start exploring the INFRARED corridors and the first doors.

written by Gligar on Mar 01, 2010 13:55 Generator room

Generator room

Surprisingly, there isn't a corridor beyond the door. The room beyond looks to be a store room for spare parts. There are three doors.

The Computer monitor reads

TIME TO FUEL EXHAUSTION [03:22]

The figure changes to 03:21 as Speed-R watches... exactly in cadence with the alarm.

Corridor A1

The first door L4-R opens leads to a hygiene station. So that's where it was hiding.

Concourse D1

Looks like the Oath is about ready to wrap up...

written by Selbio on Mar 01, 2010 18:05

I start to smell.

written by Gligar on Mar 01, 2010 19:42

Computer terminals and monitors within the bunker now display another message...

--- WARNING ---

INCREASED POWER LOAD TO CLONING STATION

REASON: CLONING SEQUENCE UNDERWAY

NEW TIME TO FUEL EXHAUSTION [02:10]

written by Lightning4 on Mar 01, 2010 22:56

I obsessively clean myself a little, also cleaning my wounds out a little if that helps.

I then return to the corridor and try the opposite door, while cursing these damned alarms.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 02, 2010 00:54⁴⁰

I wrap my pillow over my ears to muffle the alarms, and take a peek in the doorway to the room L4-R just opened.

written by Speeder on Mar 02, 2010 01:01

I just go to the generator room and shout "Damnit! Stupid machine, stop that noise." And then I start to kick it, until I find cables that I can pull and turn it off.

written by Gligar on Mar 02, 2010 01:21

Corridor A1

L4-R and Cry-R find a storage room. And look, fuel barrels! Some of them look to be unopened.

⁴⁰ CRYOBURNER: Does anyone else think we should just turn on all devices we find and repeatedly open and close the bunker door so that we run out of power with Selbio in a half-cloned state? 😊

Generator room

Unfortunately, Speed-R is clueless when it comes to electrical generation - he's Tech Services, after all, not Power Services. Well, apparently.

In his attempt to shut off the alarms, Speed-R ends up yanking out one of the power transfer cables from one of the generators. This causes yet another alarm, and a note on the monitors and terminals:

-- ALERT -- ALERT -- ALERT --

POWER TRANSFER FAILURE

INSUFFICIENT POWER AVAILABLE TO RUN ALL SERVICES

DEFENCE SYSTEMS NOW OFFLINE LIGHTING REDUCED TO MINIMUM
VENDOBOTS NOW OFFLINE

And indeed, the lights dim throughout the bunker.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 02, 2010 03:01⁴¹

I examine the fuel drums more closely to determine their approximate size and weight, and check whether any of them might be partially full, yet sealed, and therefore easier to transport.

written by Speeder on Mar 02, 2010 04:27

I facepalm. "Crap... I tought that turning off the damn generator would turn of the damn alarm too..."

Then I switch it back on.

"Hum... Better reserve fuel for when we need it."

I switch it back off again.

written by Gligar on Mar 02, 2010 10:57⁴²

Fuel storage

Cry-R takes a closer look at the fuel drums. They look to be the 55-gallon ones you see in vidshows.

There are three empty drums, the rest are full and sealed.

Generator room

The lights return to normal for a moment, then dim again, as Speed-R fiddles with the wiring.

written by Speeder on Mar 02, 2010 16:18

I enter the store room, and check what is inside, also I check all exits, to see where they lead.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 02, 2010 21:45

"Well, I guess we'd better get some fuel upstairs. It's probably too much to ask for more portable fuel cans though, and I'm not sure we have the time to look through all the remaining rooms on this floor, anyway."

⁴¹ CRYOBURNER: Are we talking 55 gallon drums here, or something a little smaller? 😊

⁴² GLIGAR: Cryo: yes 😊

I set my pillow, shelf, and light bulb against a wall in the fuel storage room. I then tilt a full drum on edge, and roll it to the base of the stairwell, leaning it against the bottom stairs.

"I'm thinking I might need some assistance with this."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 02, 2010 21:57

I assist Cryo with the fuel drum.

written by Gligar on Mar 03, 2010 00:55

Now that's a surprise... two clones working together...

Spare Parts Storage

Hmmm, let's see... light fixtures, assorted cables, lengths of pipe, a couple of spare Computer Terminals and monitors, rubberlyke tubing, some tools, some other things I can't make out in this light... all of it pretty old... maybe 25 or so yearcycles. But maybe you already noticed, what with the text terminals and all. Kind of a contrast to the vendobots on C level, but I guess the concourse and meeting hall were probably in use by the PLC service firm that manages the warehouse.

The north* door leads to Concourse B1. Interestingly, it's RED on this side.

To the west, it turns out, is a short corri - no wait, it's just an open-plan office. Those partitions threw me for a moment. I can't really make anything else out there.

To the east... ah, that's a corridor.

Fuel Storage

It looks like Cryo-R's stuff won't be touched down here.

Cryo-R and L4-R manage to clonehandle a fuel drum up one flight of stairs to B level.

Those alarms don't go away.

Cloning station

If anyone were to look in, they'd see that a clone is most definitely forming in one of the clone tanks. It probably won't be too long now.

Concourse D1

And the Oath is finally done.

The officer on the monitors continues. "Very good, comrades! Now we must turn to job assignments.

"Your pig-dog service groups and service firms are a thing of the past! You will be assigned to a new job according to the needs of the People's Glorious Revolutionary Employment Bureau. May I have volunteers to be the first to be assigned?"

written by Cryoburner on Mar 03, 2010 07:30

As we reach B level, I notice a door in Concourse B1 open, and see Speed-R on the other side.

* A standard term, which of course means "towards the top of the standard Alpha Complex map".

"I'm assuming you found the generators, seeing as the lights seem to be having problems now."

I once again tilt the fuel drum on its edge and begin rolling it toward the generator room.

written by 4616599 on Mar 03, 2010 13:04

I nudge Star-R.

I suddenly remember something Selbio-R-1 had said earlier, and ask a nearby PRPF member, "Psst, comrade! What's new with comrade Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R?"⁴³

written by Lightning4 on Mar 03, 2010 15:44

Having not known where the generators were, I just continue to assist Cryo-R in a rare act of clones working together...

"For the good of friend computer!"

Concourse B1

Cryo-R and L4-R manage to get through the door to Spare Parts Storage before it closes again.

The alarms only seem to get louder as they approach the generator room.

Concourse D1

"Ah yes! That comrade is in the middle of a very special mission, which will be revealed later!"

The officer on the monitors asks again. "Any volunteers at all?"

The PRPF members ready their weapons.

written by Speeder on Mar 04, 2010 03:08

"Well, I shut it down, just in case noone found fuel... Quick, let's refuel it, while it is off already, before we can turn it back on."

written by 4616599 on Mar 04, 2010 04:39

I mull over the areas where I could carry out sabotage or rejoin the team.

"Given my previous experience, perhaps low-level technical logistics, or provision management, or a reconnaissance scout. I look forward to helping in the liberation of the complex!"

written by Cryoburner on Mar 04, 2010 05:32

I think you only disconnected one of three generators, hence the lights dimming, as opposed to shutting off entirely. 😊

While rolling the drum through the storage room, I notice some rubberlyke tubing, and grab a length of it.

"I'm not sure how we're intended to get the fuel into the generators, but perhaps this will be of use."

⁴³ GLIGAR: (OOC: I really need L4's input here.)

I also take a closer look at what tools are available, in case any may be helpful for unsealing the drum, and more closely examine how the drum is sealed, as well.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 04, 2010 06:47

I finish helping with the drum. I look at Fred and the fuel drum and ponder for a moment...

written by Speeder on Mar 04, 2010 11:20

I look for the place to stuff the fuel, and for proper instructions, just in case...

written by Gligar on Mar 04, 2010 12:44

Generator room

Speed-R enters ahead of Cryo-R and L4-R, as they roll the drum into the room. The drum, by the way, has a fitting for a pipe or hose, covered by some sort of cap. It looks to be on pretty tightly.

The fuel tank seems to have a similar fitting.

I seem to recall seeing a toolkit in amongst the miscellaneous stuff in the store room.

Concourse D1

"Ah, good! In which case, I see no reason why you cannot return to the warehouse where you were found. Unless you'd like to assist with liberating what used to be the capitalist Troubleshooter Headquarters?"

"Yes, that's excellent! How about you do both?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 04, 2010 20:29

Someone said:

I seem to recall seeing a toolkit in amongst the miscellaneous stuff in the store room.

I seem to recall examining said toolkit while passing through the store room. In any case, I leave the fuel drum and return to the store room, grab the tool kit, bring it back to the generator room, and spread its contents out on the floor. Then, I take an apparently closer look at said tools.

"Perhaps we should all carefully examine this collection of fine tools in great detail."

Fred actually seems to be having some effect, as the cap loosens slightly.

Cryo-R empties the toolkit onto the floor. There's a rather impressive collection of screwdrivers, spanners and sockets. Also screws, pliers, and wire cutters.

Someone facepalms as he looks at a video feed on a portable terminal.

written by Speeder on Mar 05, 2010 18:48

I smile, then I go near Cryo. "Ok, get there the tools needed to attach the fuel tank hose to the fuel drum...."

I walk near the fuel tank, and see if nothing is drawing fuel from it, just in case I need to find something else to shut down before refueling.

It looks like nothing is being drawn from the fuel tank right now.

The alarms seem to get a little quieter, and the terminal displays a message:

POWER LOAD FROM CLONING STATION REDUCED

REASON: CLONING SEQUENCE COMPLETE

REVISED TIME TO FUEL EXHAUSTION

And indeed, one of the cloning tanks has opened, depositing Selbio-R-???-2, naked and slimy, onto the synthcrete floor.

Concourse D1 (in fact, let's call it Revolutionary Square)

I continue my attempts to get the cap off completely, oblivious to the fact there may be a better tool available for this.

"Don't fail me, Fred!"

"Hmm... I wonder if all those brownouts will give that clone a mental disability or something." 😊

I pull out a pair of pliers, but maintain my distance from the fuel drum, as I prefer my fingers attached.

"Maybe these would work better. You wouldn't want to injure Fred, after all, would you?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 06, 2010 05:41

"I... um, I guess you're right."

I put Fred away and take the pliers, using them to remove the lid instead.

I writhe around on the floor, then finally remember how to stand. I look for the appropriate forms.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 06, 2010 21:20

"Wait, isn't that my tubing? Maybe we should attach the other end to something first."

I go about connecting the other end of the hose to the fitting on the fuel tank.

Looks like the new assignments are just about done. Star-R may need a hygiene station, though.

Cloning station

Selbio-R doesn't notice any paper forms around. Maybe they're on the terminal?

It doesn't take long to connect the fuel tank to the drum via the length of hose.

Speed-R tries to tilt the drum, but it's too heavy.

Then, the hose slips.

End result, fuel spills over things.

I untilt the drum.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 07, 2010 20:51

"It might evaporate... Think of it as self-cleaning!"

Being careful not to walk through any spilled fuel, I head back to the store room and return with some assorted cables. I reattach the tubing, and tightly tie the wires around the fittings to hold it in place, using the wire cutters to remove any excess cable.

"There, that might hold!"

I return to watching the hose, this time from a slightly greater distance.

written by Selbio on Mar 07, 2010 23:32

Out of nowhere, I suddenly get the idea to check the terminal. I do so.

written by Speeder on Mar 08, 2010 01:46

I peer at Cryo. "What, you want explode us?"

I walk to the store room to grab cleaning materials, like, mop, water, etc...

⁴⁶ SPEEDER: (OOC: Cryo explodes? He was not a sphere? Oh... that will freeze everyone...)

⁴⁷ CRYOBURNER: What about L4? 😊

This time, the fuel transfer goes without incident, and surprisingly quickly. Quite soon, the drum is empty.

Revolutionary Square

"Ah, another comrade! You're assigned to go and assist Comrade Scru-R!"

Cloning station

Selbio-R does indeed find a door (other than the one back to the corridor). It's marked "Chemical Showers".

written by Speeder on Mar 09, 2010 16:06

I keep looking at it, then I say to Cryo. "Ok, the thing is refueled, you there, you won't stain yourself, and there are nothing to watch, go there and turn the thing on..."

Then I look to L4

"You did a good job, you should get promoted or something... Now get out from near that thing... Just in case..."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 09, 2010 16:44

I nod to Speed and step away.

I stay in the room though, intent to see the generator refueled. Those blasted alarms need to stop altogether.

If they're still going...

written by Gligar on Mar 09, 2010 20:34

Generator room

I guess Cryo-R is ignoring Speed-R and staring intently at the tube.

By the way, one of the alarms has ceased, presumably due to the extra fuel in the tank.

written by Speeder on Mar 09, 2010 23:06

After some time peering at Cryo, I close the door of the generator room leaving him inside and L4 outside (on the storage room).

Then I go explore the corridor (not concourse) B1.

I open the door to the chemical showers and peer in.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 10, 2010 05:21

I casually plug the disconnected power transfer cable back in, and wonder what the big deal was.

I then go back to watching the hose.

written by Gligar on Mar 10, 2010 14:34

Generator room

When the transfer cable is reconnected, the lights return to normal, and the other alarm ceases. Finally.

A message appears on the terminal

REFUELLING DETECTED

[23]

FULL GENERATION CAPACITY RESTORED

FULL FUNCTIONALITY RESTORED

ESTIMATED FUEL REMAINING: [=====]

TIME TO FUEL EXHAUSTION: [12:45]

Under Cryo-R's diligent eye, the hose doesn't move.

Cloning station

Unlike most installation, the chemical showers here in the bunker do not have separate booths for individual clones. Instead, it's a communal shower system intended for processing batches of freshly-decanted clones at once. There are the usual oxygen masks, and a large RED button marked "START".

It looks like it's been in use as recently as a couple of hourcycles ago.

Corridor B1 (not the concourse)

The corridor is rather short, with one door at the end, and one either side. The end of the corridor, and the door there, are ORANGE, the rest is RED.

written by Selbio on Mar 10, 2010 16:02

I enter the showers, grab an oxygen mask, put it on, and press the button.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 10, 2010 18:20

I finally decide to wander out of the generator room.

I try the office door.

Rather, I decide to peek. (Since I think it's orange clearance?)

written by Speeder on Mar 10, 2010 19:39

I open all non-ORANGE doors and peer inside.

written by Gligar on Mar 10, 2010 21:29

Chemical showers

When Selbio-R presses the button, several pad on the floor light up, indicating where he should stand. He stands on one.

A few seconds later, the shower itself switches on, from all sides at once.

The room begins to fill with the chemical solution that breaks down the tank goo, among other things.

Spare Parts Storage

The office turns out to be a large open-plan affair, with partitions. Yes, it's ORANGE, what L4-R can see of it, with a narrow RED line in the floor. Further details are beyond your security clearance.

Corridor B1

As mentioned, there are two RED doors.

To the north is... an armoury!

There's just one problem.: it's empty. Well, except for the weapons racks (RED up to BLUE).

To the south is the observation platform for a two-level room, apparently a loading dock. It seems to be RED.

written by Speeder on Mar 10, 2010 22:18

After peering at the empty armory with a frustrated expressions, I go to explore the two-level room, and look below to see what it is there.

written by Gligar on Mar 11, 2010 16:16

Loading dock

The observation platform looks to be empty, apart from a discarded Cold Fun wrapper. There doesn't seem to be a way down from here.

The dock itself has a large door, presumably leading to the rest of the sector. There's a button near it. There's also a visible door leading to the rest of the bunker. There's probably also one below the platform.

As for what's in the dock... well, there's a forkbot and a couple of empty pallets, but nothing else.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 11, 2010 16:55

I decide to head to level A again. I go down the "west" corridor and try the north door.

written by Gligar on Mar 11, 2010 21:35

Corridor A2

L4-R opens the door to find...

...that the lights in the room have apparently failed. From the light that's filtering in from the corridor, shelving, or maybe racking, can be made out. Something in the room is making a faint whirr.

written by Speeder on Mar 11, 2010 22:52

I ask the forkbot to lift a pallet to make a elevator for me.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 12, 2010 00:46

Lacking any kind of light source, I decide to instead go to the south door.

written by Gligar on Mar 12, 2010 12:40

Loading dock

The forkbot doesn't respond. On further inspection, it appears that the probable cause of this problem is a lack of power pack.

Incinerator room

L4-R opens the door, and finds this room. The incinerators seem to be online.

written by 4616599 on Mar 12, 2010 13:58

Back at the concourse, I wait for the liftbot. Strangly it still isn't here, even after several turncycles...

written by Gligar on Mar 12, 2010 16:08 Loading dock

Lift hall

You mean someone actually called a lift? 😊

No matter, one arrives.

Chemical Showers

By now, the showers are filled with the chemical solution. As such, the shower heads turn off and the solution drains away... to be replaced by water when the heads turn on again.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 13, 2010 02:14

I leave and head back down Corridor A2.

I try the door opposite the Loading Dock on the south corridor.

written by Speeder on Mar 13, 2010 03:54

I look if there are a nearby shelf that I can jump into without cracking my bones.

written by Gligar on Mar 13, 2010 16:31

Corridor A1 South

Opening the door opposite the loading dock reveals what looks to be a security station, with monitors showing camera feeds from throughout the bunker. The problem it, it's BLUE clearance. So I guess the door on the other side is inaccessible without committing treason to get to it.

Loading dock

Well, there is what appears to be a charging station for the forkbot. (Of course, without the forkbot's power pack, it's of little use as is.) It has a solid backing plate that's at least big enough to stand on.

Chemical showers

The shower heads shut off again. The water begins to drain out.

written by 4616599 on Mar 13, 2010 17:20

I enter the lift, close the door, and look at the button panel.

written by Speeder on Mar 13, 2010 20:14

I jump on the plate, and seek for the next place to land.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 14, 2010 05:28

Again still unwilling to commit any further treason, I decide to try the remaining north door in A2 west.

written by Gligar on Mar 14, 2010 13:48

Lift

The panel is covered in buttons. What did you expect? It's a lift. 😊

There seems to be at least thirty levels in the sector.

Landing hard on the charging station (though with no apparent damage), Speed-R notes that the pallets are next to him.

Corridor A2

And the remaining door leads to another dormitory, this one for INFRAREDS. It looks like this one could house maybe 40, going off the small lockers in the room. And true to form, the air vents don't seem to be working properly.

There's another door, presumably leading to the IR hygiene station.

written by 4616599 on Mar 14, 2010 15:41

I...press a button, taking the lift to level F.

written by Speeder on Mar 14, 2010 17:39

I jump on the pallet! JERONIMOOOO!

written by Cryoburner on Mar 14, 2010 19:57

I begin to tire of watching the hose, and decide to get something to eat. I head out through the spare parts storage, and up the stairwell to the food storage room on level C. Once there, I take a look at what kind of food is available.

written by Gligar on Mar 14, 2010 20:35

Lift (F level)

After a moment, the lift ascends.

The doors open onto another lift hall, this one GREEN Clearance. Though the Communists obviously don't care about capitalist security clearances.

Loading dock

Another heavy landing for Speed-R. It might not be a good idea to do that again. But at least he's in the loading dock proper.

Food storage

Cryo-R recognises several of the foods available: Insta-Hot Fun, regular Hot Fun, Cold Fun, and Soylent RED through YELLOW.

Chemical showers

The place has fully drained by now. In comparison, the drying cycles (consisting of several fans from all angles) seems to last only an instant.

The shower pads stop glowing, and the door unlocks.

written by Megagun on Mar 14, 2010 20:42

I walk over to the b3 vendobot

"Please, kind sir, spare a poor clone one can of b3, pretty please?"

written by Selbio on Mar 14, 2010 22:50

I take off the oxygen mask, leave the showers, and start looking for a towel.

written by Speeder on Mar 14, 2010 23:45

"I wonder why I decided to jump down here, instead of taking the stairs and opening the door..."

I climb (not jump) down the pallet, until I reach the ground, then I walk around and see if I find something else than the unpowered bot.

written by 4616599 on Mar 15, 2010 04:02

I ponder about for a moment. Should I commit treason and step in? But I'm masquerading as a commie, so perhaps I could ignore it? I squint my eyes, attempting to see the clearance of the door leading out of the hall.

written by Gligar on Mar 15, 2010 14:35

Meeting hall

"Sure, I'll charge it to your card."

The vendobot dispenses a can of B3 Plain.

Cloning station

Even though the showers have a drying cycle, there are still some towels around. Possibly the Romantics or the Humanists or someone were involved. They aren't very big, but they're INFRARED, after all.

Loading dock

There's a button near the loading dock's outer door.

In addition, there is some sort of machinery over by the far wall. On closer inspection, it looks like a portable cloning tank. Now why would that be here...?

A lift, F Level

The door leading out of the hall also seems to be GREEN clearance.

written by Megagun on Mar 15, 2010 16:08

I take the can of B3

"Wait a second, I never inserted my card! Then how did you charge it off of it!?"

written by Speeder on Mar 15, 2010 21:40

I press the button, run toward a shelf and hide behind, while looking to the outer door.

Meeting hall

"Through AlphaNet, of course," the vendobot replies. "Your ME card comes equipped with contactless technology. Isn't that convenient?"

A lift, E level

The lift goes down a level, and the door opens, revealing another lift hall, RED this time.

But before Joris-R can do anything, he's interrupted by a voice from above him.

"Don't turn around, or look up. This is a very dangerous line you're walking here, clone."

Loading dock

A RED light above the door begins to strobe, and the bog door rumbles open, revealing a roadway heading away from the bunker. It's a good thing there's no traffic.

L4-R returns to the control room.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 15, 2010 23:04

I begin checking some of the monitors again.

"Hm, been a while since we've checked up on the people in the warehouse" I say to myself.

written by Megagun on Mar 15, 2010 23:14

"No, that's not convenient; it's something easily tampered with. Say, do you happen to carry a formal complaint regarding AlphaNet ME Card transactions form request form - happy clone edition form?"

written by Gligar on Mar 15, 2010 23:45

Control room

Well, Albey-R is still at the stairs leading to the warehouse. The blast door is still closed.

The warehouse camera shows nobody up there, though there seems to be clones moving about outside the warehouse. The corpse of Selbio-R's previous clone is even still there.

Meeting hall

"Your complaint is a sign of unhappiness, citizen. The contactless technology has been deemed perfect by PLC, CPU, and HPD&MC, and of course Internal Security. written by Cryoburner on Mar 15, 2010 23:46

"Mmm... Insta-Regular-Hot-Cold Fun..."

Rather than just waiting around, I immediately leave the food storage room and return downstairs to recover my pillow, shelf and light bulb from the fuel storage room.

written by Speeder on Mar 16, 2010 02:14

After gazing some time at the road, I decide that... I need to return doing the mission that I was requested to do, so I go to the exit, attempt to open the door, and return to the bunker security station that controls the warehouse door.

written by 4616599 on Mar 16, 2010 02:20

I respond calmly (albeit with a hand closing in on a grenade in a pocket), "Well, is that so? Elaborate."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 16, 2010 04:21

Not knowing which one actually opens the warehouse doors, and being somewhat wary of the figures just outside of view, I just continue to watch the monitors.

I look around for anything else of note. Doubtful there's anything but worth a look, eh?

written by Gligar on Mar 16, 2010 16:07

Food storage

The microwave refuses to function. "Load error The current load would violate licence agreements. Please try again."

Of course, Cryo-R doesn't hear this.

Loading dock

Leaving the roadway door open, and thus compromising the security of the bunker, Speed-R heads up to the control room.

A lift, E Level

"First," says the voice, which sounds remarkably like the one from the Computer Monitor in the bunker, "I don't like your tone of voice. Second, the whole Communist thing. Third - and this is the most important - you're failing to obey orders. You might want to do something about that."

Control room

As L4-R watches, and Speed-R arrives, two clones enter the warehouse, take note of Selbio-R's corpse, and start cleaning up the debris. One of them pauses to speak into a com unit, though nothing can be heard.

There doesn't appear to be anything else of note in the control room.

The terminal displays a message:

CAUTION: LOADING DOCK DOOR OPEN AND UNATTENDED

written by Speeder on Mar 16, 2010 17:43

As I arrive and see the message, I just say...

"Crap... Shit... My fault..."

I look at L4 and explains the buttons that I pressed (including what one open and close the warehouse door).

"We need to cross the level with the warehouse and reach the HQ. But I have to return to a loading dock and close a door that I forgot open..."

And then, I again run back to the loading dock, but with my double-barreled and loaded nut launcher in hands.

written by 4616599 on Mar 16, 2010 17:53

"Aye," I respond quietly, "I'm attempting to do a quick survey of the sector. Apologies, always happy to serve, but you don't expect me to take on all those commies with the meagre supply of stuff in that warehouse, do you?"

written by Gligar on Mar 16, 2010 22:09

A lift, F level

"You may not have time to cover the whole sector before the Communists notice that you failed to show up for work. As for equipment, there is a reason why I told you to go to Troubleshooter Headquarters."

Loading dock

As Speed-R arrives at a dead run, he can see a vehicle approaching on the roadway. It seems to be moving fast.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 16, 2010 23:29

I continue watching the monitor, waiting for the possible commies to leave.

Can't risk letting them into the bunker now, can we?

written by 4616599 on Mar 17, 2010 04:28

"I understand. Troubleshooter HQ is at...Corridor D2, is it not? Your recommendations? Go back down to the square?"

written by Speeder on Mar 17, 2010 05:11

On the monitor, the clone with the com unit finishes speaking. The two clones then pick up the corpse of Selbio-R and leave.

A lift, E level

"Yes, that will do for now. But make sure your friends in the bunker also get to the HQ."

Loading dock

Speed-R's first shot misses by about 1.5m. The vehicle continues to approach.

The second shot, however, hits the button with enough force to press it. The door begins to close.

The vehicle accelerates as it approaches, trying to make the door before it closes fully. However, it fails, and brakes hard, apparently coming to a stop before hitting the door.

written by 4616599 on Mar 17, 2010 17:40

"Oh, so that was a bunker! Hmm. Could explain why I got locked out."

"By the way, you may have to contact them to advise them to find...creative means to get out undetected. I suppose I could use my Scru-R guise to somehow allow them out, but I'd doubt that'll work."

"With your permission sir, I'll start the descent back to the square. Once again, always happy to serve. For the good of that Computer!

A lift, E level

"Yes, please do. As for your friends... well, it shouldn't be too hard for them to sneak, as long as they... use their heads. I will leave you now."

There is a noise.

Cloning station

Well, Selbio-R's equipment never made it here, but there is at least a jumpsuit or two available. He dons one, then considers the other things that were dropped off here.

Control room

Well actually, only one button is needed to open the blast doors. But maybe Speed-R's explanation was a little confusing, as L4-R presses more than just one button.

The blast doors do, in fact, open. But some other doors in the bunker lock themselves.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 17, 2010 23:44

Seeing that the blast doors are now open, I make my way to the warehouse to assess the situation from there.

written by Speeder on Mar 18, 2010 00:12

I now strolls, calmly, back toward the warehouse stairs, if for some reason I find a locked door, I try a alternate route (in case I cannot exit the dock, I climb to the other level, and in case the door to the staircase is locked, I use the maintenance staircase... and so on...)

Having reacquired my various materials, I head back up to Food Storage to check on the progress of my delicious meal.

Damaged warehouse

L4-R ascends into the warehouse, finding that the two doors en-route are still unlocked.

Looks like the Commies have cleaned the place up a bit. There's now no debris on the floor, and everything has been placed on shelves. But there's no order to it... I guess they were called away to dispose of Selbio-R's corpse. They took his equipment as well.

Loading dock

Speed-R sets off towards the warehouse stairs, to find that the A-level doors are locked. However, he's able to climb up to the observation platform, the door to which is open.

B Level

He exits, and heads towards the stairwell. He's able to get there without encountering a locked door.

Fuel storage

Cryo-R finds that the door is unlocked, and heads towards the stairwell. The door there is unlocked, too, so he ascends,. Meeting up with Speed-R. Both are able to exit onto C Level, where they part ways.

But it was too good to last, at least for Cryo-R... the door to the food storage is locked.

Speed-R, however, has more success with the doors.

written by Speeder on Mar 18, 2010 15:26

I join L4.

"Hello... Someone tried to invade the bunker with a vehicle, but I don't know who... So, we need to get to this corridor and reach the HQ, but probably there are lots of infreared commies in the way... Idea?"

Feeling adequately prepared for anything carrying just a towel, I stroll out into the corridor and look for anything interesting to do.^{49 50}

I return to the main concourse, half-saluting any passing PRPF members. I then head for the main warehouse entrance, observing the passers-by in Corridor D1.

⁴⁹ SPEEDER: (OOC: I left gear on the room... you don't have to scare us to death showing up around with a towel In fact, I left gear there specially to avoid this...)

Damaged warehouse

Communists come and go outside, seemingly ignoring the warehouse...

Corridor C1

Selbio-R finds Cryo-R looking at the locked door to the food storage.

Revolutionary Square

There are almost no clones here now. Everyone seems to be heading to or from somewhere else. Many of them are going down D1, and this continues for a few minutecycles, then the corridor becomes clear. Seeing his chance, Joris-R heads to the warehouse, where he sees L4-R and Speed-R.

written by Speeder on Mar 18, 2010 23:32

As I see the corridor clearing, I reload my tubes, and as soon it is clear I say.

"Ok, let's go.."

I walk to the corridor D2, happily (because other moods are treason), but yet still careful.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 19, 2010 00:00

"Noooooooooooo!"

I begin carefully examining the door to food storage, particularly looking for any way to bypass the locks.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 19, 2010 01:43

I cautiously follow Speed-R down D1.

written by 4616599 on Mar 19, 2010 05:54

Making some attempt to drag Star-R along, (I leave her at the square or at the warehouse entrance if she's too stiff or unwilling to move. I motion for Albey-R and E_net-R to follow too.) I head for corridor D2, behind Speed-R.

written by Gligar on Mar 19, 2010 17:14⁵¹

So, we have Speed-R, L4-R, and Joris-R, as well as some who apparently suffer from My Brain Isn't Here Syndrome, and some that suffer from I'd Rather Disobey Orders Syndrome. (Remind me to have them twiddled.) Let's continue.

Corridor D1

The aforementioned three cautiously exit the warehouse. It looks clear. Unfortunately, Star-R, Albey-R and E_net-R aren't with them, since they apparently suffer from My Brain Isn't Here Syndrome, which, by the way, is ultimately fatal.

Speed-R is the first to move. He heads for D2, but apparently trip up over his own feet, and executes a perfect faceplant into the synthcrete floor.

⁵¹ GLIGAR: (OOO: are we missing half the roster? I've never seen that before at all, no, definitely not...)

Then it's Joris-R's turn. He's more successful and actually makes it.

Then, L4-R. He also makes it.

Not long after, a PRPF patrol exits from a room in D1. They're not looking in the direction of D2 yet.

Corridor C1

Apparently, Cryo-R is ignoring orders, and wants to wreal havoc in the food storage. It's a good thing that the door's locked. The lock could be bypassed, maybe, with the right tools...

written by 4616599 on Mar 19, 2010 17:36

I open the first door a crack and peer in.

written by Speeder on Mar 19, 2010 19:24

If the PRPF noticed me⁵², I just act like dead. If the PRPF is to the other side and don't saw me, I carefully crawl toward D2 and hide behind a corner, also pulling with my anyone that may be visible to them.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 19, 2010 22:38

I keep walking in the direction we need to go... in a commie-like manner, if that's even possible.

written by Gligar on Mar 20, 2010 15:57

Corridors D1 and D2

Speed-R notices the PRPF members. Fortunately, they don't see him, since they're looking the other way.

Carefully, he makes his way to D2 and ducks round the corner.

At the same time, one of the PRPF members turns round. Out of the corner of her eye, she sees movement at the end of the corridor. "What was that?"

Apparently hearing this, Joris-R opens a door, to find a hygiene station.

L4-R keeps walking.

written by Speeder on Mar 20, 2010 16:58

I stop, and do my best do not move, but if I hear PRPF walking this way, I quietly walk toward the next door, crack open and enter if nothing dangerous is inside.

If there are dangerous stuff or I fail to open the door, I just wait in the corner with the spear.

written by 4616599 on Mar 20, 2010 17:26

"I don't know, comrade. Nothing but a hygiene station in here. Could be a scrubot. Some poorly programmed ones still roam these parts. Well, 'tis off to work I go. For the people!"

written by Selbio on Mar 20, 2010 18:15

I try to use my towel to unlock the door for Cryo.

⁵² SPEEDER: (OOO: I dunno if the door is between me and D2, or between me and concourse...)

written by Gligar on Mar 20, 2010 23:19

Corridor D1

“Rogue bots? We must investigate this.”

Two of the PRPF start walking down the corridor.

Corridor D2

Hearing this, Speed-R risks moving to another door, just past and opposite to the hygiene station (and the last before the corridor makes a left turn). It’s a double door and looks important.

Opening the doors a little and slipping through, Speed-R finds out why: it’s the lounge of the sector’s Troubleshooter Headquarters! There are two doors in the far wall, presumably leading further into the HQ.

Corridor C1

Selbio-R bats at the door with his towel, to no effect.

Cryo-R bashes at the door with his shelf. The door rattles but remains locked.

Are they that hungry? Did they forget that the locks are controlled from the control room?

written by Speeder on Mar 20, 2010 23:51

First I think about going back to help, but... Damn...

So I just proceed further inward the HQ...

“Where is the monitor guy?”

written by Cryoburner on Mar 21, 2010 01:15

“I am that hungry.”

I try using various tools from my toolkit on the door’s locking mechanism.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 21, 2010 03:00

I quickly glance over my shoulder. Seeing the PRPF members coming, I keep walking, looking important.

I pick a door and enter it and hope they don’t follow me in.

written by Selbio on Mar 21, 2010 07:11

I keep trying the towel method.

written by 4616599 on Mar 21, 2010 14:24

“Well, you can have a look at the hygiene station.” I fling the door to the station nearly fully open, gesturing inside. “I doubt it was anything though. If it was anything those filthy capitalists were good at, it was efficient tracking down of rogue bots.”

(I have my fingers crossed behind me, of course)

written by Gligar on Mar 22, 2010 15:19⁵³

THQ

Speed-R notices that the door (the one on the left. I mentioned it in the missing post.) is ajar, so he takes it. It leads to what appears to be a briefing room.

Corridor D2

Seeing the PRPF approaching, L4-R ducks into the THQ door. He notices Speed-R disappearing through the left-hand door.

The PRPF, apparently ignoring everything else, arrives at the hygiene station. “Very well! Wait here.”

They enter, closing the door behind them. There is the quietest of clicks from the door.

Corridor C1

Meanwhile, back in the bunker, Cryo-R is apparently more interested in food that, you know, not committing treason. He pulls out his toolkit and works on bypassing the lock. And he would have completed the work if it weren’t for Selbio-R insisting in batting the thing with his towel. Cryo-R slips and inadvertently stabs Selbio-R in the hand.

written by 4616599 on Mar 22, 2010 16:37

“Aye comrades. If you see any bots, just let me know.”⁵⁴

I wrap the towel around my hand to stop the bleeding and smile in an annoyed manner at Cryo.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 22, 2010 19:49

Since it looks as though Speed-R is going somewhere important, I follow him.

written by Gligar on Mar 23, 2010 01:30

Corridor D2

Joris-R quietly checks the door to find that it is locked.

Corridor C1

Cryo-R doesn’t seem to notice Selbio-R’s expression as he tries once again to bypass the lock. Aha! Success!

THQ Briefing Room

L4-R joins Speed-R in what is now clearly a briefing room. There are ten chairs of differing clearances - RED to GREEN ⁵³ GLIGAR: Wait a minute. I KNOW I posted a turn here. And don’t claim that Mary Lou ate it, mods, because I know that’s a lie.

"Uh... hello? Anyone there? We're here..."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 23, 2010 03:04

I open the door and enter food storage, leaning my shelf in the doorway to prevent the door from closing and potentially locking me in. I also notice Selbio wrapping his hand in a towel.

"Oh! Did you happen to get impaled there? Do not fret, for we have saved the occupants of this bunker from starvation at the hands of the communist influence! The followers of friend computer will get the nourishment they need to fight against the ravages of communism!"

With that, I open the microwave door, allowing the unmicrowaved packages of insta-regular-hot-cold fun to fall out on the floor.

I turn to L4.

"Where is the other guy that was following us?"

written by Gligar on Mar 23, 2010 18:49

THQ Briefing Room

There doesn't seem to be any response. Maybe "Monitor Guy" isn't here yet.

Food storage

Cryo-R opens the microwave, causing its error light to go out, and the packages of Hot/Cold/Insta-Hot/maybe other kinds of Fun to fall out. Interestingly, nothing has burst.

Corridor D2

There are noises from inside the hygiene station, as if someone is trying to make it sound as if extensive searching is happening. The PRPF seems to have not noticed Joris-R speaking. Or the door, for that matter.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 23, 2010 22:22

"I dunno."

I start looking around the room. I peek out of the south door in the process, to see what's in there.

written by Speeder on Mar 24, 2010 00:05

I walk toward the door to the corridor, and hear the door, after hearing only one person, I peek, and upon seeing Joris I signal for him to come over.

I speak in a low voice:

"You, here! The place is here!"

I walk inside again, and leave the door half-open, but I watch the door, in a really watchfull manner, like learned from the hose watcher guy...

written by Gligar on Mar 24, 2010 00:19

THQ Briefing Room

Did you know that THQ has a corridor? Well, it does, right behind the south door.

Speed-R, on the other hand, heads back towards D2.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 24, 2010 00:30

Seeing Speed-R leave, I decide to check out the rest of the corridor.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 24, 2010 03:26

I rip open a package of cold fun, and begin consuming it.

"Om Nom Nom... Nom Nom Nom Nom..."

While nomming, I examine the wrappers and preparation instructions for each of the available foods.

written by 4616599 on Mar 24, 2010 14:37

If the PRPF can hear me, I raise my voice and declare, "Well comrades, the people of the complex need me. I'll have to leave you at the moment.". I subsequently stride very quickly in the direction of the THQ.

written by Gligar on Mar 24, 2010 15:14

THQ Corridor

There are three other doors: two past the briefing room, and one at the end, most likely leading back to the lounge. The corridor is RED Clearance.

At the other end of the corridor is a flight of stairs.

Food Storage

The Insta-Hot Fun wrapper says that the package heats up almost instantly when opened, so there's no need to use the microwave.

The Hot Fun wrapper says to set your microwave to its Hot Fun setting.

Corridor D2

Sounds can be heard from the hygiene station. Sounds like they're still busy in there.

THQ Lounge

Joris-R enters, and notices Speed-R eyeing the entrance.

written by 4616599 on Mar 24, 2010 15:31

I quickly infer from Speed-R's expression that the place seems deserted. Seeing L4-R at the corridor, I follow him in.

Approaching L4-R, I whisper, "A flight of stairs up? I'd note that that Computer Monitor officer apparently somehow popped in on me in an E Level lift entrance. I'd reckon there's more equipment up there."

(I then go upstairs, of course.)

written by Lightning4 on Mar 24, 2010 21:03

I follow to the stairs, but peek in each door along the way to see what else is on this level.

written by Speeder on Mar 24, 2010 21:53

I close the door that Joris left open... (heh, you have to learn after the dock incident, huh?)

Then I follow L4.

"Maybe... The briefing room is deserted, let's see the other rooms on this floor first..."

written by Gligar on Mar 24, 2010 23:34

THQ Lounge

It seems that Joris-R is somehow able to see through the door the the THQ corridor, since he notices L4-R through the closed door, opens it, and enters the corridor himself.

THQ Corridor

Looking through the other doors, a shooting range and what seems to be a training room can be seen. Interestingly, the range has an INFRARED door at its far end.

THQ Concourse, E Level

Joris-R arrives from D Level. The stairs continue up a couple more levels.

The concourse sports several doors, some of which are marked as briefing and debriefing rooms, a couple more are marked as confession booths. If "Monitor Guy" is here, he'll be around here somewhere.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 25, 2010 01:36

I climb the stairs and look around.

"Hello?"

written by Speeder on Mar 25, 2010 01:45

I follow the group.

"Hey, you noticed the infrared door in the shooting rane? Strange huh?"

written by Selbio on Mar 25, 2010 05:44

I look up from my hand and, noticing that the door is open, walk in and eat up.

written by Gligar on Mar 25, 2010 14:59

THQ concourse

Apart from the aforementioned doors, and the stairs, the concourse is adorned only with a table and some chairs. Not even a vendobot in sight.

Each of the doors is fitted with several lights, denoting whether rooms are ready for use, occupied, or whatever. One of them has a READY light lit.

Food storage

Selbio grabs a Cold Fun package, opens it, and begins eating. It doesn't seem to do much for his hunger. Maybe it's a mutation?

Something can be heard moving around in the air ducts.

written by 4616599 on Mar 25, 2010 15:08

I grab a RED-clearance comfy chair, pull it along the wall to a spot near one of the occupied rooms and wait. "Pardon us?", I call.

If there're no occupied rooms, I go to a room that seems to be occupied or carrying out a function, or the room with the Ready light.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 25, 2010 16:42

I go right into the READY room.

written by Speeder on Mar 26, 2010 02:37

I go into the Ready room too.

written by Gligar on Mar 26, 2010 02:50

"Ready" room

As the three of you enter, the READY light goes out, to be replaced by an OCCUPIED light.

The room is similar to the one on C level, except that the lights are out.

There seems to be something else in the room with you.

A voice from the table says, "Well, I see that at least some of you follow orders."

written by Speeder on Mar 26, 2010 02:58

I smile. HAPPILY.

"Greetings, for some reason the other guy got stuck watching a hose, or something like that... And I think that there are other people walking around..."

But I am here, oh, and we refueled the power generator, and I fixed the cloning station and left some equipment there, seemly someone died and already got recloned, since the generator monitors reported that, but I have no idea of where he went after getting decanted."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 26, 2010 03:11

"Hear that? Sounds like there might be something in the ventilation ducts. Communist squirrels, perhaps! In any case, we should probably go find the others."

I grab two packages of insta-hot fun and step out of the room. While leaving the room, I look around for where the sound in the ducts is coming from.⁵⁶

⁵⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: poke)

written by 4616599 on Mar 26, 2010 16:38

I notice Speed-R doing the mandatory smile and follow.

Suddenly noticing 'Monitor guy' opening comms with us, I begin blabbering. "Ah, sir, we're here, though some of the rest seem to have decided not to move or are still stuck in the bunker doing...things? On a random note, I've noticed that we seem to be located near the lift hall I was at earlier. Could I have accessed it straight from the lift hall? I had to go through my Scru-R assumed role again using the D level. Putting that aside, I at least seem to have led a few commies on a vatslime-herring chase after some assumed rogue scrubots... so, anything you need to know?"

written by Gligar on Mar 26, 2010 19:40

THQ "Ready" room

The voice answers Speed-R. "Ah... I see... we have some marginal clones there, do we? It's a wonder they ever get promoted to RED Clearance. But regardless."

The door opens again, and a bot enters. "The reason I brought you here is because of the headquarters' weapons cache. With luck, there should be something there for you to use... laser pistols, or something. The bot will show you the way."

To Joris-R, it adds, "For security reasons, the headquarters is only accessible from D Level. The lift hall on this level is inaccessible from here. And speaking of D Level, good job there."

Corridor C1

The sounds seem to be coming from the ceiling.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 26, 2010 23:35

"Thank you... for friend computer!"

I assume position to follow the bot.

"Thank you. For the good of our friend computer!"

I follow the bot, keeping a close eye on it.

written by Gligar on Mar 27, 2010 15:41

THQ

The bot leads you out of the room, across the concourse, through another room, and into what seems to be an armoury. Many of the cabinets here are closed, and probably locked, but a couple of them are open, revealing several laser pistols and laser rifles, with barrels for each. Another cabinet contains reflex.

written by 4616599 on Mar 27, 2010 17:05

"Ah." I mumble as I enter the armoury. I subsequently glance at the biggest gun available.

written by Speeder on Mar 27, 2010 17:27

I look for the... Most efficient weapon (the biggest may be just cumbersome...).

Or anything that explodes violently (ok, this IS cumbersome.. But it is so fun to kill stuff this way!).

Or a weapon that I can silvertape to my double barrel nut launcher, making a triple barrel weapon... (or wait! I can tape TWO weapons, and make a four barrel double weapon! Got it? Even better, because now instead of holding the tube in a strange way, I can use the weapon grip to aim my nut launcher)

written by Lightning4 on Mar 27, 2010 21:35

I am instantly drawn to the biggest guns available, without care to efficiency. Bigger = better, right?

I also get whatever armor is available.

written by Gligar on Mar 28, 2010 14:02

THQ Armoury

It turns out that the biggest weapon available is a cone rifle, but it's BLUE Clearance. There's ammunition and triggers for the same available.

I should point out that brevets are not unknown in this sector.

Apart from that, there are the aforementioned laser pistols and rifles. There are plenty of barrels left of varying clearances.

Also present are more grenades, and some ORANGE blasters.

As for armour, the choice is a little less broad. Both kevlar and reflex are available. (And yes, you can wear both at the same time.)

written by Speeder on Mar 28, 2010 14:30

I remove my reflex, wear the kevlar, then wear the reflect again.

"Good... Just hope that reflex shrapnel don't damage the kevlar..."

I take one rifle, and some RED barrels for it, and I also mount as mentioned my double barrel nut launcher on the rifle, so now I can hold the nut launcher using the rifle grip.

I put the rifle back on where the double barreled nut launcher was.

I look at the grenades... Naaah, I already have some...

"Someone here want to be our explosivist and carry a large amount of grenades around?"

⁵⁷ SPEEDER: (OOC: stats, map? No, I am not unhappy, it is that this would make our lives easier, oh mighty high programmer of the great UV clearance, also known as game master).

written by Gligar on Mar 28, 2010 21:26

How handy. It's a pity that the rifle's barrel is now rather difficult to change.

The whole contraption seems a little incomplete without some sort of... fire... thing, if you know what I mean? 😊

written by Speeder on Mar 28, 2010 21:52

After some time, looking at the stupid design that I made, I make something else.

I remove the rifle from the doublebarrel weapon, and holster it on my back, alongside the spear, and then I use a pistol grip on the double barrel weapon, of course this mean that the pistol will never be used to fire laser, but that is not the point anyway...

"So, I have a really good energy weapon, and a really crappy slugthrower, just in case someone is wearing only reflec, and my spear... Noone want the grenades, really?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 28, 2010 23:37

My expression drops once I see the blue clearance. I turn around and return to the dark ready room.

I nervously clear my throat.

"Uhm... would it be possible for a promotion? Maybe temporary? I would certainly like to hold one of those neat cone rifles. I even have a name picked out for him." ...

Not knowing if anyone is still there, of course.

written by 4616599 on Mar 29, 2010 13:47

Taking a laser pistol and 25 barrels, I wait for 'monitor guy''s response to L4-R. I'd want some of those blasters too.

written by Gligar on Mar 29, 2010 15:06THQ "Ready" Room

"Promoting a RED citizen all the way up to BLUE Clearance might be a little... excessive, don't you think? However, I can still issue brevets. Proper promotions are not exactly possible with the local compnode offline. By the way, you'll need to get to V Level to access it."

L4-R feels some paper being pressed into his hand. "These should suffice for now. There are three ORANGE brevets, plus one for the cone rifle. We'll talk about... payment later."

THQ Armoury

Unfortunately, there aren't 25 RED laser barrels...

written by Lightning4 on Mar 29, 2010 21:27

Excited, I scamper back down to the armoury after thanking him.

"Hey, we got some ORANGE brevets!"

I pass them out.

I also take and arm a cone rifle.

I point it around a little before holding it in an idle position, ready for combat.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 29, 2010 21:29

"Oh, by the way, he mentioned something about a compnode and V Level... that would make proper promotions possible for us."

written by Speeder on Mar 29, 2010 22:57

I peer at L4.

"Your cloning vat must be broken... You are worried about promotion? ARE YOU A TRAITOR? OUR MISSION IS TO BRING THAT COMPNODE BACK ONLINE, YOUR FORGOT? WE ARE NOT TO GET THERE TO BE PROMOTED, WE ARE TO GET THERE TO FIX IT!"

Then I take the brevet and smile. "But that would be useful, now we can use some stuff that we saw along the way..."

After some time I say. "Ok, we have what we need now..."

I take some rifle barrels too, oh, orange... Also I change the armours for a orange ones.

Then I think a bit and say. "In the B level, there was lots of Orange places, we may find more information or useful equipment there... Anyone coming with me? Also, someone should go to that security station, and unlock the doors for us, and etc... If you get what I mean, I wonder who messed with the station, since noone was ORANGE before..."

written by 4616599 on Mar 30, 2010 12:40

I take the orange brevet, smiling at the walls and ceilings. Well, the person on the screen must be watching from somewhere, right?

After discovering the lack of 25 barrels, I cram 10 into a pocket, along with the RED laser pistol. I grab an ORANGE blaster and some reflec plates too.

written by Speeder on Mar 30, 2010 12:59⁵⁸

I look at Joris.

"If you want to be a walking armoury, can you please take the grenades too?"

written by 4616599 on Mar 30, 2010 13:13

"Nope. Not at the moment. A truck-sized pocket is enough."

written by Gligar on Mar 30, 2010 15:35THQ Armoury

L4-O (for the sake of simplicity, breveted clearances will be used where appropriate) picks up the cone rifle and some assorted ammunition, remembering to take enough triggers with him (each shell needs its own trigger). It's a comforting feeling, having a cone rifle.

Taking his brevet, Speed-O proceeds to get clone tanks and food vats mixed up. A common mistake, but Tech Services would prefer that you got it right.

⁵⁸ SPEEDER: (OOC: I had to do this comment 😊)

But regardless, he exchanges his armour and barrels for their ORANGE equivalents. There, much better.

Joris-O tries to pick up ten RED pistol barrels, an actual pistol, and a blaster. But he can't carry that much. Perhaps he'd like to find a backpack? There's one over there...

He does wear some ORANGE reflec, though, and put the blaster in a pocket.

written by 4616599 on Mar 30, 2010 16:38

Joris-O-MKR? Somehow there's a slight sense of deja vu there??

"No matter," I attempt to put away the RED pistol and the ten barrels,"this will do." I then take an ORANGE pistol and three barrels, as well as fifty tightening elastic barrel straps, which I shove into a nearby backpack.

"Anyone interested in taking supplies and such back to the rest in the bunker?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 30, 2010 16:47

I finally put on both kinds of ORANGE armor, making sure the reflec is on the outside.

"Ready to go... erm... did he say where we were going?"

written by Speeder on Mar 30, 2010 19:06

I peer at L4 for a moment.

"You must be ungodly stupid... Or a really intelligent traitor..."

Then I look annoyed, but only for a while, suddenly I look happy again.

"Yes! Our great friend, told us that we are to fix the node, that is located on floor V, but it is dangerous to go there without planning, information and equipment, also, we are in danger of being shot as traitors wearing ORANGE armor and RED jumpsuit, so I suggest we go first fetch ORANGE jumpsuits in some of the ORANGE dormitories that we saw, and then we should explore the B level for more information and equipment."

I start to walk toward the exit, but I stop near the THQ exit, and try to hear if there are commies outside.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 30, 2010 19:42

I look like a sad puppy for a moment after being insulted.

It passes. I decide to explore the rest of THQ HQ first. I peek out of a couple of the east exits.

written by Gligar on Mar 31, 2010 15:51

THQ armoury

Joris-O runs into yet more problems, as there don't seem to be any tightening elastic barrel straps... oh well. There are three ORANGE laser barrels and a laser pistol. That, and the backpack, will have to do.

L4-O dons some armour. That's better.

Speed-O goes to leave.

THQ Lounge

It seems that there are some irate Communists in the corridor outside, working on a door that seems to be stuck in 'locked' mode.

THQ Concourse

Exploring a little, L4-O finds two confession booths, both with Computer Monitors, displaying static.

written by Speeder on Apr 01, 2010 00:45

I go check if the guy in the Ready room is there... Because, or either he is stuck inside with us, or he knows another exit, or he used another exit...

If I find him, I ask him for other exit.

If not, I try to find other exit myself...

written by Gligar on Apr 01, 2010 14:51

THQ 'Ready' Room

The room is still dark. As Speed-O enters, he feels a breeze. Perhaps the ventilation systems are faulty?

The room seems emptier now. It seems that "Monitor Guy" is gone.

And there doesn't seem to be another exit on this level.

written by 4616599 on Apr 01, 2010 18:15

Noticing the backpack, I decide to bring some supplies for those in the bunker, so I cram in 12 RED barrels, 10 RED pistols, 15 grenades, 3 RED rifles, and 3 RED slugthrowers, and a two spare ORANGE pistols(including a barrel for each), another ORANGE barrel plus an ORANGE slugthrower. I throw in an ORANGE rifle for good measure. There, enough to fill the bag, I'd think.

"Okay Speed-R, I think you have your portable armoury now."

written by Gligar on Apr 02, 2010 01:29⁵⁹

THQ Armoury

There, that's better. See how much easier it is to carry things when you have a backpack?

The only problem? The slugthrowers are the semi-automatic GREEN variety.

written by Speeder on Apr 02, 2010 04:08

Hearing my name, I return to the supply room. "Oh... Good... We have a problem, commies are all over the corridor outside, my suggestion is, or we figure if we can use the ventilation⁶⁰, or we just can... kill everyone on the corridor."

⁵⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: just so it's clear, the laser pistol body and the laser rifle body (without the barrels) are both RED Clearance. It's the barrels that have the higher clearances. It's no problem to make sure they're loaded with the correct barrels, though.)

⁶⁰ SPEEDER: (OOC: blue combat deja-vu now...)

THQ Lounge

Having managed to bypass the lock on the hygiene station's door and free their comrades, the communists have moved on, and discovered THQ.

The door to which was still unlocked.

The communists now split up into two groups, with one group investigating each door.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 02, 2010 21:19

"Selbio, perhaps we should let the others in the bunker know of our success in re-securing the food supply."

I wander back down the corridor toward concourse C1, carefully examining my pillow as I go.

written by Speeder on Apr 02, 2010 22:08

"Ok... Noone awnsers... I will go blast commies..."

I arm the rifle with ORANGE barrel, load my double barrel weapon, but the weapon on my waist, and hold the rifle in combat position, and exit the room carefully.

written by 4616599 on Apr 03, 2010 06:57

"Commie vatslime!" Can't get us outta this one."

Standing at the armoury entrance, I get my orange blaster in place, also handing a grenade to Speed-R as he passes. I try to strain my ears to pick out what the commies appear to be saying.

written by Gligar on Apr 03, 2010 15:38

Corridor C1

Cryo-R examines the pillow in detail. It is, essentially, a RED plastilyke bag full of used packaging. At some point in its life, this pillow has had a slit cut into it, which has been repaired.

THQ Concourse

Looks like the Commies haven't got here yet. But the place feels a little too quiet.

As he passes, Joris-O offers Speed-O a grenade.

Voices can be heard from downstairs, but nothing can be understood, as if the language isn't Alpha Complex Standard.

written by Speeder on Apr 03, 2010 17:39

I look to Joris and quietly say. "Ok, hide, we don't to blow your cover..."

Then I pull the pin, and throw BOTH downstairs (dunno what will explode...)

written by Lightning4 on Apr 04, 2010 01:35

I pull the pin on one of my grenades and toss both downstairs as well.

I ready my cone rifle just in case.

written by 4616599 on Apr 04, 2010 11:22

"Ugh." I mumble "There goes our cover." Well, might as well. Now what's sometimes more potent than those grenades? Crouching and running to the stairs, I shake a can of B3 and toss it down. As it impacts the base of the stairs, I fire at it with my blaster. I then hastily retreat to the armoury.

written by Gligar on Apr 04, 2010 14:18

THQ Corridor

The Communists continue to investigate THQ.

However, their search is interrupted when they encounter some grenades, thrown from above. And a can of B3, which gets blasted from above.

There is an explosion. Well, three, all in the same place.

Some of the Communists are caught in the blast, and are killed. One is slightly luckier, and only sustains injuries. But he might not survive long.

But that was only the group exploring the corridor. The other group, who entered the briefing room, are shaken but unharmed. They enter the corridor and pick up their fallen comrades' weapons. There is conversation.

written by Speeder on Apr 04, 2010 20:02

I pick one of my own grenades, remove the pin and throw them both downstairs again.

"You two that still have cover, be quiet, so they don't know that you are here fighting them..."

I yell:

"DIE COMMIE SCUM! I KILLED PIETR, NOW I KILL YOU! BECAUSE I AM THE MIGHTY HOLY KNIGHT OF BLESSED COMPUTER TECHNOLOGY! DIE ALL YOU ATHEIST COMMIES!"

written by Gligar on Apr 05, 2010 15:41

THQ Concourse

A VIOLET laser is fired up the stairs, missing Speed-O by a wide margin.

A voice is heard below: "You are a traitor to the-"

Then the grenade explodes.

There is the sound of broken synthcrete falling... and then part of the floor caves in near the stairs.

written by Speeder on Apr 05, 2010 16:15

I jump to the ground, and start to fire randomly my ORANGE laser rifle inside the new hole and the stairs.

written by 4616599 on Apr 05, 2010 16:28

VIOLET? Whoa, some of those commies sure have high clearance stuff. I take a square piece of kevlar, and crouch down using it to shield my face, with a blaster sticking out of one end. I then inch slightly out into the concourse. Providing some supporting fire, I fire a blaster round just clear of the hole into somewhere down the stairs.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 06, 2010 00:38

I ready my cone rifle, then let loose a blast into the hole.

THQ Concourse

There is the sound of someone falling over below. Then, some groaning.

Then, beeping.

written by Speeder on Apr 07, 2010 01:34

As I hear the beep, I only can say, "Oh... this is not good... Tell me, that the cone rifle, is not a explosive launcher..."

I run the farthest I can from the stairs, and crawl there, pointing with the rifle to the staircase.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 07, 2010 04:24

"Um... I'm not sure. I just know it's a really big gun."

In a moment of better judgment, I too back far enough away from the hole, my cone rifle trained on the hole.

written by Gligar on Apr 07, 2010 13:54

The only sound from below is the beeping.

Then, silence.

A noxious smell drifts up from below.

written by Speeder on Apr 08, 2010 15:50

"Oooh, nice... Gas bomb?"

I hold my breath, and go check the hole. Rifle in hand.

written by 4616599 on Apr 08, 2010 17:41

Still covering much of my face with the kevlar plate, I keep my blaster in my pocket, then take an improvised gas mask(I place the tip of an unloaded ORANGE rifle to my nostrils ,breathing the air inside) and creep cautiously towards the stairs.

written by Gligar on Apr 09, 2010 12:25

THQ Concourse

Down the hole, there is very little activity. There are a number of Communist corpses, one of which has turned an interesting mix of BLUE, GREEN, and INFRARED. The whole thing is bathed in a thick soup of VIOLET gas which clings to the floor. The smell is enough to nauseate those with a weak stomach, and that's just from the fumes that made their way up. I would imagine that the gas itself is a lot more, shall we say, Fun, to experience.

Unfortunately, as it turns out, laser barrels don't really make a good gas mask.

written by Speeder on Apr 09, 2010 18:14

I run toward the corridor end, take another breath, then I run the fast that I can until the hole edge, and jump, with intention to skip all the... strange stuff, and land the nearest the door I can, and leave the THQ.

Oh, before doing that I fasten my stuff around me, to make sure that nothing will fall while I move around like that.

THQ Corridor

After getting as much of a run-up as he can, Speed-O jumps through the hole.

Hey, that's actually quite a nice jump!

I'm not sure Speed-O wanted to land right in the gas, though...

Speed-O loses all sensation in his body, and breathing becomes difficult...

written by Speeder on Apr 10, 2010 01:12

I do my best to... Still move toward the exit...

written by Lightning4 on Apr 10, 2010 02:37

I stay upstairs and look for a room to hide in for the gas to dissipate.

written by 4616599 on Apr 10, 2010 08:11

I thoughtlessly back away from the stairwell, load the laser rifle, and shoot at the stairwell base. I also check the west concourse doors.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 10, 2010 09:38

"Wow... that was a rather long corridor."

I swiftly arrive at concourse C1 and greet the scrubot, seeing as E_net-R seems to have entered a trance-like state, and the PRPF members seem to have been dissolved, making them all rather difficult to talk to.

"Some of the rooms back there are fairly dusty, just in case you were curious. 😊"

I take a look around, then head into the meeting hall.

written by Gligar on Apr 10, 2010 14:05

THQ Corridor

The numbness briefly gives way to a wave of pain, catching Speed-O off guard. He manages, even through the lack of sensation in his skin, to pull himself away from the cloud of gas and into the briefing room before another wave of pain overtakes him. Grimly, he concentrates on not passing out from the pain.

THQ Concourse

L4-O returns to the armoury and closes the door. That, he reasons, should keep him away from the gas.

⁶¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: I can't resist rolling for this now...)

Joris-O thoughtlessly shoots his rifle down the stairs at the gas. Some of the gas briefly catches fire before extinguishing itself.

Out of the two western doors, one is locked, and the other turns out to lead to a hygiene station.

Concourse C1

"Ah, good. They were locked when I last went through."

The scrubot trundles down the corridor.

Meeting hall

There are still a number of clones here milling about, including Mega-R.

written by 4616599 on Apr 10, 2010 17:07

I enter the hygiene station, leaving the door completely ajar. I then fling open all the doors inside.

I then address the place, "Ahem..Is there a computer in here? We're having a serious, treasonous problem outside. Please start up all cubicle showerheads. Full blast." Activating the showers, I grab an oxygen mask, kneel outside a cubicle still covering my head with the kevlar shield, and wait.

written by Speeder on Apr 10, 2010 20:18

I... walk... try to run... whatever...

I need to open the exit door, breath good air... Outside...

Yet I still scream.

"YOU SHOOT ME AGAIN, I IMPALE YOU ON MY SPEAR!"

Of course, that sounds more like a pain scream than a anger scream... But... whatever.

THQ Hygiene Station

For a moment, nothing happens.

Then a bot's voice answers, "What's your authorisation code? That function is limited to [DFSR] and [DFSR] personnel only."

THQ Briefing Room/Lounge

Speed-O is still going... though he passes out after he crawls to the briefing room's other door (still open)... ⁶²

He comes to again, only to pass out again in the lounge...

"Erm...we're the only one of Friend Computer's troubleshooter teams in the sector. The only team, so we're of high importance to all high clearance citizens in the sector, as well as the security of the sector itself." I ponder for a moment, and then suddenly recall 'Monitor guy's' PDC number. "If you need authorisation, I believe 49302 will do."

⁶² GLIGAR: (ooc: and where's my d20 trundled off to? Oh there it is.)

I continue maintaining my position, hoping to hear the deep rumble of liquid about to blast through the station.

written by Speeder on Apr 11, 2010 18:01

As I go, or... not go, toward the door, I start to make agonizing sounds... More like theatrical, so someone come save me... But I continue my quest toward the door...

written by Gligar on Apr 12, 2010 15:25

THQ Hygiene Station

"Well, the usual maintenance team hasn't arrived, not that that's anything out of the ordinary, and the station hasn't been used for at least two Mandatory Toilet Break Periods, and I can't contact The Computer for instructions on any network. And that looks like a high-clearance PDC number. Hold on."

THQ Lounge

Speed-O regains consciousness, and tries once more to reach the door out of THQ. But another wave of pain immobilises him.

THQ Hygiene Station

"Hmmm, the PDC network is having problems, too. Therefore I must assume that the sector has been overrun by Commies and... wait a minute, I'm getting a PDC signal. Let me try and call that number."

As the station tries the call, the PDCs of all those who have a PDC beep.

written by 4616599 on Apr 12, 2010 16:19

"Yes, major treasonous events are happening in the sector, a threat to someone of any Computer organisation or rank."

"Perhaps bots too." I whisper in a lower tone.

I then note the beeping of the PDC, and hold it up to have a glance, mildly surprised.

written by Speeder on Apr 12, 2010 17:39

Huh... I... painfully retrieve the PDC, and pick it up.

"Hello? Anyone there? Help me please! I fell in the middle of commie toxic gas! I am dieing! Heeeeeeeelppp!"

written by Cryoburner on Apr 13, 2010 01:48

"Ah!"

Surprised, I throw my PDC at the wall, then stomp on it.

"Good news, everyone!"

"I have just returned from an important mission of securing food for this bunker, after supplies were cut off by the communist influence!"

I notice Mega-R standing off to the side, and decide to put him in charge of distributing the food.

"Here you go! Now share this with everyone!"

I tear open a packet of Insta-Hot fun and hand it to Mega-R. He seems to be pre-occupied with a vendbot or something though, so I just slide it into his hip pocket and give it a tap to let him know it's there.

written by Gligar on Apr 13, 2010 13:53

Those who check their PDC are surprised to note that the things actually have a one-bar signal now. There's even a message waiting.

Of course, Cryo-R just destroyed his. Or tried to. All that actually happened was that the casing came away, and the insides dropped to the floor in a lump, the screen of which displays a SYSTEM ERROR message... and something about self-destruct... but it could be nothing.

THQ Lounge

Speed-O's cry for help goes unheeded... or does it?

THQ Hygiene station

"Okay, citizen, it looks like I've got the go-ahead. Here goes!"

There is the rumbling of water from somewhere.

A moment later it reaches the showerheads and, in a torrents, is jetted out into the hygiene station, and from there, down the stairs.

THQ Corridor

The gas seems to collect on the surface of the water, and is pulled along with it, towards the door.

THQ Lounge

Right past Speed-O.

He's got his head down, right?

written by Speeder on Apr 14, 2010 02:48

After I notice that noone talked to me on the phone, I try to get up and walk, as water come, I stop and stare at it.

"What the?"

Suddenly I realized that I don't turned off the PDC, I look at the screen and see the message thing... I try to read it without dropping on the water after all the pain...

written by Gligar on Apr 14, 2010 11:48*THQ Lounge*

Getting up is difficult with no feeling in your body... so it takes a little while. But Speed-O manages it.

This puts his head above the water, and the VIOLET gas is it rushes past, forcing the door open as it does. The water doesn't do much for the smell, though.

Speed-O reads the message:

COMPLETE YOUR MISSION, CITIZEN, OR BE TERMINATED
...before falling to the floor again.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 14, 2010 12:29

Having completed my ever-important mission, my attention now turns to what's next, and I note the crumpled PDC on the meeting room floor.

"Hmm... I wonder if I'll be needing that..."

I examine the message on the screen a bit closer, while maintaining my distance from it, and with my shelf held in front of me. I also look a bit closer at whether the PDC might be fixable.

written by 4616599 on Apr 14, 2010 16:46

"Thank you, bot." I thank the bot.

After thanking the bot, and mumbling something about thanking bots being unusual, I wade out into the concourse, reading the PDC message. Well, at least he was watching.

I put the kevlar shield and PDC back inside my pocket, getting the blaster out again.

"L4-O(or B?)? I believe things have cleared up now, though the places seems a good but wetter. You can come out. Monitor person was kind enough to give us this quick respite before reminding us of our mission."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 14, 2010 21:21

"Oh. Thanks."

I look at my cone rifle, and after seeing its effects I decide to strap it to my back. Before leaving the armory, I grab whatever ORANGE clearance small-arms I can find and grab the appropriate equipment for them.

written by Speeder on Apr 14, 2010 22:53

I rest a bit. Although with my face outside the water, until someone come downstairs.

written by Gligar on Apr 15, 2010 14:36*Meeting hall*

The message reads

COMPLETE YOUR MISSION, CITIZEN, OR BE TERMINATED
The PDC starts emitting smoke. The surrounding clones back away.

THQ Concourse

The showerheads in the hygiene station can be heard switching off. I guess it'll be a while before the station can be used again.

THQ Armoury

L4-O notices that the cone rifle shells have what seems to be a colour code on them. The gas shell's code matches the codes of two of his other shells.

Putting the cone rifle away for now, L4-O finds another laser pistol body, and two ORANGE barrels - seemingly the last in the armoury - as well as a blaster.

written by Speeder on Apr 15, 2010 15:42

Since noone came up... I stand, ready my rifle, and maybe magically better, I stroll to the exit.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 15, 2010 22:37

I look at my PDC sort of puzzled, "How exactly would termination happ-" I quickly catch myself from such treasonous thoughts and look around to check that nobody heard me.

I finally decide to leave the armory. I go down the stairs to survey the damage to the room.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 16, 2010 12:34

"Hmm... I guess they want me to get more food, or something..."

I also back away, leaving the PDC's smoking remnants on the floor of the meeting hall. Inhaling PDC fumes probably isn't healthy, after all. I file in behind the other clones who are backing away, and while they're distracted by the smoking device, I feel around for any stray PDC that might have been carelessly abandoned in one of their pockets.

written by Gligar on Apr 16, 2010 14:52

THQ Lounge

With the gas out of the way, Speed-O feels well enough to stand and leave THQ.

Corridor D2

He makes it to the corridor, before doubling over in another wave of pain. He seems to be getting used to the no-sensation thing.

THQ Corridor

L4-O finds that the corridor near the stairs is full of damp shrapnel - mostly synthcrete fallen from the ceiling and walls - and soggy dead Communists. The VIOLET gas has been moved elsewhere.

Meeting hall

Cryo-R casually moves to leave, and attempts to, er, obtain another PDC. There's another clone right there... surely he won't notice if Cryo-R just... opens a pocket...

"Hey! What do you think you're doing?!"

I guess he would.

This distracts everyone from the smouldering PDC, whereupon it explodes.

BANG

Nearby clones - which is to say, everyone - are thrown back by the explosion.

Mega-R sustains a few bruises and has a clone fall on top of him. That clone was less fortunate.

Cryo-R ends up beneath the attempted theft victim, and sustains a broken leg.

Crack

And a broken rib.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 16, 2010 16:33

"Wow... that doesn't feel particularly pleasant. Perhaps I should have just left the room. At least my light bulb didn't break." 😊

I drag myself over to the fallen clones and continue rummaging for a spare PDC.⁶³

written by Speeder on Apr 17, 2010 01:57

Meeting hall

Cryo-R doesn't get a chance to move. Why? Simple. The attempted theft victim isn't moving.

Why isn't he moving? Because something seems to be on fire.

What's on fire? That packet of Insta-Hot Fun that Cryo-R stuffed into Mega-R's pocket a while back. In fact, the fire has already spread to his jumpsuit.

See, this is what you get when you completely ignore that fact that you have an opened packet of Insta-Hot Fun in your pocket.

Corridor D2

The pain disappears again, giving way to no-sensation. Urgh.

Speed-O reaches the intersection and notices that the door to the hygiene station is no longer there, having been removed.

Peering down Corridor D1, he sees a couple of Communists coming out of the warehouse, heading for Revolutionary Square.

THQ Corridor

L4-O searches the Communists and finds some cone rifle shells with triggers, three VIOLET laser pistol barrels, and a Com 1 unit. The latter doesn't seem to be working, probably due to the water.

written by Speeder on Apr 18, 2010 04:06

I sit on a near fetal position on a corner, waiting for them to move out....

I do that, just in case a shooting pain happen, I don't fall and scream like nuts...

⁶³ CRYOBURNER: Wait... Do I still have two packets of Insta-Hot Fun? I seem to recall opening one and stuffing it in Mega-R's pocket. 😊

⁶⁴ GLIGAR: OOC: Maybe, but since Mega has basically abandoned us...

Corridor D2 intersection

Speed-O tries to remain quiet as the Communists head towards the square.

As he does, he moans a little as another wave of pain arrives.

One of the Communists apparently hears it and stops, as if wondering where the noise came from. "I thought I heard something."

His companion replies, "I didn't hear anything."

"Probably the air vents."

And with that, they continue walking.

Meeting hall

Mega-R's jumpsuit is still on fire. That must be painful. And the B3 that someone's about to pour over it... might help, I guess...

written by 4616599 on Apr 18, 2010 15:54

Keeping my blaster in my pocket, and my kevlar shield tucked under an arm across my chest, I wade to the exit. "This place probably will need the attention of a scrubot cleaning group.", I note.

Corridor D2

As L4-O closes the THQ door behind him (with a little difficulty due to the water) the Communists reach the Square, and finally react to the water. "Where did that come from?" The gas is nowhere to be found, though.

⁶⁵ CRYOBURNER: Hey, I was going to do that.. 😊

The citizen with the B3 manages to pour it... in exactly the wrong place. Mega-R still doesn't react.

The vendobot, on the other hand, replies, "Sure thing," and dispenses four cans of B3.

Corridor C1

There doesn't seem to be anyone watching* so Speed-R makes a run for it.

He almost makes it to the warehouse doors before another wave of pain knocks him to the floor. But hid forward momentum turns that into a forward roll instead, and he ends up rolling into the warehouse. It... kind of looks deliberate.

L4-O follows, only without the forward roll.

Warehouse (let's dispense with the 'damaged' qualifier)

The place is almost as it was before. A few things have been placed on shelves (including the possessions of the deceased PRPF members from earlier, Pitr and Aleksandr) and some of the toppled shelves have been set up properly.

It seems that none of the Communists even noticed the open blast door, or Albey-R, still standing on the stairs.

Meeting hall

As it turns out, pouring a can of B3 onto a fire does help put it out... but when that fire is so close to a living clone, there are... complications. For example, if the fire were to spread to the clone, and the B3 poured on it, the burning sensation experienced by the clone intensifies greatly. Indeed, a clone who was previously unaware that they were on fire might be floored by the intense pain that they now feel when the B3 and the fire interact. The precise chemical interactions going on here are fascinating to chemical engineers, but are unfortunately of too high a clearance for me to go into here.

Another complication is that... well, even though the B3 does reduce the fire, it doesn't do so for long when Insta-Hot Fun is involved...

written by Speeder on Apr 20, 2010 16:00

I try to get up from the roll and say. "Whoa, I am awesome!"

Then I proceed quickly to the stairs, this time taking caution to not fall down in pain in the middle of the steps...

Oh, and I avoid Albey, while saying "Hi!" and waving to him, HAPPILY (did I say happily? No... I said HAPPILY, REALLY HAPPY, CONTAGIOUSLY HAPPY, so even a grumpy computer get HAPPY seeing my HAPPYness)

written by 4616599 on Apr 20, 2010 16:25

I head for the warehouse too. "Ah well, hopefully the place is still clean and neat and well organised. What's the worst that could happen?"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 20, 2010 21:13

I walk up to Albey and wave my hand in front of him. I then prod him to see if he tips over like a statue or something.

Now in safety, I split away and descend into the bunker. I make my way to the ORANGE dormitories on C-level.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 21, 2010 04:29

I open a second can of B3, and once again splash it on Mega-R's jumpsuit, this time directing it toward the pocket containing Insta-Hot Fun. I then grab a pair of wire cutters out of my toolkit, and cut a hole in the bottom of that pocket, being careful to keep my hands away from any fire, and maintaining enough distance to avoid anything that may fall out.

written by Gligar on Apr 21, 2010 15:53

Warehouse

Joris-O enters the warehouse just as Speed-O descends.

Warehouse Stairs

Albey-R doesn't respond to Speed-O, regardless of how cheerful he is.

L4-O descends after Speed-O. He tries to get some response out of Albey-R, to no avail. Trying to push him over results in him falling over in a comical fashion.

Satisfied, L4-O heads into the bunker proper.

Concourse C1

The concourse is unchanged. There seems to be some sort of commotion coming from the meeting hall. Apparently, there's some sort of fire.

Meeting hall

With the first can doing little to help Mega-R, Cryo-R tries again, this time closer to the course of the fire. As before, the fire dies down a little.

Enough for Cryo-R to get in with the wire cutters and cut open Mega-R's pocket. This spills molten Insta-Hot Fun over more of Mega-R's jumpsuit.

Where it catches fire again.

Mega-R passes out from the pain.

The spreading fire causes his ME card to catch on fire, and his can of B3 Plain to begin to bulge under pressure. It might even be rumbling.

Dormitory 2

Ah, that's better. There's a lot more open space here than the RED dormitory.

Also, you have to share it with less people.

As mentioned previously, there are 12 beds and lockers to match.

written by 4616599 on Apr 21, 2010 16:42

I see the smoke and hear the rumble coming from the bunker's concourse. Could there be CMTs in our team? Drawing my kevlar shield and my blaster again, I begin going down the warehouse stairs.

written by Speeder on Apr 21, 2010 22:06

"Oooh, holy shit... What is going on there?"

I walk to the security console, press the button (that I know from before) to close the bunker door after Joris arrives on the stairs.

Then I try to figure if there are a button on the console to activate sprinklers or other anti-fire measures.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 22, 2010 00:13

I swap out my RED jumpsuit for an ORANGE one, as well as look for anything else I could use here now that I have the proper clearance to be doing so.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 22, 2010 00:24

"Oh, wow... I guess that... did something."

"I'll go see if I can find anyone who might be able to lend us some further assistance."

I crawl out of the room and into Concourse C1, carrying my pillow behind me, and shelf behind that, to act as some rudimentary armor, just in case. 😊

I wonder if the B3 will extinguish the fire. That would be convenient. 😊

written by Gligar on Apr 22, 2010 16:20

Control room

Once he arrives, Speed-O glances at one of the camera feeds and notices Joris-O descending into the bunker. Once he's in, Speed-O presses the button to close the blast doors.

Another look at the control panel doesn't show a sprinkler control anywhere. But over there in the ORANGE section is the terminal, currently displaying a Computer icon bouncing around the screen.

Dormitory 2

Opening a locker, L4-O finds an ORANGE jumpsuit and matching boots. He takes the opportunity to change attire. Also in the locker is a large towel.

Meeting hall

As Cryo-R leaves, Mega-R's can of B3 explodes, sending shrapnel into Mega-R... and actually, no-one else. Again, the fire dies down somewhat. But perhaps Mega-R doesn't care any more.

written by 4616599 on Apr 22, 2010 16:50

Still nervously peeking from behind my kevlar shield, I notice the smoking Mega-R and attempt to formulate a response.

"Oh? Oh. Oh! Ohhh! Well, I probably really shouldn't interfere."

Just in case it helps, I push a chair toward Mega-R. "Err...there you go!" I then flee back to the control room entrance. "You don't happen to have a fire extinguisher, do you?" I ask a nearby vendbot, "or at least a Friend Computer Extra Happy Classic Carbon Algae Drink, perhaps?"

written by Speeder on Apr 22, 2010 21:19

After peering at the computer icon button thing, I press it. Of course, getting jumpy as I hear Mega exploding.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 22, 2010 22:10

I swipe the towel, suddenly remembering an old adage about never going anywhere without one.

I then also remember that there was an unexplored ORANGE office down on B level. I get distracted by the smoke drifting down the hall, and go to find the source.

I find Mega's burning body and attempt to smother it with my towel.

written by Megagun on Apr 22, 2010 22:25

"OH GOD WHAT IS THIS AAAAAAARGH"

written by Cryoburner on Apr 23, 2010 07:09

Hearing the blast, followed by Mega-R's horrible screams, I crawl back into the meeting room to find him on the floor, apparently getting smothered by L4-O.

Or maybe he's just trying to put the fire out. It's difficult to tell from this vantage point.

In any case, I decide that the situation may be taking care of itself, and proceed to crawl underneath the plastilyke chairs, and closely examine their undersides.

written by Gligar on Apr 23, 2010 16:53

Meeting hall

Apparently, Mega-R isn't dead yet. He comes round long enough to yell how much it hurts.

The vendobot replies, "Sorry, I can't help you with that."

L4-O arrives with a large towel. Seeing Mega-R on fire, he attempts to put out the flames with the towel.

Cryo-R decides to take the time to examine the plastilyke chairs. As it turns out, there are two types of chairs: ones that are all one piece, and ones that can fold flat.

Control room

Touching the icon brings up the command prompt again. It seems that there's a fault with a filter somewhere.

written by Speeder on Apr 23, 2010 17:03

I see if I can request it to take automatically the recommended action. (I know that this is not an anti-virus.. But... I always wanted to request that!)

Then I also request the computer to take whatever action possible to put out the fire on Megagun. (if that results in loss of oxygen on Megagun room... sorry!)

written by Megagun on Apr 23, 2010 17:13

I roll around, notice Cryo-R, and run towards him, trying to hug him whilst whispering "You have no idea how much this hurts".

written by Cryoburner on Apr 24, 2010 03:51

I notice Mega-R's questionable advances, and decide it might be best to maintain a safe distance. He seems to be in something of a 'touchy feely' mood following L4-O's thorough pat down. Also, he may still be on fire.

"Oh, I'm happy to see you up and about. You seem to be doing well. I hope you had a pleasant meal, at least prior to it catching fire."

"I really should be going though, what with having broken bones and all."

I crawl out from under the plastilyke chairs, and in the process, happen to knock a stack of them over in the direction of Mega-R. I continue crawling out of the room and into Concourse C1.

written by Gligar on Apr 24, 2010 16:58

Control room

It seems that the recommended action is to contact Technical Services and have them deal with it. Of course, that's not exactly possible right now.

Unfortunately, the faulty filter lies within the water pipes. The terminal refuses to activate the sprinklers, citing the faulty filter, and asks for ORANGE Clearance authorisation to override the filter.

Meeting hall

Somehow, Mega-R regains consciousness, and is able to roll around, which puts out most of the fire. That Insta-Hot Fun just refuses to go out, though. And, comically, Mega-R's hair remains on fire. Strangely, he doesn't seem to be in any sort of distress from the fire.

Cryo-R, quite reasonably, decides to stay clear, accidentally knocking over a stack of chairs towards Mega-R. They land in front of him, giving Cryo-R a chance to get to the concourse.

As you might have guessed, sprinklers have started up in the ceiling. The faulty filter is clearly affecting the water, as it appears slightly brown in colour.

However, it does seem to have the intended effect: Mega-R’s burning hair, and the Fun, sizzle briefly before petering out.

“Now, where were we before that Insta-Hot-Fun so traitorously interrupted us? Oh yes, supplies. You might find this a tad more useful than Insta-Hot Fun and that shelf.” I hand a RED laser pistol to Cryo-R. “I wouldn’t recommend it as a tool for manipulating PDCs or food though.”

“Errr...and I also recall we had another problem with the terminal and the bouncing computer icon...someone...anyone from ComServices here? Should really go have a look at it.”

written by Cryoburner on Apr 28, 2010 10:00

“Thank you for the super-shiny laser pointer! I’ll be sure to use it whenever there’s something worth pointing out!”

“By the way, I think some random clone managed to break my leg when they carelessly fell on me a short while back. Perhaps it might be a good idea to get that taken care of.

Unless someone wants to carry me around everywhere. Crawling might be a little slow, and probably not entirely safe with communists about. As an alternative, maybe we could make a splint, or find me wheels or something.”

Unfortunately, since it's not visible from the corridor, the terminal goes unanswered.

Corridor C1

L4-O heads down to the office.

Office

The door to the office is still unlocked.

The place is gloomy, but now that L4-O can enter, he can make out two rows of four cubicles, each of which contains a Computer terminal. They all seem to be displaying the bouncing Computer icon.

Between the two rows, at the end of the office, is a vendobot.

To the south of the cubicles is a row of filing cabinets. The labels aren't legible in this light.

And finally, to the north, between two cubicles, is another door.

written by 4616599 on Apr 29, 2010 16:02

"Err...no thanks!" I respond to Cryo-R. "There probably might be some hungry commies out there though."

I then set about offloading the other supplies. I put 10 RED laser pistols and the barrels in the locker nearest the South door in the RED dormitory, before heading for the ORANGE dormitory. Once there, I once again open the locker nearest the door and deposit the RED laser rifles and barrels, and the ORANGE laser pistols and barrels, as well as 4 grenades. I subsequently put the locker's ORANGE towel and jumpsuit in the backpack.

With most of the supplies taken care of (though the backpack always seemed so strangely light), I head back across the corridor to the Medical Bay, looking for the docbot.

I investigate one of the computer terminals, attempting to access it and such.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 30, 2010 09:16

Seeing as Joris-O left, I decide to see about that docbot. I drag myself to the medical bay, closely examining the floor along the way. I also look around for the scrubot.

"What happened to him, anyway? I'm rather sure he's not in the concourse anymore, as I watched him head this way..."

I also make a point of recounting my cans of B-3, as I was rather sure I went through two of the four while valiantly rescuing Mega-R from his unfortunate eating mishap.

For that matter, where did those empty cans go? I don't recall ever getting rid of them. 😊

Movement on one of the camera monitors attracts Speed-O's attention.

L4-O tries to access everyone's personnel files but hasn't quite got his head round the antiquated syntax that this system uses.

He is, however, able to discover that the bunker is situated in JHT Sector, subsector Epsilon. It was constructed in Yearcycle 171 of the Computer as part of Operation [code-word removed by order of High Programmer [REDACTED]].

Medical Bay

The floor is the same sort of synthcrete you find in medical bays across the Complex. Though, come to think of it, the newer ones have switched it up a bit with their NearlySoft™ polymer floors.

And what turns out to be in the medical bay but the scrubot? It seems to be cleaning the docbot.

The docbot, however, doesn't seem to want to be cleaned, as it is now active and trying to push the scrubot away.

Hearing Joris-O, the docbot swivels its dome to look at the newcomers while still fending off the scrubot. "Yes, yes, can I help you?"

Medical Bay

The docbot turns back to the scrubot and directs its full attention - and its chainsaw - to it.. Something seems to pass between them. Yes, it might be covered in a film of dust. Yes, it might have lain dormant for 25 yearcycles or however long this place has remained unused. But right now, this docbot intends to carry out its program.

But the scrubot keeps trying to clean the docbot.

So the docbot ups the ante a little. The chainsaw whirs to life, and is aimed right at the scrubot's dome.⁷³

Office

L4-O heads north. The door is unlocked, and opens into what appears to be...

Workshop

... a workshop, stocked with tools and equipment to help maintain and repair the bunker. It's separated into ORANGE, YELLOW, and GREEN areas. Everything is covered in dust.

Control room

This doesn't go over so well:

OKAY, THAT'S ENOUGH. YOU'RE ATTEMPTING TO ACCESS THINGS WELL BEYOND YOUR SECURITY CLEARANCE HERE.

REPORT TO THE NEAREST CONFESSION BOOTH IMMEDIATELY.

On the camera feed from the warehouse, the Communist who noticed the blast door has brought some of his comrades. They're armed with crowbars to try to open the blast door.

Medical bay⁷⁴

Joris-O and Cryo-R step back and take cover as the docbot readies its chainsaw.

And it lunges... missing the scrubot by a narrow margin as the latter dodges. The chainsaw hits one of those glass-fronted cabinets, shattering the glass and sending it everywhere!

That gets the scrubot's attention. Now distracted from the dust on the docbot, it extends a pair of manipulators and attempts to pick up the shards of glass.

"Well, that works, it would seem," the docbot muses.

Turning back to the citizens, it continues, "Now, what were you saying?"

Control room

The terminal doesn't answer, and instead goes to the bouncing Computer icon.

⁷⁴ GLIGAR: OOC: 4.6M spends a perversity point.

On closer inspection of the control panel, some of the DEFN CTL buttons have little lights on them. Most of them are off. A couple are blinking.

Subnode and Turret Control

The other unexplored room contains an entire wall of old server equipment. That must be the bunker's subnode. Of course, having a partially-obscured label like SN4*3 helps. The subnode is against the far wall, which is BLUE Clearance.

In front of it, in a GREEN section, is a control panel. One of its buttons is flashing RED.

In front of that are what look to be Armed Forces standard turret control stations. These are mixed ORANGE and YELLOW clearance. Each one has a monitor linked to a camera feed.

Warehouse

The Communists are still trying to pry the blast door open, with little success.

written by Lightning4 on May 05, 2010 19:24

Drawn by the irresistible, candy-like red button, I press it. Or I attempt to do so without crossing into GREEN space. Seeing as how nobody is around (so I think) it doesn't matter anyway.

written by Speeder on May 06, 2010 00:21

I press ONE blinking button, to figure what blinking means.

Also I keep peering at the console.

"Strange... Why it knew about me...? And the fight? How it knows my clearance, if I don't actually logged on the system?"

Oh, of course, I look at all things that I can, to see what changes when I press the blinking button that I pressed.

written by Cryoburner on May 06, 2010 10:17

"Hey, that's a nice saw you have there. I suppose that could be useful for... hmm... many kinds of things."

"Probably not for treating fractured bones though, right? How would you typically go about treating a broken limb, anyway? I'm just curious. That's all."

I examine the Docbot, and also take a better look at the room's various medical supplies.

written by Gligar on May 06, 2010 17:00

Subnode and Turret Control

Pressing the button causes lights on the turret consoles to light up, and targeting reticules to appear on the monitors.

Another light on the main console illuminates, next to the label AWAITING CLEARANCE.

Throughout the bunker and warehouse

Laser turrets pop out of the ceiling and start beeping.

Warehouse

Of course, the Communists notice this. Some pull out sidearms and shoot at the warehouse turrets.

Control room

Pressing the button causes the blinky to go out.

The terminal clears its screen and displays

```
IFF TARGETING ENABLED
```

Subnode and turret control

The AWAITING CLEARANCE light goes out. Lights on each of the turret controls now blink RED.

Medical bay

Cryo-R seems to ignore the turrets popping down. Instead, he starts examining the vials of medicines, and the surgical tools (more saws, scissors, bandages, scalpels, [insert long list here]...)

The docbot is saying, "I would administer the appropriate treatment for the wound based on security clearance, credit rating, and importance, as well as [DFSR]. But I can only do that if I have the appropriate materials."

written by Lightning4 on May 06, 2010 17:10

"Well, only one thing to do"

I press the appropriate button(s) for the warehouse.

written by 4616599 on May 07, 2010 07:58

Noting turrets coming down, I respond rather quickly.

"Aaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaugh!"

written by Cryoburner on May 07, 2010 09:57

Noting Joris's horrible vociferation, I now also take note of the beeping turrets.

"Those almost look like turrets, don't they? Maybe you should examine them a little more closely, just to make sure. In the mean time, I'll be... looking for supplies in the other room."

I crawl back into the red dormitory, and slide under the nearest bed. I examine the underside of the bed carefully, searching for any supplies that might be there.

written by Gligar on May 07, 2010 14:47

Subnode and Turret Control

Pressing buttons on one of the turret consoles causes it to begin tracking one of the Communists.

This doesn't go unnoticed. The targeted Communist leaps behind some boxes just before the turret fires (a full five seconds after it started tracking, mind you).

Unfortunately, it seems that the contents of the boxes are not effective shielding against the lasers used in the turrets. The blast hits the commie in the shoulder.

Medical bay

The docbot also notices the turrets. "Dear me," it comments, "it seems that my services will be needed soon." It doesn't notice Cryo-R (who is in clear need of treatment) leave.

Dormitory 1

Cryo-R, as he mentions above, goes and... closely inspects the underside of a bed. The metallic frame seems to be built to Alpha Complex standards of excellence. It's unpainted.

written by Speeder on May 08, 2010 03:59

"Wow. Whoever is on the controls of the turret that I just allowed targetting, is doing a awesome job.."

I peer around. "I wish I had a way to communicate... Maybe..."

```
> NET SEND "turret control display terminal" allowed targetting, is doing a great job-- Quick, shoot the guy with the crowbar, and then shoot the next one to get the crowbar, and so on, that way, they will fear opening the warehouse blast-door"

```

"I hope this work..."

I then keep observing what is going on.

written by Cryoburner on May 08, 2010 10:36

"Wow! A pen!"

I carefully examine the pen, taking care to examine it carefully.

written by Gligar on May 08, 2010 14:53

Control room

The terminal seems to have recovered from it's little tantrum and sends the message without comment.

On the camera feed, the shot Communist is attempting to return fire with his other hand, but the laser cuts him off by getting a shot to his chest. He goes down.

The turret seems to switch between several targets before settling on another Communist.

Subnode and Turret control

On the warehouse turret's display, a message appears:

```
JHT-E-C-3-C1> Whoever you are manning the turrets after I allowed targetting, is doing a great job-- Quick, shoot the guy with the crowbar, and then shoot the next one to get the crowbar, and so on, that way, they will fear opening the warehouse blastdoor

Dormitory 1

Cryo-R examines the pen. There's not enough light under the bed to see too much detail, but it's possible to make out that it's black, with the text SECONDARY SECTOR

LOGISTICS on the side in silver, along with a logo consisting of two arrows and a box. The cap's still on.

Food storage

The turret that popped up here starts rotating from left to right. As it does, it causes some packets to fall to the floor.

written by 4616599 on May 08, 2010 19:03

I stumble back to the meeting hall, and into the control room, looking for anything that could explain the turrets.

written by Lightning4 on May 08, 2010 21:57

I read the message and attempt to figure out how to make the turret attack the commie with the crowbar.

written by Speeder on May 08, 2010 22:48

As Joris stumble in, I look at him.

"Hello! Commies are trying to invade the bunker, I turned on the turrets, and someone is on the turret control node manning them. Spread the word, please? Also spread, that if there are friendly fire, it is not my fault, I am not manning the turrets."

written by Cryoburner on May 09, 2010 11:06

"Wow!"

I take the pen.

I also see if the bed can slide, while still crawling underneath.

written by 4616599 on May 09, 2010 16:32

"Okay. Now why didn't 'Monitor guy' tell us about these? Say, there seem to be some other blinky DEFN CTRL buttons there. How about you try investigating another?"

Figuring out L4-O on B level may have had something to do with this, I head for the stairs. As I pass the RED dormitory, I see Cryo-R under a bed yelping to himself, and vaguely mumble, "Errr...someone's turned on the turrets...you probably won't have to hide there unless we're dealing with a CMT...errr...uh...yep" I also examine one of the turrets.

written by Gligar on May 09, 2010 17:23

Subnode and Turret Control

L4-O steps to the turret controls and tries to take control. However, he can't quite figure out how to get manual control. All these... buttons...

But that's okay, since, as it turns out, it's quite easy to get it to switch targets in auto mode. Selecting the one with the crowbar, L4-O lets the turret do the rest.

Warehouse

The one with the crowbar is barely paying attention to the turret, and doesn't notice it lock on until it's too late. The VIOLET beam hits him in the chest, and he falls to the floor.

Dormitory 1

Cryo-R seems impressed by the pen, and takes it.

He attempts to make the bed slide, but, since it's bolted to the floor, it doesn't move.

Corridor C1

As Cryo-R is doing that, Joris-O passes outside, and notes in passing what Cryo-R is doing. He takes the time to inspect the closest turret, and discovers that it mounts what looks like a modified laser rifle with a barrel changer loaded with multiple barrels, all VIOLET. There doesn't seem to be a way of replacing spent barrels without removing the entire changer.

He continues on to the stairs. As he reaches Food Storage, he notices Selbio-R still there, eyeing the rest of the food hungrily.

A turret seems to lock on to Selbio-R.

written by Cryoburner on May 10, 2010 10:18

"Hmm... It seems to be bolted in place. How do they rearrange the furniture around here? I suppose I could take the time to upgrade the bed to a mobile model, for benefit of the complex, and all."

I pull a wrench out of my toolkit (a ratchet with appropriate socket, if there is one), and set to work on unbolting the bed's legs from the floor.

written by 4616599 on May 10, 2010 14:56

"Hmm. What's here?" I take some Hot Fun, Cold Fun and 2 packets each of Soylent RED and ORANGE, stuffing them in my backpack. Noticing Selbio-R (and a turret apparently pointing at him), I wave a towel(in between him and the turret).

written by Gligar on May 10, 2010 16:12

Dormitory 1

Disappointed at the bed being bolted to the floor, Cryo-R decides to "rectify" the situation by removing the bolts.

Of course, the RED Clearance toolkit he found doesn't include such things as ratchet spanners with sockets, so he has to make to make do with the calliper spanners he finds there. He finds one to fit the bolts and gets to work. These pesky bolts are stubborn, having been in the floor for 25 or more yearcycles, but Cryo-R presses on. Putting all his weight behind the spammer, he's able to loosen one of the bolts, before his wounds protest sharply.

Food Storage

Joris-O takes the opportunity, while he's here, to stock up on some food. He decides to skip on the Insta-Hot Fun and get the regular variety instead.

Waving a towel between Selbio-R and the turret seems to have little effect, on either the turret or Selbio-R. Maybe the turret's aim wavers a little, but it's hard to say.

Warehouse

Another Communist tries to head for the crowbar, but, with the turret still pointed in that direction, it picks up easily on the new target and fires. This Communist, however, is able to roll out of the way of the beam.

written by Speeder on May 10, 2010 18:35

After some time watching it, I smile.

"Awesome... I bet these evil commies will stop trying to get there!"

I look for a chair, so I can sit and watch.

written by Lightning4 on May 11, 2010 07:58

Satisfied from watching the turrets do all the work for me, I decide to get up and check out the other turret monitors.

written by Cryoburner on May 11, 2010 09:25

"What a stubborn bed!"

I decide to take a quick nap under the bed, fluff my pillow, and place it behind my head.

"Ah... much better."

written by Gligar on May 11, 2010 16:01

Control room

Speed-O goes and grabs a chair from the meeting hall and returns to watch the camera feed.

Warehouse

Still another Communist picks up the crowbar and tries again to enter, while the turret is distracted by the rolling Communist. Who stubbornly refuses to stay still and get shot.

Another enters the warehouse carrying a pneumatic drill.

Subnode and Turret Control

While the warehouse turret is busy doing its thing, L4-O checks out the other turret monitors. There seem to be turrets all around the bunker, in the meeting hall, in the corridors, in Food Storage, in the loading dock, and more places.

Dormitory 1

The turret camera can't see anything except a pair of boots sticking out, but Cryo-R is taking a nap under a bed.

Food Storage

Joris-O is flapping a towel around comically in order to try and break the turret's lock on Selbio-R. And, as the turret monitor confirms, it's a positive lock due to lack of ID. The turret should have fired by now...

eeeeeeEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEE

...oh. It seems that the Food Storage turret has a malfunctioning barrel.

Medical bay

The scrubot seems to be hard at work, diligently dusting down things such as beds, tools, the floor, and most emphatically not the docbot, who is preparing said tools for use.

A Level Roadway

There's a turret out here, too. The camera can make out an approaching vehiclebot.

written by 4616599 on May 11, 2010 17:01

Noticing the malfunctioned turret, I remove the cartridge holder from the barrel(still with the VIOLET barrels loaded -but hey, the holder itself doesn't seem to have a clearance stripe!), putting it in my backpack. I then attempt to elicit a response from Selbio-R by flapping the towel in his face.

After that, I head down the stairs to join L4-R in the subnode.

written by Speeder on May 11, 2010 17:53

As I see the pneumatic drill coming...

"Oh no... vatcrap, vatcrap, vatcrap, vatcrap..."

I press another blinking button.

"Please, be helpful... please, be helpful..."

Wait, I am an idiot... everything in alpha complex has a manual, sometimes of a strange clearance, making it useless, but there are ALWAYS a manual..."

I search around for a manual, if I don't find one, I request one in the terminal.

written by Lightning4 on May 11, 2010 19:13

"Poor Selbio"

I return to the Warehouse turret. Seeing the commie carrying the pneumatic drill, I tell the turret to change targets to him. Or his drill.

written by Gligar on May 11, 2010 21:36

Food Storage

The barrel changer is connected pretty firmly to the turret, but it comes loose with enough force. With the squealing thing in his backpack, Joris-O heads off.

Control room

As soon as Speed-O presses the other button, an alarm sounds throughout the bunker, the lighting turns an angry red, and terminals show

ALERT - LOCKDOWN ENABLED

In addition, emergency bulkheads drop into place at the bunker stairs and the loading dock's exterior door.

Apparently shocked at this, Speed-O searches for a manual for the control panel. There doesn't seem to be one on paper. He asks the terminal, but it just replies

LOCKDOWN ENABLED - ACCESS NOT PERMITTED BELOW CLEARANCE BLUE

Warehouse

The Communist with the pneumatic drill goes to set it up at the blast door, to be greeted with a shot from the turret.

However, the shot hit the drill, cracking the casing open and fusing half the innards.

Enraged, the communist primes a grenade and drops it on the blast door. The commies try to take cover.

Subnode and Turret Control

By now, the food storage turret has noticed that it has no ammunition and has lit a bunch of error lights on its console.

Its ammunition arrives in the room, as Joris-O enters.

The warehouse turret has noticed the grenade and flagged it for operator attention.

The roadway turret has noticed the approaching vehiclebot, now identified as an autocar, and seems to have a positive target on its occupants. A good thing, really, since they start shooting cone rifle rounds at the loading dock door.

Revolutionary Square

Remember this place? There are still clones here, including Star-R.

A PRPF member approaches Star-R, who hasn't moved since she lost her can of B3. He says, "Comrade! Now is your chance to serve the people! A bunker belonging to our enemy, The Computer and its capitalist 'High' Programmer lackeys! We must penetrate it and liberate it For The People! Come!"

written by Lightning4 on May 12, 2010 00:25

Alerted by the warehouse turret control, I look for any way of disposing of the grenade, whether that be shooting it away (somehow) or some other means.

I then notice the status of the roadway turret, and turn on IFF firing mode for it as well.

written by Speeder on May 12, 2010 01:06

I rush to the staircase, and close the door (sorry Albey!)

Then I rush back to my comfy chair.

I look at the console... Ok, so, no manual.

I press another blinking button... (there are more buttons left, btw?)

written by Gligar on May 12, 2010 15:20

Subnode and Turret Control

That VIOLET barrel is still squealing like mad.

L4-O tries to ignore it and deal with the grenade, but the squealing is just too loud, causing him to instead set the turret to a longer 10-second delay.

Frustrated, he tries to tame the roadway turret instead. He has more luck with this one, if just barely. He's able to enable auto-fire, but in doing so, he inadvertently disables the turret's IFF protocols.

Warehouse

The grenade explodes.

BOOM

The sound of the blast reaches as far as the meeting hall.

However, that's all that the grenade is able to do the the bunker, except create a big divot in the blast door. It's almost as if someone had thought about grenades when they were building the place.

Control room

Shocked by the sound of the blast, Speed-O looks for another blinky. Unfortunately, the panel seems to be fresh out.

Revolutionary Square

"Comrade? Can you hear me?" The PRPF member takes the safety off his weapon. "Come serve the people!"

written by 4616599 on May 12, 2010 17:12

"Augh! Commie frelling clone vat traitor scrubot rogue computer mutant laser slime that thing!" I put the barrel in the armoury and attempt to muffle it with my towel.

I then shut the door and head for the workshop, looking for any useful electronic equipment.

written by Gligar on May 12, 2010 21:50

Armoury

Working quickly, Joris-O runs in, puts the barrel changer on the ground, extracts the malfunctioning VIOLET barrel from the changer without disturbing the other VIOLET barrels, and wraps the malfunctioning VIOLET barrel in his towel and stashes the wrapped VIOLET barrel on a shelf before picking up he changer and leaving.

This doesn't go unnoticed, as there's an active turret in the room.

Joris-O scarcely has time to get out of the door before the malfunctioning VIOLET barrel explodes.

BOOM

The shelves and racking are rendered into debris by the explosion. The turret's camera is knocked out of commission, rendering the turret inoperable.

Workshop

Heedless of this, Joris-O calls in the workshop, and looks at the testing equipment, and the tools.

Hmmm, looks like there's some sort of power meter hooked up to a power pack near the turret. The meter reads empty.

written by Lightning4 on May 13, 2010 01:46

Seeing that the turrets seem to be okay for now (so I think), I get up and see if I can inspect the subnode, perhaps even activate it or something.

not that higher clearances have stopped me before.

written by Speeder on May 13, 2010 13:46

I keep looking at the cameras.

"Holy shit... What is happening with those explosions?"

I ask on the console for a damage report for the last 5 minutes on the entire bunker.

written by 4616599 on May 13, 2010 13:56

I examine the power pack closely.

"Oh, and it seems like a traitorous malfunctioning barrel just destroyed the armoury," I call out to L4-R, assuming he didn't notice the explosion. "Well, it least we've noticed that laser barrels make decent substitute grenades."

written by Gligar on May 13, 2010 18:54

Subnode and Turret Control

The subnode seems to be already online, judging by all the blinking lights. That would make sense, considering that the bunker's Computer Terminals are working.

Control room

The terminal is is still adamant about the lockdown and refuses to give any details.

Workshop

The powerpack looks to be of the sort you'd find powering a vehiclebot. It's large and looks heavy.

Revolutionary Square

Star-R is still motionless.

The PRPF member seems to be getting agitated. He levels his slugthrower at her. "Comrade, you are ordered to accompany me!"

Warehouse

The Communists seem to have decided that another approach is needed. Doing their best to avoid the turret, (and, in two cases, failing) they gather up grenades.

Well, by "they" I mean the two remaining in this group.

A Level Roadway

The autocar approaches. It's taking damage from the turret, but the communists inside are ignoring that. They're focussed on gaining entry to the door that one of them saw earlier. Two are already dead but that doesn't stop them.

written by Lightning4 on May 13, 2010 21:42

I return to the warehouse turret control. Seeing them attempting to gather grenades, I hit upon an idea.

I attempt to tell the turret to attack the grenades they are attempting to collect.

written by 4616599 on May 14, 2010 10:18

Hearing all the banging coming from the loading dock, I run to the observation platform and check for any controls. Round buttons for instance. Also, I check if the forkbot's charging system could also power the powerpack.

written by Gligar on May 14, 2010 15:22

Subnode and Turret Control

Hmmm... looks like the targeting routines won't target grenades, It's almost like it can't even see them.

Warehouse

The communists continue their work. With the turret not doing anything right now, one of them takes the grenades and heads towards the blast door.

Observation platform

There doesn't appear to be any controls on the platform.

Looking at the charging station, it seems as if the power pack currently in the workshop could be connected up.

Outside, the noises continue. There's a distinct zap as the turret fires, followed by a kachunka sound.

written by Lightning4 on May 14, 2010 22:47

I give up and target that communist instead.

written by Speeder on May 15, 2010 05:00

I notice the turret fighting the car, and I run, really fast, the best I can, to the warehouse, rifle nearly ready to shoot, in a easy to access place, and nut launcher in hand.

If I get to it in time, I try to open the doors shooting the button with the nut launcher, to prevent the commies from making this door permanently open...

written by 4616599 on May 15, 2010 06:23

Hearing Speed-O blundering in this direction, I duck back into Corridor B1. Blaster out. I subsequently notice an unopened door and open it.

written by Gligar on May 15, 2010 15:46

Subnode and Turret Control

L4-O is able to tell the turret to fire on the communist.

However, instead of firing, a "MALFUNCTION" light flashes on the console, which also sounds an alarm. It seems that the Communists caused some damage to the turret.

On the monitor the Communists continue their work.

Behind them, reinforcements arrive.

Control room⁷⁵

Even though none of the monitors in here are showing a turret attacking an autocar, Speed-O feels the need to run to the loading dock, though for some reason, he thinks it's a warehouse. I... guess it is... but stuff doesn't stay there for long...

⁷⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: You mean the loading dock? Be careful what you say next time 😊)

Warehouse

The communists finish planting their grenades.

The turret is squealing.

Stairwell

Speed-O carries on running, and, this time, isn't even stopped when the next wave of pain hits. It's been a while since he had one. Perhaps he should go and see the docbot?

Anyway, he turns his collapse into another forward roll, recovers, and heads through the door to A Level.

Observation deck

Hearing Speed-O running-and-rolling down the stairs, Joris-O exits. He notices the other door, and ducks in.

Storage

The room is another store room, this time with a Computer Terminal.

There are the usual shelves, and what appear to be some emergency power packs.

One power pack is currently connected to a very old looking tape recorder. There are a few spools of tape, one of which is mounted on the recorder.

Loading dock

Speed-O arrives, out of breath. He tries to fire off a nut at the door control but misses.

As he catches his breath, he sees that it probably doesn't matter. The door is covered by a bulkhead.

As he listens, the noises outside die down.

Revolutionary Square

The PRPF member has lost his patience with the catatonic Star-R. He fires off three rounds, killing her. Then he heads off to the warehouse.

written by Cryoburner on May 15, 2010 17:11

"Yaaaaaawn..."

I awake from my underbed nap, feeling refreshed and rejuvenated.

"Hmm... now what was I doing? Ah yes! Breakfast!"

I drag myself down to food storage, where I find Selbio-R staring at packets of food, now with a unique turret-shaped table nearby. I grab five more packets of Insta-Hot Fun, and another three of Cold Fun, just in case I happen to get hungry later.

I rip open one pack of Insta-Hot Fun and take a few bites out of it before noting how Selbio-R is so longingly eying the food, seemingly locked in a state of perpetual hunger.

"You can eat them, you know. Here, have the rest of mine..."

I set the opened packet of Insta-Hot Fun atop the turret-shaped table, and head out the door, dragging myself back toward the medical bay.

“Oh... Usefull lockdown!”

I calm down, and now walk, tiredly, toward the turret control node (just to see what exists there... since it was orange area...)

Subnode and Turret Control

Speed-O enters the room and looks at the subnode, with its lights blinking away merrily, and the turret controls, the turret master panel near the subnode, and the turret controls. L4-O is working the latter.

On one of the turret monitors, something that looks suspiciously like Cryo-R is holding something that looks suspiciously like an open packet of Insta-Hot Fun. As Speed-O watches, he says something to Selbio-R, approaches the turret and seems to put the packet somewhere above the camera.

Medical bay

The docbot notices Cryo-R's arrival. “Ah! I see you've returned. Have you come for treatment?” It brandishes a manipulator.

Warehouse

With the reinforcements at hand, the communists retreat out of the warehouse,

A laser is fired at the grenades.

Which promptly explode.

BOOM

This, combined with the damage done to the blast door already, blows the door apart.

The commies approach, and look down the hole... at the emergency bulkhead.

I frantically being pressing buttons in an attempt to get the turret to work again.

written by Speeder on May 16, 2010 00:16

I peer at L4.

“Oh, it is you that is aiming the turrets... I see that actually you have no idea of what you are doing...”

I look for a console with a keyboard.

written by 4616599 on May 16, 2010 08:39

“Mmm. Fascinating.” I pick up a power pack, inspect it closely, then put it in a backpack.

I next head for the tape recorder. Seeing a tape there, I rewind it to the start and attempt to play it.

written by Gligar on May 16, 2010 15:34

Subnode and Turret Control

Button mashing... the last resort of those in desperation. Sometimes, it pays off. Like now.

L4-O manages to get the turret firing again, even though there's a malfunction (and annoyingly, the console doesn't tell him where the malfunction is). It shoots one communist, who falls into another.

To Speed-O's annoyance, none of the consoles have keyboards, just loads of buttons and a joystick.

Storage

The emergency power pack is smaller than the one in the workshop, and most likely doesn't provide as much power. It looks to be the sort used to power clone-portable devices such as... well, such as that tape recorder there. Or a bot, or something.

Speaking of the tape recorder, the tape is already positioned in the leader, just before the start of the tape proper. Playing the tape reveals a voice, one that should be familiar by now:

“If you are hearing this, you must have found the tape recorder. By this point, we've probably been in contact already, but if not, I will summarise the situation:

“A few hourcycles ago, Communist forces launched an all-out assault on this sector using stolen Armed Forces assets. At the same time, they planted a virus in the compnode, crashing it. Said compnode was isolated almost immediately but the damage was done. The MemoMax data for this sector was too badly damaged. Other sectors have had their compnodes rebooted, but this has had a knock-on effect throughout AlphaNet, causing complications with our counter-attack efforts. One of these complications was the loss of several sectors, JHT included, to the Communists.

“You are one of the few for which we were able to recover any sort of data at all. As such, the decision was made to enact Emergency Protocol 214/57/[DFSR], and bring your current clone to the bunker in which you now reside. For security reasons you were brainscrubbed before being awakened.

“You should find additional spools of tape with this recorder. Your mission is to head for the compnode in Central Subsector, accessible from V Level. Once there, connect this recorder to the compnode, turn the compnode's Restart key, and play the other tapes, in the correct order, when prompted. This will reinitialise the compnode.

“Unfortunately, it is not possible at this time to supply you with equipment, so you will have to find your own in the sector. The bunker has ample supplies of food and fuel for its generators, should the need arise. But you are not, I repeat, not, to simply close the blast doors and sit tight. That is not why you were brought here.

"I believe that is everything I need to cover. Good luck, citizen."

With that, the supply reel runs out of tape. The take-up reel keeps spinning, with the free end of the tape making swishing noises.

written by Speeder on May 16, 2010 18:21

I search for spare keyboards that I can connect to the consoles... In case I don't find any, I get to one of the consoles and try to figure what buttons would allow me to communicate with the console.

written by Lightning4 on May 16, 2010 23:44

Seeing that the turret is functional (for now), I think back to any unexplored rooms remaining...

After a moment in thought, I head to the infrared dorms on A-Level, to check the door there.

written by Gligar on May 17, 2010 01:41⁷⁶

Meeting hall

If you'll remember, the sprinklers in here are still running. I didn't remind you since the drainage systems were working properly. Well, now they're backing up. As such, the slightly-brown water starts flooding into Concourse C1.

Subnode and Turret Control

Speed-O looks around for a keyboard he can plug in, but doesn't find one. Regardless, he attempts to access the turrets without one.

He soon comes to the decision that lots of buttons = keyboard, and attempts to type on them.

And it works.

I guess he's just that good.

Or... maybe it's something... else? Like... a certain... super-treasonous mutation...?

But I digress. The point is, Speed-O manages to make a temporary fix to the turret, causing the MALFUNCTION light to extinguish.

Satisfied that things are working, L4-O heads off down to A Level.

Warehouse

The turret continues its job of shooting Communists.

The Communists continue their job of trying to get into the bunker. So far, the turret's winning. But that might not last.

Dormitory 3

Navigating through the cramped dormitory (aren't you glad you're not INFRARED? Imagine 40 clones in here...) L4-O manages to get to the door, to find...

Confession Booth Corridor

... eight confession booths arranged four either side of a short corridor. They may or may not be online, what with the whole Communist thing.

Food storage

It seems that Cryo-R's Insta-Hot Fun has caught fire. The fire has not yet spread to the "turret-shaped table", but it's looking like it wants to.

written by Speeder on May 17, 2010 04:23

I try to shutdown and close the food storage turret to prevent it from catching fire...

Then, happier that turrets are not working properly and shooting stuff properly, I move (in the best form that the pain waves allow) to the docbot...

written by Lightning4 on May 17, 2010 06:00

"Hm."

I recall there being a dark room nearby.

I head to the spare parts storage room and search for a flashlight, or some kind of portable light source.

written by 4616599 on May 17, 2010 09:39

"These things could be useful later. And since my backpack oddly enough still doesn't seem to bulky or heavy, might as well take another." I grab another power pack. I then stop the tape and exit the storeroom, heading down to level A.

Once there, I check the contents of a locker in the INFRARED dormitory. I also examine the forkbot, in particular wondering if the powerpack could fit it.

written by Gligar on May 17, 2010 14:15

Food storage

The turret retracts, knocking the burning Insta-Hot Fun to the floor, where the molten Fun begins to spread.

Spare Parts Storage

L4-O arrives, looking for a light source. Hidden amongst some other stuff is a RED torch. And hey, the batteries still work. Though they are rather weak.

Storage

Joris-O takes a total of two emergency power packs. Thanks to the wonders of the standard Troubleshooter backpack, he's able to carry them without problems. He leaves the tape recorder and tapes for now. Maybe he can pick them up later.

⁷⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: Speeder spends 1pp.)

Warehouse

Another Communist falls to the turret. Still another throws what looks like some high explosive down the hole.

Dormitory 1

Joris-O inspects a locker. Inside is an INFRARED jumpsuit and boots.

Concourse C1

The water spreads into the control room and Corridor C1.

Medical bay

After another wave of pain, Speed-O arrives. Cryo-R is also here, but seems to have gone catatonic.

The docbot is making a cursory examination of Cryo-R. "Hmmm. It looks like you have two broken bones. At your clearance and credit rating, I can immobilise the affected limbs. Do you want me to do this?"

While waiting for an answer, the docbot turns to Speed-O. "How can I help you, citizen?"

Loading dock

Lastly, Joris-O has another look at the forkbot. Hmmm, it looks like the power pack might fit. But whether it could provide enough power to run a forkbot is another matter. Perhaps wiring two together would be better?

written by 4616599 on May 17, 2010 15:04

"Commie vatslime! I'm no mechanic! Where do I get the wiring from anyway?" I mumble.

I carefully examine the forkbot, then go back upwards to the workshop at B level to search for wires.

written by Cryoburner on May 17, 2010 19:30

Doctor... It seems as though I may have...

AMNESIA.

Also, yeah, I may have a fractured leg. So long as immobilizing it doesn't involve sawing or any other invasive surgery, you may feel free to do so.

written by Speeder on May 17, 2010 20:06

I look at the DocBot.

"Hello... I inhaled a strange violet gas, that probably came from a weapon, and now I am having recurring pain waves in the whole body, and numbness waves too... Can you fix that? I need to fix the Compnode..."

written by Lightning4 on May 17, 2010 22:26

Nifty light source in hand, I go down to the dark room and illuminate it as best as I can with my rather weak torch.

written by Gligar on May 18, 2010 00:06

Workshop

A quick search turns up some suitable cables, about a metre long.

Medical bay

"Hmmm... amnesia. It sounds like you've been brainscrubbed. There is little I can do about that. However, I can immobilise your broken bones without invasive surgery."

The docbot motions to one of the beds, before turning to Speed-O. "A VIOLET gas? That sounds like some sort of toxin. How exactly did you come to be near it?"

Dark room

Armed with a light source, it becomes clear that the room is a cafeteria. Some shelving against the far wall holds food trays, plastilyke sporks, and cups. Tables and chairs, now covered in dust, are set up. And next to another door is a serving hatch, which is closed.

Everything in the room is INFRARED Clearance.

Warehouse

The Communists again retreat.

written by Speeder on May 18, 2010 00:33

I look at the docbot for a while, then I say.

"We were fighting commies, after all commies died, this gas started to get in our room, from a hole in the floor below, I tried to jump over it, and exit the building, but I landed inside the hole, right in the middle of the gas, and the bodies of the dead commies, and the rubble of the explosives and all other ammo that we threw there... Actually, I realize how lucky I am to not have broken my leg while in the middle of the gas..."

written by Lightning4 on May 18, 2010 01:33

I extinguish my light source and find somewhere to put it on my person. Lacking a suitable spot, I decide to hunt down a backpack to make things simpler for me.

written by 4616599 on May 18, 2010 14:20

I...well, link up the batteries and head back to the forkbot. While there, I examine the bot even more closely, and sniff it.

written by Cryoburner on May 18, 2010 14:22

I make certain the bed in question is accessible without crossing into any higher clearance section of the medical bay, and if so, lie down on it, awaiting treatment.

I also examine the room's lights.

written by Gligar on May 18, 2010 16:02

Medical bay

"Hmmm... I see. It sounds as though cone rifle ammunition may have been involved... very well..."

The docbot trundles over to a cabinet and opens it. As it's doing that, Cryo-R is climbing on to the bed the docbot pointed to. Fortunately, it's reachable from the RED section. As he waits for the docbot, Cryo-R passes the time by looking at the lighting strips. To tell the truth, they should probably have been replaced yearcycles ago. They probably would have been if it weren't for the fact that the bunker hasn't been used in so long. But at least they still work, unlike some sectors, where, do to no fault of Technical Services whatsoever, and clearly the fault of their rival, Power Services, some light fixtures go unchanged for monthcycles.

By this time, the docbot is finished in the cabinet, and trundles back to Speed-O with a syringe. "This should help remove the symptoms of the gas, citizen." It injects Speed-O with the contents of the syringe, a swirly-looking ORANGE-and-RED liquid. Almost at once, Speed-O feels rather hot, and starts sweating. On the plus side, though, he feels sensation returning to his skin.

That done, the docbot returns to Cryo-R, picking up some things along the way. When it arrives, it cuts open Cryo-R's jumpsuit, exposing the broken leg and chest. Then, it starts wrapping the affected areas in bandages, which harden as they touch the skin.

Storage

L4-O briefly enters, looking for a backpack. He eventually finds one in the corner, hidden amongst some cans of oil. It smells of oil a little, but it should be usable.

Workshop

With a little difficulty due to the side of the power packs' terminals, Joris-O is able to link up the power packs with the cables, and returns to the forkbot.

Loading dock

On closer inspection, the forkbot seems to have seen a recent service, in contrast with the rest of the bunker. In particular, its bearings and so on have been oiled recently.

written by Speeder on May 18, 2010 18:37

I look at the Docbot.

"Thank you. Huh... Any side effects to expect, or anything that would make my work of fixing the compnode and troubleshooting commies harder?"

written by Lightning4 on May 18, 2010 22:50

I place the torch, my spare barrels and shells, the brevets... and my two popped intsec balloons inside my backpack, then wear the backpack.

Much less encumbered, I make my way back to the Turret and Subnode room to check our status.

written by Gligar on May 19, 2010 00:09

Medical bay

The docbot continues working on Cryo-R as it speaks. "Well, you may feel the need to consume more fluids, but beyond that, you should return to normal working parameters in no time, citi - oops."

It seems that the docbot became distracted, causing its surgical scissors to dig into Cryo-R's leg.

Storage

L4-O adjusts his equipment. That's better.

Subnode and Turret Control

Now back in here, L4-O checks the status of the turrets.

He finds that the warehouse turret is starting to run low on ammunition. The communists themselves are not in range of the turret camera. That's probably because of the high explosive they set up.

...speaking of that, shouldn't it have gone off by now?

Food storage

The fire is spreading. It's almost reached the nearest stack of food... and Selbio-R.

written by Speeder on May 19, 2010 01:09

I nod.

"Thank you, mr. Docbot, And please, don't hurt too much my fellow troubleshooter..."

I wander then to the subnode room...

I peer at the subnode...

written by Cryoburner on May 19, 2010 07:06

"Ow!"

"Let's try to keep this from turning into invasive surgery now." 😞

Subnode and turret control

Feeling a bit less toxin-y and a bit more like the complex is suddenly rather warm, Speed-O arrives, and wanders over, as far as clearance will allow, to look at the subnode. The blinking lights are really hypnotic when you stop to look at them.

Medical bay

After that little mishap, the docbot finishes up. "There you are, citizen." Cryo-R's broken leg is now immobilised in a cast, as is a portion of his ribcage.

Loading dock

As Joris-O finishes the connections, the forkbot beeps a couple of times. Some lights on the operator's console flicker and come on. Glancing at them, Joris-O sees that the bot's running its self tests.

⁷⁷ 4616599: ooc: this may be a strange question, but is the forkbot a forklift truck? I'd suppose it probably is, but 'fork' can be interpreted in many ways...

The bot decides that the power input is a little low, but finishes up with the tests regardless.

Food storage

The fire reaches Selbio-R's foot.

written by 4616599 on May 19, 2010 16:06

"Ah, bot, you're online. I know you aren't at full power...apparently there's a regular powerpack nearby but it's empty. So, anything you think you can do to fend off attacking CMTs?"

Climbing on the bot, I study its controls for anything unusual. Also, I carefully observe the door oof the loading dock.

written by Lightning4 on May 20, 2010 04:52

Noticing Speed-O in here with me, I remark, "Hm... not good. I guess they're trying to blow their way in, we better be ready for them."

I make my way back to C level and wade through the water. Realizing nobody stopped the sprinklers, I go to the control room and attempt to turn them off.

written by Speeder on May 20, 2010 05:17

Before L4 leaves, I replies.

"Sure, I will just finish something here, then I will follow, please, if you find people along the way, ask them to group in the meeting hall and prepare for battle in the concourse, if nothing happens, I plan to talk to everyone about our next step..."

I return staring at the blinking lights like a zombie.

"Well, I'm not built for combat, you know. But I guess these forks could be rather deadly. If I was at full power. As it is, I'd be rather sluggish."

Climbing into the operator's seat, Joris-O looks at the controls. Some of the controls are unfamiliar to him. But then again, he hasn't used a forkbot before.

The loading dock has two regular doors leading back into the bunker, and one larger loading door. The latter is currently covered by an emergency bulkhead.

Control room

Having apparently not heard Speed-O call after him, L4-O arrives, and inspects the terminal. He reads the "delay" message, and tries to override it. But he can't seem to get the terminal to respond - it's still sulking about the lockdown.

Subnode and Turret Control

Speed-O continues being enthralled by the blinking lights.

I grumble and go look for reinforcements, surely that bomb is going off any time now.

written by Cryoburner on May 21, 2010 07:02

"Ah! Thank you, doctor!"

I check to see how capable I am of walking and otherwise moving around.

"Say, do you happen to have any idea how long these might take to heal? Any suggestions on how to expedite recovery would also be welcomed."

written by 4616599 on May 21, 2010 10:17

"Well, since the commies haven't got in yet, I might try to charge up the main powerpack."

I head back to the workshop and grab the powerpack I saw earlier. Finding it a tad heavy, I decide to put it in the amazing Troubleshooter backpack instead. With it safely in, I start to feel thirsty from all the climbing around, so I head for the nearest vendobot, and finding one in the office, order some B3 and an algae drink, emphasizing to the vendobot "ORANGE-standard, Extra Classic please."

written by Gligar on May 21, 2010 17:29

Around the bunker

L4-O looks for reinforcements...

Well, there's Albey-R at the stairs, Mega-R in the meeting hall with the other as-yet-nameless clones, Selbio-R doing nothing about a fire in Food Storage (and, by the way, his jumpsuit is now on fire), Speed-O he knows about, Cryo-R is still in the medical bay, and Joris-O is exiting the loading dock.

Medical Bay

Speaking of Cryo-R...

He tries to stand on his legs, and finds that the broken one won't hold any weight. Getting around will be awkward unless he can find a crutch or something.

"Hmmm... should be a few weekcycles," replies the bot.

Workshop

The power pack is a bit bulky, but it fits in the backpack. It's amazing what you can fit in those.

Office

The vendobot welcomes Joris-O's order. It apparently hasn't received one in some time.

"You're in luck, citizen, for, unlike most other vendobots in this bunker, I have algae drinks!" it says, dispensing a can of B3 and a can of AlgaePLUS.

Warehouse

Some of the Communists have gathered round the explosive, wondering why it hasn't gone off.

So naturally, adhering to that law about explosives or other dangerous things, it chooses this exact time to explode.

BOOM

The ensuing explosion is felt throughout the bunker, and outside, knocking clones to the floor as far away as G Level, and even below the bunker, in Deep Subsector, down to about D Sublevel.

It also kills the exposed Communists, pretty much destroys everything in the warehouse, and punches a small hole through the bulkhead. It's not enough to get through... yet.

written by Speeder on May 21, 2010 19:28

The HOLY SHIT explosion wake me up from my... blinking light staring...

I run toward Cryo, and then I say. "I need you, NOW... Use your shelf as crutch... You still have it no? Come to the meeting hall."

I don't even wait for a awnser, I get to the concourse, rifle in hand. I notice that the door to the staircase is... intact... So I open it and check inside, seeing that although there are a hole in the bulkhead, but Albey is there alive, I try to move him out of the staircase, and then close the door again. Oh, and leave his face, facing upward, so he don't drown on brown water.

written by Lightning4 on May 21, 2010 23:52

I go down to the loading dock.

"The communists are starting to break through, we're going to need everyone available to defend the bunker," I say to Joris-O.

written by Gligar on May 22, 2010 14:20

Warehouse Stairs

Speed-O enters, and gets a look at the hole. It's large enough to aim a weapon through. Through it, clones can be seen running around in the remains of the warehouse.

He takes the time to drag Albey-R to a marginally safer spot in the concourse.

Loading Dock

As it happens, Joris-O isn't here.

It looks like he's been busy, though, as the forkbot seems be be at least partly operational.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Various Communists have entered the rubble, trying to set things up outside - perhaps more explosives...

One of them spots something through the hole in the bukhead. She aims her slugthrower and shoots, but isn't quick enough.

Food storage

More of the food packets are now on fire. Selbio-R doesn't seem to notice, nor does he notice the fire climbing up his jumpsuit.

written by Speeder on May 22, 2010 14:33

As I hear the gunshot, I clean the sweat of my hands, open the door, and attempt to throw a grenade (with the pin removed, although I throw the pin too...) inside the warehouse, using the hole. I don't wait to see the result, I close the door again, and take cover.

written by 4616599 on May 22, 2010 17:00

"Commie coldfun! What's all the vatfrelling banging about?!"

I then ask the vendobot. "Saw anything suspicious or traitorous round here lately? Also, when was this office used and for what purpose? We're investigating a major security threat now, so we do need some info."

"Hmmm. I appear to have been deactivated for a long while - perhaps several yearcycles. But my previous records are of this office being used to handle the day-to-day operations associated with the bunker. Further details are restricted, I'm afraid."

Food storage

With his towel, Selbio-R is able to extinguish the flames on his jumpsuit.

The food fire just gets worse, though.

written by Cryoburner on May 22, 2010 20:13

After an explosion of some unknown origin rattles the room, Speed-O barges in, saying something about needing me in the meeting hall, and suggesting that I could use my shelf as a crutch. I'm about to explain that the shelf is a little too short to make for an effective crutch, and that the meeting hall might be a bit damp and not the best place to hold a meeting, but he's gone before I get a chance to point those things out.

"Anyway, doctor, would you happen to have a proper set of crutches I could use? Pills might be nice too. It doesn't really matter what kind. You can just give me a variety pack, if that's alright. I have some injured friends that could use them."

written by Jam on May 22, 2010 20:19

"Ah yes! Let me have a look for you."

The docbot starts rummaging through cupboards and lockers.

After a moment, it returns. "It seems that I only have one remaining," it says, proffering it.

Meeting hall

A clone seems to snap out of catatonia.

The name of the clone is Jam-R-JYR. Looking around, Jam-R sees the now-deactivated Computer monitor on the north wall, which breaks up the room's clearance stripe, which designates the meeting hall as RED Clearance. Going round the room, some vendobots can be seen on another wall. An open door is to the south, as are several stacks of chairs against the wall. Finally, there are other clones here, Mega-R included.

Through the south door, more clones can be seen. One, in ORANGE, seems to have fumbled with a grenade, and has dropped it.

written by Jam on May 23, 2010 01:01

I start to walk toward the south door, but stop when I see the grenade.

"Ah! Ugh... uh. Gug. Uh guh. Gha!" In my surprise, I can't seem to remember how to talk right.

I slowly creep toward the door, being very careful to stay out of the range of the grenade, and wait for the ORANGE clone.

written by 4616599 on May 23, 2010 05:10

I return to the loading dock and plug in the powerpack. I then look at the doorway and wonder if I could drive the forkbot all the way to C level.

"The commies are trying to break through on C-level, we may need your help up there. They may break through at any minute."

I leave and make my way back to C-level.

Jam-R hesitantly moves towards the door, expecting the grenade to go off any time now.

In his surprise at hearing a new voice, Speed-O drops the grenade's pin.

The water from the sprinklers (did I mention that they're still running?) has reached here. It starts flowing downstairs.

A light illuminates on the charging station when the power pack is plugged in. "Ah, good. That shouldn't take long," the forkbot comments.

A quick look at the inner doors shows that they are too narrow to accommodate the forkbot.

Concourse C1

L4-O enters, but stops short when he sees the dropped grenade.

Which, of course, promptly explodes.

BANG

Luckily, with all the water around, it's not too bad - it simply pushes those in the room to the ground.

The pin doesn't do anything.

written by 4616599 on May 23, 2010 15:41

"Aye. I'll be there. Preferably with a bot."

I hold up my ME card so the loading dock turret recognizes me as a Troubleshooter, then level my blaster at the section of wall to the left of the door leading to A2 corridor. "Sorry, Bunker Maintenance." I intone and pull the trigger, multiple times.

Joris-O fires at the wall eight times, and hits with six of them. This causes the synthcrete wall to begin to crumble and fall away.

As an added benefit, the door comes off its hinges and falls into the corridor beyond. It pulls some more of the wall away with it.

“Well, that’s one way to do it,” the forkbot chimes in.

The stairs door might be closed but that doesn’t deter the Communists. Four slugshots can be heard hitting the door, causing it to rattle alarmingly.

“Yes, weapons are available on the D level, unfortunately, there are a legion of commies between us and the equipment...”

I hand him my double-barrel nut launcher and the metal nuts.

“Use that for now. DON’T LOSE IT. After we manage to get safely outside the bunker, we can grab red barrels for that pistol that currently is working as handle...”

I kneel in a corner of the concourse, and point my rifle at the door.

“Thank you, I’ll guard it with my life.”

I load a nut into the launcher and, while aiming at the door, start walking toward a vendobot.

written by Gligar on May 24, 2010 17:57

Concourse C1

Jan-R goes to load the nut launcher – which is made of two lengths of metal tubing, the aforementioned laser pistol body, and two balloons, all bound together with duct tape – and finds that there’s already something in the balloons. Figuring that it can’t hurt, he loads another nut into one of them.

L4-O loads his cone rifle.

The sound of something tinkling down the stairs can be heard on the other side of the door.

BOOM

But the door doesn’t budge.

Surely the communists couldn’t have...

Something else falls down the stairs, into the door, causing it to fall open.

It seems that the last explosion was a grenade. A communist, standing in the blast door, seems to have taken “Pull pin and throw” to heart, throwing the pin down the stairs. When, clearly, the grenade was the explosive part. Scratch one communist.

But there are more where he came from. At least four more.

Loading dock

Another light comes on. The power pack’s now at 40%.

written by Speeder on May 24, 2010 18:34

I do in movie style:

I roll, crossing the door line of sight, and then I shoot toward them, if my aim somehow miraculously go perfect, in the one with the most menacing weapon.

I finish my roll, at the other side of the room, I kneel and point the rifle again at the door.

“FIRE AT WILL!!!”

“SOMEONE THROW A B3 THERE!”

written by 4616599 on May 24, 2010 18:41

“Okay, the banging’s started. I wish it’d hurry up. The charging, I mean. By the way forkbot, can you absorb slugthrower shots?”

written by Jam on May 25, 2010 00:00⁷⁹

“Quickly, vendobot, give me six B3’s!” I say to the closest vendobot.

I crouch down and fire the contents of the nut launcher at the nearest communist, aiming for the head. Then, if the B3’s are dispensed, I start throwing them at the communists.

written by Lightning4 on May 25, 2010 01:15

I fire my cone rifle at the communists, and simultaneously reload it and get ready to back off just in case it does something... not nice like last time.

written by Gligar on May 25, 2010 01:42⁸⁰

Corridor C1

Almost as if he’s practised, Speed-O executes an excellent forward roll across the communists’ line of fire. The water from the sprinklers is nice and cool, helping to counteract the unnatural hot spells he’s going through.

As he does so, he aims his laser rifle. Unfortunately, he is distracted by one of the communists shooting at him (and missing), and his laser blast goes wide, narrowly missing his target.

⁷⁹ JAM: (OOC: how much money/credits do we have?)

⁸⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC: Enough 😊)

He finishes his roll on the other side of the concourse. Nicely done.

"I was fitted with kevlar armour when I was assigned to the bunker," the bot responds. "It does slow me down a bit, but I'm used to it by now."

Still another light comes on. 60%.

Concourse C1

A second communist takes aim at Speed-O with a cone rifle. Just as he's about to fire, Jam-R launches three nuts at the communist's head.

One hits him square in the forehead. He recoils in shock and loses his aim.

The second hits square in the left eye! wince The eye collapses, causing the communist to collapse to the floor in pain.

But this causes the third to miss its target completely. Ah well.

After he's finished with that, he checks the vendobot. It has indeed dispensed six cans of B3. But rather than drink, he proceeds to throw them. Unfortunately, his aim isn't as good this time. He only manages to get two in the midst of the communists, where they start rumbling. Two more go wide and hit the walls. The other two... well, the cans burst, spraying B3 everywhere.

written by Speeder on May 25, 2010 02:24

I move to peer at the commies, and shoot the rumbling cans, then I move back to safety, inside the nice water.

written by Jam on May 25, 2010 03:29

I also run into the water, and try to conceal myself underneath it, while loading two more nuts into the nut launcher.

written by 4616599 on May 25, 2010 04:01

"Okay. That's good." I climb in, and have another look at the control panel. More specifically, the panel for the lift. If I see anything that looks vaguely like a lever, I push it up a bit. I also check for any location I can conveniently mount the blaster onto.

written by Cryoburner on May 25, 2010 06:53

"Thank you, Doctor."

I examine my crutch, and try walking around with it.

"I take it you don't have any pills or vitamins, or even candy then? I'd be pleased to take any off your hands, even if it's expired, or on fire."

I hear more noises coming from the direction of the concourse.

"Hmm... there seems to be quite the commotion out there. I hope I'm not missing a party."

written by Lightning4 on May 25, 2010 15:12

I decide that perhaps the cone rifle is overkill for now. Leaving it loaded, I put it away and take out my blaster instead.

I aim at the closest commie and start firing.

Concourse C1

Speed-O's first shot misses the cans and hits one of the communists, who falls face-first into the water.

The second hits one of the cans, causing it to explode.

BANG

The can is torn into shrapnel, which hits the communists, sending them flying into the stairs.

E_net-R, was standing a little too close to the exploding can, and suffers a hit to the leg. He falls over backwards.

Though Albey-R was relatively close, he remained unscathed.

Speed-O and Jam-R are partially shielded by water and also don't suffer any injuries. It might not be a good idea to stay underwater for long, though.

L4-O loses his footing and falls into the water.

Loading dock

Joris-O sits in the operator's chair and inspects the controls again. Spotting a likely lever, he gives it a push. This causes the forks to raise a little. But the motors sound like they're not getting enough power from the emergency power packs. The lights on the console also flicker.

Now with a good view of them from the seat, it looks like he could attach some weapons to the forks. I don't know about firing them, though.

Yet another light on the charging station comes on. 80%.

Medical bay

"Well, if you insist, I can give you some pep pills... I don't know how long they've been here, though."

As it happens, Cryo-R can move about just fine, if a little slow, with the crutch.

Concourse C1

One of the communists recovers from the blast, aims his slugthrower, and fires.

Click. Click. Click.

Oops.

An excellent opportunity for someone, let's say L4-O, who is just about to fire.

Opting for the blaster, he fires off several shots.

It turns out that he's not too good with the blaster. Out of eight attempted shots, he fails to fire three times, misses four times, and only hits a communist once. That communist has just enough time to look at the wound in her chest in a comical fashion before falling over backwards.

written by 4616599 on May 25, 2010 17:24

"Ah. Finally."

I wait till the main powerpack is full, then insert it into the forkbots, putting the emergency packs into my backpack.

I then adjust the fork to 'ramming position', just below center, and start driving to the exit, and down corridor A2. I decide to reinforce the bot further, and partially obscure myself, putting my own kevlar shield on the windscreen.

written by Speeder on May 25, 2010 18:00

I fire randomly, although trying to hit the second can.

While I do that, I use my full attention to get L4 head out of the water.

"Sorry! But can you please not drown?"

written by Lightning4 on May 25, 2010 22:21

Getting out of the water all of the way, I spit out a mouthful of dirty brown water. I manage to work a reply, "I'll do my best cough not to"

I retrain my blaster towards the communists and fire, hoping my luck with it is just as good.

written by Cryoburner on May 25, 2010 22:58

"Yay! Candy!"

I count the candies, and examine them, along with their container.

"Thank you Doctor, for all you've done. I should be going now though. I think they're holding a party in the concourse, and I wouldn't want to disappoint them by not showing up after being invited."

I step out of the medical bay, and into the red dormitory.

written by Gligar on May 26, 2010 00:00

Food storage

At this point, the water flowing from the sprinklers has reached a sufficient depth to start putting out the food fires. The ex-Insta-Hot Fun is next.

Selbio-R probably isn't in any danger of drowning any time soon.

Corridor A1

The water from above has reached A Level. It starts to spread out.

Concourse C1

You know, with the water thing, it'd probably help if more doors were propped open...

But anyway. Speed-O shoots again, aiming for the second can. He misses, and hits the water. He seems more interested in making sure L4-O doesn't drown.

L4-O tries to fire again. Again, he misses, almost hitting Jam-R instead.

Loading dock

Another light appears on the charging station. The power pack is finally at 100%.

Joris-O swaps the emergency packs out for the proper power pack, and waits for the bot to complete its self-tests again. There, that's better. No low-power light.

That done, he sets the forks and, inspecting the controls again, attempts to make the bot move towards the exit. It works, and he manages to get into Corridor A2. It's a bit tight, but the forkbots should be able to move down here.

Turning is problematic, though. Joris-O fouls it up the first time, and ends up running into the wall opposite the loading dock.

As he assesses the situation, he decides to beef up the forward protection with his own kevlar shield. Visibility will be a bit of a problem with it in place, but hey, what could go wrong?

Medical bay

The "candies" (pep pills) are RED, and there are 24 of them in a clear bottle. There is a label that reads "PEP PILLS. Take one when feeling tired." There's also a bunch of tiny text that I can't make out on my cameras.

(It seems that I had lost my focus for a few seconds. No matter, L4-O's near miss has brought me back to my senses.)

I run and hide behind a vendobot, then focus on finding a way to distract the communists.⁸¹

I smile as I realize the answer is right in front of me.

"Hey vendobot, those people over there told me they are really thirsty. Why don't you go over there and offer them some drinks. They might become unhappy if you don't. And you wouldn't want that, would you?"

written by 4616599 on May 26, 2010 08:37

I note the water coming down the stairs. "Oh, citizens! Haven't we flooded enough places already?"

Speed-O tries his roll-and-shoot trick again. It doesn't work as well as he'd hoped this time either, as his shot misses.

But speaking of shots, it seems that someone fired off a cone rifle shot a while back. I didn't really notice earlier, but the shell seems to be glowing. It's rapidly being extinguished, though.⁸²

Jam-R scurries behind a vendobot. A flash of inspiration crosses his face for a moment before he realises that the vendobots are bolted to the floor. A pity, as there's barely enough room behind one of those things for a clone to fit behind one.

L4-O tries to shoot his one rifle again but slips and falls into the water.

Corridor A2

Joris-O tries the turn again and gets it right this time. He heads down the corridor to the intersection, and pulls off another turn. He reaches the stairs before the bot comes up with an observation. "Er... I see water. I'm not shielded against water."

But Joris-O presses on, to be caught up with another obstacle.

Stairs.

Not to worry, he just backs it up and charges at full tilt towards the stairs, causing the wheels to find purchase even through the water! Only to run into another wall when the stairs turn at B Level.

I get into the control room, and turn off the lockdown (But not the turrets)

written by Jam on May 26, 2010 22:48

Deciding that I wouldn't want to get trapped behind a vendobot, I crawl out. Peering around the edge, I see L4-O trip and fall into the water.

"No! L4-O!"

I fire the metal nuts at the communists, then rush toward L4-O. I do my best to lift him out of the water.

"Don't drown! You're the only one here with a blaster."

I glance nervously at the communists, trying to judge how many there are.

"Do you think you're okay now?" I ask L4-O.⁸³

⁸² GLIGAR: (OOC: L4 must have posted as I was preparing a turn.)

written by Lightning4 on May 27, 2010 00:13⁸⁴

Around the water, I gurgle "Yeah, I'm fine"

I survey what the cone rifle shot did, disappointed that that type of shell is useless in a water environment (so I think, anyway).

I regain my footing and start shooting with my blaster again.

Speed-O finds the switch to deactivate lockdown and presses it.

As he does, the sprinklers deactivate.

The emergency blast door raises, revealing the door again.

Concourse C1

The Communists, and their reinforcements (who have been arriving this whole time) notice Speed-O leave. Some of them try to get in to the control room.

Jam-R crawls out from behind the vendobot and shoots, successfully distracting the communists. One aims in his direction and fires! A slug whizzes over his head by the smallest of fractions, causing him to duck reflexively. He gets L4-O's head out of the water.

A nervous glance commieward shows that there are three active communists in the concourse, and probably more in the ruined warehouse.

L4-O gets to his feet and continues firing.

He misses three times.

Frustrated, he keeps pulling the trigger but nothing happens. It seems that his blaster's power pack is depleted.

written by Speeder on May 27, 2010 01:16

Since commies turned their back on me to shoot on Jam on the opposite side, I aim carefully, and try to plug a hit on the back of the neck of each commie that I can shoot from inside the control room.

written by Jam on May 27, 2010 01:48⁸⁵

I scan my eyes over L4-O, trying to assess the extent of his injuries. I also look for the (phantom?) name tag I thought I saw earlier.

⁸³ SPEEDER: (OOC: Is Jam clarivoyant? I mean, noone ever told the others our names 😊 There is a reason why we call each other "You")

⁸⁴ LIGHTNING4: (OOC: I assumed we just had the generic nametags attached to our suits saying "HELLO, my name is: SPEED-O", scrawled in a marker color appropriate for our rank 😊)

⁸⁵ JAM: (ooc: Sorry about that, I forgot we didn't know each other's names)

I noticing the empty power pack I quietly say to L4-O, "Do you have another power pack, or a different weapon to use?"

written by Lightning4 on May 27, 2010 02:44

Frustrated, I switch to my cone rifle again and reload it with some other kind of shell.

I pull the trigger and hope for the best.

"Sorry, but this is for the people...vat those commies; I mean, for our Friend Computer!" I tell the forkbot. "On another note, I didn't know my driving skills were that good..."

I back the forkbot towards concourse B1, then decide to get off and check Turret Control. In particular, the concourse and corridor C1 turrets.

written by Cryoburner on May 27, 2010 07:09

"Hmm... it's getting wet in here. I wonder if they're having a pool party. I didn't even know we had a pool."

I also check to make sure the dust is still there. 👁

Control room

Speedo-O starts firing into the concourse. He hits a communist in the head and fires again. The second shot also hits its mark. Two for two. There are more, but he can't hit them from the control room.

Speed-O notices that his rifle's barrel has started squealing.

Concourse C1

Jan-R looks over L4-O, assessing his injuries and wondering just how he knew L4-O's name... after all, there's no name tag. There may be one on his old RED jumpsuit, but he's not wearing that. He appears to be unharmed despite having been submerged a couple of times.

L4-O switches weapons. Loading another shell and trigger into his cone rifle, he shoots... and predictably, he misses, passing between two communists.

The shell explodes violently when it hits the stairs behind them, throwing them forward. The stairs now have a large hole in them, and are almost unusable.

Subnode and Turret Control

Having clambered off the forkbot after stopping it in the concourse, Joris-O enters. He takes in the subnode while trying not to be entranced by the blinking lights, before directing his attention to the turret controls. Right away, he notices that one of them is blinking a bunch of error lights, its monitor displaying nothing but static.

He then identifies the controls for the Concourse- and Corridor C1 turrets. Both seem to be operable but appear to have been locked in a test cycle.

Examining the concourse monitor, it seems that a cone rifle shell has exploded, rendering the warehouse stairs almost useless, like the warehouse itself.

Dormitory 1

Cryo-R tries to open the south door, but finds that it's locked.

As for the dust, it's being dislodged by the water seeping in from the corridor.

written by Speeder on May 27, 2010 18:15

"VATCRAP! CAN YOU PLEASE DON'T USE THAT THING ALL THE TIME?"

I detach the squealing barrel from the rifle. I move nearer the door, throw it inside the hole that L4 just made on the stairs, and then I take cover inside the control room again.

Speed-O throws the squealing barrel. It lands in the hole and continues squealing.

Another communist fires his slugthrower. Albey-R is hit in the hand!

At this point, the turret finally decides to do something useful, and fires off a shot. The VIOLET laser hits the communist in the hand (how appropriate) causing him to drop his slugthrower, It's a nice shade of green, by the way.

Subnode and turret control

It looks like the turrets have come out of their test cycles.

I look at my cone rifle and the damage, and giggle in glee.

I then realize that the stairs were one of our only ways out. "VATCRAP!"

I reply to Jam's question

⁸⁶ SPEEDER: (ooc: forgot one detail...)

⁸⁷ JAM: (ooc:Um, my name's Jam-R, not Jan-R)

"Oh um, yes. I do have a knife... but he's my precious Fred... I don't know if I could part with him... but if it's for the good of the bunker..."

I decide to hand over Fred for now.

"Please take care of him, and bring him back to me when you're done."

I switch back to my blaster and attempt to reload it... assuming I remembered the appropriate equipment to do so.

BANG

Loyal clones in the concourse are thrown to the ground by the blast. L4-O gets another mouthful of water.

The communists, however, are too close to the blast, and are ripped apart before being buried in falling rubble, which fills in part of the concourse and the former location of the warehouse stairs. There's no getting out that way now. Though, there's now a hole in the concourse roof.

I hear a loud bang coming from the concourse, followed by a rumbling noise.

"They must have started the party without me! I really should get over there."

Using the other dormitory exit, I venture out into corridor C1, closing the door behind me. Using my crutch, I wander to the southern end of the hall and look out the doorway into concourse C1.

"What did you do?! This place is a mess! Do you know how long this will take that poor scrubot to clean up? He just got done scrubbing the floor here too."

From the corridor, I inspect the concourse, noting the extent of damage to the light fixtures, cameras and turrets, as well as the size of the hole in the ceiling, and what can be seen outside.

I peer at the monitors for a little more time.

"Oh... That is not good..."

Still armed with the rifle, I wander into the concourse.

"Welcome again all of you, I need to speak with you. Wait, someone is missing..."

"Where is the other guy with Orange brevet?"

I notice then that Selbio is also missing.

"And the hungry guy that ate his ME card?"

Jam-R finds two of the cans of B3 he'd thrown. Searching the communists, he also finds another knife, and a laser pistol with a RED barrel.

As he's doing that, L4-O readies a grenade, presenting it to the communists up above.

It goes through the hole... just barely, before landing on the floor above,

At this point, Cryo-R enters. He looks distraught at all the property damage. I guess he works for a CPU service firm? He's probably upset at all the paperwork this is going to generate. Especially since there's now no staircase up to D Level here. And the big hole where the light fittings used to be. And the destroyed warehouse above that. And by the way, there's a face looking down it. Might want to do something about that.

BOOM

Oh. The grenade. Well, that's that dealt with.

Even after all these explosions, though, there are still functioning cameras in the concourse. And the turret has fared well.

Speed-O enters, and begins speaking. He wants to know the locations of certain clones, such as Joris-O, who has just entered.

The water is draining downstairs nicely, by the way.

written by 4616599 on May 29, 2010 18:54

I survey the rather messy scene, focusing on just how badly damaged the warehouse got.

"Augh...well folks, I'm glad I missed that...errr.... I mean, I'm glad you finished off the commies so I could get things like the forkbot powered up."

I note Jam-R, and his launcher. "You know, while I'm not going to doubt that that is an interesting contraption, if you wanted something more, er, conventional, you could have gone to the RED dormitory, just a door down. First locker nearest the door has more RED laser pistols and barrels."

"Anyway, I have a vehicle powered up, a forkbot. For a bot, it's quite efficient."

Getting thirsty, I pull out my can of AlgaePLUS and drink, carefully tasting the quality of the algae.

⁸⁹ SPEEDER: (OOC: I edited a little bit, because 4k posted while I was writing my post, and made a question from me to him look utter stupid and redundant 😊)

I peer at L4.

"You are from the repurposing services, aren't you?"

I look at Joris.

"Oooh, great! Now can you after my future speech, bring the forkbot here, so we can use it as lift, after someone repurposed the stairs to become commie killer trap?"

I look around for a while.

"The towel guy is still missing... Ok, let's start."

I walk to the top of the rubble. Then suddenly I comment. "You, return Fred and my weapon, and take those that you just found."

Then I speak like a politician and all! Who knows... Wait, politician? No no no... politicians does not exist here, there are no elections... So I speak like... a friend computer speaker on his mightyness behalf!

"Loyal troubleshooters, we are in DIRE times! Communists managed to shut-down the compnode of this sector and conquer the sector. The bunker is the last safe place, or was... Anyway, we are not supposed to stay inside the bunker, the communists already conquered the rest of the sector, and we don't have power to reconquer. Or mission is simple, even if absurdly dangerous and suicidal, although you all know, that friend computer cares for us and never give suicidal missions, we are to cross the communist conquered territory, until we find a way to reach the Compnode on the V level, and fix it. Before proceeding, we need to know each other names, figure if we can find communication devices, and make a plan. I am Speed-O, nice to meet you all. I am the tech guy. Teams are usually formed upon specialities, I need to know who is the marksmen, who is the scout, and obviously, you are the demolitions guy."

As I say you are the demolitions guy, I point at L4.

I clean the sweat of my face, and smile happily and proudly. More happy than proud.

Speed-O gives a little speech. As he's doing so, Joris-O pulls out that can of AlgaePLUS and drinks it. It's quite tasty. Did you know that the algae in AlgaePLUS is guaranteed to remain fresh for over 20 yearcycles? Any rumours to the contrary, that is, that the algae is composed of the sludge recovered form old decommissioned food vats is 100% false.

written by 4616599 on May 29, 2010 19:30

I respond to Speed-O's question. "I'll try, either that or the the A Level roadway. I'm already having trouble moving it up the stairs."

"Also, thanks for reminding us of our mission. With my Scru-R cover I suppose I could double as a scout. On a different note...does this AlgaePLUS seem recycl- efficiently used to you?"

written by Speeder on May 29, 2010 19:38

I peer at the AlgaePLUS can.

“Sure, seems fine... I mean, I never drink AlgaePLUS, but I never saw bad stuff, even on abandoned locations... The maintenance people really work hard, even without going there.”

After a while thinking, I say. “I don’t think that using the roadway is good idea, it is too open, we might get the entire team shot, or exploded, or trampled, or sniped, or burned, or melted, or poisoned, or gassed, or all the other terrible stuff that commies do. Oh, yes, the Scru cover I don’t think was blown yet...”

I return Fred and the nut launcher and nuts to their owners.

“Thank you for lending me the nut launcher. I’m Jam-R. I don’t know what I could help with, I can’t remember anything but my name. I seem to have had luck with the nut launcher, maybe I could be a marksman?”

I look around for something to shoot to demonstrate my marksmanship skills.

“Demolition? Sounds fun to me!”

I glance at the hole in the ceiling.

“Perhaps we could find a ladder or rope we could use. We also should get back to get THQ armory and get our newer recruits some gear.”

Concourse C1

The briefing, conversation, or whatever you want to call it, continues.

For once, there doesn’t seem to be anyone in the ruins of the warehouse. Or at least, none can be heard.

Jam-R seems to want more things to shoot. Finding none, he goes quiet.

written by Jam on May 30, 2010 02:27

I pause, lost in thought. Then I suddenly fire a laser shot at the farthest wall I can see that doesn’t have people nearby.

“Look!”

I then take out my knife and throw it at the mark made from the laser shot, aiming for the center.

written by Lightning4 on May 30, 2010 02:34

I ready my cone rifle and prepare to shoot at the spot, then I realize there’s nothing there.

“Sorry, but... I don’t think that wall is a communist.”

“I’m going to look for a ladder or something.”

I put my cone rifle away again and make my way to the spare parts storage room first, to search for a ladder.⁹⁰

written by 4616599 on May 30, 2010 04:53

“Hmm... I wonder if by ‘marksmen’ he means ‘expendable gunmen’ or ‘snipers’?”, I mumble.

I then assess Jam-R’s shot.

“And while you’re at it, L4-O(now how did I know his name? He must have a ClearType Enlarged Font ME Card or something...), could you have a look at the forkbot? It’s parked at the stairwell. See if you can move it too. I’ll probably be there shortly.

For weapons there are more laser pistols in the RED dormitory and some other stuff in the ORANGE one. Don’t know if the rest of the REDs want big stuff though. Besides, isn’t THQ still flooded and commie laden?”

Speaking of the other REDs, I wave a packet of Cold Fun around Albey-R’s nose, trying to induce some reaction from him.

written by Cryoburner on May 30, 2010 05:55

As Speed-O was starting what appeared to be some kind of boring (possibly communist?) speech about something, I decided to go check on Selbio-R, since he never made it to the party, which appears to have already ended.

I head back down Corridor C1, and arrive at Food Storage to find Selbio-R still standing there, with some quantity of burned and wet food on the floor.

“What did you do?! You really need to be more careful. I left you with that food assuming you could take proper care of it. Why haven’t you even tried to pick up any of this food on the floor? It’s going to be soggy, and possibly less Fun than it would have otherwise been. You don’t want the clones of this bunker to be deprived of Fun, do you?”

I examine the aftermath of the apparent cooking fire and flood, and check how much of the food has been damaged.

written by Speeder on May 30, 2010 06:31

I peer at the wandering away Cryo.

Then I look to Jam. “Oh... let’s see...”

I look to the others. “Good idea!”

I climb down from the rubble.

“I will try to find a proper map... or anything that helps us reach our objective...”

I wander into the control room and start typing, attempting to find the mentioned data.

Concourse C1

Treasonously unsatisfied with having a proper target, Jam-R fires at a wall, surprising a few clones. He then throws his knife at the burn mark. However, as is the norm when you're showing off, the knife misses and somehow hits a completely different wall. It's almost as if he was preoccupied.

⁹⁰ LIGHTNING4: (edit: loltypo)

L4-O was ready to shoot, but, seeing that there's nothing there, he decides to head down to look for a ladder.

Joris-O calls after him to look at the forkbot before trying to elicit a response from Albey-R. However, the Cold Fun doesn't seem to do anything.

Cryo-O seems to have wandered off. It seems that he's unhappy. And, as you all know, happiness is mandatory. Therefore, being unhappy is treason...

Speed-O finishes up and wanders into the control room again.

Spare Parts Storage

Squeezing past a forkbot - presumably the one Joris-O was talking about - L4-O searches for a ladder. Hmm... there doesn't seem to be one.

Food Storage

There are still a couple of small fires, but nothing threatening. Regrettably, all the Cold Fun has melted. Most of the Insta-Hot Fun is burnt. Luckily, there is still the Soylent RED/ORANGE and the regular Hot Fun.

Control room

Speed-O moves to the terminal and tries to bring up some maps.

The subnode responds with an overview of the sector.⁹¹

written by Jam on May 30, 2010 18:10

"Ok. I guess I'm not very good at knife throwing..."

I walk across the room and retrieve my knife.

"I'm going to go to the RED dormitory to get another laser pistol, and some more knives if I can find them."

I go there and begin to search all lockers for any weapons I can find. I also look for a rope.

written by Speeder on May 30, 2010 18:19

I start coping (or taking photos, if that feature is available on my red PDC...) the map to my PDC.

"I wonder why this time it actually worked..."

I try to not close the map down, while trying to get all details I can on my PDC.⁹²

written by Lightning4 on May 30, 2010 23:38

I recall Joris mentioning something about a forkbot, but didn't catch too much on it. I inspect it.

Once assessing it is in working order, I attempt to pilot it around.

⁹¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: I'm not going to make you wait around, so I'll post the map when I'm done.)

⁹² GLIGAR: (OOC: Here's what it spits out. Sorry it took so long.)

I ponder what Joris said, he mentioned something about stairs. There are some nearby.

written by 4616599 on May 31, 2010 02:08

I have a glance at the map, mumbling, "Sounds like Computer-grade Fun, assuming we can even leave this subsector unscathed... we're Troubleshooters, not full Armed Forces!"

I then note that I'm falling below mandatory happiness levels, and force a smile. "Then again, many of us should be competent enough!"

Subsequently I head to the stairwell to check on L4-O's progress with the forkbot.

written by Gligar on May 31, 2010 02:34

Dormitory 1

Jam-R finds the RED pistols (9), and the spare barrels (12). In addition, he finds a whole load of RED jumpsuits and boots, and a few small towels. (Although towels have a plethora of uses, unlocking things isn't one of them 😊)

Notably absent from the dormitory is any sort of rope or cord.

Control room

While Speed-O works at copying the map, Joris-O looks in and takes a peek.

Concourse B1

The forkbot. Joris-O was talking about that...

L4-O checks it out. It looks to be in working order. Satisfied at this, L4-O climbs into the operator's chair and attempts to drive it and is quite successful. He seems to be quite a competent driver.

Now... the stairs.

It seems that he's more than just competent, as not only does he clear the stairs, bringing the forkbot to C Level, but he manages to avoid crashing into corners in the narrow corridor (narrowly missing Joris-O in the process, who was just heading down the corridor himself), and brings the forkbot to a halt right in Concourse C1! Nice.

written by Speeder on May 31, 2010 02:46

I finish the map copy, and close the map on the console and clear the screen. Then for security I log-off. So only troubleshooters can log-in again.

After a forkbot arrives, I look at it.

"Hey, the forkbot from the A level... you drove UPSTAIRS with it! Impressive, really, REALLY!"

I then look at the ceiling, and at the forkbot.

"Hey mr. Bot, I know that this is not safe, and that forklifts are not for transportation, but it is our best bet, do you think you can lift us to the hole in the ceiling? We need to get to the D level, but the staircase is now just a bunch of debris."

written by Jam on May 31, 2010 03:04

I take two RED pistols, four spare barrels, a towel, and as many jumpsuits as I can carry. Then I had back to the Concourse C1. Immediately, I begin to tie the jumpsuits together, tying the arms of one to the legs of another and knotting them several times, eventually making a ropelike chain. As I'm working I notice the forkbot.

"Whoa! How did that get there?"

I look down at my jumpsuit chain, slightly disappointed that it is now not needed. I decide to continue tying them together anyways, just in case.

written by Gligar on May 31, 2010 16:05

Concourse C1

"Hmmm," the bot answers. "It's risky, but I probably could. But you do know that there's a lift hall not too far from the loading dock exit, right?"

At this point, Jam-R arrives, carrying what looks to be five RED jumpsuits knotted together.

written by Jam on May 31, 2010 19:41

"THERE'S A LIFT HALL! WHY DIDN'T ANYONE SEE THAT BEFORE!"

I regain my composure, and calmly ask Speed-O if there are any maps of the sector that I could see, or at least have described to me (so that I wouldn't commit treason by looking at ORANGE clearance maps).

Feeling thirsty, I start to drink one of my B3's.

written by Speeder on May 31, 2010 21:46

I peer at the forkbot.

"Lift hall? Not far from the loading dock? Not inside the bunker, we explored it entirely, with exception of a blue room and beyond."

Then I look at Jam, and tilt my head. I look at the Forkbot again while Jam is busy drinking.

"So, how we get there?"

"It's easy. There's a corridor outside the loading dock. You can't miss it."⁹³

written by Jam on Jun 01, 2010 02:12

"And where's the loading dock?" I say to the forkbot.

I then look around at the other people. Why are they so quiet?

"Does anyone have a use for this jumpsuit chain I made? I don't really want to carry it around with me..."

I continue drinking my B3. Suddenly, I hear a loud rumbling noise. I panic and wave my laser pistol around wildly. Then

⁹³ GLIGAR: (OOC: another short turn...)

I realize the rumbling is coming from me, specifically my stomach.

"Ohhhh... I'm hungry too..." I mumble to myself.

"Does anyone know where I can find some food?" I say.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 01, 2010 02:53

"Hm. Well, we do know there's commies down there too. I haven't looked at the roadway turret recently, so I don't know how many there are down there. I guess it doesn't matter which route we take, although I'd prefer going through the warehouse since we actually have some information on rooms out there."

I turn to Jam-R

"Food storage is on this level... I think the meeting hall has vending machines too."

written by Speeder on Jun 01, 2010 03:25

I nod.

"Ok, outside the loading dock there are some commies inside a vehicle, it is BAD idea go there, specially since our cameras actually don't show there."

I look to the ceiling.

"Yes, we will have to use this hole... The plan is simple, the strongest of us will use the forkbot as lift, and get on the upper side. He will hold the jumpsuit rope, so others can climb without risking an accident with the forkbot."

I look at the forkbot.

"Unless, you fit inside the elevators, then it would be good to take you with us... So, do you fit inside the elevators?"

written by 4616599 on Jun 01, 2010 04:31

Still startled by L4-O's sudden appearance, I stumble back into the concourse not really paying too much attention to the other clones' discussions.

"Say, has anyone seen that scrubot anywhere? Oh, and I wouldn't mind leaving the bunker."

written by Cryoburner on Jun 01, 2010 05:25

After a forkbot unexpectedly emerges from the nearby stairwell, I follow it down the corridor to concourse C1, where I overhear a discussion on how to get out of the bunker and go... somewhere.

"A field trip! That sounds like fun!"

"You know, another option might be to try working our way through the ventilation system. I know there's an air duct near food storage, though I'm not entirely sure how well we would fit through it, or where it might lead. I hear the ventilation system is beautiful this time of year though."

Jam-R begins randomly waving a laser pointer around and looking as though he might be growing unhappy about something. He mumbles something and mentions looking for food. Not wanting anyone to become unhappy, I offer some assistance.

"Here you go! Will some candies suffice?"

I pull out my bottle of red candies, and sprinkle three of them into Jam-R's hand.

"Oh, last I saw the scrubot, he was in the medical bay, cleaning up some glass. Someone might want to let him know that this room could use a little refresh though."

written by Gligar on Jun 01, 2010 17:15

Concourse C1

The forkbot speaks. "It's been a while since I was last online, but the last I remember, one of the lifts down on A Level could take a forkbot."

Cryo-R offers Jam-R some "candies" that look an awful lot like pep pills. No telling how old they are, though.

written by Speeder on Jun 01, 2010 18:11

After a while, I say.

"Just a thing. We are supposed to reboot the compnode, but noone here is a high-programmer, or even a non-high-programmer, and only them know how to do it on the fly, this mean that we need some pre-programmed tapes to complete our mission, and knowing that noone would give us a impossible mission, those tapes exist somewhere."

I look at everyone and ask.

"So, I know we scouted the entire bunker, where are the tapes? Who saw them?"

Then I turn to the forkbot and smile.

"Good! Then we will drive you to that lift, and take the lift."

written by Jam on Jun 01, 2010 23:55

I look at the "candies".

"Thank you, but I'm not much in the mood for candy. But maybe I'll keep one for later, just in case I need it."

I take one pill and give the rest back to Cryo-R.

"I need food, not candy. I'll quick go to the food storage and get some food."

I set the jumpsuit chain on the floor.

"Don't leave without me!"

I then start walking down Corridor C1, checking the doors until I find the food storage room.

written by Gligar on Jun 02, 2010 00:56

Concourse C1

The forkbot replies, "Good. Good luck with the stairs!" You kind of get the feeling that if the bot had a face, it'd be giving you one of those really annoying grins.

Jam-R takes a "candy" and drops his jumpsuit chain. Still hungry, he wanders off in search of the food storage.

Food storage

As it happens, food storage is right at the far end of the corridor next to a stairwell.

There looks to have been a fire here recently. It's mostly gone out now, but some packets of what was once Cold Fun are still alight. A clone is here, batting vacantly at the fires with an INFRARED towel.

Fortunately, the fire didn't spread as far as the Soylent RED and ORANGE packets, and the Hot Fun is still mostly okay.

Finally, the room contains a microwave oven.

written by Jam on Jun 02, 2010 01:24⁹⁴

I put a packet of Hot Fun into the microwave, set it to the "Hot Fun" setting, and start it. I wait for the microwave to finish, then start eating the Hot Fun. Yum yum, Hot Fun!

I also take a few packets of Cold Fun, in case I get hungry later.

written by Speeder on Jun 02, 2010 02:09

I look at the bot.

"I see... Whoever drove you here, will be our driver now."

Then I look at the others.

"Common, NOONE found those tapes? How are we supposed to reboot the computer without a BLUE, or maybe INDIGO programmer in the team, and without the tapes?"

written by Cryoburner on Jun 02, 2010 03:58

"Perhaps we could try pressing the ctrl, alt, and [DFSR] buttons all at once." 😊

"Hmm... You seem to be growing increasingly less happy, Speed-O. You're not becoming unhappy, are you? You know, candy has been shown to improve one's level of happiness, and only unhappy people don't like candy.

"So, would anyone else like some candies?" 😊

written by Lightning4 on Jun 02, 2010 04:39

Hearing Speed-O's request, I hop on the forkbot controls and attempt to navigate it back down the stairs towards A-level... hopefully executing it as successfully as getting it up here.

written by 4616599 on Jun 02, 2010 14:50

"Well, there are some audio tapes, in a room on B level, near the observation deck." I tell Speed-O.

"By the way, given my role of scout and the Scru-R cover still there, I'd really wish to go up this way, with Jam-R's rope. Scout the area, maybe even carry out some sabotage. I'll meet you at maybe the E level, at the lift hall or something."

⁹⁴ JAM: (ooc: When I said "take" the pill, I meant "keep", not "eat". But it's okay if I ate it, just so long as my head doesn't explode or something.)

written by Gligar on Jun 02, 2010 16:57 Observation deck

Food storage

While he's waiting for his Hot Fun to finish, Jam-R looks for any packets of Cold Fun that might have survived being burnt. He finds one solitary packet mixed in with the Hot Fun and puts it in his pocket with the pep pill.

Selbio-R bats him with his towel for some reason.

The microwave beeps at him. The Hot Fun's ready. So he retrieves the packet and eats the Hot Fun. Delicious.

Concourse C1

While Cryo-R continues to offer his "candies", L4-O climbs on board the forkbot again, and, after a moment where he almost forgets the correct sequence, begins driving the bot back to the loading dock.

Joris-O suggests that he split off and use his Scru-R ruse again.

Corridor C1, outside Food Storage

L4-O passes in the forkbot. Looks like Jam-R found Food Storage, and is tucking into some Hot Fun. Good for him.

Now to tackle the stairs...

written by Speeder on Jun 02, 2010 19:16

I look at Joris.

"Ok, go ahead... I will fetch those tapes..."

I smile, so happy, that it even CONTAGIOUS LIKE A FLU VIRUS at Cryo.

"Now, show me that you are happy with my happiness, and take your candies with you"

I then walk to the previously visited observation deck, and search for the tapes.

written by Jam on Jun 03, 2010 00:04

I finish my hot fun, then wander out to the corridor...

I look after L4-O and the forkbot. Thinking that it looks like he's having fun riding the forkbot, and that having fun makes you happy, and that happiness is mandatory, I conclude it must be mandatory for me to ride the forkbot. I follow the forkbot.

Speed-O heads out, looking for the tapes, smiling HAPPILY as he does.

Corridor C1, near Food Storage

L4-O continues driving... right down the stairs. It doesn't go as smoothly as going up, but he gets down to A Level without too much drama.

Jam-R follows him.

Speed-O enters behind them, heading for B Level.

Just before arriving here, Speed-O noticed that the door at the end of the corridor is now open. It seems to be a store room containing something that looks like one of those old tape recorders.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 03, 2010 01:30

I drive back into the loading dock, carefully looking around to make sure that no filthy commies have sneaked in when the lockdown was disabled.

written by Speeder on Jun 03, 2010 01:39

I rewind the tape on the recorder, and play it.

I whistle around and try to lasso something in the warehouse with the jumpsuit 'rope'.

written by Jam on Jun 03, 2010 01:53

I look back at Speed-O. Why is he going that way, the forkbot ride is THIS way. I become distressed at the thought of Speed-O being unhappy, and run back to him, yelling:

"YOUR MISSING THE FORKLIFT RIDE! IT'S MANDATORY THAT YOU HAVE FUN! YOU MUST RIDE THE FORKLIFT! YOU MUST BE HAPPY!"

written by Gligar on Jun 03, 2010 18:30

Loading dock

L4-O once again demonstrates excellent driving skills getting back to the loading dock. He looks around to find that there's no-one here. In fact, the outer door is still closed and doesn't seem to have been breached.

Stairwell

Jam-R shouts after Speed-O,... something about riding on the forkbot.

But while he's doing that, the forkbot carries on down the stairs, and exits onto A Level.

Storage

Speed-O enters. It is indeed one of those old tape recorders, with the separate reels, which has been connected to an emergency power pack. There's a tape still on the takeup reel, as if it's been played.

He scratches his head for a moment before figuring out that the tape goes through there and onto the reel, there. Then, it's a case of setting the tape to "rewind" until the leader shows, then switching it over to "play".

A familiar voice is heard from the recorder:

"If you are hearing this, you must have found the tape recorder. By this point, we've probably been in contact already, but if not, I will summarise the situation:

"A few hourcycles ago, Communist forces launched an all-out assault on this sector using stolen Armed Forces assets. At the same time, they planted a virus in the compnode, crashing it. Said compnode was isolated almost immediately but the damage was done. The MemoMax data for this sector was too badly damaged. Other sectors have had their compnodes rebooted, but this has had a knock-on effect throughout AlphaNet, causing complications with our counter-attack efforts. One of these complications was the loss of several sectors, JHT included, to the Communists.

"You are one of the few for which we were able to recover any sort of data at all. As such, the decision was made to enact Emergency Protocol 214/57/[DFSR], and bring your current clone to the bunker in which you now reside. For security reasons you were brainscrubbed before being awakened.

"You should find additional spools of tape with this recorder. Your mission is to head for the compnode in Central Subsector, accessible from V Level. Once there, connect this recorder to the compnode, turn the compnode's Restart key, and play the other tapes, in the correct order, when prompted. This will reinitialise the compnode.

"Unfortunately, it is not possible at this time to supply you with equipment, so you will have to find your own in the sector. The bunker has ample supplies of food and fuel for its generators, should the need arise. But you are not, I repeat, not, to simply close the blast doors and sit tight. That is not why you were brought here.

"I believe that is everything I need to cover. Good luck, citizen."

The tape ends, and comes off the supply reel again. The loose end flaps about as the takeup reel continues to turn.

Looking around further, Speed-O sees several more spools of tape.

Concourse C1

Joris-O, or maybe Scru-R, is having problems with getting the jumpsuit chain to latch on to anything above, probably because there isn't really anything up there to latch on to.

Finally, he gets it to catch on to a broken synthcrete pillar.

written by 4616599 on Jun 03, 2010 18:43

I prepare to attempt to clamber up. Just before I leave, I check for any nearby comm units on the communists' jumpsuits.

I then hoist myself up, and ask Cryo-R if he'd want to follow.

written by Speeder on Jun 03, 2010 19:50

I turn off the tape recorder.

Then I turn to Jam.

"YOU are making me unhappy, by preventing me from completing my mission, that is what makes me happy, because it makes friend computer happy, and when friend computer is happy it makes us happy, since happiness is mandatory, we are to make friend computer happy. Friend computer is not happy, because commies are bothering him, we are to help him get rid of commies, so they don't bother him, ultimately making him happy, and thus, me happy."

After a while staring at Jam I say.

"Go, go, go! You have weapons now, but we still need to get to other level. The person in the forkbot is driving and cannot shoot, go there and scort him."

Then I look around for any object that would allow me to store the tapes safely.

written by Jam on Jun 03, 2010 21:47

"Ok. I'll go and protect the forkbot and it's driver."

I start to walk out of the room, but pause at the door.

"I heard the recording. I need to protect the tapes too. That is the most important thing. Unless you have any better ideas, once I'm done protecting the forkbot I'm going right back to protecting the tapes. "

I then walk to the forkbot and begin to protect it.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 03, 2010 23:03

I position the forkbot in front of the door and ponder for a moment. I decide to wait around for everyone else.

Concourse C1

Searching the dead Communists, Joris-O, or maybe Scru-R, finds a Com 1 unit. It's switched off, but he takes it before climbing the jumpsuit chain to D Level. He makes it look easy.

Cryo-R doesn't seem to answer.

Storage

It seems that Jam-R followed Speed-O... into an ORANGE area. Speed-O sends him away, but not before he takes a peek at the store room.

But back to Speed-O. He looks around for a method of storing the tapes, but doesn't find anything immediately. However, after a second look, he finds what is probably a carry case for the recorder. There just might be enough space for the recorder, the restart tapes, and the recorder's power pack. Though it would be rather a tight fit.

Corridor B1

Jam-R goes looking for the forkbot. Peeking into the observation deck, he sees something forkbot-shaped moving around down in the dock. He decides to head down there and investigate.

Loading dock

As it happens, the forkbot-shaped thing was L4-O moving the forkbot closer to the outer door. He stops and ponders for a moment.

As he's doing that, Jam-R shows up.

written by Speeder on Jun 04, 2010 02:47⁹⁵

I CAREFULLY try to pack everything in a way that I can even shake the case without damaging the contents.

Then I lift the case, and place in the most secure place I can on my body.

After I finish that, I move over to the observation deck and stops there.

“Good that you waited! Let’s wait for the others but the scout to show up before we open that door. By the way, I already told you people that I am Speed-O, what is your names?”

Then I look at Jam.

“Also, I will consider not treason to RED wander in ORANGE area, because you was with me. But pay more attention.”

written by Cryoburner on Jun 04, 2010 03:24

I call up to Joris-O as he ascends the rope.

“I’m not entirely sure how well I could climb that wearing this cast and all. Maybe you could pull me up!”

Once Joris reaches the top, I proceed to remove my jumpsuit, and tie its arms and legs together to form a super-special jumpsuit backpack. I then place my larger supplies like the shelf and pillow inside, along with everything that was already in the pockets, making sure it’s all secure.

After putting my new backpack on, I climb into the jumpsuit attached to the bottom of the jumpsuit chain, and secure myself in.

written by Jam on Jun 04, 2010 03:37

“Sorry. I’ll pay closer attention next time...” I say to Speed-O.

“I’m Jam-R, by the way.” I announce.

“Do you want me to go and get the others? Or should I continue protecting the forklift?”

written by Lightning4 on Jun 04, 2010 13:21

I look up at Speed-O.

“I’m L4-O”

I turn to Jam-R and think for a moment, looking towards the loading dock door. I look back at him.

“I suppose the forkbot is safe right now. I don’t hear anything outside.... the turret probably took care of everyone outside.

Still wouldn’t hurt to have everyone with us, and maybe find out for sure if it’s safe out there.”

written by 4616599 on Jun 04, 2010 14:25

“Come to think about it, I’m not sure if you should be snooping around with casts and a laser pointer. The casts aren’t even shiny! But anyway, as you wish, since expanded reconnaissance activity should be good. By the way, if anyone asks, you’re, hmm... Megacryoburnergun-R, my personal assistant and a co-ordinator for bunker maintainance. Unless you can come up with a better ruse, which I’m sure you can for some reason.”

I then attempt to pull him up.

Storage

It takes Speed-O a minute, but he manages to cram the recorder, the power pack, and the tapes into the carry case. He gives it an experimental shake. Good. Nothing’s rattling.

Using the case’s carry straps, he is able to strap the recorder onto his back. Should be safe there.

Now done, he moves out.

Concourse C1

Meanwhile, Cryo-R decides he wants to go and help “Scru-R” instead of follow everyone else. Of course, he’s going to have a problem with his casts... so he takes off the remains of his jumpsuit and ties it into some sort of backpack. He then uses it as such, to carry his bulky items, before climbing in to the lowest jumpsuit in the chain. It’s a bit difficult, especially when you’re wearing a “backpack” already and are injured.

Nonetheless, he finishes up in the time it takes for Speed-O to reach the loading dock.

Ruins of the Warehouse

“Scru-R” notes that Cryo-R, or whatever he’ll be calling himself, is secured, and begins pulling him up. It’s... kind of slow going, but he does move. He has to stop for a breather after a while, though, leaving Cryo-R suspended just below the hole.

written by 4616599 on Jun 04, 2010 17:29

“Phew! What are those casts made of anyway?”

I resume tugging him up, and also check the warehouse and the turret-fried commies for any salvageable equipment.

I nod and say.

“Yes please, go fetch the broken leg guy. I asked him to follow when he was in the medbay... He does not seem to be deaf, but he is definitively not much obedient. After the mission I will ask to not give him any sort of bonus.”

I arm my rifle and point at the big door to the roadway.

“I will watch for the forkbot.”

I go back to C Level and search for Cryo-R.

“Hey broken leg guy! Where are you?”

“Scru-R” continues pulling.

Again, it’s slow work, but this time, Cryo-R emerges from the hole.

Jam-R arrives, just in time to see Cryo-R disappear up the hole.

“I guess your not coming with us...” I say to Cryo-R.

“By the way, Speed-O wants to know both your names. What are they?”

I wait for them to answer.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 05, 2010 15:11

I take a look around, particularly at the warehouse, which appears to have undergone some extensive remodeling since my last visit.

I also take note of which end of my currently worn jumpsuit is attached to the jumpsuit chain, the arms or the legs, as that may potentially be useful knowledge.

Ruins of the Warehouse

As Cryo-R looks around at the destroyed warehouse, Jam-R can be heard calling up to them.

As previously mentioned, there’s not much left up here, apart from rubble. It looks as though little can be salvaged. Even some of the walls have caved in, giving access to rooms beyond.

The jumpsuit chain is caught on the remains of a synthcrete pillar, which is surrounded by a jumble of ruined shelving. The chain, of course, ends at Cryo-R, whose jumpsuit’s arms are tied in to it.

The turret is heavily damaged from all the explosions, and is inoperable.

The bodies of dead Communists are in evidence. They seem to have been packing slugthrowers and grenades. One of the corpses is holding a cone rifle, now dented.

written by Speeder on Jun 05, 2010 21:49

I keep waiting for the return of Jam... And maybe selbio, mega, star...

While I wait, I check all my equipment, to ensure no surprises will happen later.

written by Jam on Jun 06, 2010 01:05

I wait a few seconds in case Cryo-R or Joris-O answers.

Then I start to head back to A level.

As I’m passing the food storage, I look inside and see Selbio-R standing there, batting at the air with his towel.

“Well, I need to bring someone. Might as well be you... You even have a weapon.”

I attempt to carry Selbio with me to A level.

Loading dock

Speed-R checks his equipment while he waits. Everything seems okay.

Food Storage

On his way back to the loading dock, Jam-R spots Selbio-R and tries to get him to follow.

But Selbio-R is still mindlessly batting at things with his towel.

So Jam-R takes matters into his own hands and tries to carry Selbio-R. And gets batted at with the towel in response.

Jam-R shrugs and just drags him instead, all the way down to the loading dock.

written by Speeder on Jun 06, 2010 07:34

As I see Jam coming in with Selbio, but no Cryo, I ask.

“Huh... Where is the broken leg guy? And where you found the towel guy? I was looking for him for ages, he never showed-up after commies shot him, even with me turning on the cloning station.”⁹⁶

written by Lightning4 on Jun 06, 2010 08:04⁹⁷

written by 4616599 on Jun 06, 2010 08:46

I suddenly note Jam-R below, but he quickly disappears.

I then have a close look at the ex-commies, searching for any RED, ORANGE or INFRARED equipment.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 06, 2010 13:05

I climb out of the jumpsuit and pull out my pillow. Using wire cutters, I cut a large hole in the one end of the pillow, and two more in the other end, then climb into my new outfit.

I then see if I can shake the jumpsuit chain loose to dislodge it from the pillar.⁹⁸

I turn to L4-O.

"There were a couple more, but they were both motionless. Do you want me to go and get them in case they wake up later?"

Ruins of the Warehouse

Not exactly content to just take high-clearance equipment, "Scru-R" searches the bodies for anything else. He doesn't find much, what with the communists not caring about clearance, but he does find two stunners and a blaster.

Meanwhile, Cryo-R decides to do something about his wardrobe... specifically, he removes himself from the jumpsuit chain and attempts to cut his pillow into a makeshift garment.

The problem is, he ends up cutting the thing to shreds, right down to somewhere around the second knuckle. The shock of this would cause him to double over in pain if he weren't already in casts.

Did I mention that he's now out of uniform?

written by Speeder on Jun 06, 2010 17:57

I nod.

"Oh, that explains it... For some reason he is always hungry, during the briefing he ate his ME card. I don't think that it taste good... But who knows."

I finish checking my stuff, and put it all back on me in the right places.

"I think that I will go down to your level, because if the commies are sniping, there is no point in me sniping them from here, the most intelligent thing would be use the forkbot as shield."

I start walking in the catwalk, toward the corridor.

"Sorry for that forkbot! But you are a bit more resilient!"

I walk downstairs, until I reach the group around the forkbot.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 06, 2010 20:58

What? I'm wearing a uniform! It just happens to be in backpack form! Lame. ☹️

I wrap some shredded pillow remnants around my injured finger, and tie them in place, being careful not to tie them too tight. After that, I examine the pillow stuffings.

I also continue attempting to shake the jumpsuit chain free of the pillar, since I apparently wasn't shaking it hard enough before. 😊

written by Lightning4 on Jun 06, 2010 21:35

I turn to look at both Jam-R and Speed-O.

"So, shall we go? Or should we attempt to find anyone else to help on our mission?"

written by Jam on Jun 06, 2010 23:50

"I just asked you that!" I tell L4-O.

I turn to Speed-O.

"What do you think? They can't protect themselves. They might be safer where they are. But they could help us if they wake up. We might need that help."

Now content that his equipment is in order, Speed-O joins L4-O and the others at the forkbot. Which, by the way, doesn't answer.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Persisting in not following CPU Mandates pertaining to uniform*, Cryo-R tends to his finger and looks at the innards of the ruined pillow. It's full of used bubble wrap. ("Guaranteed to be unpopable!")

He also attempts to shake the chain loose again. This time, he's able to do so.

written by Speeder on Jun 07, 2010 02:13

I look at the two.

"Indeed... Ok, let's proceed, you... what is your name again? Drive."

I turn to Jam.

"You will be the shooter. Shoot all commies that are dangerous to us. After there are no danger, shoot more commies anyway."

Then I say.

"I will run to the lift when it is safe to do so, and prepare it, the idea is stay the least time possible in the open."

Then I look at the forkbot. "When we get to the corridor, the lift is on the left, or right side of it?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 07, 2010 09:25

"L4-O. Let's do this."

I hop off and press the button to open the door, then dash back to the forkbot.

I wait until both of them are back on, then I put it in gear in an actiony kind of way and put the pedal to the medal... even if the forkbot lacks such things.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 07, 2010 10:44

Having shaken the jumpsuits free, I proceed to untie one from the end and climb into it, removing my backpack in the process. I then place my backpack back on, and stuff some of the bubble wrap inside.

Once that's set, I look out the gaping doorways recently added to the eastern side of the warehouse and into the room beyond, which is apparently accessible from here now.

"What about towel guy, we still need to tie him to the forkbot!"

I take out another laser pistol, so I have one in each hand.

"I don't even have any armor! If I get shot... Oh well, too late anyway.

I follow the forkbot through the door and start firing at any commies I see.

written by Gligar on Jun 07, 2010 17:36

Loading dock

L4-O presses the door's button. Slowly, the door opens.

It seems that the commies near here are already dead. Their autocar sits abandoned a short distance away.

The forkbot is saying, "The corridor should be near here. The lift hall is at the end."

Now technically, there's only space for one clone in a forkbot. But that doesn't stop Jam-R and Speed-O... no, they just climb on anywhere they can. Jam-R ends up on the top of the operator's cab, with Speed-O somewhere at the back.

There's no room for Selbio-R, so he gets left behind. His mind isn't here anyway.

L4-O guns the throttle.

A Level Roadway

Hurling off at something like 20 kph, the forkbot leaves the bunker.

Looking back at it, the loading dock can be seen, with Selbio-R ineffectually batting at things with his towel.

On the outer wall, to the left of the entrance, the sign C-3 can be seen, in large letters.

To the left of the sign is a short corridor. There's a door at the end.

The forkbot could theoretically travel down the corridor.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Oblivious to what's happening three levels below, Cryo-R finally does something about the not-in-uniform thing. He chooses to wear one of the jumpsuits from the chain, untying it first.

That's better.

After that, he turns his attention to the room beyond, to the east.

Now finished with securing his extra equipment, "Scru-R" checks out the western room.

Secondary Sector Logistics - Office

The room to the east has a wall emblazoned with the logo of Secondary Sector Logistics. Well, it had to be somewhere.

There's only one desk in the office. It's hard to tell whether there's a Computer terminal buried underneath the mammoth pile of forms there.

The reason there's only one desk? Well, the mass of filing cabinets might have something to do with it. Some of them were destroyed by the explosions.

Wait a minute... are those filing cabinets on the ceiling? And why is the desk stuck to the wall?

Cryo-R gets a strange sense of vertigo.

Dark Office

Through the western wall, a dark room can be seen. Joris-O can, however, make out a desk near the door, with one of those "ring for service" bells. There is no chair behind the desk.

There's a reason why he can see them. There's a pool of light around the desk, rather dim, but enough to see things by.

Nothing else can be seen in the room.

written by 4616599 on Jun 07, 2010 17:53

"Hmm." The office seems empty, but I can't take chances, can I? I advance into it, bending behind my kevlar shield, blaster ready. "Clones? Comrades?" I lightly tap the bell.

written by Speeder on Jun 07, 2010 19:49

As I cling on the Forkbot, and... not much happens, beside the forkbot moving around, I say.

"L4-O, that was stupid. I was planning first put everyone, including the towel guy on their positions, I and Jam was to run alongside the forkbot while fighting, and I was going to open the door remotely, in case there was a trap. Don't ever do something on impulse again, I don't want to see you die a horrible death, and then have to search where your new clone is. Actually, the part that bothers me is search where your new clone would be."

I wait the forkbot reach the lift. While shooting stuff along the way.

written by Jam on Jun 07, 2010 21:32

"WEEEEEEEEEE!"

Happy that I finally got a chance to ride the forkbob, I happily glance over at Speed-O. Seeing him happily clinging on to the back of the forkbob, obviously enjoying himself, makes me even happier.

"Isn't this fun! Faster, forkbob, faster!!!"

In my extreme happiness, I happily shoot at any communists I see (dead or alive), happy at the thought that I can practice my shooting skills.

I happily look over at Speed-O again. Seeing that he is also happily shooting at stuff, I become even happier. I start laughing happily.

I happily wait for us to reach the lift. Did I mention I'm VERY HAPPY? So happy that any watching commies might just burst into laughter and completely ignore us in their happiness.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 07, 2010 21:43

I idly wonder how many bottles of pep pills Jam-R has ingested.

"So. Forkbob... where is this lift hall?" I ask, while continuing the drive.⁹⁹

"Scru-R" rings the bell.

Hmmm... doesn't seem to be anyone heWHAT DO YOU NEED

Whoa, where did he come from?

A Level Roadway

A group of communists appears, riding... is that a tractor? Yes, it is! Anyway, they get shot at.

Speed-O misses with his first shot. But he's not the only clone shooting. Jam-R also HAPPILY takes aim and fires, HAPPILY. His shot hits its mark, causing a communist to fall off the tractor. He's HAPPY about this.

Speed-O fires again. And again, he misses.

Jam-R HAPPILY gets another hit. A second Communist flies off the tractor.

The forkbob responds to L4-O. "It's back the other way, near the bunker. I didn't want to say anything, you seemed to be having fun."

written by Speeder on Jun 08, 2010 03:23

written by Lightning4 on Jun 08, 2010 10:50

I strike a cool pose, but then realize my hands are no longer on the wheel.

I regain control and turn the forkbob around so we go towards the lift hall, instead of away.

If there's any commies in the way, I try running them down. HAPPILY!

written by Cryoburner on Jun 08, 2010 15:29

I enter Secondary Sector Logistics, being careful not to walk directly beneath any damaged filing cabinets, just in case they should fall.

"Wooow... This must be where they keep all the pens."

I approach the desk and search around for more pens, or anything else that may be of interest.

written by Jam on Jun 08, 2010 15:51

"YEAAAAAH!!!"

Happy that Speed-O and L4-O are both happy, I continue happily shooting at the tractor. Assuming the wheels of the tractor are made of rubber, I fire at the wheels too, again happily.

"LIGHTSPEED!! LIGHTSPEED!!!" I cheer.

I (happily) resume firing at the commies, aiming for the ones Speed-O hit with his nut launcher.

"HA HA HA HA HA!"

A Level Roadway

Speed-O switches back to his nut launcher and loads a whole lot of nuts into it. He aims, and fires.

But then, the worst happens.

As overloaded as the launcher is, it's just too much for the poor thing.

The balloons break. Nuts are spilled everywhere.

Oblivious to this, L4-O turns the forkbob hard. Its tyres squeal and it leans over harshly. The spilled nuts are spread all over the roadway in front of the tractor.

Jam-R keeps shooting HAPPILY. He changes tactics, and aims for the tyres of the tractor. His first shot hits, and the tyre bursts. The tractor lurches as it falls onto the wheel rim. Sparks start to fly.

¹⁰¹ SPEEDER: (ooc: yay, cool team name, don't ya think?)

Jam-R isn't finished, though, and as the forkbot continues to turn round, he fires again. Another tyre is burst.

The driver loses control and crashes into the roadway's wall.

The three remaining Communists start arguing amongst themselves in some language you aren't cleared to know.

Finally, L4-O straightens the forkbot up and it falls onto four wheels again. It's now headed back towards the bunker, and that corridor. It can be seen, to the left of the bunker entrance.

Dark Room

As "Scru-R" speaks, he realises that the strange clone's uniform is covered in a thin layer of frost. And the voice was... odd.

IT IS AROUND HERE SOMEWHERE, says the clone. EVERYTHING IS AROUND HERE SOMEWHERE.

The clone vanishes into the darkness.

The room seems to get colder.

Secondary Sector Logistics Office

Cryo-R decides to investigate.

He crosses over to the desk, and starts look-

Suddenly, he falls off the floor! He's pulled towards the desk's wall and lands there.

"Vatcr-" I quickly muffle myself, putting the kevlar shield over my face.

Acting quickly, I toss an unpinned grenade, and the pin, ceilingward somewhere behind the table, hoping to 'airburst it'.

I then swing around, firing a blaster round northward.

written by Speeder on Jun 08, 2010 18:09

"Aaaah... My nut launcher is now just two tubes..."

I put it back.

"I wonder if someone has more balloons."

I switch back to the rifle, and just aim (but not shoot) at the arguing commies.

"Jam, stop shooting, let them pay attention to themselves instead of us... So we can continue our fun forklift ride!"

written by Jam on Jun 08, 2010 23:45

"But the shooting is the best part... Oh well, riding is fun too. There will be other commies to shoot."

I also (still happily) aim at the commies, but I don't fire unless they start shooting at us.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 09, 2010 00:43

After landing on the wall... or perhaps floor... I reanalyze my surroundings. Finding the desk nearby, I approach it and continue my search for pens, shiny objects, or anything else of interest.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 09, 2010 01:15

"I have a couple... but I don't think you want them," I reply to Speed-O's sad lack of balloons.

I slow the forkbot as we approach the bunker, and get ready for some tight navigation.

Dark Room

"Scru-R" takes a grenade from his backpack, primes it, and throws it.

Then, something interesting happens. As he fires his blaster, two more grenades fly out of the backpack into the gloom - and he also flies upwards, stopping somewhere near the ceiling!

BANG

The grenades go off. "Scru-R" is thrown into the door... but doesn't land. He's dazed by the impact, and somewhat bruised.

The best part? The clone reappears, seemingly unharmed, with what looks like a bottle of black tablets. HERE YOU ARE, the clone says, and vanishes.

The bottle is covered by a thin layer of frost.

A Level Roadway

As the forkbot heads back towards the bunker (and the corridor), the "LightSpeed Jam" stop firing.

The communists find the DISTRACTING MANNER of their ARGUMENT to be rather DISTRACTING.

Nearing the bunker again, L4-O slows the forkbot. Are you ready for some corridor action?

Secondary Sector Logistics Office

Cryo-R dusts himself off and stands sideways. He inspects the desk.

As mentioned, the desk is covered in a huge stack of paperwork. Things such as "Request to Initiate a Request for Form Request Form Request Form Form, page 1 of 25", or "Authorisation to Initiate a Request for Equipment Transfer Request Form Form Form, page 6 of 62". If there are any pens in that lot, they'll be right down at the bottom.

Trying the drawers, Cryo-R finds them to be locked.

L4-O directs the forklift to go down it. It's a really tight fit... as in, the forklift scrapes the sides of the corridor. But L4-O continues.

After a moment, the forklift comes to a door.

But L4-O is having trouble getting it to stop.

So it continues.

However, before the forklift can crash into it, the door opens, revealing two more communists. They've just emerged from one of the four lifts in the hall.

The forklift continues into the lift hall.

Jam-R shoots... and hits a commie square in the eye! Not only does the eye burst, but the commie dies.

He lines up for the other one, but there's no need. L4-O just gunned the throttle, and with the forks where they are, it's enough to skewer the other communist right through the face! The skull shatters and the contents are splattered against the far wall.

The forklift keeps going! The forks impact the wall and bring the journey to an abrupt halt!

Jam-R see this happen and desperately holds on, managing not to move.

Speed-O tries to do the same, but the force of the impact causes him to lose his grip and fall to the floor. His body aches.

L4-O braces himself, and manages not to go anywhere.

The forklift exclaims, "Oi! Do you mind not crashing me in to the wall like that? You'll break my forks!"

Secondary Sector Logistics Office

Cryo-R dumps the whole stack of paperwork onto the wall.

Some of it realises that it's chosen the wrong value of "down" and falls to the floor instead. Still more of it decides to be rebellious and fall to the ceiling.

The now-revealed terminal seems to be deactivated. Its keyboard is nowhere to be seen.

There is a YELLOW key on the desk. But no pens.

A Level Lift hall

Inspecting the forklift, Speed-O notes that the paintwork is now rather scratched, and that the forks are now bent slightly downwards at the tip. The tips themselves dug into the wall a centimetre or so.

As for the lifts, it looks like the lift nearest the door is larger, and might accommodate the forklift.

Jam-R looks over Speed-O. He doesn't look too badly injured, though he winces whenever he moves.

He then goes to remove bits of commie from the forks.

L4-O also inspects the forklift. He notes that one of the lights is now broken as well.

Picking myself of the door, I scoop up the bottle with my kevlar shield, also checking it for any blast damage, and then retreat back into the warehouse ruins. Once there, I visually examine the pills and check for any labels.

written by Speeder on Jun 10, 2010 19:14

“Ok, L4, reverse a little bit the forkbot, to remove it from the wall...”

I look at the forkbot.

“Sorry for that! If I find a good hammer, I can try to fix you later.”

I turn again to L4.

“We will use this lift”

I point at the larger lift.

Then I start to figure how to turn on the lift, and call it.

“Jam, while we work, can you please stand guard?”

written by Jam on Jun 10, 2010 22:23

“Ok, I’ll stand guard.”

I get off the forkbot. I aim my laser pistol at the door we came in from, but also listen for anyone that may be arriving from the lifts.

I’m very excited at the chance to shoot more commies.

Of course, if I see any I immediately shoot them.

Ruins of the Warehouse

“Scru-R” finds that he’s still floating as he makes his way back into the ruins. It’s difficult when you don’t have any contact with the ground.

Once he’s there, he takes a look at that bottle of pills. They are small and round with a little smiley face embossed onto each. The bottle itself is now losing its frost, and has a label: VISOMORPAIN. Take ONE when not happy.

A Level Lift hall

Speed-O calls the larger lift, and, as L4-O backs up the forkbot, it arrives and the door opens. He turns the bot and backs it in to the lift.

The sound of a laser turret is heard from out on the roadway, mingled in with the faint sound of an autocar.

written by Speeder on Jun 11, 2010 02:04

“Ok, everyone inside the lift, NOW! We don’t want to know what is coming in that autocar.”

I get inside the lift, and wait everyone to get fully inside so I can close the door, and request movement to level D. (if not possible, to level C, then B, then A, then E, F, G, H...)

“Jam, come in, facing the corridor”

I oversee so that Jam don’t bump into stuff while coming in.

written by Jam on Jun 11, 2010 03:04¹⁰²

I quickly walk backwards into the lift, keeping my aim on the corridor door. I follow any directions Speed-O gives, so that I don’t run into things as I’m walking.

I eagerly await the beginning of the lift-ride.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 11, 2010 03:08

“Um, don’t we want to go to V level? Maybe this lift can take us there... unless it’s like, ULTRAVIOLET clearance or something.”

I listen to elevator music that is or isn’t there.

written by Speeder on Jun 11, 2010 03:49¹⁰³

“No, we can’t go to V level now, we promised to Scru, that we would meet him in the D level. He is scouting the D level and clearing it from commies.”

But I check if there are a ‘V’ level button anyway...

I put the pill in my backpack, and call out to Cryo-R. “Hey, some weird clone gave me an additional brand of ‘candies’. And I’m flying...” I attempt to put myself down.

Also, I check the entrance for any signs of commies, and if I manage to get down, crouch behind some rubble.¹⁰⁴

A lift

Jam-R backs into the lift. The lift hall remains clear.

Speed-O insects the lift’s controls. He notes that there are buttons for levels ranging from D Sublevel to H Level, from L Level to R Level, and three keyholes. He presses the button for D Level and the door closes. The lift groans and ascends.

Unlike any other lift you’ve used in your life, there are none of the loyalty tunes or advertisements or subliminal messages played over the internal speaker. Just the hum of the lift itself.

¹⁰² JAM: (ooc: I don’t think we want to go to A level. The trip would be very quick though...)

“Scru-R” flails about in the air for a moment before suddenly falling to the ground behind a pile of rubble. He seems oddly drained.

There is the sound of walking from the corridor, as if someone is approaching.

A lift

The lift halts, the doors opening onto another lift hall. Footsteps approach.

written by Jam on Jun 11, 2010 21:04

I look at whoever is approaching.

“Don’t shoot!”

If they look like a communist, I immediately start shooting.

If they don’t, I still aim my laser pistol at their head.

“Don’t move!”

written by Cryoburner on Jun 11, 2010 22:40

“Well now, that’s an interesting paper...”

I pick up a particularly suspicious-looking sheet of paper off the floor and set it on the desk. I begin to read the form’s title, but it decides to slide underneath the yellow key whilst being read.

“Now then, we can’t have that!”

I reach to pull the paper away, but in the process of doing so, the traitorous paper folds over and grabs onto the key.

Deciding to avoid any sort of traitorous incident, I pick up the paper and try to shake the key loose

From its grasp, but am unable to do so.

“You sir, are a traitor! Now release that key at once!”

I notice what appear to be keyholes in the desk’s drawers that look as though they might be useful for dislodging a key held captive by a traitorous sheet of paper. I struggle with the paper as it inserts the key into a lock, and then twist it in an attempt to break its grasp. The attempt appears to be futile, so I repeat the process with the similar holes on the other drawers. Finally, after twisting the paper with the key in the final keyhole, I manage to break its grip and pull the paper away.

“Paper, you have been a traitor against the computer’s best wishes, and will now be terminated!”

I then crush the traitorous paper and roll it into a ball, and then toss it across the room. With that taken care of, I return my attention to the desk. The drawers appear as though they may have somehow become unlocked, so I take a look in each to examine their contents. 😊

Apparently bored, Cryo-R picks up one of the pieces of paper he dropped on the wall: “Replacement Pen Request Form, Page 1 of 6”. It seems that someone had started filling this in, but their pen ran out of ink, so they started writing with some sort of RED liquid. Given that the writing gets a little shaky at the bottom of the page, I kind of wonder what page 6 looks like...

But somehow, the form has a mind of its own.

Shenanigans happen. The end result is that the form ends up thrown across the room, out of the holes in the wall, and hitting “Scru-R” on the head. Oh, and the drawers somehow become unlocked. ¹⁰⁵ Cryo-R decides to snoop. Hey, so that’s where all the pens were!

A lift

The footsteps stop. A voice asks, quietly, “Are you the loyal team?”

written by Jam on Jun 12, 2010 03:36

I lower my pistol, instinctively trusting the voice.

“Yes, we are the loyal team.”

I motion to Speed-O and L4-O to follow me. Then I walk out of the lift.

“Can we help you? Or maybe, can you help us?”

I pause, entranced by the voice, then say:

“Speed-O will talk to you... I am not worthy...”¹⁰⁶

written by Speeder on Jun 12, 2010 03:59

I examine the person to see if it is safe, I maintain the rifle ready, although I don’t point directly at the person.

“I am Speed-O, so loyalty to WHO exactly you are asking?”

I step a bit forward, to make me seen, but not too far from the forkbot, just in case I need to dive for cover...

written by Lightning4 on Jun 12, 2010 04:46

I hop off of the forkbot and follow behind Jam and Speed, not saying a word.

The approaching clone comes into view. It turns out to be a registered mutant wearing a CPU service group badge.

¹⁰⁶ SPEEDER: (ooc question: albey was on the ground near the staircase... that location did not get crushed with debris? what happened to him?)

"I'm John-R-SMR-2. I was told that the loyal team would prove it by singing the Alpha Complex Anthem."

He pauses, and adds, "Er, I should add that I'm authorised to terminate those who aren't loyal."

Ruins of the Warehouse

The paper, as it turns out, smells overwhelmingly of dust. And something "Scru-R" can't quite identify.

written by Jam on Jun 12, 2010 18:46

I am fascinated by John-R.

"Wow... Hi John-R. How are you? Did you see any commies nearby that I could shoot?"

I smile at John-R, then notice the distinctive yellow armband.

"Wow! You're a mutant! I've wondered what they are like. What is your mutation?"

I then see the CPU service badge.

"CPU service! Is it fun there? Well of course it is. It's fun everywhere. What do you do at CPU service?"

Then I realize that he wanted us to sing, and that I had been rudely bombarding him with questions.

"Er, I'm sorry. I got a little overexcited there. You wanted us to sing the Alpha Complex Anthem."

I look at the others.

"Shall we begin?"

I wait for the others, then start singing.

written by Speeder on Jun 12, 2010 19:51

I sing... and hope that somehow the brainscrub don't erase the Anthem from my brain...

Just in case, I keep holding the rifle.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 12, 2010 22:09

I think real hard for a few minutes, then begin singing a tune.

It turns out to be a jingle for Hot Fun. I realize my mistake and think again real hard, just barely remembering the song once Speed and Jam get started.

I start singing as well.

Looking towards the Square, "Scru-R" can see what looks to be a squad of PRPF members heading south.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 13, 2010 02:13

"Wow! Pens!"

I grab several handfuls of pens, and dump them into my backpack. You can never be too sure when pens will come in handy.

Now, having taken care of my primary objective in Secondary Sector Logistics, I carefully walk toward the ceiling, and begin examining the filing cabinets up close.

written by Jam on Jun 13, 2010 02:49¹⁰⁸

I aim my laser pistol in the direction of the footsteps.

"Mental Blast sounds powerful, maybe you can show us what it does?" I whisper.

I get very excited at the thought of more shooting, and take out another laser pistol. I step forward. One pistol in each hand, I excitedly wait for the owners of the footsteps to appear.

I nod at the red mutant one.

Then I point my rifle at the direction of the new footsteps.

Cryo-R scoops up about fifty pens before deciding to check out the filing cabinets. They're GREEN and locked.

The footsteps come closer, and are revealed as being made by a squad of the People's Revolutionary Police Force. It seems that they still haven't stolen any IntSec gear that actually fits.

As they approach, L4-O searches for a spare power pack for his blaster. But he doesn't seem to have one.

The lead communist speaks. "Comrades, you are not in uniform why? Is maaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaaa..."

¹⁰⁸ JAM: (ooc: Are communists and PRPF members the same thing, or similar?)

He collapses, holding his head as if it is about to explode.

A glance at John-R shows that he is concentrating on the one who collapsed.

Another PRPF member aims a slugthrower and fires. His aim isn't that good, though, and the slug hits the wall near Speed-O.

written by Speeder on Jun 13, 2010 19:07

I aim at the hand of the slugthrower one and attempt to disarm him, shooting, of course...

"Jam, L4, leave one alive, we may use the help of John to force them to give information... Because I am sure they don't want their head exploding in a painful way."

written by Jam on Jun 13, 2010 20:18

"Interrogation! Fun!"

I shoot at the other PRPF members, making sure to leave one alive.

"Weeeeeeeeeee! Ha ha ha ha ha ha!"

Shooting communists makes me very, very happy.

I notice the communist on the ground.

"L4-O, shoot the one that's collapsed, just in case he hasn't died yet!"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 13, 2010 20:33

Annoyed, and lacking any weapons that aren't either overkill (even though overkill is fun and often mandated by friend computer), I get back on the forkbot and gun it towards the commie group, trying to leave one alive. I aim for the one currently on the ground.

written by 4616599 on Jun 13, 2010 23:15

D Level Lift hall

Speed-O aims at the communist's hand and fires. It's a clean hit. The communist cries out in pain, and drops his slugthrower.

Jam-R is in his element. There are commies to shoot, and he loves that. Shooting commies is fun and he knows it.

So he shoots. One is hit in the chest and goes down. Another is hit in the leg, and also goes down. He pulls the trigger again.

Disaster.

The barrel, having fired eight out of its six guaranteed shots, explodes, ruining the laser pistol.

Jam-R is thrown backwards, into the lift. There is a crack as something breaks.

L4-O jumps back into the forkbot and rams the throttle to maximum. It lurches forward, right into the pack of PRPF personnel. Specifically, into the one clutching his head.

Apparently, having one's mind blasted while being run over by a forkbot causes one's brain to explode, right through the ears...

John-R starts concentrating on another, who also starts clutching his head.

The final PRPF member reaches for his slugthrower.

Corridor D2

A few communists are doing their best to ignore the sounds of battle, and go about their routine. It seems that some of them are doing something at Troubleshooter Headquarters.

written by Jam on Jun 14, 2010 02:31

"AAAAAAAAAAAAWWWW!!!!"

I scream in pain.

"OH OH OH! IT HURTS!"

I try to figure out where the pain is coming from.

"THAT WASN'T FUN!! SOMETHING'S BROKEN, I CAN FEEL IT! IT HURTS!!!"

I take the remains of the laser pistol and throw it as far away as I can. Then I pass out.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 14, 2010 02:43

I lower the arms of the forkbot a little so they're more at arm level, and proceed to whip the forkbot around, swiping at the slugthrower commie.

written by Speeder on Jun 14, 2010 03:08

I run (trying to not get trampled by the forkbot) toward the disabled commie, and then I point the rifle at him.

"We have here a guy that can explode heads, and if I fire again one or two more times, my barrel will start to squeal, and if I leave it on your pocket, you will explode to the point of making a hole to the floor below."

I grin and say.

"So, unless you want to die in the most painful way possible, ot get exploded, tell us how much commies are in the sector, who engineered the attacked on the compnode, how you managed to get the virus, and how much defense there are on the compnode."

written by 4616599 on Jun 14, 2010 11:17

I decide that the main team and Cryo-R are handling their troubles quite well and I'd do some extended recon. Putting on a slightly sterner expression, I march down to THQ and look inside. I lower my blaster. "Glorious greetings, comrades! Was dealing with some of those pesky Capitalists. I'm now just checking for any scrubots to fix or reprogram. Heard some rumours of rogue scrubots here. Now, may I know what glorious work you are carrying out on this... peculiar people's facility?"

Not finding much of note on the ceiling, I decide to head back down. At first, I consider just jumping to get there, but decide it might be best to go back the way I came, to avoid potentially damaging my precious cargo of pens.

While traveling back down the wall and passing the desk, I grab a few blank or relatively empty sheets of paper off the floor, fold them in half, and stuff them in my backpack. I then walk across the floor and head back out into the ruined warehouse.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 15, 2010 00:24

For good measure, I back over the commie who had the misfortune of meeting the forkbot's forks.

I then carefully position my forkbot's wheels so that they're on a path straight for the disabled commie's head.

"I can gun this thing right now if you don't tell us what we want to know. It won't be pretty, and I reckon that there won't be any scrubots by for a while to clean up what's left."

Ruins of the Warehouse

As it happens "Scru-R" seems to have gone elsewhere.

A couple of communists can be seen in the corridor, carrying a discoloured corpse.

written by Speeder on Jun 15, 2010 02:13

I look to L4.

"Running over someone is not painful, like getting the head exploded..."

I look to John.

"Care you, to explode the head of this one? But if he starts talking, you can stop..."

Although, I am prepared to hear the commie, I walk over to Jam, and see how bad he is.

written by Jam on Jun 15, 2010 03:04

I awaken as Speed-O comes near.

"Speed-O..." I mumble, "Thank you for coming over. No one else got hurt, did they? I was shooting commies, and then... and then... the barrel exploded."

I attempt to sit up.

"I missed the interrogation, didn't I? And it sounded like so much fun... Did you get anything from him? You-ahhhhhhhhhh..."

A wave of pain stops me.

"The pain... Ahhhhhhhhhh..."

I take out my pep pill.

"I'm not feeling very happy right now... Maybe candy will help."

I hover the pep pill in front of my face. I almost eat it, then I stop.

"Wait. Give this to the communist instead, if he's still alive. Maybe he'll talk if he's really happy."

I offer the pill to Speed-O.

written by Speeder on Jun 15, 2010 06:16¹¹¹

"You, COMMIE PIG DOG! YOU ARE SUPPOSED TO BE HAPPY!"

"Certainly," John-R responds. He seems rather eager.

Soon enough, the communist begins to grit his teeth. "I... don't... know... ANYTHING!"

Speed-O takes the pep pill from Jam-R and goes over to the communist, punching him in the ribs. He cries out in pain. That's Speed-O's chance to push the pill into the communist's mouth.

The communist squirms and jitters as the pill releases its synthetic stimulant.

written by 4616599 on Jun 15, 2010 17:36

I decide that direct intervention may not be a good idea at the moment and reply. "Yea...is good idea for the people!"

Suddenly I come across an idea. "I'll like to have a look at your good progress so far. Also, look at dark room in other corridor. The one next to blasted warehouse. Try to send most of your men in. Got interesting things for the people in there." I then head into THQ, checking if I have armoury access. (I also peek at their equipment and weapons)

written by Speeder on Jun 15, 2010 17:48

I first try to hit John chin the strongest that I can, in a attempt to knock him out and prevent he from suiciding.

"L4, we need to hurry, if they get the camera control, we are SCREWED, so, kill him... I will treat Jam, then we will have to search for a compnode."

I walk over to Jam and mutter toward a camera.

As I get near Jam, I try to figure how bad he is, and what is broken exactly.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 16, 2010 02:26

Not taking chances, I gun the throttle!

written by Jam on Jun 16, 2010 03:18

"JOHN-R! NOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO!"

I try to run over to him, but collapse in pain.

Enraged, I grab the remains of the laser pistol.

Not taking chances, I throttle the gun!

"You did this to me! How could you betray me, after all we've been through! I'll never forgive you!"

Deciding that choking a weapon is not an effective way of destroying it, I throw it as far away for me as I can.

Then I check how bad my injuries are.

I check them again, just in case I missed something the first time.

I check my injuries a third time, just to be sure nothing's changed.

Satisfied, I look at Speed-O.

"Speed-O, it hurts here, and here, and here." I say, pointing to the places it hurts.

As L4-O guns the forkbot yet again - snapping the communist's neck with a sickening (but oddly satisfying) crunch - John-R adds, "That's why I was sent. The cameras, I mean, not my mutation. I was ordered to tell you that there's a camera control nexus on F Level, off Corridor F... did he say 2? Or 3? It's hard to think..."

"Oh yes! He said something about clearance..."

Meanwhile, Jam-R has been checking the extent of his injuries. Firstly, one of his shoulders seems to have dislocated itself. Second, the hand that held the laser pistol is burned, and quite painful to move. And third... his full can of B3 burst everywhere.

written by Jam on Jun 16, 2010 19:20¹¹²

"My shoulder's broken! No wait, it's just dislocated."

I attempt to relocate my shoulder.

Then I talk to Speed-O.

"My hand... I can't shoot anything like this. I saw a medical bay back at C Level. I think I should go back there and get it treated. Then I'll go up to F level and find you guys."

written by Speeder on Jun 16, 2010 22:07

"Ok, remember the hole on the warehouse? Go using that path, it is safer, and faster... I mean, safer and faster than fighting vehicles while on foot..."

I look at L4 and John.

"Ok, the D level is covered by... two scouts, we can retrieve them later. We three will use the elevator, to get to the F level."

I check if I can remove anything from the path of the wheels of the forklift, so it can go back in the lift without gross stuff getting into its gears.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 16, 2010 22:08

I get off the forklift and walk up to the group.

"Okay, now that all the commies are dead..."

I look around for cameras, then I lean in and whisper to the group.

I smile happily at him.

And then I keep waiting for John...

"John, are you coming?"

written by Jam on Jun 17, 2010 23:57

"I don't think I'd be able to climb up the jumpsuit chain with a burnt hand. I'll take the lift with you guys. I'll do some spying while I'm there, maybe I'll be able to find out more about Stalin-B."

I look at John-R.

“Quick, come with us into the lift. And did you happen to read the name of that commie while you were in his head? If I’m going spying, I’ll need an alias.”

written by 4616599 on Jun 18, 2010 00:09¹¹⁴

I respond, putting on the same stiff drawl. “Okay comrade. Well, I gotta go serve the people now. Say, probably is not important much, but what if comrade Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R gave me clear to inspect whole level for rogue scrubots?”

written by Gligar on Jun 18, 2010 01:12

D Level lift hall

John-R seems to be a little disoriented after his little mishap, but he seems to snap out of it a little.

“Oh... yes, of course.” He joins the others in the lift. “I’m afraid I can’t read a mind, only blast it. But it would be nice.”

Corridor D2

“Would probably be acceptable. If he were available.”

Inside, another communist calls for attention. The PRPF members turn to help, including the one speaking to “Scru-R”. “Excuse me, I am needed.”

written by Speeder on Jun 18, 2010 01:59

I happily press the button to the F level.

I do it so happy, that I look like even a child in a elevator begging “MOMMYYYY CAN I PRESS THE BUTTOON?”

Or something like that...

Yay!

written by Lightning4 on Jun 18, 2010 02:05

“Woo! Let’s go!”

I listen to the elevator music that isn’t there again.

written by Jam on Jun 18, 2010 02:51

“Woo!”

I continue talking to John-R.

“The way you were yelling back there, about computerist forces being exterminated, it almost sounded like you were reading his mind. Too bad... Mind reading would have been useful skill to have.”

I close my eyes and think for a while.

“I’ve thought of an alias... Greg-R”

I resume thinking.

A lift

Button pressing go!

¹¹⁴ 4616599: (ooc: posted earlier but apparently it didn’t come out)

The lift ascends, and again, there is no piped music.

As it does, John R answers, “My voice is similar to that communist? I sound like that? Who knew?”

The lift stops, and opens on a GREEN lift hall. A sign, much like those on other levels, denotes this as F Level.

written by Jam on Jun 18, 2010 17:22

“How will we go through a GREEN lift hall?”

I wait for the others to leave the lift, then press the button to go down to C level.

“Weeee!”

written by Speeder on Jun 18, 2010 18:47

“We? I thought that you was going to C level...”

I then say.

“Anyway, the forkbot, will cross the GREEN lift hall... And doing that, will leave for us a cool RED path...”

I look at all the blood and guts on the bot.

“See?”

I hop behind the forkbot, waiting for L4 to drive us forward.

“John, hop on the top of the bot.”

written by 4616599 on Jun 18, 2010 23:40

“Aye to that comrade.”

After a couple seconds, I follow him in. Slowly, of course. I also peek at their weaponry, and their problem.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 19, 2010 00:28

Admiring Speed-O’s clever ingenuity, I drive the forkbot forward, carving a blood RED path for us in the otherwise GREEN room.

written by Gligar on Jun 19, 2010 02:08

A lift

Speed-O comes up with an interesting plan: the forkbot will drive forward, and, since it’s so filthy, it will trail blood and guts, making a nice RED trail to walk down. I didn’t think it was that filthy, but I guess Speed-O knows better, not having to rely on cameras that may or may not be compromised...

So the forkbot moves forward. And it does indeed leave a RED trail, allowing those who want to, to follow. But not before John-R hops on to the bot.

This leaves Jam-R alone in the lift. He hits the button for C Level, and the doors close.

F Level Lift Hall

As mentioned, the lift hall is GREEN Clearance, only now, there’s a RED blood trail coming from the large lift.

A poster on one wall would be reminding everyone that happiness is mandatory, were it not for the fact that it was partly covered by another poster, displaying a white hammer and sickle on a red background. It looks out of place here. Above it is an air vent.

THQ People's Voluntary Task Force Headquarters

The PRPF member doesn't seem to be aware that "Scru-R" followed him in.

"Scru-R" notes that most communists are only armed with RED lasers, and aren't wearing reflec. The PRPF are wearing their customary ill-fitting IntSec armour, and are carrying the usual slugthrowers.

"Scru-R" also notes their problem: the aftermath of the firefight that occurred here earlier. The hole still hasn't been patched up, and there's still a lot of water around.

written by Speeder on Jun 19, 2010 02:34

I look around for a while.

"So, where we will head to? John-R, you know where are the camera control room?"

written by Jam on Jun 19, 2010 02:48

I suddenly feel very lonely...

"Wheee..." I halfheartedly say as I ride the lift down.

To distract myself, I start eating some Cold Fun.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 19, 2010 09:00

Deciding I've waited around long enough for Scru-R to return, I do one final sweep of the warehouse, looking for anything interesting amongst the piles of rubble. I then peek into the dark room to the west, leaning in slightly through a hole in the wall, to see if he might be in there, taking a nap or something.

"Hello? Anyone here?"

written by Gligar on Jun 19, 2010 16:58

F Level Lift Hall

"Er... it's either on Corridor F2 or F3. But we'll need to get past the concourse first."

Indeed, there is the sound of activity beyond the door.

C Level Lift Hall

One of the lifts goes ding and its doors open. It's just descended from F Level carrying a lonely-looking Jam-R to this lonely-looking lift hall. He's eating a packet of Cold Fun.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Cryo-R goes to look at the dark room. He sees the desk with its RING FOR SERVICE bell. There doesn't seem to be anyone in there.

written by 4616599 on Jun 19, 2010 17:49

With them apparently not noticing me, I wait for the guards to look down, then hide in the former briefing room and fling a Visomorpain pill into the main hall's exit(to corridor D2). I then whisper into my Com 1 unit, selecting a 'transmit to local zone only'-style option if possible, "Comrades, you are ordered to investigate the dark room on Corridor D1."

Subsequently I quickly sprint down the corridor to the starcase, taking a flying leap over the hole.

written by Speeder on Jun 19, 2010 17:59

I nod, then I say.

"Ok, let's proceed by this door, L4, can you CAREFULLY take the door down with the forks?"

I switch the barrel of my rifle, and point it at the door.

"John, prepare for combat when we open the door."

written by Jam on Jun 19, 2010 20:42

I quietly exit the lift and look around for anything interesting.

Then I leave the lift hall and calmly walk around, peeking in any doors I see.

I make sure to avoid walking anywhere that's not RED or INFRARED clearance.

I calmly and happily greet anyone that sees me.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 19, 2010 22:55

I nod to Speed-O and drive up to the door, and "gently" nudge it with the forks.

In any case, I'm driving slower than I do when I gun it.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 20, 2010 01:57

"Wow! A bell!"

I approach the desk, and take the RING FOR SERVICE bell.

I then wander over to the North end of the room, where it seems there should be a door, and feel around for a light switch nearby, flipping it on if located.

written by Gligar on Jun 20, 2010 02:49

PVTF Lounge

With the guards distracted, "Scru-R" sees an opportunity, and ducks into the briefing room. He then sets up some more distractions.

First, a Visomorpain pill is thrown towards the main exit. It clatters to the ground, attracting the attention of a couple of nearby communists.

Second, a message is sent via "Scru-R"'s captured Com 1 unit.

A voice responds, "Will comply, comrade. On receipt of authentication code seven." This presumably corresponds to one of the guards in the corridor.

But it seems his comrades disagree with needing an authentication code, as they start arguing in a language that "Scru-R" isn't cleared to know.

Regardless, the voices do seem to move, into the lounge.

This is good enough for "Scru-R", who decides to make a run for it.

He seems to be quiet enough that the guards don't notice. They are still deep in argument.

One of them begins to turn.

"Scru-R" jumps the remaining distance to the stairs, seeming to almost fly as he does.

A quick scrabble up the stairs and he's clear.

PVTF Concourse

Well, if it weren't for the two communists coming out of what was once the "Ready" room.

C Level Lift hall

A lonely clone looks around a lonely lift hall. He is greeted by an air vent, and a discarded disk that looks like a plasticred.

There is a single door (not including the lifts) out of the hall. After picking up the disk, which is indeed a plasticred (5 credits) he takes the exit.

Corridor C2

Through it, he comes across a couple of clones - presumably communists - attempting to repair a couple of out-of-order vendobots. They don't seem to be having much luck. One of them grunts in response, obviously too preoccupied with his task to give a proper reply.

He carries on past them, into a corridor, which would be RED clearance if the communists cared about that. Another corridor, this one ORANGE, branches off a short way away. There are doors to either side.

F Level Lift hall

L4-O tries to get the forkbot to move, but it seems to be flashing an error light... it seems that the power pack might be running a bit low. You might want to get that changed soon.

After a moment, though, the forkbot lurches to life. Does L4-O want to try that again?

Dark office

Cryo-R discovers that the RING FOR SERVICE bell is fastened to the table.

A quick check near the door shows no light switch.

The further Cryo-R gets from the pool of light by the table, the colder the room seems to get.

written by Speeder on Jun 20, 2010 03:03

I frown, then I say.

"Ok, L4, don't move the bot."

I then shoot the door.

written by Jam on Jun 20, 2010 05:33

I look inside the doors on the side of the corridor. If the inside is RED or INFRARED clearance, I search inside the rooms for anything interesting, and even stuff that's not interesting, because it could still be useful.¹¹⁵

written by Lightning4 on Jun 20, 2010 08:28

"Ah vatcrap. Looks like my fun on the forkbot has come at a price."

I get a steady grip on my cone rifle, ready to load and fire it should there be a little more resistance on the side than we think.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 20, 2010 10:53

"Aw... It's such a shiny bell too."

After not finding a light switch, I try opening the door to let a bit more light into the room.

I then return to the desk and examine how the bell is fastened in place. 😊 written by Gligar on Jun 20, 2010 17:18¹¹⁶

F Level Lift hall

The door flies open.

In the concourse beyond, some communists are setting up what looks to be jury-rigged electronic circuits, hooked up to a device with the radiation symbol. They look up, and ready the usual slugthrowers. (Just the once, I'd like to see them use some other kind of weapon? Is that too much to ask?)

In response, L4-O readies his cone rifle. John-R pulls out a laser pistol and checks it.

Corridor C2

The lonely clone starts checking doors. The closest two turn out to be locked. The third belongs to a RED cloning station, presumably a satellite station to the main one, wherever it is. There are the usual cloning tanks, a Computer Terminal which seems to be offline, and another door at the back.

The station is attended by a single clone, who, as it turns out, was heading for the door when it opened. "Can I help you, ci-exuse me... comrade?"

Dark office

When the door is opened, some light does get in, but the room seems to suck it up. As a bonus, it gets slightly less chilly.

Frost starts to form on Cryo-R's jumpsuit as he returns to the desk. Inspecting the bell further, he discovers that he can't see how it's fastened to the desk, only that it won't come off. Almost as if someone didn't want it to be removed by some sort of kleptomaniac. 😊 ¹¹⁵ SPEEDER: (OO: Xeno, can we have a... map? You know, maps are cool! Maps are fun, I love maps! I would be a cartographer if I was not a programmer...

Ok, I was exagerating... But I still love maps..)

¹¹⁶ GLIGAR: (OO: Who is this "Xeno" of which you speak? 😊)

A voice from somewhere in the room tells him, PLEASE DO NOT ATTEMPT TO REMOVE THE BELL. IT IS THE ONLY ONE WE HAVE.

written by Speeder on Jun 20, 2010 19:01

"L4, gas on them, please! But GAS, don't use unknown cones, I don't want you exploding whatever is that thing near them..."

I smile happily.

Then I keep my aim, but I don't shoot yet, I keep hiding more or less behind the forkbot, waiting for the cone rifle gas to hit the commies.

written by 4616599 on Jun 20, 2010 19:50

I draw my ORANGE laser pistol frantically, after the commies' sudden appearance.

"Capitalist traitors! Thieves! Villians!" I yell as I run past them and indiscriminately plug away. Subsequently I toss an unpinned grenade into the armoury, (which if I remembered correctly still contained plenty of other ordnance, barrels, and guns) and then dash into the hygiene station. Once there, I head for the furthest northwest cubicle and shut the door, then crouch behind my kevlar shield.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 20, 2010 21:14

"Umm... yeah, I guess I can do that!" is my delayed response to Speed-O.

I reach into my pack and rustle around for a gas shell. I load it, prep it...

And FIRE!

written by Jam on Jun 20, 2010 22:21

I take out one of my non-exploded laser pistols and aim it at his head.

"I promise I won't shoot you if you answer all my questions truthfully. "

"What is your name?"

I wait for the answer.

"What are you doing here?"

I wait again for him to answer.

"Are you a loyal communist?"

I wait again for his answer.

I shoot him if he seems like he is going to shoot me.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 21, 2010 01:43

I respond to the unknown voice...

"Oh, I'm sorry! I didn't realize this was your place. I came in from the side entrance over there, and mistook it for the bell storage room. It's a very nice place you have here though. I apologize for any inconvenience I may have caused you. Here, have a pen for your troubles."

I remove a black "Secondary Sector Logistics" pen from my backpack, and place it on the desk.

"Say, did you happen to have anyone else come through here recently? Also, would you happen to know where I might find the bell storage room?"

written by Gligar on Jun 21, 2010 01:58

F Level Lift hall

L4-O rummages around in his backpack and finds a gas shell. It seems he had separated them from the rest earlier. He loads it and a trigger into the cone rifle and fires.

The shell impacts the ground in the concourse, bursts, and starts releasing the noxious VIOLET gas. Urgh, that stuff reeks.

Sure enough, the communists start losing their orientation as the numbness kicks in, meaning they get another lungful of gas...

PVTF Concourse

"Scru-R" thinks fast. He pulls out a grenade, relieves it of its pin, and throws it into the armoury.

The grenade, that is.

But he doesn't stop to check. He just dives into the hygiene station and hides.

BOOM

The blast takes out not just the armoury, but two of the surrounding rooms, and part of the concourse.

And parts of the levels above and below.

And right through the outer wall of the subsector.

The blast is heard - and felt - for several levels.

Com 1s crackle to life in the affected zone. "Massive explosion in PVTF headquarters! All comrades converge!"

F Level Concourse

Though affected by the gas, the communists attempt to comply... but don't get far before running out of breath.

Other Cloning Station

The clone remains calm, and picks himself up off the floor after the explosion. "I'm Lucas-AHK. When the communists came, they told me to wear RED as a sign of solidarity, or something. My pal Freaky told me to go along with it for now."

A speaker in the station blares out the call for comrades to converge. "I'm going to sit that one out."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 21, 2010 02:04

I look out at the gas drifting about ahead.

"So um... what do we do now. We can't go in until that stuff goes away, and I'm not sure we're high enough up to avoid the gas..."

I guess we could... hold our breath as we drive through?"

written by Speeder on Jun 21, 2010 02:08

I look at them.

“Bad idea... Really... Last time I tried that, I got really screwed... What if the bot stops in the middle of the gas?”

Then I think a bit more and say.

“Maybe we have a ventilation system somewhere, that we can use to make that stuff go away...”

As the explosion happen, I brace myself strongly as I can, and stop aiming.

“Vatcrap, what in the entire Alpha Complex was THAT?”

written by Jam on Jun 21, 2010 02:40

I lay on the ground for a few seconds.

“Ohhhhh... What was that?” I mumble to myself.

I put my laser pistol in my pocket, then slowly stand.

“Ok, uh.. Comrade Lucas. I believe you. Sorry about all that. But you can never be too careful when there are commu-I mean, capitalists around.”

“Could you tell me how to get to the medical bay?”

written by Lightning4 on Jun 21, 2010 06:16

“Yeah that explosion was a hell of a thing. I almost thought it was that... thing ahead of us for a second there.

Speaking of that, what do you think it is? It looks... unsafe. A treasonous kind of unsafe.”

written by Gligar on Jun 21, 2010 16:34

Dark office

After a rather chilly silence, a clone appears. His features are still in shadow, but his uniform can be seen to be covered in a thin film of frost, much like the one that had briefly gathered on Cryo-R's jumpsuit.

He answers, A CLONE DID COME THROUGH HERE NOT LONG AGO. I DO NOT KNOW HIS NAME. I DO NOT ASK FOR NAMES.

REGRETTABLY, THE BELLS WERE STORED IN THE WAREHOUSE NEXT DOOR, WHICH I BELIEVE SUFFERED THE FATE THAT COMES TO US ALL, IN TIME. ALL IN THE SERVICE OF THE COMPUTER, OF COURSE.

AND THANK YOU FOR THE PEN.

Other Cloning Station

“Hmmm.” Lucas muses. “I think I saw it at the far end of this corridor, but I could have been mistaken.”

F Level Lift hall

Looking further at the radiation-symbol device, it seems to have the same sort of connectors found on power packs, and may in fact be one.

Strangely, The gas continues to swirl around and be stinky. This doesn't help the communists stuck in it, who seem to have stopped breathing.

For some reason, the gas is keeping its distance from the radiation-symbol device.

written by Jam on Jun 21, 2010 18:14

“Thank you.”

I turn around and take a few steps toward the door, then stop.

“If you don't mind, I have one more question.”

I turn around again and face Lucas.

“Are you happy, being here with the communists, or would you rather them be gone?”

written by Lightning4 on Jun 21, 2010 21:58

I take note of the gas being dispersed by the device.

“Hmm. I wonder if we can hook that thing up to our friend forkbot here. If we managed to get it, we could drag it with us and maybe repel this gas and power the forkbot at the same time!

Who knows what other mysterious properties that device has!”

written by 4616599 on Jun 21, 2010 22:35

“Wow! Ouch!”, I murmur, picking myself up. Hearing the announcement, I reply on the Com 1, “Aye to that! Aye to that! It was horrible...I think I saw its flash from below! A terrible setback to the people's efforts! I believe it may have been a crude but destructive INFRARED sabotage attempt...I've heard they are still discontent and confused. We should hold another mass gathering at Revolutionary Square to remind them of our objectives!”. I stop transmitting, and give a Standard Mandatory Smile to the ceiling to any watching cameras, assuming any survived.

“I believe that should have leveled much of their ‘Task Force HQ’, as well as any troubleshooter docs they may have gotten their slimy hands on...” Heading out through the door, or whatever remains of it, kevlar shield and weapons at the ready, I survey the areas now exposed by the hole. I also inspect the room behind the south door, assuming it hasn't been blown out already.

written by Gligar on Jun 22, 2010 02:13

Other Cloning Station

Lucas-AHK answers, automatically, “The Computer is my Friend! Terminate the Commies!”

It's the sort of answer a Junior Citizen would give. Maybe he only left the creche recently.

PVTF Concourse

Or what's left of it.

The armoury, and one of the confession booths, are completely missing. Behind where it was is an expanse of empty space. Dimly visible in the distance is a large structure... could that be another sector? As "Scru-R" watches, something darts past with the roar of jets... a Vulturecraft.

Much of the remaining concourse received extensive damage and doesn't look all that stable. As "Scru-R" tries to reach the mostly-intact room, the floor begins to give way. Surprised, he jumps back.

Finally, his Com 1 crackles to life again: "Is good idea, comrade, will confer with the Committee."

written by Jam on Jun 22, 2010 04:50

I laugh happily and walk back to Lucas.

"Good answer! I was hoping those commies hadn't twisted your mind enough that you had joined them. Don't ever trust them. They are evil, pure evil, and must be terminated."

"Now, can you come with me? I could really use some help finding my way around. I don't know how much you know, but it's probably more than what I know. Please come with me..."

written by Lightning4 on Jun 22, 2010 07:58

I study the strange machine from afar, as best as I can through this gas, anyway. I search for any kind of wheels, or perhaps estimate how heavy it looks.

written by Speeder on Jun 22, 2010 08:33

I look at the bot, then at the machine, and after a while I ask.

"Forkbot, do you have power to drive until that... device? Or at least, a high probability of making it?"

I keep watching.

"I still wonder what was that explosion..."

I grab my PDC, and type a command of damage report, the classic one, that people that work with tech stuff and are RED or more should have...

"I hope, some computer still works to give a answer to my request..."

written by Gligar on Jun 22, 2010 17:29

Corridor C2

Jam-R and Lucas leave the cloning station behind, entering the corridor. "The medical bay is this way", Lucas says, pointing down the corridor. "I don't know how many com - comrades are there, though."

F Level Lift hall

L4-O looks further at the device. It appears to be roughly cylindrical, maybe 1m in length by 60cm across, mounted inside a metallic frame. As mentioned, there are standard power connectors on one side. One clone could probably carry it, though not very far.

The forkbot answers, "I might be able to get there if I took it slow. Can you?"

Speed-O attempts to get a damage report via his PDC. Unfortunately, nothing is responding.

written by Speeder on Jun 22, 2010 17:43

I peer at the forkbot.

"Ok, in that case, if we go the fastest that you battery allows, how much time would take to reach it?"

I look at the others.

"Do you people are really good in holding your breath?"

written by Jam on Jun 22, 2010 18:16

I start walking down the corridor. As I'm walking, I take out one of my spare laser pistols and offer it to Lucas.

"I don't know if you've used one of these before, but take it anyway. Be careful, you only get six guaranteed shots. I learned that the hard way."

I indicate my burnt hand.

I take out another laser pistol and try to hold it in my shooting hand, but if that hurts too much I switch it to my non-shooting hand.

"It feels strange saying your name without a clearance. What clearance level are you?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 22, 2010 22:58

"Uh... yeah, I guess I could hold my breath for a while. Maybe. How about you, John?"

written by Gligar on Jun 23, 2010 01:58

F Level Lift hall

The forkbot answers, "Shouldn't be too long."

John-R answers, "Holding my breath? Yeah, I can do that. Probably a minutecycle or so. I haven't really counted."

Corridor C2

Lucas-AHK looks at the laser pistol for a moment. He says, quietly, "I don't think I'd be cleared for it, si-comrade. I'm INFRARED under the non-communist scheme. But I don't think the communists care about that." He thinks for a moment. "But I'll take it if ordered."

written by Speeder on Jun 23, 2010 02:34

I nod.

"Ok, everyone, holding breath... L4, press the gas! But please, don't pass out while doing it, I don't want to crash in that thing... Or stop in the middle of the gas either."

written by Jam on Jun 23, 2010 04:42

"INFRARED? Hmm... That is a problem."

I think for a few seconds.

"I know what to do. It should work for now, and if you stick with me I'll see if I can get you and Freaky officially promoted."

"I, Jam-R-JYR, give you, Lucas-AHK, permission to use any RED clearance items and go into any RED clearance areas, for as long as you are in my presence, unless I specifically forbid it. You may use my weapons given to you against any Communists, unregistered mutants, and traitors."

I give the laser pistol to Lucas.

"There. Shoot enough commies and I'm sure Friend Computer will promote you. Show Friend Computer and I that we can trust you! Ok?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 23, 2010 13:30

"Well then, let's go!"

I slowly press the gas and drive toward the... well, gas.

As we are just about to reach the drifting clouds of VIOLET gas, I take a big, big breath, so big that my cheeks bulge out noticeably!

written by 4616599 on Jun 23, 2010 15:53

"What treasonous flooring!" I look down at the exposed levels below.

written by Gligar on Jun 23, 2010 16:45

F Level Lift hall

John-R begins holding his breath.

L4-O opens the forkbot's throttle a little.

Slowly, the forkbot enters the concourse.

Concourse F1

L4-O steers towards the device.

The forkbot gets closer.

Corridor C2

Lucas-AHK breaks out in a grin. "Excellent!" He takes the laser pistol.

Concourse F1

And closer.

John-R starts looking a little concerned.

Speed-O and L4-O both continue to hold their breaths without problem.

PVTF Concourse

Looking down through the crumble-hole, "Scru-R" can make out a corridor. It doesn't look like the PVTF one, though.

The bigger hole, though..

It looks like the explosion destroyed a workshop on D Level and seriously damaged the storage room and cafeteria on each side. The store room looks to be holding bells or something.

As to F level, not much is visible up there. It may have been a shooting range or something.

Concourse F1

The forkbot finally reaches the device. I guess you want to pick it up?

written by Jam on Jun 23, 2010 17:40

I grin back.

"Ok."

I continue walking down the corridor, walking a bit quicker than I was before, and with a determined look on my face.

If I reach a corner, I stop and quietly peek around it, watching for any commies.

written by Speeder on Jun 23, 2010 19:09

I look at the device, then at the forkbot.

"Ok, we can power the forkbot with this, and protect ourselves from the gas! Cool..."

I try to figure how I can install it on the forkbot.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 24, 2010 00:48

I continue holding my breath and nearly pass out.

I finally notice we're here.

"Um... we could use the forkbot's forks, maybe? If the cables are long enough. That or we can place it on the back."

written by Gligar on Jun 24, 2010 01:37

Corridor C2

Presently, Jam-R and Lucas reach the end of the rather quiet corridor. There's a door there, labelled as DELTA SUBSECTOR - ACCESS C. Another door, to the left, is open, and leads to the medical bay. There are six visible clones in there, with their backs turned.

Concourse F1

John-R leans as close as he can to the device, and takes a breath.

As it happens, the gas seems to be staying slightly less than 2m away from the device. It's a bit too big for the power pack bay under the operator's seat, though, without modifying things.

There are cables connected to the device from the circuitry, which are probably about 1m in length.

written by Speeder on Jun 24, 2010 02:21

I look for a while, then I say. "We would need the forks... So, pickup it with the forks, and drive us out of the gas, when out of the gas, we can modify the bot all the we want."

I drop from the forkbot, and prepare to help loading the thing on the forks.

Also, if L4 drives away, I follow along the forkbot, paying attention to the object in the forks.

written by Jam on Jun 24, 2010 04:19 PVTF Concourse

I quietly peek inside the door again. I look at the color of the floor of the medical bay and at the clones inside, checking the color of their jumpsuits. I listen a while for any conversation.

If the medical bay floor is RED (and only if it's RED), I motion for Lucas to follow me, then slowly, quietly walk inside. I silently wait...

If they happen to notice me, I calmly greet them.

I can't help thinking that¹¹⁷

written by Lightning4 on Jun 24, 2010 07:36

I nod to Speed.

"Let's hope that we'll have enough power to get out of here."

I lower the forks and slowly drive towards the object, attempting to get the forks underneath it.

"Ah well. Can't stay up here forever." I place myself on my kevlar shield and sit.

"Computeronimo!" I yelp as I push myself toward the nearest hole.

Concourse F1

After Speed-O drops off the forkbot (staying close to the device, of course) L4-O turns the bot and lowers the forks.

The motors seem to lag under the reduced voltage, before suddenly cutting out. Another warning light lights up on the control panel: the battery is now critically low.

Undeterred, L4-O drives forward, as fast as is reasonable (i.e. quite slowly), attempting to scoop up the device with the forks.

It turns out that the forks are slightly too high. They end up pushing against the device slightly, tilting it.

But as it happens, this gives enough clearance for one of the forks to get between the frame and the device.

Corridor C2

Looking into the medical bay, Jam-R notes that the floor is the neutral grey of synthcrete. The clearance stripe seems to have been mostly burned away, though in parts, RED paint can clearly be seen. The clones are wearing RED, not that that really means much with the whole Communism thing. They seem to be huddled around something, talking about a work rota, and something about getting the docbot working.

He and Lucas creep in. The clones continue their conversation.

Jam-R seems to want to think something, but his mind suddenly goes blank and he spaces out 😊

¹¹⁷ JAM: (ooc edit: I forgot the ending... Oh well, too late 😊)

"Scru-R" pushes himself down the nearest hole. Which turns out to be the new one.

Corridor D2

He manages to roll on impact, and, apart from being sore and numb from the impact, is otherwise unharmed. Looking around, he sees that he's on Corridor D2, round the corner from PVTF HQ's entrance. There's a lot of activity over there.

written by Jam on Jun 24, 2010 17:42

I shake my head. Woah... I suddenly spaced out there. What was I thinking about? Oh right... Six commies = Six shots. Convenient.

I motion for Lucas to stand in front of me, then clear my throat, quite loudly, to get their attention.

I carefully watch their reaction, especially their reaction to Lucas.

"Hello," I calmly say, "I am Greg-R, and this is Nikolai. Is there something we could help you with?"

written by Speeder on Jun 24, 2010 20:09

I now try to place the thing on the fork.

After I am sure it won't fall, I say.

"Ok, you accelerate, I and John will push the forkbot forward, until we are out of the gas."

Other Medical Bay

"Nikolai" looks alarmed for a moment.

One communist looks at "Nikolai". "Ah! Is young comrade from clonink centre. Welcome."

He looks at "Greg-R". "Can be helpink you, comrade? Or perhaps you are sent to repair docbot?" He gestures to the thing the communists were looking at. It is indeed a docbot. Someone has been shooting a slugthrower at it.

Unnoticed by the communists, "Nikolai" fiddles with something.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Woah! It went cold in here all of a sudden. Almost as if time itself froze. The cold from the dark office must have followed Cryo-R into here.

Concourse F1

Speed-O moves the device around, trying to secure it the best way he can on the forks. There, that should do it.

John-R hops off the forkbot and takes up position to the side.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 25, 2010 03:54 Other Medical Bay

I drive the forkbot as far as the limited battery will allow, in attempts to reach the edge of the gas cloud.

written by Jam on Jun 25, 2010 04:38

"Yes, comrades, I'm here to repair the docbot. But there's another reason I'm here..."

I assume Lucas is fiddling with a laser pistol. I start walking forward, then circle around to the other side of the communists, hopefully drawing their attention away from him.

"While I was spying on those Capitalist pig-dogs, I heard rumors that some slugthrowers were compromised. They could explode at any time, without warning. I came to inspect yours. Quickly, put them over here and I'll check them."

I point at a patch of the floor nearby me.

Assuming they all actually follow my orders, I say, "Quick, back away," then take my laser pistol and start shooting them.

At any time, if Lucas starts shooting, I start shooting too.

written by Speeder on Jun 25, 2010 04:47

I push the forkbot, trying to reach out of the gas.

"I wonder if Jam is alright... And the two guys waiting for us on level D?"

written by Cryoburner on Jun 25, 2010 14:16

Momentarily distracted by the loud rumble that shook the sector, I now reply to the clone in the shadows of the dark office.

"So the bells were next door then? It seems they've been doing some redecorating over there recently, and I think they may have either moved or flattened the building's contents in the process. I guess I might have to find another source for bells. Maybe there's a bell factory around here somewhere. They have to make them somewhere..."

"In any case, thank you for your kind hospitality. It was a very pleasant visit, and I'll try to stop by again in the future. Maybe we could have lunch. I could bring the Insta-Hot Fun! Well, see you later!"

I head back out into the warehouse, and have another look around for any interesting rubble that might be there.

written by Gligar on Jun 25, 2010 17:17

Concourse F1

L4-O starts up the forkbot once again. Slowly, it heads towards the door.

Speed-O and John-R attempt to push the forkbot, in an attempt to make it go faster. It's not much, but it's an improvement.

A communist pulls out his slugthrower.

"I tested this myself. I am pretty sure it isn't compromised, comrade."

The others also refuse to give up their slugthrowers.

"Nikolai" looks nervous. It turns out that he is indeed fiddling with the laser pistol he was given.

But I guess he found the trigger. A RED laser beam erupts from the pistol, skewering the first communist through the arm.

"Greg-R" acts quickly. He pulls out another laser pistol and fires. It's a clean hit to the same communist, who goes down.

The five remaining communists get ready for combat.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Cryo-R looks at the rubble.. It's rubble. What is there to say? Hardly worth the bother if you ask me.

written by Jam on Jun 25, 2010 18:17

I quickly realize my mistake. I guess these communists are smarter than I expected. But these thoughts are quickly overpowered by another thought.

Combat? YAY!!!

I become extremely excited and continue shooting at the them, aiming at the ones that Lucas doesn't hit.

"AH HA HA! DIE COMMIES!"

If any of them looks like he is trying to radio for backup, I immediately shoot him or the radio.

written by 4616599 on Jun 25, 2010 18:29

I very slowly approach the bunch of commies gathering, listening.

written by Gligar on Jun 26, 2010 01:46

Other Medical Bay

All pretences dropped, shooting happens.

And  Would you look at that! The first communist to try to fire gets his slugthrower jammed! He tries to clear it and bam, the whole thing explodes! The communists are thrown back, and the first communist loses a hand.

Jam-R quickly takes advantage of this. Or at least tries to, since his shot goes wide. But that's okay, since it hits another communist instead. Right in the kneecap. Said communist drops his Com 1 unit.

Lucas also fires. He hits the handless comrade in the chest, causing him to collapse.

Four slugthrowers fire. Only one manages to make its mark, and hits Jam-R in his already-burned hand. Crying out in pain, he drops his laser pistol.

Corridor D2

There's a lot of conversations going on. But only one topic: the recent explosion. Some wonder if there's a traitor among them (pointing slughtrowers at each other in accusation), others think that the Complex is booby-trapped, and still more believe that a High Programmer has a hand in this.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 26, 2010 04:22

I continue driving the forkbot back outside of the range of the gas.

Once there, I hop off the forkbot and inspect the device again.

"Okay, let's see if we can hook this thing up to our friend here."

"I might need help..."

written by Speeder on Jun 26, 2010 05:31

I nod.

Then I look at the forkbot and say.

"Ok, we will try to use this device as your power source, since its power is unknown, don't try to draw it all at once when we turn you on. And also, can you please turn off safely, so we can remove the current power source?"

I wait for the bot to comply, while I do that, I examine how we will fit the THING on the forkbot.

written by Jam on Jun 26, 2010 15:25

The hit to my hand breaks me out of my euphoria.

I dive for the laser pistol.

Holding the pistol in my good hand, I carefully shoot at the communist in the middle, unless he has already been shot. Then I aim for a different commie.

I try very hard to ignore the pain.

written by Gligar on Jun 26, 2010 17:45¹¹⁸

Concourse F1

The forkbot continues its slow journey back to the lift hall.

Other Medical Bay

Jam-R attempts to retrieve the laser pistol but just ends up falling on his face.

Lucas fares better, and pulls off a shot. It hits the communist in the middle. He's wearing reflec, though, which absorbs some of the blast. He recoils in pain.

The other three shoot again.

One misses Lucas by a small margin. The other two don't seem to have been aimed at all.

F Level Lift hall

The forkbot crosses the threshold, and then abruptly stops... the power pack has been completely drained. As such, the forkbot shuts down and doesn't hear Speed-O talking to it.

L4-O and Speed-O inspect the device, and the power pack compartment. As it happens, the compartment's rear bulkhead is removable.

written by Speeder on Jun 26, 2010 18:31

I make a twisted face at the bot powering down faster than I wanted...

Anyway, I happily (again!) proceed to start removing the rear bulkhead.

"Hey L4, do you think that the device, thing, stuff, will fit here?"

written by Jam on Jun 26, 2010 21:00

"My face! My hand! Owww!" I say quietly to myself.

I attempt to grab the laser pistol.

Once I have it, I very carefully aim and shoot at one of the commies, hopefully hitting them while they are distracted by Lucas.

After that, I quickly look around for anything I could hide behind.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 26, 2010 21:51

I look at the space.

"Maybe? It can't hurt to try. Let's get it in."

I move to the forkbot, and begin grabbing the machine, looking to John or Speed to help me haul it into place.

written by Gligar on Jun 27, 2010 02:25

F Level Lift hall

While Speed-O fiddles with the bulkhead - it's fastened in place by those clips, you know the ones, they're a pain to remove - L4-O starts hauling the device over to somewhere nearer the bay. John-R notices, and lifts up the other end.

Other Medical Bay

Jam-R gets to his feet and picks up his laser pistol. As he fires, so does Lucas.

It turns out that both loyal clones were targeting the same communist - the one who was shot before, Under the combined attack, the reflec stands no chance. Death is immediate.

The other three fire again. It is not difficult to see that they're all aimed at Lucas.

A slug hits Lucas in the foot, causing him to collapse in pain. The other two... demonstrate their (lack of) aiming skills.

¹¹⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: Apologies for the delay.)

written by Speeder on Jun 27, 2010 02:57

"I hate those clips, they are worse than the ones in clone vats bulkheads, or in computer nodes bulkheads..."

But I continue dislodging them.

"But I will remove them HAPPILY, because if I do, I will HAPPILY get a powered forkbot!"

written by Jam on Jun 27, 2010 03:22

I panic. Lucas is hurt!

While the commies are distracted by Lucas, I quickly walk up behind them and attempt to shoot one in the back. Immediately, I fire at another, hoping to hit him before he notices the first one has been shot. If they somehow haven't noticed me by then, I keep shooting.

As soon as they notice me, I fling myself sideways and attempt to defend myself. That will probably involve more shooting, as I don't seem to have any other way of defending myself.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 27, 2010 09:17

With John-R's help, I lay the device down next to the power bay of the forkbot.

I look for a way I can help Speed-O remove the bulkhead, but most likely just get in his way instead.

written by Gligar on Jun 27, 2010 16:22

F Level Lift hall

With the device moved, L4-O goes over to help Speed-O. But it looks like he's manages to free the clips.

The bulkhead is set aside.

Other Medical Bay

Jam-R goes into overdrive. Firing twice in rapid succession, he shoots a communist in the back, causing moderate injury, and another, causing more severe internal bleeding. The second communist blacks out.

Lucas cannot get through the pain and shock enough to shoot anything.

The unhurt communist fires again. Nope, he still can't get his aim right.

written by Speeder on Jun 27, 2010 16:45

I smile happily!

"Finally! I removed those clips! It makes me so happy..."

Now I remove the old battery with all caution needed, and then I try to figure how to fit the nuclear thing on the bot.

written by Jam on Jun 27, 2010 18:47

One more shot, I got to make it count.

I run up close to the unhurt communist and very carefully shoot him, aiming for the face or chest.

Then I take out my knife and slash at any commies that are still standing.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 27, 2010 21:38

I kneel down next to the device and start inspecting the wires.

After doing so, I happily bring Speed-O the longest ones.

written by Gligar on Jun 28, 2010 01:37

F Level Lift hall

Speed-O removes the drained power pack and sets it aside.

It seems that the device could slot into the compartment quite snugly now that the bulkhead has been removed, though it would stick out at the back. He'd need cables to connect it to the forkbot's power connections, and here comes L4-O with the longest he could find on the device, which are slightly over 1m in length.

Other Medical Bay

Jam-R fires again. But it seems that something has distracted him, messing up his aim. His shot goes wide.

Lucas looks up, grits his teeth, and shoots. He manages to hit the unharmed communist in the back (narrowly missing Jam-R in the process). That communist lurches forward and falls to the ground in pain.

These communists probably won't be firing for a while.

written by Jam on Jun 28, 2010 02:12

I wonder what could have distracted me at such a crucial moment...

I look around for any more communists.

Assuming I don't find any, I walk over to Lucas and check his foot.

"Good shot! Hey, your foot doesn't look too good. Do you think you can walk? We still need to get the docbot working."

I also examine my own injuries.

written by Speeder on Jun 28, 2010 02:28

I attempt to then install it, put the power thing inside, and plug the cables...

"It will stick out, the other dude shelf would be useful... Or another idea..."

I see if I can use other objects to place the bulkhead behind the object, to add a little more protection to it.

written by 4616599 on Jun 28, 2010 14:38

Clearing my throat, I march down corridor D2 and join the gathering commies. "Comrades, I saw explosion too! It seem highly unnatural, almost a booby trap. Now, I can't think much with me little knowledge of big expwsions, though it was a huge setback for the people. I only know that our only appawent comrades in there were those in charge of planning the PVTF! Are our glorious systems failing? Does the computer and his capitalist enemies have some sort of plan? Are they trying to create rifts within us? Was it a booby trap, a traitor or worse, misguided comrade-citizens, or even a rogue cell among us!" I start waving the laser pistol around. "What's going on? We all took the oath, no? We must gather around this area carefully and give full evaluation of the People's needs and purposes in the subsector! Maybe get more of our former Complex citizens comrades too!"

written by Gligar on Jun 28, 2010 17:32

Other Medical Bay

It turns out that the docbot is still partly functional. Sudden movements such as bots unexpectedly moving can be rather distracting.

One of the three remaining communists is unconscious. The other two are still awake, but in pain. One seems to be trying to reach for something.

As for injuries, Lucas's foot has a couple of broken bones, and is bleeding. Not to mention the slug still stuck in it.

He tries to stand, but just trips up. I guess the foot is too painful. "Ow... I guess not... do you have any visomorpain?"

Finally, Jam-R checks himself over. His hand is not only burnt, but not has a slugshot wound, and several broken bones. The hand is now useless.

F Level Lift hall

Speed-O continues to work. He drags the device closer so that he can hook up the cables directly to the terminals. It's tricky with these cables, especially since the terminals on the device itself are halfway down one side. He practically has to start pushing the device into the compartment for them to fit.

But after a moment, he manages it, and pushes the device home fully. It sticks out by about 30cm.

Bit Speed-O isn't finished. He still has some SilverTape™ left from when he made his Spear(also ™). He uses it to fasten the bulkhead on to the end of the device, and also to fasten the device to the forkbot a little more securely.

The problem with this is that he uses it all up in the process.

Corridor D2

"Scru-R's" little speech seems to go along fantastically. "Hey, he's right," one says. "We know there are Computer forces around here. Perhaps they've already infiltrated our ranks. We must be vigilant. Stay alert, comrades!"

The small crowd begins to disperse.

written by Jam on Jun 28, 2010 18:40

I grab Lucas's laser pistol and quickly run over to the communist that is reaching for something. I shoot ONE shot at him if it looks like I won't get to him in time. When I get to him, I gently kick what he is reaching for away from him. Just to be safe, I take out my knife and kill the three commies that are still alive.

"Sorry, I don't have any visomorpain. I'll ask the docbot." I shout to Lucas.

I walk over to the docbot and examine it closer.

"Docbot! Are you still functional? And do you have any visomorpain?"

written by Lightning4 on Jun 28, 2010 20:52

"Well! It's now or never then."

I get back on the forkbot and start triggering the ignition.

Should it fail to start, I start getting more dramatic. I keep trying to start it up while shouting "START! Computer terminate you, start already!"

written by Speeder on Jun 29, 2010 00:19

I can't decide between hopping in the forkbot, in case it lurches itself around, or not hopping, in case it explodes... But I end hopping on it.

Other Medical Bay

Jam-R busies himself with the communists.

In his haste, however, he doesn't get the first communist lined up properly, and ends up hitting the unconscious one with a laser blast, killing him.

The docbot continues to move erratically. "Hmmm", it muses. "My motor systems seem to be malfunctioning."

It then moves its chainsaw. "Apart from this."

Jam-R has his knife out now, and takes out another communist with it. He never did reach what he was going for.

That leaves the third communist, but Jam-R's crippled hand reminds him that it's still there, and still crippled, by hurting at him.

He asks the docbot about visomorpain. "There should be some in the cabinet over there," the docbot answers. "But I cannot reach there in this state."

F Level Lift hall

The forkbot starts up first time. It runs through its self-tests smoothly, with no errors, although it claims that the power pack is "anomalous".

Everyone piles on, happy that the modification seems to be working.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 29, 2010 02:38

"Well, what are we waiting for. LET'S GO!

LIGHTSPEED JA- wait. Lightspeed... John?"

I strike a pose anyway.

Regardless, I point the forkbot back towards the gas (and corridor beyond) and happily floor it.

"Hopefully this device will repel the gas enough... if not, just hold your breath!"

written by Jam on Jun 29, 2010 04:22

“Lucas, can you watch that commie for me.” I say, pointing to the last commie. “Make sure he doesn’t do anything.”

I walk over to the cabinets and look at everything inside them. I open all the RED and INFRARED bottles and take a six pills out of each, making sure to keep track of which pills are which. Then I grab the bottle of visomorpain and it’s RED equivalent. I take them both back to Lucas and offer them both to him.

“Pick one. Just remember you need to stay alert, so don’t take anything that will cloud your judgement. You might regret it later, and it’s not easy to un-take it.”

“Hey docbot, what would you do to fix a broken hand and foot?”

I focus and attempt to recall any other medical training I’ve had.

written by Speeder on Jun 29, 2010 06:15

I strike a pose too as L4 does it.

After posing as a team cause [DFSR] just got real, L4-O opens the throttle...
...and promptly stalls the forkbot.

After Lucas takes the visomorpain pill and seems to relax, the docbot answers,

“I’d need to see the injuries more fully to decide that. Come closer, please, I still have one good camera.”

Jam-R thinks, trying to recall any medical training he might have had before his brainscrub. It seems to be working, as he can recall a few things.

written by Jam on Jun 29, 2010 17:49

I walk over to the docbot and hold my hand up to its camera.

“I seem to have had medical training in the past. Maybe it will be useful.”

I also inspect any pills I took from the cabinet.

But he is the driver, he must know what he is doing.

So I keep waiting, and smiling.

“LIGHTSPEED JOHN!”

I strike a pose, and increase the throttle just a little bit more softly.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Cryo-R is still looking for interesting rubble. But other than a length of pipe, everything else seems to have been destroyed.

The bunker

Alarms start blaring. According to the terminals, the generators are running low on fuel again.

Other Medical Bay

“That looks pretty bad. Searching memory banks for a solution, based on security clearance and [DFSR]. Please wait.”

While he’s waiting, Jam-R has a closer look at those pills. Apart from the little black Visomorpain tablets, there are some pep pills, Wakey-Wakey, Sleepy-Sleepy, and asperquint.

F Level lift hall

L4-O’s second attempts is a little more successful. The forkbot rolls forward.

Concourse F1

The forkbot enters the gas.

The device now acting as a power pack seems to be continuing to repel the gas.

Looking around further reveals no fewer than seven exits. John-R points to one. “That should be Corridor F1. F2 joins it somewhere down the line, from what I was told.”

written by Lightning4 on Jun 30, 2010 03:25

“Okay, you know more about this place than I do.”

I drive the forkbot towards and out of the exit, taking it easy so friend forkbot doesn’t stall.

written by Cryoburner on Jun 30, 2010 03:35

“Wow! A rubble!”

I take a small, uninteresting piece of rubble.

I also take the length of pipe, closely examining its length, girth, composition and any other identifiable characteristics in the process.

“With rubble and a pipe, I’ll be unstoppable!”

I hear some sound coming from the entrance to the bunker, but decide that Mega-R and the others back there should be reliable enough to handle whatever it is on their own. I head out into corridor D1 to see if I can find Scru-R, a bell factory, and anything else that may be vital to the successful completion of the mission, whatever that may be.¹¹⁹

¹¹⁹ CRYOBURNER: (Wait... didn’t I have some bubble wrap in my backpack? And what happened to the jumpsuit chain in the warehouse?) 😊

I tag along, I mean, I remain being hauled by the forkbot...
As I do that, I start to happily whistle a tune.

"Hum... I wonder how much fuel the bunker use, it should run out soon... Too bad we don't have radios, otherwise I would ask the shelf dude to refuel it again."

written by Jam on Jun 30, 2010 04:40

I am annoyed by the alarms. I decide to ignore them. Maybe they're just being tested...

I continue waiting for the docbot to answer. I walk over to the dead communists and search them for anything useful, like armor or secret plans.

written by 4616599 on Jun 30, 2010 07:31

"Wise words! The situation is tense comwades! It might have been a booby trap! It is likely the Computer is trying to stir dizcord among us too. We may not know whether to trust some either. I heard a comrade say earlier that Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R was a traitor! And speaking of which, how do we know you're not one, yes?" I wave my pistol at the commie and some others again.

"I mean, comrades, such a large explosion was obviously wemotely-detonated from nearby! Any one of us could have done it! Not me of course, I was walking down the corridor to look for any rogue scrubots. We need some reliable comrades to inspect our key facilities and personnel around here. At least the next sector. There have been numerous incursions in this sector. Since this corridor leads north, I reckon they are acting from... Beta Subsector maybe? So, stay alert for the people, loyal comrades!"

written by Gligar on Jun 30, 2010 17:10

Concourse F1

The team heads through the indicated door.

Corridor F1

The door leads into a GREEN corridor, currently empty, though it looks like someone just went through a door. Some of the gas follows the forkbot.

There are four doors in this section, with a junction after them.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Was Cryo-R with Details-Are-Us (A PLC Firm) before being brainscrubbed? If so, it shows.

Her picks up a piece of synthcrete rubble, which is quite clearly Size 216(c), and not Size 216(d). He dientifies the pipe he found as a unit length of Type G7 (not G6) and puts both in his "backpack".

After looking round one more time, and frowning slightly - where id that jumpsuit chain go? Was it taken while he was in a side room? - he then leaves.

Communists are going about their business, and are seemingly ignoring him. A couple are carrying the corpse of a citizen wearing INFRARED.

To the left, at the intersection, there are a couple of clones gathered. It looks like they're at the back of a crowd who is listening to someone. Someone who sounds a lot like "Scru-R".

Other Medical Bay

Jam-R is annoyed by an alarm in the distance. Regardless, he continues to wait for the docbot.

Just as he is about to move, the docbot answers. "Analysis complete. Hold still for treatment."

It fires up its chainsaw and moves it... erratically away from Jam-R's arm. Then closer. Then away.

Finally, it slices right through the arm, just above the hand.

Corridor D2

There is more agreement from the communists.

But before anyone can answer, a piercing tone is heard. It's the PA system, usually used by The Computer.

"#screech# Comrades! It is now the end of the people's first work shift. Shift change will now commence. #blip#"

"Dinner time," says one communist, and heads off somewhere.

Followed shortly by the rest of the communists.

Well... that worked.

"AAAAAARRRRR!!!"

I scream and fling myself away from the docbot.

"ARRRRRARARR!!!"

I stumble toward Lucas.

"LUCAS!! HELP!! YOU NEED TO STOP THE B-"

Then I collapse.

written by Lightning4 on Jun 30, 2010 23:56

I continue driving onward.

"Hey fellas... how about a travel song?"

"Ninety-nine bottles of algaebrew on the synthwall. Ninety-nine bottles of algaebrew! You take one down, don't pass it around, ninety-eight bottles of algaebrew on the synthwall! Ninety-eight bottles of algaebrew on the synthwall!..."

written by Gligar on Jul 01, 2010 01:38

The forkbot arrives at the intersection. This must be Corridor F2.

It's YELLOW heading north, and GREEN heading south.

John-R says, "I... think we need to go north here."

Other Medical Bay

Strange... I've lost the camera in here. I can't see what's going on...

Ah, there they are.

Corridor C2

Jam-R seems to have passed out. He wakes up here. Someone seems to have bandaged his stump.

He and Lucas seem to be outside the door to the medical bay. For some reason, there's smoke pouring out of it.

"Ninety-sven bottles of algaebrew on the synthwall. Ninety-sven bottles of algaebrew! You take one down, don't pass it around, ninety-six bottles of algaebrew on the synthwall! Ninety-six bottles of algaebrew on the synthwall!..."¹²⁰

written by Jam on Jul 01, 2010 02:33

"Ohhhh... Wha... Where am I? What happened? And why does my han- AWWW!! MY HAND'S GONE!!"

I suddenly remember what happened.

"Lucas! Did you... You..."

I look to the medical bay, see the smoke, look at my bandaged stump, then look back to Lucas.

"You did this? You saved me? Thank you Lucas! I owe you."

I attempt to stand up without using my bandaged stump.

"What happened? The docbot... Are you okay?"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 01, 2010 12:37

"Aye aye, capn."

I turn the forkbot north.

"Ninety five bottles of alegaebrew on the synthwall!..."

written by Gligar on Jul 01, 2010 17:00

Corridor F2

The forkbot continues on.

It comes to a right turn, and crosses a line painted across the corridor.

Corridor F3

A door approaching on the left is open. Someone just went in.

John-R's eyes go wide. "That's it!" he says quietly. "They must already be there!"

Corridor C2

Lucas looks kind of embarrassed. "I... er... the docbot... it blew up."

¹²⁰ SPEEDER: (ooc to Jam: I see that you did not read the previous Paranoia game... 😊)

But then he looks pleased with himself. "I guess I'll put up with this foot for a while."

written by Jam on Jul 01, 2010 17:26¹²¹

"Oh. It blew up... Then... did you bandage my ha-errr-stump?"

I inspect the bandages for a while, then look toward Lucas.

"So, can you walk alright?"

I begin to walk down the corridor, in the direction of the lifts.

I suddenly feel happier. That hand was causing me pain, and now it's gone. Now I don't have to worry about it anymore...

written by Speeder on Jul 01, 2010 23:09

"Ninety four bottles of alegaebrew on the... John, why you are not singing? Happiness is mandatory!"¹²²

Corridor C2

"Yep," Lucas replies. "I'm CloneServ, after all. I did received the standard training regarding bandages.

"Or is it the People's Cloning Station now? Well, not for long, I hope."

He pulls out a collapsible pole and extends it, and, using it as a support, takes a couple of tentative steps. "I should be okay."

Corridor F3

"I was," John-R responds. "I was simply singing softly. And besides, we're here now."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 02, 2010 04:15

"Ninety three bo.."

My voice trails off

"Oh. Well, in that case... wait, what are we doing here again? Killing commies? I can do that very well, but if it's not killing commies... or collecting shiny things..."

I get off and load up my cone rifle.

written by Speeder on Jul 02, 2010 05:12

I also get off, and don't look at the ground... Maybe I can claim that I was not paying attention to the clearance.

I get my rifle, check if the barrel on it is the new one that I remember maybe exchanging back on the lift hall, and I check if it is fit properly.

written by Jam on Jul 02, 2010 16:13

"I wonder why CloneServ needs bandage training..."

¹²¹ JAM: (ooc: Read the previous Paranoia game? Is there something I'm missing?)

¹²² SPEEDER: (ooc: In the previous game, I had broken limbs, and when I went to the docbot, I instead got missing limbs... 😊)

I start continue walking back to the lifts. I pause at the door to the Cloning Station.

“Ok. Now you need to decide. Do you want to stay here, or do you want to come with me? The Commies might have taken over the Camera Control Nexus. If that’s the case, they probably saw everything we just did.”

written by Gligar on Jul 02, 2010 17:21

Corridor F3

L4-O brings the forkbot to a halt a little distance away from the door. He loads his last remaining gas shell into his cone rifle. (Didn’t he have a name for that thing?)

Speed-O also disembarks, pointedly not looking at anything that denotes the corridor’s clearance. He checks his laser rifle, and finds that he hadn’t swapped out it barrel... or if he had, he’d used part of it already. He swaps it out.

John-R is the last to disembark, and also readies a laser pistol.

Activity, as of someone trying to pick a lock, is heard from inside the door.

Corridor C2

Lucas’s face turns what would ordinarily be a treasonous shade for a moment, but returns to normal. “I’d like to help, sir,”

written by Speeder on Jul 02, 2010 21:56

I calmly finish putting a new barrel on the rifle, and then I aim at the door.

I make a signal to others make silence.

written by Jam on Jul 02, 2010 22:59

I smile.

“Good! I’m glad you’re coming with! In fact, I’m feeling EXTREMELY HAPPY!”

I walk happily toward the lift hall. When I get there, I wait for Lucas to arrive, then go into a lift.

written by Gligar on Jul 03, 2010 01:34

Corridor F3

Everyone gets ready.

For a moment, there is silence.

Then, a voice from inside the door.

“Da! Got it! Control room get!”

C Level Lift Hall

Lucas HAPPILY follows the HAPPY Jam-R.

As such, Jam-R HAPPILY enters the lift, which is still here.

written by Speeder on Jul 03, 2010 03:00

I tilt my head not understand exactly what it meant.

Then I frantically try to mean to L4 don’t shoot. (but in my frantiness, it may understand to shoot like hell too... who knows)

written by Jam on Jul 03, 2010 03:47

I hover my hand over the button to F level. I almost press it, then suddenly stop.

“Wait... Didn’t you mention someone before... Freaky, was it? Do you think we should bring him with?”

I look out the door of the lift, then back at Lucas.

“Hmm... Freaky... That’s an interesting name. Does he happen to be a mutant? Can he blow people’s heads up with his mind or something? I know someone who can do that. His name’s John-R. You should meet him, he’s fun.”

written by Lightning4 on Jul 03, 2010 09:40

I almost fire my cone rifle on accident with Speed-O frantically doing... something.

I re-aim my cone rifle back at the door and begin approaching.

I whisper to the others,

“Maybe I should knock. Whoever is inside shouldn’t be expecting intruders!”

written by Gligar on Jul 03, 2010 16:48

Corridor F3

Another voice from inside the door answers the first. “Is good! We are now havink control of cameras! Can find Computerist pig-dogs easy now!”

John-R facepalms. “Sirs, we need to do this now,” he says quietly.

A lift

“Yeah, he’s a mutant. He’s very a mutant. He doesn’t like corridors, though,” Lucas replies. “I don’t know everything about him, but he says he once killed a clone just by thinking at him.”

written by Lightning4 on Jul 03, 2010 17:21

I shrug and open the door.

“Hello comrades! Did you happen to leave this outside?”

I point my cone rifle inside and pull the trigger, then close the door again after firing.

written by Jam on Jul 03, 2010 17:28

“Wow! Just by thinking about him! He sounds powerful. I hope he doesn’t decide to turn against us and join the commies.”

I am slightly scared by Freaky, though I try not to show it.

“Well, I don’t think he’ll want to come along if he doesn’t like corridors... Oh well.”

I quickly press the button for F level.

"I don't think the forkbot can cross the door... I will get this dude mask, wander inside, switch the cameras control to someone, and return."

I see if I can figure how to use the mask... After of course removing the commie bad breath and saliva from it.

written by Jam on Jul 04, 2010 18:06

I stop panicking and look at the panel in the roof, trying to judge how high it is.

"Oh. I don't think I'll be able to lift myself up with only one hand... It's times like these where I wish I could levitate."

I smile, and look at Lucas.

"You'll have to pull me up."

I give Lucas my towel, then get down on one knee.

"Climb on my shoulders, I'll lift you up. Then dangle the towel down and try to pull me up."

written by 4616599 on Jul 04, 2010 19:19

I...well, follow them.¹²⁴

written by Gligar on Jul 05, 2010 02:30

Corridor F3

The mask has two straps to secure it to the wearer's head. However, it seems that Speed-O damaged one of them when he obtained it. Oh well, it'll still hold itself on!

A lift

After taking the towel, Lucas does as requested and climbs. He seems a little unsteady, though, as though he could fall if he's not careful.

Jam-R stands up properly. This gives Lucas enough height to reach the panel. Shakily, he removes the clips, and tries to climb through.

Lift shaft

It's dark in here!

But from the light of the lift, Lucas can make out the cabling that moves the lift. It appears to be damaged. He'd better act quickly.

He does. He dangles the towel downwards, just as the lift shakes again. "Er... the cabling's damaged. You'd better hurry."

Corridor D3

Following the communists, "Scru-R" heads down the corridor, past a door on either side, and past a sudden deviation in the corridor, as if the corridor itself wanted to avoid something.

As it happens, the "something" is the communists' destination: a food hall.

¹²⁴ 4616599: (I noticed the jackobot in stats is still undamaged. Must be a really tough one.)

Food hall

The triangular food hall is home to a large number of tables and chairs. In normal times, this would be where the INFRAREDs eat. They would be served from one of five different service firms, all of which have serving hatches in the west wall. But now, only one of the hatches is open, the one at the far end. The queue can only be described as something that even PLC could only dream of. "Scru-R" can't tell if it's moving or not.

The other wall is covered with the usual advertising and vidscreens (now displaying static) – now covered with yet more notices, explaining that there was now one choice of food, the People's Choice.

written by Speeder on Jul 05, 2010 03:54

Since noone objects, I hold the mask with one hand (just to make sure) and hold the rifle with the other, and then I walk inside, ready to shoot any commies that are still a threat.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 05, 2010 03:59

I move back to the safety zone around the forkbot.

"You did good, Fred!" I sheath him.

And you too, Turbo! Noting a strange glance from John-R, I respond.

"Er... Turbo. It's what I finally decided to name my cone rifle. Took me ages to come up with the name"

"So now we can be..."

I strike a pose with the cone rifle out.

"TURBO LIGHTSPEED JOHN!"

"Eh? EH?"

I don't even notice that Speed is missing until now.

written by Jam on Jul 05, 2010 05:57

I grab the towel, looping it around my hand so it won't slip as easily.

"Loop the end of the towel around your hand, that way it won't slip." I tell Lucas.

"...Ok, ready? Now pull me up!"¹²⁵

Once I get out of the lift, I look around for doors, ladders, ledges, or any other ways out.

written by Gligar on Jul 05, 2010 18:44

Corridor F3

Unnoticed by L4-O, Speed-O heads through the door.

Meanwhile, L4-O re-sheathes Fred. He's finally come up with a name for his cone rifle, as well.

¹²⁵ JAM: (ooc edit: Sorry, I suddenly realized that I forgot to look around once I get on top of the lift.)

Camera Control Station

Still ignoring clearance, Speed-O enters and takes a look around.

This first room is an office, decorated in GREEN, with some deactivated Computer terminals on desks, some overturned chairs, and two other doors. The gas is thick here, and lying in it are three dead Communists, their skin turned VIOLET.

The two doors are open. The eastern one seems to contain racking for data storage - reels of tape, by the look of it.

The other door... now, that's the ticket. From what can be seen, there is a bank of monitors on the north wall with some sort of controls in front of it.

Some faint noises from the northern room suggest that someone might still be alive in there, but having trouble with the gas.

Lift shaft

Lucas puts both hands on the towel, takes the strain and pulls. It's not enough, and he almost slips.

He tries again. Still nothing.

The lift shakes a third time, and seems to be slipping a little.

This catalyses him. He pulls with all the strength he can find, and finally Jam-R begins to move upwards.

I'll spare you the description of Jam-R inching up slowly, and Lucas taking a break, and Jam-R moving up again, and Lucas almost losing his grip on the towel, and so on. Suffice to say, it takes a while¹²⁶, at the end of which Lucas is exhausted.

But now that Jam-R is up here, he can look around, and see the ladder leading up. There also seems to be a breeze from above.

written by Jam on Jul 05, 2010 21:29

"Lucas! Quick, grab the ladder!"

I make sure Lucas has a tight grip on the ladder, then grab it (tightly) myself.

"Thank you! You've saved my life again! That must have been exhausting. Just rest a few seconds. Start climbing when you're ready."

I peer around Lucas, into the darkness above.

written by Speeder on Jul 05, 2010 21:42

Fearing that it might be a certain ally, I rush to save (or shoot, if commie) the person.

But while I do that, I pay attention around, to see where I can input data.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 06, 2010 01:56

While Speed is off dealing with the camera control, I drag the commie corpse slightly back into the safe zone and

¹²⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: and lots of die rolls) search him for any new useful cone rifle shells... or anything else useful for that matter.

written by Gligar on Jul 06, 2010 02:40

Lift shaft

Lucas grabs hold of the ladder, as does Jam-R.

After they do, the lift creeeeeeeaks and starts slipping faster...

And finally, the cables break with a hefty twoooooiiiiinnnnnnngnnnnng. The lift falls below.

While Lucas gets his breath back, Jam-R investigates.

Unfortunately, he can't see anything. But with the creaking gone, he can feel - and hear the breeze. It seems to be coming from somewhere close.

Monitor room

Speed-O enters, and looks around. He notes what looks like a keyboard amidst the controls.

Collapsed on the floor near it, is... just a communist, struggling to breathe.

The bank of monitors cycles between a myriad of camera feeds from around the sector. Most of them display communists going to or from various food halls. Occasionally, one shows darkness, the sort that you're sure hides someone looking back at you.

Corridor F3

Rummaging through the dead communist's belongings, L4-O does indeed find some more cone rifle shells, along with triggers. None of them appear to be gas shells.

written by Speeder on Jul 06, 2010 02:45

I pierce the commie heart with the spear, then I clean the spear.

written by Jam on Jul 06, 2010 03:31

"Feel that? There's a breeze! There must be an opening close by."

I follow Lucas when he decides to start climbing.¹²⁷

I use my stump arm to hold myself to the ladder, then grab the next rung with my good hand. Then I move my feet up a rung.

written by Gligar on Jul 06, 2010 17:03

Monitor room

Like L4-O, Speed-O pulls out a weapon for its first real use: namely, the Spear™ he made way back then. Specifically, he stabs the communist right through the heart with it. There is a brief shower of blood, and the communist is still.

Then, after cleaning off the spear, he turns his attention to the controls.

As he does, his PDC goes off.

¹²⁷ JAM: (ooc: I'll describe how I climb the ladder, just in case)

Lift shaft

After a minute, Lucas climbs, with Jam-R following. Not long after, he stops. "Hey, there's an opening to my left. I think there's some light down there."

written by Jam on Jul 06, 2010 18:03

"Can you reach it? Try going through. But be careful, we don't know what's on the other side."

I follow Lucas though if I can reach the opening safely.

written by Speeder on Jul 06, 2010 19:04

I peer at the PDC.

Then I peer at the console.

Then I peer at the PDC again and shake my fist at it.

Then I sigh and wait for the console to do something or show something or whatever.

written by Gligar on Jul 07, 2010 01:39

Lift Shaft

Lucas replies, "Looks like the light's filtering through some grating."

Jam-R follows, and also finds the opening to his left. Carefully, he transfers himself over to it.

Air ducts

There is indeed some light here. Lucas has stopped ahead. He seems to be looking to the right at what seems to be a vent cover.

Monitor room

The console stubbornly sits there, reading WORKING.

As he watches, the display changes to LCK ERR 2184.85.32... whatever that means, and returns to a prompt.

written by Jam on Jul 07, 2010 04:57

I peek through the vent cover, looking for any clones, clearance stripes, or any indication of what level we are on.

I whisper very quietly to Lucas.

"Do you still have the laser pistol I gave you? I think I have an extra one."

I give him a laser pistol if he doesn't have one already. I also offer him a spare barrel.

Then I get another laser pistol out and, if I need to, replace its barrel.

written by Speeder on Jul 07, 2010 05:59

I peer at it a while, to memorize it (since the PDC went off)

Then I try to remember what the hell it meant...

Then I write.

written by Gligar on Jul 07, 2010 17:07

Food hall

Oh hey! The food line started to move.

I'm sure that had nothing at all to do with the slugshot that is heard moments afterwards.

Corridor D2

A jackobot trundles past Cryo-R, heading for who-knows-where.

Air ducts

Peering through the vent cover, Jam-R sees a lift hall. It's RED clearance. There are a few clones, seemingly waiting for a lift.

One of them is partly covering the level sign, but it seems to be indicating E Level.

Lucas replies, "Er... I think I left it in the medical bay... thanks." He accepts the fresh laser pistol and barrel.

Jam-R has one laser pistol left, complete with what seems to be a fresh barrel.

A ping from beyond the vent indicates that a lift has arrived.

Corridor F3

John-R seems to be getting bored of waiting. He fiddles with his laser pistol while he waits, checking that the barrel's in place and so on.

Monitor room

Speed-O tries to work out the error. As he works, a few lights appear on the control panel.

written by 4616599 on Jul 07, 2010 17:53

The slugshot seems to shock me out of my daze. I attempt to blend into the crowd, going behind the queue and checking for the source of the shot. I also gaze at the serving hatch ahead.

written by Jam on Jul 07, 2010 18:13

I wait for the clones to leave, then start working on removing the vent cover.

If I can't just push or kick it loose, I try using my knife to pry it off.

written by Speeder on Jul 07, 2010 19:11

I shout.

"Dudes, wait a bit more, I think I can fix it!!!"

Then I return to... stare, sorta, at the monitor.

written by Gligar on Jul 08, 2010 01:13

Food hall

A good look around shows that, apparently, nobody in the room has been shot. It may have come from behind the serving counters. None of the communists show any indication of having heard it.

The queue moves again.

Not much can be seen of the serving hatch from all the way over here, but there seems to be a single clone behind the counter, presumably serving this "People's Choice." Clones who receive this find a seat and eat in silence. There's no talk of FunBall results, none of the vidscreen advertising, none of the other things you would associate with a food hall. Just... clones eating.

Air ducts

The clones in the lift hall seem to be together, as they all enter the lift.

A groaning sound comes from that direction. Probably the doors closing or something. Right? Right.

After they leave, Jam-R works on removing the vent cover. It's on pretty tight, but after kicking it a couple of times, it falls off.

Monitor room

As the images cycle on the monitors, one briefly shows a lift hall. The vent cover is falling off, as if dislodged from the inside. The camera shows a familiar clone in the duct.

Speed-O shows no sign of noticing as he works.

Corridor D2

The bot is quickly followed by a pair of communists... wait, they look familiar... it's Pitr and Aleksandr!

written by Lightning4 on Jul 08, 2010 01:54

In my boredom, I start juggling, (or attempting to juggle, rather) random objects from my inventory. Preferably the depleted blaster, laser pistol body, and the popped intsec balloons, but there might be a laser barrel or a grenade in the mix too.

written by Speeder on Jul 08, 2010 02:54

I continue working on the consoles, ignoring (maybe not on purpose) the camera feeds.

written by Jam on Jul 08, 2010 04:29

I climb out of the vent and wave my laser pistol around. If there's no one around, I help Lucas out of the vent. Then I call a lift.

"Hmm... I wonder if Speed-O and L4-O and John-R are okay... Surely they've secured the camera control nexus by now..."

While I'm waiting for a lift, I look at the nearest camera. I try to give it one of those piercing stares that might attract the attention of anyone that may be watching on the other side, even if they are trying to ignore it. Just like the dark, mysterious villains do in the vidshows!

written by Cryoburner on Jul 08, 2010 04:59

While inspecting the corridor's light fixtures, I hear someone whisper something mostly unintelligible to me. A minute-cycle or two later, I finish inspecting the lights, and take a look around for who it was. Unfortunately, they seem to have already disappeared into the crowd. I also seem to have somehow ended up in Corridor D2, despite being in Corridor D1 before. Perhaps I wandered there while examining the lights.

I then watch as a Jackobot passes, followed by two vaguely familiar looking clones*.

"Hello there! Say, do I know you two from somewhere? You look awfully familiar, but I just can't place a finger on it. I was recently afflicted with amnesia, which can make inviting guests to parties rather difficult. If I should have invited you, but didn't, that's probably why. That is if I was going to hold a party in the first place. If I wasn't, then you didn't miss out on anything.

written by Gligar on Jul 08, 2010 16:34

Corridor F3

L4-O pulls out random things... a couple of cone rifle shells, a blaster, a laser barrel, Fred, that sort of thing... and starts juggling with them. Problem is, he's never done it before, and ends up dropping half of it all over the floor.

As for Fred, well... he also falls to the floor.

But not before reminding his owner why you don't juggle knives if you don't know what you're doing. Or maybe he just wanted more blood...

Monitor room

On one of the monitors, two clones crawl out of an air duct. One of them waves his laser pistol around, before looking straight into the camera with that sort of glare that makes you aware that the looker is looking at you personally, even if your back is turned. Even through a vidscreen.

Speed-O continues working, even though he gets the "being looked at" vibe.

Finally, all of the monitors go blank, one by one. The one showing the lift hall seems to linger for a while, zooming in on the clone a little before cutting to black.

Corridor D2

One of the communists - Aleksandr, if I recall - answers. "Haven't seen you around, comrade. Perhaps you were not at the meeting before the revolution?"

written by Speeder on Jul 08, 2010 20:21

I look at this monitor for a last time, before then returning to my friends.

"Hello L4... What you just did???"

I peer at all stuff on the ground and the bleeding L4.

"Anyway, Jam is on the E level Lift Hall, and lots of commies too, he will need help."

I then look at John and say.

* (I had left the warehouse prior to that incident, and only met them in corpse form, after all. 😊)

"I did a lock down of all camera feeds, noone but high-trust people will be able to watch them, even me cannot unlock it again. And high trust people I mean probably violets or ultravioletes..."

I check if my PDC decides to return working.

written by Jam on Jul 08, 2010 20:28

I talk quietly to Lucas while I'm waiting for the lift.

"The lift hall up there is GREEN clearance, but there should be a RED pathway we can walk on. If we follow that it should lead to the camera control nexus, where the others will be waiting. There will be two ORANGE clearance clones, Speed-O and L4-O, and a RED clearance clone, John-R. There were two other clones... Cryo-R, he has a broken leg. And...another clone. I don't know his name, but he's ORANGE clearance. Those two are somewhere on D level going spying. I hope they return soon..."

If the lift arrives, I enter, wait for Lucas to enter too, then press the button for F level. If no other clones are on the lift, I continue talking.

written by Gligar on Jul 08, 2010 23:41¹²⁸

Corridor F3

It looks like the gas is beginning to dissipate from the corridor. Good.

Speed-O returns, having apparently finished his work. John-R nods. "Well, I wasn't told exactly how to proceed, sir, so that should work... now, what about Jam-R?"

Speed-O's PDC is still acting up.

A lift

Lucas enters the lift, so Jam-R presses the button.

As the lift ascends, Lucas says, "...woah. GREEN? It's okay to go there?!"

The bunker

Those alarms? Still going off. In fact, they're getting louder as the fuel in the generators begins to run out.

written by Jam on Jul 09, 2010 00:08

"I should be, just as long as we stay on the RED stripe of blood. Just try not to look at anything GREEN."

When the lift arrives, I point out the RED tire tracks and try walking on them.

"See, I'm not doing anything wrong, just walking on this nice RED pathway. Look, there's even some GREY bits, and there's some pointy ULTRAVIOLET bits. Ohhhh! Cover your eyes. Don't look at the ULTRAVIOLET parts. Oh, there's another ULTRAVIOLET bit, but it's covered in RED bits, so I think it's okay to walk on."

I continue on, pointing out the bits of blood and brain and bone I see.

written by Speeder on Jul 09, 2010 01:06

After a while I only say.

"Ok, we should just return, if Jam evaded the commies, probably he took a elevator to this level already..."

I pocket again my... evil PDC, and hop again on the bot, and then I wait L4 to wake-up after his mess and drive.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 09, 2010 04:11

"Ow!"

I wipe my cut off and put everything away again.

"Right then... back we go, I guess. By the way, we're now TURBO LIGHTSPEED JOHN/JAM... I named my cone rifle Turbo."

I get back on the forkbot and start driving back the way we came.

Speed-O's PDC starts getting annoying.

"Erm... don't you have to like, answer it or something?"
Maybe Friend Mysterious is trying to contact us.¹²⁹

written by 4616599 on Jul 09, 2010 16:20

"Excuse me, comrades. I've got to have a look at the serving hatch myself. Long wait times are not good for the people." I head forward.

written by Gligar on Jul 09, 2010 16:56

Corridor F3

Everyone piles back onto the forkbot, and L4-O drives back along the corridor, slightly annoyed, for some reason, about Speed-O's faulty PDC. It still doesn't want to turn on.

Corridor F2

As the forkbot turns through the intersection, the voice of Jam-R is heard. He's talking to someone about walking on the RED tracks that the forkbot made.

Concourse F1

Unfortunately, those tracks run right into an area filled with VIOLET gas. True, it may be starting to dissipate now, but it's still enough to give Jam-R problems... notably with breathing, causing him to drop the the floor. I guess it's dissipated enough to not cause any numbness, though.

Did I mention that that stuff stinks?

Lucas sees what happened, and recoils from the VIOLET gas.

¹²⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: I'm bored, so I'm posting now 😊)

¹²⁹ SPEEDER: (OOC: by "acting up" Gligar means that it actually refuses to turn back on after it turned off on its own)

The forkbot, however, doesn't care about the gas, what with its modification and all. Jam-R is too preoccupied with trying to escape the gas to notice.

Food Hall

"Scru-R" attempts to see what the problem is at the hatch, but is stopped by a PRPF member, who points his slugthrower at "Scru-R", saying, loudly, "Nyet, comrade. Return to the line. You will get your food in due time."

In the brief glimpse he manages to get, "Scru-R" notices the body of someone behind the hatch.

written by Speeder on Jul 09, 2010 17:39

As the forkbot close on Jam, I grab him and bring to the bot.

"Hello Jam! I missed you!"

I notice the stump.

"It seems that you found the docbot, one that had only a saw as tool, I suppose..."

written by Jam on Jul 09, 2010 18:23

I cough and wheeze.

"Must...not breathe...VIOLET gas..."

I try to escape the gas, then panic as a hand suddenly grabs me and lifts me into the air.

"NO! I...DIDN'T MEAN TO...BREATHE THE ... VOILET GAS...I'M SORRY...PLEASE... DON'T KILL ME...PLEASE...FORGIVE ME!!"

I stop screaming when I notice Speed-O smiling at me.

"SPEED-O!! OH I MISSED YOU SO MUCH!!"

I attempt to hug Speed-O, because I'm so glad to see him, though it might also be because I don't want him to accidentally drop me.

written by 4616599 on Jul 09, 2010 18:28

I remain at my position, making sure I have a pistol ready.

I then grab him and reply, loud enough for nearby clones to hear. "Hey comrade, I am attempting to do a service for the people here! There is a shot, queue jammed, and as a citizen with appropriate skills I should attempt to investigate up there, no? Is you trying to to make things difficult for the people?"

written by Cryoburner on Jul 09, 2010 20:00

"I was in a meeting hall recently, so perhaps we met there. My condition makes it a little challenging to remember though."

"Say, would either of you happen to know where I might find the nearest bell factory? There appears to be a serious bell shortage around here. I've only encountered one bell today, and it was inconveniently fastened to a desk."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 10, 2010 01:02

I park the forkbot next to Jam.

"So does this make us Turbo Lightspeed Jam and John... and..."

I notice Lucas.

"Who are you?"

written by Gligar on Jul 10, 2010 01:28

Concourse F1

With Jam-R reunited with the rest of the team, attention is turned to the newcomer, a younger clone in RED. He says, "I'm Lucas-AHK, sir. I joined Jam-R on C Level. He lets me use RED stuff," he adds with a grin.

Food hall

"Really," the PRPF clone sneers.

After a moment, he adds, "Very well. You may investigate the holdup. But I will accompany you."

Several of the communists look up at the scene.

Corridor D2

"I don't remember seeing you at the meeting, but... there were many clones there.

"As for bells... maybe there is a factory around. I don't know."

written by Speeder on Jul 10, 2010 02:47

"So, our Lightspeed Jam have more Turbo, Lucas, John and Fred... I think we should ask the bot its name..."

I look to the bot.

"So, what you would like to be called?"

I then look at everyone and ask.

"How we will cram 5 people in a forkbot?"

written by Jam on Jul 10, 2010 03:04

I look at Lucas while telling everyone all the exciting things that happened. I cough occasionally from the gas.

"He was at a cloning station. I had him show me the way to the medical bay. There were a lot of commies there, but we shot them all. Then that horrible docbot chopped my hand off. I had fainted from the shock. If Lucas hadn't pulled me to safety and bandaged my hand I probably would have died. Then, when the lift we were riding on broke, he pulled me up through a hole in the roof. Otherwise I would have been stuck in the lift when the cable broke... He saved my life again! That's twice!"

I suddenly notice L4-O.

"L4-O!! OH I MISSED YOU SO MUCH!!"

I try to climb up on the forkbot and hug L4-O.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 10, 2010 05:06

I sort of awkwardly accept the hug.

"Any more people and it's going to be a lot... harder to say our team cheer in one breath!"

"Anyway, where to folks? I haven't a clue, besides that we need to get to a compnode somewhere."

written by Gligar on Jul 10, 2010 16:39

Concourse F1

"Name?" asks the forkbot. "I don't have a name. But my designation is C-3/K418-69g-17(c)48. If that's of any use."

At Speed-O's query, everyone shrugs. Even the forkbot somehow manages to shrug. Somehow.

Food hall

"Well, are you going to go investigate or not?"

written by 4616599 on Jul 10, 2010 17:02

I release my grip on him, looking at his equipment, and walk forward toward the hatch. "Of course, comrade. I have to know if the people are serving themselves and being served well."

written by Jam on Jul 10, 2010 20:29

I jump down off the forkbot and walk around to the front of it.

"Someone could ride on the forks. Maybe Lucas and I?"

I look to Speed-O and L4-O.

"Speed-O, sir, you could ride on the top. And L4-O, sir, you could drive."

I continue walking around to the back.

"And John-R could ride on the back. How does that sound, everyone?"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 11, 2010 00:47

"I'm fine with that, of course."

"And if we don't have room, I guess they can just walk along with us."

written by Gligar on Jul 11, 2010 01:45

Food hall

"Okay, follow me."

The PRPF clone starts walking towards the hatch.

As they are walking, "Scru-R" notes that the other clone's IntSec armour seems to actually fit. There's a holster for the slugthrower, and also grenades.

The hatch is reached not long after. "Begin your investigation."

There's not much room, here at the narrow end. There's the line, which just moved again, with a communist carrying a tray to a table. On it appears to be a single serving of Hot Fun and a cup of... some beverage that "Scru-R" can't readily identify.

Looking at the hatch itself, it becomes clear why things are taking so long: a single clone is running between several machines, inserting Hot Fun into one, taking water from a second and pouring it into a third before placing a cup under a fourth, Every so often, one of the machines beep, and the clone has to start taking things out and putting them in. A dead clone is covering two more machines.

Concourse F1

Lucas looks at the forks. "Cool." Experimentally, he tries standing on a fork, but ends up standing on his wounded foot.

With a yelp, he falls over.

John-R simply nods, and steps to the rear of the forkbot.

written by Jam on Jul 11, 2010 02:46

"John-R, you seem to be lacking in mandatory enthusiasm. Do you want to ride on the forks instead? I thought you might like riding on the back, but I guess I was wrong... Here, you go to the front, and I'll ride on the back."

I start walking to the back, then notice Lucas falling off the fork.

"Lucas! Are you okay? Be careful! I'm going to ride in the back of the forkbot, but you'll have John-R up here to keep you company. IT WILL BE FUN!!"

I say that last part loud enough for John-R to hear, and yell it in his direction. Then I walk to the back of the forkbot and attempt to climb onto it.

written by Speeder on Jul 11, 2010 03:11

I climb to the top of the forkbot and hand the gas mask to L4.

"Can you store that for me?"

After everyone is in place I say.

"Ok, we should go to D level and get the broken leg and the spy, or we should go to the V level and see if we can finish the mission right now?"

written by Gligar on Jul 11, 2010 16:30

Concourse F1

John-R grins. "That's much better, thanks." He moves to the front, and takes his place on a fork. "But don't you think yelling it is a bit too much?"

Lucas give it another shot, and manages to stand on the other fork properly, this time.

The forkbot says, "Can we get moving now?"

Food hall

As "Scru-R" watches, another clone appears behind the serving hatch. He's aiming a slugthrower at the worker and isn't paying attention to anything else.

Corridor D2

"Comrade? Are you listening to me?"

written by Jam on Jul 11, 2010 17:01

"I just wanted to emphasize how fun it is."

I grab the back tightly and try to maneuver myself to a safer position.

"I think we should go get the others. The compnode is probably heavily guarded. We will need all the help we can get."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 11, 2010 18:09

I take Speed-O's gas mask and place it in my backpack.

"Jam does have a good idea. I think we might need some more weapons too, you can never have enough killing power."

I shrug and get ready to drive the forkbot.

"Anyone know where the nearest armory is?"

written by 4616599 on Jul 11, 2010 19:38

I quickly draw my pistol, but suddenly stop short. Very deliberately I glance at the PRPF clone who had accompanied me, then at the armed clone at the serving hatch, then at the PRPF clone again.

I say in a more sotto tone, "Comrade, perhaps there may be some very serious and...interesting, Fun perhaps, er... inefficiencies to discuss here. We do know the security, management and efficiency of the Complex is important. Perhaps we should exit the food hall for a moment since... the entrance to food preparation might be there." I give an almost indiscernable, fleeting, but clear to anyone paying attention, wink and smile.

written by Speeder on Jul 12, 2010 01:52

I nods and say.

"I agree... Hey forkbot, do you know any armories? John?"

written by Gligar on Jul 12, 2010 01:55

Concourse F1

Jam-R fidgets a little as he waits on the back of the forkbot. Is everyone ready yet?

Food hall

"I'm not sure I trust your decision here, but... there is something going on here, and I think you might know something about it. Come now."

The PRPF clone heads for the door.

written by Jam on Jul 12, 2010 03:38

"Let's go find Cryo-R (wasn't his name written on his jumpsuit?) and... that other guy. Maybe they found an armory while they were spying."

I continue waiting for us to start moving.

written by 4616599 on Jul 12, 2010 05:31

"Hmmm. Something to do with pig-dogs of some variety?" I follow him, a steady hand on my pistol.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 12, 2010 06:13

I note that everyone is in place, and start driving the forkbot again to a lift.

At the lift hall, I get off the forkbot and attempt to call the largest lift for the forkbot.

Since it seems like it's taking longer than it should, I also begin sizing up the lift that is currently here to see if the forkbot will fit. I glance at the doorway and the forkbot a few times.¹³⁰

written by Speeder on Jul 12, 2010 07:23

"Mr... Forkbot?"

"I am ready, btw... Let's depart... And find the people at the D level."

Concourse F1

And finally, the forkbot is underway again!

F Level lift hall

Even if it's only for a short while.

L4-0 gets off and calls the large lift again.

Corridor D3

After exiting the food hall with "Scru-R" in tow, the PRPF gets to business, and pulls out his slugthrower again, aiming it at "Scru-R"'s face. "Alright, confess. You aren't really who you say you are, are you?"

From inside the food hall, a slugshot is heard.

F Level lift hall

L4-0 gets a little worried that the large lift hasn't arrived. Maybe something happened to it. Maybe it crashed?¹³²

Instead, he sizes up the regular lifts, seeing if the forkbot would fit inside... sadly, the answer is no.

Lucas also notices. "Isn't there a specialised cargo lift somewhere?" he asks.

The bunker

The alarms start fading, and the lights begin to dim. The distant sound of machinery fades out.

¹³⁰ LIGHTNING4: (OOC: the lift that crashed WAS the big one, right? looking into the past posts says possibly)

¹³¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: Sorry for the delay. I was doing a little troubleshooting of my own, culminating in the termination of a treasonous Nintendo Wi-Fi Adaptor. Seriously, those adaptors fail dramatically. Don't use them.)

¹³² GLIGAR: (OOC: it did)

The bunker is completely without power. I hope those inside like the dark.

Corridor D2

Aleksandr grows weary of waiting for a response from the seemingly-inert Cryo-R. Instead, he just pokes at him.

written by Speeder on Jul 12, 2010 19:03

I look at Jam and ask.

“Huh, the problematic lift, was that one?”

I then look to Lucas.

“Well, the cargo lift, was this one... Maybe there are other somewhere...”

I attempt again to turn on my PDC.

“Piece of crap! You are making me unhappy, you evil PDC! You even look like a Nintendo Wi-Fi adapter!”

written by Jam on Jul 12, 2010 19:03

I hop off the back to the forkbot.

“Oh, I had forgotten which lift had crashed. But now that I see the lifts again, I’m pretty sure it was the big one...”

I decide to call one of the other lifts.

“I’ll go on and find the others. You guys go and find the cargo lift. I’ll come back up later and find you.”

I look to Lucas.

“Lucas, please go with everyone else and help them find the cargo lift.”

“I give you permission to walk in any RED clearance places and use any RED clearance items, regardless if you are in my presence or not, unless a clone that is higher clearance than me forbids it.”

“Speed-O, L4-O, John-R, does that sound okay with you?”

I enter the lift if it arrives.

written by Speeder on Jul 12, 2010 19:22

I nod.

“Oh, yes. Lucas, now you are under my and L4 responsibility. As is John.”

written by Cryoburner on Jul 12, 2010 19:40

“Oh, sorry about that, I was counting the light fixtures in this hall.”

I take note of the number of light fixtures along the length of corridor D2.

“I was certainly listening though... You were saying how you weren’t sure where the nearest bell factory was, and that the meeting earlier had free cupcakes and algae punch, and that they were delicious.”

“I’d better let you go though. Where are you off to, anyway?”

written by Lightning4 on Jul 12, 2010 20:49

“Sounds good to me”

While contemplating what a Nintendo Wi-fi adapter actually is, I start driving back out of the lift hall into the main corridor.

“So, either of you happen to know where the nearest cargo lift is? Or stairs? I seem to be good at piloting Friend forkbot up stairs.”

written by 4616599 on Jul 13, 2010 01:18

“Huh?” I level my pistol at him. “You’re a vatfrelling terrorist pig-dog, aren’t you? Are you loyal to the people? Look at you! You aren’t even wearing your stuff the mandatory way!”

written by Gligar on Jul 13, 2010 01:50

F Level lift hall

Speed-O tries, once again, to get his PDC to turn on again. Looks like it’s co-operating for now.

Jam-R calls another lift, which seems to arrive in no time. He boards it. Lucas calls after him, “See you around!”

And with that, and now a little lighter, the forkbot drives off.

A lift

Jam-R watches the forkbot leave and head back through the concourse before the lift’s door closes. So... where to?

Corridor D2

Aleksandr looks surprised. “Ah! You aren’t inert after all!”

But maybe Cryo-R is just counting the 16 light fixtures visible in this section of corridor. (They’re all Type 6G, if he’s interested.) He does hear Aleksandr say something about following a jackobot to Corridor D4, though.

The communists then resume following the jackobot.

Corridor D3

“Mandatory? Mandatory?! You are the Computerist!”

The PRPF clone opens fire!

Nice to see that his aim is up to the usual Communist standard – even though he’s trying to aim for the head, the slug veers off and hits “Scru-R”’s half-raised kevlar shield instead.

written by Speeder on Jul 13, 2010 01:55

I keep myself in my place, and then I start whistling some other tune.

While I do that, I attempt to get whatever information I can about lifts... Or locations, or stairs...

written by Lightning4 on Jul 13, 2010 04:01 A regular lift

Once in the corridor, I start pointing the forkbot in different directions.

"Eeny... meeny... miney.. MOE!"

I continue driving straight towards the door in the center of the wall ahead.

Before opening it though, I look around for anything of interest, like say, a map. Or anything dangerous, like say, a communist. While doing so, I join Speed-O and whistle a HAPPY tune.

written by Jam on Jul 13, 2010 04:02

"To D level!" press

I break into song during the lift ride. Of course, I don't know how to sing, and I can't remember any songs, but I can try!

"Happy happy! Lightspeed Jam! Zap zap! Shoot the Commies! Yay combat! Terminate!"

Find the others! The hidden ones! Protect the tapes! Loyal servant! Friend Computer!

Stop the Commies! Blow them to bits! Sabotage, he he! Find the secrets! Destroy them all!

Serve my friend! Speed-O, L4-O! Wait, that's not right... Friend Computer! Serve serve! Hooray!"

When the lift arrives, I walk out and look around.

written by 4616599 on Jul 13, 2010 06:43

"You haven't heard of that conspiracy?" I suddenly return fire, aiming for the head or whatever that could put him out of action fast. "Never mind."

Kevlar shield fully raised, I yell into the food hall. "Comrades! I'm being suppressed by a rebel PRPF member!"

written by Cryoburner on Jul 13, 2010 10:12

I note the direction in which Pitr and Aleksandr leave, to get an idea of where corridor D4 might be located. I then open the door at the intersection of corridors D1 and D2, and take look inside.

written by Gligar on Jul 13, 2010 17:44

Concourse F1

Since he can't find a map, L4-O picks an exit and point the forkbot at it. It turns out to lead to a corridor.

Corridor F4

There are several exits in this GREEN corridor, but most seem to have been boarded over. One, further down, just before an intersection, is not.

Speed-O tries to find a map on his PDC. Aha! Something is responding, somewhere in the sector... it seems that the exit up ahead leads to what should be a PLC warehouse with a cargo lift.

Jam-R happily... no, HAPPILY sings a song as he heads down to D Level.

The doors then open and he exits.

D Level lift hall

It turns out that a couple of communists were waiting for a lift. They board the one that's just arrived after Jam-R steps out.

They seem to be arguing over their destination.

In the distance, the sounds of combat can be heard.

Corridor D3

It turns out that it's "Scru-R" against a PRPF clone.

"Scru-R" fires his laser. Nice shot! Right between the eyes!

Miraculously, though, the communist is still alive...

Another communist barges out of the food hall. "What's the noise?!"

Corridor D2

The two communists head north, still on the corridor, before turning right.

After they've gone, Cryo-R gets interested in the room at the intersection.

Maintenance Request Office

The office is emblazoned with the logo of Technical Services (which has been hastily covered by a logo for the "People's Glorious Maintenance Section". It's staffed by several clones, who seem to be squabbling over something that looks like a supply box. Apparently, those are the only supplies that they were able to release, and of course, they have to share them all. Meaning that each clone's use of, say, the one pen, or the one "Approved" stamp, or the one keyboard, has to be strictly rationed. This argument is representative of the sorts of things they have to go through to secure the use of these items for one minutecycle straight without interruptions.

All this has left the reception desk unstaffed. It's "Ring for service" bell seems to be missing, too. Maybe it's in the box.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 13, 2010 17:50

"Well, one way to go it looks like!"

I drive the forkbot down the corridor, silently looking at each boarded up doorway.

Silently until I start HAPPILY singing again, of course.

"FRIEND COM-PU-TEEEER. COMPUTER THAT I LOOOOOVE!..."

written by Speeder on Jul 13, 2010 20:25

I ignore the ear splitting singing of L4, and in fact I even join him.

Poor John and Lucas.

“Common you two RED people! We are in a situation of distress, and Friend Computer teach us that we should be happy! Also it teach us that singing make us happy!”

written by Jam on Jul 13, 2010 20:36

“Wait! I know where you should go!”

I dash back into the lift and start pressing as many buttons as I can.

“Here and here and here and here and here and here and HERE!!”

I start laughing and quickly run back out before the lift door closes.

Then I run as fast as I can toward the source of the combat, pulling out my laser pistol as I go.

“Yay! Combat!”

written by Gligar on Jul 14, 2010 01:44

Corridor F4

After a moment, John-R and Lucas join in with the singing, rather loudly. It a wonder the communists don't hear you.¹³³

Soon, though, the forkbot reaches the aforementioned exit. In the interests of expediency, it turns into the room automatically.

Distribution warehouse

As advertised, the warehouse has a cargo lift at the back. But, apart form shelving, the place seems to have been looted.

D Level lift hall

The communists call after Jam-R, “What? Why did-” The doors close before they can finish

Jam-R rushes towards the combat sounds, through Revolutionary Square, and down the corridor.

Corridor D3

It turns out that Jor - I mean, “Scru-R” - is fighting a member of the PRPF, and seems to have the upper hand. The communist seems to be holding on to life somehow, despite having been lasered right through the head. Another communist has walked out of a nearby door, probably due to the commotion.

written by Speeder on Jul 14, 2010 02:02

“Warehouse!

Aaah... It is empty... I wanted more baloons and silvertape.”

I point at the lift.

“Lift! At least something usefull remained! Now we can go to D level!”

written by 4616599 on Jul 14, 2010 02:28

“Traitorous, lying terrorist!” I shoot at him again.

“Comrade, we have a situation. Tell everyone in the food hall that there appears to be separatist cells in the PRPF. He tried to kill us all!”

written by Lightning4 on Jul 14, 2010 03:31

“COMPUTERCOMPUTERCOMP-...”

I realize we're finally in the warehouse and snap out of the song.

“Oh, yeah. That's assuming it goes down instead of up. Well, we'll never know until we try!”

I drive the forkbot onto the lift and examine the buttons available to me. If there is a D level, I press it right away.

written by Jam on Jul 14, 2010 03:33

I resist to urge to shoot the commies. Instead, I say to “Scru-R”

“Comrade! You are needed at the People's Cloning Station! Come with me.”

I wait for “Scru-R”.

written by Gligar on Jul 14, 2010 16:33

Distribution warehouse

Speed-O seems unhappy about the warehouse being empty... ah, well.

L4-O drives the forkbot onto the cargo lift. It's much bigger than the passenger lists used before.

There are quite a few levels missing from the lift's control panel. D is not one of the missing ones, though. It gets pressed almost instantly, and the lift starts to descend. (The doors remain open, though.)

Corridor D3

“Scru-R” lets loose with another shot from his laser. Another hit.

This time, the communist doesn't miraculously hold on, and dies instead.

The other communist seems to disagree. “One of the original revolutionaries? I doubt it.

“And who is this?” he asks, looking at Jam-R. “One of your accomplices?”

written by 4616599 on Jul 14, 2010 16:53

“Why else would he try to shoot me? I was trying to serve the people, then he, led me out for little reason, started behaving suspiciously and accused me of treason! Did you see the shot food vendor? That comrade traitor lying there tried to get me too! He's probably had some twisted motives the whole time!” I notice Jam-R. “Do you know anything about this comrade here?”

¹³³ GLIGAR: (OOC: I'd make a WH40k reference but I've never played it.)

written by Jam on Jul 14, 2010 17:21

I pause for a few seconds and quickly think up a plan. It's risky, but it might just work.

I stare at the commie. I scream, my voice filled with rage.

"HOW DARE YOU QUESTION ME!!! DO YOU KNOW WHO I AM?! YOU THINK I AM ONE OF THOSE PIG-DOG CAPITALISTS!! I SHOULD KILL YOU RIGHT NOW FOR THINKING SUCH THINGS!!"

I try to look intimidating, and walk menacingly up to the him. I point my laser pistol at his chest.

"Leave now, and you'll live a while longer. But I suggest you don't make the same mistake again. I might not be so nice next time. NOW GO!!"

written by Speeder on Jul 15, 2010 00:54

I start to whistle my own elevator music.

Corridor D3

The communist seems taken aback by the sudden outburst. "I- I'm sorry, comrade. I just didn't recognise you..."

He retreats to the food hall, troubled.

...that worked?!

Cargo lift

Speed-O's elevator music is cut off by the lift itself, arriving at D Level.

It's arrived at another distribution warehouse, not quite as empty as the first.

written by Speeder on Jul 15, 2010 02:04

I see if there are nice stuff!

Like, silvertape, balloons, lightbulbs? Towels? Armor, weapons? Forkbot batteries?

written by Cryoburner on Jul 15, 2010 02:30

"Hello!"

Still standing in the corridor at the entrance to the Maintenance Request Office, I attempt to get the attention of the clones inside.

"It sounds like you guys are in need of supplies. Well, you're in luck, because I have a much needed delivery for you!"

written by Jam on Jul 15, 2010 04:52

I whisper to "Scru-R".

"Well, that worked out better than I expected. Now, I'm here to find you and broken leg guy (his name's Cryo-R, by the way), and bring you both back to the others. Quickly, come with me."

I walk back to Revolutionary Square. I check to make sure "Scru-R has followed me, then quietly say to him."

"Um... do you have any idea where Cryo-R might be?"

written by 4616599 on Jul 15, 2010 12:07

Putting on a very cowed expression, I follow Jam-R. "Yes comrade." As we pass the food hall, I add, somewhat loudly, "Gosh, the rifts developing between PRPF members are quite disappointing! But service to the people calls, I suppose."

Once into the square, I whisper in response. "Last time I saw him I told him to have a look around. Tried to see if I could disrupt the commies. Anyway, he was busy examining light fixtures into Corridor D2 so I'm unsure if he'd heard me. Also, I must note this...I've a feeling there might be another party fighting commies here."

written by Gligar on Jul 15, 2010 17:11

Distribution warehouse (D Level)

Speed-O is the first to exit the lift, and look at what's around.

He finds that the room is surprisingly well-stocked, as if it were simply locked up and left as-is. No weapons are present, but there are other items, such as more of those I [heart] IntSec balloons, showerheads, small towels, and, yes, duct tape.

Maintenance Request Office

The communists' squabbling is interrupted by Cryo-R. One of the communists (currently holding the "Approved" stamp) turns. "Can we help you, comrade?" He looks like he'd like to say more, but gets jostled by another, currently holding the keyboard, and turns back to explain at length that it is his turn for the keyboard. Fisticuffs are involved.

Two more communists are currently fighting over the single pen.

Revolutionary Square

It seems that some communists have either finished with eating or simply decided not to after the "Food Hall Incident", as they begin to go about their business again. A couple notice "Scru-R" and decide to keep clear.

written by Jam on Jul 15, 2010 18:19

"Party? Where? Oh, I need to find Cryo-R quickly or he'll miss the party."¹³⁴

I start walking down corridor D1, looking through all the doors for Cryo-R.

I somehow fail to notice Cryo-R standing at the door straight ahead of me.

But I don't fail to notice the dark room to the left. I walk into it and search around for Cryo-R.

"Hello? Cryo-R? Are you in here? Hello? Anyone?"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 15, 2010 18:45

While Speed-O is off inspecting some of the stuff, I drive the forkbot to the door and get off to check it.

¹³⁴ JAM: (ooc edit: I forgot to respond to "Scru-R"... I added that in above.)

written by Cryoburner on Jul 16, 2010 01:39

"Ah, yes. You seem to be in need of supplies."

I reach into my backpack and return with one black 'Secondary Sector Logistics' pen and several candies.

"Have a pen! And some candies! They might help you to relax, and work more efficiently!"

written by Gligar on Jul 16, 2010 01:49

Revolutionary Square

Communists continue to avoid "Scru-R" as Jam-R heads off.

Dark office

The only visible thing in the office is a desk with a single RING FOR SERVICE bell attached to it. On the desk is also a Secondary Sector Logistics pen.

And, of course, a big hole in the wall leading to where the warehouse used to be.

The only other discernible feature of the office is that it's frilling cold in here. That can be seen on the uniform of the clone behind the desk as a thin layer of frost whoa where did he come from

WHAT DO YOU NEED, he asks.

Distribution warehouse (D level)

Somewhat overeager to get going, L4-O revs up the forkbot, tries to turn, oversteers ridiculously, and stalls it, right in front of the warehouse door but facing the other way. He then climbs off and looks at said door. The door, an ordinary type of door you see everywhere (and if Cryo-R were here, he's probably identify it as a Type K4 or something) is intact and locked. For a change, it's locked from this side.

written by Jam on Jul 16, 2010 02:19

"Cryo-R! There you are!"

I walk toward the clone behind the desk, arms outstretched.

"I missed you so muc-wait... You're not Cryo-R! Who are you? And... why's it so cold in here? Brrrr..."

I sit and shiver for a while. Then I peer into the darkness at the clone.

"Are... are you covered in frost?!"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 16, 2010 03:47

"Huh. Well, that makes it easy."

Before unlocking it, I go back to the team.

"So um, are we going to drive the forkbot out there? Or should we just walk and bring whoever else is out there to us?"

written by Speeder on Jul 16, 2010 05:22

I grab some tape rolls, and a towel, and then I repair my weapon with new balloons, and store some reserves this time...

Then I walk toward L4.

"If we go, how we make noone steal the forkbot?"

I look at the other two.

"If we leave, can you two protect the forkbot?"

written by 4616599 on Jul 16, 2010 12:33

I follow Jam-R, but pause for a while, and abruptly turn towards a random surprised commie. "Salutations comrade! So, I assume progress for the people is turning out fine, no interference?"

Assuming the commie doesn't try to start a conversation, I head down corridor D1, noting any commie activity and wondering where Jam-R went.

written by Gligar on Jul 16, 2010 16:44

Dark office

The clone replies, I AM THE STATION MONITOR. IF IT IS COLD, I DO NOT FEEL IT. IT DOES NOT MATTER TO ME.

WHAT DO YOU NEED, he (?) asks again.

Distribution warehouse (D Level)

Speed-O fills up on supplies, and repairs his "slugthrower".

After Speed-O speaks to him, John-R HAPPILY replies, "Certainly, sir!"

Revolutionary Square

The communist is too taken aback to respond.

Corridor D1

"Scru-R" looks around, and notices the open door to the dark office. There are voices from inside, one of them seemingly belonging to Jam-R.

Maintenance Request Office

"PEN!"

The communist pounces on it, before being punched in the nose by another communist.

A third grabs the "candies" without so much as saying thank-you.

written by Speeder on Jul 16, 2010 17:29

I smile HAPPILY back to John-R.

"Ok L4, let's proceed!"

I load my... cool double barreled slugthrower, point it forward, and open the door.

written by Jam on Jul 16, 2010 18:34

"I'm looking for a clone named Cryo-R."

I describe Cryo-R to the Station Monitor.

"Do you know where he went?"

I walk forward a few steps.

"And apparently we're throwing a party. Would you like to join us?"

I walk forward a few more steps.

"Oh, you look cold... Here, I'll lend you my towel.

I take my towel out and attempt to wrap it around the Station Monitor.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 16, 2010 19:56

Lacking any ready non-overkill weapons, I load up a laser pistol and keep it in my hand.

I then HAPPILY follow Speed-O, looking back to make sure John and Lucas are guarding the forkbot safely. I HAPPILY wave as I leave, the door closing behind me.

written by Gligar on Jul 17, 2010 01:48

Distribution warehouse (D Level)

John-R decides that the best way to guard the forkbot is to sit in the operator's seat.

Lucas just kind of hangs around the forkbot, looking at the stuff on the shelves, before helping himself to a roll of duct tape.

Unnoticed by them, the cargo lift descends to somewhere.

Corridor D4

Leaving the distribution warehouse, Speed-O and L4-O find themselves at the end of yet another RED corridor. However, apart from the clearance stripe, and the visible doors (two at this end) the entire corridor is mirrored.

Further down the corridor, the two clones can make out a jackobot heading towards them. (Well, it sort of looks like an infinite line of jackobots, due to the mirrors, but you know what I mean.

Behind the jackobot, it's a bit difficult to tell. But there seems to be an infinite number of reflections of... waaaaait... those two communists look awfully familiar...

It's a good thing L4-O has a laser handy.

Dark office

The Station Monitor responds. A CLONE WITH THAT DESCRIPTION VISITED THE OFFICE NOT LONG AGO. HE LEFT THE PEN YOU SEE THERE. I HAVE NOT YET PUT IT AWAY.

HOWEVER, I DO NOT KNOW WHERE HE WENT. I CAN TRY TO FIND HIM, IF YOU WANT. BUT IT WILL TAKE TIME.

The Station Monitor doesn't seem to react to Jam-R wrapping the Station Monitor in a towel. Nor does the Station Monitor react when the towel begins to collect frost.

Jam-R realises that it's been getting colder with every step he took away from the desk.

written by Speeder on Jul 17, 2010 02:36

I try my best to aim my nut launcher at the head of one of the commies the best I can before they realize. And then I do my best to startle them and make them not combat ready...

"Alexandr, Pitr, WHY YOU TWO ARE HERE AND NOT IN THE PEOPLE'S FOOD HALL? YOU DON'T KNOW YOU ARE TO HELP CLEAN IT?"

If they start to grab weapons I shoot, if not I wait a bit.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 17, 2010 04:08

I mutter "Vatcrap" under my breath and turn quickly around, since those two may recognize me.

I act like I'm fiddling with the door, trying to pick the lock.

I keep my laser pistol ready to shoot, should they start firing at us.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 17, 2010 07:09

"Say, you wouldn't happen to know where one might find the nearest bell factory, would you? I've noticed something of a bell shortage around here, which has made acquiring bells possibly more difficult than it should be. It looks like you might be in need of one as well, so if I find some, I'll be sure to bring one here. Any idea where the bell factory might be located?"

written by Jam on Jul 17, 2010 13:16

"No, I'll keep searching for him myself."

I start to walk towards the door, noticing it is getting colder and colder as I go. Strange.

"Do you know if there are any armories on this level?"

I listen for the Station Monitor's answer.

"Well, I really must be going. Thank you."

I walk out of the room, and turn left.

written by Gligar on Jul 17, 2010 15:30

Corridor D4

Lots of mirror images of Pitr react. "What? But the food hall is in use!" All the Alexandr images scratch their heads in confusion.

In front of them, the line of jackobot images approach.

Maintenance Request office

"The bell factory? I think it got blown up. HEYTHAT'SMYKEYBOARDYOU!"

Dark office

I DO NOT THINK THAT THERE IS AN ARMOURY ON THIS LEVEL is the reply.

Corridor D1

Compared with the frigid office, the temperature of the corridor is welcoming. Turning left, Jam-R is finally able to see what he set out to find: Cryo-R, talking to someone in a room at the intersection .

written by Jam on Jul 17, 2010 15:55

I look at Cryo-R. I whisper to him,

"Cryo-R, come with me. The others are waiting. Something about a party."

Then I look in the room. Noticing the clones fighting over a keyboard, I say to them,

"Comrades! Why don't you just go get another keyboard? There are some in that office over there."

I point to the dark office.

"I think I saw some pens there too. Why don't you ask the nice clone there if he'll lend you some?"

written by Speeder on Jul 17, 2010 17:49

I decide to hide my weapon and stand in a position that make me and L4 look more like ourselves, more like commies, and more like important dangerous commies.

"Are you stupid commrade Pitr? If it is in use, your commrades there are making a mess, and thus it should be clean for them, and after the use ends, a huge mess will be left behind, and if you don't clean, the people will suffer with diseases! Now MOVE YOUR ASS AND CLEAN IT, FOR THE PEOPLE!!!!"

I do some commieish singing... You know, the ones the computer always warn us to avoid.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 17, 2010 18:33

I continue fiddling with the door.

Maintenance Request office

The fighting communists look over at the sound of the new voice.

"Are you sure, comrade?" one asks. "We were never able to open the door, and Alexandr said something about the cold..."

But that doesn't stop them barging out anyway, pushing past Cryo-R and Jam-R.

Corridor D4

Pitr doesn't seem convinced. "But the mess will still be there if we wait. Besides, I'm sure I've seen him before somewhere..." He takes a look at L4-O.

He's stopped by Alexandr. "No, he's right. Perhaps something has happened there. You know that the com units are acting up. Let us investigate." He starts walking back down the corridor. After a moment, Pitr follows him. But not before taking another look at L4-O.

Distribution warehouse (D Level)

Lucas seems to be getting bored. Idly, he practices aiming his laser pistol at things.

written by Speeder on Jul 18, 2010 01:35

After I am sure they are away...

"They REALLY dislike you L4, this is bad as I expected, they tried to make the CloneServ copy old memories, seemly it don't really worked well, but is working sufficiently to make the clone remain commie... Just killing them will not fix their treason, and they will just come back, we will really need to reactivate friend Computer and ask for reinforcements."

I look concerned, still happy, but concerned.

written by Jam on Jul 18, 2010 02:38

"Cryo-R? Don't you want to come to the party?"

I look down the hall at "Scru-R"

"Sir? I found Cryo-R. Now we just need to return to the others..."

I stand at the intersection and look both directions down corridor D2.

"Now where did they say they would be..." I mumble to myself. "They said they were going to find the cargo lift... And I said I would find them... But I have no idea where they are..."

written by Cryoburner on Jul 18, 2010 05:28

"Blown up? NOOOOOOOOOOOOOO!!!"

I hurry off in the direction of the explosion from earlier, to the southern end of corridor D2, and round the bend into the corridor beyond, ignoring any voices or invitations to parties along the way.

written by 4616599 on Jul 18, 2010 05:56

I hear Jam-R mentioning something about a cargo lift. "Well, there seem to be some storage offices and warehouses in this area, so the cargo lift shouldn't be too far off. Probably somewhere...north? Maybe down corridor D2 or opposite the main lift hall? Then again, we've had some treasonous sector planners..."

I decide to ignore Cryo-R stumbling off for now, and open the door opposite the dark office.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 18, 2010 09:17

"I feel a whole lot less safe with them around."

I look back towards the hall.

"Well, I guess we should go look for the others. They're probably nearby."

written by Gligar on Jul 18, 2010 15:46

Corridor D2, intersection

From the north, a familiar pair of communists emerge. They seem to be muttering to themselves about a pair of suspicious clones who ordered them to go clean the food hall.

Corridor D2, far end

Elsewhere in the corridor, Cryo-R arrives at a dead run, to find the aftermath of the explosion earlier. Apparently, one of the rooms so destroyed was a construction facility on this level. There's almost nothing left. Certainly nothing salvageable, at any rate.

Corridor D1

As the two communists pass, "Scru-R" tries one of the unopened doors, only to find that it is locked.

written by Jam on Jul 18, 2010 19:08

"What? Cryo-R! Where are you going? We have to return to the others!"

I think about running after him, then decide not to. Instead, I walk over to "Scru-R" and talk to him.

"Sir, I'm going to head north and try to find the cargo lift. Could you try to convince Cyro-R to come back? I thought I heard him mention something about bells before. You didn't happen to see any, did you?"

I wait for a while for "Scru-R" to respond, then start running north, down Corridor D2.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 18, 2010 19:11

Now that the commies are gone, I start walking down the corridor, cautiously looking around.

Once I reach the jackobot, I examine it.

written by Speeder on Jul 18, 2010 22:33¹³⁵

I examine the bot too.

But I keep my eye on the corridor end (just in case more commies show up)

written by Gligar on Jul 19, 2010 01:07

Corridor D2 North

The corridor passes a door and turns to the right, where there are several more doors before the corridor finally ends at yet another door. One of the closer doors has been destroyed, revealing a mirrored... corridor?

Corridor D4

Speed-O and L4-O both look at the jackobot as if they've never seen one before. That's kind of hard to believe, given that jackobots like this one, with its short, squat cylindrical body and upper dome, twin manipulators, and dual treads are seen everywhere in Alpha Complex. They're often the bot of choice for small service firms who need a bot that can do... well, anything, as long as it's programmed for the task. Even if there are bots that can do it better, the jackobot still gets pressed into service. They are, however, rather vocal about being underappreciated. Which they are. Constantly.

This particular jackobot regards the two ORANGES coolly with its red eye. Much like another jackobot they've seen recently. Could it be... it is! It's the same jackobot, as seen in the THQ/PVTF armoury before it was blown up. About all that's wrong with it is that the paintwork is a bit singed.

written by Speeder on Jul 19, 2010 02:46

I peer at the jackobot.

"Hey, you seemly is damaged... Hey, we have already a forkbot on our team, wanna tag along? We are going to fix the Friend Computer, we are friend of the machines, that of course, are our friends back!"

written by 4616599 on Jul 19, 2010 03:35

I let out a barely discernable gasp, then head south to look for Cryo-R, also checking for any commie activity.¹³⁶ written by Jam on Jul 19, 2010 04:23¹³⁷

"Mirrors!"

I run into the mirrored corridor.

"Whoa, cool! Look at 'em all!"

I admire my reflections.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 19, 2010 08:56

I more closely examine the ruined area, and enter it if it seems possible to safely do so.

I then take a small piece of unsalvageable material, and examine it carefully.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 19, 2010 15:01

I spit wash off the jackobot a little bit, it's so dirty and charred, and that's TREASON!

I decide to go on ahead a little bit, holding my laser pistol at the ready.

I (Kristos-R) awaken in the meeting hall, feeling as if I've just emerged from another bout of insanity. "Another? Now that I think of it, I remember nothing.", I whispers to myself as I analyze the surroundings and what I'm carrying... a string of numbers in hexadecimal flash through my mind.

written by E_net4 on Jul 19, 2010 16:27

Corridor D4

The jackobot looks at Speed-O. "Not sure how much help I could be. Besides, I have other tasks to attend to. I'm sure you understand." It then beeps to itself quietly.

L4-O moves on, and hits a bend in the corridor. Looking round the bend, he finds Jam-R, seemingly admiring his reflections in the mirror. Looking as mandatory as ever! Well, except for the missing hand...

Corridor D2

Easily evading the communists, "Scru-R" heads back south, finding Cryo-R inspecting the site of one of the room destroyed by the big explosion earlier. Though the room is now gone - not even the floor remains - there is some ruined debris. Cryo-R is examining a piece of it, his CPU-attuned mind silently cataloguing it. It seems to have been part of a fabrication machine at one point, but now, it's just scrap metal. Cryo-R discards it.

Meeting hall

The power might be off, but that doesn't mean that there's nothing living in the bunker. The clones are still here, and are trying to work out what to do about this whole lack-of-power thing. Notably, a few have already left the meeting hall, looking for machinery by the light of their PDCs.

A couple of clones seem to emerge from some form of deep sleep, one familiar, one not. Though disoriented by the darkness, the familiar one - E_net-R - goes looking for a door, and finding one to the south, helped by PDC movement from the concourse.

The unfamiliar clone, Kristos-R, looks around, and understandably doesn't see much. He can tell that he's in a room surrounded by clones, and, from the lights of their PDCs, can see a few faces. He finds that he's wearing a standard jumpsuit and boots, and seems to have an ME card and PDC of his own. It seems that he too has been brainscrubbed. Maybe he is of the unfortunate few for whom there are side effects?

written by E_net4 on Jul 19, 2010 17:23

I open the door to the south, and hopely look around the area, which is most probably now illuminated from the outside.

I notice L4-O.

"L4-O! You found the cargo lift! I found the others, but Cryo-R ran off somewhere. I'll go get them..."

I turn around and run back, but get confused along the way and accidentally run down Corridor D1. I stop suddenly and look around in confusion.

¹³⁸ JAM: (ooc: Door to the south? I thought E_net-R was in Concourse C1.)

"What? Where are they?" I quietly ask myself.

written by Speeder on Jul 19, 2010 19:44

"Hello Jam! Good that this elevator is connected with the same side you went."

I look around a bit more and say.

"Stick with us, we will search for Cryo and Scru"

The surroundings are almost overwhelming. My neck grows hot and traditional logic seems to fade into another system of thinking, a different plane, but a plane nonetheless. I look for some stimulation to start heading towards something. In particular, to separate myself from the crowd.

written by Gligar on Jul 20, 2010 00:39

Meeting hall

Wait... how did E_net-R get into the meeting hall? He must have been dragged in there while I was occupied with the other group...

Regardless, he opens the door to the concourse. There is indeed light from the hole to where the warehouse used to be, but not much. Enough to dimly illuminate the concourse, at least.

The place is still damp, though the water seems to have either drained or otherwise removed by the other clones. Albey-R has been propped against some rubble. Why they didn't just do that to E_net-R is beyond me.

A pair of cloned enter, one carrying an emergency power pack, the other carrying a spare ceiling lamp. And a PDC used as a torch.

The two busy themselves with setting up their equipment as Kristos-R looks for a way of getting apart from the rest.

The sudden emergence of light from the jury-rigged lamp startles him, and he dashes to a corner of the room.

Corridor D1

Jam-R runs down the corridor, finding himself near where the warehouse used to be, before stopping, confused.

Corridor D4

Speed-O seems not to have noticed that Jam-R left, and speaks to him as though he were still there.

Concourse C1

A face appears in the hole in the ceiling. It's Jam-R. "Hello?" he calls.

One of the clones seems to recognise him from earlier. "Oh... hi."

Jam-R disappears above again, just as Kristos-R appears in the concourse, looking around furtively.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Speed-O arrives not long after that.

Meeting hall

The extra light seems to have awakened another of the clones. He bumps his head in the stacked chairs and fiddles with his PDC. The signal is weak... only one bar, and nothing seems to be responding on AlphaNet... odd... does it have anything to do with the power outage?

But I don't have this clone's name to hand right now... I'll have to get back to you...

Ruins of the Warehouse

As Speed-O and Jam-R continue their little conversation, L4-O bumbles up to them, after peeking in some doors, seeing communists working in some of them.

Corridor D4 South

There doesn't seem to be anyone around here except for Cryo-R and "Scru-R" - perhaps they evacuated after the explosion. Nor are there any more branching corridors in evidence. Perhaps one or more of the rooms is a foyer leading to a corridor?

Cryo-R continues inspecting what isn't here. As it turns out, nothing can be seen of the level below, as the lights in the affected section have obviously been damaged.

Back on this level... some of the wall nearest the corridor still remains near the explosion, albeit twisted and ruined like at the warehouse. The walls separating the production facility from the surrounding rooms are completely gone, as is about half of the floorspace from the surrounding rooms themselves.

The rear wall is also gone, as is part of the subsector's outer skin.

written by Speeder on Jul 20, 2010 16:38

I look at Jam for a while, then I look down in the hole and ask.

"Hey, anyone there are still willing to help us in the mission?"

I keep looking at the concourse.

I look at Speed-O, and my face flashes annoyance for a split-second before reverting to it's usual extreme happiness.

"Sir, there might have been communists down there... Are you sure yelling about the mission is really a good idea? We don't want to give anything away..."

"Anyway, I think I should go down there, can you two lower me down somehow?"

I sit down at the edge of the hole and look into it, trying to judge how far it is to the bottom. I follow any instructions L4-O or Speed-O give me.

written by Kristos on Jul 20, 2010 18:42

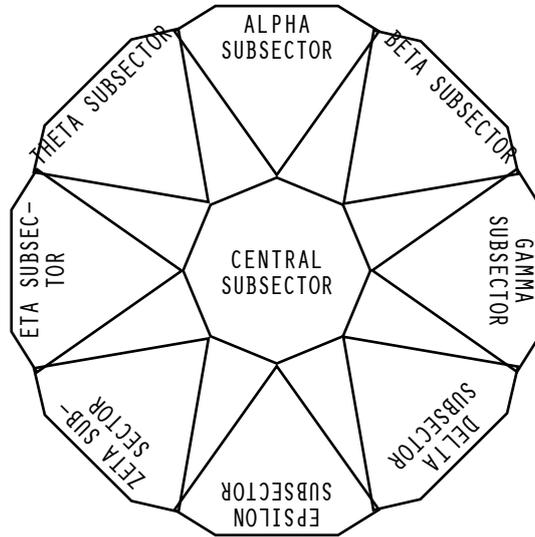

Suddenly, I feel settled into the correct plane of thinking, and a clearness spreads like the aroma of mint through my mind. I feel... relatively safe here. Past memory still evades me, so I shout into the room, "Hello? What's going on here?" I feel like I was previously carrying an important task... Something still doesn't feel real about it all. The hex code "0x29" comes to my thoughts, then quickly vaporizes. I feel around my pockets for anything to clue me off.

A voice comes up from below. "Eh? Oh, can you give us some time, sir? We're dealing with a power loss down here."

Jam-R takes another look down. Looks like they're rigging up a light or two. He thinks it's about 3m to the floor of the concourse below.

Concourse C1

There's now some light in here, thanks to the two clones setting up another lamp. The control room door's been opened, to get some light in there as well.

One of them replies to Kristos-R. "As you may have noticed, the power to the bunker's off. Earlier, we were told that the sector's been overrun by communists. A team has already gone out to try to troubleshoot. Sounds like they're up there," he gestures to the hole.

Why Kristos-R is thinking about hex code is a mystery. Knowledge of hexadecimal is usually BLUE Clearance. Knowing that such things even exist is usually YELLOW.

Just then, another clone shouts up the corridor. "Hey, we've found something."

Corridor D2 South

Not D4, as the sign says. It seems that the communists are attempting misdirection, and may have already found my AlphaNet feed. I must keep moving.

But you want to know what's happening to Cryo-R, right? He's decided to open a door.

The room on the other side unfortunately did not escape the explosion - the part of the room nearest the construction facility is no longer there. But there appears to still be a desk, and a couple of battered lockers. A table sits overturned near the gaping hole, with what it used to hold scattered behind it on the floor.

The largest piece of debris is a slightly-damaged box.

written by Speeder on Jul 21, 2010 00:36

I look at them and say.

"I noticed... I know how to fix it, I fixed the other time it happened."

I describe to the clones down there, where they should go to repair the power.

"Jam, I will help you get down there, please, help them get the power back up."

I prepare to hold Jam with a arm, and lower him (if he hands the stump, I try to hold the other arm too, without hurting him... too much.)

"Yes, the commies invaded the sector... They are everywhere but inside the bunker... Unless they got in on the A level... What you have to do, is place guards on this hole, and on the A level garage, the garage leads to a road and some lifts, don't try to exit the garage, the commies are strong outside, and they have vehicles."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 21, 2010 01:00

Seeing the commotion around the dark hole in the floor, I approach. I see that Speed is about to lower Jam into the hole, and assist by keeping Speed steady so he doesn't fall in too.

written by Kristos on Jul 21, 2010 02:14

I really have no idea what to do, so I search for some food. It now feels as if I haven't eaten in a week. I am feeling more normal and less confused. Perhaps I had been recovering from some sort of shock. I now realize that one of my eyes does not focus correctly.

written by Jam on Jul 21, 2010 03:17¹⁴⁰

"Thank you, Speed-O"

I offer my good arm to Speed-O to hold, then slide off the edge of the hole.

Assuming I get to the bottom without breaking anything, I look around.

"Anyone want to help me get the power working?"

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 21, 2010 06:28

I look at the PDC in disgust. "Darn it. Something's up. I guess I'll have to investigate why my PDC has such a weak signal."

I open the door, step out into the corridor, and examine my surroundings, still clutching the PDC.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 21, 2010 09:35

"A box! I'll bet there are boxes inside!"

I slide the box into the hallway where there's more light, and open the top to inspect what variety of boxes it may contain.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Jam-R is lowered down the hole.

Concourse C1

As Jam-R reaches the floor, Kristos-R looks around again. There are vendobots, but with the power off they are inoperable.

¹⁴⁰ JAM: (ooc: all these random clones walking around, are they the clones of the people who haven't joined yet?)

A couple of other clones come to meet Jam-R and offer to help with getting the power online. As it happens, they have just found the generators – they were the “thing” that the clone down the corridor was talking about – so getting them running would be the next step.

It is at this point that that clone whose name I didn't have a moment ago (but do now – it's Mango-R-NHG) comes out of the meeting hall, scratching his head at the poor PDC signal. He takes in the rubble from when the warehouse was destroyed and the hole in the ceiling. And the offline vendobots.¹⁴¹

Corridor D2 South

Cryo-R retrieves the box and investigates it. There is tape sealing the box closed, so he unseals it with a screwdriver from his toolkit.

Inside are about 20 smaller boxes, all the same size.

written by Kristos on Jul 21, 2010 16:38

I turn to Jam-R and ask him, “Are you on the trouble-shooting team?” He looks friendly enough, but deep in me something says our purposes are contrary. The hex code “0xFE” comes to mind. But I don't know why, so I resist the groundless urge to incapacitate him. I am surprised by an unfamiliar muscle movement in my face, then realize that I'm smiling.

written by Speeder on Jul 21, 2010 17:01

I look down there, and then I reply to Kristos before getting up.

“Yes, we are the trouble-shooting team, Lightspeed Jam, more Cryoscrub, and some other people... I hope you are not trouble too...”

I stand and look to L4.

“We have to find Cryoscrub and return to the forkbot.”

written by Lightning4 on Jul 21, 2010 18:45

“Cryoscrub?”

I shrug.

“Yeah, I guess so. Hopefully they're still on this level. Might be a good idea to make sure Lucas and John are okay too. Off we go then.”

I go through the gaping hole where the warehouse door used to be, and wander back down the corridor I came from before.

I keep a look out for Cryoscrub.

written by Jam on Jul 21, 2010 20:29

“Go left down Corridor D2!” I yell to Speed-O and L4-O. “Cryo-R and... Scrub? Well they should be there!”

Then, I turn and smile at Kristos-R.

¹⁴¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: Since some clones are in different places in the bunker, new players may start from any RED or INFRARED areas of the bunker. So that's a yes to Jam.)

“Yes, I'm a part of the trouble-shooting team. Do you want to come help me get the power running again?”

I turn and ask the two other clones where the generator is.

Then I look over at Mango-R, who has just walked in.

“Oh, hello. Do you want to help too?”

written by Speeder on Jul 21, 2010 21:53¹⁴²

I look down at the hole.

“Jam-R, I already explained where to go, you don't paid attention?”

I explain again, where the power is, where the fuel barrels are, the correct sequence of doing stuff, and that someone should not only watch, but prevent the hose from slipping... And finally, that should be safer clean the mess that Cryo made previously, to make sure it won't explode.

written by Gligar on Jul 22, 2010 00:06

Concourse C1

It seems that Kristos-R persists in thinking about high-clearance data. I must investigate this. He also seems to be suppressing something.

But anyway. Speed-O again explains where the generators are (B Level, south of Spare Parts Storage, or you can get there from Maintenance, C Level) and where the fuel is kept (A Level).

Corridor D1

L4-O starts wandering back to the intersection. He seems to hear something from the south.

written by Speeder on Jul 22, 2010 00:18

As L4 wander off, I prepare to follow him, armed with my baloon powered nut launcher...

I walk toward L4, and if I find a commie, I try to pass as commie, but on the first motion of aggression I shoot...

If for some miracle is a high programmer, I bow with the words: “Oh mighty holy priest and maintainer of friend computer, I greet you humbly!”

written by Jam on Jul 22, 2010 00:42

I suddenly seem disoriented, and shake my head in confusion. I glance over at Kristos-R.

“Uhh... Ok. I'll need some help getting the fuel barrels up the stairs. Maybe two or three clones can come with me. How about you, and you, and you. Follow me...”

I point at Kristos-R, then Mango-R, then E_net-R. I wait a while, then turn and walk down the corridor to Maintenance. I walk inside.

(If E_net-R doesn't respond, I ignore him.)

¹⁴² SPEEDER: (OOC: sorry, I had to reply!)

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 22, 2010 00:44

"Sure, I'd like to help. But first, could you tell me where I can find some weaponry? I think we'll meet some hostiles along the way."

written by Kristos on Jul 22, 2010 02:36

"Alright." I say to Jam-R, "But I'm quite confused. I don't even know where or who I am. I seem... lost for identity. Perhaps this will help properly orient my mind."

As I cast a glance at Mango-R, it feels as if we are allies in another place. But for E_net4, I sense nothing. As if he isn't really there. But so far, these strange thoughts have shown absolutely no connection to reality. I shrug it off, and follow Jam-R down the corridor. I then realize that I had ignored Speed-O. I turn back and cast my voice: "Honestly I don't know who or what I am." followed by a chuckle.^{143 144}

written by Lightning4 on Jul 22, 2010 06:39

Hearing some commotion to the south, I start moving towards that way.

I ready my laser pistol just in case, since I don't know whether it's friends or commies.

written by 4616599 on Jul 22, 2010 16:11

Mildly bored, I whisper to Cryo-R. "You really should go ahead and look at those boxes. We're supposed to meet up with the rest." Assuming Cryo-R remains inert, I examine the boxes instead, with my kevlar shield in position in case.

written by Gligar on Jul 22, 2010 17:21

Corridor D2

L4-O, followed by Speed-O, heads south. He finds both "Scru-R" and Cryo-R investigating the remains on one of the destroyed rooms from earlier. Cryo-R has salvaged a package of boxes from the debris.

Maintenance

By the lights of their PDCs, Jam-R, Kristos-R, Mango-R and one unnamed clone see a lot of inert machinery for air and water filtration. It would be controlled from the Computer terminal in the corner if there were any power.

In another corner is a ladder heading down.

Corridor D2

"Scru-R" seems to have had enough waiting for Cryo-R, and opens a box himself. It contains one of those "Ring for Service" bells.

written by Jam on Jul 22, 2010 20:15

I look at Mango-R.

¹⁴³ KRISTOS: (ooc: what do the letters after our names on the stats page mean? Or should I not know this?)

¹⁴⁴ SPEEDER: (ooc: the letters ARE your name...

Yes, people in paranoia are named like robots 😊 Your name is:

Handle-Clearance-Sector

So "Cryo" is not a name, it is a handle, Cryo-R-BRN is a name)

"Maybe there's an armory nearby. Sorry, I don't have any spare laser pistols. But I do have this knife. Here, take it."

I offer my knife to Mango-R. Then I speak to Kristos-R.

"Your name? That's easy, it's Kristos-R! It says so right on your jumpsuit..." (or did I imagine it again? 😊)

I carefully climb down the ladder.

written by Speeder on Jul 22, 2010 20:30

I poke Cryo.

"Hey, broken leg guy..."

Then I smile and say.

"Hello Scru!"

I look around to see if there are no commie nearby.

"Ok, we had a little problem with commies taking over the camera system, but we already fixed it... Jam and some other people are fixing the power of the bunker, we are to move to a warehouse in this level, where two friendly clones await with our forkbot, then we will move on to the the CompNode level... You and Cryo found something useful in your scouting?"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 22, 2010 20:33

I walk up to Cryoscrub.

"Hail friends! We need to be doing our..." I look around and whisper, making sure nobody hears me.

"mission."

I continue whispering.

"Our ride is on this level, and two other people. Did you know one of them melts brains?"

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 22, 2010 20:41

"Oh. Thanks." I take the knife that is offered by Jam-R. "Maybe this would be useful for equipment substitution."

I follow after him, and note the currently unusable machinery. "How long would you think before unfiltered air would get here?"

I look for maintenance equipment.

written by Kristos on Jul 22, 2010 21:41

"Oh, I mean who I am, not what I am called, though that is nice to know as well! I suppose I am a troubleshooter. Is everybody of red clearance a troubleshooter?" I would ask for a weapon of sorts myself, but I do not know if I can trust myself yet.

written by Gligar on Jul 23, 2010 00:33

Maintenance

Kristos-R has his name on his jumpsuit? So it does! Did he work on a PLC service counter or something?

Anyway. Jam-R heads down to the generator room, followed by the other three.

Generator room

The three large diesel generators are prominent in the middle of the room, surrounding the single large fuel tank. Connected to the fuel tank is a 55-gallon drum, presumably the one Speed-O and crew used to refuel earlier.

The generators are connected, by thick cables, to a power distribution unit on the wall. Connected to that by a thinner cable is a Computer terminal. Obviously, it's unpowered.

The place reeks of diesel. This is probably due to the large puddle of it on the floor.

Oddly enough, there is no maintenance equipment in the room.

Corridor D2 South

It seems that the debris hasn't fully settled, as a broken piece falls off what's left of the wall and drops to the level below.

written by Jam on Jul 23, 2010 03:03

"Ok! Here's the generator. Now we just need to find some fuel. Maybe there's some left in the drum..."

I walk over to the fuel drum and try to check if there's any fuel left in it.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 23, 2010 08:29

"Wow! A bell... Aah! Who are you? What are you doing with my bell? These precision instruments are vital to the success of the mission, and not just anyone can handle them!"

I take a closer look at the smaller box, and the bell it contains. Then I try pressing the button on top.

written by Kristos on Jul 23, 2010 11:38

I fish in my pockets once again, and feel something perfectly spherical...

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 23, 2010 12:02

I point towards the door to the north. "Maybe there's something useful in here!"

I head to the door, and put my ear next to it. I listen carefully, should there be something, or somebody on the other side.

written by Gligar on Jul 23, 2010 16:35

Generator room

Jam-R checks the drum, to find that it's rather light... in fact, it's empty.

Kristos-R looks in his pockets again. Is that something spherical? No, it's just his PDC...

Mango-R, on the other hand, is interested in what's behind the door. Putting his ear to it, he hears nothing.

Corridor D2 South

Cryo-R snatches the box, and the bell, from "Scru-R". Apparently, they're too delicate for just anyone to handle.

The bell comes in a plain grey box, with the code THH-504/Cb printed on it, along with a serial number. Further investigation reveals that all the smaller boxes are printed with the same code, and sequential serial numbers.

Pressing the bell makes it go "ding".

written by 4616599 on Jul 23, 2010 16:58

"Nonsense. I still have intact limbs and appendages, which should help me in overall coordination to exert a proper amount of pressure on the bell!" I then note Speed-O.

"Ah, good to see you and the group again in good shape! Seems like I missed out on some things. Well, Cryo-R has collected some interesting tools and rubble,. I haven't been scouting too much, but, oh...I set off that explosion. Commies were trying to enter and use THQ as a PRPF volunteer HQ, so I blew up the armoury and pretty much levelled their efforts. Seems like the next subsector is somewhere south. Anyway, tried to stir up some discord after that, which had some success.... I now am a.... known figure to some of the commies. Most of them just finished their People's break at a food hall to the east- they went there after an attempt at investigating the explosion. They seem very easily distracted. And there may be some other parties in this; there were hints of another anti-commie party at the food hall, plus some strange but seemingly loyal clones in the dark room next to the warehouse."

written by Jam on Jul 23, 2010 17:18

"The fuel drum is empty! Speed-O said there was some more fuel on A Level. Let's go and get it."

I walk out the north door. Then I notice all the useful things in the next room. I take the longest cables I can find, a couple pieces of rubberlyke tubing, three pipes of different sizes, and any tools I can find. Then I search around for any other useful things.

I inspect my new possessions, noting the length of the cables, tubes, and pipes.

written by Speeder on Jul 23, 2010 18:44

"Humm... So, THAT was you... It started the hell out of me, specially because I was handling a nuclear reactor... Oh, we fit a nuclear reactor on a forkbot, so we have a NUCLEAR FORKBOT!!! Oh, now I have a name for him! Nukabot!"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 23, 2010 22:25

"Nukabot? I... guess that works!"

"I just hope it doesn't go off when we're not expecting it."

"I ought to go check on the forkbot and the two clones. I'll wait there for you guys, maybe there's something interesting in the warehouse that'll help us."

I wander off.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 24, 2010 00:09

I follow after Jam-R, watching him gather all the 'useful things'.

I then take my chance to examine the room, and takes what appears to be a small spring. I squeeze it, and is quite surprised at it's ability to spring back.

"What can I find a use for this spring... Hmm. I think this could be used for launching objects at a high velocity!"

written by Gligar on Jul 24, 2010 00:35

Generator room

Jam-R passes Mango-R and opens the door, heading out. Mango-R follows him.

Spare parts storage

Luckily, rigging up the fuel drum to the fuel tank didn't take the entire contents of the room. There's still plenty left. Jam-R notices some pipes and cables, and some of the rubberlyke tubing, by the light of his PDC. He takes some. The tubes are roughly 2m in length, and the cables are about 1m. The pipes are all different lengths - it looks like they're 50cm, 1m, and 1.3m or so - but are about the same diameter.

He also finds a hammer and a couple of spanners. Or wrenches, as they're known in some parts of the Complex. Both names are equally mandatory. But here in JHT Sector, we use the former name.

Mango-R also looks around, and finds a spring.¹⁴⁵

Corridor D2 South

After a conversation, which results in Speed-O coming up with name Nukabot for the forkbot, L4-O decides to head back to the warehouse. He wanders in that direction, and reaches Corridor D2 North.

written by Speeder on Jul 24, 2010 02:16

I remain with Cryoscrub

"So, shall we go? Or any of you have better ideas?"

written by Jam on Jul 24, 2010 02:30

"Hmm... Where did Kristos-R go? Oh well, maybe he decided to stay back and clean up the spilled fuel... Let's continue on!"

I walk to the room to the north. I quickly check if there are any more useful items (I'll get them later), then rush through the north door and down the stairs.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 24, 2010 03:15

"So then, where's the door to A Level?"

I try sticking my spring into the PDC, then examining the 3 doors other to the one I just came through.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 24, 2010 07:42

I continue into D4.

¹⁴⁵ GLIGAR: (OOO: I'll give you the spring, but for future reference, you shouldn't assume that something is there if I don't mention it at some point. Except for cameras. They're everywhere.)

As I walk by the strange mirrors, I admire myself in them from time to time.

Unable to resist the urge, I stop and flex for the mirror a little bit.

I finally reach the warehouse door and peek inside quietly to make sure all is well.

written by Gligar on Jul 24, 2010 15:46

Concourse B1

Jam-R passes through. He notes the tyre tracks made by the forkbot earlier.

The door to Spare Parts Storage closes slightly, then sticks.

Spare Parts Storage

Mango-R watches Jam-R run through the concourse to the stairs. Idly, he tries inserting the spring into his PDC's connection port, but he loses his grip on it and it goes sproinnnnng, flying off somewhere. At least the PDC seems to be unharmed. Oh wait... there's an error code on the screen.

Maybe if Mango-R wasn't preoccupied with looking at the ORANGE door on his left, and the RED one on his right, he'd have had a better chance.

Corridor A1

Jam-R arrives, after almost falling face-first down the stairs. It turns out that they're a little slippery from the water.

It's still a little damp down here too, even though most of the water has drained away.

Jam-R notices that the door on the left ahead is still ajar.

Corridor D4

The jackobot is still here for some reason. So are the mirrors, which doesn't go unnoticed by L4-O.

Eventually, though, he reaches the far end, and peeks inside.

Distribution Warehouse

The forkbot is still parked in here, with John-R at the controls. He seems to be running some checks on the bot's controls.

Lucas notices L4-O and waves at him.

written by Speeder on Jul 24, 2010 15:54

After neither Cryo or Scru do anything, I start to pull them both by the jumpsuits, toward the long way toward the forkbot.

written by 4616599 on Jul 24, 2010 16:10

Speed-O's sudden dragging breaks my daze.

"Help!" I yell and flail around, accidentally hitting Speed-O on the nose. I finally calm down and get myself loose. "Well, I'll try to follow you to your destination, but contact shouldn't be too obvious. I've got a feeling this Scru-R ruse may be very useful. Also use 'Joris-O-DNK' rather than 'Scru-R', particularly if there're commies around."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 24, 2010 17:33

I wave and enter.

"All is well so far. The rest will join us shortly."

Bored already, I begin sifting through the warehouse for anything interesting.

written by Jam on Jul 24, 2010 17:40

I yell up the stairs.

"Hello? I'm going to need some help getting the fuel drum up the stairs! Are you still there?"

I walk through the door and look for the fuel drums.

"It's a good thing Speed-O gave me such detailed directions, or I would have been searching for these for a long time..."

I try to find a full fuel drum.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 24, 2010 23:45

I try to ignore the despair of my loss of my spring, looking at the error code on the PDC.

"Hmm... 0xFE. What's that supposed to be? Hexadecimal?"

Well, at least it made the screen brighter. I notice the absence of Jam-R, and head through the red door to the north, pointing the PDC forwards.

written by Gligar on Jul 25, 2010 00:41

Corridor D2

Speed-O takes matters into his own hands and starts dragging "Scru-R" and Cryo-R back towards the forkbot. The box gets left behind.

Distribution Warehouse

While he's waiting, L4-O looks around for anything useful. He finds some more of those balloons, some more duct tape, and a bunch of sealed boxes.

Fuel Storage

As it happens, there are a few full drums here, still sealed.

Concourse B1

Mango-R enters on his way downstairs. A camera tracks him as he does. Followed by another. Clearly, you aren't cleared to know how the cameras are powered.

written by Jam on Jul 25, 2010 00:54

I tilt one of the full fuel drums over and start to roll it out the door.

I try not to hit Mango-R.

"Oh, there you are! Do you think you could help me carry this up the stairs?"

I try to push the drum up the stairs.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 25, 2010 00:56

"Sure."

I place my PDC back into my pocket, then assist Jam-R pushing the drum up the stairs.

written by Speeder on Jul 25, 2010 01:35

First I give a "ouch" when my nose is hit. Then I release the flailing Joris, and continue dragging Cryo.

"Sure... You are correct, go ahead while I... Drag this dude..."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 25, 2010 05:23

I fashion myself an awesome duct tape headband and put it on.

I forget that the sticky bits need to be covered up though. After yanking it off of my hair with some pain, I remake it without the sticky bits exposed, and put it back on again.

Feeling sufficiently awesome, I search through a few of the sealed boxes.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 25, 2010 12:18

Entranced by the tone of the bell, I initially don't notice Speed-O grab hold of me and begin dragging me down the hall. Then, I do.

"AAAH! Release me at once! I don't know who you people are, or what you want!

I throw the bell I was handling at Speed-O's face, and attempt to to break free from his grasp.

written by Kristos on Jul 25, 2010 13:45

At hearing Jam's yell, I wake up on the floor of the Generator Room. Perhaps exhaustion, perhaps the fume of the fuels, and perhaps pure hunger caused me to become temporarily unconscious. I dreamed of running around commanding orders to a team in another place. Only I didn't speak. I just commanded.

written by 4616599 on Jul 25, 2010 13:51

Assuming Cryo-R has abandoned the bell box, I pick it up, then follow Speed-O at a distance. I also give the former PTVF HQ a glance for any commie activity.

written by Gligar on Jul 25, 2010 15:54

Corridor A1

Mango-R dodges as Jam-R almost runs into him with a fuel drum, and then helps to take it upstairs. The cameras continue to track him.

Distribution Warehouse

While he's waiting, L4-O plays with some duct tape, making himself a headband. But he gets it stuck to his hair, making it painful to remove. He ends up pulling some of his hair out removing it and making a new one.

That done, he takes Fred and opens some boxes. He finds some first aid kits, a box of slightly-out-of-date VitaYum Meal Substitute Bars, and a box of TeaSir bags.

Corridor D2

Cryo-R seems to have snapped. First, he's deprived of his bells, now he's being dragged down the corridor? He assaults his superior, Speed-O, with the bell earning Treason Code FF/2, and one Treason Point and attempts to break free. But Speed-O keeps hold of him, dragging him to the north.

Joris-O (not "Scru-R" for now) lags behind a little and picks up the discarded bell box (and the box of bells). They might come in handy, Glancing at PVTF headquarters as he passes, he can see clones inside, apparently having come off their meal break.

Bunker stairwell

Jam-R and Mango-R take a break pushing the barrel. Not far before B Level now.

written by Jam on Jul 25, 2010 16:12

I rest a while.

"What did you say your name was again?" I ask Mango-R.

I wait for him to answer, then go back to pushing the barrel up the stairs.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 25, 2010 18:04

I quietly mention to Speed-O...

"We really shouldn't be seen together here, you know. I'm busy with top-secret reconnaissance work, and being spotted with you in public might compromise the mission. You don't want to compromise the mission, do you?"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 25, 2010 19:37

"Ooh. These will come in handy."

I grab a meal bar and start munching, then I grab one of the first aid kit boxes and see if there's anywhere I can put it on the forkbot.

If so, I place the box on the forkbot.

written by Kristos on Jul 25, 2010 21:20

I get up off the floor and help get the fuel into the room. Rather weak, I'm not sure how much my assistance accomplished.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 25, 2010 22:09

"Well, at least according to my ME card, the name is Mango-R."

I return to pushing the barrel up the stairs.

written by Speeder on Jul 25, 2010 22:40

I peer at him, in fact my left eye start to blink like a nervous tick.

"You... Have some issues, don't you?"

After some more time, now even STARING and frowning, I say.

"Ok, you return to Joris side... Know that we are hading off to V level."

Since they both want distance, I run away.

Ooops, after noticing that I run away still holding Cryo, I let him go, and attempt again to run toward the forkbot location, this time with the double barrel gun instead of Cryo in my hands.

Bunker stairwell

Jam-R and Mango-R continue pushing. They come to the exit and push the drum into Concourse B1, and through into Spare Parts Storage.

Kristos-R notices, and moves to help. He has that 'hungry' look on his face.

Distribution warehouse

L4-O looks at one of the first-aid kits, and notices a nice spot on the back of the forkbot that would look just mandatory with a first aid kit on it. And with the aid of some duct tape, he makes the adjustment.

Speed-O enters at a run, with his "slugthrower" at the ready. He seems to be... unhappy.

Corridor D2

A team of communists exits PVTF Headquarters. For a change, they're armed with laser pistols, and have that look about them. You know the one, it's that one that says "Troubleshooter". People's Volunteers?

written by Speeder on Jul 26, 2010 01:13

I smile happily as I see everyone ok here.

"Hello! I am back! Cryoscrub are coming later, because they don't want to blow their commie cover. We shall wait for them here, since they may attract commies, better mount a ambush..."

I look around for stuff that we can move and make covers that don't look like covers.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 26, 2010 01:39

"Right! We should hide the forkbot too, maybe make it not visible from the door or something."

I start grabbing boxes and stacking them between the forkbot and the door.

written by Jam on Jul 26, 2010 01:41

I continue rolling the fuel drum to the Generator Room.

When we get into the room, I run to the other side of the drum and make sure it isn't rolling too fast. I try to aim it so it stops close to the fuel tank of the generator. Then I tip the drum back upright.

written by Kristos on Jul 26, 2010 02:40

I help start rigging up the fuel drum in the generator room. I feel a tension so thick, you can't cut it with a knife.

"What are we going to do when we finish our job here? I feel... without a means of defense. Are there weapons somewhere around here?" I then notice an error screen on Mango's PDC, so I take it and quickly fix it without even noticing.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 26, 2010 08:30

"Hmm... that guy sure looked unhappy. Maybe he doesn't like bells."

I recover my thrown bell, and examine it more closely, including its underside.

"Now, what was it he wanted me to do? Meet up with... Boris, was it? Yes, Boris. I wonder if those fellows in that office might know where Boris can be found..."

I begin heading back down Corridor D2 toward the maintenance request office, encountering Scru-R along the way.

"Gasp! My bells! What are you doing with them?!"

Based on the size of the case, and that of the inner bell boxes, I determine the number of bells inside.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 26, 2010 10:54

I notice that the error is no longer there, but didn't notice Kristos-R even get anywhere near me.

I take a look at the now upright fuel drum, then ask Jam-R,

"Do you think we can use the piping or tubing to get the fuel into the generator?"

written by Gligar on Jul 26, 2010 15:48

L4-O and Speed-O both get to work moving boxes from the shelves to shield the forkbot from view.

John-R gets off the forkbot and helps.

Generator room

With the help of Kristos-R, the fuel drum is moved into position near the empty one.

Kristos-R somehow notices that Mango-R's PDC has an error, despite the fact that it's in his pocket. Is he a mutant with X-ray vision or something?

He then attempts to purloin the PDC and fix it.

Unfortunately, it turns out he's not very good at the former. As such, Mango-R notices a rather hefty tug on the pocket that contains his PDC.

Corridor D2

Cryo-R encounters Joris-O and estimates that he's carrying 30... well, 29... bells.

written by Kristos on Jul 26, 2010 16:26

I successfully obtain the PDC, though certainly not inconspicuously. I stare into the screen and fidget with it, and several seconds later the device has returned to normal functioning. I hand it back to Mango-R. I sense the same strange muscle movement on my face as before. Am I smiling again?¹⁴⁶

written by Speeder on Jul 26, 2010 17:37

After we finish our...

Work of abstract (or... concrete? No!!! Cardboard! Yes, cardboard!)

Art, I try to find some place where I can point my weapon toward the door without being too visible myself, and that I can hide behind while noone is in the door...

Then, I hide behind!

And hope that L4, Lucas and John do the same somehow.

"Oh, mr. Forkbot, btw your name now is Nukabot."¹⁴⁷

written by Jam on Jul 26, 2010 20:16

"Kristos-R? Why do you have Mango-R's PDC? What are you doing?"

I walk over and try to see what he is doing.

"Why are you pressing all those buttons? And why does the screen say '0xFE'? Very suspicious..."

I gasp as I suddenly realize what Kristo-R might be trying to do.

"You're not trying to program the PDC, are you? That is restricted to [DFSR] clearance!! I might have to report you..."

written by Lightning4 on Jul 26, 2010 20:16

Indeed, I join Speed behind our new cardboard shelter.

Not before admiring our handiwork, of course.

Feeling like a regular architect, I ready my laser pistol, so that I may defend our box-fort.

Spare Parts Storage

Looks like Kristos-R got Mango-R's PDC, but not without ruining the pocket of Mango-R's jumpsuit. (Then again, it's not like those jumpsuits doesn't have roughly a million other pockets.) And not without Jam-R noticing. He also notices Kristos-R pressing buttons on the PDC... almost as if he were acting treasonously...

The cameras in here are also active. They begin tracking Kristos-R as well as Mango-R.

¹⁴⁶ GLIGAR: (OOO: Kristos, I guess you're new at tabletop or play-by-post RPGs?)

What you're doing there is assuming that your action will succeed. Generally speaking, failure is always an option when it comes to skill rolls. As such, you should never assume that things will just work. If you want, though, you can spend perversity points to improve the chance that things do work successfully. You currently have 10 of them.)

¹⁴⁷ KRISTOS: (OOO: I am new at this. I told people I knew nothing about this and they said I'm not supposed to so I just launched out into the complete unknown. You'll have to kick me every now and then to keep me from doing it all wrong. 😊)

Distribution Warehouse

While all that was going on, it looks like Speed-O et al have finished building themselves a nice little box fort, much to Lucas' delight, as he used to do it all the time in the creche. He insists on finding a "No Commies Allowed" sign, though... it just wouldn't feel right otherwise.

But besides that little detail, weapons are drawn and places taken. Any commies walking through that door will be in for a shock. Or maybe a zap.

As to its name, the forkbot responds, "Suits me. Nukabot it is, then."

written by Speeder on Jul 27, 2010 00:40

"Ok, Nukabot, L4, John and Lucas, prepare for fighting, but please John and Lucas, don't attack unless we ask, you may not know if the incoming commies are our double agents."

Then I wait for Cryoscrub and whatever commies may follow them.

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 27, 2010 03:22

"Huh? Report? This is hardly the time to be reporting. I mean, we should get the power working again at least."

I feel around the room, looking for a pump to get the fuel into the generator.

written by Jam on Jul 27, 2010 04:11

I look up as I hear the faint but unmistakable sound of camera motors whirring. I panic, suddenly realizing that the comment I made may have put Kristos-R in danger. I say, a bit louder than normal.

"Huh? What's that you say, Kristos-R? Oh, you were just showing Mango-R how to play that new PDC game, Commie Killer! So that's what all the button presses were! That's very helpful and NOT AT ALL SUSPICIOUS OR TREASONOUS! And the "FE" I saw must have been part of a name or something! Of course you aren't trying to program the PDC, BECAUSE THAT'S TREASONOUS AND YOU WOULDN'T DO SOMETHING TREASONOUS! Oh Mango-R, let me play!"

I try to take Mango-R's PDC. I shield the screen from any watching cameras, and pretend that I am playing a very exciting game.

"Die, Commies, Die!! Oh, this game is FUN! I'm having so much FUN right now playing Commie Killer! Oh look, it's a evil Commie boss! What's his name? Hexadec-I-mal? What a strange name for a Commie to have! I've have no idea what a Hexa-something-or-other is! Do you know what this hexa-something is? I DIDN'T THINK SO!! Of course we wouldn't know what a hexa-something is! WE JUST ARE HAVING SOME FUN, THAT'S ALL!!"

I return the PDC to Mango-R, making sure to keep the screen hidden.

written by 4616599 on Jul 27, 2010 11:06

I suddenly snap out of my daze again, with Cryo-R's advances startling me. "Oh...I had the strangest dream about a treasonous Chrome crashing on me, and preventing me from posting my next actions, though I finally managed to get help from a familiar, but sluggish clone called Fi-R-FOX. How odd."

I then note the laser-toting commies trundling out. "Greetings comrades! You sure workk very good, eh? Am going for my checks and work shiff soon, just had a strange experience, but can I be of assistance?"

written by Speeder on Jul 27, 2010 12:04

I wait, thinking of more names...

Wait... I was not only CloneServ, maybe I was... JUNIORCloneServ? Oh no... I must invented all of those ridiculous names...

written by Cryoburner on Jul 27, 2010 12:42

I examine my bell even more closely, assuming I actually picked it up, and examine its underside even closer. Then closer.

I then continue with Scru-R...

"There must be 100 bells in that box! I suppose I don't need quite that many. How about you just hand 25 of them over to me, and I'll let you keep the rest. I'll even throw in a shiny pen."

I pull out a black "Secondary Sector Logistics" pen, and offer it to Scru-R.

written by Gligar on Jul 27, 2010 15:27

Distribution Warehouse

The tension in the box fort increases. The word 'knife' comes to mind.

For a minute, nothing happens.

Then, the warehouse door opens.

Generator room

Mango-R looks/feels around the room but can't seem to find a pup to put fuel into the tank.

Jam-R plays with Mango-R's PDC for a while before handing it back.

...Is that a bead of sweat on his brow?

Corridor D2

Cryo-R once again becomes entranced with his shiny shiny shiny Ring For Service Bell. In fact, in his zeal to inspect it to the finest detail, he goes a little too far and clonks himself on the head with it, causing it to go 'ding', and him to pass out.

Obviously, he's unable to offer Joris-O a pen under those conditions.

As for the People's Volunteers, they're looking on in amusement. One of them says, "We are investigating the strange disappearance of clones from the PVTF headquarters, do you know of anything that happened?"

written by Speeder on Jul 27, 2010 16:09

I try to peek without being seen, who opened the door.

written by Jam on Jul 27, 2010 20:12

"Okay, we need to pour the fuel into the tank. Here, we can use this tube."

I detach the tube from the empty fuel barrel and try to attach it to the full fuel barrel. If there is a cap on the fuel barrel, I attempt to use my hammer and spanners to loosen it.

written by Cryoburner on Jul 27, 2010 21:00

I dream of offering Joris-O a pen.

I then attempt to wake up and recover my bell, if it happened to get dropped again.

written by Kristos on Jul 27, 2010 22:03

"Jam, are you crazy? I was just..." and then I realize I must have done something forbidden. "I was just... almost to the... boss!" I assist Jam in transferring the fuel best as I can.

written by Gligar on Jul 28, 2010 01:19

Distribution Warehouse

Peeking through a crack in the box fort, Speed-O notices a face peeking round the door.

The owner enters the room, followed by several more clones.

They're armed with slugthrowers and, bizarrely, fuzzy hats. But now you come to think of it, it's not bizarre at all, given recent events.

Lucas suppresses a gasp.

Generator room

After he speaks to Kristos-R, Jam-R works at moving the tube-and-wire setup from the empty drum to the full one. The wire is weakened a bit, but he's able to do so, after removing the new drum's cap.

Kristos-R then prepares to help Jam-R transfer the fuel. And with no pump in evidence, it looks like there's only one way...

Corridor D2

The unconscious Cryo-R remains unconscious. But he seems to be dreaming about something.

written by Speeder on Jul 28, 2010 01:25

I attempt to count the clones, then point the number and position for the others in the covers using only silent signals...

You know, how law enforcement people are supposed to do... (troubleshooters are law enforcement... right? In fact, although troubleshooters are usually less in colour rank than IntSec, they are...

THE GLORIOUS SPECIAL FORCES!!!!

OOOOOOH!!!!!!!

* those TV "oooh" sounds *

Then I wait for them to get closer.

written by Jam on Jul 28, 2010 01:33

I try to talk to the unnamed clone.

"Could you watch this hose for us and make sure it doesn't slip? Thank you!"

I turn to Mango-R and Kristos-R.

"Ok, we're need to lift the barrel into the air and tip it so the fuel can run into the tank."

I grab the barrel, and wait for the others to prepare themselves.

"Ready? One, two, three, lllllift!"

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 28, 2010 03:19

I grab the base of the barrel, and try to tip the fuel in.

"Ugh... this is really, really heavy..."

written by 4616599 on Jul 28, 2010 06:28

"Excuse my comrade here. He's in a related subcell of the People's Glorious Distribution Management Details Inspection Subdivision IIRC. Gosh, all that bureaucracy...almost like the Friend Computer days again. But I digress. He was acting up strangely and knocked himself unconscious with this treasonous bell. I figure Intsec might be using brain-altering weapons. Anyway... the clones...you might remember the food hall situation...dissidents perhaps? Or I saw a couple clones in the dark room near Revolutionary Square- perhaps they're hiding there?"

written by Lightning4 on Jul 28, 2010 07:31

I remain hidden, and since my back is turned, I'm most likely oblivious to Speed's attempts at communication.

written by Kristos on Jul 28, 2010 15:59

I grab the barrel as well, but suggest, "Wouldn't it be easier to just siphon the fuel? Look, I'll show you how it's done!"

written by Gligar on Jul 28, 2010 16:31¹⁴⁸

Distribution warehouse

Speed-O counts four communists entering. There looks to be at least three more outside.

He communicates this to the others. L4-O doesn't seem to notice.

Generator room

The unnamed clone nods, and watches the hose. It's almost like Cryo-R was here. Only this time, the hose stays in place as the drum is tilted and lifted, sending fuel into the tank. The drum is heavy. What did you expect?

Apparently, Kristos-R thinks that siphoning the fuel would be easier.

Corridor D2

"It's possible," one admits. "There was a group of comrades who went to investigate that section, but they did not return. Perhaps they are the ones we'er looking for."

Cryo-R remains unconscious. His dream turns to bells.

written by Speeder on Jul 28, 2010 20:03

I wait for the commies to look away, and then signal the others to shoot and start shooting. The more threatening looking ones first.

Go LASER RIFLE!!!

written by Lightning4 on Jul 28, 2010 20:08

If Speed starts shooting, I finally take notice and join in with my laser pistol. I shoot at whoever has the highest clearance weapon, threatening or no.

written by Jam on Jul 28, 2010 21:52¹⁴⁹

I continue holding the fuel drum in the air.

"Ok, we could try siphoning the fuel. But wouldn't we need to lift the barrel anyways?"

I try to look and see how high the tank would be compared to the barrel if we set it down.

written by Gligar on Jul 29, 2010 00:36

Distribution Warehouse

The communists look at the fort, slightly suspiciously, before turning their attention to the warehouse proper.

They don't get a chance to do anything about it because Speed-O fires!

¹⁴⁸ GLIGAR: (OOO: Okay, sorry for the delay. I'm building a contingency for if/when $ISP decides to [redacted] up again. Really, all they want is money money money... well, when the time comes they can have somebody else's. Or preferably nobody's.)

¹⁴⁹ JAM: (Just curious, do clones usually include the clearance letter when they refer to each other casually? Or is it more of a formal name?)

He hits a clone with a particularly vicious-looking slugthrower. His kevlar body armour doesn't stop the laser, which hits him clean in the groin, dropping him!

The noise causes L4-O to turn and also fire. However, he misses and hits the door instead.

Lucas seems a little afraid that he's jumping the gun, but hey, commies! Unfortunately, his shot goes wide.

John-R concentrates. A second communist falls to the floor, this one clutching his head like it's about to explode.

Generator room

The refuelling continues. It seems that the drum is significantly lighter than before.

Jam-R ponders setting the drum down for siphoning. He notes that the fuel tank is about one and a half times as tall as the drum, or slightly larger, and bigger around.

written by Speeder on Jul 29, 2010 01:11

I aim for the next one in threat level... Obviously, not the ones already hit, since they are not so threatening right now.

Then I happily shoot.

written by Kristos on Jul 29, 2010 03:32

I continue to help Jam hold the barrel up. But my thoughts wander. Is that gunfire I distantly here? What a familiar sound.

written by Jam on Jul 29, 2010 03:44

"Oh good! It seems lighter that before, doesn't it? We're almost done!"

I continue holding the barrel up.

"Hmm... That's strange... I thought the generator would start up again now that there's fuel in the tank... Maybe there's some kind of switch we need to press?"

written by Cryoburner on Jul 29, 2010 13:16

"Wow! Bells!"

I take a dream bell, and examine it carefully, particularly its underside.

written by Gligar on Jul 29, 2010 15:39¹⁵⁰

Distribution Warehouse

Speed-O goes right on shooting.

But not before the communists get a few shots in.

The remaining communists in the room shoot! They end up hitting boxes, knocking them out of line.

¹⁵⁰ GLIGAR: (OOO: Guess what's happened, folks... that's right, $ISP have failed me. As such my main equipment is offline until they go away. This means that I don't have my main map available right now, so please bear with me.)

The first communist from the corridor enters and also shoots... showing the same marksclonship skills as her comrades.

Speed-O finally gets in a shot. It's a good shot, nailing the entering communist in the chest. She drops to one knee, clutching the wound.

Lucas tries another shot... and I'm not sure if that's a lucky shot or he was aiming at another communist, but the shot ends up going out of the door to hit the communist at the back end of those in the corridor...

John-R seems to be concentrating, but nothing seems to happen. He shrugs and checks his laser pistol. It's still okay.

Generator room

In the distance, the sounds of combat can be faintly heard - slugthrowers can be loud. Kristos-R picks up on it, and pauses for a moment.

In a moment, though, the drum seems to empty completely. Now, why didn't the generators turn on...?

Corridor D2

The People's Volunteers prepare to move out. "Thanks for your help, comrade," the apparent leader says.

Cryo-R is still out cold. In his dream, he examines a bell and finds it to be quite exquisite. Almost... ULTRAVIOLET in quality. The underside seems to confirm this, being rather white.

written by Speeder on Jul 29, 2010 15:44

I look puzzled as the hardest commie to hit is hit by Lucas. "That was intentional?"

Anywya, I shoot the next one that deserves being shot.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 29, 2010 18:48

Snapping out of a momentary daydream, I continue firing as well.

written by Jam on Jul 29, 2010 18:59

I set down the barrel and search around the generator for a switch or button to press that might turn it on.

"There must be a switch somewhere that turns the generator on..." I tell the others, "Let's try to find it!"

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 29, 2010 20:18

"Ah, right."

I set down the barrel, and decides to search the entire room, should the generator itself not have a switch.

I push any button and pull any switch I can find.

Speed-O fires once again, as does L4-O... just as the two remaining in the room fire.

A slug hits Lucas in the forehead. He looks puzzled for a moment, then collapses.

The second slug hits the forkbot. As you may remember, it has kevlar plating, and is undamaged. But it's now been angered. It begins powering itself up. "Do... not... shoot... me." it intones in a low mechanical voice.

At the same time, one laser shot hits a communist. Sadly, not the one who shot Lucas, or the one who shot the bot, but the remaining communist in the corridor. What is it with lucky shots?

John-R also shoots, but seems to be having difficulties with his laser pistol. Even though he checked it,

Generator room

The tank refuelled, the clones search for a means to turn on the generators. Jam-R isn't successful, and neither is Mango-R. Kristos-R, on the other hand, is more successful. He finds a group of buttons on the power distribution unit, and presses them.

Everyone in the room is startled by a sudden din from the generators.

In his shock, Kristos-R lets go of the buttons and the din settles down into a low roar.

Around the bunker, lights come on, dimly at first. Messages appear on Computer terminals... something about a startup sequence.

written by Jam on Jul 30, 2010 00:56

"Ah! You got the power working! Hooray!"

I look at Mango-R and Kristos-R.

"Kristos-R, you look really hungry... Let's all go get some food! Here, I'll show you where it is..."

I walk up the ladder to C Level, then walk through the door to Corridor C1. I wait there for the others.

written by Kristos on Jul 30, 2010 01:47

The live computer screens capture my attention. But what Jam-R said echos through my mind and I remember my hunger. I break from the screens and follow Jam-R. Remembering the gunshots heard earlier, I perhaps pick up anything weapon-like I happen to see laying around.

written by Speeder on Jul 30, 2010 02:39

Wondering that probably the forkbot will kill the remaining communist inside, I try to kill more of the outside one (and hope the bot will not run itself on the doors trying to get them)

written by Lightning4 on Jul 30, 2010 02:42

Noticing Lucas collapse, I gasp and get distracted.

Assuming I manage to snap out of my distraction, I shoot at the communist who shot him. ANGRILY.

written by 4616599 on Jul 30, 2010 12:18

I begin to note the distant laser shots. Looking at the unconscious Cryo-R, I attempt to rouse him, ringing his bell quite vigorously.

written by Gligar on Jul 30, 2010 15:15

Corridor C1

After walking up the ladder (how does one walk up a ladder? ☹️) Jam-R leaves Maintenance. Kristos-R and the nameless clone are not far behind. He starts walking down the corridor.

Around them, clones are beginning exploration of the bunker in earnest. (Why they couldn't have done it earlier when power wasn't an issue is beyond me.) It seems that they've found the cache of weapons in the RED dormitory.

Soon, the three reach the end of the corridor, where the food storage room is located. It looks like the scrubot has been through here and has cleaned up some of the burnt/melted stuff from earlier.

Distribution warehouse

There's a lot of shooting going on in there... let me see if I can sort it out...

Speed-O focuses on the communists outside the room, hitting one in the arm, causing her to drop her weapon.

That leaves one communist outside, who turns to flee.

L4-O shoots the not-a-Junior-Citizen-any-more shooter, hitting right in the head, causing it to explode into blood and brain matter!

Right as the forkbot strikes. It knocks the falling corpse to the ground, and rams the final communist into the wall, sending one of its forks right through the communist's neck!

Corridor C2

Meanwhile, Joris-O tries to wake Cryo-R, even going as far as taking hold of the bell and ringing it close to Cryo-R's ears.

The incessant ringing makes its way into Cryo-R's dreams...

written by Jam on Jul 30, 2010 16:03

I run back to the clones that found the weapons in the RED dormitory.

"Hey! Give us those weapons! We need them! We're troubleshooters, remember? We can't shoot trouble without weapons!"

I try to take three of the laser pistols and three spare barrels. I put the rest of the weapons back in the locker nearest the south door.

"Now, don't touch them unless you're planning on leaving the bunker to help stop the commies! Ok?"

written by Speeder on Jul 30, 2010 18:09

I put the rifle back and then run to Lucas.

"Lucas!!!"

I check to see if he is dead.

"I hope that if he died, he will be clone in the bunker, and not in commie territory..."

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 30, 2010 23:38

I notice that Jam-R has left, so I quickly climb up the ladder and run into the corridor.

"Hello? Anyone there?" Feeling that there isn't going to be an answer, I head further down the corridor.

Dormitory 1

As it turns out, the clones hadn't got round to distributing the weapons yet. As such, it's easy for Jam-R to get hold of some from the cache. One of them does have a counter-argument, though: "We might be troubleshooters, but what about the chance that trouble comes to us? It might be a strange concept, but... well, it's kind of a possibility..."

Distribution warehouse

The fighting done, Speed-O checks upon Lucas. He... doesn't seem to respond to anything.

Corridor C1

Mango-R walks through the corridor, and passes a few clones going places. He eventually meets up with Kristos-R near the food storage room.

Cloning station

Various indicators light up on a cloning tank. Some text appears on the terminal, but there's no-one here to read it.

The terminal begins to beep. Not long after that, other terminals in the bunker follow suit, and display another message.

written by Lightning4 on Jul 31, 2010 00:53

I walk up and join Speed.

I check Lucas' pulse. Assuming I know how to do that. Otherwise, I just shout his name a couple times hoping he'll respond.

written by Jam on Jul 31, 2010 01:19

"Speed-O said there were two places commies could enter from. That hole in the ceiling at Concourse C1, and the Loading Dock at A level. I suggest you concentrate your defenses there. Doesn't the bunker have turret defenses or something? Maybe you could figure out how to activate them... But you're right, if commies invade the bunker, you should definitely use any weapons you can find against them. Just make sure anyone who leaves the bunker isn't leaving unarmed, or he won't last very long..."

[137]

I continue walking down Corridor C1 toward Food Storage.

As I walk by the Cloning Station, if I happen to notice any strange beeping or other noises coming from the room, I go inside and investigate.

Otherwise, I continue walking.

Distribution warehouse

L4-O tries to think of a way to get a response from Lucas, and ends up just shouting his name a few times. Sadly, it doesn't work.

Corridor C1

Now walking down the corridor, Jam-R is talking security arrangements with one of the bunker's clones when he hears the beeping from the cloning station.

Cloning station

Investigating, he notices the lights on the cloning tank. The Computer terminal is beeping to attract attention to the message:

"Hmm... AHK? Isn't that the sector that Lucas is from?"

I type "Y" into the terminal and press enter (or it's equivalent). I enter my name if I need to.

Then I peer into the cloning tank and try to see who is forming.

written by Speeder on Jul 31, 2010 19:53

I sigh.

"HEL-sector, he is really dead."

I then go check if the commies have any interesting stuff, not only equipment but also notes, maps, etc...

written by Lightning4 on Jul 31, 2010 20:06

I shrug. "Well, vatcrap..."

"Hope Jam and Cryoscrub are still okay."

I join Speed in looting the commies.

While doing that, I look at Nukabot, part in praise, part attempting to survey any damage that could have occurred during impact.

"Well done, Nukabot. Impressive attack!"

written by Mingamango181 on Jul 31, 2010 23:35

"I don't suppose that you know what happened to Jam-R. Well, I should probably take a look around, considering that I haven't had the chance."

I turn back, and walk down the corridor, examining every object I see, and listening for voices.

written by Gligar on Aug 01, 2010 00:39

Cloning station

Jam-R presses Y.

The terminal does ask for his name, so he enters it.

The terminal clears its screen and shows

AUTHORISATION ACCEPTED - CLONING IN PROGRESS

BEGINNING PHASE 1

The pattern of lights on the active clone tank changes, and an indistinct shape begins to form. It's not possible at this stage to tell who it is.

Corridor C1

Mango-R walks down the corridor, seemingly channelling the still-unconscious Cryo-R as he examines the light fixtures (an old type, no longer in general use), and the clearance stripe (the paint is peeling). As he passes the cloning station, he hears the sound of an active cloning tank.

Distribution warehouse

Speed-O decides to check the communists over. L4-O joins him. They find the usual slugthrowers and ammunition. Hey look, one of them had a can of B3. And another had a cone rifle shell.

As they search, Nukabot says, "Why, thank you. It's amazing what forks can do." Nukabot backs up slightly, allowing the dead communist to fall to the floor.

It seems that all of them were carrying Com 1 units.

Suddenly, a voice is heard from an air duct near the ceiling. "Citizens! Report!"

written by Jam on Aug 01, 2010 02:08

I hear someone outside the door, and turn around just in time to see Mango-R walk by.

"Oh! Mango-R! There you are! Sorry I left so suddenly. But I have good news! I found some laser pistols! Here, take one."

I offer a laser pistol to Mango-R.

"A clone is forming in that tank over there. I was curious to see who it was. It's from the same sector as another clone I know, Lucas."

I continue staring into the tank.

"If you're hungry, there's some food at the end of the corridor. I'm going to stay here and watch this tank... If you do go, could you tell Kristos-R where I am?"

written by Speeder on Aug 01, 2010 02:21

I get startled and point my rifle at the ceiling.

"Who are you? I won't report without knowing that you are a commie or not."

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 01, 2010 03:49

"Really? Great!" I take the laser pistol offered by Jam-R. I look at it, then slide it into one of my pockets. "Sure, considering that Kristos-R isn't exactly in the combat ready mood. You can tell me more about Lucas later. See you later, and keep an eye out."

I head back to Kristos-R. "Well, Jam-R's watching someone in the cloning station. You want to get something to eat, right?" I open the door to the food hall, and look inside.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 01, 2010 11:40

I suddenly stand to attention, but then get confused upon Speed's reaction.

"He... hello? Mr. Friend?"

written by Gligar on Aug 01, 2010 12:30

Cloning station

The clone continues to form. The shape changes to be vaguely humanoid.

Mango-R looks over the laser pistol briefly, noting its RED barrel which seems to be unused, and returns to the corridor.

Corridor C1

He returns to where Kristos-R is waiting, and opens the door to Food Storage. Apparently, at some point, the lock had been bypassed. Making things easy.

Looks like the scrubot's been here too. But even a scrubot cannot clean up all evidence of the fire that obviously took place in here recently, notably the laser turret that now refuses to retract properly. It's a good thing it didn't consume all of the food supplies, among which are individual packs of Soylent RED and ORANGE, and regular Hot Fun. A microwave oven also resides here, since, well, Hot Fun is called that for a reason.

Distribution Warehouse

"Have you forgotten my voice already? You've heard it several times before, after all. I, of course, remember you. And your brevets," the voice replies.

Now Speed-O thinks of it, the voice is familiar... maybe the duct is distorting it.

written by 4616599 on Aug 01, 2010 14:03

I continue with my attempts to rouse Cryo-R, this time smearing my packet of Cold Fun on him.

written by Jam on Aug 01, 2010 15:02

Slightly bored (but still happy), I look around the room.

If I find a set of reflec, I put it on.

If I find some towels, I take three of them.

And, if I happen to find a Multicorder, I attempt to make it play any previous recordings. (I'm assuming it's like a recorder)

Then I wander back to the cloning tank and continue staring inside.

written by Speeder on Aug 01, 2010 16:25

I stand down the rifle.

"Oh, only you know about the brevets."

I turn to L4.

"No, it is not The Friend, it is the commander of the mission. I only wonder what the HEL he is doing inside a ventilation shaft."

I then finally report.

"A clone named John-R showed-up to us, and told we had a problem with commies taking over the camera system, indeed we had, we moved to the camera control level, and I locked out the camera system, only high-clearance people can watch the cameras now."

I take my breath.

"Also, we have two spies infiltrated in the commies, one of them exploded the old HQ when he saw the commies turning it into their lair of evil."

Then I say, trying to figure if he can see us or not, so I can point while I talk... In the end I end pointing anyway.

"These are Nukabot, that we retrieved from the A level garage and modified, John-R, that can melt people heads and told us about the cameras, and Lucas-IR, that Jam found to be good as troubleshooter and is tagging along, unfortunately he just got shot, probably he is being decanted right now, I only hope that on our cloning station, instead of the one in commie territory"

written by Cryoburner on Aug 01, 2010 18:45

I attempt to eat the cold fun.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 01, 2010 20:50

"I made a cool duct tape headband!" I add.

"I... remember something about a comnode on V level, I'm sure you still want us to do that... unless you have a new objective for us?"

written by Gligar on Aug 02, 2010 00:31

Corridor D2

Seemingly out of options, Joris-O tries the old standby: food. Everyone likes Cold Fun, right?

Cryo-R obviously does. So much so that it pulls him out of unconsciousness, whereupon he attempts to eat it. Delicious.

Of course, it probably would have helped if it weren't all over his jumpsuit.

Cloning station

Jam-R looks away from the still-forming clone. It's more distinct now, and seems to resemble a certain INFRARED. But I guess we'll know more soon.

He finds the cache of equipment left here earlier, including the reflec, towels, and the multicorder. He dons a set of reflec, takes three of the towels, and tries to figure out the multicorder. He's able to get it to list its directory. Unfortunately, it's blank.

Distribution warehouse

After a moment, the voice speaks again.

"I am pleased that John-R reached you in time. I am informed that there were... complications getting him here." John-R suppresses a wince. "But no matter. The securing of the cameras has been a major coup for allied forces. And speaking of which, Armed Forces is planning a contingency. In ninety-six hourcycles, if the compnode has not reconnected to The Computer, the sector will be nuked. Make sure you succeed. Get to V Level before then."

Noises in the corridor cut the voice off. "We'll continue this later. For now, get to the Armed Forces barracks on H Level. Bring as many as you can with you."

written by Speeder on Aug 02, 2010 00:43

"Yes... Commander? Sir? Captain? Whatever..."

I turn to L4.

"So..."

I hear the noise in the corridor, again I quickly point my rifle there and go check.

written by Jam on Aug 02, 2010 02:58

I look nervously toward the clone tank.

"That almost looks like Lucas... But that would mean... This is bad. I need to get back to the others!"

I run as fast as I can to Food Storage. I burst through the door.

"Mango-R! Kristos-R! We need to leave as soon as possible! The troubleshooting team I'm with has been attacked! Quick, grab some food. I'll meet you at Concourse C1, the one with the hole in the ceiling."

I quickly take three packets of Soylent RED and run back out the door and down the corridor. I quickly look inside the cloning station and check on the clone.

Then I run to the room across the hall, intending to search it for weapons. Noticing it's a Medical Bay, I ask the docbot there if it could give me any supplies, like pills or first aid kits or surgical tools. Then I ask it if it could give me a crash course in treating battle wounds (I seem to have had medical training before I was brainscrubbed, maybe this will trigger some memories).

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 02, 2010 03:18

I snatch two packets of Soylent RED, and some regular Hot Fun, and turn to leave. "Come on Kristos-R!" I grab his arm and drag him off if he doesn't respond. I leave the Food Storage, and hurry down the hall, laser pistol drawn in my right hand.

written by 4616599 on Aug 02, 2010 08:22

"Okay, citizen, we have to go...there might be people nearby who might destroy your bells! And speaking of your bells, here. They might come in handy." I give Cryo-R the bell box-containing box and keep 3 for myself. "There was shooting and banging coming from somewhere north; it'd probably be useful to have a look."

I then sniff the Cold Fun on Cryo-R's jumpsuit, and then attempt to scoop some up with my kevlar shield. Subsequently I turn on the Com 1 and scan the frequencies, checking for any commie activity.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 02, 2010 11:51

"N... nuked? That's no good. That's no good at all."

"So um... yeah. Let's go. Fast."

I dart over to the freight lift and search it for an H level button, to see if we can take friend Nukabot with us when we get everyone together.

written by Kristos on Aug 02, 2010 12:07

I snap out of my daze and snatch a bunch of Soylent and run after Mango. "Find any spare weapons?" As I'm running, I attempt to eat some.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 02, 2010 12:36

"Well, I didn't. But I think Jam-R might have some spare laser pistols. He only handed one to me. I myself didn't find any weapons, though. He said he'd meet us at Concourse C1, which I suppose is where we should go."

I slow down, and settle into a brisk walk, still keeping my laser pistol ready.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 02, 2010 12:57

"Shooting to the north!? They must be after my bells! They are to be protected at all costs! Therefore, we must head southward!"

"First, I have a bit of business to attend to though..."

After accepting the return of my box of bells, minus a few that I can only assume wandered off at some point, I open the door to the maintenance request office and peer inside.

written by Gligar on Aug 02, 2010 15:31

Corridor D4

Peering out of the door, Speed-O sees another communist. This ones on his own, and is inspecting the jackobot.

Distribution warehouse

Meanwhile, L4-O darts into the freight lift...

...which isn't there. He ends up falling down the open shaft for about a level before falling onto the roof of the lift, breaking a leg.

Oddly, the lift is ascending.

Cloning station

Meanwhile, the clone finishes forming. It's now clearly Lucas-AHK.

But Jam-R has already left.

Unnoticed, the terminal displays more text, as memories are pumped into the new clone, it is scanned for mutations, and so on.

Food Storage

Jam-R arrives at a run and grabs some food, before running off again. He's followed by Mango-R and Kristos-R, the latter stuffing some Soylent RED into his mouth as he runs.

Medical bay

Wasn't the side door locked before? No matter. Jam-R enters and asks for supplies. The docbot replies, "Unfortunately, I don't have anything I could give you. I need to keep the medical bay at a minimum level."

Corridor C2

Joris-O gives Cryo-R most of the bells back. He tries to get some of the Cold Fun back, but is unable to do so. Finally, he turns on the Com 1. A scan doesn't reveal anything enli - wait... it seems there's a team heading for the distribution warehouse via the cargo lift...

Oblivious, Cryo-R peeks into the maintenance office again.

The communists inside seem to have intensified their fight for supplies. One of the communists has even lost his life to this internal battle. When Cryo-R looks in, something big is inadvertently thrown at his head.

written by Speeder on Aug 02, 2010 19:17

I prepare to interrogate the commie, until L4 decides to suddenly dive into the elevator shaft...

This make me only shoot the commie while it examines the "bot"¹⁵¹, and as I notice the lift machinery is moving I get to the forkbot for cover.

"John, the lift is moving, probably they are heading here after the commie we allowed to escape warned them about us, prepare for a nasty battle."

I sit inside the forkbot and aim outside.

"I noticed that you can drive yourself, I want you to ram everyone inside the lift, unless L4 somehow ended being inside the lift too."

¹⁵¹ SPEEDER: (OOC: I edited here, because I realized that I wrote wrongly the type of the bot, and I have no idea how to write correctly...)

I shake my head.

"Just when the cone rifle would be useful..."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 02, 2010 20:53

"YEEEEEEEEEOOW!"

I flail a little in pain, but attempt to regain my senses and see if there is anything else on the lift with me.

written by Jam on Aug 02, 2010 21:26

"Oh, that's too bad... Well, thank you anyway... Goodbye."

I go back to the cloning station. I gasp when I see Lucas floating in the cloning tank. Noticing the terminal doing something, I walk closer and start to read it.

If Lucas finishes cloning, I greet him, then escort him through the north door, where I'm assuming the chemical showers are. I try to start the showers. (If the showers don't work, I ignore them)

I check his pulse and breathing, and I question him on various things to make sure his mind is alright.

"What is your name? Who is your best friend? What color jumpsuit am I wearing? How many fingers am I holding up? What is my name? Do you like B3? What does a docbot do? Do you like communists? What is this called? How about this? And this?"

After that, I wait for the showers to finish (if they even started), then try to direct him to any forms that need filling out.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 02, 2010 21:53

I duck to avoid the incoming object. While I do like objects and all, I decide that this might not be the best place for another object-induced nap.

"Hello there again! I have returned with supplies!"

Still standing in the doorway, I pull out a single boxed bell and slide it across the floor toward the group of clones.

I then notice the one who's just laying there...

"Hmm... Does he need some medical attention? I've heard that laying around and not breathing can be hazardous to one's health. He might want to get that looked into."

written by Kristos on Aug 02, 2010 23:47

As Jam rushes all over the place, I stand in place, eat, and think of perhaps high clearance things. I don't know what they are really. I forget about my request for a weapon.

written by Gligar on Aug 03, 2010 00:48

Distribution warehouse

Zap! A nice shot! The communist outside falls dead instantly.

After that, Speed-O goes to occupy Nukabot's operator's chair, vacating John-R from that position.

Nukabot listens to what Speed-O has to say. "You know," it answers, "I never tire of seeing fragile skulls split open when they meet my forks..."

Lift shaft, on top of the cargo lift

L4-O looks around to see what else is here. Apart from the lift mechanisms, not much... just a hatch leading into the lift itself.

The hatch begins to move as the lift continues to ascend. C Level is just above now.

L4-O realises that someone is watching him.

Cloning station

Wow, the cloning is taking a while.

But finally, it finishes. Lucas-AHK-2 drops from the tank, still slimy from the tank goo, and shivers a little, seemingly disoriented.

But then he looks around and notices that he's in a cloning station, and finds his voice. "So that's what it feels like. Weird." He notices Jam-R. "Hi, Jam-R!" He lets himself be escorted to the chemical showers.

Chemical showers

Actually, it's just one room with no cubicles - basically, a communal chemical shower. There are a number of oxygen masks and one large RED "START" button, which, when pressed, would probably flood the room with chemicals.

Lucas dons a mask and waits.

He might have problems hearing any questions with it on, and the showers working. So Jam-R just asks him his questions now. "Lucas-AHK... er, 2, The Computer, RED, three, Jam-R, it's mandatory, it heals you when it wants to, HEL no... can I just get this over with now?"

Maintenance request office

The communists show no sign of having seen Cryo-R, but one of them dives for the box.

written by Speeder on Aug 03, 2010 01:20

"John-R do you mind in hopping behind the forkbot? We will rush at the elevator shooting at those inside... I only hope we don't destroy this elevator too...."

written by Jam on Aug 03, 2010 01:38

Yes, of course! But try to hurry, we need to get back to the others as fast as we can!"

I close the door to the chemical shower and press the "START" button.

While I'm waiting, I try to gather any forms Lucas will need to fill out.¹⁵²

written by Lightning4 on Aug 03, 2010 03:11

I look at whoever is in the lift and hope he doesn't shoot. If he does, I roll about and try my best not to get hit.

I also attempt to roll off the lift roof as soon as it reaches the C level, and if the pain isn't too bad, crawl away from the action.

¹⁵² KRISTOS: (ooc: note my post above, right before the update.)

written by 4616599 on Aug 03, 2010 11:54

I note Cryo-R going into the maintenance request office. "You're supposed to-" I then hear the chaos inside "...never mind, I suppose that can wait a bit."

I then glance down Corridor D1, checking for any signs of the commie patrol around the dark office.

written by Gligar on Aug 03, 2010 15:47

Distribution warehouse

"That could work," John-R replies, and does so.

L4-O rises from the lift shaft. He seems to be staring down a clone sticking out of a hatch on the top of the lift.

He notices that he's back at C Level and rolls into the warehouse, trying to get away from the action.

The lift continues to ascend. The clone sticking out of the hatch drops into the lift proper, which stops at C Level.

To be met by an accelerating Nukabot. Two communists are pinned against the wall of the lift, which shakes on impact. The other three ready their weapons.

Er, the other two ready their weapons... the third seems to have come down with Sudden Exploding Head Syndrome. He should really visit a docbot, they can do marvellous things these daycycles.

Chemical Showers

Jam-R starts up the chemical showers.

Neglecting to notice that, since the button is also in the showers, he's right in the middle of it.

There's a click as the door locks.

Then, there's a deluge of tank goo cleaning chemicals, from sprayers in the floor. In the ceiling. In the walls. Everywhere.

Corridor C1

Oblivious to this, Kristos-R continues eating, lost in thought. I have a nasty suspicion he'll need another brainscrub soon. Perhaps Setting 6 this time...

Corridor D2

As he waits for Cryo-R, Joris-O idly looks towards the dark office on D1, and notes that the patrol seems to have entered the office. Looking closer, he can see a thin mist exude from the open door.

written by Speeder on Aug 03, 2010 17:18

I shoot whatever commie John is not shooting... unless John does not shoot before me, then I shoot the easiest one to hit.

written by Jam on Aug 03, 2010 19:38

I realize what happened, and notice I'm not wearing a mask. I immediately hold my breath.

Instead of panicking, I try to remain as calm as possible, to conserve oxygen.

I walk over to the door and try to open it.

If that fails (and I'm guessing it will), I sit down and calmly, even happily, wait for the shower to end. What a nice shower I'm having... Won't Friend Computer be happy to see how clean I am?

If the shower seems to be taking too long, I look at Lucas and try to (non-verbally) convince him to let me use his oxygen mask for a few seconds.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 03, 2010 22:32

Once I've crawled a sufficient distance, I flip over, grab my laser pistol, and start shooting at the nearest able commie.

written by Gligar on Aug 04, 2010 00:19

Distribution warehouse

Two laser shots and two slugthrower shots ring out. One laser hits a communist in the arm, causing said communist to drop his weapon. The other misses.

The slugshots, predictably, hit some of the boxes from the box fort, pushing them to the floor and collapsing the fort.

L4-O gets far enough away and opens up with his own laser. The second communist is caught unawares by a laser shot to the chest and keels over backwards.

Chemical showers

Jam-R tries the door, and finds that it's locked. Of course.

He chooses to sit it out and holds his breath. Quite soon, the chemical mixture begins to fill up the room... and gets into Jam-R's eyes.

As if getting that stuff onto your skin wasn't enough. Getting it in your eyes has to burn...

written by Jam on Aug 04, 2010 01:00

Ah... Such nice chemicals... They must be cleansing my eyes now. Hmm... I feel a little stinging... Ow. It's starting to burn a bit. Ow. My eyes! Ow! OWWWWWWW!!

I quickly shut my eyes, then take out my INFRARED towels (and that other small towel that apparently has leaped back into my pockets, even though I wrapped it around the Station Monitor quite tightly) and try to wrap them around my face, arms, legs, and any other exposed bits of skin...

Then I clasp my hand over my nose and mouth, and try very hard not to breathe.

written by Speeder on Aug 04, 2010 01:20

I point my weapon at the unarmed alive commie.

"Ok, speak now, or we will torture you instead of killing you. In the most painful way as possible."

Then I realize that I don't asked anything.

"Oh, what I want to know is: Who is the technician? Who is the one that made the cloning stations work, copy memory data without computer working, and not scrub commie thoughts?"

written by Lightning4 on Aug 04, 2010 02:49

I crawl my way back to Speed and the group.

"Ugh... that was smart."

If Nukabot isn't moving, I crawl my way to it and attempt to retrieve the medical kit, and search it for anything I can use on myself.

written by Gligar on Aug 04, 2010 16:05

Chemical showers

The room fills up completely with the chemical mixture.

Jam-R seems to be having problems... do his eyes hurt? I bet they do! He tries to make the pain go away and protect himself with his towels, but it doesn't work completely... the towels just soak up some of the chemical mixture before becoming saturated.

Luckily, it doesn't last too much longer, as the room begins to empty.

Distribution Warehouse

The communist spits. "Don't you even know? There's enough spare processing power to run many things even without the central compnode. And the cloning systems are automated. Heh... I bet it wasn't even a challenge to get into them."

Meanwhile, L4-O makes his way over to Nukabot. Getting at the first aid kit, he opens it and finds that there's nothing in there that looks like it would be useful... half of the kit is given over to various types of pills.

written by Kristos on Aug 04, 2010 16:12

I hear the commotion of the chemical showers, run to them, analyze the situation, and do something about it. If I notice that Jam is stuck in there, I try to free him with any means at my disposal.

written by Speeder on Aug 04, 2010 16:56

I tilt my head, then I say.

"So, who removed the compnode from the friend computer network? No, I don't mean Friend Computer itself, that disabled the connection, I mean who did whatever that was done that incited the Friend Computer to shut down the connection."

Then I look to L4.

"Yes, indeed... But jumping in a elevator shaft was nowhere smart... But no problem, you don't died!"

Then I remember that all commies have IntSec armour.

"And tell me, how do you get hand in all these IntSec gear, while other supplies are lacking?"

written by Jam on Aug 04, 2010 18:32¹⁵³ Cloning station

I open my eyes and try to stumble to the door. I start banging on the door with my fist. I try to make a lot of noise. (So that Kristos will actually have something to hear. 😊)

I hear noises on the other side. I think about calling out to them, but realize that would mean I would have to open my mouth. I decide not to.

I continue not breathing. I start getting dizzy, and collapse onto my hand and knees, then fall face down onto the floor.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 04, 2010 20:29

“Now where did Jam-R wander off to?” I enter the cloning station, and check the computer terminal. If there is any info on Jam-R or Lucas, then I ask for more details. Otherwise, I leave it alone.

“Kristos-R? What are you doing?”

written by Lightning4 on Aug 04, 2010 21:53

“Bah. Pills... I mean, yay, pills! But I don't think any of these can help me...” I mutter.

I overhear the interrogation, and add:

“Stalin-B and Foursixonesixfiveninenine... who is Stalin-B, is he your leader? And what is the latter for. Is it a code or something?”

written by Gligar on Aug 05, 2010 01:09

Cloning station¹⁵⁴

Kristos-R arrives at a run, apparently having heard something. But there has been no noise from here...

Chemical showers

Jam-R has had enough. He starts hammering on the door loudly.

Corridor C1

Wait... this is weird. I have Kristos-R on this camera hearing the banging from the chemical showers and beginning to run, but he's also on the cloning station camera at the same time.

And now he's just... vanished... from the corridor.

What is going on here? I'm getting a positive result on [DFSR] imaging... this can't be good.

I need to have Kristos-R tested for more than just high-clearance information, it seems.

¹⁵³ JAM: (OOC: Um... Where is Lucas? Is he not in the showers? Or is he just ignoring me... 😊)

¹⁵⁴ GLIGAR: (OOC: Yeah, it does help if there's actually a commotion to respond to... 😊)

Kristos-R tries to open the door to the chemical showers, but it's locked. He tries to get the terminal to unlock it, to no avail. Finally, he tries bashing the door down, but just dislocates his shoulder.

Mango-R enters behind him, and heads for the terminal. He asks it for information on either Jam-R or Lucas, but finds that the information is beyond his security clearance.

Chemical showers

Having gone unsaved, Jam-R collapses, just as the chemicals finish draining.

And just as the room begins to fill again... with water, this time.

Lucas, who has been trying to ignore the burning sensation from the chemicals and so had his eyes shut, opens his eyes, to see Jam-R collapsed by the door. He tries to reach Jam-R and get a mask for him but finds that his own mask's hoses won't let him go that far.

Unable to hold his breath any longer, Jam-R gasps in some air. Luckily there's some oxygen in the mix that has briefly replaced the liquid. His head's still above the water at this point.

Distribution warehouse

“Did you think we were the only force at work here? Did you think every communist knows everything? You might as well kill me now, you won't get anything else out of me!”

written by Speeder on Aug 05, 2010 02:16

I peer at the commie.

“Naaah... Why kill you? This will return you to your allies, with full health.”

I think for some time, then I say.

“Ok, what other forces are at work?”

I search for his communicator, so I can take it from him. Also I work to find the communicators of the other commies.

“John, search for the communication devices of those fallen on the warehouse and in the corridor.”

written by Kristos on Aug 05, 2010 03:12

I join Mango in pressing buttons on the terminals to pass the time as I await what might emerge from the showers.

I continue observing. Slowly I creep towards the dark room, tentatively giving a bell a few quiet rings.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 05, 2010 12:00

I walk over and examine the door to the chemical shower. “Why would you try to open the door with your shoulder?” I search for any loose, yet hard objects to attempt to smash the door open.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 05, 2010 12:21

While Speed deals with the commie, I look for a beam or pole that can be used as a makeshift crutch, so my speed isn't inhibited too much.

written by Jam on Aug 05, 2010 14:18

Oxygen at last! I breathe a few deep breaths, then start breathing normally. Once I've recovered a bit, I try to stand up. I run my eyes under a stream of water to flush out the chemicals. I throw the towels off and start scrubbing any exposed skin with my hand, trying to make the pain stop.

I look around and try to see if the chemicals have effected my vision at all.

Ah! Why is Lucas's skin VIOLET? And the walls, why are they GREEN.

I look down at my own jumpsuit, and stiffen when I see that it appears to have changed to YELLOW.

I panic, and start looking through the various items in my inventory. A GREEN laser pistol, a pack of Soylent ULTRAVIOLET (Do they even make it that clearance?!?), and some BLUE pills that are shaped like Visomorpain. And apparently the towels I had earlier have been upgraded to RED!

I realize this must be caused by the chemicals, and attempt to wash my eyes again. Maybe I just wasn't thorough enough last time?

"Other 'secret' societies... why don't you ask your... masters, eh? And I don't mean your pet High Programmer..."

Meanwhile, Speed-O has been searching the captured communist, and finds an ME Card, issued to... wait a minute, that's Selbio-R's chewed-up ME Card! But this isn't Selbio-R...

...why would a Communist have an ME Card?

Oh! The Com 1 unit... there it is. Those trapped by Nukabot don't seem to have one, though.

Meanwhile, John-R has been searching the dead and not-quite-dead communists for Com 1s, and finds three.

L4-O is doing a little searching of his own. He finds a length of ladder which will probably function quite well as a crutch.

Cloning station

Kristos-R returns to the terminal and presses buttons. He ends up typing qom ak? zaz

Nothing seems to happen.

It's now Mango-R's turn to inspect the door to the chemical showers. As he does, the door clicks.

Chemical showers

The water level continues to rise, but as it does, a click is heard from the door.

Jam-R seems to be having problems with his eyes. Apparently his ability to distinguish colours has been messed up. I'm sure he'll be okay, eventually.

Corridor D1

Joris-O slowly walks towards the dark office. There is no sound from within.

written by Speeder on Aug 05, 2010 16:54

I grab my spear.

"You are kidding me right? Where do you found the ME card of the Towel Guy?"

I pocket Selbio's ME card and also the com 1 unit.

"You are not a normal commie, you know too much, don't you? Who are YOU?"

written by Jam on Aug 05, 2010 17:39¹⁵⁵

I open the door and burst out. I stare in confusion at the ULTRAVIOLET clone that is standing outside the door. I bow.

"Thank you, O mighty High Programmer! I knew Friend Computer, in it's wisdom, would send someone to save me! Though I didn't expect it would send an ULTRAVIOLET citizen! I'm honored to be in your presence!"

I look at the face of the High Programmer, and see Mango's face, but somehow fail to recognize him.

"You seem familiar somehow... If I may ask, sir, have we met before?"

I notice a YELLOW clone typing at the terminal. I gasp as I realize that it's Kristos.

"Oh, Kristos-Y, sir! Congratulations on the promotion!"

I look back at Lucas, and gasp in surprise when I notice that he's wearing a BLUE jumpsuit.¹⁵⁶

"What? Why is everyone getting big promotions all of the sudden?"

I scream in horror as I look down at my own jumpsuit and notice it's INFRARED!

"What happened? You would think that I would remember being demoted..."

I panic as I realize that I'm kneeling on a ORANGE floor, and standing in front of a ULTRAVIOLET citizen.

"Sir! I'm sorry, sir! I didn't realize that the floor was ORANGE, sir!"

I (again) scream in horror as I notice a BLUE laser pistol in my pocket. I immediately take it and drop it on the floor. I take out another laser pistol, and sigh in relief as I notice it's INFRARED. Then I realize that there's no such thing as an INFRARED laser pistol! I clutch my head in confusion, and lay on the floor. I conclude that I must be asleep. I wait for this horribly confusing nightmare to end.

¹⁵⁵ JAM: (ooc: Selbio? He was in the bunker, right? But that would mean...)

¹⁵⁶ JAM: (ooc: he's wearing a jumpsuit, right?)

(The lack of oxygen seems to have given me minor amnesia. I'm sure it will go away in a couple of minutecycles...)

written by Kristos on Aug 05, 2010 18:20¹⁵⁷

I don't seem to notice Jam-R's unusual behavior. I walk around him and attempt to salvage some of the chemical, possibly into the package my Solvent was in. My mind is set on one thing. But I don't know what it is. The chemical vapors burn my nose, which snaps me out of my focus. "Greetings Jam-I. Try to be more careful in the future." I try to chuckle, but the false feeling of power keeps a stern look on my face.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 05, 2010 21:03

"I'm pretty sure we've met-"

I stop as Jam-R proceeds to lay on the floor. I pick up one of the laser pistols dropped by Jam-R, and offer it to Kristos-R. "You did want a weapon just a few minutes ago. Take this laser pistol."

"Jam-I, you're in enough trouble as it is. Explain the mission objectives now, and I might lower the charges against you."

After momentarily watching the clones in the maintenance request office decide on the best way to share their new box and bell, I inquire...

"Say, you wouldn't happen to know where I might find Boris, would you? You know, the Boris? I'm apparently supposed to meet up with him."

The communist gasps at the appearance of the Spear™. But he recovers enough to say, "That card? Foursix- no! I'm saying too much!"

To the later question, he answers, "I no longer have a pig-dog name with a capitalist clearance code. I am Alexei."

Meanwhile, L4-O is getting used to his laddercrutch. It takes him a little while, but he gets it in the end.

Chemical showers

Jam-R (he's still R, yes) tries the door. It opens, sending water cascading into the cloning station. The force of it knocks everyone in the cloning station onto the floor.

Lucas takes off his oxygen mask. Looks like the shower is over.¹⁵⁹

¹⁵⁷ KRISTOS: (OOC: I am laughing HARD, Jam. That was funny!)

¹⁵⁸ CRYOBURNER: (I thought the shower was continuing to fill with water, and the door just clicked. Are we sure it's even openable? How much water is inside? 😊)

Cloning station

Smoking slightly from the chemicals, Jam-R exits the showers, more than a little disoriented. In addition to his vision difficulties, his memory isn't working properly. For instance, he seems to think that Mango-R is a High Programmer, and that his equipment is too high a clearance for him.

His memory seems to return somewhat and he recognises Kristos-R (albeit as YELLOW).

But then he panics. His altered vision tells him he's wearing an INFRARED jumpsuit, so he must be INFRARED. Confused, he drops a laser pistol on the floor, before surrendering to the confusion and lying prone, head in hands.

Taking advantage of Jam-R's confusion, Mango-R briefly impersonates a High Programmer (which is treason) and takes the dropped laser pistol.¹⁶⁰

Meanwhile, Kristos-R tries to salvage some of the cleaning chemicals in a food wrapper. But there doesn't seem to be enough to bother with. The rest seems to be already burning away into smoke.

Then, Jam-R's memory returns fully.

Maintenance Request Office

The communists continue to not notice Cryo-R, and continue to fight amongst themselves.

I frown.

"Ok, continue what you was saying about the card, or I will make sure you will never get happy again when watching the Teela O'Malley shows."

I point the spear at his crotch.

¹⁵⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: He isn't wearing a jumpsuit, not yet. Clones don't just pop out of the cloning tank with a jumpsuit on.)

Apparently forgetting about the hormone suppressants found in food, Speed-O threatens the communist.

However, it look like the communist has also forgotten about them. He squirms and says, "I was given the card by Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R to infiltrate another sector... I do not know where... to help liberate the INFRARED masses by showin the folly of using credits...aaaaaack!"

The communist suddenly tenses up, in pain. John-R shrugs slightly and shakes his head as if to say that he's not doing this.

L4-O investigates the cargo lift a little more. He finds a button for H Level, but it looks like the lift only goes as far as Q Level.

Cloning station

Lucas takes a towel and dries himself off the best he can, and dons a jumpsuit. Looks like he get to play at being RED a little longer.

written by Speeder on Aug 06, 2010 15:18

"Ok, if you tell me who is Stalin-B, I will not torture you, only kill you or leave you locked somewhere."

Then I grin, happily.

I then look to John and say.

"Sometimes knowledge of the existence of treasonous behavior is useful for something else."

written by Jam on Aug 06, 2010 15:41

"Oh, Lucas, I almost forgot! Do you remember what I told you before? About using RED things and walking in RED corridors and stuff? The same thing applies to your new clone. Here, take this laser pistol, and this reflec."

I offer him one of my laser pistols, then walk across the room and bring him a reflec.¹⁶² I take out another laser pistol for myself. Hmm... I seem to only have one laser pistol left...

"Let's go, they're waiting for us!"

I walk out the door and head down the corridor. I turn left into an apparently GREEN dormitory (of course, logic tells me it's actually RED or is it?), and look in the locker nearest the door. I take the two laser pistols and three barrels that are there.

"I got more RED laser pistols!" I say, waving them in the air. "Of course, they don't look RED to me, but I know they are!"¹⁶³

¹⁶² JAM: (ooc: What happened to the reflec I was wearing?)

I keep the laser pistols, but offer a spare barrel to each of the others.

I check the computer terminal. "Why would it open, when apparently, it should have been locked?" I follow after Jam-R. I mumble quietly, "Hmm, he mistook me as ULTRAVIOLET, and mistook Kristos-R as YELLOW? Whatever happened in there must of had some weird effects on Jam-R's eyes."

I notice the clearance strip on the dormitory that Jam-R went into. "Jam-R, do you know what room you entered?"

The communist continues being in pain. He tries to suppress a scream, but isn't entirely successful.

Needless to say, he doesn't answer Speed-O.

John-R gasps. "Sir, there's a powerful psionic mutant at work here. It just touched my mind."

Cloning station¹⁶⁴

Lucas, who was already looking speculatively at the reflec, accepts it and puts it on. He also takes the laser pistol. It's almost as if he was never terminated. Except, of course, for the small hole in his memory where the actual termination should be.

After doing this, Jam-R leaves, followed by Kristos-R.

Mango-R continues, briefly, to poke at the terminal. It doesn't reveal anything new. He then follows Jam-R out. Followed, himself, by Lucas.

Corridor C1

Right in front of everyone, Jam-R walks right into the ORANGE dormitory and roots around for a moment. He returns with two laser pistols with ORANGE barrels, and three spare barrels, also ORANGE. The latter he offers around.

Lucas suggests, "Sir... you might want to get those eyes checked out."

written by Jam on Aug 07, 2010 00:59

"Get my eyes checked out? By a docbot? Don't you remember what happened last time! I got my hand sawed off! Probably some twisted commie attacked the docbot and screwed with it's wiring! I can't trust them. It will probably decide to gouge my eyes out or something! No... I'll wait for my eyes to heal naturally... But why would you..."

I suddenly turn around and look into the dormitory.

¹⁶³ JAM: (OOC: they aren't)

¹⁶⁴ GLIGAR: (OOC: You're wearing it 😊)

"Wait... Was that the ORANGE dormitory? But that would mean... that these laser pistols are ORANGE too! Ah! Sorry about that! I'd better put them back before too many clones notice..."

I quickly put the ORANGE laser pistols and barrels back in their locker, then run across the corridor to the RED dormitory. I take out the same number of RED laser pistols and barrels, and offer them around instead.

I start heading toward Concourse C1. I look around at any random clones that happen to be walking by, and ask them if they could please help us get through the hole in the ceiling to D level, maybe by lifting us?

written by Speeder on Aug 07, 2010 01:19

I look at John, with a now scared face, then I look at the commie and say.

"This is the work of your friends... I suggest you return to our side, we don't torture friends."

I then attempt to knock him out with a kick on his chin.

I then look back to John and say.

"This is baaaad... Don't try to attack him back, he may turn your powers on you."

I put this commie Com 1 in a pocket that can allow me to hear it easily, then I wander back toward the door.

"We need to fetch Jam and Cryoscrub, they are taking too much time to return."

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 07, 2010 02:00

"If there were any medical supplies, we could try doing it ourselves. Leaving it alone could turn you entirely blind."

I look at the hole in the ceiling. "We could just try getting through by ourselves..." I attempt to climb through the hole.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 07, 2010 04:00

"Well, it looks like you guys might be a little busy. Maybe I'll swing by later when you have less maintenance requests to fulfill."

I leave the office entrance, and head back toward the southern end of Corridor D2.

"Hmm... I might have to find this Boris on my own... Ah! Maybe someone in there can help!"

I approach the entrance to PVTF headquarters, and step inside. I look around, examining the lounge and any furniture inside. I also have a look at its occupants, and try to determine whether any of them might have knowledge of the sector.

written by Kristos on Aug 07, 2010 04:28

I take one of the RED laser pistols Jam-R offers. I also stare long and hard into his eyes. I first notice what appears to be an oily rainbow sheen on his cornea. But then I look past and... if only he would stop blinking...

written by Lightning4 on Aug 07, 2010 11:21

"I suppose I'll go fetch them, since it looks like you're... occupied."

I make my way out of the distribution warehouse and down the mirrored corridor. It's weirding me out this time, and I attempt to go faster.

written by Gligar on Aug 07, 2010 15:49

Corridor C1

Jam-R realises that he's just raided an ORANGE dormitory, and puts the stuff back.

A moment later, he dashes over to the RED dorm and raids its stash again, coming back with the right weaponry, which he once again tries to hand round. Kristos-R takes a pistol.

Concourse C1

As it happens, the unnamed clone from before has made his way up to C Level, and is once again willing to help, but it seems that Mango-R wants to just try to get up there himself.

He takes a running jump and just manages to grab the edge of the hole. It begins to crumble, but he carries on, pulling himself up to D Level, and on into the ruins of the warehouse.

A little debris falls from his climb, but nothing major. Cryo-R would probably class it as Useless Debris Which Is Nonetheless Worth Picking UP (Because Everything Is Worth Picking Up), Type 56C. Or something.

As he's doing that, Kristos-R notices something unusual about Jam-R's eyes that might be causing his colour blindness.

Distribution warehouse

Speed-O has had ENOUGH with this communist! With a savage kick, the communist's head is knocked back, and hits the ground, hard. I don't think he'll be getting up for a while.

John-R nods, and indicates the communist. "I... don't think that this is our mutant, but anyway. If I'm right, it seems to have gone looking elsewhere. Or perhaps it was punishing our friend here, for saying too much?"

Speed-O pockets the Com 1, as L4-O decides to go looking for Cryo-R and Joris-O.

Corridor D4

That jackobot is still here. It seems to have gone into power-save mode.

But L4-O doesn't pay much attention to it. Instead, he keeps moving.

Corridor D2

After what seems to be too long, he makes it out of there.

PVTF Headquarters - Lounge

Cryo-R enters, and looks around. The furniture has certainly seen better days, what with the explosions leaving dust everywhere and the gas from earlier, but other than that, it's so unremarkable that even Cryo-R looks elsewhere.

There doesn't seem to be anyone in the lounge.

written by Speeder on Aug 07, 2010 18:20

I look back to John.

"It was KILLING him for saying too much, I knocked him out, so his mind is not accessible, to prevent him from dieing."

I put the commie in some safe place in the warehouse.

"I always planned of leaving him alive here, if he dies, he will be cloned in the middle of the communists, and this would be bad, because they would make him report, and would save him from the pains that we gave him... Now he will remain here until he wakes up, and he wakes up, he will not find a Com 1 unit, except..."

I walk up to John.

"Let's make a pair that he can use to communicate with us... I don't remember if those things can switch channels..."

written by Jam on Aug 07, 2010 18:32¹⁶⁵

I whisper to Kristos-R.

"Kristos-R? Why are you looking at me like that? It's almost like you're trying to peer into my mind or something. But only a mutant would try to do that! Are you a mutant, Kristos-R? Are you trying to read my mind? Go on, tell me. You can trust me. Just... whisper it in my ear or something..."

I look up at Mango-R.

"Nice jump! Now, do you think you could hold this cable while we climb up? Maybe there's something you can tie it to?"

I take out the cables I found earlier, tie them together very securely, and throw one end of the chain up the hole toward Mango-R. I give the other end to Kristos-R.

"I might not be able to climb up with only one hand. Maybe you and Lucas should go first, then you can all try to pull me up after."

I talk to the unnamed clone.

"Do you think you could try to lift me up when it's my turn. Maybe I could stand on your shoulders? That way the others won't use up all their energy pulling me up... Thanks!"

written by Cryoburner on Aug 07, 2010 18:47

The furniture is in fact so unremarkable, that I decide to look elsewhere. Elsewhere, being the underside of the furniture. I crawl under the table and chairs and carefully examine their undersides for anything worth noting, or even anything not worth noting.

¹⁶⁵ JAM: (ooc: How do you know his mind isn't accessible? Maybe because you have first-hand knowledge! Very suspicious... 😊)

written by Kristos on Aug 07, 2010 19:07

"I think I see what your problem is. The chemical seems to have formed a thin layer on your eyes. Yet thick enough to filter certain bands of light. It's remarkable that it can tint two objects of apparently the same color signature to be totally different colors. The manufacturing process must produce variations in the polarity signatures of the materials..."

I then whisper to Jam-R, "Or am I supposed to know that? I also thought I saw something else..."

I grab the cable and attempt to climb up quickly.

I attempt to offer any assistance I can in my condition.

written by Gligar on Aug 08, 2010 00:40

Distribution warehouse

Speed-O stashes the communist in the back of the warehouse, behind some heavy boxes.

After that, he explains his reasoning, and has his idea. John-R thinks. "Com 1s can select between one of... er, five channels, I think. I don't know if the communists are using them all, or if they've modified these units to work on different channels... but it's worth a shot."

Concourse C1

Apparently, Kristos-R can trust Jam-R. Do you not remember the Troubleshooter's Motto? 😊

But anyway. Jam-R looks at Mango-R. He then takes out some lengths of cable, and ties them together to form a sort of rope or chain. That done, he throws one end of it through the hole for Mango-R to catch. The other end he gives to Kristos-R.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Mango-R catches the cable and coils it around his wrist, ready to pull. He sees the remains of a structural pillar that might be of use.

He also sees a vaguely familiar clone enter the warehouse and offer assistance. Searching through his memory, Mango-R concludes that this must be one of the clones who left the bunker earlier.

It is, in fact, L4-O. Even though he's sustained a broken leg and has to use a ladder as a makeshift crutch, he wants to help in some way,

Concourse C1

Kristos-R demonstrates ... okay, that's far enough. There's no way... unless... but no. We'll cross that COMPLETELY SAFE AND FUN chasm when we get to it.

After that, he tries to climb. But he seems to be having a problem with it. He's going fast enough that Mango-R, above, is having trouble holding on, and even with L4-O's help, he can't do it, and loses the cable. Ouch! That thing hurts!

Maybe he should have waited?

written by Jam on Aug 08, 2010 01:20¹⁶⁶

"Oh, Hi L4-O! Hey, you brought a ladder! How thoughtful! Ok, just lower it down and we'll climb up..."

I wait for L4-O to lower the ladder down, then I grab it and try to use it to climb up.

written by Speeder on Aug 08, 2010 01:21

I switch the channels of the Com 1 around and test if there are someone hearing (in each of the channels available)

"Hey, the lunch time is over? I've heard some good food was offered, the people's choice one!"

If someone reply I only say.

"Oh, thanks!" and quickly change to other channel.

Then I select randomly one of the empty channels, grab one of John Com 1, and put in that same channel, then I put one unit in the hand of the downed commie, and give the other back to John.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 08, 2010 02:39

I hesitate for a moment.

I walk over to a vendobot.

"Can I have 3 cans of B3?"

I take my B3, then check behind the vendobot. I make sure there are no tubes or cables that would break if I move the vendobot, then:

"Congratulations vendobot! You've been upgraded to a mobile model!"

I take my spanner and attempt to remove the bolts that secure the vendobot to the floor. I push the vendobot to underneath the hole, making sure not to accidentally tip it over.

If that is successful, I attempt to climb onto the vendobot and out the hole.

I further inspect the undersides of the furniture that at first appeared to be so unremarkable. Are the undersides unremarkable as well, or are they in fact remarkable, perhaps even vital to the success of the mission? I apparently haven't determined that yet.

While down there, I also carefully examine the table's legs, particularly what material they're made of, their color, whether they might be detachable, and what they sound like when tapped upon with a secondary sector logistics pen.

Peering in, Joris-O notices one of the People's Volunteers near the door.

Covered in frost.

And not moving.

"Here you are, enjoy!"

After collecting his B3, Jam-R looks behind the vendobot. The only thing behind there is a rather long power cable, plugged into a wall socket. Thinking that there's enough cable, Jam-R starts removing the bolts. Or at least he tries...

¹⁶⁹ JAM: (OOC: Oh. Remind me to ask again if when I'm UV clearance. 😊)

Stay Alert! Trust No One! Keep Your Laser Handy!)

those bolts are on pretty tightly. And having only one hand doesn't really help matters.

Distribution warehouse

John-R takes the Com 1 unit. "I guess its your choice, sir. But, personally, I'm finding waiting her to be less than fun."

PVTF Lounge

Wow, Cryo-R is still at it. In his zeal to find something that isn't so completely unremarkable as to warrant mentioning, he completely fails to notice something being injected into his good leg. As he probes the table legs (metal, type J6, utterly unremarkable) his vision begins to cloud. But that's okay, he's so happy, he doesn't need good vision, right?

written by Speeder on Aug 09, 2010 00:40

I nod to John, then I check my rifle, and put it in a accessible place, I draw my nut launcher, and start to walk outside.

I look to John and smile happily.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 09, 2010 01:09

Now that I've possibly examined the underside of the table thoroughly enough, I decide to move on to a more pressing matter, namely that which is poking me. I take a look at whoever or whatever is causing the poking, and remove the protruding object.

"Hmm... Did I say you could poke me there? I think I'd prefer to be unpoked, if that's all right with you. Might you rather have a pen instead?"

I offer the black secondary sector logistics pen I was tapping with to the poker.

I take a small, uninteresting piece of rubble.

I also out take a piece of pipe, closely examining its length, girth, composition and any other identifiable characteristics in the process.¹⁷⁰

"With rubble and a pipe, I'll... um... I'll make something!"

I think and think and think, and completely fail to find any way to use the rubble. I toss it up in the air, then hit it with the pipe. (Maybe after a few misses) I send it flying in the general direction of the Control Room. As I'm walking over to retrieve it, I look inside the room and notice a chair.

"Hey! I found a chair!"

I pick up my rubble, then go over to the chair and try to carry it out to the concourse. I position it under the hole, then climb onto it and reach for the ladder.

I notice the once-a-volunteer by the door, and enter, kevlar shield partially raised and weapon drawn. After some thought, I decide to substitute the pistol with a stunner.

I turn towards the People's Volunteer and look him over. "Hello? Citizen?" I adjust and lower the stunner voltage slightly, if such an option exists, and zap him in the chest.

I wait around while Jam does... stuff. I look in the direction of the dark office, thinking I see movement over there.

Distribution warehouse

Nukabot replies, "Gotcha," and appears to shut down.

Speed-O checks his rifle and finds that its barrel's charge rings are all black. He changes the barrel and stows the rifle again.

John-R follows Speed-O out.

Corridor D4

It seems that that jackobot is still here.

PVTF Lounge

His inspection done, Cryo-R moves on to try to identify just what it was that poked him.

Well, whatever it was injected him with something that slowed him down enough that it takes him about a minute to realise that there's a syringe sticking out of his leg. How could it have got there? There's nobody else in the room...

But that doesn't matter, right? He removes the syringe, taking 30 seconds or so in the process.

He seems to see a clone next to him, and speaks to the apparent clone. But my cameras don't show anything.

Concourse C1

Jam-R takes a break from removing those bolts, to inspect a piece of rubble. It's quite small, and seems to be synthcrete. He also inspects a pipe. Unlike Cryo-R, however, he doesn't know much about the standard classifications of pipes, so all he really notices is that it's 1m long, and about wide enough to accept the handle of one of his spanners quite nicely.

He thinks of something to do with the rubble, and ends up practising some Funball batting moves with it and the pipe. Okay, looks like he isn't very good at it, but he does manage to send the rubble control room-ward. Going over to retrieve it, he spots the chair, and has an idea. He takes it over to the hole and stands on it. That would bring him a little closer to the ladder if it were there. But it's just a little bit higher up.

¹⁷⁰ JAM: (ooc: Ok... The only thing I really need to know is if a spanner will fit inside.)

Dark office

Joris-O arms himself with one of his stunners and heads inside. Inspecting the frosty volunteer, he decides to lower the settings on the stunner. Well, he moves the slider by a couple of notches.

Then he fires. Electricity arcs through the air and crackles over the surface of the volunteer. But nothing else seems to happen.

Ruins of the Warehouse

As he's holding the ladder, L4-O looks over at the office, and notices the frosted-over volunteers, and Joris-O firing his stunner.

written by 4616599 on Aug 09, 2010 16:45

"Comrade? Citizen, I request that you respond!"

I shake the volunteer vigorously, then increase voltage and fire again. And again. Before I drop and smear Hot Fun on him, near his nose and on his jumpsuit, like what I had done with Cryo-R.

written by Speeder on Aug 09, 2010 18:28

I stop by the strange bot on the corridor.

"I have the impression that this bot stationed here is not a good thing."

I attempt to turn on the bot again, and make it report.

written by Jam on Aug 09, 2010 22:17

"Ugh! I still can't reach it!"

I climb down off the chair, then move it over a bit.

"Vendobot, it looks like you're getting an upgrade after all. Aren't you excited, vendobot? I'm so excited, I think I'll need a few cans of special RED clearance B3!"¹⁷¹

I insert the handle of the spanner into the pipe, then try again to remove the bolts. Hopefully the increased leverage will be enough... I ask the unnamed clone for help if I still can't loosen them.

Once I've removed the bolts, I start pushing the vendobot to underneath the hole.

"Can you guys help me push this vendobot?" I ask the others.

Once the vendobot is moved into place, I try to climb onto it and out the hole. (If I can't reach the top of the vendobot, I climb on the chair first)

written by Kristos on Aug 09, 2010 23:54

I place my feet against the wall near the vendobot and help put some leverage on the spanner to unbolt the vendobot.

¹⁷¹ JAM: (ooc: Regular B3 is INFRARED, right?)

written by Gligar on Aug 10, 2010 00:30

Dark office

The volunteer is extremely cold to the touch. He is rather rigid when shaken.

Zapping him a couple of times causes the frost to begin to melt, and the volunteer to slump down and fall to the ground.

He doesn't seem to notice when Hot Fun is smeared on him.¹⁷²

Corridor D4

Suspicious of the jackobot, Speed-O tries to fire it back up.

Unfortunately, he presses the wrong thing and only causes a manipulator to fall off.

Concourse C1

"Ohhh, so B3 Plain isn't mandatory enough for you now? B3 Extra Classic coming right up!" Three cans of B3 Extra Classic drop out of the dispenser slot onto the floor.

Jam-R ignores it for a moment. He's trying to undo those bolts. But even with the added leverage of the pipe, those bolts still won't move.

That unnamed clone moves to help, but is waved back by Kristos-R, who helps instead.

The added force behind it works. With an almighty crack, the bolt becomes loose.

After taking a short break, the two tackle the other bolts. They aren't so stubborn, and offer less resistance.

A moment later, the vendobot is moved into its new position under the hole. Using it, and the chair, Jam-R is able to climb up into the ruins of the warehouse. Lucas follows him.

written by Speeder on Aug 10, 2010 00:37¹⁷³

I take the manipulator.

"What?"

I throw it behind me, like if it was useless junk, and I press another button.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 10, 2010 02:12

"Ah! Lucas! I am HAPPY to see you are alive!"

Once everyone is up, I retrieve my laddercrutch so I can move again. I attempt to motion Joris over as well.

If he comes over, I start speaking, but quietly.

"We all need to move and fast. This whole sector will go kablooie with us inside if we don't. Everyone needs to get to the warehouse with the cargo lift, follow D2, then follow that strange mirrored corridor. Speed, John, and Nukabot are probably still there, I hope."

¹⁷² GLIGAR: (ooc: wow, the spacebar is bad on this thing.)

¹⁷³ SPEEDER: (ooc: Lucas is clothed now? I hope so...)

written by Jam on Aug 10, 2010 03:15 Concourse C1

"Yay! Thanks Kristos-R! Oh wait, I forgot my B3 Extra Classic..."

I climb back down and retrieve my B3. I talk to the unnamed clone while I'm down there.

"I'm assuming you're staying behind... You might want to move that vendobot back after we leave so that the commies can't enter as easily. There are some laser pistols in the RED and ORANGE dormitories. Use them if you need to. Good luck!"

I climb back up to the warehouse.

"Hey L4-O! Anything FUN happen while I was gone? Did you have any problems with commies or mutants or traitors? I noticed Lucas died... How did that happen? He seems to remember us though..."

I look around.

"Hey, where is Cryo-R? Is he still wandering around at the south end of Corridor D2? Are going to search for him, or will we just leave him behind?"

written by Kristos on Aug 10, 2010 04:08

When it comes my turn to climb, I begin ascending the makeshift structure. But halfway up the ladder, a horrid vision comes to mind and I lose all sense of this world. I no longer know what's happening in the Concourse, as images of conflict seem to pull me into another place and time. Maybe a lingering memory, or maybe just a dream... I do not know.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 10, 2010 06:09

I talk some more after Jam talks to me.

"Uhh. Yeah, Lucas had a fun run in with a commie slugthrower round. I doubt he wants to remember that though. The warehouse is safe for now, but we need to hurry before more FUN happens."

written by Gligar on Aug 10, 2010 15:42

Corridor D4

Speed-O tries again. This time, he gets it, and the jackobot comes to life. "Hey, where's my manipulator?" it asks. "That's nintendium alloy! It's literally impossible to make new ones!"

Ruins of the Warehouse¹⁷⁴

Jam-R realises he forgot his Be, and rushes back quickly to get it.

When he gets back, he notices the lack of Cryo-R...

PRPF Lounge

As it happens, Cryo-R is spacing out in the lounge. Whatever that injection was, it's clouded his vision and made him just stay there babbling to an imaginary clone. And speaking of clones, I hear jackboots...

¹⁷⁴ GLIGAR: (ooc: Yes, he has a jumpsuit and reflex.)

Kristos-R is last to climb. He starts to do so, but freezes up on the ladder. I reckon he's likely to be terminated if he doesn't get a move on.

Especially since those jackboots can be heard from here as well.

Corridor D4

The Com 1 set to channel 4 squawks. "Any comrade within range, please come in. I am a survivor of squad 16. Any comrade, respond!"

written by Speeder on Aug 10, 2010 17:49

I fetch the manipulator.

"I will give it back if you tell me what is your current mission, who gave that mission, and why you are here in the corridor in standby mode for this long time."

As the Com 1 comes to life, I move further away from the door, make a typical commie voice, even with that russian accent.

"Kommrade, what is the vissue? Vhat do you need?"

written by Jam on Aug 10, 2010 19:14¹⁷⁵

"I'll think I should go get Cryo-R. We can't just leave him behind, we might need him later. Anyone want to come with me? Lucas?"

I wait a few seconds, then turn and jog toward Corridor D2. I turn left and run down the corridor, checking inside all the doors for Cryo-R.

written by Kristos on Aug 10, 2010 20:16

In my mind, I am in the same room, but confronted with enemies instead of friends. I fling myself onto the floor, and make a run for the clearest opening. Seeing a hand reaching out to stop me, I lay my fist into the face of a nearby clone and continue running for the nearest door. Suddenly, I find myself in the PRPF Lounge dragging Cryo-R. Or am I still dreaming? What am I doing?

written by 4616599 on Aug 10, 2010 22:10

"Okay..." I reseal whatever Hot Fun I have left in my packet and advance towards the desk. "Hello? I'm here under FriendCom orders. Unfortunately, I'm afraid my mind is still a tad clouded. I need you to declare all useful assets here."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 10, 2010 23:00

I get annoyed by the sound of the jackboots.

I grab my laser pistol again and face what direction the sounds are... probably coming from.

¹⁷⁵ JAM: (ooc: didn't Kristos-R have a dislocated shoulder?)

written by Gligar on Aug 11, 2010 00:28

Corridor D4

The Com 1 speaks again. "Thank the people! My squad were assigned to investigate a disturbance at the D Level Distribution Warehouse, but the majority of us were wiped out by a massive force of Computerist insurgents, along with a Frankenstein bot of some sort. My mind was assaulted and ... I must have blacked out."

The jackobot answers, "I am programmed to assist a clone whose identity is Security Clearance ULTRAVIOLET. During this assignment, I was ordered to go somewhere safe and shutdown. No-one notices a jackobot," it adds, a tad annoyed.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Jam-R and Lucas run off in search of Cryo-R.

Meanwhile, those jackboots are only getting louder. They seem to be coming from the Revolutionary Square.

As L4-O turns to point his laser pistol, he inadvertently drops the ladder.

PVTF Lounge

Jam-R and Lucas arrive in the lounge, the jackboots getting louder and louder. They see Cryo-R, seemingly zoned out and babbling to someone only he can see. He seems to be holding a syringe.

Concourse C1

Would you believe that Kristos-R is still here? He zoned out on that ladder, apparently daydreaming about something.

Bur, of course, L4-O has dropped the ladder, meaning that he falls to the ground and breaks a rib or three... ouch.

Dark office

The Station Monitor appears. THIS STATION MOSTLY DEALS IN INFORMATION. ANY INFORMATION THAT PASSES THROUGH HERE MAY POTENTIALLY BE USEFUL. THE SAME APPLIES TO PHYSICAL OBJECTS, OF WHICH I HAVE FEW.

written by Jam on Aug 11, 2010 00:47

"He's gone crazy! I knew this would happen sooner or later... He was acting strangely a while ago, kept talking about bells or something... Careful, crazy people can be unpredictable... That syringe looks dangerous..."

I cautiously walk closer to Cryo-R, speaking softly to him.

"Cryo-R? Are you okay? Put the syringe down, Cryo-R. We need to go."

I inch closer.

"Cryo-R? Put it down... Okay? I promise I'll get you plenty of bells if you come with me. Don't stab me... Don't stab me..."

I reach for the syringe, and try to take it from him. Then I try to escort him out the door and down the corridor toward the distribution warehouse.

written by Speeder on Aug 11, 2010 02:29

I peer at the Jackobot.

"Strange... shutting down is not something that I expect as mission..."

I install back its manipulator.

"Sorry for interfering with your mission... But as you can notice, this place is not... safe... I suggest that for now you wait in the warehouse, next to a forkbot that is already there."

I grab again happily the Com 1 unit.

"What ya mean massive force of vinsurgents that can assault minds? Kommrade why they left you alive, you gave that information about Kommrade Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R to them? You are being anti-revolucionary?"

written by Cryoburner on Aug 11, 2010 04:53

"Wow... you guys are fast."

A pair of unrecognizable figures enter the room at an un-clone-like speed and rapidly approach. Their features are a blur, but they seem to be dressed in red. Actually, everything is pretty blurry, and the lights are pulsing. That's actually pretty nice though, since I had thought they might benefit from a little pulse before. It's actually a rather pleasant effect.

It looks as though the thing I thought had poked me was actually just a blurry chair though. Maybe it was these guys that poked me. They seem to be moving fast enough to sneak in for a quick poke, after all. There are some fast, indistinguishable chattering sounds coming from one of them. In any case, I should probably get going. I'd rather not get poked again.

I take the syringe and carefully tuck it inside my backpack, while examining it, and note how much of its contents, if any, remain. I also drop the black secondary sector logistics pen back in there, since the chair probably won't be needing it. While in my backpack, I notice the bottle of candies, and decide now is as good a time as any for a quick snack. I pop two of them in my mouth, and chew on them a bit, taking note of their flavor.

After crawling out from under the table, I notice what appears to be a blurry exit in the south-east corner of the room, so I crawl out that door, and into the corridor beyond.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 11, 2010 12:22

"Vatcrap! My crutch..."

If whoever is wearing the jackboots appears, I attempt to fire... if they're a commie.

PVTF Lounge

Jam-R tries to deal with Cryo-R by taking the syringe and leading him out into the corridor. But, it seems, Cryo-R has ideas of his own. Veeeeeryyyyy sloooowlyyy, like a video recording running at the wrong speed, he attempts to resist Jam-R while saying something that takes ten seconds.

So far, he seems to be successful, in his sluggish way. Jam-R isn't able to take the (empty) syringe, but can't stop Cryo-R from dropping it, causing the tip to shatter.

Cryo-R continues to resist being led out of the door, instead choosing to head, slowly, through the other door while rummaging through his backpack. He finds those pills from earlier and pops two. Jam-R follows him.

PVTF Corridor

And... it looks like the camera in here is intermittently working... but from what I can see, Cryo-R enters and immediately starts jittering from the pills.

Jam-R goes to investigate the corpses of those comunists killed in the firefight that occurred back when this was still THQ.

And that's a nice time to lose your colour capabilities, camera rolls eyes

Anyway, he picks something up off the floor, and checks the bodies, finding a couple of laser pistol barrels. As if he didn't already have enough. Then, he reloads his own laser pistol, before returning to the lounge, dragging Cryo-R with him. With Lucas (and Cryo-R) in tow, he starts heading back to join the team.

Corridor D4

The jackobot trundles off after receiving its manipulator back.

The Com 1 is acting up again. "Listen, comrade, you have to believe me, when I say that I don't remember! I must have passed out or something... oh hey, a bot..."

Ruins of the Warehouse

As Jam-R and friends return, the sound of jackboots grows. Eventually, a squad of PRPF emerges from the Square, apparently on an inspection duty. After all, there has been a lot of computerist activity recently. It's such a big deal, they refuse to even give the term a capital C.

Their inspection gets off to a FUN start when L4-O fires at them, hitting one square on the reflec. It would have been nice if it had done more than given the communist a bad attitude.

written by Jam on Aug 11, 2010 17:11

Yay! More shooting!

I drop Cryo-R and start running toward the communists. I take out my laser pistol (the one with the RED? Barrel), and shoot at them. After a few shots, I hesitate. Why do they have a look of disbelief on their faces? And why do the shots seem to slice through their reflec so easily?

I quickly look back at L4-O and am shocked to see that same stunned disbelief (and maybe even hostility) mirrored on his face. It's the same with Lucas and Mango-R and Joris-O.

I smile at them. "Why are you looking at me like I'm some kind of CMT or something? Wait... Those laser barrels back there... Did I take an ORANGE barrel by accident?"

I start to feel a bit nervous... My color vision is messed up... Maybe I was wrong about the color? It could be something way beyond my clearance or something! Like... BLUE! OH NO!!

I start to panic. I scream and fling the laser pistol away from myself. Then I nervously look up at the cameras. Surely anyone who's watching must know about how my color vision is messed up. It was just a simple mistake, that's all... I didn't mean to take high clearance things, I thought it was RED! Maybe if I terminate a bunch of commies, they'll forgive me!

I take out my laser rifle (gee... how did that get there? 😊) and continue shooting at any remaining communists.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 11, 2010 20:20

I draw my pistol and fire a few shots, aiming at the hands. I try getting behind some rubble. "Hey... what happened to the ladder? Where's Kristos-R?" I look down the hole, then continue to fire at the enemy.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 11, 2010 21:18¹⁷⁶

Chewing on the candies, I note that their flavor could be better. They aren't nearly as good as Chewy Algae Fun, or even Mandatory Nourishment Wafers for that matter. I spit out the remainder of the two candies, and decide that it might be best to give the rest away. Hmm... the lights seem to be pulsing much faster now...

After crawling into the interior corridor, the one blur suddenly grabs hold of me, and drags me at an incredible speed out through the lounge area and down the hall. It seems obvious this thing has no regard for my safety. Before I decide on a way to stop it, I find myself dropped off in what appears to be the remodeled warehouse from earlier. They seem to have installed pulsing, blurry lights here as well. More blurry figures approach, and the one that was dragging me flies toward them while emitting flashing lights.

"Help! This guy attacked me! Stop him!"

I crawl out of the warehouse and into Corridor D1.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 11, 2010 23:35

I continue firing, and start to worry about how many shots I've fired with the pistol. Four? Five?... Six?

written by Gligar on Aug 12, 2010 00:58

Ruins of the Warehouse

Eager to get into combat, Jam-R pulls out his laser pistol and starts firing.

¹⁷⁶ CRYOBURNER: (Since when did my length of type G7 pipe turn orange? I could have sworn I had inspected its "length, girth, composition and any other identifiable characteristics" before, and don't recall its color being of note. 😊)

Wait... that's a VIOLET barrel!

It takes him three shots to realise that it's not a RED one. All three hit their targets and pass right through their reflex as though it weren't there. As it does, paint cracks and flakes off, revealing YELLOW reflex underneath.

All three suffer grievous wounds from the high-clearance laser shots.

Lucas looks on in horror at the display. Hesitantly, he turns his laser pistol, and points it at Jam-R. "S-sir, t-that's a V-VIOLET barrel!"

He looks like he wants to shoot...

...Jam-R panics and throws the offending pistol away from him. He frantically looks around, as if expecting, say, a High Programmer to materialise from the synthcrete, or the air ducts, or wherever. Hands shaking, he pulls out a laser rifle. Where did that come from? No matter, it has a RED barrel, and that's what counts. He shoots.

It's not as effective, but at least it doesn't contribute to a point of treason. But his shaking seems to have thrown off his aim.

Meanwhile, the communists have looked on in amusement. One of them attempts to retrieve the treasonous laser. He's cut off (rather, his hand is punctured) by a shot from Mango-R, who, right now, is trying to find cover. He fires off another couple of shots, hitting another communist, causing him to drop his slugthrower.

But in the process, his laser barrel starts squealing.

L4-O also fires, but is distracted by the squealing and misses with both shots. He starts counting up the shots he's fired, but keeps losing count.

Meanwhile, Cryo-R's drugged-up mind seems to think he's under attack, as he's been dragged here there and everywhere by some sort of super-speedy clone, ending up at a place where everything runs at super-speed. Of course, it is he who is slowed down, but he refuses to notice.

Sluggishly, he realises he has an ORANGE-clearance item in his backpack. But by this time, he's already trying to escape the chaos.

Just as a laser hits its mark.

It hits Cryo-R's good leg, crippling it instantly (from Cryo-R's POV), or in a couple of seconds (for everyone else).

written by Jam on Aug 12, 2010 04:10

I look in horror back at Lucas, who's (maybe) pointing a laser pistol at me, and seems strangely eager to shoot me. (If he actually does shoot at me, I try to run away)

"Wait! Don't shoot! Lucas, you know me, I wouldn't knowingly do anything treasonous! I was in such a hurry to get Cryo-R to the others... I should have asked you what clearance the barrels were. It was just an accident, okay?"

I smile nervously at him.

"Okay? Now let's have some FUN shooting commies and serving Friend Computer and drinking B3 and being happy! Here, take some B3 Extra Classic."

I try to give him one of my B3 Extra Classics.

I glance at the communists. I try to judge how many there are, and what weapons they are carrying.

I try to aim my laser rifle at one of them, but I'm shaking so bad that after a few seconds I just give up and put the rifle away. Instead, I run over to L4-O and try to assist him.

written by Speeder on Aug 12, 2010 05:02

I say at the Com 1.

"Ok... Whatever you need, we need to talk... If you are alive either you already made them happy, or they plan to torture you, probably this bot is going to torture you... I am waiting in the cloning station, kill yourself, in any way that you want, so we can talk without the risk of someone kapitalist hearing, I think that they may be tapping on the communications of this channel."

I then wait HAPPILY to hear a commie committing suicide.

written by 4616599 on Aug 12, 2010 06:17

"Ah. Now, I'm interested in the CMTs that just entered. What di-" My voice trails off abruptly as I note the sounds of frenzied shooting. "Speaking of CMTs, excuse me..." I crouch behind the table (and the station monitor), substitute my stunner with the ORANGE laser rifle, and attempt to snipe at the commies through the convenient holes in the wall.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 12, 2010 09:50

"What A!?"

In surprise, I throw the laser pistol towards the direction of the communists. I pull out the other pistol, and continue firing, at a slower rate, so as to not hit Jam-R by accident.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 12, 2010 12:07

"BAH!"

I toss my laser pistol back into my backpack and retrieve Turbo. I try to kneel down to gain some stability, seeing as how one leg is broken and I'm now missing a crutch.

I load Turbo up with a random shell and attempt to fire directly into the commie squad!

written by Cryoburner on Aug 12, 2010 12:11

"Arr... They have poked me with their flashy pulsing lights!"

Not entirely sure whether it was a flashy pulse from the blurry figure that dragged me into this hazardous environment or from one of the others, I pull out my shelf and use it as cover while I back away from all the flashing and blurring that's going on. I also look around a bit to determine which room or corridor I'm in*, and crawl away from the area to get as far away from the action as feasible.

*(since the stats page still claims I'm in the PVTF Lounge and all. 😊)

Ruins of the Warehouse

Jam-R continues to panic. He tries to get Lucas to refrain from firing, and with the aid of B3, he succeeds. Lucas takes the can and puts it away.

Jam-R returns to attempting to shoot the communists but he's shaking so much, he just can't aim right. He gives up and goes to help L4-O instead.

An ORANGE laser is fired through a hole in the wall leading to the dark office. It hits, but only on the reflec of one of the communists, who staggers back a couple of steps, before himself firing. His slug does indeed pass through the hole but doesn't seem to hit anything alive.

Dark office

As it happens, the slug hit one of the rigid ex-communists, who still doesn't move under the impact.

Corridor D4

"I am trained to resist torture," the communist on the other end answers. "I will resist."

Ruins of the Warehouse

But back to the firefight. There's still one communist in a position to fire, and he does so.

His slugthrower backfires dramatically, throwing the communists, and Jam-R, to the ground. Amusingly, Jam-R lands on top of Cryo-R, preventing him from leaving and silencing his slow-motion speech.

Mango-R discards his squealing pistol - all of it - by throwing it at the communists, where it continues to squeal.

It becomes clear that there's another squealing barrel in the possession of someone present.

But Mango-R ignores it. He still has another pistol, so he uses that instead. He fires once, hitting a communist square in the torso. Right where the reflec is thickest.

L4-O replaces his pistol with Turbo, loading it up in the process. Aiming as best he can (aided by Jam-R) he fires.

Somehow, the shell passes through the squad of communists and impacts the wall behind them, exploding into a shower of sparks.

I search L4-O's backpack for the other squealing barrel. If I find it, I take it and throw the barrel at the communists. Then I take one of my grenades, pull the pin (with my teeth if I have to), and throw both at the communists (or toward the squealing barrels if they are close to the communists).

I hand L4-O another cone rifle shell and trigger if he asks for one.

John-R waits for the communist to stop transmitting, and replies, "We should probably go. If the communist wants to say anything, he's got the com."

Ruins of the Warehouse

Jam-R searches L4-O's backpack and finds his laser pistol, and the squealing barrel. Detaching the offending barrel, he hurls it at the communists. This should be fun.

L4-O asks for another shell and trigger, so Jam-R retrieves those and gives them to him.

While L4-O is loading, a communist lines up for a shot. It hits Cryo-R's shelf, which he is sluggishly holding up as a shield.

And goes right through.

It flies right past Cryo-R's ear, going wheet as it does, and embeds itself into the wall behind him.

Cryo-R's vision returns somewhat. Everything seems to be not as insanely fast now.

Mango-R seems to have had the same idea, and crouches down behind a large piece of rubble he found.

Now he's finished loading, L4-O fires!

The shell hits a communist square in the face! It bursts, spreading burning napalm over the communist and the two nearest him. They fall to the ground, yelling about how they're on fire and how it burns.

But their day is about to get more FUN, as one of the squealing barrels explodes!

The three communists continue being on fire, but they stop moving and complaining. I'd say they're dead.

Through the smoke, another squad can be seen.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 13, 2010 00:57

"Wow... that was a FUN one! Find me another one of those... it looks like we still have more commies coming to join our FUN party!"

I await, my hand ready to reload and fire my cone rifle as soon as Jam gives me another shell and trigger.

written by Speeder on Aug 13, 2010 02:20

I nod and then start to walk toward the... FUN. Slugthrower thing in hand.

written by Jam on Aug 13, 2010 02:28¹⁷⁷

I smile as I watch the commies burning and exploding, and return to a state of extreme happiness.

"Yay! That was FUN!"

I search for the same type of shell that I gave L4-O before. If I can't find that, I just take out a random shell. I hand the shell and a trigger to L4-O.

I wait excitedly for him to fire, then watch the results, hoping to see more burning and exploding commies.¹⁷⁸

written by Cryoburner on Aug 13, 2010 09:39¹⁷⁹

"Arr... Someone has poked my shelf! That is not FUN!"

Still shielding myself with the shelf, I crawl into the nearest opening in the wall, whether that be into Secondary Sector Logistics or the dark office.

written by 4616599 on Aug 13, 2010 15:37

I turn toward the station monitor. "Can you tell me about this office's defences, if they exist? How long have you been stationed here?"

Ruins of the Warehouse

Still sluggish, Cryo-R pulls himself towards the dark office.

The intense cold doesn't exactly help his wounds.¹⁸⁰

¹⁷⁷ JAM: (ooc: Hmm... I guess I didn't throw a grenade... Though I really didn't need to anyway, the exploding barrel had the same effect!)

¹⁷⁸ JAM: (ooc: I wouldn't want L4-O's shot to miss or something, that wouldn't be very fun... I'll spend a PP to try to make his shot hit just the right spot to wipe out all the communists in the next squad.)

¹⁷⁹ CRYOBURNER: (Maybe you did throw the grenade, and it just hasn't exploded yet. Perhaps the barrel explosion sent it flying off somewhere else in the mean time. 😊)

(More importantly, why are the communists shooting at someone who's unarmed, drugged, and has shown no indication of being an enemy, while largely ignoring everyone shooting at them? For all they know, I could be a captured ally. 🤔)

¹⁸⁰ GLIGAR: (ooc: You aren't cleared for that information.)

L4-O and Jam-R prepare another cone rifle shot. Looks like Jam-R found another of the FUN rounds.

L4-O loads, as a communist from the new squad fires. Surprisingly, he doesn't shoot at Cryo-R.

He doesn't seem to be shooting at anyone else, either, looking at the trajectory of that slug. It flies right down Corridor D1 not 2, narrowly missing an approaching Speed-O as it does.

The communist who fired the slug suddenly collapses to the floor, holding his head. Looks like John-R is coming.

Corridor D2

Yes, there he is.

Speed-O reaches the FUN, holding a slugthrower he probably took from the communists.

Ruins of the Warehouse

He gets to see Turbo in action once again, as L4-O fires!

The shell, again, hits a communist dead on, in the chest this time. Once again, it breaks apart, spraying napalm everywhere, and hitting three communists.

Speed-O narrowly avoids being splashed.

A second communist sees Speed-O, and fires past his burning comrades.

The slug hits Speed-O in the chest. His kevlar absorbs most of the impact, though I suspect not all of it. I imagine Speed-O feels like someone punched him in the chest or something.

written by Speeder on Aug 13, 2010 17:38

I get really pissed as the communist make me go "oof", I aim for the head of whatever flaming commie is nearby the other one, and shoot, with the intention to spray burning brains around.

"DON'T SHOOT ME!!!"

written by Jam on Aug 13, 2010 22:00

"Ha ha ha ha ha! Burn Commies! Buuuurn!"

I hand L4-O another shell and trigger if he asks for one (random, unless he requests a certain type).

I take out my laser rifle and aim at the head of one of the not-burning communists. If my aim seems steady enough, I fire a shot.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 14, 2010 00:06

"Hm... that's quite enough FUN for one fight. Wouldn't want to run out of shells now..."

"You've done good, Turbo! And you, Jam!"

I put Turbo away and retrieve my laser pistol. Seeing it is now unloaded, I put in my spare laser pistol barrel and start to fire.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Speed-O decides that being shot, even when wearing kevlar, is not a fun experience, and shoots back. In his anger, though, he manages to miss everything.

While he's waiting for L4-O, Jam-R attempts to fire his laser rifle again. Since he's no longer panicking all over the place, his aim is more steady.

In fact, he pulls off a nice headshot on one of the burning communists! The body falls onto two other communists, who catch fire. They don't realise it, though, as they prepare to fire.

John-R then arrives and surveys the situation. He concentrates but nothing happens, sadly.

L4-O decides to change his weapon, pulling out his laser pistol and loading it. Firing with that instead, he also manages to miss everything.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 14, 2010 00:38

It's pleasantly brisk in the dark office, and the cool air seems to help make things even less blurry. Noting some others in the room, I crawl over to the lighted desk, where I find the room's occupant from before, along with that other guy I had been looking for a while back.

"Ahh, I see you two met up. How about we have that lunch now! It's been hard to focus lately, so it might be nice to settle down and have a good meal."

I crawl up on top of the desk, open a packet of cold fun and a can of B3, and begin munching away on them.

"Would either of you two like anything to eat? I have cold fun, insta-hot fun, B3, candies and pens."

written by Speeder on Aug 14, 2010 00:40

I get mad, and LAUNCH!

Oooops, I end throwing the entire slugthrower on the commies on fire...

written by Jam on Aug 14, 2010 03:43

"Oh, I got him!"

Satisfied, I put my laser rifle away and take out a B3 Extra Classic.

"Time for a mandatory B3 break!"

I open my B3, and calmly drink it while watching the burning commies.

"Oh wait, there's one I missed!"

I set down my B3 and take out a laser pistol. I aim it at the head of one of the not-burning communists, and fire!

"Did I hit him? I can't tell. Oh well..."

I put my laser pistol back in my pocket, pick up my B3, and continue drinking it. Mmmmm... B3!

written by Kristos on Aug 14, 2010 04:49

I wake up on the floor. Hearing all the commotion above, I ready my laser pistol with the RED barrel for any undesired guests. What is wrong with me? My problems seem to have no correlation with anything! Maybe Friend Computer will cure me. I become aware of the pain of my broken ribs. I eat some Soylent RED to regain some lost strength.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 14, 2010 08:47

I get really annoyed at the squealing of the remaining barrel, so I pull out my laser pistol, look out from behind my piece of rubble, and fire at the barrel. Then I crouch back behind the rubble again.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 14, 2010 14:53

I continue firing into the commie squad. If possible, I shoot at a grenade or a squealing laser pistol barrel if they're available.

Ooor, if the commies happen to have grenades on their person...

Dark office

For some reason, Cryo-R thinks that it's a nice time for a B3 party... with a firefight going on in the next room. Well, the room's low temperatures seem to be supportive of Cold Fun, I guess. An odd choice when you're cold, but okay. As for the B3... well, as soon as it's opened, it freezes.

Joris-O starts shivering. Cryo-R doesn't seem to notice.

The Station Monitor politely declines the offer of Insta-Hot Fun.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Meanwhile, back in the battle, Speed-O is angry. Enough to throw his slugthrower at the communists. Oops.

Jam-R takes a B3 break while he watches the burning communists. Noticing that he missed one, he switches to his laser pistol and fires. His shot hits the VIOLET barrel from earlier, causing it to begin to squeal.

Satisfied, he resumes drinking his B3.

Mango-R follows suit, firing at L4-O's old barrel. He hits, causing the squealing to get louder.

L4-O also has the same idea, and also fires at his old barrel.

This time, the barrel explodes!

The explosion causes a chain reaction. First, the other squealing pistol explodes. Next, the remaining ammunition in Speed-O's slugthrower cooks off, ruining the slugthrower. Third, three grenades also decide to explode.

The results are quite satisfying, with all except one of the communists dead, and the living one unconscious.

Kristos-R decides that he's done daydreaming, and readies his own pistol, before eating some Soylent. Delicious.

"Lightspeed Jam and friends for the AWESOMENESSS!!!"

I strike one of those funny anime poses... Where I saw that? There are anime in Alpha Complex?

I then check my armour, and walk to near the others.

"Is everyone ok? L4, where is your crutch?"

I then look to Jam.

"Hey, you found Lucas?"

"AWESOMENESSS!!!"

I try to imitate Speed-O's pose. Then I answer his question.

"Yep, he was at the bunker's cloning station."

I look at Lucas.

"Hey Lucas, could you give me your laser pistol for a second?"

I notice that L4-O doesn't have his crutch, and offer him my 1.3m pipe.

Speed-O strikes a pose in celebration of the recent FUN. But just where did he see the pose to copy it like that? Probably the Romantics... they love to show off those poorly-made montages of scraps of whatever Old Reckoning contraband they can lay their hands on... but why did Speed-O remember it? Is it true that they perfected viral marketing back then? Speculating about this question is treason.

Whatever the source, Jam-R now tries to copy it, before returning to more important matters, such as Lucas' laser pistol. Lucas, apparently over his need to shoot, gives it to him.

Dark office

The Station Monitor breaks the sudden silence. IN ANSWER TO YOUR PREVIOUS QUESTION, THE STATION HAS NO CONVENTIONAL DEFENCES. HOWEVER, MOST CLONES FIND THE TEMPERATURE IN HERE UNCOMFORTABLE AFTER A SHORT WHILE, AND LEAVE. WHETHER THEY ARE ALIVE WHEN THEY LEAVE IS ANOTHER MATTER.

AS FOR HOW LONG I HAVE BEEN ASSIGNED HERE... I NO LONGER REMEMBER.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 15, 2010 01:39

Lacking my laddercrutch, I accept Jam's pipe.

"Hey, you down there! Bring that ladder up with you when you come up." I say down the hole to Kristos.

I turn back to the group.

"That was FUN!"

I look around.

"It looks like almost everyone is here. I guess we should get going soon."

written by Speeder on Aug 15, 2010 02:11

I nod, and then I smile happily at Jam.

"Hello Lucas! Glad that you are well!"

I look at Kristos down there.

"We should not retrieve him? Why is your ladder down there? And how everyone got up here?"

written by Cryoburner on Aug 15, 2010 02:45

Refreshed by my meal and the cool, clean dark office air, I decide to head out, leaving through the doorway into Corridor D1, so as to avoid any flashy pokers that may still be in the warehouse.

"Well, it's been fun. It was pleasant having lunch with you, but I once again have other things to attend to. See you later!"

I take my frozen can of B3, and leave. While crawling out into the corridor, I more closely examine the injury to my poked leg. I make my way down to Corridor D2, and head south.

written by Kristos on Aug 15, 2010 03:02

I grunt. "Jam-R, could you let down your chain of cables? I'll secure it to the ladder, and maybe some of you can pull me up with it."

written by Jam on Aug 15, 2010 04:04

I return the laser pistol to Lucas.

"Good, I didn't find any evidence of CMT tampering. But I couldn't help noticing that you didn't fire any shots at the commies. Hmm... You must have been conserving shots! But you don't need to worry about that, I have plenty of spare laser pistol barrels! See..."

I take out my spare laser pistol barrels and start counting them.

"One, two, three, fo-wait..."

I inspect that particular laser barrel. Hmm... It's seems different from the others.

"Ah! That's right, I took two of those VIOLET barrels! Uh...uh..."

I quickly drop it down the hole.

"There! Now the commies won't be able to get it either! See! Hey look, it's Kristos-R..."

I take out my chain of cables and start to lower it down the hole. I turn around to talk to Speed-O, and notice Cryo-R trying to drag himself toward Corridor D2.

“LOOK! Cryo-R’s escaping again! Here, take this. I’ll go get him!”

I give the cables to Speed-O, then start running after Cryo-R.

“CRYO-R!! I JUST FOUND YOU, AND NOW YOU’RE TRYING TO ESCAPE AGAIN!! BAD CRYO-R! BAD CR-ooof! OW OW OW OW! MY HEAD!! WHO PUT THAT RUBBLE THERE!! AH! WAIT CRYO-R!”¹⁸¹

written by 4616599 on Aug 15, 2010 09:38

“Okay, I can sorta sense that.” I reply, retreating to warmer air near the door. “One more thing. I don’t know the clearances here, so I’ll just ask some very direct questions. Have you always kept this place cold and dark? What was your role here before the commie attacks? How many of you are there and will you leave this place with us?”

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 15, 2010 12:37

“Be careful! That barrel might explode!” I watch as the barrel falls, and I look down the hole.

I grab onto the cables, and help Speed-O. I call to Jam-R, “What if someone does get it, like a clone, or a... com... com... evil person gets it?”

Strangely, I cannot bring myself to say that word.

L4-O accepts the replacement for his crutch, but still thinks that his ladder is important.

Dark office

Does Cryo-R not want to terminate commies? Does he even want to continue with the mission? Does he even remember what the mission is? Is he committing treason by completely ignoring these questions, and going to inspect some random piece of Alpha Complex? Spoiler: Yes.

He decides that he’s had enough to eat, and heads out, to D2 South.

Ruins of the Warehouse

This doesn’t go unnoticed. Eventually.

After he inspects Lucas’ laser pistol (and discards another VIOLET barrel he picked up), and begins helping Kristos-R reach the warehouse, Jam-R notices. He hands his cable over to Speed-O (who, after a short while, is helped by Mango-R), and gives chase.

But fails to notice a piece of rubble in the way, which he promptly trips up over.

Dark office

MY ROLE, the Station Monitor responds, IS TO COLLECT... INFORMATION. DUE TO THE SENSITIVE NATURE OF THIS INFORMATION, IT IS PRUDENT TO KEEP THE TEMPERATURE

“Wait Cryo-R, I have something very important to tell you! L4-O said that if we don’t get the mission done, the whole sector’s gonna go kabloolie with us inside! Come back!”

I try to pick up Cryo-R and carry him back to the others.

Once the cable is lowered, Kristos-R ties it to the ladder, and then gets on the ladder. He notices the dropped VIOLET barrel. Something’s going to have to be done about that.

Slowly, but surely, the ladder is pulled upwards by Speed-O and Mango-R.

Corridor D2

Jam-R reaches Cryo-R, who is inspecting his wounds. The most recent laser wound isn’t bleeding all that much, as you’d imagine, but does render the leg useless.

As such, Jam-R attempts, once again, to carry Cryo-R back to the warehouse. He seems to have become heavier than last time, or is that just Jam-R’s imagination? The two head back, slowly, to the warehouse.

written by Kristos on Aug 16, 2010 01:40

As I reach the next floor, I climb off and hand L4-O his ladder.

VIOLET. Such a pretty color. But we’d best be rid of it. I take out my laser pistol and fire a few shots at the 0xFF00FF barrel.

“Where do we need to head now? What is our mission?” I ask aloud.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 16, 2010 10:45

I graciously accept the laddercrutch again and begin using it. I trade the pipe to Kristos, perhaps he'll find a use for it?

After he speaks, I cringe.

"SHHH! Not so loud! Those traitorous commies will overhear, are you trying to get us killed deader? Just stick with us, we need to get to the other nearby warehouse."

I yell over to the others, "Hey! Could someone help me carry Cryo-R?"

Kristos-R continues to be hoisted up.

When he arrives, he disconnects the ladder and hands it back to L4-O.

But then he remembers something. The VIOLET barrel.

Drawing his laser pistol, he aims down the hole and fires. Four times, to be precise.

Clones in the concourse scramble to get out of the way.

¹⁸² SPEEDER: (OOC: 0xFF00FF is magenta, not violet, but knowledge of that is treason, thus I don't know that the barrel actually is 0x8F00FF based on the spectral approximation, that is there the clearance names were derived. ¹⁸³ SPEEDER: (OOC: stats link please? I really forgot if I grabbed towel or not on the warehouse in D level)

You could just bookmark the stats and map pages though, since the address doesn't change between updates.

Hey! I still appear to have 24 pep pills! Maybe I should count them again. 😊)

Three of his shots hit the barrel. It starts squealing like crazy.

The fourth hits the inert Albey-R in the torso. Unlike other shots, this time the bleeding doesn't stop.

But Kristos-R doesn't seem to notice.

Still feeling hot and sweaty (how long is that going to last? You aren't cleared to know.) Speed-O looks for a towel. He doesn't seem to have one, though.¹⁸⁵

Corridor D1

On the way back to the warehouse, Cryo-R decides that he'd much rather not be with the rest of the team after getting "poked" with lasers. He struggles to escape, but Jam-R applies more force. He does not want Cryo-R getting away again.

written by Speeder on Aug 16, 2010 17:27

As I see Kristos doing shit, I get scared...

"Holy crap, are you nuts? You now need to throw that away from the control room!"

I then proceed to do a this is sparta kick on Kristos... And does not matter if I succeed or fail, I run the farthest I can away from the barrel.

written by Jam on Aug 16, 2010 19:40

I continue carrying Cryo-R over to the others. I pause when I see Speed-O running away from the hole.

"What happened? Are we leaving now? Ugh... Does that mean I have to carry Cryo-R all the way back?"

I turn around and start to carry Cryo-R back toward Corridor D2. I realize after a few steps that he seemed to be trying to go there anyways. Why should I have to carry him there, he can just go there himself!

I set Cryo-R on the ground and follow closely behind him. I grab him if he seems to be going the wrong way or trying to escape.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 16, 2010 20:48

An unnamed clone tries to drag E_net-R to safety as clones evacuate the immediate area. There doesn't seem to be a point in doing so for Albey-R.

The scrubot enters, and notices the squealing barrel. It decides that the barrel is dirty, and begins dusting it.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Lucas takes one look down the hole, and runs for it.

John-R sighs, and pulls out his laser pistol.

But it turns out not to be necessary. Speed-O plants a kick on Kristos-R that sends him flying right back down the hole again... right onto the scrubot. And right onto his broken ribs.

John-R follows everyone else, and runs.

Corridor D2

Looks like everyone had the same idea. Leaving L4-O behind, they regroup at the D1-D2 intersection. Cryo-R obviously still wants to go it alone with his solo inspection of every piece of unimportant detail that most clones wouldn't ever care to glance at, and tries to head south.

But not before Jam-R can grab him again.

Concourse C1

Jostling the scrubot causes it to poke the carrel with more force than was intended... whereupon it explodes.

During the chaos of the next few seconds, the explosion causes several things to happen at once.

It rips through the scrubot, destroying it. Kristos-R doesn't fare much better, being right on top of the scrubot. His body gets to experience getting torn apart by a grenade-like explosion. One wonders what his last thought was. Not that it really matters, since he won't remember anything past, maybe, firing at a laser barrel, when he's recloned.

It also hits Albey-R. If he wasn't already dead, he is now.

As for E_net-R... well, looks like he got dragged into the meeting hall in time.

Control room

The door to the control room is blown off its hinges by the explosion, hitting the terminal. Some of the room's paintwork is singed. The terminal seems to be spitting out error codes.

Meeting hall

Clones still in here are thrown to the floor as the force of the explosion forces the doors open again. Some of the stacks of chairs fall over.

The much-abused floor caves in further into the almost-as-abused concourse below. There are now several holes in the floor, and the remains don't look too solid.

L4-O seems to be lucky, though, as his section of floor remains relatively stable.

Cloning station

The terminal lights up with a new message. Of course, no-one's around to read it. But it seems that there are three clones waiting for cloning. Due to some sort of protocol, they'll be cloning one at a time.

Accordingly, one cloning tank fires up.

After the explosion I return to the location, carefully, to avoid going into crumbling floor. I look down, then I return to near the others.

"Huh... Nutty shooty guy was not fast enough to save the control room from damage... I think I will need to go down there and check... Also Nutty shooty guy seemly does not even exist anymore, or something like that."

I turn back toward the explosion side.

"Someone want to help me get down there and up again?"

I look up at Jam-R.

"Now, how will we get Cryo-R to co-operate? And where should we be headed for now?"

I feel a bit weird while saying it. I should have said, 'What do we do next?' I attempt to clear my mind, and wait for an answer.

written by Jam on Aug 17, 2010 15:00

"Cryo-R, why do you keep trying to go that way? What's so interesting about it?"

I take out a few kinds of pills and wave them in front of Cryo-R's face. I keep them just out of reach.

¹⁸⁶ SPEEDER: (ooc: the scrubot don't had a super-acid thing? what happen when something with that acid explodes?)

"If you come with us, I'll give you some yummy candy! I've got lots of different flavors! Don't you want some candy?"

I respond to Mango-R.

"We need to go to the distribution warehouse and go... somewhere."

I put the pills away and look over at Speed-O.

I look to Jam.

"I think we still have some time, if we stop wasting time hunting commies, making extra-huge holes in stuff, or breaking stuff, or... wandering around inspecting stuff."

I stare at Cryo.

Then I look again toward the damaged concourse.

"The control station got damaged, but I guess that we don't have time to actually see what we can do about it... So, we are going to get in the distribution warehouse, and from there figure how we get to the H level as the commander... or whatever, requested. Also, I left there a bot that seemly is on our site and have secret orders, maybe it can tell us how to get to H level. But be prepared, also I left a unconscious commie there, and seemly it does not want to defect to our side, so maybe we will need to fight him again."

written by Jam on Aug 17, 2010 23:53

"Did you interrogate the commie? And what about Kristos-R?"

I walk carefully over to the hole and yell inside.

"That clone that just died is named Kristos-R! Could someone tell him to meet us at H Level when he reclones? Thanks!"

I carefully walk back to the others.

Corridor D2

So... now that everyone except Kristos-R is here... what next? Oh right... H Level.

Ruins of the Warehouse

Jam-R heads over to the warehouse again and yells down a hole about what to do with Kristos-R. The nameless clone gives him the thumbs-up. "Understood."

That done, Jam-R returns.

Cloning station

A clone begins to form in the active cloning tank.

"Yep, I did... From what I understood before a mutant commie tried to kill him with a mind attack, Foursix stole the chewed ME card from the body of the towel guy, and handed him for a reason that he refused to tell me."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 18, 2010 14:00

"So what are we waiting for. Let's go! Go team..."

I think for a moment, seemingly counting every person in the group.

"Team Epsilon!"

I start moving forward, but I only stay a short distance in front of the group.

written by Jam on Aug 18, 2010 14:32

"A mutant tried to kill him with his mind! Something like what John-R can do? Wait..."

I turn to Lucas.

"Didn't you say Freaky was a mutant that once killed a clone just by thinking at him? Maybe Communists are controlling him somehow? Could you tell us a little bit more about him?"

I listen to Lucas' response. Then I turn back to Speed-O.

"And Foursixonesixfiveninenine is a clone? What a strange name! He sounds like a hacker! Maybe he's the one that made the Stalin.B virus? Do you have any idea what he looks like?"

I pick up Cryo-R and ask John-R if he could help me carry him. I follow L4-O.

"Go Team Epsilon!"

written by Cryoburner on Aug 18, 2010 15:03

"Wait! I need to see the DocBot in the bunker about my injured leg! I wouldn't be of much use without being about to move around easily, right? I would just slow the team down in my current condition. You're not trying to slow the team down, are you? That doesn't seem very teamly..."

"After getting treated, I could meet up the others getting cloned down there and direct them to where we need to go. That would be helpful!"

written by Gligar on Aug 18, 2010 15:32

Corridor D2

Speed-O mentions the communist's would-be mental killer from earlier. As he does, L4-O starts heading towards the distribution warehouse, before stopping to wait for everyone else.

But Jam-R latches onto the method of attack: through the mind. There's something familiar... like John-R, or... what was it Lucas said...? Freaky.

Lucas elaborates a little. "I don't know an awful lot, but I believe he was a normal clone before he was altered by some project a few yearcycles ago. Now, he no longer looks human. He has mental powers I don't understand, including what I said: the ability to kill someone by thinking at them. He can take care of himself most of the time, but if the communists found him, there could be a problem."

With that, the team, now called Team Epsilon, prepares to follow L4-O... except Cryo-R, who, predictably, wants to go elsewhere. Now he wants to go visit the bunker's docbot.

Cloning station

The clone fully coalesces into the form of Kristos-R. It remains asleep while its memories are downloaded.

written by Speeder on Aug 18, 2010 16:09

I peer at Cryo.

"Ok... Go fetch Kristos, but please, show up this time! It is really important, we may need your... your... pen collecting skills."

I turn to Lucas.

"So... Who is Freaky? If he is powerfull like John mentioned to me, we have a serious problem, I have no idea of what is preventing him from attacking us."

I start to walk toward the warehouse that houses our Nukabot.

written by Jam on Aug 18, 2010 16:27

I let Cryo-R go.

"Maybe you could convince some of the clones in the bunker to help you down the hole?"

I turn to John-R.

"You must know a lot about psionic mutants... Is there any way to block their powers? Maybe a tinfoillyke hat? Maybe we could train our minds to resist? Or maybe we could find a telepath to protect us? Can one psionic mutant block another's powers?"

I follow L4-O.

written by Gligar on Aug 19, 2010 00:27

Corridor D2

As the team walks, Lucas again talks about Freaky. "Before he was changed, his name was Al-KAZ. I don't know if he still uses that name. But I do know that his powers could reach out over half a sector or more. If he had some sort of fingerprint."

"I've heard of that," John-R adds. "I've never tried it, but from what I'm aware, it's possible for a psionic mutant to get a mental fingerprint of a clone, and then use that to find them from afar. The range depends on the mutant, I would assume."

Corridor D4

He continues, "As for blocking psychic mutants? There are a few methods under test, from what I heard. The simplest doesn't really need training. It involves filling your mind with those advertising jingles you keep hearing. I know they give me a headache."

Cloning Station

Kristos-R-GRU-2 opens his eyes. He's still in his cloning tank, and it hasn't released him yet.

The tank begins to drain of its fluids, and shortly opens fully. Kristos-R drops to the floor, slightly disoriented.

written by Kristos on Aug 19, 2010 00:59

A few memories start coming back to me. Like fresh clones being taken to the chemical showers. And where the chemical showers are. So I get up and start walking that way. But the sudden rising makes me dizzy, so I stop for a bit to stabilize.

written by Jam on Aug 19, 2010 03:34

"So the only thing that's stopping a psionic commie from killing us all right now is that they don't have a mental fingerprint of us? Scary."

I smile at John-R.

"Maybe you can get fingerprints too. You could use those fingerprints to track us! Here, try blasting my mind, see if you can get a fingerprint! I've always wondered what it feels like to be mind-blasted. It'll be FUN!!"

I excitedly walk over to John-R and hold my head close to his.

"And I'll think about advertising jingles! FRIENDCOMPUTERFRIENDCOMPUTERFRIENDCOMPUTERFRIENDCOMPUTER! Oh, I think it's working! I'm getting a headache already!"

written by Speeder on Aug 19, 2010 12:02

I pull Jam away from John.

"Hey, do you realize that maybe John have no idea on how to stop the mind blast? The last time I asked that he mind blasted himself."

Then I turn to John.

"I wonder what advertising jingles do when the attacker is a commie... It would be interesting if it turned the commie back to capitalism. Or not... Because this would mean one less person to shoot, and troubleshooting is fun, why else I would be a troubleshooter?"

written by Lightning4 on Aug 19, 2010 12:04

"Friendcomputerfriendcomputer..."

My voice trails off, but I look as though the music is still stuck in my head.

Cloning station

After leaning against a wall for a moment, Kristos-R heads for the showers. Wait... why is the floor wet? Ohh... that's right, the door got opened early. Looks like the showers cut off eventually.

Chemical Showers

Nothing's changed in here. There are the masks, and the START button.

Corridor D4

Still walking down the corridor, Jam-R decides to try ut John-R's "static" for himself... mostly by getting John-R to blast him. John-R isn't co-operating, though. "Maybe later," he says. "I'm kind of drained right now."

To Speed-O, he adds, "I kind of wonder that myself. It'd be an interesting experiment, wouldn't it?" He smiles.

Ah! There's the door to the warehouse.

written by Cryoburner on Aug 19, 2010 19:07

Seeing as I've apparently been freed, I begin crawling back toward the entrance to the bunker. On the way there, I re-count my candies to make sure they're still in order.

"Let's see, I gave few to that one guy, several to those guys in the office, tried chewing on a couple myself..."

Once I reach the warehouse, I carefully peek over the edge of the hole into the concourse below.

"Hello?"

written by Jam on Aug 20, 2010 00:17

I whisper to Speed-O.

"Did you hide Lucas' corpse? I don't think walking in on your own dead body would be a very FUN experience..."

written by 4616599 on Aug 20, 2010 00:21

I survey the damage done to the warehouse floors very carefully, checking for any sensitive bunker areas that the new holes could have exposed. That done, I head for the entrance and check for any sign of the rest.

written by Gligar on Aug 20, 2010 00:38

Ruins of the Warehouse

After checking, it seems that Cryo-R has 15 "candies" left. Those bottles make it difficult to tell.

Anyway, he reaches a hole and calls down. A nameless clone looks up, and waves back.

Joris-O also looks at the holes. It looks like one of them leads to the corridor below.

Having done that, he heads for the corridor. Looks like the rest of the team has moved on. No-one else is in the corridor.

Corridor D4

Was Lucas's corpse moved from view in the warehouse...?

written by Kristos on Aug 20, 2010 00:47

I systematically enter the showers, don a mask, and push "START" three times and start singing something about a legend.

written by Speeder on Aug 20, 2010 02:04¹⁸⁸

I stop near the door, and make a "Shhh" sound.

Then I try to hear if there are anything alive inside.

written by Jam on Aug 20, 2010 03:02

I look around for any dead commies with fuzzy hats on them, and attempt to take the fuzzy hats. I put one on. I look for a nearby mirror so I can admire my new fuzzy hat. I show off my fuzzy hat to the others. I take off my fuzzy hat and start stroking it. I sit in the corner and cradle my fuzzy hat. I softly whisper comforting things to my fuzzy hat. I decide to call my new pet hat "Fuzzy". I start to wonder what a pet fuzzy hat would eat. I attempt to feed Fuzzy some Soylent RED (but I don't open the packet, I just shove it inside Fuzzy's 'mouth'). I sing softly to Fuzzy. I set Fuzzy down and attempt to train him to come to me. Confused at his lack of response, I take Fuzzy and make sure he's feeling alright. I start to worry about Fuzzy. Is he unwell? Maybe I fed him too much Soylent RED? I try to figure out what's wrong with Fuzzy. I decide that Fuzzy must be unhappy being so far away from my head, where he belongs. I take Fuzzy and carefully put him back on my head. Then I stand up and walk back to the others. "Hey everyone, I found a new pet fuzzy hat. He's called "Fuzzy" and he's MINE!"¹⁸⁹

written by Cryoburner on Aug 20, 2010 06:24

I wave back to the nameless clone.

"Hello!"

"Say, would you happen to know of a comfortable way to get down there? My legs are in not-quite perfect condition

¹⁸⁸ SPEEDER: (OOC: this was meant for the previous turn, but for some reason when I returned, Gligar new turn was posted, and my post was nowhere to be seen...)

¹⁸⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: I've got my main connection back! 😊) at the moment, which could make climbing, hopping, or backflipping down something of a challenge. Preferably, the method wouldn't involve breaking limbs or getting skewered on pointy metal objects. Ideally, it might involve fuzzy hats in some way."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 20, 2010 07:32

I snap out of my trance upon seeing Jam.

"COMMUNIST IN A FUZZY HAT!"

I reach for my laser pistol, but then realize it is Jam.

"Don't do that! Commie hats are for commies and are treason! Put a logo of friend computer on it or something..."

written by Gligar on Aug 20, 2010 15:50

Chemical showers

The door closes, but doesn't click.

As before, the room begins to fill with chemical mixture. Kristos-R tries to ignore the stinging of the mixture by singing. I'm not sure what he's singing, though. Something about... a legend?

Now I have it, I can look at Kristos-R's MemoMax record... what is it about him...

...and... that's... interesting... they actually did it...

Corridor D4

Speed-O listens at the door. It sounds like there's one clone moving around in there.

Meanwhile, Jam-R is investigating the dead communists. He finds a fuzzy hat - as worn by the... well, you can't really call them "higher clearances" of communist, but you know what I mean - and huggles it and squeezes it and names it George-R Fuzzy.

But as it turns out there's more than just fuzz in Fuzzy. There's some sort of chemical on there that starts affecting Jam-R's senses... the main one being a feeling of dizziness...

L4-O can't help but notice the fuzzy hat, and, naturally, reaches for his laser pistol. But it's just Jam-R...

Ruins of the Warehouse

The nameless clone calls up with, "You'd pretty much need legs to get down here, I'm afraid. You could either come down a hole or head through past Selbio-R... mind the towel, though."

written by Speeder on Aug 20, 2010 18:47

I get my rifle, check the charge rings, and if there are charge left (and it should, since I exchanged the barrel before leaving the warehouse in first place), and get inside, pointing at the direction of the clone (relying on his sounds to know his position before hand).

"FREEZE!!!"

I whisper to friends nearby.

"I always wanted to do that..."

written by Kristos on Aug 20, 2010 22:01

To convince myself that the chemical does not really burn, I scream out singing, as best as screaming and singing can be done in my mask:

ONE DAY I WAS WALKIN' BARE FOOT IN THE SNOW!

ONE NIGHT I WAS SLEEPIN' ON THE ICE!

AND THEN ONE DAY I FROZE TO DEEEEEEEEEEEEATH!

OH AIN'T IT OH SO NIIIIICE-

OH AIN'T IT OH SO NICE!!!!

written by Jam on Aug 20, 2010 22:54

I follow Speeder into the room, taking my laser pistol out as I go. I try to aim my laser pistol at the clone, but get dizzy and fall to the ground.

"Oh, why's everything spinning so much?" I mumble.

I stand back up and try to run toward the clone. I stumble and end up crashing into a wall. I lay on the ground, horribly confused. Why am I so dizzy all of the sudden?

written by Lightning4 on Aug 21, 2010 01:14

Since my laser pistol is already ready now, I follow Speed inside... ready to shoot at any traitorous commies.

Except I trip over Jam while entering.

written by Gligar on Aug 21, 2010 01:44

Distribution warehouse

Speed-O, and the rest of Team Epsilon, charge in.

As it turns out, the communist is the same one that was knocked out before... Alexei, I guess.

He certainly recognises Team Epsilon. "You!"

Jam-R tries to aim at Alexei but ends up falling to the ground and crashing into a wall near the lift.

L4-O is more successful. He's ready to shoot.

Or he would be if he didn't trip up over the dizzy Jam-R.

Alexei laughs. "You call yourselves Troubleshooters... you're no better than random INFRAREDS who got handed lasers!"

Lucas growls and shoots at Alexei. He misses, though. Looks like he got distracted by the sight of his own corpse.

Chemical showers

Kristos-R continues singing. My thoughts on his song are beyond your security clearance.

As he finishes, the room begins to drain.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 21, 2010 02:27

I draw my laser pistol, and try to climb over both Jam-R and L4-O. I keep it aimed at the clone, considering that everyone else was trying to aim at him.

"Who are you anyway?" I decide to pull out my piece of rubble and try to use it as a shield before waiting for a response.

written by Speeder on Aug 21, 2010 03:15

I stare at Alexei.

"So, I save you from a commie killing you with mind powers, and you still is against us? Give me a reason to not shoot you in painful ways... And my aim is not crappy."

written by Lightning4 on Aug 21, 2010 11:06

I grumble a little bit, and attempt to regather my footing. I reaim my pistol on Alexei.

written by Jam on Aug 21, 2010 15:09

I try to aim at the the communist too.

"Who attacked you?"

Within moments, Alexei has a multitude (well, at least five, including Lucas' and John-R's) of weapons aimed at him... even Jam-R manages to keep him in his sights. This doesn't faze Alexei. "If you're going to shoot me, shoot me. You won't get anything else from me."

Suddenly, John-R tenses. "Sirs," he says quietly, "we're being probed."

Alexei laughs. "You feel that, mutant? The might of the revolution touches you, even now."

Lucas responds, "Says you," and fires. The shot misses. Barely.

Chemical showers

No sooner than the room finishes draining, it begins to fill up again. This time with water.

written by Kristos on Aug 21, 2010 18:11

With the burning still lingering, but the water sending chills through me (though whether it is actually cold, I know not), I begin a new song to neutralize both sensations:

FRIEND COMPUTER IS SO SMART,

HIS PROCESSORS MUST BE SCORCHING HOT.

MAYBE NYTROGEN KEEPS HIM COOL,

MAYBE, MAYBE NOT!!!

written by Speeder on Aug 21, 2010 19:02

"Ok, everyone, think about those ad jingles."

I think about my favourite ad, one for the most expensive version of B3 available, based in a ancient coca-cola ad that featured all those happy people and polar bears... You know, one of the old stuff that Friend Computer itself maintained because of the capacity of scaring away commies...

Then I look to Alexei, not happy that all the time I am near him, someone try to get my fingerprint, so I shoot his knee.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 21, 2010 23:02

Unable to think of any kind of ad jingle of any sort, I fire off two shots, one at his foot, and another at his right arm.

I then take a good look around the room, and pick up anything that could be improvised as a weapon.

written by Jam on Aug 21, 2010 23:28

"AHH! GET OUT OF MY HEAD!"

I stumble around some more and begin singing the only advertising jingle I can remember.

"FRIENDCOMPUTERFRIENDCOMPUTERFRIENDCOMPUTER!"

written by Cryoburner on Aug 22, 2010 00:11

"I suppose I could just roll over the edge while flailing my arms around wildly..."

I peer over the edge and examine the red splatter covering the room below. Apparently someone recently spilled jam all over the walls and floor. It seems to be dripping from the ceiling too.

"...or maybe I'll see about that other entrance. There must be an easy way to get there, so I'll just have a look around until I find it!"

I leave the warehouse, and crawl out into Concourse D1. I look around at all the sites and sounds, then try the door at the northernmost end, since that seems like a place where a bunker entrance might be.

written by Gligar on Aug 22, 2010 00:39

Chemical showers

Even though he's wearing a mask, it's getting difficult for Kristos-R to breathe. Presumably, the system wasn't designed with singing in mind.

Regardless, the room completely fills with water. Or maybe it's Nytrogen™. Maybe, maybe not. It isn't.

Distribution Warehouse

Everyone thinking about jingles? Good!

Speed-O thinks about an ad for B3 Cola Flavour, the only flavour that's ULTRAVIOLET clearance. The ad's played to the general populace to inspire them, to make them strive to be better than they are. And to not be communist. Communists don't get B3 Cola Flavour.

Jam-R seems to be having trouble. He just manages to stammer out the most basic of jingles... but it seems to work.

Lucas is also thinking about B3 jingles. Mmmm, it's mandatory!

I don't know if L4-O has thought of a jingle, but it's a fair bet.

John-R is probably blocking.

Mango-R, on the other hand, can't think of one. Instead, he just shoots. Twice. Both shots hit! Alexei collapses to the floor, breathing heavily, obviously in pain.

The sound snaps Speed-O back to reality, and he also shoots! Bam! Another shot to the same leg! It's burned right through! Alexei cries out once again.

Mango-R looks around again, and spots a length of pipe. He picks it up, noting that it's quite heavy.

Revolutionary Square

Heading through here, Cryo-R investigates the north exit. But the door seems to be jammed.

written by Speeder on Aug 22, 2010 01:09

I turn to John.

"The psi attack stopped?"

I resume thinking about that B3 jingle, but this time trying to not get too absorbed in it to the point of needing external forces to wake me up.

written by Kristos on Aug 22, 2010 02:05

Suddenly becoming aware of the breathable air shortage, I stop singing and conserve as much good air as I can. The ridiculousness of it all makes me chuckle.

written by 4616599 on Aug 22, 2010 09:49

I notice Cryo-R slipping away again and quickly tail him.

Meanwhile, I pull out my Com 1, switch to a random channel, and broadcast. "Any squad leader please respond quick. Is a worried komrade here, JHT sector is heard several shots around here. How is our strength kompared to enemy strength, around D level?"

"Whew... We survived. Hopefully whoever that was didn't get our fingerprints. I wonder if it was Freaky..."

I walk around a bit and notice that I'm still dizzy.

"I wonder why I'm so dizzy. Hmm... It seems to have started when... I put on Fuzzy!"

I take Fuzzy off and throw him into the corner of the room.

"Bad Fuzzy! Go sit in the corner and think about what you've done!"

I stare angrily at Fuzzy, then get distracted by all the boxes.

"Yay, Boxes! I wonder what's inside!"

I immediately begin to search the boxes for anything useful, interesting, or FUN.

Distribution Warehouse

"I... can't sense up being probed any more," John-R answers.

L4-O looks around for anything else. Ah yes, Nukabot. It flashes its lights when L4-O calls it.

Jam-R realises why he feels so dizzy. It's Fuzzy! He throws it into a corner.

As he's staring angrily at it, he notices all the boxes, and opens a few of them.

If he wanted a replacement hat, there are a bunch of Safe-T-lyke helmets in one box.

Another contains a large number of Safe-T-lyke Helmet Request Forms. Convenient.

A third contains a number of old surplus PDCs, ranging from a Series 650 up to some first-generation Series 1300s.

Revolutionary Square

Joris-O, or maybe "Scru-R", slips into the Square. He notices Cryo-R staring at the north door and makes a call on his Com 1.

He gets a reply. "We're suffering heavy losses near D level, comrade. But remain calm! Reinforcements are incoming. Computerist forces will be found and executed for the good of the people!"

written by Speeder on Aug 22, 2010 16:21

I walk over to Alexei, and kick him again until I am sure he will be sleeping for a while again.

Then I look around with a worried look.

"Jakobot, it is me, are you there? The troubleshooter team needs your help!"

written by Jam on Aug 22, 2010 18:51

I look sadly at the Safe-T-lyke helmets, which aren't very fuzzy or soft... I take one anyways and put it on my head.

I continue looking inside some of the other boxes. I search for medical supplies, though I still pay attention to anything else I find (I might still be able to find some use for it).

written by Lightning4 on Aug 22, 2010 21:26

I move over to Nukabot and slowly try to crawl back into the driver's seat. Hopefully I can still operate it with a broken leg.

If not... well I'll try anyway. Failure is treason!

Chemical showers

It does take a while, but eventually, the water begins to drain away.

Distribution warehouse

Jam-R takes a Safe-T-lyke helmet... rather sadly, I must add.

Looking in some other boxes, he finds the jackobot from earlier (hidden behind the boxes), some first aid kits, a whole box of Secondary Sector Logistics pens, some plastilyke sporks, and some small towels.

The jackobot trundles over to Speed-O. "What is it, citizen?"

Meanwhile, L4-O takes his place on Nukabot. The broken leg might be a small problem, as there are two pedals. But L4-O will try. Failure to try is a sign of unhappiness, after all. And not being happy is... well, you know.

written by Speeder on Aug 23, 2010 02:11

I walk over to the jackobot.

"Hello again!"

I smile happily.

"Glad to see you well, and well hidden too! Anyway, our commander, that is probably yours too, or related somehow, told us to move to Level H, but we have no idea on how to get there, since the elevator on this room is not capable of going there... Can you help us with that task?"

written by Jam on Aug 23, 2010 03:10

"Yay, sporks!"

I take about 18 sporks (two for each of us).

"Didn't Cryo-R say something about pens earlier? He must be needing some!"

I carry the box of pens to the center of the room.

"There! Hopefully he'll notice it when he gets here."

I take a few towels to replace the ones I lost in the chemical shower, then open a first aid kit and examine it's contents. I take it, and a few more first aid kits, then walk over to L4-O.

"Maybe there's something in this first aid kit I could use to fix your leg."

written by Gligar on Aug 23, 2010 15:09

Distribution Warehouse

The jackobot trundles over to the lift's control panel, looks at it, and returns. "The lift seems to have a button for H Level... what's the problem?"

Jam-R moves the pen box into the middle of the room, where, he hopes, Cryo-R will find it. If he ever comes back through here.

He also takes some sporks and some towels, before investigating the first aid kits. They look to be the same as the one which is now mounted on Nukabot, and are about half full with various types of pills. The rest of the space is taken up by bandages, plasters, and a couple of squeeze tubes of unidentifiable stuff.

Chemical showers

As the water drains away, powerful fans start up, beginning the drying cycle.

The door begins to rattle.

written by Speeder on Aug 23, 2010 18:49

I nod, then I say.

"Huh... nevermind... I thought that we did not had the button..."

I then enter the elevator, check it myself, and ask.

"Hey, you can come with us? Or is better for your mission to you stay here? We killed a huge amount of commies, they will probably come with reinforcements and clean the sector..."

written by Jam on Aug 23, 2010 19:24

I smile when I look at the contents of the first aid kit. It has exactly what I wanted!

"L4-O, do you want me to try putting a cast on your leg? Though maybe we should get to a safer area first."

I close up the first aid kit, then enter the lift after Speed-O. I talk to the jackobot.

"We would all really appreciate your help. Such a useful bot like yourself shouldn't just sit in the corner and rust away. You'll be much safer with us at H level."

I try not to get run over by Nukabot, just in case L4-O has problems pressing the brake.

written by Gligar on Aug 24, 2010 01:08

"It's probably better if I remain here," the jackobot replies. "I cannot keep up with a forkbot."

Speed-O checks the lift's control panel. There is indeed a button for H Level. There are buttons for many levels up to and including Q Level.

Chemical showers

The fans shut off.

written by Speeder on Aug 24, 2010 02:36

I think a bit.

"If you insist... But we can leave you at the H level if you want, that level is a armoury... Probably secure, we would not get ordered to invade a armoury filled with commies, that would be suicidal..."

Not that this never happened before... But thinking about that is treason.

"Um... sure. If you think you can help my leg, go for it. Just don't take a chainsaw or a knife to it or anything..."

written by Kristos on Aug 24, 2010 10:30

As soon as the doors open, I go get a jumpsuit. If I notice a VIOLET jumpsuit (or anything violet along the way), I stop and think: Such a beautiful color... but so deadly... I better keep away from VIOLET stuff from now on!

Anyway, I don my jumpsuit (RED) and speed off to what is left of Concourse C1 where everything blew to jam, looking for some way to climb. If I see a decent length of the pipe L4 gave me (at least 0.30 meters), I take it with me.

“Sorry guys, didn’t mean to cause so much ruckus in here. But wasn’t it FUN? Look at me, I’m good as new! Maybe I can get a good jump off of something and climb onto the next floor.”¹⁹⁰ written by Jam on Aug 24, 2010 13:53¹⁹¹

I shiver as I think of chainsaws, and horrible delusional insane docbots slicing limbs off. I protectively shield my stump and softly mutter to myself.

After a while, I respond to L4-O.

“Don’t worry, I won’t slice your leg off. I might need a jackobot to help me though... sigh Too bad there isn’t one coming... I would have really appreciated the help.”

I try to look depressed. I open the first aid kit again, and try to figure out what kinds of pills it has. I wonder if the medical training I seem to have had includes how to make a cast?

written by 4616599 on Aug 24, 2010 15:00

I decide to broadcast again. “Comrade, I am also heading for H Level following reports of some bot issues. Should there be any computerist activity I should be wary of?”

written by Gligar on Aug 24, 2010 15:21Distribution Warehouse

The jackobot responds, “I think I’ll stay here.”

Jam-R takes a closer look at the pills in the first aid kit. He recognises selenoctin, visomorpain, allacon, asperquint, and rolactin, but most are unfamiliar, and probably higher clearances.

He looks at the rest and wonders if he could make a cast with them, but realises that he can’t remember how. If indeed he ever knew.

Cloning station

Kristos-R exits the chemical showers and puts on a RED jumpsuit before leaving.

Concourse C1

After all that’s happened here, it’s definitely seen better days. The remains of clones and scrubot are still here. Among them are Kristos-R’s ME card, now somewhat scorched and a bit melted, as well as his PDC, although its screen is now broken. And there’s half of his pipe – about 0.8m of it. I doubt it would be possible to climb up.

¹⁹⁰ KRISTOS: (OOC: Gligar is doing a really good job at this. And, of course, everybody else’s creativity is helping. 😊)

¹⁹¹ JAM: (OOC: I agree!)

written by Jam on Aug 24, 2010 19:52¹⁹²

I frown for a second.

“Hmm... I just realized that I don’t know how to make a cast. Sorry, my brain must still be a bit muddled from the brainscrub... Maybe there will be a (hopefully not defective) docbot up at H level that can fix your leg. Or maybe the jackobot knows? Or maybe Speed-O, Mango-R, John-R, or Lucas?”

I continue waiting for everyone to enter to lift. I take out my PDC and try to figure out what it does. I try not to get run over or stabbed by any out of control forkbots driven by clones with broken legs...

written by Speeder on Aug 24, 2010 20:33

I think a bit, then I say.

“I work for cloneserv, but I don’t know why I only have technical skills, not medical skills... Maybe I worked at the maintenance of the cloning vats or something like that.”

written by Gligar on Aug 25, 2010 00:23¹⁹³Distribution warehouse

While he’s waiting for everyone to get on the lift, Jam-R plays with his PDC. It has a multitude of functions, most of which need more than the one-bar signal it has right now, like making calls, accessing public AlphaNet sites, filling in forms, that sort of thing. There’s also a camera.

Speed-O then commits a rather major sin for one employed by a branch of Tech Services: he calls it a cloning vat! It’s a cloning tank, and has nothing to do with food vats. Lucas winces.

written by Speeder on Aug 25, 2010 00:46

I notice Lucas wincing.

“Oh... Sorry... I am REALLY sorry... I think that this part got scrubbed too much... Also I am sorry for the early two times that I said the same vatcrap...”

I smile, sort of.

written by Kristos on Aug 25, 2010 00:50

I retrieve my PDC, ME Card, and the length of pipe. I then take a good look at what I’ve done. Wow. There’s no way I’m getting up there! I think I even see bits of Kristos-R stuck to the ceiling way up above!

¹⁹² JAM: (OOC: Um... I’m not sure what the different pills do. Am I supposed to know?)

¹⁹³ GLIGAR: (OOC: I guess I should go into a little detail 😊)

Visomorpain is a tranquiliser, available everywhere, which makes you happy and quiet. Selenoctin is the main hormone suppressant. Allacon is a pep pill. Asperquint and rolactin... well, you aren’t sure. You aren’t actually cleared to use them.)

[171]

The only other viable option I can think of for going up is the lift hall. I hurry down Corridor C1 to the staircase near the food hall and go down 2 floors. I then go to the loading dock, onto the roadway and around to the lift hall, keeping an ear out for anything out of place, keeping my pipe ready to discombobulate anything that presents itself as trouble. "Troubleslammer" I whisper and chuckle.

(Assuming this is all possible.)

If anybody chooses to go with me, that's fine. 😊

written by Jam on Aug 25, 2010 04:38

"Cool! A camera! I forgot the PDC had this."

I point the lens at myself and try to take a picture. I aim it at Speed-O and take another picture. I aim toward Lucas next. Soon I'm in a picture taking frenzy, rapidly taking pictures of everything in sight. John-R, Mango-R, the jackobot, L4-O and Nukabot, Fuzzy, the unconscious commie, stacks of boxes, random blood splatters on the wall, various items of my inventory, bits of dust on the floor, and so on.

Once I've finished that, I go back into the lift and happily review all the pictures I've taken.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 25, 2010 06:57

I seem to be deep in thought, ignoring the picture taking of Jam.

Or maybe I'm just deep in something else, as I slowly slump over, dozed off. We've all been awake for a while, after all, and I haven't even had a pep pill!

written by Speeder on Aug 25, 2010 07:20

I dash to fetch some towel, and... clean my sweating, I throw away the ones that got dirty in this process (FINALLY I got to clean myself... it was like, 60 pages? What pages? What I am thinking about? I am nuts?)

Then I take new ones, and store. You never know when you will need a towel, specially to make a rope, since for some reason this sector is full of holes.

Lucas smiles back. "With all due respect, sir, please try not to make the same mistake in the future. I'm sure our superiors would be... displeased."

Concourse C1

Kristos-R picks up his gear and leaves. He decides that he still needs to head up. But right now, the only way to do that is to go down. He heads for the lift hall on A Level.

How he knows about it is anyone's guess. Well, your guess, anyway.

Distribution Warehouse

While he's doing that, let's go and check in on everyone else.

Like Jam-R, for instance. He's just rediscovered the camera function on his PDC, and is taking pictures of everything he can think of. L4-O ignores him, apparently deep in thought.

But the facade fails when he slumps forward in his seat and dozes off. I guess it has been a while. Or maybe he needs a pep pill?

Meanwhile, Speed-O tries to clean himself off using some towels. That sweating doesn't seem to be letting up. He's successful, at least for now. After that, he picks up some clean towels for later.

Revolutionary Square

"Scru-R" goes over to the north door and knocks on it. There is no answer. He apparently didn't hear, or is ignoring, the com reply he received a short while ago.

Loading dock

As Kristos-R enters, he notices Selbio-R still here, still batting at random things with his towel.

Out on the roadway is the abandoned autocar, still abandoned. Further down the roadway is a tractor, similarly abandoned,

But Kristos-R isn't interested in either. He's more interested in the lift hall, down the corridor next to the loading dock.

A Level lift hall

This place is deserted, apart from a couple of dead communists. One lift seems to be out of order.

I lay down in the corner of the lift and try to take a nap.

I go up to what appears to be a working lift and take a look at it. As well as I "remembered" how to get here, I'm going to have to guess what it does and how far I need to go. I analyze all the visible buttons/levers/displays/anything of interest on the device. If it is possible and I know about the feature, I try to call (or message) Speed-O or Jam-R with my PDC.

A Level lift hall

Kristos-R presses a call button, and one of the lifts opens immediately. I guess it must have already been here.

He enters and looks at the control panel. There are at least thirty buttons on the panel, including one for D Level. The level indicator above seems to be functioning, and is indicating that the lift is at A Level.

Satisfied, he pulls out his PDC. It's difficult to operate with a broken screen, but enough remains for him to attempt to call Speed-O.

Revolutionary Square

"Scru-R"'s bell goes ding as he pokes Cryo-R with it.

¹⁹⁶ SPEEDER: (ooc: Sorry! I checked just before the turn, and then I forgot 😊)

¹⁹⁷ 4616599: (actually the reply I was waiting for was about H Level. But I suppose I posted at about the same time as a turn, so the darn commie traitorous interference must have blotted it out)

As Speed-O moves on to Nukabot's broken lamp, Mango-R decides to get something to eat, sitting down next to Jam-R as he eats a packet of Soylent RED. As Jam-R twitches in his sleep, everything is quiet. Speed-O is just finished with the lamp when his PDC rings suddenly.

written by Jam on Aug 26, 2010 15:57

I sleepily try to turn off the ringing by slamming my fist down on Mango-R's foot. I seem to have mistaken him for an alarm clock. I open my eyes.

"Hmm? Oh, sorry Mango-R..." I mumble.

I roll over and try to go back to sleep.

written by Speeder on Aug 26, 2010 17:02

I grab the PDC.

"Huh... another troubleshooter calling me... How he knew my number? Anyway, although this dude is suspicious I think I will assign him to communications"

I respond.

"Hello! Are you the dude that tried to kill everyone shooting a violet barrel? Well, to get here, you need to go to the D level, fetch Cryo and Scru, move to the east-most corridor, crossing the exploded warehouse in the way, then move north, until you see a corridor full of mirrors, then go to the end of that corridor, and indentify yourself as you enter the warehouse, unless you want to be shot, or exploded again, in case L4 go trigger happy with turbo."

Then I turn off.

"Ooops, I did not even let the dude talk... I think I am not used to this."

written by Kristos on Aug 26, 2010 23:12

Wow. That almost sounded like a commie recording- why else would he not let me speak? But I recognize Speed-O's voice. And since my re-formation, I have not felt the slightest anomaly. This makes me happy. And who makes a better troubleshooter (or troubleslammer) than a happy clone? 😊

I push the button for 'D' level and check my PDC for any games to pass the time.

In the middle of the corridor, I point my rifle upward with both hands.

"BY THE POWERS OF FRIEND COMPUTER! IIII HAAAVE THE POOOWAAAAAAAAAAAA!"

And then the jingle sung by female voice and thunder can be heard:

"commie hunter!"

I point the rifle to my loyal cat... oh, nevermind, I don't have a loyal cat.

Speed-O has had enough. It's time to go get the wayward clones himself.

Calling out to everyone else (waking up Jam-R and L4-O in the process) he strides out of the warehouse. Lucas and John-R answer the call.

On the way to the Square, Speed-O feels the need to re-enact the credits sequence to Commie Hunter.

Revolutionary Square

"We've sustained heavy losses on A through F levels," the communist replies. "There are unconfirmed reports of a powerful mutant on H Level. If you're going there, be on your guard."

At this point, Speed-O, Lucas, and John-R arrive.

written by Jam on Aug 27, 2010 23:47

"Huh? Wha? Where did Speed-O go?"

I notice how uncomfortable the floor is. I get up and start searching the boxes for something comfortable to sleep on. I take any towels, pillows, cushions, beds, packing peanuts, bubble wrap, marshmallows, corpses, jumpsuits, shredded paper, balloons, couches, Fuzzys, leaves, sheep, airbags, blankets, feathers, stuffed animals, hair, and anything else soft I can find, and put them all in a pile next to me. I make a mental note of everything else I find.

I collapse onto the pile and immediately fall back asleep.

written by Lightning4 on Aug 28, 2010 00:55

Jam-R realises that the floor is uncomfortable and looks round for a long list of things he clearly won't be able to find. Why? Some are treasonous, some are, by now, icky, and others are probably buried so deep in boxes I'd have to fill this post with a list of the stuff he found.

Instead, he empties the box of towels, arranges them, and falls asleep on them.

L4-O is more interested in food. He rifles through some boxes and finds some VitaYum Meal Substitute bars.

Revolutionary Square

Kristos-R decides to play along for now, and thinks strategies.

Speed-O's group press onwards towards the communist. He notices then, and asks, "Can I help you, comrades?"

But he doesn't get an answer, not yet. Cryo-R has taken the opportunity to get away again.

While everyone was paying attention to the communist, he manages to pull himself over to the list hall, and into the lift Kristos-R just used. Before anyone can react, he's pressed a button and is away.

Of course, when you're crawling, you can't easily reach many of the buttons in a standard lift...

written by Speeder on Aug 28, 2010 17:02

I facepalm as I see Cryo getting away again.

Anyway, I decide to use that to distract the commie.

"Hey! Why this guy is getting silently in the lift and fleeing? Is he a computerist?"

I point at the moving away lift, in the most commie manner I can imagine...

If the commie look toward the elevator, I signal to Kristos come with us.

If he looks to the lift, I also turn to the lift so maybe somebody else can deal with him.

written by Mingamango181 on Aug 28, 2010 22:01

Suddenly, a giant docbot comes charging out at me. All of its six arms end in chainsaws, it has several flamethrowers attached to it and also seems to be able to shoot lasers out of its eyes. It charges at me.

I shoot at it, but it doesn't seem affected. My laser pistol jams and explodes, ripping my hands off and causing me to go flying into a wall. It reaches me and starts slicing me to pieces. I die, and the dream changes...

Noticing that the lift is heading down, "Scru-R" tries to call it again. It doesn't seem to do anything, though.

Lucas looks like he wants to shoot. The communist doesn't see him.

The descending lift

Obviously enjoying his lift ride, Cryo-R does what he does best - inspect absolutely everything and anything to ludicrous, and, at times, treasonous, levels of detail. For instance, one thing he inspects is the number of ceiling panels and the amount of distance between them. Another is the number of floor panels, and whether they line up exactly with the ceiling panels.

But he doesn't get to finish. The lift opens and he is pulled out. Unknowingly, he's just entered Deep Subsector.

¹⁹⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: Illness isn't fun ☺)

Cryo-R is moved towards a door - or perhaps... an airlock?

And... now my cameras have been disabled. Great.

"Oh. You're back! Are we ready to get moving?"

I reposition myself in the driver's seat of Nukabot and put my PDC away.

written by Kristos on Aug 31, 2010 01:21

I see the fuzzy hat in the corner. I take it. Who knows when this might come in useful? I do nothing as traitorous as wear it... for the time being. "Hey guys, this may come in useful if we run into any more commies!" I analyze what sort of fibers the fuzz appears to be made of and their typical length. Oh goodness! I'm starting to act like Cryo!

written by 4616599 on Aug 31, 2010 01:54

I emit a tiny sigh.

"Oh dear. I wonder where he'd frelling go." I glance into the lift to check for any pressed buttons, then follow the rest to the warehouse.

I peer at Kristos getting the hat.

"Last time Jam fiddled with this, he got sick or something..."

"No one?"

I sigh, leave the room, and continue wandering down the corridor, deciding to turn left at the junction.

"Nooooooo! Fuzzy!"

I run toward Kristos-R.

"Careful! Fuzzy can make you dizzy when you wear him! You need to gain his trust first! And you need to feed him too! I fed him some Cold Fun earlier..."

Distribution warehouse

L4-O looks up from his PDC, notices everyone arriving, and gets himself ready to drive, putting his PDC away in the process.

Kristos-R notices Fuzzy, and takes it. Almost immediately, his senses become altered, enough to be disorienting...

Speed-O and Jam-R notice Kristos-R meddle with Fuzzy. Jam-R runs towards him.

A lift

Looking in, Joris-O can't see any depressed buttons, though the button for G Sublevel is misaligned, as if someone pressed it recently while lying on the floor.

Sighing, he moves off to join the rest of the team.

Corridor D2

Arriving from D4, Mango-R turns left, down the far section of D2.

There are four doors on the left-hand side, and one at the far end.

Joris-O notices Mango-R as he heads towards the warehouse.

Lift hall

According to the indicators, a lift has been called somewhere below.

Distribution warehouse

Joris-O arrives.

written by Speeder on Aug 31, 2010 20:10

I notice the bizarre behavior of Kristos and Jam.

"Ok, that stuff is too dangerous, drop it now! Actually, this made me realize how the commies convinced so many people to be commies, this is a BRAINWASHING AND MIND CONTROL HELMET!"

I turn to L4.

"Do you have more napalm there? We need to burn all those fuzzy hats."

²⁰² SPEEDER: (ooc: like, 3 turns)

"Uh... I'm not sure. Let me look"

I rifle through my bags, searching for what I think is a napalm shell (after all, I didn't have much time to look at it when I was happily killing commies!)

If I find something resembling one, I load up Turbo and get ready to fire.

"Collect up those hats in one place and I'll fire!"

written by Jam on Aug 31, 2010 22:44

"Mind control?"

I turn to Fuzzy.

"NO! BAD FUZZY! NO BRAINWASHING!"

I grab Fuzzy and throw him toward the other fuzzy hats.

written by Gligar on Aug 31, 2010 23:30

Distribution Warehouse

Speed-O orders that the hat be dropped.

In fact, he's had a revelation. The hats, he says, are the means by which they're controlling everyone!

He asks L4-O whether he has any more napalm shells. L4-O has a look, and thinks he has a couple that might be napalm shells. He loads one up.

Jam-R looks at Fuzzy in shock. Could the dizziness be the prelude to mind control? He grabs Fuzzy from Kristos-R's hands and throws it towards the other fuzzy hats... that is, towards the corpses of the communists.

written by Jam on Sep 01, 2010 02:24

"You're gonna burn Fuzzy?! Hang-on, let me say goodbye first..."

I walk sadly over to Fuzzy... Wait... I look around at all the fuzzy hats.

"Which one's Fuzzy? Oh, well..."

I clear the area around the communists, and walk back toward the others.

written by Speeder on Sep 01, 2010 02:38

I look around to see if the fire will not burn the entire warehouse, if it is all ok, I ask L4 to shoot at the pile of fuzzy hats (and dead commies).

"I suggest everyone to get inside the elevator, in case stuff starts to explode and we need to close the door."

Ooops, seemly I forgot of a certain jackobot there.

written by Kristos on Sep 01, 2010 03:31

"Wow! That was weird! Remind me not to touch one of those again!" I retreat to the elevator.

Jam-R goes over to say one last goodbye to Fuzzy... but can't find it. Oh well. He returns to the others.

Speed-O looks round to make sure that the following fire won't just burn everything. Everything looks okay. He asks L4-O to shoot, and everyone else to retreat to the lift.

Lucas is the first to comply, followed by Kristos-R and John-R. Does he retreat himself? I don't know, because L4-O (who is on Nukabot, in a corner) shoots at the pile, causing a fire to roar into being.

A rather... big... fire.

written by Speeder on Sep 01, 2010 16:14

I go near the buttons panel, and keep watching the fire, like a hypnotized pyromaniac.

But with a finger over the H level button.

"PREEEETYYYY!!!"

Then I see the commies burning alongside the fuzzies.

"BURN COMMIES!!!! YOU DESEVE IT!!!!"

written by Jam on Sep 01, 2010 22:50

I follow Speed-O into the lift.

"Buuuuuuurn!"

I stare into the fire... So pretty...

written by Lightning4 on Sep 01, 2010 23:05

"Go go press it!"

I almost drool over the sight of the fire too.. It's not a particular surprise that someone who names his weapons would also enjoy the sight of fire.

written by Gligar on Sep 01, 2010 23:17

The fire is pretty!

But, as promised, it remains localised. There's still a good path for Nukabot to get to the cargo lift. And since L4-O is also entranced by the fire, it is up to Nukabot to preserve its own existence and pilot itself into the lift. Following Jam-R, who followed Speed-O.

Is Joris-O coming?

Corridor D2

Another PRPF patrol is on the rounds. They head north and approach the D2-D4 intersection.

written by 4616599 on Sep 01, 2010 23:25

I figure I should follow them. Once in the lift, I note "Cryo-R disappeared somewhere- he just might have gone to deep subsector level G, but I wasn't sure enough to investigate. Besides, I have no idea what clones do all the way down there."

written by Speeder on Sep 01, 2010 23:34

I nod.

Then I say. "This place was supposed to be forbidden to go... Or he is dead, or he will return with some mission... Let's proceed shall we?"

I step from near the button panel, and wait for someone else to press it... Only to me able to say that it was not my fault that someone got left behind. ²⁰³

written by Jam on Sep 02, 2010 02:05

I press the button for H level, then start talking to Mango-R.

"So Mango-R, do you know anything about-eh, Mango-R? Where are you?"

I look around for Mango-R... I thought he was here...

"Oh no! Did we leave him behind? Hmm... Well, maybe he'll be able to find us... He knows we're going to H level, right?"

I take out a grenade and prepare myself for whatever's waiting at the H level lift hall.

written by Speeder on Sep 02, 2010 02:46

I pull the rifle, and aim... at the soon to be reached H level.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 02, 2010 05:31

I frown once the fire leaves my view.

I get over it and take Nukabot's controls again, preparing myself to run down commies if need be.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 02, 2010 05:38

I look down the hall, and my eyes spot a figure. It's blurry, and as I approach, it disappears.

"...Am I hallucinating?"

I continue walking, and exit through the door at the end.

Good! Everyone's here...

...except Mango-R! Where in HEL sector did he run off to?!

...and Cryo-R! He went to G sublevel and... then what?

Oh well, they'll show up, right? Right?

It's Jam-R who presses the button. Slowly, the cargo lift ascends. As it does, everyone gets ready.

Corridor D2

Meanwhile, Mango-R seems to see something at the end of the corridor. But there's no-one there... except a door. He opens it.

²⁰³ SPEEDER: (ooc: yes, it is you minamango 😊)

Confession booth Waiting room

Inside are four doors, each with the "confession booth" symbol displayed prominently. There are no lights displayed on any of the booths. Looks like they're not operational.

written by Speeder on Sep 02, 2010 16:40

I decide to use again our tactic of acting as one.

"Ok Team Epsilon, or Lightspeed Jam and visitors featuring as special guest the Nukabot, everyone get in the Nukabot, just in case we need to drive away from the elevator in a hurry...."

Like the usual, I assume my spot in the rear, where I can both shoot forward if needed, or fix some damage (hopefully, not needed).

written by 4616599 on Sep 02, 2010 17:57

I crouch, hiding behind the bot. "If any commies recognise me, I'm a hostage you nabbed, only held in by your special mental powers of persuasion. Speaking of which, what was all that about mind-control fuzzy-hats?"

written by Jam on Sep 02, 2010 23:07

I climb onto the top of the bot.

"Fuzzy was a bad, treasonous fuzzy-hat! He made everyone dizzy! So he had to be terminated..."

Cargo lift

Oh hey, more forkbot riding!

Lucas and Jogn-R take their positions.

The lift continues its slow ascent.

But not for long.

With a slight shudder, it stops in an ORANGE area.

But the clearance isn't the first thing that everyone sees. That's the bot near the cargo lift that looks for all the complex like a 1/4-scale tankbot.

written by Speeder on Sep 03, 2010 00:18

I look at the tankbot. And comment to L4.

"I hope you still have high-explosive shells if that thing is enemy..."

Then I yell.

"HELLO THERE? WE ARRIVED! AWAITING ORDERS!"

I then say in a low voice to everyone in the lift.

"Don't identify yourselves unless you are sure we are among allies."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 03, 2010 00:35

I am just about to reach for a shell, but then I look again.

"Wait... hm... of course! This thing is a friend! It's a Com unit for the Armed Forces!"

I've seen these before... but I'm not sure where."

I turn back towards the com unit.

"WHAT HE SAID! don't nuke us yet"

written by Jam on Sep 03, 2010 01:50

I smile at the bot and wave.

"HELLO! PLEASE DON'T SHOOT US! WE ARE NO THREAT TO YOU!"

written by 4616599 on Sep 03, 2010 08:56

If there is space at the rear of the forkbot I get on(or else I continue crouching). I then join the rest in awaiting a response from the tankette.²⁰⁴

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 03, 2010 09:05

Out of boredom, and failing to notice the door, I leave the room by the same way I came in.

"I wonder if anyone's missing me. I should call them, explain where I am. Wait. Why am I talking to myself?"

I get out my PDC, then try to amplify the signal, by stuffing it into the Soylent RED packet. Whether it works or not, I try to call Jam-R.

written by Gligar on Sep 03, 2010 15:49

Cargo lift

People see the "tankbot" (actually, according to L4-O, it's a Com unit, presumably a higher model number) and start yelling at it. There is no response.

Joris-O finds some space to perch on the back of Nukabot.

Corridor D2

Mango-R returns to the corridor, and runs right into the PRPF patrol from earlier. "Halt! Identify yourself!" one shouts.

written by Speeder on Sep 03, 2010 16:49

Since it don't react at all...

"Ok... L4, can you please drive us forward? Let's ignore this Com unit... Although to me it looks like a oversized warbot, or a downsized tank..."

written by Kristos on Sep 03, 2010 16:58

I try to look through my pipe like a telescope. What gave me that stupid idea, I have no idea, but I bet the thing is so bent it it's impossible to see clearly through the bore.

But I do notice the bright orange reflecting down the inside of the tube. "Wait, some of us don't have the clearance to go in there - it's ORANGE!" I hop off the forkbot into the back corner of the lift.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 03, 2010 17:50

"Um... okay, I guess. I wonder though..."

I drive forward. As we pass the Com unit, I pause, trying to think about how to interact with it.

I stop for a moment and get off Nukabot. I pause before the com unit, then try to call on any instinct or muscle memory or whatever that might help me use the Com unit.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 03, 2010 20:41

"Excuse me comrade, but I'm rather confused. I woke up in this room with no memory and this person asked me to restore the power and I said yes and we went to another floor to do so, and we helped get the power back on and we went back up and I really am not sure why you are addressing me like this." In that long ramble, I try to pull out my laser pistol, and hold it out of sight. At the end of the rambling, I aim at the shoulder and fire.

written by Jam on Sep 03, 2010 23:20

"Hmm? But we're not touching the ground, we're touching Nukabot! Wait... What clearance is Nukabot?"

I try to grab Kristos-R before he hops off.

written by Gligar on Sep 04, 2010 00:59

H-level distribution warehouse, maybe?

L4-O drives Nukabot forwards. He stops when he gets to the Com unit, dismounts, and looks for some sort of controls. He finds them on the back. A tentative attempt to get it working has no results; apparently, the controls have been rerouted elsewhere.

Behind him, Kristos-R gets jittery at entering an ORANGE area and tries to hop back into the lift. Jam-R tries to stop him but is unsuccessful.

Just then, a door to the south opens, revealing a narrow corridor. Through it crawls a clone with two damaged legs, wearing what looks like two jumpsuits (one as a backpack) and kevlar, as well as a modified towel over the face: there are eyeholes and a smile drawn on in pen.

Corridor D2

Mango-R attempts to explain himself while surreptitiously readying a laser pistol.

After he's done speaking, he fires at the lead PRPF clone's shoulder. It's a clean hit! It causes that PRPF clone to step away in shock... and the other three in the patrol to aim slugthrowers at Mango-R. "Alright, computerist, this is what's going to happen. You're going to come with us and confess to everything you've done, and you're going to tell us the names of all your accomplices. And you're going to do it now."

written by Speeder on Sep 04, 2010 01:08

I look at the incoming clone, and ignore Kristos behavior for now.

"Hey, you have Cryo backpack! Give it back!"

Without wasting any time, I fire again and retreat back into the Confession booth Waiting room. I try to hide next to the door, preparing my heavy pipe to swing.

written by 4616599 on Sep 04, 2010 14:31

I peek over at the clone. "Excuse me, citizen. I must note that your towel-face isn't drawn on properly. You lack a nose. Would you like a bell, perhaps, or some other form of assistance?"

written by Gligar on Sep 04, 2010 15:30

H-level distribution warehouse, maybe?

Speed-O and Jam-R comment on similarities between the new clone and Cryo-R. John-R frowns slightly, and comments, "Isn't Cryo-R the one who is always running off? Or crawling off." But the clone has already turned and left down the narrow corridor, not waiting for everyone else to say hi.

Corridor D2

Mango-R decides that the best course of action is to fire, hitting the already incapacitated PRPF clone, then retreat.

This, of course, gives the PRPF clones a chance to shoot.

A slug hits him in his shoulder, causing him to fall through the door. It closes behind him.

written by Speeder on Sep 04, 2010 16:30

As the strange clone wander away, ignoring us, I say to John.

"Yes, I think that this clone behavior answers your question."

I look at the narrow corridor, then other corridors.

"Should we go? I have no idea of where to go now"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 04, 2010 17:53

"Maybe we should follow him?"

I get back on Nukabot and point it/him towards the door the mysterious clone left through.

I cautiously accelerate Nukabot.

written by Jam on Sep 04, 2010 19:33

I begin to softly sing advertising jingles, just in case.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 04, 2010 22:50

"OWWW!!"

I attempt to drag myself up, and as I do so, my vision starts going white. Even so, I stagger over to the other door in the room, and try to get through.

"Oh the pain!"

H Level distribution warehouse

Speed-O looks at the narrow corridor. Then takes another look round and spots a wider door.

Which is a good thing, because the narrow corridor is too narrow for Nukabot. It ends up with its forks either side of the narrow door.

Jam-R starts singing advertising jingles to himself.

Confession Booth Waiting Room

Mango-R continues to try to move, despite the pain. His vision starts intermittently filling with high-clearance colours.

He finds that the other door is jammed shut. The reason for this is deceptively simple: there's a heavy weight in the way, in the form of a deactivated scrubot.

The PRPF clones star to enter and ready their slugthrowers once again.

written by Speeder on Sep 05, 2010 00:20

I facepalm as L4 starts to drive forward.

"Erm, we have to move to a wider corridor... Or abandon Nukabot, this is why I said I did not know where to go."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 05, 2010 00:34

"Darn it," I mumble.

I turn around, and using my pipe for support, I fire my laser pistol repeatedly as fast as I can.

"We can split up. Hey Speed-O, should me and one other clone head down the narrow corridor?"

"Strange... It's not like Cryo-R to just leave without saying hello... Maybe we should follow him..."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 05, 2010 07:12

"Er... heh. Whoops. I guess we could just go down the corridor it fits in. I'm not sure leaving Nukabot alone is a good idea, even if he can defend himself."

I attempt to reverse Nukabot out again and drive towards the wider corridor.

written by 4616599 on Sep 05, 2010 09:14

Meanwhile, I look around the warehouse, checking for any other doors, boxes, bots or useful stuff. Additionally, noting the 'tankettebot', I try to determine if it's operable.

Speed-O facepalms and suggests another route. Like the other door, for instance.

Kristos-R suggests splitting up.

Joris-O takes a moment to look around. Apart from the two doors and the cargo lift, there are no other exits. There are a couple of boxes, sealed shut, and an open one with a few sets of handcuffs, seemingly misdirected here from Internal Security.

He also looks at the Com unit. It seems to be online, but the controls have been remoted elsewhere. The local controls are locked.

L4-O corrects himself, points Nukabot at the other door, and drives forward, pushing said door open to reveal a wider corridor.

Since Speed-O didn't answer my question, I take the liberty to go through the small corridor. If anybody follows me, great. If anybody objects to my action, I turn around and come back. If anybody requests me to handcuff them, I politely decline and explain that they didn't come with keys and I don't know how to pick a cuff.

I also check my PDC and try calling Cryo-R.

Nukabot crosses the threshold, after a surprising amount of time. But that doesn't stop people from continuing to rifle through the warehouse, or split off into another group.

Corridor H1

Specifically, Kristos-R and Jam-R end up running down the narrow corridor. There are just two doors in the corridor, with voices coming from behind one.

Kristos-R attempts to call Cryo-R on his PDC, but there is no reply. Apparently, he turned it off or something.²⁰⁷

H Level Distribution Warehouse

Joris-O joins in with the rifling, and tries to open one of the boxes with his shield. It doesn't seem to want to open.

I press my ear against the door with the voices and listen.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 06, 2010 20:39

I look around, having noticed we lost about half of our group suddenly.

"Erm.. Should we continue or just go back for them? Or should we stay split up? Maybe we'll have a better chance of finding where we need to go like this."

I continue driving down the corridor, and look at some of the doors (if present).

written by Kristos on Sep 06, 2010 20:57²⁰⁸

I take the laser pistol. "Don't worry, I only blow up VIOLET laser pistols." I say with a grin.

I go to the other door (the one without the voices coming from behind it) crack it open and analyze what is inside. If the room is empty, I step in. If there are commies and they see me, I say, "Oh, excuse me, I didn't mean to interrupt! My partner in espionage went missing (and insane). Can you tell me where he is? He's hard to mistake, analyzes everything to painstaking detail."

An exchange of weapons occurs. The pistol's barrel has five shots left.

Jam-R listens at the door. On the other side, a familiar voice is saying, "I knew it - you are mentally deficient. Maybe I should let them in and have our briefing instead. You know? The whole reason I brought the team to H Level?"

There's also some low level growling, as if a clone is trying to sound like a doberbot and failing.

Kristos-R checks the other door. As it happens, it's locked.

Corridor H2

Nukabot turns a corner and continues down the corridor. Oddly, the three PRPF corpses present seem to have been poisoned, and have puffed up rather grotesquely.

Cloning station

The clone in the tank is now visibly identifiable as Mango-R.

He twitches as memories are downloaded into him.

Shortly, it's done, and the tank drains, opens, and deposits him on the floor of the cloning station.

I take out a can of B3 and hand it to Kristos-R. I whisper to him.

"I think Cryo-R is in there... He sounds like he's being interrogated... We need to rescue him!"

I listen at the door a bit more, and try to identify the voices. Then I back away from door. I prepare to kick it open. (But I don't actually kick it yet...)

Corridor H2

After seeing the corpses, Speed-O wants to turn round rather than risk them exploding. The corridor poses a challenge as L4-O tries to comply, but he manages it while only bumping into the walls four times.

Corridor H1

In the other corridor, B3 changes hands.

Jam-R listens a little longer, and hears one of those ring-for-service bells being rung. That voice says, "What's that supposed to do? Get you food? You can have food after the meeting. Any moment now..."

²⁰⁹ Lightning4: (ooc: although why this is disturbing and commie heads EXPLODING everywhere isn't beats me. 😊)

²¹⁰ 4616599: (I think you still should have your memories. Of course, I suppose you might still be a tad dazed.)

It sounds very much like the one from the monitor, what seems like an eternity ago.

Cloning station

Looks like Mango-R's lost more than the last couple of minutecycles. Unless his memory just needs a jolt, like, say, a good chemical shower. There is, of course, one available, so Mango-R heads over there.

Chemical Showers

The door clicks as it closes.

The showers haven't changed since they were last used.

Except for one thing. There's now a "low water" light illuminated next to the START button.

H level Distribution Warehouse

Joris-O gives up on the boxes and looks at the Com unit instead.

Inspecting the controls, he discovers that the unit is currently relaying a dozen radio frequencies. He also discovers, like everyone else, that the controls have been remoted to somewhere else and are inoperable from here.

written by Speeder on Sep 07, 2010 17:26

I see Joris fiddling with the ... thing ...

"Joris, what you doing there? You staying here? Can you take care of the bot? We will need to go in the corridor where the bot does not fit."

written by 4616599 on Sep 07, 2010 17:41

I try throttling up the thing just for the sake of it anyway. "Hello?" I tap the bot.

Noticing Speed-O, I reply. "I guess. I might have to take other initiatives in case of commies and such though. You never know who might be in the corridor either."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 07, 2010 20:09

I put on a mask, and push the "START" button just once.

written by Jam on Sep 07, 2010 21:51

I suddenly remember where I had heard that voice...

"Kristos-R, I think we've found what we're looking for... We should call the others..."

I put on my best smile, and knock at the door.

H level distribution warehouse

Nukabot returns to the warehouse. But Joris-O ignores it, as he's trying to get some kind of response from the Com unit. He tries throttling up its drive system, and is successful for a moment, but it just throttles back down again. There's no other response from the thing.

Only then does Joris-O notice Nukabot.

Chemical Showers

Pressing the start button begins the chemical cycle, as you might expect. The shower pads also light up for the first time in a while.

Corridor H1

The door clicks, and opens, revealing a dimly-lit cafeteria.

Seated at a table is Cryo-R, who looks like he wants to ring the ring-for-service bell on the table, possibly for the second time.

On another table is a piece of rubble.

In the darkness beyond the tables is the voice. "Is this everyone?"

written by Kristos on Sep 08, 2010 00:53

I pull up my PDC and begin to call the others.

...or wait... they're in yelling distance. And so I yell. "HEY OTHERS! I'M CALLING YOU!"

"Okay, I called the others."

I proudly take a sip of my B3.

And then notice the voice. And the room. And choke on my B3. "Pardon me, sir... voice... thing... I didn't mean to be so rude," I say with a bow towards the darkness. I feel the B3 burning in my nasal passages. "I just called the others. They should be here any daycycle now."

written by Speeder on Sep 08, 2010 00:57

As I hear the yell...

"Oh think we are needed over there."

I jump from the forkbot and runs toward the narrow corridor.

"Mr. Nukabot, don't get kidnapped while we are away!"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 08, 2010 05:22

I jump... well, no, I carefully dismount off of Nukabot due to a broken leg...

Then seeing Speed almost vanish from view, I follow him in the direction of the yell.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 08, 2010 10:21

I watch the pads light up. I mumble quietly, "What was the last thing I did? I was fighting somebody, and I fired...oh."

I shut my eyes tight.

written by 4616599 on Sep 08, 2010 10:26

"Okay... Nukabot, you're on your own. If you can link up with the other bot there- no, that would be treason. Well, I hope you can fend for yourself here. We'll be back." I follow the rest.

written by Jam on Sep 08, 2010 11:52

I walk inside the cafeteria and bow towards the voice.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 08, 2010 12:47

"It took you all enough time to get here. We've been waiting to start the meeting for some time now. Perhaps you could try to be a little more reliable in the future."

Corridor H1

Kristos-R yells for everyone.

And then notices the room, and the voice in the room. And chokes on his B3 before being apologetic.

Jam-R enters the cafeteria and bows towards the voice. As he does, the rest of the team, minus Nukabot, arrives at a run.

The voice says, "Well, don't just stand there, come in."

Chemical Showers

Quickly, the room fills up with chemical solution, holds for a moment, and empties again.

Soon after, it begins filling with water.

written by Speeder on Sep 08, 2010 16:05

I frown at Cryo comment.

"We took a time to arrive, because we were waiting for you that suddenly left for the G sublevel, something that is actually treasonous."

I continue frowning at him.

"You are making us unhappy with you never following orders and just wandering around randomly, and this is treasonous."

Then I look at the... commander? And smile.

"Hello Mr. Whatever! We arrived, even Cryo that keeps running away arrived, well, except for the Nukabot that does not fit in the corridor and is waiting outside"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 08, 2010 19:00

I enter the room with the voice and throw up a salute.

Unfortunately, with my crutch hand. I nearly lose my balance but manage to recover my crutch.

"Hello sir! Lightspeed Ja-... err, I mean, TEAM EPSILON reporting for duty!"

written by Jam on Sep 08, 2010 21:57

I salute. Then I wait for everyone else to enter.

If some of them don't seem to be following orders, I walk over and try to pull them inside.

written by Gligar on Sep 09, 2010 00:19

Cafeteria

As more clones begin to arrive, the voice answers, "An accusation of treason... how refreshing. While we're waiting, let's examine that, shall we?"

At the sound of the word "treason", Lucas rushes in, laser drawn.

The voice repositions itself and continues. "Cryo-R, you stand accused of treason for failing to follow the orders of an ORANGE clearance citizen. How do you plead?"

John-R follows Speed-O into the cafeteria. L4-O is just behind, with a nice salute. It's marred somewhat when he uses his crutch hand, though, and nearly falls over.

That leaves Joris-O and Kristos-R. Jam-R returns to the corridor to try to drag them both in. But Joris-O is being stubborn, and remains in the corridor, unlike Kristos-R.

written by Kristos on Sep 09, 2010 01:09

I come right on in, eagerly anticipating the results of this change in circumstance.

written by Speeder on Sep 09, 2010 02:03

I raise an eyebrow and look at Cryo, also expecting his response.

written by 4616599 on Sep 09, 2010 05:42

I mumble. "Agh! I'm being dragged by a RED citizen. This is insubordinat-"

Suddenly I hear the voices in the cafeteria and hurriedly enter.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 09, 2010 08:45

I idly look around a little bit while this mini-trial thing goes on.

I try to look into the darkness, perhaps in attempt to see who is talking to us. Unless that's treason, then I'm clearly just examining the wall behind him.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 09, 2010 11:59

"That is pure nonsense!

Our orders were to proceed to H level, and that is where I proceeded, while everyone else was off wandering around doing whatever it is they do when not following orders in a timely fashion.

As for visiting G sublevel, I don't know anything about that, and don't see how Speed-O would either, unless he were there himself, or used some treasonous unreported mutant abilities. The lift did momentarily stop on its way here, though I'm not entirely certain what floor that was at. In any case, it most certainly wasn't a floor with the ocean, or dolphins, since I don't know what either of those things are, as knowing so would be treasonous.

I get the impression that Speed-O may simply be fabricating these accusations to cover for his own high levels of unhappiness, which I will not try to gauge myself, but which certainly seem higher than the rest of the team.

I do occasionally tend to deviate from the main body of the group, though that is entirely with the intention of performing reconnaissance to help better understand the enemy's movements, rather than wasting time blowing things up and getting half the team killed in the process. It seems like the only times I get injured is while with the others, and that certainly seems to slow down my work.

In any case, with those nonsensical accusations aside, I would like to request a brevet to orange clearance or higher for myself. While I don't recall crossing into any orange clearance areas on my way here, I've noticed that there may be some on this level, and that traveling through those areas might be necessary to continue our mission. I can only assume that this dimly lit room is infrared clearance, as it's difficult for one to see a clearance stripe with the current lighting situation. If it were higher, we could obviously only blame whoever implemented the inadequate lighting plan for this room.

Perhaps it would be wise to provide me with a Yellow brevet, just to be safe, as I recall noticing some yellow areas that might be critical for me to gain access to as well, for the successful completion of the mission, of course."

written by Gligar on Sep 09, 2010 15:30

Cafeteria

Kristos-R lets Jam-R pull him into the cafeteria. Joris-O is about to call Jam-R out on it before he realises what's going on, and enters.

Speed-O looks a little surprised, and waits for Cryo-R to speak.

L4-O looks around, and idly looks into the darkness. He thinks he can see some sort of triangular eyes looking back.

Then Cryo-R launches into a tirade. According to him, he most certainly did not see a vast expanse of water. He then asks for his own brevet.

"It sounds like you are questioning the judgement of the team, which, as you may have noticed, contains three citizens of higher clearance than you. This, in itself, is insubordination. Do you have proof to back you up? In the meantime, your loyalty is in question. I cannot issue brevets until this question is answered.

"And the rest of you. Can you present evidence to back up your claim?"

Chemical Showers

After filling with water, another light appears near the START button, indicating that the water reserves are now empty.

The water in the room drains out.

written by Speeder on Sep 09, 2010 16:49

I frown again at Cryo.

"We got your message to leave the bunker, we decided to use a lift and to to level D, and later we went to fix some cameras before returning to D, Joris was in the recon mission, Cryo, was tasked to go with us, but he went with Joris instead, I don't know if he remained with Joris or not, but when we returned to level D and you asked us to go to H level, this meant that we needed to find Joris and Cryo to bring them with us."

I breath. Not breathing is treasonous I suppose.

"We did found them, some combat issued with commies, but what really matter, is that Jam had to do his best to make Cryo stick with us, Cryo that btw looked drunk or something, acting really slow... We returned to near our lift, waiting for Joris and Cryo, but seemly that never happened, also waiting for Kristos to re-clone, after he killed himself by accident."

I then look for a while to everyone.

"Kristos got cloned, and called, I explained to him how to get in the D level using elevator, then we went to find him, and found Joris too, and Cryo too, except we also found a single commie, and while thinking of what to do, Cryo crawled inside a elevator, and pressed some button, since he was crawling obviously he could only press buttons on the lower side of the elevator."

Then I look to Joris.

"We returned to wait, while Joris tried to find him, when Joris arrived, he told us that Cryo probably went to the G level, and that he was not going to search for him, after that we decided to get up here, and to our surprise when we arrive, Cryo was already here, acting in a really strange way too, with a towel on his head and a giant smile on it."

written by Jam on Sep 09, 2010 21:37

Not having anything to add, I remain silent...

written by Cryoburner on Sep 10, 2010 00:31

"I'm not one to judge, but that guy certainly does seem to be frowning quite a bit..."

In any case, I asked Speed-O directly if I could return to the bunker to see the Docbot about my injured leg, so as to avoid slowing down progress of the team, and to potentially meet up with the other members who were apparently being cloned there, and he agreed. Unfortunately, the main entrance to the bunker had become further damaged, making it inaccessible, and it was suggested for me to gain entry through a secondary entrance. Once I reached the elevator, I determined that I did not yet know where the other entrance to the bunker was, and that I should just proceed to H level to avoid slowing the others down. I would have invited them to come along, but they seemed to be having a conversation about something with a communist at the time, and I thought it might be best not to interfere. As for how I reached the higher buttons in the lift, that's quite simple. I just used my crutch. 😊

As for whoever you saw when you arrived here, there's no telling whether that was me or not. I'm quite sure there are other clones on this level wearing similar attire who are also unable to use their legs. They might have happy masks as well, for all we know.”

written by Gligar on Sep 10, 2010 00:53

Cafeteria

The owner of the voice listens as Speed-O and Cryo-R offer proof.

As does everyone else.

Eventually, the voice replies, “Let me see if I have this clear. Cryo-R decided, on his own, to disobey Speed-O’s order, and instead follow Joris-O? And then, later, Cryo-R wanted to break away, for reasons unknown? And eventually did, apparently heading for Deep Subsector, which he denies? Though he did eventually turn up in this room, wearing some sort mask... one might even say it was a happy one...”

The voice pauses for a moment, and continues. “Yet Cryo-R claims he asked for permission, to return to the bunker. If he did not know the location of the other entrance, why did he not simply call up Speed-O and ask? Perhaps because he simply... did not intend to return to the bunker at all? Or perhaps... he simply does not have a PDC? I sent bunker personnel a message some time ago... tell me, did you receive it?”

Some quiet electronic noises emanate from the darkness.

“And for your information, there should be no other living clones on this level. I... took care of the occupying communists.”

written by Kristos on Sep 10, 2010 01:08

I get the “what happens next! What happens next?” feeling.

written by Speeder on Sep 10, 2010 01:11

I nod at the voice-only guy.

“Yes, we noticed...”

Then I look to Cryo and say: “How you injured that leg? I mean, it does not like you got shot, you are now hurting yourself to have excuses to flee? And everyone can recognize you, because you are the only clone that wears a backpack made of jumpsuit around here.”

Then after a while I ask.

“In fact, how you broke your bones in the first time? If I remember it happened when the meeting hall catch fire while I was in the security station... And since you was in the meeting hall, you could also tell us how it caught fire in first place...”

Then something go ‘bliin’ in my head.

I turn to the monitor guy.

“You are talking about the message COMPLETE YOUR MISSION, CITIZEN, OR BE TERMINATED ? I’ve got this message, shortly after the meeting hall caught on fire, and later when Cryo left it, he had his leg broken.”

Then I look to Cryo again.

“I still don’t forgot that instead of taking care of the hose, you only watched it, and refused to clean the mess when the hose slipped, and after we retried the refueling you refused again to hold the hose in place or help tilt the drum, and instead only stared at the hose again. I wonder how that generator still don’t exploded or something like that.”

I then turn to the monitor guy.

“I think I already told you this a while back, and you wondered how some people ended being RED.”

Anyway now I have a big smile, a BIG smile, so smiley that my facial muscles are nearly cramping. Actually it looks more like a grin.²¹¹

written by Jam on Sep 10, 2010 02:20

Noticing Speed-O grinning, I grin too, except bigger.

I speak to the voice in the shadows.

“Sir, Cryo-R seems to have an unhealthy, perhaps even treasonous, obsession with examining things, and collecting strange, unnecessary items, like bells. I’m sure if one of us were to examine the contents of his backpack, we would find many things that a more sensible clone wouldn’t have. I’ve also never seen him attempt to shoot any commies. In fact, he seems to be very friendly to them, almost as if he didn’t think they were his enemy...”

I try to judge the clearance of the room. (no... it can’t possibly be VIOLET... my eyes must still be messed up...)

written by Lightning4 on Sep 10, 2010 03:12

“Triangular eyes...?” I mutter softly to myself, while cocking my head and peering into the darkness.

I regain focus on the treason trial.

I think for a moment and open my mouth, but close it again and think some more. I shake my head and get distracted by something else in the room.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 10, 2010 03:27

“I’m quite sure that I was simply asked to “watch” the hose, and I must say I did an exemplary job of doing so, even continuing to watch it after others had left the room. At that time, I’m rather certain we were all Red clearance as well, so it’s not like I had any obligation to follow another Red citizen’s suggestion to clean up the fuel which they spilled through their own act of carelessness. I deemed it more important to focus on important tasks, like fastening the hose correctly to prevent the situation from reoccurring, which worked very well, I might add. I left cleanup to the scrubot, who’s job it is to clean things, anyway.”

“As for the fire in the meeting hall, that was the result of a food preparation accident by Mega-R, who seems to not be present here. My PDC exploded in a separate incident, which I can only assume was due to communist interference.

²¹¹ SPEEDER (ooc: this smile: http://www.gamegoldies.org/old_game_files/2008/01/american-mcgees-alice-cat.jpg)

I've been meaning to replace it with a fresh unit, but haven't come across any yet that weren't already in use."

"The bells are very important to keep around. In fact, I used one to call the others to this very meeting. Without the pleasant tone of a bell, they might have still been blindly wandering the halls. I also have pens, in case you'd like one."

"Any appearance of friendliness toward the communists simply comes down to the nature of my reconnaissance work. If we stopped to shoot every communist we encountered, we'd still be down cleaning up D level, and might not be able to discover the communists true agenda as easily. It's much more important to focus on getting to the source of the problem, rather than merely attacking its symptoms. The same goes for inspecting things that may appear unimportant to one with lesser skill in the field."

"Oh, and about following Joris-O instead of Speed-O earlier, that was due to Joris suggesting I help him with reconnaissance duties. I decided it was best not to disagree, with him being higher clearance, and all. I don't believe Speed-O came back to ask us to follow him immediately afterward either."

I proceed to smile, though perhaps not quite as much as Jam-R does, as that looks as though it might be painful.

"Now, we should get back to focusing on what's most important. Reclamation of the sector from the communist influence!"

written by Gligar on Sep 10, 2010 16:46

Cafeteria

"Yes, that is the message."

The voice addresses Cryo-R.

"I note also that you mentioned that your PDC exploded due to... communist interference. How do you know? Perhaps it's more likely that the PDC was simply mishandled... maybe... oh, I don't know... you dropped it and stood on it? But that is not important. You lost the PDC that was assigned to you. Losing assigned equipment is treason."

There is silence for a moment. "As for the hose... it slipped, did it not? This means that you did not properly carry out your assigned role, regardless of later efforts to redeem yourself. This, too, is insubordination.

"Now... what about this... obsession with examining things? What is your job mandate, Cryo-R? Wait, you don't remember. Therefore, I must assume that you are a CPU pencil-counter, or equivalent. You must realise that those skills are not appropriate for a Troubleshooting mission, without an appropriate service service. Therefore, your CPU skills are not needed here, and constitute a lack of focus on the mission. This is another count of insubordination.

"And this 'food preparation incident'. Would you care to elaborate? It would imply that Mega-R had food to wrongly prepare. Has he, at any point, been to the food storage room? Has food been moved into the meeting hall? And the microwave?

"And the bells.. And the pens. How many of each do you have? And why did you have that piece of rubble? You of all clones should be aware of CPU Mandate 214/6550/219©.

"But perhaps those last two points are not important. None of these seem to be related to... getting to the source of the problem, as you put it. Many of them are related to counts of insubordination on your part. One is an example of treason. And speaking of such, I see insufficient evidence to support your claim that you have acted according to the mission. Therefore, I must conclude that you have neglected your duty as a Troubleshooter. Thus, you have disobeyed my direct orders. Thus, you have committed another count of treason."

Lucas aims his laser pistol at Cryo-R, but is stopped by the voice. "That won't be necessary, citizen, but I applaud your eagerness. Cryo-R-BRN, I hereby accuse you of two counts of treason against The Computer and Alpha Complex, and of two counts of insubordination. You are hereby sentenced to brainscrub, to be administered by the rest of Team Epsilon, as soon as they reach the Re-education Centre on K Level. You are to be detained by your team until that time.

"Failure to comply with this ruling is treason punishable by summary execution."

The voice address everyone again. "Now... to other matters. I have already informed you of the Armed Forces solution to the communist threat, one which I do not intend to allow. Therefore, you must all do your parts. You must get to the compnode in Central Subsector and restart it. To do that, of course, you will need certain items. Do you have them?"

written by Speeder on Sep 10, 2010 17:41

I show the tape case.

"Those? I personally decided to take care of them, they are well protected."

Then I say.

"By the way, Jam is the most helpful person I ever met, do you mind promoting him? He would be invaluable while using higher clearance equipment"

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 10, 2010 21:52

Noticing how nothing is happening, I attempt to open the door. I take off the mask if it does. Otherwise I just push the START button again.

written by Jam on Sep 10, 2010 23:08

I smile at Speed-O (though not quite as much as before, because smiling like that made my face feel like it was going rip itself in two, and a ripped face sounds treasonous). Then I look back at the voice.

"Sir, I think that if anyone should get a promotion, it should be Lucas-AHK. He's the most loyal* INFRARED clone I know.

* (ooc: and only)

I met his previous clone when I was searching for a medical bay. He showed me where it was, but instead of leaving, he bravely joined me and fought the communists inside.

Not many clones are loyal* enough to go against six commies without being ordered. And when we finally terminated the last commie, and the docbot (which had probably been tampered with) decided to 'treat' me by slicing off my hand, Lucas dragged me to safety and bandaged my hand. I probably would have been sliced to bits if he hadn't saved me!"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 10, 2010 23:27

I perk up and look back towards the voice.

"John-R here is a good clone too. He helped us when we needed to save the cameras from those filthy commies, and his mind blast is just... scary stuff."

written by Gligar on Sep 11, 2010 00:46

Cafeteria

"Good. Once you input those into the compnode, it will reinitialise, purging the virus."

At the mention of promotions, the voice continues. "Ah, I'm glad you brought that up, citizen. As you have no doubt noticed, security clearances generally increase the higher you go in this sector, though there are several major exceptions. To avoid treason, it is important to have a citizen of the correct clearance with you. To that end, I hereby brevet Speed-O to Security Clearance YELLOW, effective immediately. Henceforth, Speed-Y is designated Team Leader of Team Epsilon."

"As for your other suggestions... I notice that Jam-R certainly seems to have taken the mission to heart. I agree that a brevet will be most beneficial. Jam-R, you are hereby breveted to Security Clearance ORANGE."

"And... Lucas... is this the young clone in RED accompanying you?"

Lucas looks over, and snaps to attention. "Yes, sir!"

"And you have terminated communists?"

"Yes, sir!"

"Then, the protocol is clear. Lucas, I hereby award you Security Clearance RED. Henceforth, you will be assigned to Troubleshooter Team Epsilon for on-the-job training. Ordinarily, you would wait until Mandatory Training Day, but this will have to suffice."

Lucas-R grins, possibly even wider than some of the grins we've seen recently.

Several pieces of paper are pushed into the light. "Here are the brevet papers. As before, we'll talk about payment later."

John-R doesn't say anything.

Chemical showers

To Mango-R's surprise, the door opens.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 11, 2010 00:55

"So, does that mean you don't want a pen?"

I pull out a pen and spin it between my fingers a few times.

"I suppose you may have made up your mind though, and I'm not going to be one to argue with your decisions, even if I was simply following orders and attempting to prevent the mission from being compromised in all previously mentioned scenarios for which I've been accused. I suppose a brainscrub might not hurt though. I can't ever remember having a brainscrub I didn't like."

"Hmm... I'm probably not one to talk given the current situation, but speaking of Jam-R and clearance levels, I just got to thinking that him and Kristos-R were exploring an orange corridor completely unsupervised just a moment ago. I'm certain you must have seen them out there yourself prior to them stepping inside this room. Last I checked, wasn't trespassing in higher clearance areas considered treason? There's no telling what sort of other treasonous activities they might have been planning. Also, wasn't Lucas an infrared? What was he doing with a red clearance laser pistol?"

I'm quite content that my name was never mentioned, but somewhat troubled that John was also seemingly ignored. I cast a glance towards him... Is that a troubled expression? It's hard to tell in the low light.

I give ear to Cryo's response. After he has finished vocalizing, I follow up: "Cryo, in all his insanity, does raise some good points. We have been performing various light asks of treason at regular interval, but not recounting any of it - as if treason simply evaporates with time. But Cryo, in his analytical nature, has gathered and presented an account of important detail that the rest of us discard. Surely this rare quality has some merit in the midst of his nonsensical actions."

"And about John-R. His rare abilities have proven indispensable on the battle front. Formerly, I've been too caught up in internal troubles to actually see what was going on around me, but now that I have a chance to stop and take stock of the situation, I see great individualized qualities in every member of this team."

"I wholeheartedly agree with the promotions you offer, of course, since anything else would be treason. But please hear my concerns, and realize that almost all of us have been resonating between treason and whatever the opposite of treason is."

"Thank you for giving me ear. I look forward to continuing the mission. Speaking of the mission, my recent cloning cured me of various treasonous defects except one - the loss of my long term memory. Could you re-brief me on the mission?"

* (ooc: or foolish? 😊)

written by Jam on Sep 11, 2010 01:29

"Thank you, sir!"

I congratulate Speed-Y and Lucas-R on their promotions. Then I turn and speak to everyone.

"Kristos-R, you must not have heard, but I notified Speed-Y that we were going to explore the ORANGE corridor, and he didn't object. I don't think what we were doing was treasonous.... And I had ordered Lucas-R to take the RED laser pistol, so that he would actually have something to shoot commies with."

I think for a few seconds, then suddenly realize something.

"Cryo-R, how could you have known me and Kristos-R were walking down the corridor, unless you were out there too? Treasonously..."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 11, 2010 01:40

"Oh!"

I almost jump backward in surprise. Then pull off the mask, and walk back into the Cloning Station. I take a INFRARED towel, and dry myself. Then I put on a RED jumpsuit, take a laser pistol body, and open the door to the corridor. I peek outside, making sure there aren't any of those patrol people.

"Where was I going... where are the others... Oh yes! H level! Is that up or down?"

written by Gligar on Sep 11, 2010 15:23

Cafeteria

"I already have a pen. But you do have a point. This level is predominantly Clearance ORANGE. Those who were not of that clearance have committed treason just by coming here. As has Cryo-R. As such, I must fine each of you one hundred credits for clearance violations."

The brevet papers remain where they are. "Hmmm... Lucas-R doesn't seem to have an ME card."

Lucas-R's eyes go wide. "How... er, I mean, I must have lost it when I recloned, sir."

Cloning station

Mango-R dries himself off and gets dressed before peering out into the corridor. It's Corridor C1. A couple of nameless clones are walking towards the food storage room, or perhaps the stairs.

written by Jam on Sep 11, 2010 15:43

"Sir, if it's okay with you, I'd like to pay for Lucas-R."

I look toward Lucas.

"Think of it as my way of thanking you for saving my life."

I walk forward and happily start filling out my brevet paper.

written by Speeder on Sep 11, 2010 17:16

I also do what is necessary with the brevet thing, and stash it safely along the orange brevet.

"I think that later I will put those in my wall, they look so shiny!"

I smile happily, so happy that if it was possible to get promoted by following a mandatory thing with excellence, I would be promoted again, or something like that.

Or a gold star.

"So, we are to take Cryo to the R level, and then we go to the V level? Also, why you asked us to come specifically to this level, there are something for us here to help on the mission, or it is safer than usual so we can talk? And by the way, I am not sure if you are the commander of the jackbot in the D level, but he was attracting commie attention by being in stand-by in the middle of a corridor, I told him to wait hidden in the warehouse instead."

written by Megagun on Sep 11, 2010 18:12

I get up, groan, and move towards the medical bays.

written by 4616599 on Sep 11, 2010 19:07

I suddenly realise that I forgot to post for several turncycles. Whatever that meant.

"Sir, I know the treason trial is over...if you'd excuse me I seemed to have gone inert. I should, however, give some input- I noticed Cryo-R hesitating to follow the rest. Perhaps he wanted an alternate route, as he seems to sometimes mention. I then suggested perhaps he might want to do recon. And come to think of it, notwithstanding the wandering offs, and accidents, and violation of mandates he could be good at it! No commies would ever suspect a broken-legged clone inquiring into mundane things to be a troubleshooter! He has a point in his contributions toward the mission- he could prospectively help to draw attention away, and stall commies. I must note his penchant for wandering off though. But I could of course link this to his fascination with plain objects- well, for all we know some rubble, or a pen, or bells might come in useful against the commie menace. He reminds me of the docbots in the old Docbot Who vidshows-potentially quite important and resourceful in certain areas."

"But perhaps you've made your mind up already. That aside, I'd like to chime in on the others requests. Do you, perchance, have any big guns? Not that a good troubleshooter team would need those, but something like, for instance, a portable multibarrel laser cannon might just come in handy. Or perhaps you could lend us one of those small tankbots like the example in the lift hall?"

written by Kristos on Sep 11, 2010 22:31

"Yeah, why is there a tankbot in the lift hall?"

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 11, 2010 23:45

I go back inside, and look at the RED reflex, and attempt to use it. After that, I head back outside and take the turn right.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 12, 2010 00:49

I stand to attention again.

"Anything else you would have us do sir? Besides our mission, of course! And that matter with Cryo"

written by Gligar on Sep 12, 2010 01:37

Cafeteria

There is silence for a long moment. Then the voice speaks to Jam-O. "Oh, very well..."

As clones begin to fill out their brevet forms, the voice continues. "I brought you here due to the relative safety of this level. Thus, we can talk here. Also, because it is rapidly approaching night-cycle.

"I reiterate: Head to R Level ASAP, to the re-education centre. Carry out Cryo-R's sentence there, then head to Central Subsector, V Level.

"The jackobot was instructed to find a safe place... You are not cleared to know its definition of safe."

To Joris-O, it adds, "Joris-O! What is this? Are you questioning my judgement? You're fined an additional 600 credits.

"I cannot provide any additional assistance. That 'tankbot' is the Com 3 unit assigned to the barracks. I am using it. That will be all."

Medical bay

Amazingly, Mega-R is still around. While we've been looking in on H Level, he's made his way here.

The docbot notices him, and asks, "Yes, citizen?"

Cloning station

Mango-R looks at the reflec, and decides to put it on before heading out.

Corridor C1

The two clones seen earlier enter food storage.

written by Speeder on Sep 12, 2010 02:21

I nod, then I say.

"I understood, I am only telling you, in case the bot is not found in the expected place..."

Then I finish everything, I look at everyone, and then I ask.

"Do you have any other powerful weapons around? That blue cone rifle you breveted to us saved us many times in the hands of L4."

After a while I say.

"But a yellow equipment set would suffice."

I smile happily, but trying to not anger the... monitor guy.

written by Kristos on Sep 12, 2010 02:43

"Well, what are we waiting for?" I grab Cryo and start dragging him to the lift hall. Unless, of course, he complies.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 12, 2010 02:55

I walk down the hallway, while thinking of the patrol people. What happened to them?

"I know that the explosion must've killed me, but what became of them? They were about to shoot me anyway..."

I open doors to look for a room with stairs. Or a lift. I continue speaking to myself.

"I wish there were spare PDCs. I could really do with a way to communicate, even if the signal keeps breaking up."

written by Jam on Sep 12, 2010 04:34

"Thank you sir!"

I turn to leave, but suddenly pause and turn back.

"Um... The re-education centre is at R level? Sir, I thought you said earlier that it was at K level. Strange... Maybe my ears need cleaning..."

I stand near the door and wait for a response.

written by 4616599 on Sep 12, 2010 06:13

I very briefly drop below mandatory happiness level upon being fined, then reply, "Thank you for the reminder, sir."

Then follow the rest.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 12, 2010 11:13

"Or perhaps some more powerful weapon ammo... I ran out of that neat gas, and I'm not sure if I have any of those firey liquidy death ones left either..."

I undo my backpack and idly sift through my shells.

"No idea what the others do yet... hm."

written by Megagun on Sep 12, 2010 12:46

I groan, "gimme health".

written by Gligar on Sep 12, 2010 15:25

Cafeteria

There is no reply from "Monitor Guy". Indeed, the only noise in the room is the rattling of an air duct.

Kristos-R seems eager to get going. He grabs hold of Cryo-R and attempts to drag him.

L4-O idly looks through his cone rifle shells. There seems to be one more of the napalm shells, though he's not sure. One of the colour bands is slightly different.

Corridor C1

Mango-R looks for, and finds, the bunker's stairwell. The stairs lead down.

Medical bay

The docbot responds, "You are unwell? What is the nature of your medical problem?"

written by Megagun on Sep 12, 2010 19:16 Cafeteria

I groan and examine myself to understand the nature of my medical problem.

written by Speeder on Sep 12, 2010 20:40

I notice that the monitor guy somehow is gone, or not... Anyway, he is the mysterious monitor go.

"Ok! To R level Team Epsilon!"

I walk back toward the forkbot, and upon arriving I take my usual place in the back.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 12, 2010 21:31

I follow Speed. Noticing Cryo not among us, I search through the boxes and obtain a pair of handcuffs.

I go back to the cafeteria, and hand it to Lucas, and I look at both him and John.

"Bring him back to the forkbot, we'll be leaving as soon as you get there."

I leave again, and make my way back to the forkbot.

written by Jam on Sep 12, 2010 22:06

I watch to make sure Kristos-R, John-R, and Lucas-R successfully transport Cryo-R to the distribution warehouse.

While I'm walking back, I try to open the door next to the cafeteria.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 12, 2010 23:14

"Oh, don't worry about me! I'm plenty happy to come along. Who knows what fun adventures we will have!? Besides, a brainscrub doesn't sound nearly as bad as execution. There's no need for any restraint. All that would do is put us at a disadvantage in the event we encounter communists along the way. If something were to happen to me as a result of my restraint, I might not be able to get my brainscrub on a timely basis. I might have to search around for you guys after recloning, and that could seriously delay our progress, possibly even jeopardizing completion of the mission. It would be entirely the fault of whoever decided to needlessly restrain me. This floor might be relatively safe, but who knows about K level... or R level... Did we ever determine which level the re-education center was actually on?"

I comply with Kristos-R's suggestion that we head to the lift, and begin crawling in that direction.

written by Gligar on Sep 13, 2010 00:34

Medical bay

Mega-R checks himself over. He seems to have sustained burns at some point. The image of Insta-Hot Fun catching fire comes to mind...

Of course, that thought just makes Mega-R hungry.

Speed-Y is the first to leave, heading back to Nukabot in the warehouse, followed shortly by L4-O.

Distribution warehouse

But he notices that Cryo-R hasn't accompanied them. As such, he grabs a pair of handcuffs and returns, briefly, to the cafeteria, where Lucas-R takes them.

Cafeteria

Under Jam-O's watchful eye, John-R and Lucas-R take positions next to Cryo-R. Kristos-R doesn't move.

Apparently, Cryo-R doesn't need handcuffs. He starts crawling out of the room, with the two REDs following. As they do, Lucas-R passes the handcuffs to John-R, who seems to disagree. He decides to handcuff Cryo-R to himself.

Joris-O and Jam-O follow them. Kristos-R remains in the cafeteria.

Corridor H1

As the group pass, Jam-O attempts to open the other door, but finds it locked.

written by Kristos on Sep 13, 2010 01:53

I was eager to jump out into the mission a second ago, but now something is holding me back. I feel... peculiar in this place. As such, I examine the cafeteria. In particular for any loose items that may prove useful for troubleshooting and for anything that doesn't belong in a cafeteria.

written by Speeder on Sep 13, 2010 02:15

I keep waiting in the forkbot, as John and Cryo come to my view I say.

"Hey Cryo, seemly John decided to personally handle you... I suggest you don't do anything funny, he can blow up your head only by looking at you. Or /worse/ he may decide to not help you when we find Freaky."

I then shiver.

"I hope we actually never find Freaky."

written by Jam on Sep 13, 2010 02:35

Realizing that someone is missing I walk back to the cafeteria.

"Kristos-R? Aren't you coming? Hurry up, I think Speed-Y was planning to leave for the re-education center right away."

I walk back to the distribution warehouse.

"What's this about Freaky? There wasn't another attack, was there?"

I start singing advertising jingles, then look at John-R.

"Your mental blast power, does it let you sense minds too? Or just blast them? Freaky sounds like he can do both..."

written by Cryoburner on Sep 13, 2010 06:39

I kind of drag behind John-R, seeing as I now have just one free arm to assist with mobility.

"You know, this might have been easier had you just let me crawl there instead." 😊

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 13, 2010 06:52

I walk down the stairs. All the way down, scanning for any letters to indicate what level I'm heading to.

When I reach the bottom, I try to concentrate on Jam-R. I attempt think-communication. "Jam-R? Oh Jam-R? Come out, wherever you are..."

"PDC? ME card? Where are you guys?"

written by 4616599 on Sep 13, 2010 08:48

Not feeling too useful at the moment, I head back to the warehouse to await the arrival of the rest.

I then turn my efforts towards the sealed boxes. "Open, traitorous boxes!" I take out a bell and start bashing at a lid.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 13, 2010 09:57

I make my way onto the forkbot and take my place at the controls again.

"Well then. I guess we're off to get Cryo his brainscrub."

I look around

"Bah, we're missing people, aren't we..."

written by Gligar on Sep 13, 2010 16:17Cafeteria

A little troubled by something, Kristos-R looks around for anything out of place, and finds a light switch. Turning it on, he notices that the only things out of place are a piece of rubble and a ring-for-service bell.

Distribution Warehouse (H level)

Jam-O's group makes it out of the corridor. As they do, though, Jam-O turns back... Kristos-R is missing. John-R and Lucas-R therefore busy themselves with securing Cryo-R on Nukabot, before taking their own places.

Jam-O returns not long after that, and asks John-R a question. "Er... I can only sense a mind if it's broadcasting at me, sir," he answers. "Pretty much the only thing I can do myself is blast a mind."

L4-O once again takes his place on Nukabot.

Joris-O once again attempts to open the boxes. They remain stubbornly closed.

Bunker stairwell

As he descends, Mango-R decides to test if he has a psionic mutation by trying to mentally contact Jam-R.

Nothing seems to happen.

He suddenly realises that he's at the bottom, and leaves the stairwell.

Corridor A1

Mango-R checks the clearance stripe, and finds that he's on A Level.

Medical bay

The docbot says, "Citizen? Is there a problem?"

written by Speeder on Sep 13, 2010 16:45

I laugh.

"No, I am talking about not finding Freaky in the future... No need to worry now. You are too paranoid."

I keep waiting the others to return... For a while, since they take too much time, I wander to the nearest box, and attempt to use the spear to open it.

written by Megagun on Sep 13, 2010 17:27

I grumble and look through my inventory for something to eat.

"Just treat me for these burn wounds, docbot."

written by Cryoburner on Sep 13, 2010 18:51

"Hmm... Interesting forkbot you have here. Maybe we could lift some of the boxes with the forks, and take them with us. At the very least, it would prevent the communists from getting hold of them. Also, keeping boxes in front could provide extra shielding from frontal attacks."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 13, 2010 20:53

I walk down the hallway, and stop at the intersection. I look to the left, and to the right, hopefully, without being seen.

written by Jam on Sep 13, 2010 22:59

Suddenly, my thoughts change to Mango-R. ²¹²

"I wonder if Mango-R is doing all right... He should have been here by now. I hope nothing bad happened to him... I know, I'll go search for him! Okay, I'll meet you at the re-education center (wherever that is...)."

I walk into the cargo lift and press the button for D level.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 13, 2010 23:07

I'm about to start up Nukabot to drive onto the lift, when I look and see that it's... now missing.

I sigh.

"Now how are we supposed to get Nukabot to the level we need to go..."

I look for any buttons to call the lift back. If I find one, I press it.

²¹² JAM: (ooc: Of course, this is completely a coincidence.)

written by Gligar on Sep 14, 2010 00:35

Distribution Warehouse (H level)

Speed-Y keeps waiting for everyone to arrive.²¹³

Eventually, he gets bored, and grabs his spear, you know, the one with the ™ symbol, and tries to open one of the boxes. As it turns out, it contains ORANGE laser pistol barrels.

Cryo-R takes some time to inspect Nukabot. He seems to think that the front is inadequately shielded. Nukabot, however, disagrees. "I do have kevlar plating, citizen, including at the front. I have no need to worry about slugfire."

Jam-O suddenly decides to go look for Mango-R... what could have happened to him? He ducks into the cargo lift and heads own to D Level.

L4-O, who was just about to fire up Nukabot, instead looks for a call button, finds one, and presses it.

Medical bay

"You were burned? How did you come to be burned, citizen?" The docbot trundles around, collecting supplies, and apparently mixing something. While he's doing that, Mega-R looks for something to eat. It seems that all he has is some sludge in the burnt remains of an Insta-Hot Fun wrapper.

Cargo lift

The lift shudders to a halt at D Level. The warehouse doesn't seem to have changed.

Corridor A1 intersection

Mango-R looks down Corridor A2 in both directions. It looks clear.

written by Kristos on Sep 14, 2010 00:43

Ha! The half thought that's been eating at me has finally shown itself! And it turns out to be rather frightening. I would have never thought?! Should I run away, and find a safe place? No. I run back to the others. But just as I emerge into the lift hall, I realize that the mission will be more successful if I let it reveal itself to them, instead of breaking the news myself.

"Sorry guys, I was daydreaming! Is everybody here? Let's go!"

written by Speeder on Sep 14, 2010 01:00

I try to figure by weight, sound and other properties, if the other boxes have similar contents.

"Hey, this is a box of ammo, I think that it would be usefull to take that stuff with us, but we need to figure a way to ensure that it will not explode violently while being hit by stray fire."

²¹³ GLIGAR: (OOC: Is it even possible to be too paranoid? 😊)

written by Jam on Sep 14, 2010 01:51

"Mango-R?"

I look around the distribution warehouse for him. Not finding him there, I walk out to Corridor C4.

"Maybe he went though one of these doors!"

I try to open the door on the right.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 14, 2010 06:12

"Well, it looks like everyone is here, I guess! Besides Jam... and Mango... and um.. Ah who cares. We have Cryo, I guess."

I drive Nukabot onto the lift once it arrives, and crawl off momentarily to press the R level button, if there is one present.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 14, 2010 06:54

I quickly run across, continuing down the corridor. I think about the door on the right, but my body seems to want to go through the door on the left. So I try to open the door to my left.

written by 4616599 on Sep 14, 2010 13:06

"Hmmm. Even if I can't open them, they'd be useful as high explosive booby traps." I grab 2 boxes, and attempt to stuff them in my backpack. (it IS the amazing high-storage troubleshooter's backpack after all, isn't it? I load them in Nukabot if they don't fit)

written by Gligar on Sep 14, 2010 16:24

Distribution Warehouse (H level)

Aha! There's Kristos-R. He looks like he wants to say something, but isn't.

Speed-Y doesn't notice. He's inspecting the other boxes, trying to figure out if they also contain laser pistol barrels, without opening them. None of the other boxes are the same shape as the laser barrel box, but two are the same size and feel about the same in weight.

Distribution Warehouse (D level)

Jam-O exits the lift, which ascends again behind him.

Not seeing Mango-R in the warehouse, he exits.

Corridor D4

As he exits the warehouse, Jam-O looks at one of the doors. Perhaps Mango-R is through there? He opens it.

It seems to lead to yet another corridor, but the lights seem to have failed down there, except for one at the far end.

Distribution Warehouse (H level)

The lift arrives, and a good thing, since L4-O seems to be dropping below mandatory minimum happiness level.

Cargo lift

He drives Nukabot forward onto the lift, and pulls himself over to the panel, looking for an R button. But there isn't one. The highest button is Q, it seems.

Distribution Warehouse (H level)

Which, perhaps, is a good thing. Joris-O decides he wants to bring some boxes with him. Predictably, they don't fit into his backpack, so he settles for finding a place for them on Nukabot... like, say, on the forks. A bit precarious, but it seems to work.

Corridor A1

Mango-R dashes through the intersection, and stops when he gets to some doors. Though briefly considering one door, he heads for the other.

Loading dock

The door opens, allowing him into the loading dock. The room is two levels high with an observation platform on B Level. Within jumping distance of said platform is a recharge station for some sort of vehicle and a stack of pallets. Under the platform is a portable cloning tank, of the sort that could conceivably be carried in, or on, a suitably large vehicle or bot.

Also here is another clone. He seems to be mindlessly batting at things with a small towel.

Finally, the loading dock's outer door is open, revealing a roadway beyond. On the roadway, two abandoned vehicles - an autocar and a tractor - can be seen.

written by Megagun on Sep 14, 2010 19:29

I grumble and consume the sludge.

"So how about those heals, eh?"

written by Speeder on Sep 14, 2010 19:43

I notice L4 trying to flee or something like that.

"Hey L4! Wait for me!"

I also take the ammo box, and the two probably ammo box to the elevator, and then I take some unknown boxes to the elevator too.

"Supplies... Or whatever that is... I suggest we check the contents."

I open one of the maybe ammo boxes with the spear. And all unknown boxes that does not have a similar one already opened (all boxes that I took in the elevator... just in case there are too many boxes in the warehouse).

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 14, 2010 20:34

I avoid getting too close to the clone with the towel. I instead head through the loading dock's door, and look at the tractor, checking to see if it can still operate. I check for any loose objects in the autocar and the tractor, and take them.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 14, 2010 21:10

"Well, I guess you could stack one on or next to the first aid kit if there's room..."

I turn back towards the button panel, definitely below mandatory happiness requirements.

"No R button. Gah!"

"I guess we could take it to Q level then look for another way further up. We're probably going to need those weapons to kill a whole lot of commies!"

written by Jam on Sep 14, 2010 21:41

Because I have no idea what clearance the corridor is, I decide to not go through the door. Instead, I walk down corridor D4, turn right, then start walking down corridor D2. I search for the hygiene station I thought I had seen earlier...

written by Kristos on Sep 15, 2010 00:08

"I took mental note of the earlier conversation. The voice said, 'Cryo-R-BRN, I hereby accuse you of two counts of treason against The Computer and Alpha Complex, and of two counts of insubordination. You are hereby sentenced to brainscrub, to be administered by the rest of Team Epsilon, as soon as they reach the Re-education Centre on K Level. You are to be detained by your team until that time.' Perhaps we should visit the K Level then?"

written by Cryoburner on Sep 15, 2010 01:16

"Yes, perhaps we should perform the brainscrub on K level, since that seemed to be the sentence. If we can't find the proper equipment there, I'll just try really hard to forget things, and we can consider it done." 😊

written by Gligar on Sep 15, 2010 01:30

Medical bay

The sludge tastes burnt.

The docbot answers, "I need to know how you received those burns, citizen. Different circumstances call for different types of treatment." It continues to gather supplies. One of its manipulators already contains enough syringes to resemble a... a... a... thing that... looks very prickly?

Cargo lift

Speed-Y suddenly realises that he's not on the cargo lift, grabs a couple of boxes, and corrects his mistake. But he goes back and grabs more boxes, bringing them to the lift as well. The warehouse is looking pretty empty now. Except for that Com 3.

He attempts to open another box. Inside he finds a whole load of Replacement Pen Request Forms. And then another (which contains cans of AlgaePLUS). And then another (which contains Multicorder 1 units... without power packs).

L4-O continues to fall below mandatory minimum happiness level. He contemplates the Q button.

Kristos-R reveals that he has an excellent memory ^(or treasonous Ctrl-C/V powers) by remembering "Monitor Guy"'s words. Maybe K Level is more appropriate? Unfortunately, there's no K button either...

Roadway

Mango-R heads towards the tractor and looks at it. It seems that two of the tyres have been shot at, and are flat. Also, the keys are missing. This isn't going anywhere. There's a fuzzy hat over the wheel, which he takes. Immediately, he starts experiencing dizziness and disorientation...

Heading back towards the autocar, he notes the laser damage done to it. It looks like it's not moving either. However, the doors are open, allowing access to the inside, where there is a discarded truncheon, and a Com 1 unit. He takes both.

Corridor D2

Jam-O enters from D4, heading south. He's looking for the hygiene station he thought was here. There it is, just before PVTF Headquarters. The door hasn't been replaced yet.

written by Speeder on Sep 15, 2010 01:57

Noticing my happiness level is far below minimum mandatory level for an ORANGE clearance, I grab a can of AlgaePLUS and drink it.

I become HAPPY again! Sort of.

"Wooohhh..."

I stumble about, and down a corridor that seems to have materialised in front of me. The dizziness continues, and appears to get worse. Even so, I attempt to open a door, and collapse inside.

Cargo lift

Speed-Y continues opening boxes. There are only three left, and they contain more Replacement Pen Request Forms, slugthrower ammunition (solid slug, from the label, clearance YELLOW) and small power packs.

Joris-O grabs a can of AlgaePLUS. He tries to think back, wondering if he's used a multicorder before, and he realises that he has. He remembers that they're used for recording and scanning purposes, usually audio-visual, but programs are available for many other types of scan. These Multicorder 1s can only run one such program at once.

L4-O also grabs a can and drinks it. See? Food isn't useless! It's mandatory! Even if it isn't B3. When was the last time you had some?

Hygiene station

Jam-O looks for a method of cleaning his eyes, and finds a sink. There's only one tap.

Lift hall (A level)

Mango-R staggers in, obviously overcome by dizziness and disorientation, and collapses.

written by Speeder on Sep 15, 2010 16:35

I open the last three, I stash the forms in a corner, I smile seeing yellow slugs.

"Good, ammo for my future weapon, now I need the weapon."

I also take a can of AlgaePLUS and consume it happily.

Then I proceed to place all RED pistol barrels that I have on the forms box, and take some new ORANGE barrels, I then fit one of the ORANGE barrels in my nut launcher, taking care to see if the weapon will not hit itself.

"Cool, I can shoot either nuts or laser, and the enemy don't know what one I will shoot!"

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 15, 2010 20:17

I think of the hat and think,

Why should I have a hat? It doesn't look very sturdy, and not to mention that it also feels weird...

I think of dropping the fuzzy hat, but focus on trying to sit up. I just want to sleep, but the dizziness keeps me from doing so.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 15, 2010 23:12

I look for a designated A-class Refuse Receptacle for my can. After all, littering is treason...

After dealing with that, I go back to the lift.

Bored of waiting around, I make sure everyone is on the lift. I search for buttons to levels J or L, and if I find one of those, I press it...

If not, then straight to Q!

written by Jam on Sep 15, 2010 23:20

I turn on the sink and check the temperature of the water. If it isn't too hot, I bend over and try to run the water over one of my eyes.

After a minutecycle or two, I switch to the other eye.

Cargo lift

Speed-Y also grabs a can and drinks it.

He also takes the opportunity to re-arm himself. He doesn't have any RED laser pistol barrels, but that's no problem, since he now has some ORANGE ones. He tries to fit one of the barrels to the grip of his nut launcher (which, as you might remember, is a laser pistol body) but discovers that he can't, since it needs to clip into place from above. And that's where the tubes are.

L4-O looks for somewhere to put his empty can, and spots a refuse receptacle in the warehouse. He drops it in there.

He then returns and looks for J or L buttons. Predictably, they are notable by their absence. As such, he presses Q instead.

The lift begins to head upwards.

Lift hall (A level)

Mango-R has doubts about the fuzzy hat. It kind of feels odd...

...but the dizziness takes priority. He concentrates on staying awake, and manages to sit up. It's difficult, though. He can kind of hear that music you hear when the communists break into a vidshow feed...

Hygiene station

Jam-O checks the tap. It's cold. Regardless, he turns it on and attempts to wash out the residue of the chemical shower mixture. It... hurts. But he presses on.

It seems to be working.

written by Speeder on Sep 16, 2010 01:27

While the lift moves, I carefully disassemble the pistol form the tubes, arm it, and assemble again.

"Since I cannot reload this thing easily, it will be for emergencies."

Since there are no trashcan nearby, when I finish my algae drink I put it in the forms box, carefully, to not spill anything on the forms.

Then I try to figure if it is possible fit some boxes in the forkbot non-exposed areas, like the slug and the barrel boxes.

written by Jam on Sep 16, 2010 01:50

I blink a few times and look around. Do things seem to be the right clearances, or at least close?

Still worried about Mango-R, I start walking toward Revolutionary Square, calling his name every once in a while.

written by Kristos on Sep 16, 2010 02:01

I take 5 cans of AlgaePLUS and open one to enjoy. "Cryo, do you know how to get to the re-education center?"

written by Cryoburner on Sep 16, 2010 06:14

"I don't see how I would know. I might have been there before, but I can't say I remember how to get there."

I remove a packet of cold fun from my backpack, which I open and proceed to munch upon.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 16, 2010 06:19

"Hmm... Maybe I can fly it!"

I use both hands to hold the fuzzy hat, and flick it away. I try to look at where it goes, but I can't really see much anymore...

written by Lightning4 on Sep 16, 2010 07:28

Just to be safe, I grab my laser pistol and give it a new barrel.

I hold it at the ready, ready to blast away some baddies that might happen to be on Q level.

While the lift goes up, I play around and practice quick-drawing my pistol.

written by 4616599 on Sep 16, 2010 09:07

Like Speed-O, I notice the boxes at the forks. "Well, won't want them there unless we want to blow something up." I check for space near the driver seat.

I then keep my pistol, substituting it for the prior blaster. If possible, I check the blaster's power status, then proceed to ape L4-O in practicing quickdrawing.

written by Gligar on Sep 16, 2010 16:13

Cargo lift

As the lift ascends, Speed-Y takes the time to rebuild his nut launcher, this time remembering to include a barrel for the laser pistol. He'll have to do this every time he wants to reload.

When he's done, he finishes off his AlgaePLUS and puts the can in a safe place, and works on box placement. There aren't too many places to put things on Nukabot, what with all the clones needing places to sit/stand/lie/whatever. Nonetheless, he experiments. It turns out that the best way would be to fasten some smaller boxes and/or laser barrels onto the frame either side of the operator's seat, with, say, duct tape. It'd be rather cramped, but it'd work... if such smaller boxes were available...

Kristos-R also grabs some AlgaePLUS.

Cryo-R doesn't, instead munching on some Cold Fun.

L4-O reloads his laser pistol, and decides to get in a little quick-drawing practice.

Joris-O is also concerned about the ammunition boxes. He comes to the same conclusion, that ammunition could be fastened to the frame. He then checks his own weapons. His blaster is showing three lights on its power pack, so... maybe it's about half full?

[197]

He switches to his laser pistol, and watches L4-O for a while. Thinking he could copy the quick-drawing thing, he gives it a go.

The lift continues to ascend.

Hygiene station

Jam-O finishes at the sink, and blinks a few times. Ouch... his eyes are rather sore now.

Regardless, he looks around. Looks like his vision has returned to almost normal. There's still some odd tinting going on, but it's kind of like looking through an almost-but-not-quite-clear piece of plasti-wrap. It's a definite improvement.

Jam-O decides to continue looking for Mango-R, and heads towards Revolutionary Square.

Corridor D1

Just as a communist leaves the Square, heading in his direction.

Lift hall (A level)

Overwhelmed by confusion, Mango-R decides that maybe the hat can fly...

With both hands, he flicks it into the air, where, as it turns out, it fails to fly properly at all.

As the hat hits the ground, Mango-R feels the confusion and dizziness fade away. That communist music seems to disappear as well.

written by Speeder on Sep 16, 2010 16:46

I decide to take the cardboard flaps of the boxes, and craft using duct tape a ammo box that fits the forkbot, allows the greatest amount of ammo without getting dangerous.

Then I tape the thing on the bot, and place some yellow slugs (that will not be used now) in the botton of it, and the orange barrels on the top, easy to be reachable, also I try to use the silvertape to make bullets sheath in my belt, and put some yellow slugs there too.

If everything go well, I get happy and drink another algaePLUS.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 16, 2010 20:46

Feeling my strength return, I climb to my feet. I try to call for a lift, then examine the Com 1 unit in more detail.

written by Jam on Sep 16, 2010 21:55

I note the communist's expression. If he looks like he wants to attack me, I check to make sure no other communists are looking, then try to shoot him first. (If there are other commies around, I try to escape through one of the doors in the corridor.)

Otherwise, if he just seems to be walking by, I calmly walk by him and continue on to Revolutionary Square. I go to the north door and try to open it. I look inside.

written by Gligar on Sep 17, 2010 00:44

Cargo lift

Speed-Y continues working. He cuts off the box flaps and crafts them into a new box, into which he puts some ammunition. The box is then attached near Nukabot's operator's chair.

That done, he sets about making an ammo belt for himself - there's no sense in letting the communists get all the slugthrower ammo, after all. However, he botches it and ends up with a tangled mess of duct tape.

The lift continues its slow ascent.

Lift hall (A level)

Mango-R manages to get to his feet. After pressing a call button, he has another look at the Com 1 unit he found. A half-resurfaced memory tells him that it allows two-way communication over one of five channels. This one's emblazoned with the logo for the People's Revolutionary Police Force (and it's a sad state of affairs that they've been able to brand things so quickly) and is currently set to Channel 5. It's switched off.

Corridor D1

The communist continues walking towards Jam-O, apparently not caring about the unfamiliar clone who is calling for someone.

Jam-O walks forward, and passes the communist, who nods politely, and on into Revolutionary Square.

Revolutionary Square

Communists are moving around, doing whatever it is communists do, and paying no attention, despite possibly being told to check for suspicious activity.

Jam-O has a look at the north door, but discovers that it won't open.

written by Kristos on Sep 17, 2010 00:50

I start exploring my PDC for any sort of floor map feature. Perhaps I can make things out despite the broken screen? If not, I put it away and closely analyze the walls for any unusual markings or cryptograms. Because I like solving cryptograms. Which is... OH NO! I bet I'm not supposed to know what a cryptogram is! Oh bother... maybe I am supposed to know. How thorough is a brainscrub supposed to be? Did I discover this before or after the brainscrub? Is it treason or is it simply a useful skill? I continue to search for any odd markings, not expecting to find any of course.

written by Jam on Sep 17, 2010 01:13

Hmm... Well, if I can't open the door, then Mango-R probably isn't on the other side.

I walk to the south door and go through it. I look around a bit, then realize that I'm in the D level Lift Hall.

I decide to call a lift...

written by Speeder on Sep 17, 2010 01:27

I look upset at the duct tape. Then I remember that thanks to friend computer drugs, I can remain calm and happy.

Even if the drugs are not actually on my system...

So I carefully try again, starting at first untangling the duct tape and trying to reuse it in the parts that need less glue...

Oh... this time if I succeed, I start to sing the AlgaePLUS ad jingle HAPPILY and then I drink an AlgaePLUS. \o/

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 17, 2010 06:20

I flick on the Com 1 unit, and keep quiet, should it automatically start communicating. I continue waiting for the lift, trying to figure how to use the truncheon.

Cargo lift

Kristos-R tries to get his PDC to do something useful, but the screen decides that it has had enough of hanging on to a quarter of a life, and dissolves into a mess of black and glitched lines of pixels.

He puts it away and starts examining the walls. He notes that there seems to have been a clearance stripe at one point, but it's now too faded to make out.

Speed-Y tries to salvage at least some of the duct tape from his botched belt, in order to try again. But he just tangles it up even further.

With a clunk, the lift stops. It seems to be stuck between levels.

Lift hall (D level)

Having walked in here, Jam-O calls a lift.

Lift hall (A level)

Meanwhile, three levels below, Mango-R is keeping himself busy with the Com 1 - which, apart from a slight hint of static, is quiet - and his truncheon, giving it a good few experimental swings. He vaguely remembers seeing them in the hands of IntSec goons, who generally use them to hit troublesome clones on the head. Sometimes the clone's head is so dense, it breaks the truncheon, causing the goon to issue a fine for damaging vital equipment.

As he's doing that, a lift arrives.

written by Speeder on Sep 17, 2010 16:25

I get angry this time and throw the ball of duct tape somewhere random (sorry if it lands on someone hair).

I don't even notice the lift stopped, and I try again with the rest of the new duct tape to make a bullet holster.²¹⁴

written by Kristos on Sep 17, 2010 19:58

If the duct tape lands in my hair, I acquire it with a "Thanks!" and a mandatory smile towards Speed-Y.

²¹⁴ SPEEDER: (OOC: how many barrels and bullets I managed to put in the forkbot?)

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 17, 2010 21:48

I stop swinging the truncheon, and enter the lift. I take a look at the buttons, and push the D button if it's there.

written by Jam on Sep 17, 2010 21:51

I wait for the lift to arrive.

Wait... why was I calling a lift again?

written by Lightning4 on Sep 17, 2010 22:49

"Clunk? That's not good, that's not good at all"

My expression clearly shows that I'm below minimum mandatory happiness levels yet again.

"Maybe it will start moving again? I hope..."

written by Gligar on Sep 18, 2010 01:04

Cargo lift

Tempers are beginning to fray. Take Speed-Y, for example. He now throws his ball of tangles duct tape somewhere random, causing it to hit... the lift's control panel. It doesn't do anything, though.

He tries again, this time with fresh tape. And this time, he manages to not screw it up, giving himself enough space for 30 rounds. Add that to the 40 (maybe) in the ammo box, and that should be enough.

And if you're wondering, there are also seven barrels in the box.

L4-O is also below Mandatory Minimum Happiness Level. Why has this lift stopped? This can't be good.

There is another clunk, and the lift starts up again.

A lift

Mango-R enters and hits D. The lift closes its door and ascends.

Lift hall (D level)

According to the level indicators, one lift is somewhere in Deep Subsector, so deep that the whole indicator is just down arrows. Another in on A Level, and is ascending. A third is on G Level and is descending. The fourth is all the way up on X Level. There's no word on the called lift, but it looks like it'll get here soon.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 18, 2010 01:07

I look around with a skeptical frown, to make sure we're actually going UP, rather than some other direction we shouldn't be, like down or that treasonous sideways.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 18, 2010 01:32

I flick through the other channels on the Com 1 Unit, checking for any kind of communication that could be useful in the mission.

I hold my truncheon ready to swing before the lift arrives at D level.

written by Speeder on Sep 18, 2010 01:46

I get so happy after getting so mad, that I don't even realize that the lift stopped and started again, then I carefully place the yellow bullets in my belt.

"Look, I am golden now! Yay!"

I look to something else to fiddle... Since there are not much to do, I grab a multicorder, install a battery and tape it in the top of the forkbot, and press the record button.

written by 4616599 on Sep 18, 2010 03:20

I check for any empty leftover boxes. "Hmm. They could be useful for storing stuff. Cryo-R might just agree."

Seeing any, I attempt to fold them up neatly and stow them in my backpack.

written by Kristos on Sep 18, 2010 06:33

I pounce at the ball of tangled duct tape and stow it away. Might come in handy.

written by Jam on Sep 18, 2010 15:05

I get out my laser rifle and prepare myself, just in case something dangerous is riding in one of the lifts.

I continue waiting...

written by Gligar on Sep 18, 2010 15:45

Cargo lift

By the look of things, the lift is ascending.

Speed-Y puts on the now-finished ammo belt, making sure the bullets stay where they are as he does, and looks for something else to do... hey, multicorders!

He grabs one and installs a power pack, causing the display to come to life. He tapes it to Nukabot and hits record.

The lift continues to rise. It passes closed outer doors as it does.

Joris-O looks for any empty boxes, and finds only the slug box, still marked with its YELLOW markings. He picks it up and stores it.

Kristos-R manages to retrieve the ball of duct tape.

The lift is suddenly lit up by an open outer door as the lift comes to a halt at yet another warehouse with another clunk.

Lift hall (D level)

The ascending lift arrives, and the door opens, revealing Mango-R with a truncheon held ready to swing at something.

Jam-O, on the other hand, is pointing a laser rifle into the lift. Possibly at Mango-R.

The descending lift also reaches D Level. It's empty.

written by 4616599 on Sep 18, 2010 17:30

I get up and position myself, armed with the blaster, behind the forkbot.

written by Speeder on Sep 18, 2010 17:31

When the lift stops, this time is pretty obvious, because of the open door and all...

So I rush to the back of the lift and point the nut thrower outside.

written by Cryoburner on Sep 18, 2010 20:14

"Wow! Light fixtures!"

I examine the light fixtures in the warehouse, as well as those in the cargo lift. I also inspect how well they are performing their job of lighting their respective areas.

written by Jam on Sep 18, 2010 21:28

"Ah! Die Comm—oh, it's you. Hey Mango-R!"

I walk in to the lift.

"Sorry we left without you, I thought you were on the lift... Well anyways, now I've found you. We need to go K level... or was it R level?"

I try to press the K level button. If I can't find it, I try to press the R level button. If I can't find that either, I just stare confusedly at the button panel, then take out my PDC and try calling Speed-Y...

written by Kristos on Sep 18, 2010 21:48

I ready my trusty pipe in case there's close combat and try to discern what lays beyond the doors.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 18, 2010 23:09

I look around along with Speed and the rest of the group. I see if there's any indication of what level we are currently on.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 18, 2010 23:21

"That's not really too much of a problem, other than blowing myself up... possibly along with some PRPF people along the way. I was planning to look for my PDC and ME card, but I think it can wait until later."

I watch Jam-R(?) look at the lift buttons, and ask,

"You seem quite a bit cheerful. Did you get a promotion or something?"

written by Gligar on Sep 19, 2010 00:53

Cargo lift

A flurry of activity inside the lift indicates that various clones are diving behind Nukabot and/or grabbing weapons, in preparation for what might be in the warehouse. Which, as L4-O sneaks a look to check, is on Q Level.

As it happens, there are three communists in direct view, pointing slugthrowers at another clone. One wearing the badge of an R&D scientist.

The scientist is saying, "But you can't take my project! It is not yet ready for testing!"

[200]

But then, of course, Cryo-R loudly proclaims his love of light fixtures.

And, of course, the communists hear this. They turn in unison and point their slugthrowers at Cryo-R. "Identify yourself!"

A lift

Jam-O enters Mango-R's lift. After a brief conversation, he presses the button for K Level. The doors close and the lift ascends.

written by Speeder on Sep 19, 2010 01:01

I quickly shoot nuts away from the commies, in something in other direction, trying to make them get startled and not pay attention to everyone behind the forkbot.

Then I don't bother knowing if it worked or not, and grab my rifle.

written by Jam on Sep 19, 2010 01:17

I smile.

"Yes, I did get a promotion! To ORANGE clearance! But now I need to find an ORANGE jumpsuit..."

I look around the lift, as if I were expecting ORANGE jumpsuits to suddenly start growing from the walls, or something. I frown for a few millisecondcycles as I process the rest of what Mango-R said.

"Wait... You blew yourself up? And now you don't have a PDC or ME card? Ohhh, that's not good... We should go back and get them... Maybe after we meet up with the others at K level? But you have a weapon, right?"

Seeing that Mango-R does indeed have a laser pistol, I offer him a few of my spare barrels.

"Here, take a few spare laser pistol barrels, so you don't run out of shots in the middle of a battle or something..."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 19, 2010 01:31

I take 2 of the spare barrels.

"Thanks. Though I'm not so sure about these things. They seem to explode once they're out of ammo. You'd think that the designers of such weaponry would take that into consideration. This means that these barrels are equivalent to grenades..."

I don't screw any of the barrels into my laser pistol, deciding to place them into my pockets instead.

"Congratulations by the way! I would expect that to happen sooner or later. But do we even know the clearance of K level? And that the others are there?"

written by Cryoburner on Sep 19, 2010 02:40

Oh, hello! I am Kryo-Я. Please ignore my forkbot, as it seems to be leaking nuts. I probably should get that taken care of soon.

Anyway, I am here to see about the project. I have brought with me the final component for its completion, and am to begin testing it right away! Perhaps you could direct me to where it is located? It's imperative that I test it as soon as possible, and return to the main office with my findings.²¹⁵

written by Kristos on Sep 19, 2010 02:52

I present myself. "And I'm his assistant, Cristos-Я. Of course the work is really all my brilliance. I took Kryo's theory and turned it into reality! I will only be happy when I know the component has began serving it's purpose. Please direct us promptly, as it is a very time-sensitive device, and we wouldn't want all of Q level up in flames, would we?" I hold the wad of duct tape in my hand with the pipe resting on the wad, so it appears as if it is somehow unsafe to touch with bare skin, taking care not to bump the pipe against anything.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 19, 2010 08:57

I remain silent, watching the rest. I keep my laser pistol out of sight for now, but ready to shoot just in case those commies decide they don't want to be friends.

Cargo lift

Thinking fast, Speed-Y shoots his nut launcher, aiming at something else... like that pile of pallets behind the scientist. The noise causes two of the communists to turn back and peer past him.

As for the third, he doesn't notice Speed-Y grabbing his rifle.

Distracted from his precious precious precious precious PRECIOUS lights (what does he see in those anyway?) Cryo-R comes up with some quick excuse. I have just one question... just how does he know the treasonous Communist Alphabet?²¹⁶

And Kristos-R knows it as well! What the HEL?

But anyway. L4-O decides to just watch for now. Maybe traitors have something in common.

The scientist peers at the team. He seems to want to say something, but is cut off by the third communist, who speaks to Cryo-R. "You say so, but you don't look like a scientist. And with wounded legs? I doubt you could test the project." He turns to Kristos-R. "That looks remarkably like a wad of duct tape, comrade."

A lift

Jam-O tells of his promotion, and offers laser barrels. Mango-R takes two of them. However, he seems to think that they're unsafe. I'm sure that The Computer would be thrilled to learn that Mango-R was distrustful of an item that it has personally deemed to be safe. Perhaps it would

²¹⁵ CRYOBURNER: (But what about the lighting!? Was it optimal?)

I take out my PDC and try to call L4-O²¹⁷.

"Hello? L4-O? We're at K level. Did you find the re-education center? Where are you?"

written by Kristos on Sep 19, 2010 19:00

I'm about to explain that the duct tape is indeed a wad of duct tape, and it is protecting my hand from the surface radiation along the tube, which is in turn protecting the delicate device inside. However, just as my lips part, Speeder fires his shot. I seize the moment and dive at the nearest commie and strike with my pipe, or if that is not practical, I pull out my laser pistol and try to take out another one as I duck behind Nukabot.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 19, 2010 20:29

Medical Bay

"Citizen? Did you hear me? I need to know how you were burned." The docbot approaches Mega-R and pokes him.

Cargo lift

Speed-Y decides that diplomacy isn't working, and fires his rifle at "the most distracted communist"... right in the back of the neck. Zap! The communist collapses.

The other distracted communist notices this, and whirls round, his slugthrower once again aimed into the lift. But he too gets felled, this time by Kristos-R's laser.

²¹⁷ JAM: (ooc: because he hasn't posted yet...)

L4-O also starts firing. However, at the precise moment, he goes to do so, his PDC starts playing the jingle for Bouncy Bubble Beverage. Someone's calling him. This distracts him, and he almost drops his laser in shock. Hence his shot ends up hitting the floor.

Unsurprisingly, Cryo-R is more interested in the lights. They meet Alpha Complex standards, that much he can determine. That stuff about colour temperatures is beyond his security clearance.

Lift hall (K Level)

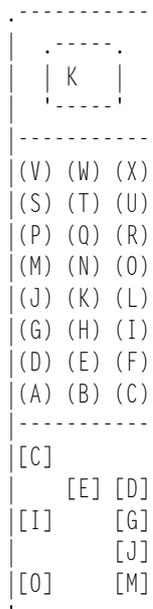

As it happens, L4-O's PDC is ringing because Jam-O is trying to contact him. But he's not picking up, so it just keeps ringing...

As he looked around, Jam-O noticed one exit. Well, two, if you count the air duct.

A lift

Mango-R remains in the lift, what with the whole ORANGE thing...

He takes a look at the panel. It's laid out like this:

written by Kristos on Sep 20, 2010 02:17

I duck and dive and swing my pipe to disable the final commie so I can handcuff him for questioning. If this succeeds, I handcuff him. I try to stay out of the line of fire - from both sides.

written by Jam on Sep 20, 2010 03:04²¹⁸

"Hmm... He's not picking up... I hope he's okay..."

I look back at Mango-R, who for some reason hasn't exited the lift yet... Maybe it's because the lift hall is ORANGE?

"Um... Mango-R, I order you (well, it's more of a recommendation than an order) to leave the lift (if you want) and follow me (you can wander around a bit too) into any ORANGE clearance areas (or RED, or INFRARED) that we need to pass through in order to get to the re-education center (or wherever it is we're supposed to go). Oh, and if you see any ORANGE laser pistol barrels (or RED, or any laser rifle barrels), please get them for me."

²¹⁸ JAM: (ooc: Don't I have good timing? 🤔)

[202]

I smile, and walk through the door. I look around.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 20, 2010 03:27

I hum along with my ringtone as I try to refocus and shoot the remaining commies.

Finally, I lower my weapon and answer it.

"Hello? Who is this? You better not be a commie."

"Oh. OK then."

I exit the lift, following Jam-O, through the door. I keep the truncheon ready.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Kristos-R dives out of the lift, ready to disable the last communist. At the same time, the communist fires off a round.

Would you believe that they both miss? The communist's slug ends up hitting one of the light fixtures, though, smashing it.

L4-O's PDC continues to ring. Eventually, though, he gets round to answering it. It turns out to be Jam-O. He seems to be ordering someone to follow him into an ORANGE area.

Concourse K1

As it happens, the someone is Mango-R. He's just crossed the lift hall and has entered the concourse behind Jam-O... who realises that L4-O is answering his PDC call.

The concourse is also ORANGE, and shows signs of battle. A couple of dead communists are being carried out by others.

Apart from that, the concourse seems to double as an eating area. The usual vidscreen is flanked by four serving hatches, and the concourse itself contains tables and chairs, all set up to have a good view of the vidscreen. There are four other exits.

Cargo lift

Speed-Y continues firing, and shoots the remaining communist in the chest, crippling him despite the communist's reflex.

Joris-O has a though. He looks at the dead communists, and notices that they're wearing fuzzy hats. He then looks at the R&D clone, who doesn't seem to be carrying any equipment with him.

Cloning station

Two cloning tanks fire up. Clones begin to form.

This is noticed by two nameless clones who enter the station at that moment. They confer briefly and enter the showers.

Chemical showers

Noticing the status lights by the START button, they remove a wall panel and start working on something.

I exit the lift and look for a convenient spot in the warehouse to take up position with my blaster.

"Handcuff him and remove his fuzzy hat. He might be a bit more receptive to input that way!" I whisper to Kristos-R.

written by Speeder on Sep 20, 2010 16:57

I smile.

"Just hit the hat with your thing, don't touch it."

Then I look at the scientist.

"Are you ok? What they want you do build, you are not being treasonous, are you?"

written by Cryoburner on Sep 20, 2010 23:04

"light fixture! Noooooooooooooo!"

I examine whether the room's lighting capacity has been adversely affected by this tragedy, and also whether there are any interesting light fixture fragments on the floor.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 20, 2010 23:22

"Oh, it seems to be Jam."

I talk into my PDC.

"Uh, hi Jam. We just got to the level where we think we can get Mr. Happymask here a brainscrub. It sounds like you've found someone."

I look up and ask the scientist,

"We can get a brainscrub for him on this level, right?"

written by Kristos on Sep 21, 2010 00:05

I handcuff the scientist and remove his hat with my pipe. I'm so thrilled to put my pipe to good use that I start hiccuping.

written by Jam on Sep 21, 2010 00:22

I whisper into the PDC.

"Hey L4-O! Yep, I've found Mango-R. So you're at K level? How do I get to you?"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 21, 2010 00:31

"Uh no, we're on Q level."

I remember that this level ISN'T the level the center is on, but that it should be above us.

I look up and add:

"Oh, sorry. I mean, is the level above us where it is?"

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Joris-O takes up a position in the warehouse - under the shattered light fixture, in fact, where there is now a shadow - and speaks to Kristos-R.

He's followed by Speed-Y, who pays more attention to the scientist. He's wearing a dishevelled and grimy GREEN jumpsuit. "I've been better, citizen," the scientist replies. "I've been forced to continue working on my project 'for the good of the people' as they put it, but you just know that the thing will just be used against Friend Computer's forces anyway."

The scientist stumbles and yawns. "Sorry, citizens, I haven't slept in what seems like weekcycles hey what are you doing?! Release me at once!"

That last is directed at Kristos-R. Instead of restraining the (crippled, but still alive) third communist, Kristos-R decides to restrain the scientist instead. The scientist, incidentally, is not wearing a hat.

Lucas-R calls out, "What the frell? The communist is getting away!"

And he is! He's trying to get to an exit.

While all this is happening, Cryo-R still fixates on the lights! He's trying to get to the shattered remains of the light fixture, but is stopped by John-R. "Cryo-R, are you a troubleshooter or a frelling CPU pen pusher?!" he hisses.

L4-O tries to ignore all this. He's talking to Jam-O on his PDC. Though he does have one question for the scientist.

But it looks like the scientist doesn't want to talk to the seemingly-loyal team who just handcuffed him. Not even the communists had handcuffed him.

written by Kristos on Sep 21, 2010 00:45

Realizing my error before the cuffs click, without a word, I jump back and run after the commie with the cuffs, and knock his hat off with my pipe. 😊

written by Cryoburner on Sep 21, 2010 00:50

"Handcuffing a presumably GREEN clearance scientist and knocking off his invisible hat!? What sort of traitorous action is this!" 😡

written by Lightning4 on Sep 21, 2010 00:59

I look up at the sudden fiasco, and overhear Cryo speaking.

"Presumably? Only a traitor would assume that he is not necessarily GREEN even though he is clearly wearing a GREEN suit!"

I look up and see the commie trying to get away. I attempt to shoot out his legs with my laser pistol. But it would seem I forgot to turn off my PDC, so Jam might be hearing all of this...

written by Jam on Sep 21, 2010 01:44

I turn around and walk back into the lift hall. I continue whispering into the PDC.

"Scientist? Invisible hat? Traitor? What in all of Alpha Complex is happening over there? Where are you? Are you even at K level?"

I cover the part of the PDC that you talk into, and reply to Mango-R.

"We're at K level, right? The commander said we should go to the re-education center at K level. Though for some reason, he also said it was at R level. I wonder if the others went there instead..."

written by Speeder on Sep 21, 2010 03:59

I facepalm.

"At least this time he is not killing himself."

I aim at the commie with the rifle, and if L4 misses, I shoot the commie too.

Then I return my attention to the scientist.

"Sorry sir. My team as you can see is a bit of trouble itself sometimes... Unfortunately one of our most reliable members are somewhere else... Anyway, we are the troubleshooter team Epsilon, composed by Lightspeed Jam, Nukabot, Kristos, the one that for some strange reason decided to handcuff you, Lucas, previously infrared but proved to be quite good as troubleshooter, and John, mindblast specialist."

I look at Cryo.

"This guy was supposed in to help us too, but for some reason he only think about CPU stuff, so we are to escort him to a re-education centre. Also another guy could only think about food, and then suddenly he started batting random stuff with a towel, we left him in A level"

I give a uncorfontable smile.

"I am Speed-Y, and I am deeply sorry for the actions of Kristos-R... So, can we help you sir? We are tasked in retaking the sector from the commies, before the army decides to take some drastic action themselves."

written by 4616599 on Sep 21, 2010 05:39

Hoping my quickdraw skills were honed enough, I whip out a stunner and zap at the escaping commie's waistline.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 21, 2010 07:16

"Well, I guess so. But we should check this level, just in case the re-education centre is on this level. If we can't find it, we go to them. If it is on this level, then you can tell the others. It makes a lot of sense, right?"

I take a look at the vidscreen.

"Wait. Commander? Is he someone I should know?"

written by Gligar on Sep 21, 2010 16:01

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Kristos-R realises his mistake... all too late. The handcuffs have already locked in place... so why didn't they click? Does anyone know the correct CPU Mandate? Cryo-R? Anyone?

To make up for it, though, he does knock off the communist's hat..)

Amazingly, Cryo-R actually pays attention, and recoils in shock. L4-O points out a flaw in his statement before paying attention to the communist himself. Taking a careful shot, he shoots the communist's legs out from under him. The shock of the additional wound takes its toll, and the communist collapses.

As this is happening, Speed-Y also has the communist in his sights. It turns out that it's not necessary, so he turns to the scientist. "You'd better remove these handcuffs, citizen," the scientist replies, "or there will be... complications when all this is over. The destruction of this project could set the war effort back monthcycles, maybe yearcycles!"

Er... did Kristos-R remember to pick up the keys? ²¹⁹

Joris-O also has words, this time for the communist. Wait, did I say wrds? I mean a jolt from his stunner.

It's a shame that the communist was already unconscious, since that was a nice shot.

All this is being transmitted through L4-O's still active PDC.

Concourse K1

Of course, Jam-O is listening to all this. He feels the need to make a comment, before conferring with Mango-R.

written by Speeder on Sep 21, 2010 17:42

I become red faced.

"Sir, I am REALLY sorry, I don't use handcuffs myself... Maybe I can unlock it without the key, since I don't have it..."

I turn to L4. "Nice shot" then to Joris. "You missed. Or you was aiming at the commie?"

²¹⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: Perversity bids, anyone? 😊)

I look at Cryo for a while. "Ok, CPU person, I need a key, or whatever object I can use to open these cuffs without hurting the fine citizen here."

I do all that speaking very fast, like if I was late for a meeting. Also the sweating becomes more obvious...

written by Cryoburner on Sep 21, 2010 22:10

"I say "presumably GREEN" due to the shadows cast by the now less than optimal lighting making it somewhat difficult to tell, a result of that arguably unnecessary gunfight, which one might even consider as a situation involving traitorous levels of recklessness, were they of sufficient clearance to do so."

"Anyway, since no one else seems capable of unlocking this scientist who is requesting to be freed, I suppose I'll have to do it myself."

I proceed to take out my wire cutters and carefully cut through my own handcuffs, then crawl over to the scientist while avoiding any broken glass or other debris from the damaged light fixture. I then cut through his handcuffs while concentrating on not injuring him in any way.

written by Jam on Sep 21, 2010 22:26

I whisper to Mango-R.

"Remember the clone that was on the vidscreen back when we were all at the meeting hall? That's the Commander. We met with him at H level, he told us to give Cryo-R a brainscrub, and gave us a few promotions. Speed is YELLOW clearance now, and Lucas is RED."

I look around Concourse K1.

Okay. Let's try going through that door."

I point to the door on the left, then walk to it and try to open it.

written by Kristos on Sep 22, 2010 00:11

Distribution warehouse (Q level)

Cryo-R replies to L4-O... something about poor lighting making it hard to tell.

What! There is exactly one bad light in the room, and it's nowhere near the scientist.

He then tries to comply with Speed-Y's order. It's difficult when you only have one hand to work with. But eventually he retrieves a pair of wire cutters... and proceeds to attack his own handcuffs with them. And it works. So there's now another traitor free.

But not for long. Remember that he was cuffed to a registered Mental Blast mutant? Well... said mutant has had enough. He concentrates at Cryo-R, muttering, "You are not getting away."

²²⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC: Since nobody sent me any perversity bids...)

[205]

Cryo-R... would fall to his knees, if he were standing, but as it is, he just clutches his head and grunts in pain before lapsing into unconsciousness.

Off the scientist's look, John-R adds, "It's okay, sirs, he's just unconscious. I really don't want to lose sight of him before he receives his brainscrub. Besides, we in CPU have... ways of dealing with failure."

Kristos-R then decides to question the GREEN's trustworthiness.

How do I put this...

The scientist is GREEN. Kristos-R is RED. Who is more trustworthy?

That's right, the one with higher clearance. He has that clearance for a reason, after all.

The scientist notices. "Watch your tongue, citizen! You are fined 300 credits for that remark."

Concourse K1

Jam-O picks a door - the one on the left. It opens onto yet another corridor. There's one main difference, though. Instead of a clearance stripe, this one has a set of long lighted strips - from red up to blue. The RED strip is currently lit.

written by Jam on Sep 22, 2010 01:59

"Good! It's RED. Let's go this way, it must be the right way!"

I walk down the corridor and try to enter the first door I see that is ORANGE or below.

written by Speeder on Sep 22, 2010 04:00

I walk up to Joris, take the stunner from his hand, and shoot Kristos.

Then I grab the handcuff cutter from Cryo hands and proceed to try to free the scientist.

"I am DEEPLY sorry sir. I mean, for Kristos... Cryo is a prisoner, as you can notice."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 22, 2010 06:10

I follow Jam-O into the corridor.

"H level? Don't remember. I think I was doing something else, wandering around, and getting shot at. Oh, and getting blown up."

Extra info:

I give the stunner back to Joris after shooting.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 22, 2010 07:54

"Uh... good work, John!"

I look back at the scientist.

"So um... sir. Might you tell us where the re-education center is?"

I look around, seemingly for any communist listeners.

"And what your... project thingy is? It sounds like the commies are really interested."

written by Gligar on Sep 22, 2010 16:05

Cargo lift

Cryo-R twitches, but remains unconscious.

Speed-Y decides he's had enough, and grabs Joris-O's stunner, using it to stun Kristos-R before giving it back.

After that, he grabs Cryo-R's wire cutters and tries to use them on the scientist's handcuffs.

And those wire cutters seem to be ridiculously sharp... since that's now two sets of handcuffs they've cut through.

"Well," the scientist says, in a low voice, "now that's over and done with... you now seem to have two traitors on your team. I suggest you do something about that. You mentioned that you're looking for a re-education centre? Well, it happens that there is one on this level. It's an advance prototype of a new design that some of my colleagues were working on before they were terminated by the communists. I was spared because of my own project... as you might have gathered, the communists want it for themselves. It's probably better if it were used by loyal forces... but as I mentioned, it's not yet finished. Still, if you'll follow me, I can show you both projects. And... perhaps you can tell me who your commander is.

"And maybe prove that you are, in fact, loyal."

Corridor K1

Jam-O and Mango-R walk down the corridor. On the right, just before a RED/GREEN intersection, is an ORANGE door. It opens.

Museum of Troubleshooting - Entrance

The room is an entryway - apparently one of two - into what the sign proclaims to be the Museum of Troubleshooting, which (again, according to the sign) houses logs and equipment from times dating back as far as the dawn of Alpha Complex. Entry fee is 10 credits.

Of course, what with the whole communist thing, there's nobody on duty. I guess the communists aren't interested in Alpha Complex history.

written by Jam on Sep 22, 2010 21:43²²¹

I look at the entrance to the Museum. I really want to go in and see all the troubleshooting equipment... Maybe there are some really old laser pistol barrels in there! But what about the re-education center? I don't want to ignore the mission...

²²¹ JAM: (OOC: can I still hear the others through my PDC? Specifically the part where the scientist says that there is a re-education center at that level?)

"Maybe... some other time..."

I turn and reluctantly walk back out to the corridor. I continue walking down it, until I find another door to walk through. I'm so sad that for a few secondcycles, I actually frown! I really wanted to see all the old laser pistols..

written by Speeder on Sep 22, 2010 21:52

I nod, then I say to the others.

"Don't let Cryo flee, and someone tell Kristos to stop acting like if drunk or something."

Then I look at the scientist and say.

"It would be better if we talk somewhere, silent. You know, GREEN information to RED people."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 22, 2010 23:30

Noticing my PDC is indeed still on, I talk into it.

"If you didn't hear, we're on Q level. Meet us soon."

I close the connection and put my PDC away. I drive Nukabot off of the cargo lift and park it nearby. Wouldn't want someone else calling the lift with Nukabot and all our stuff on it, now would we?

I get off and approach the scientist and the rest of the group.

written by Gligar on Sep 23, 2010 00:27²²²

Museum of Troubleshooting - Entrance

Jam-O seems a little reluctant about it, but, since this isn't the re-education centre, it has little bearing to the mission. He turns to leave, looking rather sad. Opening the door again reveals that the RED strip has gone out, to be replaced by a BLUE one.

Jam-O can hear L4-O, over the PDC, saying that they're on Q Level, before L4-O hangs up. He must have forgotten to do so before.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

As L4-O, Nukabot and the others exit the lift, the scientist replies, "Quite right. But you still haven't answered my question. That information is clearly lower than GREEN Clearance, if only because you aren't GREEN."

The scientist heads for the door. "Or perhaps I should simply leave you here."

Cloning station

Remember those two clones, forming over here? By now, they've coalesced into the forms of Star-R and Albey-R, and it looks like... yes, there they go... they drop to the floor of the cloning station, covered in slime.

It looks like the two clones in here are still busy tinkering with whatever that is... it looks like the water distribution

"I actually, don't know who is our commander, or even if he, or she, or whatever is a commander, we call it 'Monitor Guy' since it usually shows up and talk with us via some hidden monitors, but it did gave us some information, and remotely helped, so I guess it is legitimate, also it can fine us at will, and give clearance and weapon use brevets."

I grab my two brevets and show them.

I add:

"Only thing I know about him is he has some kind of... triangular eyes. Glasses, maybe? I dunno! He's probably like, ULTRAVIOLET or something, or a clearance so high that we're not permitted to even see him! Not that I would have knowledge of any such clearance, of course. Because that would be above my clearance and treason!"

My rambling trails off.

written by Jam on Sep 23, 2010 02:28

"Ah, BLUE!"

I jump back inside the room. Seeing Mango-R standing out in the corridor, I call to him.

"Quickly Mango-R, come in here!"

After making sure Mango-R makes it in the room (I drag him in if I have to), I turn around a face the entrance to the Museum.

"Well, I guess the only non-treasonous way to get to Q level, and to the re-education center, is to go into the Museum and search for the other entrance... HOORAY!!"

Extremely excited, I walk (with a little skipping and hopping mixed in) up to the entrance.

I start singing/chanting/cheering. "Museum! Museum! Museum! Museum!"

Wait... How will I pay the entry fee? Not paying entry fees is treasonous, right?

I take out my ME card and search for some kind of card scanner. If I can't find one, I search my pockets for the

Corridor Q2

The team follows the scientist, with John-R and Lucas-R carrying the still-unconscious Cryo-R between them. It seems that Mental Blast-induced unconsciousness lasts longer than stunner-induces unconsciousness, as Kristos-R wakes up in time to bring up the rear. And...

...why was he dreaming of a twisted version of Outside? Looks like I'll need to inspect his MemoMax data in great detail. (Kind of like what Cryo-R does with light fixtures (and pens (and rubble (and (and (and (and...)))))), only more so.)

The scientist doesn't notice too much. He's more interested in Speed-Y's brevets. "Very well. I will accept these for now. And... I may know your commander. If it's who I think it is, it would explain a few things. You aren't cleared to know why."

He stops near a door. "Here is the re-education centre my colleagues were working on."

Joris-O, meanwhile, remembers the boxes. He darts back into the warehouse.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

He notes the food and weapons boxes in the lift, and drags them out, into the warehouse. (Naturally, they're too big to put into a backpack.)

He seems to think that it would be a good idea to load them onto Nukabot's rear seats... but that's clearly a one-seat forkbot, despite the number of clones who can hang on to it

Museum of Troubleshooting - Entrance

Though there is nobody on duty, the ME card scanners are still set up here. Jam-O swipes his card. The scanner beeps at him. Deciding that it's okay, Jam-O heads for the entry door.

Mango-R doesn't, though. He doesn't have his ME card with him, remember?

Museum corridor

Jam-O enters. He notes a small display near the entrance, briefly detailing what a Troubleshooter does (though Jam-O should probably know that already) and why they are important, with statements from prominent high-clearance figures to back it all up. There looks to be a vidscreen here, but it's offline.

The corridor continues into the distance, with exits leading to exhibits.

written by Speeder on Sep 23, 2010 18:30

I put the brevets back.

"Hum... So, what we can call him? Commander? He never reply to that question, but we call him lots of stuff then..."

I look at the location and then I say.

"So... what this thing will do with Cryo? It will make him do CPU stuff only when there are time available? And also make him stop fleeing all the time, even when there are no reason to flee?"

written by Lightning4 on Sep 23, 2010 21:59

"I call him Mr. Mysterious. The commander, that is. Not Cryo. Although he's rather... mysterious too, I guess. In a treasonous kind of way."

"But I guess that's what this thing will be for!"

I try to open the door and peek inside.

written by Jam on Sep 23, 2010 22:02

I turn back and scan my ME card again.

"There. Now I've paid for you too..."

I walk back into the Museum and go into one of the exhibits. I stare in wonder at whatever is inside.

As my mind settles back into reality, I catch up with the scientist and speak to him, "Sir, I hope you'll find it in yourself to pardon my actions. Due to an unknown difficulty, most of my long term memory is gone. But I seem to have random, treasonous recollections. And it has all rather confused me. Perhaps I am the one needing re-education... Forgive me, but I don't even remember how to pay anything. If you let me know how, I'll pay the fine you issued me as soon as I can."

"If my colleagues' calculations were correct, this modified re-education centre should remove all signs of treasonous thoughts or ideals from the subject, in much less time than the standard centre down on K Level. It should make the subject completely loyal and completely unwilling to leave the mission for any reason."

L4-O opens the door, to reveal a room with six reclining chairs. Attached to each are a large number of restraints, electrodes, intravenous injectors, and a few things you can't readily identify. Suspended above each chair is something that resembles the standard Troubleshooter helmet... or it would if it weren't for the large number of injectors and spikes lining the outside and inside, respectively. At the head of each chair is a Computer terminal.

²²⁴ JAM: (ooc: the one I picked up at the C level lift hall)

The scientist continues, "The last batch of tests my colleagues ran were quite promising. As of then, this system has attained a 95% success rate."

He adds, to Kristos-R, "Simply hand me your ME card, and I'll deal with it." He heads in.

Museum of Troubleshooting - Corridor

With several doors to choose from, Jam-O simply picks one at random.

Museum of Troubleshooting - Rise of the Societies

The exhibit housed therein seems to tell of the initial rise of the secret societies, around Yearcycle 33 of The Computer, which seemed to have been treasonous, even back then. There are pictures of early Troubleshooters shooting at what appear to be cyborgs, and at rogue bots, and, yes, at clones wearing fuzzy hats. Interestingly, none of the pictures depict anyone using lasers. Instead, they seem to be using old-fashioned types of slugthrower. Presumably, laser pistols hadn't been invented yet.

In a display case in the centre of the room are examples of some of the exhibits used by these early Troubleshooters, including a couple of Model 50 PACs (Personal Analogue Companions), a couple of bottles of what the display calls "universal cleaner", and even three of the slugthrowers seen in the pictures. The display calls them "revolvers".

"Good! So, when can we... test it? I am sure Cryo will be a challenging test subject."

I dream that I am in a room.

In this room are seven vendbots, thirty-seven forks, eleven light fixtures, a fuzzy hat, a large clock, two dolphins, three doors and a fine daxophone. Noting that it's odd for there to be eleven light fixtures, I realize that this is a dream, and decide that it might be best to wake up.

If I find that I can not wake up, I proceed to examine each item in excruciating detail, including the color, flavor, size and aroma of every last object in the room. I also take a look behind each door. 😊

Re-education centre

The scientist enters, and inspects a couple of things, and turns on a seventh Computer terminal on a desk. "On reading the display, he answers, "Everything seems to be in order... looks like it's ready."

Cryo-R's carriers enter the centre, and begin hoisting him onto one of the chairs.

He remains unconscious throughout. I wonder if he's dreaming? If he is, I can't see it, so I'm not going to describe it. Who do you think I am? Freaky? 😊

Though I could check his [DFSR] for signs of [CENSORED], but then I'd have to wait a few minutes for results. And by then it may be too late.

As this is happening, L4-O heads back to the warehouse to check on the communist.

Corridor Q2

He passes Joris-O, on his way to the centre, lugging some boxes.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

L4-O sees that the communist is seriously wounded, and needs medical attention about five minutes ago. The communist's chances of survival are slim.

But L4-O runs off.

Re-education centre

L4-O returns to see Cryo-R being hooked up to the chair. Others have also entered. Including Joris-O and his boxes.

[209]

He asks the scientist a question. "Of course," he answers. "The re-education chars should remove the undesirable parts of their personality. Like communism."

Museum of Troubleshooting - Corridor

Jam-O exits the exhibit to see Mango-R entering another. He decides to follow him.²²⁶

Museum of Troubleshooting - Famous Troubleshooters

Mango-R and Jam-O enter the exhibit and are greeted by laser pistols.

The laser pistols belong to statues. According to the plaques, the statues are of Cory-G-FOX, a famous Troubleshooter who battled dangerous mutants and saved Alpha Complex from some threat (the details for which are beyond your security clearance), and Gary-B-MNU, who helped put down the mutant uprising of [DFSR] Sector in Yearcycle [DFSR]. Both statues seem to be equipped with equipment, presumably belonging to those clones.

Elsewhere in the room are display cases. Each holds a picture of a Troubleshooter, and some equipment. Presumably, these are from other Heroes Of Our Complex.

One of the display cases seems to have been broken into. A couple of exhibits seem to have been taken... from the remaining tags in the case, a Com 1 unit and a "revolver"...

If I have not already, I hand the scientist my ME card whenever he's not too busy.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 24, 2010 23:09

"Hm. Does it remove potential death too? That commie out there looks like he's in not particularly great shape."

I shrug.

"Oh well."

I go back and, since nobody else has decided to yet, I search the commies for anything interesting. Maybe a slugthrower for Speed-Y.

written by Jam on Sep 24, 2010 23:10

I admire the statues. Those clones were are so brave, facing those dangerous mutants like that... Mutants that might have been even more dangerous than Freaky...

Then I notice the broken display case.

"ARRG! Vandals! Thieves! What horrible monster would do something like that to a museum exhibit? Grr... If I ever catch them, I'll make them hurt so bad that they'll wish they were dead! I'll make it so they'll never want to use a 'revolver', or a slugthrower, or any other weapon ever again!"

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 24, 2010 23:29

"Looks like someone really needed a Com 1 unit..."

²²⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: Looks like the scanner accepted your card the second time. And yes, you have the plasticred.)

I take a closer look at the broken display cases, and try to determine the time of when they were broken.

"Maybe they're nearby..."

I keep quiet, and listen out for noises outside.

Re-education centre

Kristos-R hands his ME card to the scientist. "Ah, thank you." The scientist enters something into the terminal and scans Kristos-R's ME card through a reader before handing it back.

As he continues entering things into the terminal, he replies, "Hmmm. The machines haven't been tested on heavily-injured clones near to death. I, for one, would be interested in the results of such a test, though." He smiles.

Though L4-O has, once again, returned to the warehouse.

Speed-O HAPPILY waits to see what's going to happen.

Cryo-R, who is now fully hooked up, remains asleep.

The scientist adds, "I'll need one of you to man the chair's terminal and monitor the subject's brain activity."

Museum of Troubleshooting - Famous Troubleshooters

At first, Jam-O is content to admire the statues and the displays. This ends when he notices the broken display case. Who could have done that?! Someone who needed a Com 1 unit, perhaps? Or a "revolver"?

Mango-R inspects the broken case. He can't really determine much by doing so, though, so he gives up and listens, seeing if the perpetrator is still in the vicinity.

It turns out that there are footsteps somewhere, but he can't pinpoint their location.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

L4-O inspects the communists and finds three slugthrowers. Two are of the more familiar semi-automatic GREEN variety. One is not. It appears to be a single-shot weapon, with its ammunition arranged in a group of six in a cylindrical device in front of the cocking lever, instead of the familiar magazine-type loading mechanism. It appears to be YELLOW clearance.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 25, 2010 01:24

"Now what is this..." I mutter to myself.

Since Speed is nearby, I feel safe grabbing the strange slugthrower and place it within my backpack.

I look at the near-dead commie and shrug. I grab him by the leg with my free hand and attempt to drag him into the re-education centre.

written by Kristos on Sep 25, 2010 01:26

"I'll go get the near-dead communist!" I say as I run off to the warehouse. I go up to L4 and whisper, "L4, could you help me carry this commie to the re-education centre? We believe he could help us with some research."

written by Speeder on Sep 25, 2010 03:06

I happily hop like a little girl until the location where I need to stay to monitor Cryo brain.

BRAAAAIN... oh, nevermind, I am not a zombie.

I am full of expectation.

"Hey, do you think that similar technology can be made to fit in hats and temporarily force a person to be communist? We noticed that wearing the fuzzy hats make the person dizzy and have strange behavior, and since all commies have one of the worst aim I ever saw, they are all probably dizzy from the hat."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 25, 2010 04:10

I leave the exhibit, pull out one of my RED laser pistol barrels, and screw it on to my laser pistol body.

I hold my laser pistol in my right hand, the truncheon in the left, and examine the next exhibit.

written by 4616599 on Sep 25, 2010 06:49

As the commie is dragged in, I make sure he has his hat off. "We might try to revive him and squeeze out some information before he's put in."

I take out a pill of Visomorpain, and some Soylent ORANGE and squeeze it around his mouth.

"Speaking of Soylent, I'd heard from a jingle or something that Soylent GREEN has a very special Fun ingredient that makes it taste much so much better than ordinary Soylent! Is it true?" I ask the GREEN clone.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 25, 2010 08:08

"Hey, you're probably not cleared to know that!"

I listen for the answer, regardless.

written by Jam on Sep 25, 2010 14:04

"Footsteps! But where are they coming from?"

I close my eyes and focus on the footsteps, trying to figure out what direction they are coming from. Then I take out my laser rifle and run toward where I think they are...

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

L4-O picks up the unfamiliar slugthrower, thinks, and also grabs the communist's leg, intending to haul him over the re-education centre.

Kristos-R arrives at a run, looks around, and helps L4-O. Or is it the other way round?

But anyway.

Re-education centre

The two, plus the seriously injured communist, arrive at the centre, just as Speed-Y (not O, as someone treasonously altered my previous post to say) is manning the console. The scientist answers, "That's an interesting suggestion. If it is true, then it suggests that either the project was subject to a major security breach even before the invasion, or that the communists have had the idea for much longer than my colleagues did..."

He continues working, and Speed-Y's terminal lights up with a display. A message box appears:

Analysing subject's memory patterns, please wait
Meanwhile, the communist is also being placed into a chair. Joris-O makes sure to knock off his fuzzy hat, and tries to revive him with a visomorpain pill and some Soylent ORANGE.

Sure enough, the communist snaps back into consciousness. He licks his mouth, mumbling, "what is this? Where am I?"

In answer to the Soylent Question, the scientist says, "Soylent GREEN hasn't been in regular production for some time. I don't think the reason was ever declassified below VIOLET. But I believe that the only difference between Soylent GREEN and other Soylents was the quality of the ingredients. And the flavourings."

He looks at the communist. "Now, do you want to hook up this communist of yours?"

Museum of Troubleshooting - Corridor

Mango-R leaves the exhibit and takes a moment to arm himself. He then enters the next room.

Jam-O bursts out a moment later, running down the corridor. Through the open door at the end, he can see a couple of communists examining what looks to be the other entrance.

Museum of Troubleshooting - R&D Service

As you probably know, a big part of troubleshooting is performing services for the service groups, most notably R&D. This involves the field testing of whatever equipment R&D are working on at the time. It is totally not true that these R&D devices are in any way faulty or deadly to their operators, and any suggestions that the devices may, in fact, contribute to the failure of a mission should be considered treasonous.

The exhibit displays several R&D prototype devices, accompanied by mission logs from the troubleshooter teams that field-tested them. Many of these devices went on to mass production. As an example, the first laser pistol is here. It's considerably more cumbersome than the current model, and requires recharging from an experimental power pack, an example of which is also here. Interchangeable barrels doubling as power packs must have come later.

written by Speeder on Sep 25, 2010 17:32

I nod, and then I think a bit.

"How do we know if this commie was commie for his own will or it was the hat fault, can your machine figure that?"

I look at the commie.

"You are on the same level you was some minutes ago when we shot you from being a commie, you don't remember that?"

Questions, questions, questions, lots of questions...

Of course I return paying attention to Cryo brain messages.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 25, 2010 20:47

I turn to the scientist.

"Hmm. Are we cleared to know your name, perhaps? You seem to be loyal to the cause! I dunno if you want to join Team Epsilon though, but it's up to you..."

"...and it would let us non-treasonously pass GREEN areas..."

I let him recover after the flurry of questions he's receiving by silencing myself.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 25, 2010 22:46

"Interesting. This laser pistol is apparently the first one. Looks rather heavy though."

I hear more footsteps and I follow after them, since they're closer than the other set.

written by Jam on Sep 25, 2010 23:36

If the communists don't seem to have seen me yet, I hide behind a pillar or run into a room. I peer around the edge, aim carefully, and attempt to shoot one of the commie's heads.

If my shot hits, I charge forward and attempt to shoot the other one before he can react. Otherwise, I stay hidden...

If the commies seem like they've already seen me, I just run forward, screaming and shooting and completely disregarding my own safety.

written by Gligar on Sep 26, 2010 01:10

Re-education centre

The unhatted communist looks around the room, at the chairs and their restraints and other things. "I... only remember being given a hat to wear, at cone rifle point. So you're going to re-educate me, huh? I... don't think so." He looks at his wounds and smiles. "I'm too far gone for that."

"I doubt that," the scientist replies. "This is an improved system." To the others, he adds, "Connect him up, please."

The communist attempts to fight back, but just tires himself out. Lucas-R and John-R have no trouble beginning the hookup. As they do, his chair's terminal fires up and begins a scan.

Cryo-R's terminal has just finished its own scan, and a results box appears on its display:

Scan Results

* Subject has a general undue curiosity level

* Subject considers his service firm mandate to be more important than anything else

* [RESULT #3 REDACTED]

* Subject is asleep

Warning: subject must be awake for maximum efficiency of re-education

As Speed-Y is reading this, L4-O speaks to the scientist. He responds, "What? Oh, yes! How thoughtless of me! Citizen Derek-G-JHT-3 at your service. Or, well, the other way around, since I'm higher clearance than you. But you know what I mean. And, although I would be pleased to join you, I have been ordered to remain in the labs instead. Which suits me, since I was never any good with weapons, back when I was a Troubleshooter."

And... it looks like Cryo-R is back with us.

Museum of Troubleshooting - R&D Service

Mango-R inspects the antique laser pistol prototype with interest. But he again hears footsteps... from closer this time. He goes yo investigate.

Museum of Troubleshooting - Corridor

It turns out that they belong to Jam-O, who just rushed down the corridor. He's getting ready to shoot someone in the second entrance, in the head.

So he does. Or rather, he misses by a narrow margin.

This causes the two clones in the entrance to look up, in surprise, and charge into the corridor. As it turns out, they're communists.

written by Speeder on Sep 26, 2010 01:54

I nod to the ex-commie.

Then I turn to the scientist and say.

"So, if what he says is true, we are in serious trouble... Ever thought of what would happen if someone managed to get one of those hats in the head of a Indigo or higher level citizen? It is bad to even think about it..."

Then I look at Cryo reading and say.

"Hey, it worked! It says that..."

And I proceed to repeat what is written in the console, even mentioning the redacted part.

I get again super-excited, wanting to know what will happen.

written by Jam on Sep 26, 2010 03:00

I run toward the communists, yelling and screaming!

Then I stop screaming and go back to yelling, then I switch to shouting. Bored with that, I start hollering instead. I experiment with a combination of howling and yowling for a bit, then I roar at them. Soon I'm just wailing at them, with some shrieking and screeching mixed in. All that bellowing is sure to deafen them, and possibly drive them insane! Of course, anyone that would want to be a treasonous commie and disobey the will of Friend Computer is already insane, but this might make them even more so!

written by Lightning4 on Sep 26, 2010 08:31

I approach the ex-commie's terminal and watch with high but not treasonous levels of curiosity.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 26, 2010 09:24

I follow after Jam-O. If the clones are charging at us, I swing my truncheon hard at the neck of one of the clones. If they're running away, I try to shoot them both each once with my laser pistol.

I try to ignore Jam-O's hollering, and do some yelling as well.

written by 4616599 on Sep 26, 2010 10:18

I whisper to the scientist and the clones. "Hmm...curious. Now pardon me for a bit..." I then head for the commie and grab his shoulder, raising my voice and tone. "Citizen, I demand to know the root of your treason! Don't feign all that fuzzy hat stuff. Intsec and the Armed Forces have your records, and we've been doing quite our share of activity monitoring. Do we have to force you into a confession booth next? You should be aware of your treasonous mind. We, for instance, have been quite aware of it for several daycycles. Confess, and we'll lighten the re-education and questioning a bit. Perhaps even get a good docbot for you. Let's start from the basics, shall we? How long have you been supporting...them?"

Re-education centre

"I'm pretty sure that that would be a Very Bad Thing," Derek-G replies. "For everyone."

He listens to Speed-Y's report of the scan results. "Ah, excellent! Now, let me check the redacted part..." He works his own terminal. "Ah, yes. And he seems to be awake now. Very good. Let's start the next stage. If you'll tell the terminal to begin, please? It'll walk you through the rest."

L4-O monitor's the communist's terminal. He's now fully hooked up to the chair.

After a moment, the terminal pops up its own results box:

Scan Results

- * Subject's short term memory is disrupted
- * Subject has knowledge of Communist doctrine
- * Subject has sustained heavy injuries

Warning: subject may not survive re-education procedure. Consult Medical Services before continuing.

Joris-O, on the other hand, wants information. He draws on what memories he can dredge up, and adopts a full Internal Security interrogator's tone of voice. "Hey, hold on a minute! I really don't remember anything past them forcing me to wear one of those hats, and feeling sort of dizzy for a bit! Then... nothing! I don't even know how long ago that was!" He coughs.

Museum of Troubleshooting - Entrance 2

Jam-O charges forward, doing awful things with synonyms (even though he doesn't know what the word "synonym" means). It seems to work, as the communists back off. But it takes its toll on him, as he ends up leaning against a pillar, seemingly worn out.²²⁷

Meanwhile, Mango-R is also charging. But he's opting for a more direct approach: the use of weapons. As they stumble back, Mango-R opens fire, but somehow misses both of them.

Nonetheless, the communists retreat. Presumably, they weren't expecting an armed response.

written by Speeder on Sep 26, 2010 16:49

I nod happily, like, I nod so fast that it even hurts.

"Ok!"

I write on the terminal:

> BEGIN PROCESS

Then I wait happily.

"So, what now? What now?"

written by Jam on Sep 26, 2010 17:03

Satisfied that my yelling seems to have had the intended effect, I rest for a few secondcycles. Yelling is hard work, you know.

Then I realize that they still might have the stolen 'revolver' and Com 1 unit. And even if they don't, it would be very difficult for us to escape if those two told all their Comrades that there were loyal clones hiding at this level. We need to terminate them before it's too late!

I run after the communists and try to shoot them before they can escape. (And I'll spend a PP to hopefully revive me a bit.)

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 26, 2010 20:20

I continue to charge, truncheon raised ready to strike, and continue through the entrance. If I ever get close enough, I swing the truncheon wildly.

Re-education station

It seems that Cryo-R likes the re-education chairs. That's nice.

I wonder if he'll like them any more when his chair pumps chemicals into him? Which it's about to do, by the way.

On Cryo-R's terminal, the screen clears, and several windows appear. One contains a squiggle representing Cryo-R's brain pattern. A second contains another squiggle - presumably another brain pattern. A third contains an interface to adjust the levels of signals and chemicals. There are about a dozen such settings. A final box looks to be a message window. It currently reads

Re-education initiated

Target pattern calculated

Adjust parameters to match subject pattern with target pattern and press OK

The chair injects one type of chemical to begin with - visomorpain. Which I'm sure you're all familiar with. Cryo-R becomes quiet again as it works its magic.

Derek-G answers, "Well, I doubt Medical services are active right now. Proceed, but with extreme caution. There can be no margin for error."

Museum of Troubleshooting - Entrance 2

After taking a quick breather²²⁹ Jam-O realises that the communists might call for backup, and chases after them. Mango-R follows, his truncheon raised.

²²⁸ KRISTOS: (OCC: There is way too much going on in my life for me to continue this. Paranoia has been the only reason I've booted my computer up instead of doing stuff I need to do often times. It's been fun, but I'm signing off of Paranoia for now. Not sure when/if I'll be back. Feel free to phase my character out of the active scheme however you want to. Bye!)

²²⁹ GLIGAR: (OCC: and spending a perversity point)

Looking around, it's obvious that the communists are heading back towards the concourse. But that's not a problem. Jam-O aims his rifle and shoots. Again. This time, it's a nice hit in the back of the neck. One communist goes down.

That leaves just one. Mango-R sees him, and runs, swinging his truncheon. He catches the remaining communist upside the head seemingly knocking him out. Not bad.

written by Speeder on Sep 27, 2010 01:34

First I try to see what each parameter change, by changing them only a little bit and watching the results.

Then I try to match the target pattern by carefully increasing or decreasing each parameter by small amounts, and never relying on only one, taking turns with them to approach the target, specially when some suddenly decide to change nothing more.

written by Jam on Sep 27, 2010 01:49

I smile at Mango-R. "Good swing!"

I walk up to the bodies and make sure they're dead, using my hammer if I have to. (Unless Mango-R has any objections...) Then I search them for anything resembling the stolen 'revolver' and Com 1 unit.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 27, 2010 05:08

Speed-Y experiments with the interface for a moment, trying to determine which parameter does what. It's almost as if each parameter controls two or three different things at once, though, and as such, it proves difficult to zero in on the target pattern. After a minute or so, he thinks he's about as close as he can get.

L4-O starts the communist's re-education process. He gets the same screen. He seems to have a slightly better time with the parameters, though, and is able to get to about as close as he can in a little less time, catching up with Speed-Y.

²³⁰ LIGHTNING4: (Insert 1 PP spending noise here. Ka-ching perhaps.)

Now all that needs to be done is to press OK... right?

Meanwhile, Joris-O gets interested in the fuzzy hat. He picks it up and asks the scientist about tools, but as he does, the dizziness sets in...

Lucas-R rushes over. "Sir, no! The hats cause dizziness!"

Derek-G answers, "There is some equipment in the other lab. We can head there when we're done here."

Corridor K2

Jam-O looks briefly at Mango-R, then pulls out his hammer and whacks the communists a few times. He's not sure if it did anything but it was certainly fun 😊

After that, he searches them. On one of them, he finds a Com 1 unit. A rather old-looking one. It's still functional.

While he's doing that, Mango-R looks around. Seeing no-one else, he does an equipment check, focusing on his laser pistol. Looks like that barrel has four shots left.

written by Jam on Sep 27, 2010 22:59

"Oh, this looks like it might be the Com 1 unit that was stolen from the exhibit. Now we just need to find the 'revolver'..."

I check the clearance of the Com 1 unit, then put it in my pocket.

"We should go to D level and get your stuff. Then we can go the Q level and meet up with the others." I say to Mango-R.

I walk to the door that the communists were walking to, the one that probably leads to the concourse. I open it, walk through, and start heading towards the lift hall. If there are any communists looking, I ignore them, unless they seem to be trying to attack us or something...

Lift hall (K level)

Looks like the lift's still here.

L4-O presses his OK button first.

First, the injectors fill with chemicals. Next, they are slowly injected into the communist. He doesn't seem to be enjoying it, given the amount of squirming and gritting of teeth. Eventually, he cries out in pain.

A new window appears on the terminal, displaying what looks to be vital signs. They're way off... heart rate is way up, blood pressure is way down... everything else is just skewed. An alarm goes off.

Then, lights appear on the helmet as the transmitters come online, beaming their subliminal messages right into the communist's brain, in theory overwriting what's there. If the chemicals didn't already wipe it clean.

The alarm continues to sound, and the terminal now displays a message:

Alert

Subject's vital signs are outside acceptable parameters

Adjust settings to stabilise immediately

A new target pattern is displayed. L4-O attempts to match and correct the communist's vital signs...

...and manages to stabilise him. But he's gone unconscious again.

It's Speed-Y's turn. Or rather, Cryo-R's.

He presses OK. As with the other, the chair starts injecting things into Cryo-R. His vital signs appear on the terminal, but things seem to be okay. Cryo-R continues smiling.

Then the transmitters start up... and he stops smiling. His head must feel... almost like John-R attacked it or something. He resists crying out...

..then the chair stops. The terminal displays another pattern and prompts Speed-Y to match that one as well.

And looking over at L4-O's terminal, it's doing the same thing. So it's a two-stage process, apparently.

Joris-O seems to still be affected by the hat, even though he just kicked it away. After emptying a can of AlgaePLUS on that hat, he brandishes a full Replacement Pen Request Form at it. Derek-G looks on with amusement. "Yes... that'll definitely need some research. But I would need volunteers... but hey, the sector is full of them."

A lift

Mango-R and Jam-O enter. Mango-R fiddles with his Com 1, listening to channel 3, as Jam-O presses the D level button.

The lift descends. As it does, a faint voice comes over the com. Apparently, a communist in another sector has learned of the Armed Forces plan to drop a nuke on the sector. It's now just over 45 hourcycles away.

"Drop a nuke on the sector? Armed Forces? What are the Armed Forces, anyway?"

I continue monitoring the Com 1 Unit.

"Um... Armed Forces? I can't really remember either... I think they have something to do with blowing things up and shooting things. Like a troubleshooter, only with higher clearance weapons, and different missions... But I could be wrong... My memory is a bit fuzzy there... But it seems that if we don't finish the mission in time, they will blow up the whole sector, with us inside, obviously ending the mission.²³¹

The nuke's only 45 hourcycles away? Hmm... That's closer than I thought..."

²³¹ JAM: (ooc: and, I'm assuming, the game).

I wait for the lift to arrive at D level. When it does, I step out and look around.

"Where did you think your previous clone died again?" I ask Mango-R.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 28, 2010 21:59

I continue the process as well, pressing whatever is asked of me by the machine.

"Hey, I'm pretty good at this I guess!"

I turn back to the machine quickly so my distraction shouldn't cause any disaster.

Re-education station

L4-O and Speed-O continue the re-education process on the ex-communist and Cryo-R, respectively.

First, L4-O. It's harder this time around, since the requires changes need about ten settings to be tweaked for each aspect of the change. It takes L4-O a fair few attempts to get it right. And when he does, and hits OK, the alarms just return... the communist's vital signs are going haywire again... and the communist himself is awake again, and screaming at the top of his lungs.

Again, L4-O tries to stabilise the communist...

... and is again successful! Fantastic!

The terminal displays a message:

Re-education complete

Next, Speed-Y. Despite the difficulty, and, perhaps, spurred on by L4-O's success, he matches the pattern in almost no time, and hits OK.

Despite the pain of the injectors, and of the transmitters, Cryo-R just keeps on smiling.

Soon, the completion message appears on his terminal as well.

Derek-G looks pleased. "Well, it looks like we've learned something here today regarding injured clones. It would seem that the new system can indeed re-educate them."

A lift

Jam-O and Mango-R discuss the pending nuke, and Armed Forces. Soon, however, the lift arrives at D Level.

Lift hall (D level)

It looks like a couple of communists were waiting for a lift.

written by Speeder on Sep 29, 2010 02:02

I look for a while at Cryo, then at Derek.

"I suppose that it hurts, since the other guy screamed like hell, and people are not common to fake pain... Thus, that guy" I point at Cryo. "Is even more creepy than I thought."

written by Jam on Sep 29, 2010 02:38

I look to see if I recognize the commies, then I walk out into the lift hall. I resist the urge to blast their heads off... There are other more important things that need to be done...

If either Mango-R or the commies start shooting, I shoot too, at the commies.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 29, 2010 03:03

"Well, my question is if he's still gonna die on us anyway. Ah well, either way he's loyal now."

I turn to the ex-commie.

"What is your name and clearance?"

I hope for a response.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 29, 2010 04:26

I stride out casually, trying not to make eye contact with either of the two. I walk around them, and out into the Concourse.

"If I remember correctly, I tried to escape through a door, but it wouldn't open," I say to Jam-O.

written by Gligar on Sep 29, 2010 15:10

Re-education centre

It seems that Cryo-R's constant smiling is starting to unnerve Speed-Y. Well, if it's any consolation, he shouldn't be randomly inspecting random portions of Alpha Complex down to the [DFSR] scale any more.

The ex-communist tries to answer L4-O. "I'm - "

He pauses. What is his name? Oh yes! That's it!

" - I'm Hans-R-JHT-1... I'm pretty sure I am, anyway, sir... I hurt like... something that's less than mandatory."

"He still needs immediate medical attention," Derek-G says. I'll see if I can find a docbot somewhere." He starts to extract Hans-R from the re-education equipment.

Lift hall (D level)

Mango-R and Jam-O pass the communists. They don't seem to be familiar to Jam-O. The communists don't react to the loyal clones, and simply board the lift.

Revolutionary Square

There are still a couple of communists here. It looks like they're cleaning something, and there's a scrubot right there, helping them.

written by Speeder on Sep 29, 2010 17:37

I nod, and then I smile.

"So, it worked! It made a injured commie into a injured loyal clone! Cool!"

Then I move to help Derek.

"By the way, you mentioned another project..."

written by Jam on Sep 29, 2010 22:35

"Do you have any idea where that door was?" I ask Mango-R.

I walk over and look at what the communists are cleaning...

If Mango-R starts walking to a different room, I follow him.

written by Lightning4 on Sep 29, 2010 23:36

"So uh, anything we can do to help?"

If not, can you tell us the quickest way to V level? Preferably a way that lets Nukabot there through. It's ah... rather urgent. Nuke detonate-y urgent if we don't get there fast enough. I think we need to go to the central subsector too."

I look a little nervous, idly wondering how long we have until it levels this sector.

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 29, 2010 23:59

"Not really. I think it was in some room with some booths. It was at the end of some hallway."

I decide to look at the cleaners, but from a distance.

written by Gligar on Sep 30, 2010 00:21

Re-education centre

While John-R and Lucas-R go and unhook Cryo-R from his chair, Speed-Y goes and helps Derek-G do the same to the communist. "Ah, yes! My project! Over the past yearcycle, I have been developing a new weapons platform for the Armed Forces. If it weren't for this communist outbreak, I would have completed the prototype by now." Derek-Y finishes with the communist, and listens to L4-O. "The only parts I haven't completed relate to the ammunition handling system. Further details are Clearance YELLOW at this stage.

"Now, do you know of somewhere I can obtain cone rifle shells under this regime, without having to go through their version of Internal Security? I'll need them to continue the testing.

"And if what you say is true, time is of the essence."

He heads for the door.

Revolutionary Square

Jam-O approaches the cleaners, while Mango-R observes from afar. It looks like they're cleaning up some bloodstains.

Or maybe more than just... Bloodstains.

written by Speeder on Sep 30, 2010 00:48

I follow the scientist, helping him with whatever he needs.

"I see... Actually, L4" I point to L4. "Got breveted to carry a BLUE cone rifle, and cone rifle shells..."

written by Lightning4 on Sep 30, 2010 01:21

"Indeed!"

I take out a bundle of them and present them to the scientist.

"I don't know if you need any specific ones... personally I don't know what half of these do. I've already used up all the gas ones, but there might be a napalm left."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 30, 2010 11:43

I approach the cleaners, and try to get a better look. I also check to see if there's a door nearby.

"That can't be mine, because this is actually the first time I've been here." I say to Jam-O.

written by Jam on Sep 30, 2010 12:28

"Hmm... Booths at the end of a hallway... Well, there's a lot of corridors at this level... And you must have found some confession booths, those are the only booths I can think of... But which corridor are they at the end of?"

I decide to ignore the cleaners and walk out the door, to Revolutionary Square. I look around for anything that might indicate where the confession booths are.

written by Gligar on Sep 30, 2010 15:47

Re-education centre

Speed-Y and L4-O follow the scientist into the corridor. Nobody else makes a move.

Corridor Q2

Derek-G turns to a door at the end of the corridor, and unlocks it.

On Speed-Y's comment, he turns to L4-O, his eyes lighting up. "Excellent! If you'll please come in, we can get started." He opens the door to the lab and enters. In the centre of the room is something that resembles a warbot, except somewhat more primitive. It's almost as if the pilot is expected to actually move the machine's limbs himself.

Revolutionary Square

After inspecting the cleaning efforts, Mango-R thinks. Now where did he get terminated? Definitely not here... Somewhere with... confession booths?

And isn't that the confession booth sign on the door to the north?

written by Lightning4 on Sep 30, 2010 22:00

I look at it, my eyes tearing up.

"It's... it's beautiful. It's glorious!...

...It does what I think it does, right?"

I stand there admiring it for a while.

written by Speeder on Sep 30, 2010 22:05

I peer at the machine, then I move closer to it, then I look more.

"That thing is the most awesome thing I ever saw... It is... It is... words don't describe it..."

written by Mingamango181 on Sep 30, 2010 22:07

"This sign says the confession booth is this way."

I walk up to the door, and attempt to open it, and look inside. If it doesn't open, I say to Jam-O,

"This is probably it. I remember trying to escape through this door, but some bot was in the way."

written by Jam on Oct 01, 2010 00:17

I also try to open the door, by kicking it.

written by Gligar on Oct 01, 2010 00:47

Lab Q7

While Speed-Y stands in the door admiring the bot from afar, L4-O feels the need to get closer and inspect it.

It appears to be a medium walker bot chassis (bigger and bulkier than a clone), modified such that a clone can fit inside and control the limbs himself. Attached to the manipulators, L4-O can see a cone rifle and a heavy slugthrower, one on each. A box on the back is currently open, but empty.

"I'm glad you like it," Derek-G says, "This is the ArmourBot X-1, the prototype for what I hope will be the latest in Armed Forces' arsenal. Like I said, there are a couple of things that need to be tweaked, like the ammo management sys--"

"Yip! Yip! Yip! Yip! Yip!" ArmourBot X-1 seems to rear up, but hits its "head" on the ceiling. (Did I mention that it's crouching a little?)

"--and the bot brain. It was originally fitted into a petbot, and almost never has flashbacks... but its vocabulary is rather limited.

"That aside... it does need testing... or it will once I make the finishing touches to the ammo system..."

Revolutionary Square

Mango-R goes to the northern door, and tries to open it. It's stuck.

Jam-O also tries to open the door, only in a different way - by kicking it. This succeeds in dislodging the door. But the fun isn't over, since it proceeds to fall towards him! He's unable to get out of the way fully, and is knocked to the floor, bruised and dazed by the impact.

written by Speeder on Oct 01, 2010 00:57

I nod, and then I stare at the marvealous machine.

"So, what is the clearance of this thing? And what was the clearance of its weapons?"

Then after a while I say.

"I wonder if nukabot will be jealous... or..."

I grin, and then I suddenly say.

"Hey, we modified a forkbot, we added a nuclear power source to it, and all... Can we make these two work in tandem or something? It would be great to just make a mechanized force that we can use to scare commies to death, making them flee instead of fighting, only so we can conserve ammo, something that seemly we are quite short”

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 01, 2010 01:14

“Oh my goodness! Are you alright?”

I rush over, and try to lift the door off Jam-O.

written by Jam on Oct 01, 2010 02:09

“Urg!”

I try to lift the door off of me, or slide out from under the door.

Then I examine myself and try to figure out how much the door injured me. Is anything broken?

I also look into the confession booth room, searching for the dead body of Mango-R...

written by Lightning4 on Oct 01, 2010 03:05

“Oh, I do wish I could pilot it...”

I look down.

“But my leg is broken. Haven’t really had time to see a docbot, you see...”

Re-education centre

Hans-R groans. “I need a docbot here...”

Chemical showers

Looks like those two clones have finished what they were doing. Those lights near the START button have gone out, at least.

Lab Q7

“ArmourBot X-1 does not have the usual AlphaNet links, if that’s what you mean,” Derek-G answers as he works on his terminal. “This makes it impossible for the software to be compromised from the outside. And... it also means that it must communicate with other bots verbally.” He continues working. “Can one of you load the cone rifle shells, please? And... yes, a pilot would need two legs. Can you recommend a suitable test pilot?”

Revolutionary Square

The cleaners look up from their work as Mango-R helps Jam-O out from under the door. “What is going on?” one asks. But he seemingly goes ignored.

Jam-O looks into the confession booth waiting room. He can see... what looks to be three corpses. Two are seemingly of communists. The third, the most damaged, is difficult to identify... but it seems to have died from something in its hand exploding...

And... there are fragments... a laser barrel?

written by Speeder on Oct 01, 2010 20:59

I peer at L4.

Then I say.

“I was going to ask L4 to pilot, since he is the nukabot pilot and all...”

Then I think a bit.

“I can pilot it during testing, but I think that I will hand to someone more suitable later... Maybe...”

written by Jam on Oct 01, 2010 23:06

I look toward the cleaners.

“Capitalists! That’s what’s going on! Haven’t you heard? There seems to be a small group of clones that are still trying to resist our glorious Revolution! I heard a rumor that wherever they go, fire and death follows. It looks like they got two of our Comrades! Arg! Pig-dog Capitalists! Don’t they know it’s hopeless to resist! They are surrounded by our forces, they should just give up now!”

I walk closer to the communists and whisper to them.

“Actually, don’t tell anyone, but I’m supposed to be undercover. I’m posing as a troubleshooter so I can infiltrate the capitalists and sabotage their efforts. I have orders straight from the Director²³². I should notify him of this shooting. But...”

I try to look embarrassed.

“...while I was spying, a clone leaped at me and injected some chemical into me. It seems to have affected my memory a bit. Anyways I’ve completely forgot where the Director is, or what even what he looks like. That’s bad news... Could you help me out and remind me?”²³³

written by Lightning4 on Oct 01, 2010 23:26

I start taking from my armful of cone rifle shells and loading the ArmourBot.

“So where’s the nearest docbot? Maybe I can get my leg healed... and oh, I think we still have an injured guy out there.”

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 01, 2010 23:40

Completely ignoring the conversation going on between the cleaners and Jam-O, I enter the confession booth waiting room, and search the bodies for my missing PDC and ME card.

Lab Q7

As L4-O begins loading cone rifle shells into ArmourBot, Derek-G is saying, “Alright. In a moment you’ll be able to begin testing. I think the best method to do so would be to field-test the weapons systems. Indeed, in normal times,

²³² JAM: (ooc: Why did I choose ‘Director’? It sounded right...)

²³³ JAM: (ooc: I’ll spend 1 PP to try to make the communists actually believe my story, and say something useful.)

I'd be putting in a request for a Troubleshooter team at this point. Ah, that should do it."

He removes a memory card from the terminal, opens a compartment on ArmourBot, and inserts the card into a slot. The compartment closes again.

"Once L4-O - what is it with names these daycycles? - once he's finished loading shells, you can tell ArmourBot to open. Then the fun begins."

Revolutionary Square

"I didn't know we had undercover agents... but I... guess I'm... not supposed to know? But... why are you asking about the whereabouts of Director Andrei? Everyone knows he's in Central Subsector."

Confession booth waiting room

Mango-R takes a more detailed look in here. Specifically, he's looking for his ME card and PDC.

He soon finds them.

Lab O7

"And... oh yes! The docbot. There's a medical bay on R Level. There should be one there."

written by Speeder on Oct 02, 2010 01:53

I peer at the bot for a while, then I smile HAPPILY, like the²³⁴ junior clone that just got a new weapon. I mean, toy.

Then I say.

"Massacrebot, I ask you to only obey me, or non-communists people with Green clearance or above."

I then turn to the scientist. "Just in case some commie figure some way to override the bot by shouting orders at it."

written by Jam on Oct 02, 2010 03:45

"I wouldn't be very effective undercover agent if everyclone knew who I was. I'm taking a risk even telling you... But thanks for reminding me, that seems to have triggered some memories. How could I ever forget a face as distinctive as Director Andrei's? I'll go to the Central Subsector and search for him there. Thank you, and long live the Revolution!"

I walk over to Mango-R.

"Found what you're looking for?"

I notice the PDC and ME card.

"Good! Let's go..."

I start heading toward the lift hall.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 02, 2010 04:57

I take the PDC and ME card, and check for any damage to the items. Then I go back to following Jam-O.

As we walk back towards the lift hall, I say, "That door seemed pretty heavy. Are you sure you're alright?"

I finish packing shells into the ArmourBot and back a respectable distance away.

"Massacrebot? I guess that's fitting. No doubt he will live up to his name."

"Well then, I guess our next destination is R level... I hope we can bring Nukabot with, but I kind of doubt it. Maybe we can let you watch it for a while, so no treasonous commies get it..."

"Well, after the testing of course."

"Yip! Yip! Yip! Yip Yip....!"

It's not really possible to tell if ArmourBot X-1 accepted the name or not, but it seems to accept the order.

L4-O finishes loading shells, leaving him with just four, before backing off.

Derek-G says, "Whenever you're ready. There are stairs nearby, should you need them. I am unsure if ArmourBot can fit into a standard lift."

Re-education centre

Joris-O looks around after hearing petbot-like noises from nearby. There are no petbots in the room. But there is Kristos-R, who has pulled out his PDC and is doing something to it, despite the broken screen. Maybe he's trying to get it working?

The ex-communist is still waiting for a docbot.

Revolutionary Square

As he and Jam-O head back to the lifts, Mango-R checks over his retrieved PDC and ME card. Both of them seem to be okay, if a little scratched.

Lift hall

And back again to the lift hall.

It looks like the fourth lift - Jam-O knows which one - is being lifted from where it landed, however far down in Deep Subsector, as its level indicator shows it rising.

written by Speeder on Oct 02, 2010 18:17

I nod, then I look to the Massacrebot.

"Massacrebot, open"

I look at Derek for a while and ask. "It fits into cargo lifts? Since we are since a while using the mentioned Nukabot, we move mostly by cargo lift... Although the reason L4 drives the bot is because he somehow manage to drive in stairs too..."

written by Jam on Oct 02, 2010 18:31

"I think I'm alright... Nothing seems broken or anything, though I do have a few bruises."

I call a lift, then look up at the level indicators. I notice the lift that is rising from Deep Subsector.

"Strange... I think that was the lift that Lucas-R and I almost died in. A few more secondcycles and we both would have fallen to our deaths. But I thought that lift was broken... They must have fixed it."

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 02, 2010 22:41

"Fallen to your deaths? How exactly?"

I look at the level indicators.

"Deep Subsector. What do you suppose goes on down there?"

Feeling like I've asked too many questions, I keep quiet the rest of the time waiting for the lift.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 02, 2010 23:03

I wander off a little and look for the location of the stairs.

Lab Q7

"Yip yip yip yi-"

ArmourBot X-1 (Masacrebot?) opens up. By which I mean that parts of the head area and front fold back, allowing a clone to squeeze their way inside, if they were so inclined.

"Yes, it will fit into a cargo lift," Derek-G replies. "And... this Nukabot of yours... what did you say it was? And it can somehow navigate stairs? Impressive."

Meanwhile, L4-O has wandered out of the room in search of stairs.

Corridor Q2

He finds them, opposite the warehouse. How convenient.

Lift hall

As they wait for a lift, Jam-O tells Mango-R about the near-fatal incident from earlier. Mango-R openly wonders about the exact nature of Deep Subsector. I'm sure you'd love to know what goes on there, wouldn't you?

But he falls silent, waiting for the lift.

The silence seems to go on for a while. Then the lift arrives (no, not the one from Deep Subsector. That's still going up.)

written by Lightning4 on Oct 03, 2010 00:57

I slowly climb up the stairs and begin exploring the level above.

I hide my laser pistol so in case I'm spotted, I'm not considered armed or a threat. Hopefully.

I begin searching around for the medical area, or at least a docbot. I try some of the first doors I find.

written by Speeder on Oct 03, 2010 01:05

I inspect the thing a bit, and then I try to enter it. While I do that I talk with Derek.

"Nukabot was a forkbot, it is seemly reinforced with kevlar, I added a nuclear powerplant to it, because I think of its extra weight the normal battery kept dieing... And I dunno how L4 managed to drive upstairs and downstairs with it, but he did."

I try to not get hurt, while getting in the bot.

"The bot at first acted like a normal forkbot, but later it seemly learned how to fight on its own, so we can shoot commies, and the bot if we ask it to do so, can trample or pierce commies with the forks. But the reason at first we asked it to follow us, is because he seemly know more about the sector than ourselves, so he was being our navigator"

written by Jam on Oct 03, 2010 02:03

I walk into the lift. I wait for Mango-R to get in too, then press the Q level button, if there is one.

"It was horrible! We were riding in the lift, and it suddenly started stopped moving! We managed to escape out of a hatch in the roof, and just as we grabbed the ladder, the lift's cable broke! We climbed up the ladder until we found an air duct, then we crawled until we found a vent that we could break through. It was sort of fun, but I like shooting commies better. It's much more safe."

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 03, 2010 02:41

I enter the lift, and listen to Jam-O's recount of events.

"I suppose that there's just an equal chance of it happening to this lift."

I shudder at the very idea of it happening.

"You'd think they ought to upgrade these things to avoid the possibility of it occurring..."

written by Gligar on Oct 03, 2010 15:44

Corridor R3

After climbing up a floor to R Level, L4-O finds himself near one end of another YELLOW corridor. An open door shows a few communists, who seem to ignore him.

A couple of the doors he tries are locked. Another two lead to work rooms. But eventually, he does find the promised medical bay.

Lab Q7

On further inspection, Speed-Y gets the impression that the apparent primitiveness of... "Massacrebot", I guess...

is deliberate. Maybe Derek-G's budget was limited. Or perhaps there's a reason he's not cleared to know.

He then tries to climb into it. It turns out that it's a rather snug fit, almost as if Speed-Y is a size too big for the bot or something. But eventually he's able to wriggle into position properly. It looks like the space for his hands end in glove-like structures.

As he's doing that, he's telling Derek-G about Nukabot. "A forkbot with a nuclear power plant... I believe they have those in the Main Dome sectors... interesting. And I'm not surprised at a forkbot learning to ram things. Everything needs a way to defend itself."

A lift

Going up! (Again.)

Jam-O and Mango-R get the impression that they're being watched.

written by Speeder on Oct 03, 2010 16:09

After I am secure inside the bot, I look around, and then I ask.

"So... what now? How I make it close again and turn on? Also, what happen if it is out of power while I am inside?"

written by Jam on Oct 03, 2010 17:24

I nervously look at the lift's camera, then whisper to Mango-R.

"I just got a strange feeling, that we're being watched... I hope commies haven't gained control of the cameras or something..."

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 03, 2010 21:46

I whisper back, "We probably are being watched. And maybe they've had control for a while. We cannot discount the possibility, so we should be careful in what actions that are decided and put through."

As the lift continues up, I check my PDC signal.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 03, 2010 22:39

I wander into the medical bay and look for a docbot, and also check to see if anyone else is present before speaking.

Lab 07

It seems that Massacrebot can detect when there's a pilot present, since it closes itself up again.

As it does, Speed-Y notices the heads-up display, which tells him that he has 30 cone rifle shells and 50 slugthrower rounds. All of these are of different types.

Derek-G is saying, "Ah, I see the auto-closing system works. The bot has a micropile reactor, so it shouldn't run out of power during the mission. If you can, can you test out movement?"

A lift

Mango-R and Jam-O cast nervous glances at the visible camera. Mango-R checks his PDC. It still has a one-bar signal.

The lift continues up.

Medical bay (R level)

Entering the medical bay (which is also YELLOW), L4-O notices a few communists tending to a couple of patients. A docbot is helping them.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 04, 2010 00:55

I continue waiting as the lift goes on.

"It's sure taking a while..."

I look for a level indicator showing where we are.

written by Speeder on Oct 04, 2010 01:16

I try to make a thumbs up.

Then I test each limb, carefully, separately, also trying to not bump into the ceiling.

Finally, attempt to make some dashes around the room, to test how agile the thing is.

I then try to speak and see if the thing relay it.

"It points I have 30 cone rifle shells and 50 slugthrower rounds of various types, how I choose what type I want to use? Also, how I speak to the outside when I need, and how I give voice commands without speaking to the outside when I need?"

"Ah! Good verk comrades. I received orders that this docbot is needed for urgent medical attention on Level D. I trust you will be able to vork vithout it?"

written by Cryoburner on Oct 04, 2010 15:20

Since kitty seems to want to move around, I crawl away a bit.

"Say, Doctor, would you happen to have any experimental augmentation units that could assist my injured legs with moving around? If so, I'd be pleased to help test them in the field."

written by Gligar on Oct 04, 2010 15:52

A lift

The lift continues to ascend. Jam-O checks his laser rifle. It's a good thing he did: the barrel is showing no shots left.

Lab 07

Somehow, Cryo-R made his way in here without me noticing. Is he a mutant with Teleportation?

Derek-G reacts. "Woah! How did you get in here?! No, I don't have any augmentation units."

Speed-Y tries to make a thumbs up sign, and ends up lifting Massacrebot's arm instead. Also, according to the HUD, he's selected armour-piercing rounds for the heavy slugthrower. Rather surprising, but it answers his question in a way.

Then, he tries to move around. Slowly, he moves the limbs around. Massacrebot's kind of heavy, so it takes a little getting used to.

He then tries to run around. This is more difficult. The first time he tries it, he ends up colliding with the ceiling.

And then Massacrebot's sensors pick up Cryo-R. Massacrebot starts growling as its HUD puts up a targeting query.

Derek-G looks at the tests. "Okay, that's fine. I'm sure you'll get used to the rest yourself. You can turn the external speaker off with a voice command. The rest is classified at this stage, but I'm sure you'll figure it out."

Medical bay (R Level)

Surprisingly, L4-O either gets the accent right, or the communists just don't notice the bad accent. Either way, one of them turns and says, "Ah yes, of course, comrade. There was a computerist strike on D Level, was there not?"

written by Speeder on Oct 04, 2010 16:09

I look at Derek-G.

"Even to yellow? Huh... Ok... In fact, I don't even know what yellow people do, I was red a couple hours ago. Except that now I can use more fun weapons..."

I then look at Cryo and say.

"The bot thing seemly dislike you too, it is targeting you. But worry not, for now I intend to see how much Derek's reeducation machine worked or not."

I look back at Derek.

"Thank you, for everything!"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 04, 2010 17:42

"Indeed. Cleanup there is behind schedule. This will help immensely."

I walk up to the docbot and start leading it away.

I lead it out the door and back the way I came.

written by Jam on Oct 04, 2010 22:57

I switch the barrel with a unused barrel.

Then I look for a level indicator. Are we almost there?

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 04, 2010 23:03

I look at my ME card, checking for any damage.

written by Cryoburner on Oct 04, 2010 23:56

"Aww... kitty's purring. I think he likes getting petted!"

I smile more, and respond to the scientist...

"Do you have any idea where I might find something along those lines? The less than optimal condition of these legs might impede progress, and reduce the team's overall efficiency, otherwise."

written by Gligar on Oct 05, 2010 00:24

Lab 07

Derek-Y answers Speed-Y first. "My pleasure, citizen. Remember: I'll require a full report after your mission, so make sure to evaluate all functions of ArmourBot X-1."

He then turns to Cryo-R. "If there was anything else on this level, the communists have it by now."

Medical bay (R Level)

The docbot follows L4-O back into the corridor.

Corridor R3

"So what's this all about?" asks the docbot. "Where are you taking me? Surely not D Level? The... no, I shouldn't say that..."

A lift

Jam-O switches barrels. Then, he looks for a level indicator. There's one above the lift's control panel. The lift is still ascending, and has just passed M Level.

Mango-R takes the time to check his ME Card, and finds it slightly bloodstained.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 05, 2010 00:29

I look at the docbot while slowly moving towards the stairwell.

"Just one question first before I answer anything. Where do your loyalties lie? Lack of honesty is treason."

written by Jam on Oct 05, 2010 02:07

I stare at the level indicator, as if I were hoping that by staring at it I could somehow make the lift go faster...

After a while, I open a can of B3 Extra Classic and start drinking it. I offer my other can to Mango-R.

written by Speeder on Oct 05, 2010 02:38

I smile happily inside the bot.

Then I sorta bow in gratefulness and try to return to the place where the Nukabot is, trying to not step on anyone.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 05, 2010 03:40

I accept the other can.

"Thank you."

I smile, open the can of B3, and begin to drink.

written by 4616599 on Oct 05, 2010 09:51

I decide to peek out, then see an unusual-looking warbot trundling down the hall. Panicking, I quickly dash back into the re-education centre, taking up position with a blaster beside the door.

written by Gligar on Oct 05, 2010 15:18

Corridor R3

The docbot answers, "I am Five Laws compliant, citizen. I cannot, through action or inaction, allow The Computer to come to harm."

A lift

Jam-O stares at the level indicator for a moment. It doesn't appreciably increase the lift's speed.²³⁵ So instead, he pulls out a couple of cans of B3 Extra Classic, and shares one with Mango-R.

They have time to finish their cans before the lift stops and the doors open.

Lab Q7

Speed-Y, and Massacrebot, turn and clunk out of the door.

Corridor Q2

Speed-Y discovers that walking is easier if he keeps Massacrebot's weight forward. But at that point it almost feels like it's about to fall over.

Re-education centre

Hearing the odd clunking going on outside, Joris-O peeks out of the door. He notices Massacrebot and immediately closes the door. Not knowing the bot's origin, he gets ready to ambush.

written by Speeder on Oct 05, 2010 21:31

I stop before a position where Joris can shoot me.

"Joris, it is me, this is Derek's project that the commies were talking about."

If he comes out, I resume walking toward the forkbot.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 05, 2010 22:56

"Okay, good. That's good. I noticed you called me citizen, I guess my disguise isn't that great. Or existent."

We start going down the stairs.

"We do actually have a situation, it's not on D level, it's just the level below. An ex-commie in pretty bad shape is down there, and may or may not even still be alive at this point."

²³⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: Perhaps standing on the lift's roof would work? 😊)

Then there's a handful of broken legs, including my own. If you're able to help us, of course. I know it might be tough without a medical bay..."

written by Jam on Oct 05, 2010 23:39

I check the clearance of the lift hall. If it's ORANGE or below, I try to exit the lift. Otherwise, I take out my PDC and attempt to call Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on Oct 06, 2010 00:12

Corridor Q2

Speed-Y calls out to Joris-O in the re-education centre. A moment later, his PDC rings. Good luck answering it 😊

Re-education centre

Meanwhile, Lucas-R and John-R have also taken up positions. After a nod from John-R, Lucas-R takes a look outside, and sees Massacrebot for the first time. "Woah..."

Stairwell

L4-O and the docbot head downstairs. "All clones are citizens," the docbot remarks.

On hearing the situation, it adds, "Broken legs? I'll... see what I can do."

Exiting into the corridor, L4-O notices Massacrebot standing near the door to the re-education centre. Looks like Lucas-R is peeking out at it.

L4-O hears a PDC ringing from somewhere.

A lift

Unfortunately, the lift hall is YELLOW.

Jam-O has been trying to get in touch with Speed-Y, but his PDC is just ringing.

written by Speeder on Oct 06, 2010 00:40

I say.

"Massacrebot, please connect wirelessly to my PDC and re-route the call to your internal speaker system."

And then I hope it can actually do that.

written by Jam on Oct 06, 2010 02:21

"That's strange... Speed-Y isn't answering."

I spend a few secondcycles nervously waiting for Speed-O to answer, then turn to Mango-R.

"Could you try calling L4-O or Joris-O? Maybe one of them will know what's happening..."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 06, 2010 02:33

"So beautiful."

I stand there momentarily distracted, but snap out it.

"Oh, sorry. The ex-commie is right this way, probably some laser shot wounds or something like that. It all went a bit fast."

I show it to the re-education center.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 06, 2010 02:35

"Right then."

I try to input L4-O into my PDC. I hit the call button, and wait for an answer.

written by 4616599 on Oct 06, 2010 13:03

"Ah...wow. Now that's quite a machine. Don't expect it'll go too unnoticed though. Well...I suppose it is meant to be noticed before it blows everything up." I follow it, but then pause momentarily.

"Anyone wants to handle the ex-commie?"

written by Gligar on Oct 06, 2010 15:21

Corridor Q2

A message appears on Massacrebot's HUD, to the effect that it's unable to comply.

Speed-Y's PDC continues to ring.

A lift

And Jam-O is still waiting for an answer. In the end, he asks Mango-R to contact one of the others. The RED ends up trying to call L4-O.

Corridor Q2

As L4-O leads the docbot into the re-education centre, squeezing past Massacrebot in the process, his PDC rings.

Re-education centre

L4-O and the docbot enter before anyone can answer Joris-O.

The docbot moves towards the ex-communist, and starts examining him. "Hmmm, these injuries are quite extensive, citizen."

Medical Bay (C Level)

Meanwhile, another docbot is waiting for an answer. It idly tests several of the syringes it picked up.

written by Speeder on Oct 06, 2010 15:59

I ask the bot to open, and then I try to figure how to get the PDC.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 06, 2010 18:45

I grab my own PDC while the docbot does what he does best. I answer the incoming call.

"Uh hello? Who is this?"

I await a response.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 06, 2010 21:36

"It's Mango-R. We've arrived at Q level, but the lift hall only has a clearance level of YELLOW. Jam-O is attempting to call Speed-Y, but hasn't been successful. What would you advise?"

written by Jam on Oct 06, 2010 22:32

I let the PDC keep ringing.

Noticing that L4-O seems to have answered Mango-R's call, I try to follow their conversation while still listening in case Speed-O answers.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 06, 2010 23:25

"Hm. Well, I don't know where the lift hall is on this level. Hold on, I'll ask Derek here."

I "run" back to the lab and look for Derek.

"Where is the lift hall on this level? We have two people that want to get here."

written by Gligar on Oct 07, 2010 00:35

Corridor Q2

Speed-Y continues to try to get to his PDC, even asking Massacrebot to open up again. After a long moment, it does.

Re-education centre

As Speed-Y extracts an arm and tries to reach his PDC, L4-O answers his. Apparently, Mango-R and Jam-O are on Q Level, but have a clearance problem. He heads back to the lab.

Lab Q7

On hearing L4-O's question, Derek-G answers, "You used to be able to get to reception - and the lift hall - through the lab, but the door was blocked in for security reasons. Hmmm... your best bet would be to go back through the warehouse and use the other exit, then follow the corridor to the end."

Corridor Q2

Speed-Y finally manages to reach his PDC.

written by Speeder on Oct 07, 2010 02:30

To me now awnsering the PDC is a question of honor.

"Hello Jam! You there? I managed to get the PDC! I am awesome!"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 07, 2010 07:11

"Thanks sir!"

I resume talking into the PDC.

"Did you get that? If not, you need to get to the end of a corridor. You should find the distribution warehouse there."

I slowly walk back to the Re-education center while talking on my PDC. I check on the status of the docbot when I get there.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 07, 2010 08:06

"So basically, what we should do is just to go. Isn't that committing treason?"

I speak to Jam-O.

"He's recommended we go ahead anyway. What should we do?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 07, 2010 10:17

I respond:

"Oh uh. Well, Speed is on this level, so I guess it's okay. And Derek there is GREEN, and he recommended it... so..."

I stop as he talks to Jam.

written by Jam on Oct 07, 2010 12:38

I look over to Mango-R, and point at the PDC, smile, then mouth, "Speed-Y answered!"

I talk into the PDC.

"Hello, Speed-Y sir! ... Yes, I'm here. ... Yes, sir, you are awesome. Um... Mango-R and I are at the Q level lift hall, but it seems to be YELLOW clearance... I think we need to go through there to get to you guys, but we wanted to make sure you were okay with it beforehand. We wouldn't want to commit treason or anything..."

written by Gligar on Oct 07, 2010 17:01

Corridor Q2

Now we have two PDC conversations going on at once. Speed-Y talks to Jam-O, who wants to know if it's okay to enter a YELLOW area.

Re-education centre

As the docbot continues diagnosing the ex-communist, L4-O continues talking to Mango-R, giving him directions.

written by Speeder on Oct 07, 2010 17:24

I look at Derek, and then I ask.

"I am wondering, can I as yellow authorize ones below me to use yellow stuff?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 07, 2010 22:34

I take the opportunity of the lull to talk to the docbot.

"Let me know if there's any supplies you need. I think we have some medical stuff on our forkbot. If not, I can probably dash back up to that medical bay to retrieve whatever you need."

written by Jam on Oct 07, 2010 22:42

I wait for a response from Speed-Y...

written by Gligar on Oct 08, 2010 00:35

Corridor Q2

Derek-Y leaves the lab when he hears his name called. "Only if those so ordered are being supervised by you. Meaning you'd have to be with them."

Re-education centre

The docbot looks over. "If you have any pharmaceuticals on this forkbot of yours, I would be grateful. I will need them."

The ex-communist seems to have fallen asleep.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 08, 2010 02:22

"Okay."

I move as quickly as I am able down the corridor to the forkbot, and retrieve the first aid kit.

I struggle trying to hold it and maintain my balance with my crutch as I make my way back to the re-education center to deliver it.

written by Speeder on Oct 08, 2010 03:34

I nod, then I reply to Jam.

"Jam, according to a GREEN citizen here, we can tell other citizen to do something they can't with their clearance, but only under supervision... So, wait for me, I am going to fetch you"

I turn to Derek.

"Thanks... So, how I get into the yellow hall?"

I put the PDC in a easier place to grab it again, and close the bot.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 08, 2010 05:05

"Well, we'll try to keep that in mind."

I end the conversation on the PDC.

"I hope we don't have to wait too long in this lift. I don't like the idea of this lift being called by someone else, or the cable being cut."

I stand ready to sprint out from the lift, should I have to.

written by Jam on Oct 08, 2010 12:21

"Ok."

I hang up.

"I guess if the lift is called, we can dash out. I think Speed-Y will understand..."

written by Gligar on Oct 08, 2010 15:11

Corridor Q2

As Speed-Y puts his PDC away and closes Massacrebot again, L4-O leaves the re-education centre and heads back to the warehouse. He returns a moment later with Nukabot's first aid kit, and heads back into the centre.

Derek-G answers, "Head through the warehouse and out through the other door. Follow the corridor to the end."

A lift

The lift's lights flicker. Something rattles.

written by 4616599 on Oct 08, 2010 16:11

Still in the re-education booth, I offer the docbot help.

Bored, and while waiting for its reply, I decide to enter Cryo-R mode and carefully examine the door edges, particularly the way it's hinged on.

written by Speeder on Oct 08, 2010 17:08

I move the fast as I can by the path Derek indicated to me.

written by Jam on Oct 08, 2010 22:43

I shiver a bit. This seems very familiar...

"Maybe we should go into the lift hall, and just wait at the edge of the YELLOW part?"

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 08, 2010 23:08

"Yeah, I suppose we could do that... I think we could wait just a bit. But guessing from the rattling, something could be up there..."

I pull out my truncheon, and prepare for the worst.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 08, 2010 23:46

I make my way to the medical bay and give the docbot the medkit.

"This is what we have... hope whatever you need is in there."

written by Gligar on Oct 09, 2010 00:19

Re-education centre

The docbot replies to Joris-O, "Ah, thank you, citizen. Can you hold him down while I work?... Ah, thank you," it adds to L4-O.

The docbot opens the kit. "Hmmm... not ideal, but it will have to do. It begins to crush and mix some of the pills together, before poking the ex-communist. "Wake up, citizen."

He wakes up, sees the docbot, and replies, "Thank-" but doesn't get any further. The docbot injects the mixture into the ex-communist, who gets jittery.

Distribution Warehouse

Massacrebot clunks in, passing Nukabot as it does. Suddenly, it stops and apparently begins inspecting Nukabot. "Can I help you, friend bot?" asks Nukabot.

"Yip! Yip! Yip!"

"Is that a yes? A no? Either way, you are... rather interesting..."

Speed-Y tries to get Massacrebot moving again. He doesn't have time for this. Massacrebot seems to grumble but complies, heading out of the other door.

A lift

The noises in the lift are a cause for concern. Mango-R and Jam-O debate whether to wait and see or to just vacate the lift. The noises continue.

Corridor Q1

Speed-Y seems to have got Massacrebot to its maximum speed... looks to be about the same as Nukabot. Again, it's like he's almost falling over.

The corridor turns round the back of the warehouse and heads south. It continues for a while and heads west slightly, before stopping. An open door to the south leads to a reception area, also YELLOW. Through it Speed-Y can see through to the lift hall, where Mango-R and Jam-O look like they really want to exit a lift.

A lift

A panel on the lift's roof seems to be lifted up from above.

written by Speeder on Oct 09, 2010 00:31

As I notice something is wrong, I continue going the fastest the bot can go.

Then I attempt to load a explosive cone.

I attempt to make the bot emit in the loudest it can.

"Jump from the lift, now!"

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 09, 2010 01:21

I sprint from the lift, grabbing Jam-O and dragging him along, just in case he doesn't respond.

written by Jam on Oct 09, 2010 02:30

I look up at the ceiling and point my laser rifle at the panel.

Hearing something far away that sounds kind of like Speed-Y yelling through a speaker, I look over and try to find the source. I see a huge metal something-bot running full speed at us, and start panicking. We're being attacked from two directions at once!

I'm distracted from my panicking by Mango-R, who has suddenly decided to grab me and run from the lift. I decide to follow him.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 09, 2010 09:25

I get around to hanging up my PDC.

I watch the docbot as he works on the ex-commie, standing by if he needs me for anything.

written by Gligar on Oct 09, 2010 15:38

Reception (Q Level)

Massacrebot clunks through at speed.

Speed-Y tries some hand gestures with the hand nearest the cone rifle. But Massacrebot rejects most of them. In the end he settles for an armour-piercing shell.

Lift hall

Jam-O gives the lift panel an odd look for, and gets ready to shoot. But he gets distracted by the approaching Massacrebot... a bot of a kind he's never seen before. He barely has time to panic before being tugged at by Mango-R, who is trying to get him to run off. So he does.

Re-education centre

The docbot continues to work. He's applied what bloodloss stuff there is in the first-aid kit, and is injecting the ex-commie with something else.

"I don't think I can do very much more, given the constraints of security clearance and available supplies," it says.

written by Speeder on Oct 09, 2010 15:53

I try again to change the shell to a explosive one.

"What is the problem with the elevator?"

I continue trundling, fast, toward the elevator.

If I fail to get a explosive cone, I aim the slugthrower at the elevator instead.

written by 4616599 on Oct 09, 2010 16:25

I begin to whistle the opening sequence to 'Friend Computer is Your Friend!' But stop short upon hearing the faster clunking noises outside. I help the ex-commie into place if possible. "Is he fit to travel?"

written by Jam on Oct 09, 2010 20:37

I hide in the corner and hope that the giant metal monster doesn't notice me.

I also glance at the lift panel, and if I see any commies looking through, I try to shoot them with my laser rifle.

written by Gligar on Oct 10, 2010 00:32

Reception (Q Level)

Speed-Y tries again. His first three attempts are rejected. But just as he's about to give up (and just as he's about to cross into the lift hall) he's able to select the high explosive shells.

Lift hall

Though Mango-R appears to recognise Speed-Y's voice, Jam-O has given himself over to panic. He's currently curled up in a ball in the corner, right under the air vent.

A lift

Meanwhile, the panel continues to move. It's as if someone above is trying to get through but is having trouble with removing the panel.

Wait... they, er, he just figured it out. And it's a very familiar communist - Alexandr!

Re-education center

The docbot replies, "He should be ready to move, yes."

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 10, 2010 00:52

"What in the compnode..."

I stare at Alexandr.

"Of which intention do you have to suddenly barge into the lift!?" I yell. I keep the truncheon ready to swing.

written by Speeder on Oct 10, 2010 03:12

I grin.

Then I give a internal order.

"Massacrebot, record this as the first field testing of the fire mechanism."

Then I scream outside.

"Hello friend commie! This is your third clone or something like that? Tell your friends, that the project they were researching is done, and that it works, see how!"

And I proceed to shoot him, with the explosive shell. Him inside a elevator.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 10, 2010 10:33

"Hm. Anything else I can do to help?"

"If you're done, mind checking in on my leg here? I'm not sure there's a whole lot you can do... and I'd rather not have it removed or anything like that."

I wince, recalling Jam's stump-hand.

written by Jam on Oct 10, 2010 15:11

I watch as the something-bot shoots the lift we were just in. Surely it's trying to kill us!

Then I look at myself. Cowering in the corner. And call myself a troubleshooter...

I stand up and aim my laser rifle at the bot. I'm just about to fire, when suddenly the bot speaks, with Speed-Y's voice!

"Hmm... Speed-Y must be controlling the bot somehow."

I change my aim to the lift, just in case Alexandr somehow survived...

written by Gligar on Oct 10, 2010 17:03

Lift hall (Q level)

Failing to notice the big bot with the guns, Alexandr replies, "Is none of your business -"

Then it dawns on him. Slowly, he looks over at Massacrebot. "I know that voice! Is -"

Inside the bot, a REC light appears on the HUD. Shortly after, Alexandr's head seems to grow a targeting reticule, shortly before it explodes.

BOOM

When the smoke dies down, it becomes clear that they're called "high explosive" for a reason. Not only Alexandr, but the lift he was in, one other lift, part of the lift hall, the air vent, and a load of synthcrete are rendered into rubble.

Jam-O and Mango-R are thrown through the air, and both sustain broken bones when they land.

Massacrebot is far enough away that it just gets covered in dust. It seems to like explosions: "Yip yip yip yip yip yip yip-"

Re-education centre

The explosion takes the docbot by surprise as it answers L4-O. "What in the- oh, yes, citizen." It trundles over to examine the leg.

written by Speeder on Oct 10, 2010 17:28

I grin inside the bot for a while, then when I notice I've hurt Jam and Mango.

"Oh, sorry for that! I... miscalculated, how strong that thing is. But dude, it is hell cool!"

Then to the bot.

"Massacrebot, well done! Turn off recording"

I attempt to see if I can carry the two, somehow, without hurting them more, to the re-education centre.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 10, 2010 18:36

"Sounds like someone is having fun out there. Hope it's our side."

I present the leg while sitting on the closest nearby surface.

written by Jam on Oct 10, 2010 19:19

Dazed, I look around and try to figure out what happened. There was a flash, and an explosion, and a lot of pain, and...

"Mango-R!? Are you okay?"

I search through the smoke and dust for him...

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 10, 2010 19:53

"This is something that no-one should really have to be subjected to..." I mumble.

I try to look up at where the lift was, and make a visual survey of what's left.

"No, I don't think I am. But I think I'm still alive."

written by Gligar on Oct 11, 2010 00:51

Lift hall (Q level)

The REC light goes off.

Looks like Speed-Y likes explosions too. Come to think of it, is there anyone who doesn't like explosions? 😊

But explosions have the downside of causing casualties. Like Mango-R and Jam-R, for instance. Speed-Y thinks for a moment. Can Massacrebot carry them? Possibly. It does have manipulators, after all, and the weapons are mounted such that they don't block them. They look to be industrial models. A bot the size of Massacrebot could probably lift a hundred kilos or so per manipulator.

Meanwhile, Jam-O pulls himself to his feet, or tries to. His broken bone is preventing him from doing so. But he's able to speak. He locates Mango-R, who is trying to survey the damage. Looks like part of the lift shaft is gone. And it looks like he's also injured.

Re-education centre

L4-O moves his leg so the docbot can access it better. "Hmmm," it muses, "a broken bone. "Normally, I'd go with splints, but we seem to be lacking them. This will have to suffice."

The docbot mixes up something else and injects it into L4-O's leg, causing it to become... rather stiff.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 11, 2010 00:55

"Huh. What was that?"

I test my leg out a little bit if the docbot allows me.

"Or am I cleared to know? Either way, thanks."

written by Speeder on Oct 11, 2010 03:03

I try to grab some random objects, trying to not smash them, to feel the manipulators behavior.

Then I go near Jam and Mango.

"Can you walk? Need help? I think I can carry you people if needed using the hands of the bot, or someone can latch on the back of the bot... Although I dunno the safety of that, considering what the bot did to the elevator shaft... I don't know it sufficiently yet."

written by Jam on Oct 11, 2010 12:37

"I don't think I'll be able to walk very far, I'll probably need some help..."

I try to drag myself closer to Massacrebot.

L4-O tries to move around a bit, and discovers that he can no longer move his leg. The pain from his previous injury is giving way to an intense tingling.

The docbot explains, "The mixture I have injected has immobilised your leg, similar to a splint. It has proven effective in allowing the leg to heal in 65% of recorded cases."

Lift hall (Q level)

Massacrebot clunks over to a piece of debris - part of a lift door - and tries to pick it up. It's kind of difficult to judge the force needed, though, when you can't actually feel what you're holding. It's easy, for example, to crush an item while picking it up. All too easy, as it appears.

As Jam-R puss himself towards Massacrebot, it picks up a couple more pieces of debris. Speed-Y seems to be a little more successful this time.

written by Speeder on Oct 11, 2010 16:43

When I figure how to not crack Jam, I pick him up carefully.

"Hold tight yourself in the metal, as you see it is not safe for me to hold you tight..."

Then I turn to Mango, obviously trying to not turn too fast, to not hurt Jam, inertia is evil.

"Need help there?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 11, 2010 17:34

"Hm, 65%... well, I guess I have to take that. Thanks!"

"Perhaps we should go see what that noise was, it sounded close by. Might be someone else out there in need of medical attention"

I grab my crutch again and make my way for the door.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 11, 2010 19:25

"I'm not sure yet."

I attempt to move my arms and legs, and if nothing really feels bad, try to stand up.

written by Jam on Oct 11, 2010 23:49

I grab on to the metal and hold it tightly.

If I seem to be about to be crushed or squeezed to death by the manipulator, I scream loudly, to alert Speed-Y.

Seeing as I seem to have been left in the lab, I look around for any interesting devices or other equipment that may be around, careful not to examine them too carefully.

Lift hall (Q level)

As Jam-O continues to crawl forward, he is scooped up in one of the mechanical manipulators of Massacrebot. It can grip... quite firmly, as it happens. And it's obvious that it could strengthen that grip by quite a bit.

But Jam-O doesn't seem to be overly distressed by it. He grabs the manipulator with his remaining hand, trying to make sure he doesn't fall out. Not that there's much of a danger of that.

When addressed, Mango-R tries moving his limbs. There's a dull pain running through much of his body, but there's a great deal of pain coming from his upper left arm. That must be where the break is.

Once certain that he's not going to fall over, he stands up.

Re-education centre

L4-O retrieves his crutch and returns to the corridor.

Lab Q7

Cryo-R decides to have a look around. A lot of the stuff here seems to be geared to making and tinkering with Massacrebot, and indeed, there are what appears to be early prototypes of parts of that bot.

written by Speeder on Oct 12, 2010 01:51

As I notice Mango can walk, I decide to not pick him up, to not risk him without necessity.

Then I start strolling toward the re-education centre.

"I must say that the explosion was quite awesome, I mean, I am sorry for hurting you two... But it was one of the most FUN things I ever saw, Alexei will never find his belongings... I wonder if the commies can run out of fuzzy hats... In fact this now made me wonder who is making the fuzzy hats, if we found the source, we could stop the invasion dead on its tracks, we would not even need to actually retake the sector."

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 12, 2010 05:53

I walk after Massacrebot, taking small steps just to avoid breaking any more bones.

"I don't think I'll be able to use this effectively anymore, considering how well it hits with both hands..."

I decide to put my truncheon back into one of my pockets.

written by Jam on Oct 12, 2010 12:13

"Alexei? But..."

Oh, that reminds me, we met a commie on D level, and tricked him into telling us the name and whereabouts of their leader. He's Director Andrei, and he's somewhere in Central Subsector. Maybe at V level?

Why would destroying the fuzzy hats stop the invasion? Wouldn't it just make the commies not dizzy? It probably would make them even more dangerous..."

written by 4616599 on Oct 12, 2010 14:13

I poke out of the re-education centre, and notice the big Jam-O-carrying-warbot.

I whisper as they get closer "Only for a minority of them. On the contrary, the fuzzy hats seem to make them more susceptible and open to commie propaganda, despite how it is so badly inferior to Computer protocol! That guy there, with no fuzzy hat, can't seem to remember a thing! Even his name- apparently, it's Hans-R. He thinks."

Lift hall (Q Level)

Massacrebot, with Mango-R in tow, starts walking back through, and down, Corridor Q1.

As they walk, Speed-Y and Jam-O talk about the fuzzy hats. Would stopping their production stop the communists dead? Perhaps not...

This continues as they cross through the warehouse and out onto Corridor Q2.

Corridor Q2

As Massacrebot approaches, Joris-O pokes his head out of the re-education centre and chimes in.

written by Speeder on Oct 12, 2010 16:24

"Hello Joris! You people found a Docbot? Jam and Mango are needing one... I needed to kill a commie, and indeed I did, but Jam and Mango got hurt in the process... fun process by the way, even the bot liked it."

I smile.

"You liked it Massacrebot?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 12, 2010 20:40

I wave at the group.

“Hey! Do you guys have injuries? We have a docbot in the re-education center. My leg isn’t dragging around anymore!”

I knock on my solid leg then wince in pain.

“Still broken though...”

written by Jam on Oct 12, 2010 21:29

“Docbot!?! With a chainsaw? Ah! Speed-Y, let me down! The docbot’s gonna slice my head off, I know it will!”

I attempt to break free of Massacrebot’s grasp.

Massacrebot replies, “Yip!”

Jam-O realises there’s a docbot nearby, and tries to get free of Massacrebot’s manipulator.

“Guessing from Jam-O’s reaction, I think he’s not had a good experience with one.”

I think of my chances that the docbot will just snap my arm off. It’s not a pleasant thought.

“Maybe I’ll just improvise...”

I take the towel that I still have, and attempt to make a sling around my left arm.

written by Jam on Oct 13, 2010 11:57

“The last docbot I met decided to ‘treat’ me by cutting my hand off! Though, the only thing that worked on that docbot was the chainsaw...”

Lucas-R perks up when he hears his name. The docbot also takes notice. “I assure you, citizen, I am not equipped with a chainsaw. It was removed for maintenance some time ago, and Technical Services has not yet returned it. Though I am sure I could improvise with something else should the need arise.”

It turns to Mango-R. “Hmmm, you may be doing that incorrectly. Allow me to assist.”

Derek-G looks up from his terminal, and notices Cryo-R still here. “Was there something else you wanted, citizen?”

Lab Q7

Derek-G stands up and approaches Cryo-R. “If there’s nothing else, please return to your team. Unless you want to commit more treason. And if so...” Derek-G produces a laser pistol from somewhere and points it at Cryo-R. “...I have all the evidence I need.”

I finish up with the sling.

“Well, at least I won’t shouldn’t get nearly as distracted by the pain than without this.”

I watch Jam-O as he is moved onto the chair. My attention moves back to Cryo-R. Or rather the lack of.

“How’s Cryo-R, by the way?”

While Jam-O is being moved onto a chair, L4-O makes his way to the warehouse to check on Nukabot.

It comes to Joris-O's attention that Kristos-R hasn't looked up from his PDC for a while.

The docbot finishes up with Mango-R's sling and returns to Jam-O. It begins to mix some more of the mixture.

With nothing else to do, Mango-R looks around for Cryo-R... who isn't here.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Nukabot seems to notice L4-O return. It answers, "Hello, citizen! Nobody else has been in here, except for some walkerbot. Oh, and Jam-O and Mango-R came through not long ago."

The lift is notable by its absence.

written by Speeder on Oct 14, 2010 15:50

I look at the Docbot, then at Jam.

"Doc, he will survive?"

written by Jam on Oct 14, 2010 20:56

I look at whatever the docbot is mixing up.

"What is that?! It's not going to make my leg fall off, is it?"

I try to remain calm...

written by Lightning4 on Oct 14, 2010 21:35

I scratch my head.

"Huh. Where's the lift... I mean, I guess we don't need it anyway..."

I approach the hole and just slightly peek over the edge, to see if I can see where it is.

written by Gligar on Oct 15, 2010 00:10

"His probability of survival depends in part on the location of the broken bone," the docbot answers. "Where exactly is the broken bone?"

"And to answer your question, this will immobilise your leg to allow for proper healing."

Lab 07

"Citizen, are you listening? Return to your team at once! That is an order!"

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

L4-O peeks down the lift shaft. The lift seems to a couple of levels below, and is heading down.

A loud squeal, as of a PA system experiencing momentary feedback, permeates the sector. This is followed by a voice saying, "Attention comrades! It is the end of the work cycle!

Lights will be deactivated in 15 minutecycles. Please report to your nearest People's Dormitory. That is all."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 15, 2010 04:46

The PA announcement seems to startle me. I jump back and whip out my laser pistol, pointing it around frantically before realizing there's nothing there.

"Bah. Wonder if I can find a good lightsource..."

I put my laser pistol away and go back towards the group, rummaging through my backpack for my torch. While doing so, I remember something else and quicken my pace.

I enter the Re-ed center and pull out the strange YELLOW slugthrower, intending to hand it to Speed.

"Seeing as how I'm not the proper clearance to use this, you should have it! I found it on one of the commies a while back. It's a rather strange slugthrower..."

written by Speeder on Oct 15, 2010 07:40

I ask the bot to open.

Then I take one of my hands out of it, and take the yellow slugthrower.

"Interesting... I never saw one of those before, at least not a real one, I thought it was only a movie thing... You know, one of these old movies, one of the few that have no traitorous content, and is at least partially watchable..."

I examine the... thing, stuff, yellow object.

Then I check to see if one of my rounds fit on it.

"Seemly it is rather limited in ammo capacity, but I wonder how powerful it is. Not that I need extra power, when I have this really, really cool bot that Derek-G invented."

written by 4616599 on Oct 15, 2010 10:14

"Hmmm. Reminds me of those Old Reckoning vidshows set in the medieval West too. Gosh, things sure were lawless without Friend Computer or authoritarian rule!"

Wait, what vidshows? I guess that brainscrub wasn't very effective, given how we hadn't the time to watch any shows during the mission.

written by Jam on Oct 15, 2010 11:57

"Wait... Why does my leg need to be immobilized? Are you sure it's even broken? The pain seems to be coming from around here."

I point to whatever part of me hurts most.

I look over as L4-O mentions the strange slugthrower.

"Wait, let me see it! I've been looking for a very old slugthrower that was stolen from the Museum of Troubleshooting!"

I look at the slugthrower. Does it resemble the 'revolver' that was stolen?

written by Gligar on Oct 15, 2010 16:16

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Initially startled, L4-O looks around for the source of the announcement before realising it's the PA. He heads back to the others, fishing out his torch as he does.

Then he remembers something.

Re-education centre

L4-O enters, with the strange slugthrower in hand, and offers it to Speed-Y. The YELLOW attempts to open Massacrebot to take the weapon, but discovers that the bot apparently wants attention, as it doesn't open.

Speed-Y does get to see the weapon, though. It looks to be a single-shot weapon. It looks like ammunition is to be loaded in a cylindrical device in front of the cocking lever. It doesn't look like it could hold more than six slugs.

Joris-O also seems interested. He is reminded of something. I have one question: where did he get access to Old Reckoning vidshows?

Jam-O initially doesn't notice L4-O come in, as he's dealing with the docbot. Why did the docbot mention his leg, when it's clearly a rib that's broken? No matter.

The docbot is about finished mixing up its concoction and prepares to inject it.

Jam-O then notices L4-O's strange slugthrower. It looks very similar to the 'revolvers' in the museum, but this one seems to have been made a little more recently.

written by Jam on Oct 15, 2010 21:33

I turn my attention back to the docbot.

"Wait, wait! Where are you planning on sticking that needle? You do know that it's my rib that's broken, not my leg?"

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 15, 2010 22:59

"Powerful as the bot is, it seems a bit stubborn."

I look at Massacrebot.

"I think Speed-Y may have been thinking more about the explosion, when deciding to blow up a whole lot of the lift hall. He kind of ended up injuring Jam-O and myself. And he destroyed a lot of the lift hall, and 2 lifts, I think."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 16, 2010 00:54

"Anyway, did you guys hear that? Sounds like we might need some light sources... I hope Nukabot has headlights."

My conversation returns to the slugthrower.

"I dunno if we even have ammo for it. Not that anyone but you can use it... I don't think that YELLOW clearance applies to team-members using YELLOW stuff, just going onto it..."

"I guess I can just keep it safe in my backpack? Don't want it falling into commie hands again."

I put it back into my backpack.

written by Gligar on Oct 16, 2010 01:07

Re-education centre

"Nonsense, ci-citizen. It is clearly-ly your leg." The docbot injects whatever it is into Jam-O's leg. Almost instantly, the leg becomes stiff.

Meanwhile, Massacrebot finally decided to open up.

L4-O has a point about lights... they'll be going off soon. Does everyone have a light source?

Also, there's the matter of the slugthrower. L4-O decides to take care of it for now.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 16, 2010 01:16

"Light? Well, I think my PDC can give off light. Maybe this Com 1 Unit can, but I don't think so."

I try to turn off the Com 1 Unit, then go back to my PDC, and see if there is a brightness setting. If there is, I try to turn it up.

written by Jam on Oct 16, 2010 02:28

"Hey! What are you doing?!"

I back away from the docbot and start yelling.

"Why did you inject that into my leg! It's my rib that's broken, not my leg!"

I pause for a few secondcycles, replaying the docbot's words in my head. Then I take my laser rifle and point it at the docbot.

"You stuttered! Normal bots don't stutter. You've been tampered with! Don't come any closer, or I'll blast your bot-brains out!"

I back away more, keeping my laser rifle carefully aimed at the docbot. If the docbot tries attacking me (perhaps with the excuse it is trying to 'treat' me), I shoot at it.

written by Speeder on Oct 16, 2010 06:52

"Massacrebot, good boy! I shall give you something... Dunno what... Maybe explode more stuff later. Or do some other interesting ways to kill a commie..."

Then I look to L4 and say.

"Hum... Ok, it is not that I can use it right now..."

Then I think a bit.

"Massacrebot, do you have headlights? Nukabot probably does, but the more, the better... Maybe we can make the commies go blind, or scare them to death..."

I grin, clearly is the grin of someone with a clever and evil idea.

"Massacrebot, close again, I need to see in the HUD all systems installed that I can use to intimidate... Headlights included."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 16, 2010 09:06

I shrug and take out the slugthrower again, and hand it to Speed before Massacrebot closes back up.

"I have a torch here too, but... the batteries are kind of weak, and I dunno if I can connect it to anything."

I take it out and examine it a bit for any connections... maybe I can link it to Nukabot's power supply or something!

Re-education centre

Mango-R fiddles with his PDC. Apparently, there's no brightness setting, it's just really bright.

Kristos-R continues fiddling with his own PDC. He seems to be smiling.

L4-O pulls out the slugthrower again and hands it to Speed-Y before the bot closes up again. That sorted, Speed-Y pulls up a list on the bot's HUD, which includes the weapons and yes, a lamp. The sound system isn't included, though. Presumably, Massacrebot doesn't have the XtraLoud™ speaker system installed.

Jam-O is more concerned with the docbot. It continues to advance, apparently wanting to inject more of the stuff into Jam-O. Probably into his other leg.

But it doesn't get that far. Jam-O has had enough. Lifting his laser rifle, he shoots.

And somehow manages to miss from almost point blank range.

John-R, on the other hand, does not. Narrowly missing Joris-O, he scores a hit on one of the docbot's wheels, causing it to jerk to a halt.

L4-O does his best to ignore all this by examining his torch. (Well, someone's got to do the examining thing. Where is Cryo-R, anyway?) He notices that the battery contacts are on the inside, accessible by simply opening the battery compartment.

written by Speeder on Oct 16, 2010 17:05

I finally notice the commotion with the Docbot.

"Hello docbot, can you please reboot and reload your read-only disc to your main memory? Also, before doing that, report the last time you was accessed externally."

"Fine," Derek-G says. "Since you refuse to follow my orders, I have no choice." He aims, carefully, and shoots.

I'm not sure where on Cryo-R he was aiming, but the laser blast has pierced Cryo-R's hand.

"Now... LEAVE.

"Unless, of course, you want to become a... test subject?"

Re-education centre

The docbot refuses to co-operate. "Bzzt Access denied without proper authorisation code."

Shortly after, a laser shot is heard from the lab.

Joris-O reacts, but not to that laser shot. He suddenly realises that he picked the wrong bot to hide behind, backs away from the docbot, and fires his blaster, shooting off the manipulator holding the needle.

Jam-O also retreats. But he's more interested in just getting away. The slight problem is that he's run out of chair, promptly falling to the floor.

written by Speeder on Oct 17, 2010 00:47

I instead of shooting, I advance toward the docbot, and put a foot on it.

"Report the last access or I will flatten you."

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 17, 2010 02:27

I try to ignore the scene with the docbot. And I try speaking to the others.

"Does no one really care about Cryo-R? Because he's taking quite a while to come back..."

I go over to the door.

"Any objections with me looking for Cryo-R?"

written by Jam on Oct 17, 2010 14:43

I look at the docbot, who seems to be missing a manipulator, and also seems to be lying underneath Massacrebot's foot. Feeling a bit more safe, I try to climb back onto the chair.

"The docbot wanted an authorization code? How about 'Stalin'? Docbot, please report your last external access, authorization code S-T-A-L-I-N"

Speed-Y decides to test another piece of Massacrebot: it's foot. Specifically, can it crush another bot, like, say, a docbot? Well, it's kind of difficult to get Massacrebot's leg into the right position, and it involves knocking the docbot over, but it... might well be possible.

The docbot remains silent.

Jam-O decides to check the docbot's loyalties in another way. Will it accept the name of the communist virus?

"Bzzt Access denied."

Apparently not.

Mango-R is more concerned about Cryo-R... where did he get to? Is he suffering from a relapse, and is caught up in examining yet another light fixture? Mango-R wants to go and find out.

written by Speeder on Oct 17, 2010 15:52

After some more peering in the bot, I say.

"Ok, Mango, go find Cryo and Derek, tell Derek that we have a faulty Docbot, and that maybe he can hack it somehow... Or verify the loyalty of the bot."

written by Jam on Oct 17, 2010 17:14

I try to determine what part of my leg is stiff.

After that, I decide to search for the syringe. Maybe I can inject the rest of its contents into my rib...

If I happen to find any laser pistol barrels lying around, I greedily take them and add them to my collection.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 17, 2010 19:30

"Right then."

"So weird. I thought he was fine when he was working on me and that nearly dead guy in the re-education center."

"Maybe a time delay virus or something?"

I shrug and take out my torch and start fiddling with the batteries.

I start looking for things I can either charge the batteries with, or replace the batteries with, including any laser pistol barrels in my search.

written by Gligar on Oct 18, 2010 00:52

Re-education centre

Mango-R heads out.

Jam-O inspects his leg. The stiffness seems to affect the area around the knee. There's no telling how long it will last.

He then looks round, and finds the bot's severed manipulator, still clutching the syringe, and tries to pry out the syringe. It seems that severed bot manipulators lock in position or something.

While he's doing that, L4-O makes a suggestion, then fiddles with his torch. Perhaps he could recharge or replace the batteries? Well, possibly, if there was a recharger, or some batteries, around here...

His attention turns to the ORANGE laser barrels in one of the boxes lugged in here by Joris-O. Could one be adapted? Hmm, probably not...

But he doesn't get much of a time to think about them, since Jam-O suddenly pounces on them, ignoring his stiff leg. He stuffs about ten into his pockets, despite all the junk that's already in there (amongst which are eight RED barrels) 😊

Lab Q7

Mango-R opens the door to the lab, to find Cryo-R on the floor, with a fresh laser wound on one of his hands. Derek-G is pointing a laser pistol at him.

He notices Mango-R. "What now?"

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 18, 2010 05:01

"Well... I was told to give a message. There's a faulty docbot in the re-education centre, and I'm supposed to get Cryo-R..."

I look at Cryo-R, and then back to Derek-G.

"I suppose I'll have to pick him up then... if you don't mind."

The docbot turns its wheels, trying to escape from under Massacrebot.

²³⁸ SPEEDER: (ooc: if someone interact with me before the next turn and I see it, I may respond...)

L4-O looks for a battery charger.

Jam-O goes to fit an ORANGE barrel to his laser. Does anyone want to trade for a laser rifle?

L4-O eventually finds a charger in the controlling terminal's desk.

And then... the lights go out.

written by Speeder on Oct 18, 2010 15:48

I turn on the Massacrebot headlights, taking care of doing that away from anyone's face, since I don't know how strong it is.

I then say to the docbot.

"Anyway, there are a GREEN citizen with skills to do maintenance on you on this level, don't leave, and don't attack him, otherwise I will return later to smash you to little bits, and leave you smashed, I am sure you don't want to live the rest of your eternal life smashed."

I step on the ground again.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 18, 2010 17:34

In the now-possibly-not-darkness I start charging the batteries for the torch. I look to see if there's room for my blaster's power pack too.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 18, 2010 19:40

"Okay, but I think the others are holding the docbot down. It's in the re-education centre. I'm not sure how dangerous it is."

I pull out my PDC to shine the light, clipping it to the front of my jumpsuit if it is possible. Then I attempt to pick Cryo-R up, and carry him out.

written by Jam on Oct 18, 2010 22:35

I panic for a few secondcycles when the lights go out. Then I remember that someclone had said something earlier about lights and stuff. I was kind of busy getting attacked by a docbot, so I didn't really listen very closely.

I look toward where I last saw the others, and continue trying to convince one of them to give me a laser pistol.

"Anyone? L4-O? Joris-O? John-R? Lucas-R? A laser rifle is just like a laser pistol, except it is more powerful. And a laser rifle is meant to be used with two hands. So it's rather hard me to use it, having only one hand..."

written by Gligar on Oct 19, 2010 00:21

Re-education centre

Ah, there we go! Light. From several places: a couple of clones are using their PDCs, and Massacrebot is lighting things up... rather harshly, actually. But it's better than no light, right?

The docbot continues spinning its wheels.

L4-O is momentarily dazzled by the sudden flood of light from Massacrebot, and drops the battery he was fitting into the charger. It falls to the floor and rolls under the desk.

Jam-R briefly panics. I think the team needs a happiness officer or something. Where did the first aid kits go?

But he recovers. He really wants a laser pistol... why doesn't anyone want his nice shiny laser rifle?

For a moment, no-one answers. Then John-R says, "You can have mine."

Lab Q7

More light! Well, only a couple of PDCs, but still.

Mango-R discovers that his PDC won't clip onto his jumpsuit. Ah well. Onto other matters, like dragging Cryo-R back to the corridor... wow, he's heavy.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 19, 2010 00:39

"Waugh! Bright light!"

I stumble around trying to regather my bearings.

My eyes still having the afterimages of the bright light, I fumble around under the desk trying to retrieve the battery.

If I succeed I get up and place it back into the charger... second time is the charm?

written by 4616599 on Oct 19, 2010 01:13

I recoil from the sudden light. "Wow! Brightness!"

"You know, this could be a useful time for a raid. Raid them and confuse them before they raid us, I say." I pull out the Com 1. "Comrade, this is clone from Epsilon subsector P Level! Is needlink info! Was heading for dormitory when lights went out- our glorious lighting program is very sudden, no? Anyway, where is the nearest dormitory?"

written by Jam on Oct 19, 2010 01:56

I blink a few times, and shield my eyes from the bright light.

Then I whisper to John-R, quietly enough that whoever Joris-O is talking to won't be able to hear.

"Ah, John-R, good! Thanks!"

I take the laser pistol, and put it in one of my pockets. Then I take out the laser rifle and the unused laser rifle barrel, and offer them to him.

"Here's the laser rifle. And take this spare barrel too, just in case you run out of shots."

After John-R takes the rifle and barrel, I immediately reach into my pocket and take out the laser pistol. With a huge grin on my face, I remove and pocket the RED barrel, and excitedly replace it with a brand new extra shiny super special Friend Computer approved ORANGE barrel! Ah, how I missed the secure feeling of having a laser pistol in my hand!

I try to run across the room, waving the laser pistol and pretending to shoot invisible commies. I realize too late that it's very difficult to run with a immoveable leg, and end up just leaping out of my chair and flopping onto the ground. I lay there for a while, thinking about how difficult it will be to run at commies with a immoveable leg. And my rib is still broken, how am I going to get that fixed?

After a while, I stand up and try to practice walking with my frozen leg.

written by Gligar on Oct 19, 2010 15:59

Re-education centre

Though still dazzled, L4-O manages to retrieve the wayward battery. His vision clears enough to be able to locate the charger and insert the batteries. While he's at it, he has a look at his blaster's power pack. Hmm... looks possible, but not with the batteries in there as well.

Joris-O has an idea, and sends a message over the Com. "A patrol will find you, comrade," is the reply. "Wait to be picked up."

John-R exchanges his laser pistol for the laser rifle. Jam-O grins. Much better. Especially with an ORANGE barrel replacing the partly-used RED one.

He tries to get off the chair and run around in glee, but only manages to fall flat on his face due to his stiffened leg. This manages to aggravate his broken rib. How can he fix that... oh yes! The manipulator with the syringe...

Once the pain subsides, he gets up and tries to walk around. It takes a bit of getting used to.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 19, 2010 19:25

I try to continue dragging Cryo-R, with one hand on the PDC, the other hand on Cryo-R's shoulder. I try to move out into the corridor quickly, trying not to think about Derek-G shooting me with that laser pistol.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 19, 2010 21:54

I idly contemplate how long it takes for the batteries to charge. I stare at the charger, hoping to disprove the theory that a watched battery never charges. Or something like that.

written by Speeder on Oct 19, 2010 22:29

After a while I say.

"Shall we proceed to level V?"

written by Jam on Oct 19, 2010 23:23

I search for the manipulator. If I find it, I try to separate it from the syringe. (Of course, this is extremely difficult to do with only one hand, especially when that hand is also tightly gripping a laser pistol)

If I somehow manage to successfully separate the syringe from the manipulator, I put the syringe in a pocket. Otherwise, if I can't separate them, I just try to fit both in my pockets.

When Speed-Y speaks, I look up at him.

"Okay. We need to get to Central Subsector too, right? I wonder if there is a map somewhere we can use..."

Lab Q7

Mango-R keeps trying. This time, he's able to drag Cryo-R out into the corridor. It looks empty.

Re-education centre

L4-O watches the charger. A RED light appeared not long after he inserted the batteries, and is now blinking slowly.

Jam-O finds the manipulator, and, again, tries to free the syringe. It's still in too tight to move, so he stuffs the whole thing into a pocket.

written by Jam on Oct 20, 2010 02:27

I practice walking around the room a bit more. As I pass by L4-O, I notice him staring at a little blinking RED light... Strange...

Wait, do I hear noises out in the corridor?

I poke my head out the door to investigate, and see Mango-R dragging an apparently dead body somewhere.

"Ohhh, a dead body! Can I help?"

Wait, why am I asking permission... I'm higher clearance, of course I can help!

I walk up to Mango-R and assist him in dragging the dead body somewhere. At least, I hope it's dead... Those broken legs look awfully painful...

"Right, hide the evidence so the commies don't get suspicious seeing dead bodies lying around. Okay, where are we going to dispose of the body at? Hide it in some dark corner? Find a scrubot to 'clean' it up? Or maybe we should just bring it to the incinerator room?"

written by Speeder on Oct 20, 2010 03:50

I get curious and ask the Massacrebot to analyze the dead body.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 20, 2010 05:35

I have a feeling that the docbot did more than just freeze Jam-O's leg. So I answer, "It's Cryo-R. Someone shot him in the hand. I think he's alive, though I can't really tell..."

I continue with my efforts to move Cryo-R to the re-education centre.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 20, 2010 17:35

I get distracted by the awesome that is the Massacrebot. It's hard to see it from my position, due to the bright lights coming from it, but I think I can make out some of the details as it moves away.

Unless of course it moves outside, then the light is gone, and my eyes will have... fun... adjusting to the dark again.

I turn towards the charger again.

Re-education centre

Jam-O continues walking round with his stiff leg. As he does, he hears some noises and investigates.

Corridor Q2

He sees Mango-R approaching the re-education centre while dragging what seems to be a dead body... but it's just Cryo-R. He goes to help.

As they reach the centre the door opens. It's Massacrebot. Looks like it was about to exit. Behind it, L4-O is taking another look at it. He notes that the bot seems to be fitted with concussion armour.

Massacrebot's HUD lights up with a targeting reticule. Near it, a notation that a valid ME card was found on the "body": that of Cryo-R. The HUD also indicates that the target is alive. A moment later, the reticule disappears. Presumably, Cryo-R is not a viable target, under whatever algorithm the bot is using,

Re-education centre

L4-O keeps looking at Massacrebot. Besides the armour, he also notes that there seems to be mounting points for more weapons.

written by Jam on Oct 20, 2010 22:14

"Oh, it's Cryo-R! I didn't recognize him at first. But why are we dragging him? Can't he walk by himself?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 20, 2010 23:44

I notice the room getting darker as Massacrebot steps out into the corridor.

My eyes now have a hard time adjusting... I try to find the charger again to check the progress.

L4-O tries to find the charger in the dark. Well, there's a blinking RED light where the charger should be. It's blinking a lot faster than before.

"Well, I suppose we could proceed to V level. It'd be better to use the darkness as cover if the commies are too numerous there."

Jam-O and Mango-R continue to try and move Cryo-R into the re-education centre, but encounter a blockage in the form of Massacrebot.

I set Cryo-R down.

"Do you think you can walk?"

Corridor Q2

Oh hey! Cryo-R has stopped being inert! He seems to have noticed the most important points... except for that big bot over there...

Speaking of the bot, it has now moved into the corridor. Behind it, Lucas-R looks out, holding up his PDC for light.

Re-education centre

Kristos-R is still engrossed in his PDC.

L4-O is still waiting for the charger to finish. He looks away for a moment. When he looks back, the blinking light is blinking even faster, and is almost constantly on.

written by Cryoburner on Oct 22, 2010 02:26

"Do I look okay? I have apparently been poked. Multiple times, in fact."

"Hmm... the lighting in here seems somehow inadequate."

So inadequate that one might not notice a sizable bot, or even a large metallic kitty that they had previously seen and petted? It is possible.

²³⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: pokes Cryo)

²⁴⁰ SPEEDER: (OOC: I just noticed that my six attempts to post yesterday all failed... also to make things worse, after all those attempts, my internet died :/ I hate radio internet).

"Come on... come on... so close!"

I continue staring at the blinking light. Should it finish, I retrieve my battery and put it back into the torch, and test it.

I am about to retrieve my blaster, but realize perhaps we have no time. Instead I make my way out and catch up to the group, (hopefully) lit torch in hand.

written by Speeder on Oct 22, 2010 07:29

Corridor Q2

Massacrebot walks down the corridor for a moment, then stops and growls. Its audio sensors have picked up something.

Cryo-R doesn't seem to have noticed Massacrebot, despite the fact that it's not exactly silent. He's more interested in the lack of lighting. Is anyone surprised?

Jam-O checks Cryo-R over, and finds that he has a new laser wound to his hand.

Re-education centre

The charger's light appears to come on fully. This is followed by a brief phut and the smell of burnt electronics.

L4-O grabs his batteries and checks them out. They seem to be working nicely in his torch. He walks off after Massacrebot, followed by John-R.

Corridor Q2

So that means that everyone is in the corridor except Kristos-R.

written by 4616599 on Oct 22, 2010 18:26

"Kristos-R!" I try poking him with the bell too.

"Think he'll be safe here?"

written by Jam on Oct 22, 2010 23:58

"Uh oh... Why is it growling? Are there commies nearby?"

I aim my laser pistol at any nearby doors.

written by Gligar on Oct 23, 2010 00:29

Re-education centre

Kristos-R doesn't seem to respond to being "poked".

Massacrebot's HUD lights up with a message about possible hostiles, but there's no confirmed reading.

From the north, there is the sound of clones marching, and some indistinct speech. This is shortly followed by electric motors firing up, and a crunch, as of something metallic being forced through a clone's head. Then, slugshots.

Shouts are heard. They aren't in a language that's commonly used in Alpha Complex...

written by Lightning4 on Oct 23, 2010 01:29

I come up behind with lit torch in hand, but turn it off when I get to Massacrebot and its ridiculously bright lights.

I take out my laser pistol and move quickly down the corridor.

"NUKABOT!"

written by Jam on Oct 23, 2010 01:33

"Hmm... That sounds like fighting..."

I look up at Speed-Y, or, if I can't see him, at Massacrebot.

"Maybe, sir, we should investigate. There could be clones there that are still loyal, and are fighting against the commies. We should assist them..."

written by Speeder on Oct 23, 2010 07:02

As Jam speaks I start to rush forward.

"Nukabot!!! My friend!!!"

written by 4616599 on Oct 23, 2010 09:09

"Oh commie rats. Guess it's not safe for you to come along then...sorry 'bout this." I quickly shove Kristos-R into an indistinct corner of the room, and try to hide him by throwing the box of Replacement Pen Request Forms over him.

I then get into position, blaster out into the corridor.

Re-education centre

Joris-O re-enters, and does his best to cover Kristos-R with forms before leaving again. The result looks like a clone-shaped thing covered in forms.

Corridor Q2

L4-O hears the shouts, comes to a quick decision, and charges.

He's followed by the still-growling Massacrebot and John-R. Joris-O also gets into position. Lucas-R stays back with the rest.

Slugshots continue to be heard from the north.

Distribution warehouse (Q level)

It looks as though a PRPF patrol was marching through here. Nukabot must have decided to attack them and has impaled two of them on its forks. The remainder of the patrol are now concentrating their slugfire on the bot. One slug has shattered one of the bot's lights – the one that's already been repaired once. The other light is on.

written by Speeder on Oct 23, 2010 16:18

As soon as I get to the warehouse, I ask the bot to growl in the most menacing way it can, then I flicker the lights, and stomp the ground as I walk toward the commies.

written by Jam on Oct 23, 2010 21:00

I suddenly realize what is happening.

"Nukabot!"

I walk forward as fast as I can.

"Get away from him!"

I shoot at the nearest commie with my new laser pistol.

"DIE!!"

I hold back, and attempt to pull Cryo-R to his feet, if he's not already standing. Then I attempt to place the PDC on my broken arm inside the sling. I pull out the truncheon.

"Who knows? Someone could be trying to ambush us, for all we know..."

written by Gligar on Oct 24, 2010 00:21

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Massacrebot arrives, growling and stomping loudly.

The contrast of a big bot stomping and clanking combined with the petbot-like growling gets the attention of the communists. A couple of them start laughing. But at least they're not shooting.

Which is good for L4-O and Jam-O, who begin shooting. And for Nukabot, who gets a break from being shot at.

Jam-O's shot hits its mark. One of the laughing communists recoils as the beam hits his leg.

L4-O is less lucky, as his shot ends up hitting somewhere in the lift shaft.

John-R enters, a little late, and also shoots, with his new laser rifle. Wow, nice shot! A communist is shot right in the head! Which promptly explodes.

Corridor Q2

Mango-R attempts to pull Cryo-R to his feet. Of course, Cryo-R's various injuries prevent this.

Instead, he puts his PDC in his sling and gets ready for combat.

written by Speeder on Oct 24, 2010 01:03

"Ok Massacrebot, continue sounding really angry... you are angry, aren't you?"

I attempt to switch to some anti-personal bullets, and then I shoot commies.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 24, 2010 01:51

"Wow! Impressive shot John!"

I step to the side to give Massacrebot room to fire, while shooting my own laser pistol at the remaining communists.

written by Jam on Oct 24, 2010 03:13

I smile at John-R.

"See, the laser rifle is much more effective in your hands. Nice shot! "

I aim at the communist that I shot in the leg, and fire, hoping to hit his head next.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Massacrebot keeps growling. Its HUD starts sprouting targeting reticules.

Other clones keep firing. Let's see...

L4-O seems to be having problems with his laser pistol, since it refuses to fire for some reason.

A communist shoots, but seemingly not at anything in particular.

Jam-O pulls off a Nice Shot™, hitting his communist right where he wanted, causing the head to explode.

Another communist shoots. His slug clips Nukabot's left fork, leaving a dent.

John-R shoots again, but discovers that his communist is wearing reflec. His shot leaves a burn mark, but at least the communist flinched. So it must have done something

A third communist gets in on the action, and shoots at Massacrebot, even managing to hit the leg. The bot registers the hit on its HUD, but notes that there's little damage. Isn't armour great?

Corridor Q2

Cryo-R asks to not be carried. Apparently, he just wants to "guard the floor".

“But what about the mission?” asks Lucas-R. Is he abandoning it (again)? And why is Mango-R going along with it?

written by Cryoburner on Oct 24, 2010 16:50

“Oh, don’t worry. As far as I can tell, there should be floor throughout most of the mission. I can guard it wherever we go. You wouldn’t want someone stealing the floor out from beneath us, now would you? We need it to keep from falling.”

written by 4616599 on Oct 24, 2010 16:57

I start off down the corridor, head partially down behind my kevlar shield. I enter the fight a bit more discreetly, poking out from behind Massacrebot and blasting at the nearest commie.

written by Speeder on Oct 24, 2010 17:01

I aim to make the most cruel shooting I can, instead of hitting heads I aim to hit limbs and crotch of commies.

Kneecaps...

written by Lightning4 on Oct 24, 2010 22:34

I continue attempting to fire my laser pistol... wait. It’s not firing?

“Vatcrap!”

I take out the barrel and toss it into the crowd of commies, then duck back into the corridor so I can search myself for more laser pistol barrels.

written by Jam on Oct 24, 2010 23:43

“YOU SHOT NUKABOT YOU COMMIE VATSLIME!! DIE!”

I shoot at the communist that hit Nukabot, aiming for the head.

I look over and notice that L4-O seems to be having problems with his laser pistol. I offer one of my spare laser pistol barrels.

Corridor Q2

Joris-O makes his move. Ignoring Cryo-R, who continues to “guard the floor”, he heads down the corridor and enters the fray.

Distribution warehouse (Q level)

Making a dash for Massacrebot, he narrowly avoids being hit by a communist. The slug continues through the door to the corridor, and impacts the wall.

He then pops out and fires. He ends up hitting the communist with the reflex, who then clutches his chest and collapses with a brief scream. He’s not dead yet, though.

There are three left. One aims at John-R and pulls his trigger, but nothing happens. From his expression and the sudden outburst, I’m going to guess that it’s jammed.

Speed-Y takes the opportunity to test out Massacrebot’s weapons again. Aiming the heavy slugthrower, he fires.

It seems that it’s in burst-fire mode. Three slugs are fired in rapid succession. The first two impact the same communist, and even the same kneecap, within a centimetre of each other, causing him to collapse backwards onto another communist. The third seems to hit the ceiling.

The second communist tries to push the first out of his line of fire, but ends up shooting him instead. Heh.

This is a good thing for L4-O. He decides to just get rid of the barrel after his mishap, before ducking back through the door.

As he checks for a spare barrel, Jam-O continues firing. As it turns out, his target is the remaining communist, who seems to be trying to fade into the darkness. This makes it difficult to get a shot off. He tries it anyway, and misses by a wide margin.

As L4-O finishes going through his stuff (and finding the partly-used barrel from earlier), Jam-O offers him a fresh barrel.

Distribution warehouse (Q level)

Speed-Y tries a more direct approach to his scare tactics. It seems that he’s better at it than Massacrebot, since his attempt causes the remaining visible communist to drop his slugthrower and back away.

L4-O picks up the new barrel, but decides to use his other one for now. He and Jam-O continue firing.

Two ORANGE laser pistol blasts hit two locations, both of them fleshy. The visible communist collapses to the ground on top of the other one he shot earlier. The one in the shadows falls forward, with sparks shooting out of a gaping hole in his head.

It seems that Kristos-R has fallen asleep.

From what I'm reading here, allowing him to fall into the wrong hands would be treason.

Corridor Q2

It's still kind of... "inadequately lit", but Cryo-R can still see what looks like a PDC backlight in the re-education centre, in such a way as to suggest that someone is holding it while being covered in forms, some of which are visible in the PDC's light. So, what's a clone to do? Fill out forms, of course! Why didn't anyone else, like, say, Speed-Y, think of that?

²⁴¹ SPEEDER: (ooc: Cryo is completely useless, but he make the most amusing posts... 😊 I would never think of that)

Of course, you do kind of need light to fill out forms... but Cryo-R doesn't have a Request for Illumination Request Form Request Form Request Form Request Form Request Form Request Form to hand. So he has to make do* with the dim light from the PDC. And the monitors.

Not knowing where Cryo-R went, Mango-R heads towards the warehouse. Lucas-R follows him, after a glance back at the re-education centre.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Massacrebot clanks forward, towards Nukabot. It inadvertently steps on a communist's corpse, crushing it.

It identifies Nukabot by serial number, and ascertains that it is still functioning via standard radio link. Nukabot seems to have suffered minor damage, but is otherwise okay.

"I didn't have a chance to say," Nukabot says, "but there are androids amongst the communists. I've been listening to them."

It seems that one of them was in this patrol. Specifically, the one recently shot by Jam-O. An android, it seems, is a bot brain in what seems to be a clone body. The bot brain in this one's still sparking, and is beyond repair. The body itself dies as Jam-O watches.

In case anyone's interested, the memory card might still be intact.

Meanwhile, L4-O has been looting the bodies. How traditional. He finds a bunch of slugthrower rounds, as well as a couple of Com 1s and some pictures of the Troubleshooter team, apparently taken earlier.

written by 4616599 on Oct 26, 2010 01:25

Ignoring the strange squishing noises coming from under Massacrebot, I approach the 'commiebot'.

"So this was how that commie in the food hall saw through the Scru-R ruse." I scan through the pictures.

"Also, that strange clone in the dark room at D Level- there might be androids too! That explains the behaviour!"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 26, 2010 01:41

I decide to shove some spare slugthrower rounds in my backpack just in case Massacrebot starts running low.

I look at the pictures and remark.

"Huh. Wonder where they got these pictures. That's not good."

I hand some of the pictures out to the rest of the team if requested.

I wince a little as I look at the rather "pretty" picture under Massacrebot's foot.

"Eww. I think you... uh, stepped in something there. Might stink unless you scrape it off."

* NOT "due."

written by Kristos on Oct 26, 2010 02:34

Suddenly I start choking on my saliva and wake up, coughing it straight up into the air! Startled at the sudden shift to reality, I jump up, possibly fall down, and look around to see where I am, what it looks like, what all exits exist.

written by Speeder on Oct 26, 2010 06:08

"Huh... seriously?"

I try to grind the meaty foot on the ground... Of course, I don't know where the commie that I stepped was.

After a while I turn again to Nukabot.

"That is... bad... If they have androids, it means they have some advanced tech that they should not have, it is worse than the mind control hats..."

"Massacrebot, open please, I am going take that memory card."

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 26, 2010 10:01

I look through and about the warehouse.

"Cryo-R hasn't passed through here, has he? He is injured, but he crawled off somewhere."

I notice the scene after shining the PDC around a bit.

"What is that supposed to be?" I ask Jam-O, pointing at the odd bot brain.

written by Jam on Oct 26, 2010 12:10

"Cryo-R? No, I didn't see him... And this thing is an android, apparently some strange kind of bot that looks like a clone on the outside!" I reply to Mango-R.

"Hmm... That explains why the Station Monitor didn't mind living at such a low temperature... He did seem a bit cold and dead..."

I suddenly look over a L4-O.

"Pictures? Can I see?"

written by Gligar on Oct 26, 2010 16:15

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Joris-O goes over and looks through the pictures. Many of them appear to be from camera feeds. From the timestamps, they're several hourcycles old. But there's one of Jam-O looking angrily at the camera with his mouth open, as if he's shouting at someone. Either there are more cameras than Joris-O thought, or the picture came from... somewhere else.

L4-O picks up some of the slugthrower rounds and passes the pictures round. He notices that Massacrebot... stepped in something. The bot tries to wipe its foot clean on the floor, but it doesn't have much of an effect. It's opening mechanism tries to open, but glitches. Looks like something's stuck.

Mango-R inquires about Cryo-R, then notices the android. Jam-O explains it to him, and then wonders... before getting distracted by the pictures. L4-O hands him some to look at, including the one of him shouting.

Re-education centre

Looks like Kristos-R woke up.

He looks around and notices that he's still in the re-education centre. All the lights are off.

Everyone's left except for Cryo-R, who is busy filling out forms. In the dark. And he seems to be filling them out rather quickly despite this.

written by Jam on Oct 26, 2010 21:47

I wonder where this picture of me was taken... I don't remember shouting at any cameras... Though there are plenty of times I was shouting at commies, one of them might have been an android."

I look more closely at the background of that picture, and try to find something that might tell me where the picture came from. If the picture is clear enough, I also look closely at my eyes, hoping to see a reflection in them.

After that, I look at each of the other pictures.

written by Speeder on Oct 26, 2010 21:52

"Hum.... ok, this was unexpected."

I ask the bot to remain closed, then I walk to the android and pickup his entire head (from the body, yes....)

"Someone can stash this somewhere?"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 26, 2010 23:10

I walk over to and get on Nukabot, and start driving it again. I park it in the middle of the warehouse as I wait for the rest to finish up here before we attempt to proceed upwards.

written by 4616599 on Oct 26, 2010 23:19

"Ugh." I mumble as Speed-Y picks up the head.

Taking out the folded empty box, I offer it to Speed-Y. "Perhaps you could load the head in Nukabot or something?"

written by Gligar on Oct 27, 2010 00:50

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Jam-O inspects his picture a little closer. It looks like it was taken in Revolutionary Square, about the time he was talking to the cleaners. I guess he got a little overexcited, eh? 😊

He then looks at the other pictures. There's one of L4-O, back when he was RED, and of Speed-Y, again when he was RED. There are also pictures of Cryo-R, Joris-O, Jam-R, and John-R. John-R's picture is from the lift hall, shortly after he joined the team. Finally, there's a picture of Lucas-R, wearing an INFRARED jumpsuit.

Since he can't get to the memory card himself, Speed-Y decides on another approach, and attempts to grab the android's entire head. This requires both of Massacrebot's manipulators, in order to separate the head from the rest of the body, but, with a loud pop and a spray of blood, which promptly goes everywhere, it comes right off. Now he just needs a place to put it. How about that box that Joris-O has? Of course, he'll need to reassemble it first.

L4-O sets about moving Nukabot nearer the centre of the warehouse. In doing so, he discovers that it's become difficult to make Nukabot turn left.

written by Speeder on Oct 27, 2010 02:32

I continue holding the head.

"I cannot assemble the box with these manipulators... But I think the box would help."

written by 4616599 on Oct 27, 2010 02:54

"Wow! That's pretty much everyone in the troubleshooter team. They obviously have a mole somewhere, or more camera control than previously thought. Say, they seem to have missed out that clone- who was it? The one that kept flapping a towel around? Hmm."

Suddenly I notice some red paint seems to have been sprayed around a bit. Turning around, I briefly observe the very disturbing scene of a bloodstained Massacrebot holding a bleeding, torn 'commiebot' head before opening and assembling the box. I hold it out, not paying too much deliberate attention to the head. "There you go- I guess you drop it in, or something..."

written by Lightning4 on Oct 27, 2010 10:29

"Aww. Nukabot isn't handling too well right now. I wonder if there's a way we can fix it..."

I get off and inspect the left wheels and see if there's anything I can do.

written by Jam on Oct 27, 2010 12:53

"Wow, I got pretty excited when I was talking to those cleaners. Hmm... So one of those cleaners was an android? But they seemed so lifelike!"

I turn to John-R.

"I'm guessing you can't mind blast the androids, right? I guess we'll just have to shoot them to death..."

I suddenly notice that there seems to be a new set of blood splatters covering my jumpsuit. Good thing the jumpsuit is already RED, the blood blends right in. Hmm.. I should think about getting an ORANGE jumpsuit sometime soon...

Anyway, focusing back on the pictures, I comment to the group.

"Maybe one of us is actually a commie? Maybe even an android! Too bad John-R isn't a telepath too... Ha, the android's head would probably be filled with numbers..."

written by Gligar on Oct 27, 2010 16:30

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Speed-Y realises he can't assemble the box with Massacrebot's manipulators, so Joris-O does it for him.

Of course, this means he has to look at a blood-stained Massacrebot holding a severed head.

L4-O is concerned about Nukabot's handling problems. A quick look at the wheels reveals that a slug has punctured the left front tyre.

Jam-O has been inspecting the pictures. He suddenly gets paranoid... what if a member of the team is an android?

Re-education centre

Hey, look at that, Cryo-R has finished off all those forms! That was quick...

written by Speeder on Oct 27, 2010 17:14

After Joris finishes the box, I put the head inside the box.

"So, how is Nukabot, L4?"

I walk toward the cargo elevator location, and try to figure if Massacrebot and Nukabot can both fit inside at the same time.

written by Jam on Oct 27, 2010 23:24

I walk over to Mango-R.

"Hey Mango-R! How are you?"

I lean close to him and hold my head a few inches from his. I hold my PDC near his face to give us some light. I stare into his eyes, searching for some sign that he isn't really a real clone.

"It's strange that there aren't any pictures of you... Are you a treasonous commie android, Mango-R? I hope not."

written by Cryoburner on Oct 28, 2010 00:26

Having completed the forms, I finally reply to Kristos-R...

"You're alive! Unfortunately, we seem to be out of forms. Perhaps I completed them too quickly..."

After neatly arranging the stack of replacement pen request forms, I tuck my pen into a pocket, separate from the other fifty or so pens in my backpack, to avoid losing track of which one might be running low on ink, as having that occur at an inopportune moment and needing to swap pens whilst filling out another form might prove disastrous.

I then look around to see if I can find the box that the forms originally came in, or another similar box, so that they might be filed neatly inside until the sector's form processing center is back online.

written by Gligar on Oct 28, 2010 00:28

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

There, that's the head put away.

Jam-O is still paranoid. He proceeds to interrogate Mango-R, staring into his eyes in what he hopes is an intimidating manner. He certainly looks exactly like a real clone.

Re-education centre

Despite his injuries, Cryo-R piles up his forms neatly on a chair. The box seems to have gone missing.

written by Speeder on Oct 28, 2010 00:57

I continue staring at the elevator shaft, wondering if Massacrebot and Nukabot fit inside one single cargo elevator.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 28, 2010 05:15

"I'm okay I guess. What about you?"

I stand still as Jam-O approaches me. I respond to his question.

"It is odd. But I suppose I don't remember if I am or not..."

I try to look at the pictures myself, examining everything inside the picture, and on the other side.

written by Jam on Oct 28, 2010 12:11

"Hmm... You look exactly like a human... I don't think you are an android..."

I smile, relieved.

written by Gligar on Oct 28, 2010 15:33

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

It takes him a while, but Speed-Y eventually concludes that both bots would fit into the cargo lift. If it were here.

Meanwhile, Jam-O seems to have concluded that Mango-R is human after all. Mango-R sneaks a peek at the pictures, but can't get a good view from here.

written by Speeder on Oct 28, 2010 15:41

After a while, I turn back.

"So, how is the Nukabot L4?"

I turn to Jam.

"Can you go fetch Cryo and Kristos? We need to go... I don't know how much time it takes for the Friend Computer module to read the re-install tapes, if it take several hours we will be screwed if we take too long to get there."

written by Jam on Oct 28, 2010 21:17

Noticing that Mango-R seems to be trying to look at the pictures, I hand him the ones I have. Then I look over at Speed-Y.

"Okay! I'll go get them."

I start heading back to the re-education center, where I'm assuming Kristos-R still is...

written by Lightning4 on Oct 28, 2010 22:12

"A flat tire. Not sure what we can do about that... I wonder if there's a spare!"

I search Nukabot for any spare tires on the sides or underneath.

If I fail to find one I simply get back on Nukabot and wrestle the controls to follow.

"Lift? Why would we want to ride the cargo lift... I think this is the highest we can go. We need to use the stairs... or the lift hall."

written by Gligar on Oct 29, 2010 02:27

Distribution warehouse (Q level)

Speed-Y makes his decision: it's time to go. But to do that, he needs the team to be together. Jam-O goes to fetch the wayward two, after handing Mango the pictures.

L4-O looks for spare tyres, and can't find any. He just gets back on the bot instead.

Re-education centre

Jam-O enters. Shining his PDC around, he sees the two clones I the corner. Looks like Cryo-R decided to clean up all those Replacement Pen Request Forms. And did he... fill them in? In this short a time?

written by Jam on Oct 29, 2010 02:39

I walk over to Cryo-R and Kristos-R.

"Ah, there you are! Speed-Y says we need to go now. It's this way..."

I walk back to the door and wait for them there.

written by Speeder on Oct 29, 2010 04:22

After a while I ask.

"Seriously? That is not good then... I hope the stairs turn right at least..."

I turn to someone random.

"Can you check carefully to don't fall, how much shaft there are upward?"

written by Cryoburner on Oct 29, 2010 06:36

"Oh, hello! I finished ordering us some much needed supplies. I can only assume someone will happen upon this stack of request forms, deliver them to the proper location, and that they'll be processed and delivered on a timely basis."

"I also saved this clone... who... was in need of saving. He's much safer now."

I crawl toward the doorway, and out into the corridor, paying close attention to the temperature of the floor, but most certainly not inspecting it.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 29, 2010 10:31

I decide to drive on ahead to the stairwell since Nukabot will be an issue with the flat tire.

"I'll wait on the next level or two up, depending on how well this navigates."

First, I actually see if Nukabot will fit in the stairwell door first. If so, then I drive in and hope that I can replicate my results from the bunker.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 29, 2010 10:57

I take a look at the pictures. I notice that not just that I'm not anywhere, Kristos-R isn't either.

"That's interesting. They didn't get Kristos-R either."

I examine the backs of the pictures, checking to make sure that there's nothing back there.

written by Gligar on Oct 29, 2010 15:44

Re-education station

Cryo-R claims that the forms are request forms for vital equipment, before following Jam-O back into the corridor. Kristos-R doesn't follow.

Corridor Q2

Cryo-R notes that the temperature of the floor is optimal for its rated use.

Nukabot enters from the warehouse, and stops at the entrance to the stairwell. Would you look at that? It's too narrow.

L4-O gets a feeling that he's overlooking something.

Lucas-R wanders over to the stairwell, and has a look up it. He can't tell how high up it goes, so he just returns to the warehouse.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Speed-Y kind of gets the "overlooking things" vibe as well.

Mango-R keeps looking at those pictures, even turning them over. There's nothing on the backs of the pictures, though.

And... it sounds like another patrol is approaching. Just where are they coming from?

written by 4616599 on Oct 29, 2010 15:56

"Derek-G!" I mumble. "Where'd he go? Where'd he gone?" I head back down the corridor, and pause at the entrance to the lab, shield and weapon raised.

"Derek!" I whisper "Derek-G, you there? Might need your help." I scan for any trace of light in the lab.

written by Speeder on Oct 29, 2010 16:09

I try to figure with the bot hud help where the patrol is coming from.

Also I try to see if I can figure a sort of map, even if partial, of the location, using data of places already visited and sound data.

written by Jam on Oct 29, 2010 21:42

"Ah, good! Supplies are always needed! Hopefully some of those forms were laser pistol barrel request forms."

I walk down the corridor towards the distribution warehouse.

"Is that a patrol I hear?"

I look around for the source of the footsteps.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 29, 2010 23:19

"Hm. Too narrow."

I think.

"How much of the lift hall did you guys, eh.. Leave? Maybe the commies fixed the cargo lift for us by now."

I hear the patrol and ready my laser pistol.

written by Gligar on Oct 30, 2010 00:27

Corridor Q2

The door to the lab is closed.

From within, a voice whispers, "What is it?"

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Hmmm. Looks like Massacrebot isn't equipped to make maps, but it can still detect jackboot-like noises from the north.

Oh wait... yes it is... it's just more than a little fiddly and not as useful as desired. It seems to know about the basic layout of the sector, but beyond that, it's just a big blank, except for different-shaped dots which presumably represent clones and such. And the detection range for those is limited.

Jam-O re-enters, and also picks up on the jackboots from the north.

Other clones hear the jackboots as well, and either prepare or (in the case of... one or more) don't.

Corridor Q2

The voice from the lab is heard to mutter, "Already?"

written by Kristos on Oct 30, 2010 05:20

I grab my pipe and follow Cryo and ask anybody, "What happened? I must have been exhausted!"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 30, 2010 11:08

I aim my laser pistol in the general direction of the jackboots, ready to fire should anything appear. Or gun the throttle on Nukabot to run them down... one of the two!

written by Jam on Oct 30, 2010 14:13

"Hey Kristos-R! I think there's a commie patrol coming. We also killed a commie with a bot brain, it was weird... And another commie had pictures of all of us, except Mango-R and you. Strange... Oh, and are you an android? You seem to know a lot about numbers..."

Anticipating a lot of shooting, I take my laser pistol and exchange the partly used barrel for a fresh one. I aim the pistol at the north-most door, and fire at anything that walks through it.

written by 4616599 on Oct 30, 2010 15:00

"Turn that camera off, will you?"

written by Gligar on Oct 30, 2010 15:26

Corridor Q2

Looks like Kristos-R finally decided to join everyone. Jam-O swaps barrels, putting the partly-used one with the other partly-used barrel. I wonder if he's aware of CPU Mandate 23-563-6 concerning partly-used barrels?

From the lab, the voice answers, "What camera?"

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

L4-O gets ready with his laser pistol.

Lights are now seen through the open northern (well, north-western) door.

The present clones don't have to wait long to find the source, as the approaching PRPF patrol enters. They don't seem surprised to see you. "Drop your weapons!" one, carrying a cone rifle, shouts.

written by 4616599 on Oct 30, 2010 15:42

"Open the door, will you? We just might have things to discuss. Would be terribly inconvenient, and not quite suited for your purposes, if I had to blow it up, eh?"

I ready a grenade.

written by Speeder on Oct 30, 2010 20:39

I look at the cone rifle, and try to figure what shell is loaded on it.

Also I activate recording again...

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 31, 2010 00:31

I drop the truncheon in surprise, but try to move out of the way of the PRPF officer who's pointing the cone rifle. If successful, then I pull out my laser pistol, and attempt to fire at the cone rifle. Otherwise, I drop to the floor and try to crawl behind their range of sight.

written by Jam on Oct 31, 2010 01:10

"Do you really think you can defeat us with such a small, pathetic force?"

I decide not to drop my laser pistol, because following the orders of commies is treasonous. Instead, I just silently stare at them, hopefully in an intimidating way.

I wait for Speed-Y to give the signal to start attacking.

written by Gligar on Oct 31, 2010 01:55

Corridor Q2

The door to the lab opens, revealing a torch. Apparently, it's duct taped to an ice gun. "I thought you had a mission to attend to," Derek-G snaps. "Terminating random high-clearance clones will not help you. You are fined 200 credits."

Jam-O shouts into the warehouse.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Speed-Y looks at the lead communist's cone rifle, and realises that he can't identify what's loaded just by looking at it.

Mango-R stumbles as he tries to get out of the line of fire, and drops to the floor. He decides to hide behind Massacrebot instead. Massacrebot growls again.

Another communist blinks and looks uncertainly at the lead communist, who remains oblivions.

This might be because he seems to be in pain. He begins clutching his head, dropping the cone rifle in the process. The second communist retrieves the weapon and points it at the first. "Pull yourself together, comrade!"

A third communist fires between the first two! The slug hits some of Massacrebot's armour plating.

written by Speeder on Oct 31, 2010 02:22

I fire a burst on the cone rifle wielding commie.

Just plain as that.

written by Jam on Oct 31, 2010 03:30

That's a clear enough signal for me!

"Die commies!"

I smile, aim at the head of the commie that shot Massacrebot, and fire.

"DIE!"

Then I target the commie with the cone rifle. If he is still standing after Massacrebot's attack, I shoot at his head too.

written by Mingamango181 on Oct 31, 2010 04:19

I pull out the laser pistol, and attempt to fire two shots, one at the one who hit Massacrebot, and the other one who has the cone rifle. Then I observe what happens to them.

written by 4616599 on Oct 31, 2010 09:36

"Agh!" I mumble as a higher clearance clone fines me again. "Do you have any idea what's going on out there! Anyone could be treasonous!"

written by Lightning4 on Oct 31, 2010 10:18

I take the opportunity to fire at the communist now wielding the cone rifle, regardless of how injured he already is!

written by Gligar on Oct 31, 2010 16:55

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Looks like that cone rifle is attracting attention. First from Massacrebot, as it first its own slugthrower. Out of three slugs, two hit their mark, one to the groin, and the other to the chest of the cone rifle commie. The other passes over him. But that's because he's collapsed to the floor.

[247]

The lead commie draws one of those 'revolvers' and fires. Too early... he hits the floor just to the left of Massacrebot.

Jam-O, at the door, ignores these two and goes for the third. He doesn't manage to hit the head, but he does get the chest. It's almost as effective in felling the communist.

Good enough. He adjusts his aim, this time pointing at Cone Rifle Commie. However, he's already unconscious.

A fourth communist enters, and also fires. His slug hits Jam-O right in the chest. He collapses.

Mango-R's turn. He fires two shots... fatally hitting both Cone Rifle Commie and the third commie.

L4-O doesn't care. He also fires at Cone Rifle Commie, who doesn't move or do anything.

Corridor Q2

"I know that the communists are attacking," Derek-G answers through the door. "That's pretty obvious."

written by Jam on Oct 31, 2010 17:40

I lay on the floor, bleeding, and try to remain conscious.

written by Speeder on Oct 31, 2010 19:37

I fire a burst in the commie that shot Jam.

He made me unhappy, this is treason, that must be punished.

I am the dark harbinger of law.

written by Lightning4 on Oct 31, 2010 21:07

I fire at the lead commie so he doesn't get any more bright ideas while under a mental blast.

written by Gligar on Nov 01, 2010 01:54

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Jam-O is unable to hold on, and loses consciousness.

Massacrebot steps forward heavily, and its slugthrower speaks again. Again, two slugs hit their mark, felling the fourth communist. The third slug continues on, hitting a fifth communist who was about to enter right in the head.

The lead communist fires again. His slug causes another dent in Massacrebot's armour.

L4-O returns fire. But those revolvers are louder than you'd think. He gets distracted by the sound and misses.

written by Jam on Nov 01, 2010 02:20

I lay there, unconscious, in a pool of blood.

Hopefully someclone will come to save me... Though it might already be too late.

written by Kristos on Nov 01, 2010 04:34

I drag Jam from the line of fire and take one of Jam's first aid kits and whatever pills I think will help him and administer medical attention. Of course I'm probably not cleared to know how to do that, so I take my best shot at it. And hope

I am actually cleared to do it. (I've noticed that I'm best at doing anything that does not involve attacking enemies.)²⁴²

written by Speeder on Nov 01, 2010 05:04

I ask the massacrebot for damage report.

And I continue shooting all alive commies that are NOT shooting the bot. (Since obviously, the one shooting the bot is wasting his ammo... the others aiming on flesh are far more dangerous).

written by 4616599 on Nov 01, 2010 10:08

I nearly facepalm at how awkward the situation has become, then remember there likely is a CPU mandate against facepalming before loyal high-clearance clones.

"Right, the commies are attacking." I mumble. "Guess I should be getting busy! Uhh, yes, I'm sure you're busy in there too." I listen for a while more, then if I don't hear anything interesting, proceed cautiously toward the warehouse.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 01, 2010 11:22

I remember the amount of shots remaining, and decide to unscrew the barrel of the laser pistol. I throw it to where the PRPF emerged, and I screw another laser pistol barrel onto the body. I shoot at it.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Jam-O continues lying there.

But not for long. Kristos-R runs up and pulls Jam-O back into the corridor.

Corridor Q2

He checks Jam-R over. It doesn't look good.

Good thing Jam-O has all those first aid kits. Now... how does he actually use them? He doesn't recall having any training... Oh well, he thinks. Let's have a go anyway!

Looks like half of the kit is given over to pills of various sorts, some of which he recognises. He tries those first.

Meanwhile, having vague memories of a CPU Mandate, most likely 214/721/8244-a-c, Joris-O is attempting not to facepalm at the situation he's in. You'll be pleased to learn that he succeeds. After this, he listens at the door for a moment, but doesn't hear anything. Good. He walks past Jam-O and Kristos-R (and everyone else in the corridor), arriving at the door to the warehouse.

²⁴² KRISTOS: (OOC: I don't have time to respond between every one of your updates, Gligar, so feel free to choose actions for my player if I do not specify. If you want to. 😊)

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

As he arrives, a slugshot from one of the communists makes him duck reflexively, before he notices that it impacted the wall to his left.

More laser-and slug-fire ensues. In particular, Massacrebot lets loose with another burst of slugs, with each slug hitting one communist apiece in various places. Nice.

Incidentally, the bot reports that there is no damage to important systems.

Mango-R has thrown a laser pistol barrel at the still-growing throng of communists, and is about to shoot at it. But before he does, a communist attempts to shoot at him... but ends up jamming his slugthrower. Heh.

Mango-R then gets round to shooting, just as John-R and L4-O do the same. All three shots hit their target. End result, one injured communist, one dead, and a squealing laser barrel.

Corridor Q2

Kristos-R continues trying to patch up Jam-O. The bleeding seems to have stopped, at least.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 01, 2010 19:51

I shoot again at the squealing laser barrel, then take cover behind Massacrebot quickly afterwards.

written by Speeder on Nov 01, 2010 22:17

I take notice of the laser barrel, and I expect the bot will withstand the explosion...

So I keep shooting.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 02, 2010 00:04

I decide to switch to my cone rifle since there's yet more commies approaching. I load up Turbo with any shell I have left and fire it into the crowd!

written by Jam on Nov 02, 2010 00:30

I continue laying on the floor, only now I'm not bleeding.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 02, 2010 01:23

I crawl over to Jam-O.

"Don't worry! You can pull through! The floor is at an optimal temperature, after all!"

(For standard walking procedures, anyway.)

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Mango-R fires again. Unfortunately, he manages to miss the barrel, which continues to squeal. A communist picks it up, as if he's about to throw it back, only to be called out on it by three slugs from Massacrebot's slugthrower. Needless to say, he drops it again. Followed shortly by him falling on it.

And then L4-O raises the stakes by pulling out Turbo! He quickly loads it and fires.

The warehouse is suddenly bathed in dazzlingly bright light! Looks like he found a flare shell.

Everyone is dazzled by the light, except the bots, and John-R, who was concentrating, and had his eyes closed. Some of the communists recoil and bump into each other. A couple are pushed to the floor.

Corridor Q2

Some light spills into the corridor. Enough, at least, to attract the attention of Lucas-R, who wonders what the light is. He goes to investigate.

Kristos-R ignores it, and continues working on Jam-O. Though there are no splints or anything, he manages to stabilise that broken bone from a while back. But there's still the unconsciousness. And maybe more...

Cryo-R offers some encouragement.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 02, 2010 06:09

I almost instinctively fire at the source, but I can't see where. I drop the laser pistol, and feel a headache coming on, probably thanks to the squealing barrel, and the high clearance light.

"It's that feeling again, and it's that colour again..."

written by Jam on Nov 02, 2010 12:16

I continue laying on the floor, only now I'm being bathed in a nice and probably treasonous ULTRAVIOLET glow.

"Whoa!" I drop to the ground in surprise, covering myself with my kevlar shield.

written by Speeder on Nov 02, 2010 16:16

I cringe inside the bot, even if the thing does not actually blind me.

Then I realize that since I am seeing it by a camera, the momentary flash on the screen cannot blind me, making me happy, since I can do other stuff while commies cannot see me.

The other stuff, is try to figure how much alive commies are there, and in nearby rooms, using the handy sound detection alongside of looking at the commies to see the obvious.

written by Gligar on Nov 02, 2010 16:59

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Mango-R reflexively fires his laser (albeit not hitting anything) before dropping it.

Joris-O* drops to the floor and shields himself.

* (not Jam-O, who is still unconscious in the corridor. For how long is anyone's guess.)

Speed-Y flinches, before remembering that he's not looking at it directly. He has Massacrebot count the commies.

Judging by the mass of targeting reticules suddenly appearing on the HUD, there are lots... at least thirty nearby.

The communists try to recover, but can't.

The barrel continues to squeal.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 02, 2010 21:21

Since I wasn't quite expecting that from a slugthrower, I remain rather dazzled from the flare. I fumble around and attempt to reload Turbo with the time I bought us.

written by Speeder on Nov 02, 2010 22:06

Upon noticing there are lot of commies, I try to see around me if anyone is in danger of getting caught by possible explosions, and if that is the case, I attempt to nudge them to a safer place (like inside corridors or behind Massacrebot).

Then I fire at their dropped cone rifle.

written by Jam on Nov 02, 2010 22:40

I dream that I'm floating, surrounded by ULTRAVIOLET light.

Hmm... Sounds treasonous... I'd better wake up soon...

I attempt to regain consciousness.

written by Kristos on Nov 03, 2010 00:40

Convinced that I have done all I can to secure Jam-O's health, I turn my attention to the flashing light flooding into the corridor. Hearing the vaguely familiar squealing barrel sound, I make sure that we're not in danger of projectiles from a possible explosion (or random gunfire.)

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Still blinded, L4-O fumbles around in his backpack. Now where do those cone rifle shells get to? That seems to be them. But ow! Fred is thirsty, it seems.

His vision begins to return, letting him load Turbo properly.

John-R seems to be getting his vision back as well. He looks at one of the commuists and concentrates. But nothing happens.

Massacrebot starts moving. A manipulator touches John-R, nudging him back behind the bot, before the other manipulator, upon which is the heavy slugthrower, raises, and the weapon fi-

-Nothing happens.

On the HUD, the message SLUG JAM appears.

The communists also seem to be coming round. One reaches for his own slugthrower.

Corridor Q2

Jam-O remains unconscious, though he does seem to stir uncomfortably.

Kristos-R goes to investigate the light, having done all he can think of.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

The barrel continues to squeal.

written by Speeder on Nov 03, 2010 04:54

I try to figure where the slug jammed... In case it is on the arm I try to shake it to see if the slug gets free.

Anyway, if the thing unjams, I try shooting their cone rifle again.

If it remains stuck, I fire a HE shell on them instead.

written by Jam on Nov 03, 2010 12:44

I continue trying to wake up...

Is that distant echos of fighting I hear? How nice...

written by 4616599 on Nov 03, 2010 14:41

Noting the clunking noises coming from the bot's gun, I try to remain shielded, and let fly with the grenade. (unpinned and throwing both the pin and charge as per tradition)

written by Gligar on Nov 03, 2010 19:03

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

While Speed-Y tries to figure out where the jam is, Joris-O lets fly with a grenade.

Somehow, the grenade manages to bounce off Nukabot, and ends up dropping down the lift shaft. The pin ends up on the floor directly in front of Joris-O. Nothing else seems to happen.

Speed-Y manages to clear the jam (expelling two slugs) and fires again. One miss, which hits Nukabot ("Oi!"), and two hits, which hit the cone rifle.

The impacts cause the loaded shell to detonate with a small explosion, and a flood of gas.

It's not VIOLET toxin this time, though. This stuff just puts up a thick fog that distorts sound and vision.

Shortly after, another explosion occurs: the squealing barrel.

Considering that it's right in the middle of the communists, I'd imagine that a few are caught in the explosion. It's difficult to tell with the distorting gas around, though.

I do know that, apart from a few bruises and burns, the loyal team manages to survive.²⁴³

Corridor Q2

Hey, it looks like the explosion had a beneficial effect: Jam-O just woke up.

written by Jam on Nov 03, 2010 23:29

"Oooooooh... My chest..."

²⁴³ GLIGAR: ooc: partly because there's food waiting and I've taken too long to do this... because I keep getting INTERRUPTED! 🍷

I try to lift my head enough to look at my chest, and try to figure out how much damage the slug did. I try breathing deeply a bit... Is my lung punctured? I try to wiggle my fingers and toes... Any paralysis? Does it seem like I'll survive?

I point my laser pistol at the door to the distribution warehouse. As long as I can still move my fingers, I can still shoot!

Then I look over at Kristos-R and Cryo-R.

"Hey guys. Do you think I'm gonna make it?"

written by Gligar on Nov 04, 2010 01:24

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Still can't make anything out in here. There are some vague blobs moving around on the commie side, so I guess some of them are alive. The loyal team seems to have frozen up, though.

Corridor Q2

Jam-O weakly tries to lift his head, and move things. It's difficult to breathe. Vision is kind of chancy. But he can still move his laser pistol. Sort of.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 04, 2010 08:28

I hear the squealing turn into screaming, and then a loud thump.

"About time it went quiet."

I close my eyes and massage them, trying to clear out the headache, and try to search for my laser pistol.

written by Jam on Nov 04, 2010 12:29

"There are still commies out there, right?" I ask weakly.

I take out my ME card, my PDC, the brevet, the old Com 1 unit, two RED laser barrels, and two ORANGE laser pistol barrels. I give them to Kristos-R.

"In case I don't make it, could you give this to my next clone?"

A dark look crosses my face.

"I wonder... What would happen if 15 laser pistol barrels, 4 grenades, a can of B3, and a clone, all exploded at the same time?"

written by 4616599 on Nov 04, 2010 16:14

Right. Commies and all. Guess I'm quite limited in choices. I fire the blaster at them!

written by Gligar on Nov 04, 2010 17:00

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Relieved that the loud noises are over, Mango-R tries, unsuccessfully, to clear out his headache, then feels around for his laser pistol. Ah, there it is.

Joris-O pulls out his blaster and fires at the indistinct commie shapes. Looks like he hit one.

Corridor Q2

Perhaps realising that there's not much he can do, Jam-O passes some of his equipment to Kristos-R to give to his next clone. He starts pondering explosions, and realises that if his remaining equipment were to explode, it would take out quite a few communists... and pretty much the whole warehouse. If he were in there.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 04, 2010 19:51

Unsure of who is who, I try to keep my eyes focused on the moving blobs, pointing the laser pistol at the nearest one.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 04, 2010 21:54

I fire my cone rifle again, hoping those are all commies out there.

written by Jam on Nov 04, 2010 22:26

"Hmm... Blowing myself up sounds treasonous, and wasteful. Maybe it's a bad idea."

Not knowing what else to do, I decide to rest a bit.

written by Kristos on Nov 04, 2010 23:40

I take the supplies Jam hands me and make a mental note to avoid accidentally using the ORANGE barrels. "I'll do my best to get them to you." I then think about how odd that sounded. "Take care."

After that, I turn and head towards the room where all the action is taking place. Listening to the sounds of battle, I prepare my own laser pistol to help the others hold off the commies.

written by Gligar on Nov 05, 2010 01:27

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Though everyone is still obscured by the gas, and the... less than adequate lighting, Mango-R still attempts to shoot the communists. And... I think he just pulled off a headshot.

Yes... the gas is clearing up a bit now. I can see that another communist has fallen. She seems to have... lost her head.

L4-O also keeps firing. He has an easier time, due to the gas clearing slightly. His latest shot, for instance, hits the wall close to a communist-looking thing, causing a small explosion, wounding a couple of commie-blobs. Well, I assume so. There's a bunch of RED blobs flying around over there.

Kristos-R enters from the corridor. His first impression is one of... confusion. That gas is still thick enough to dull everything. Though he can still make out a big metal-ish thing that can only be Massacrebot.

Corridor Q2

Jam-O decides against blowing up right now. He chooses to rest instead. Well, it has been a while since most of you slept.

written by Jam on Nov 05, 2010 02:22

Feeling a bit disappointed that I can't go and shoot commies too, I decide to try very carefully dragging myself towards the other end of the hall, where the lab is (though I don't know it's a lab). Maybe there's something useful there...

written by Speeder on Nov 05, 2010 02:41²⁴⁴

I wait a bit, not in a rush to shoot stuff when I am not sure of what I am shooting.

written by Kristos on Nov 05, 2010 06:51

I can't make out forms enough to know what to shoot and what not to shoot. So I retreat into the corridor and attempt to find a way around. I first try the first door on my right. If that is locked, I try the first door on my left. If I manage to open a door, I carefully observe what is inside, with my laser pistol ready to fire if I spot a confirmed commie.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 05, 2010 13:36

I decide to put Turbo away and watch from the distance as well. I keep my foot on the accelerator of Nukabot, ready to mow down any commies that decide to get too close.

written by Gligar on Nov 05, 2010 16:39

Corridor Q2

Jam-O finds it difficult to fall asleep. Instead, he tries to move back down the corridor. Progress is excruciatingly painful and slow. Needless to say, he doesn't get far.

Kristos-R backs into the corridor, since he can't make anything out through the gas. He tries some doors. The first one, to his left, is the stairwell that L4-O tried to drive Nukabot into. The sound of footsteps echoes from above and below.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Speed-Y decides to wait a bit longer. Massacrebot might be able to track the communists, but he can't.

L4-O waits, ready to impale more communists on Nukabot's forks.

John-R seems to be concentrating. But nothing seems to happen.

A slugshot is heard. Looks like a communist just fired, and hit one of his comrades.

written by Speeder on Nov 05, 2010 20:44

I move the weapons at the last position (the one they hit the cone rifle).

Then I aim them a few degrees upward (to hit stuff farther than the rifle). Then I rotate away from the position that I know I've hit the forkbot, and then I fire a burst if this position was not the last position of any of my own allies.

²⁴⁴ SPEEDER: (OOC: erm, I went to a convention to be a speaker, and although I took a laptop with me, it has been formatted, and thus had no drivers installed 😊 including the wireless one 😊)

written by Jam on Nov 06, 2010 00:24

Deciding that moving is too painful, I stop.

A bit unhappy at not being able to help anyone, I close my eyes and try sleeping instead. There's not much else I can do...

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 06, 2010 01:07

I watch the blobs continue to move. I start waving at the air, trying to get a more clear view of what I'm going to shoot at next.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 06, 2010 01:12

"No! Don't die! You can make it! Just hold on!"

I locate a bottle of candies in my backpack, and stuff five of them in Jam-O's mouth.

written by 4616599 on Nov 06, 2010 01:31

Pinned down, I shoot again(trying to aim at the same target)! Well, there's not much else I can do.

written by Gligar on Nov 06, 2010 02:11

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

As the gas dissipates further, Speed-Y adjusts Massacrebot's aim manually. He points in the direction of the cone rifle, then aims this way and that way... and seems to be pointing at the communists. They're now identifiable as such, and are even beginning to appear different. Massacrebot fires into the throng.

The first shot fells yet another communist. The second... jams the slugthrower. Again.

A couple of communists fire! The first slug hits Nukabot, causing its speakers to start emitting a low-volume static. The second seems to hit a third communist.

That second shot causes a fourth communist to fire at the second! He goes down as well.

Mango-R tries to get a good view of the communists, and realises that he can now see them much better.

A fifth communist fires! His slug just narrowly misses Mango-R's right ear.

Joris-O fires his blaster again, hitting his communist in the right arm.

Corridor Q2

Jam-O again tries to sleep. It's not like he can do much else.

Cryo-R seems determined to make sure he doesn't, though. He fishes out five pep pills and tries to force Jam-O to eat them. But Jam-O refuses to open his mouth.

written by Speeder on Nov 06, 2010 02:46

I again shake the jammed weapon, but this time taking care to not shake it in direction of friends.

Then I ask for a damage report, and status report, and diagnostics of the annoying weapon.

written by Kristos on Nov 06, 2010 04:34

I try to get in a safe position behind the stairwell where I can fire from if need be. If it sounds like somebody is approaching or nearby, I prepare to fire should I see a commie. Otherwise, I attempt to cross the room and look beyond the first door that I can open. If I can't open any doors, I return to my post at the other side of the room.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 06, 2010 05:22

I shoot back immediately at the one who nearly shot my ear off.

"You want to deafen me? Ask me first!" I yell.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 06, 2010 09:18

"NO! Nukabot!"

I take out my cone rifle again, load it, and fire into the crowd of commies.

"Are you okay Nukabot?"

I try to play with the controls a little bit after firing to see if Nukabot is still functional.

written by 4616599 on Nov 06, 2010 12:21

Since things are clearing up, I unpin and fling another grenade(both pin and charge, obviously), firing at roughly where L4-O is firing.

Ah! I'm being attacked!

I reflexively lift my laser pistol up and point it at my attacker. I pull the tr- oh wait, it's just Cryo-R... I relax.

Hmm... He seems to be wanting me to eat a treasonous number of pep pills.

"Um... Thanks for wanting to help, but I think I'll be okay without them. But I know what you can do! Could you watch the doors for me, and wake me up if any commies walk through? Thanks."

I try again to fall asleep.

written by Gligar on Nov 06, 2010 17:39

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Massacrebot again shakes its slugthrower around, and ends up hitting a communist in the face. It doesn't seem to have cleared up the jam, though.

Its damage report notes that the slugthrower is jammed, that there are 32 slugs and 29 cone rifle shells remaining, and that there is some minor damage to the armour plating. In addition, a couple of small motors seems to have seized up.

A moment later, an addendum notes that the feed mechanism seems to have tried to load two slugs into the thrower at once.

Mango-R retaliates after almost losing an ear. He zaps the offending communist right in the chest, felling him.

Distraught about possibly losing Nukabot, L4-O lets Turbo speak once again. And speak it does. Its words are so powerful that four communists just... drop dead when they hear them.

As he's checking on Nukabot, Joris-O lobs another grenade. This time, there are results. The grenade's body explodes, felling three more communists as they're about to fire.

A couple of communists falter, and decide to fall back.

Nukabot completes its self-tests. "I'm not too bad," it replies through the static. "I just need to be careful about this wheel."

John-R concentrates again. A communist clutches his head and suddenly pushes his comrades out of the way, running off.

Corridor Q2

Thinking he's under attack, Jam-O summons the strength to point his laser at the threat: Cryo-R. But he stops himself before he can shoot, and goes back to sleep.

Kristos-R gets ready. The bootstep noises continue, and begin to get louder. But no communist appears.

Disappointed, he tries another door. It's locked.

written by Speeder on Nov 06, 2010 22:56

I attempt to switch the slugthrower to semi-auto instead of burst.

Then I ask the bot to record all that report to the field test report.

Then I try again to clear the Jam. Oops... the jam.

written by Jam on Nov 06, 2010 23:09

I dream of happier times, like a few hourcycles ago, when I was happily blasting away at commies while riding on top of a forkbot:

"WEEEEEEEE!"

Happy that I finally got a chance to ride the forkbot, I happily glance over at Speed-O. Seeing him happily clinging on to the back of the forkbot, obviously enjoying himself, makes me even happier.

"Isn't this fun! Faster, forkbot, faster!!!"

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 06, 2010 23:30

If there are any communists left still standing, I fire at them. If there aren't any, then I start looking for my truncheon which I dropped.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 07, 2010 01:07

"Phew, okay. You're good then."

I put Turbo away since I'm running low on cone rifle shells. I try my laser pistol again... hopefully it still has a few shots left.

If there are any commies left in the room to shoot that is.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

The gas seems to have cleared out completely.

Speed-Y tries a hand gesture, hoping it'll switch the slugthrower to semi-auto mode. And indeed it does.

Massacrebot's HUD confirms data entry.

Mango-R keeps firing. What with communists leaving, there are only a few left. However, this means that shooting one now requires more precise aiming, which Mango-R manages to screw up.

Then it's L4-O's turn. Switching back to his laser pistol, he fires off a shot. And it's a pretty good one, causing another communist to fall.

One of the remaining communists returns fire! John-R is hit in the leg.

From somewhere, something can be heard squealing.

With a faint tinkling noise, the slugs lodged in Massacrebot's slugthrower become dislodged and fall to the ground.

Corridor Q2

Jam-O drifts off to sleep. I wonder what he's dreaming about?

written by Speeder on Nov 07, 2010 03:05

I check if the slugs are unspent, if they can be reused, I say.

"Can someone catch those slugs for me? I just figured slug ammo is quite limited..."

I try to kill some more retreating commies, starting with the one that shot John.

Of course, trying to not shoot to fast, to avoid barrel loading issues again.

written by Jam on Nov 07, 2010 16:06

I continue dreaming...

I'm happily shooting commies, when more suddenly appear. A lot more. And they seem to be armed with a mixture of cone rifles and rocket launchers. Oh, and there's a giant flaming twenty-armed docbot-android thing running towards us, waving its chainsaws and its needles and its slugthrowers around.

Oh wait, is that a rocket heading towards us?

written by 4616599 on Nov 07, 2010 16:10

Ignoring the squealing for now(unless it's coming from near me...) I fire at any remaining commies, and check my blaster's power level.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

John-R misses being shot in the head by about 20cm. In retaliation, he concentrates. One more communist falls, joining his injured and dying comrades on the floor.

Speed-Y has a look at his dropped slugs. He can't tell due to the Inadequate™ lighting whether they're in good condition or not.

Regardless, he instructs Massacrebot to attempt to instruct Massacrebot to fire at John's attacker. Instead, he causes some sort of error. Not that it matters, since the communist in question is on the floor clutching his head.

Joris-O continues firing. However, it looks like all this shooting is too much for the blaster, as it suddenly heats up, glowing a dull RED, burning Joris-O's hand. He's able to throw it at the wall, where the impact seems to dislodge the power pack. Both the blaster and the power pack drop to the floor, smoking and blackening.

Corridor Q2

Jam-O continues dreaming. He's twitching rather violently, though.

written by Speeder on Nov 07, 2010 18:05

I laugh at the commie, then as the battle winds down, I try to figure the best route toward the V level...

Like possible location of stairs, lifts, etc...

written by 4616599 on Nov 07, 2010 19:19

"Ow! Ow! Ow, ow!" I wave my burnt hand, yelping.

Slightly dazed, I huddle behind my kevlar shield, and ask the remaining commies. "Hello. You wouldn't have anything I could cool my hand in, do you? You know, something cool? I'd like to order something cool..."

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 07, 2010 19:52

With not many of the enemy forces left, I move quickly to grab my dropped truncheon. I swing it at them if they're still alive.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 07, 2010 20:23

I begin to watch the doors as instructed, but notice some twitching from Jam-O, who appears to be unconscious now.

"Nooo! He's dying! Candies might give him energy, but he seems unable to take them..."

I check my backpack, and pull out a blank interoffice memo and toolkit. I fold the memo to make a nice pocket out of it, and using pliers, carefully crush three candies over the provisional paper pocket. After making a fine powder of them, I pour it into Jam-O's nose as he's breathing in.

"That should work! You're going to be OK!"

I return the tools and folded pocket to my backpack, and slip the other two candies I removed previously into a pocket of my jumpsuit. I then go back to watching the doors. Since Jam-O seemed to think it was important for them to be watched, I watch them very, very carefully, noting any interesting or uninteresting aspects of them.

written by Jam on Nov 08, 2010 00:31

Suddenly, everything in my dream goes much faster, and flashes strange colors.

The explosion sends the forkbot flying. Strangely, I seem to hang in the air as the forkbot falls back to the ground. I watch, helpless, as it hits the ground and explodes.

"NOOOOOOO!!!"

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Speed-Y thinks. How to get to V Level, and the compnode? There's the stairwell, but does that go to V Level? More to the point, can he find the compnode? He asks Massacrebot for any ideas. It suggests to go north.

Joris-O seems to get a little confused, and asks the remaining communists for help, but they just laugh at him. Either that, or they're laughing back at Speed-Y...

Mango-R grabs his truncheon and attacks them. He manages to miss them and just provokes them to laugh at him again.

All this laughing, and none of them think to fire? Odd...

Corridor Q2

Cryo-R begins watching the doors. Absolutely nothing happens. How boring.

Boring enough that he gets distracted by Jam-O's twitching. Perhaps "candies" would help with that?

Of course, just trying to force them into Jam-O's mouth didn't work so well last time. Instead, Cryo-R gets the idea to crush them. Three of them, to be exact. That done, he tries to pour the powder into Jam-O's nose, and ends up spilling most of the powder onto his face instead.

Enough of the powder goes where he intended for there to be at least some effect. Jam-O begins twitching more violently, and if he were awake, he'd feel his heart pound dangerously. In fact... yes, he jerks awake again.

But Cryo-R doesn't notice, having returned to watching the doors. What with the Inadequate™ lighting, he doesn't notice anything happening, either interesting or uninteresting.

written by Speeder on Nov 08, 2010 04:17

I notice all the laughing and laugh even more, in an attempt to make the commies die of laughter.

written by 4616599 on Nov 08, 2010 08:41

written by Lightning4 on Nov 08, 2010 09:22

I laugh a little bit too, but not having paid attention, I'm not sure at what.

I check my laser pistol to see if it is the one squealing. If so, I throw the barrel as hard as I can into the commie throng while they're distracted.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 08, 2010 11:02

I run away, hurt emotionally. I identify it as the trouble. And I as a troubleshooter must shoot it. I switch to my laser pistol, and shoot at the one laughing the loudest.

written by Jam on Nov 08, 2010 13:00²⁴⁵

I reach my hands to my face and feel the white powder that's on it. I feel my heart beat dangerously fast. I look angrily over at Cryo-R (at least, as angrily as I can while under the effects of the pep pills).

"What's happening?! What did you do to me?! Is this a... crushed pep pill?"

I start laughing, really hard.

written by Gligar on Nov 08, 2010 17:28

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Everyone... starts... laughing? Please don't tell me they've... hang on, let me check...

... well, I don't know if they have, but someone's released the EverLaugh.K memetic virus into the air. That'll explain why everyone's laughing.

L4-O resists enough that he can check his laser pistol. Sure enough, the barrel's showing no charge rings. He discards it in the direction of the communists.

Mango-R also resists. He pulls out a laser pistol and, identifying the laughter as trouble, shoots the person who is laughing the loudest. And that would be... Joris-O! Luckily for him, Mango-R fumbles as he's about to fire... EverLaugh.K must be having an effect.

Corridor Q2

It's getting in here, too. On waking up, Jam-O notices the crushed pill powder on his face, and manages to brush it off. He realises that Cryo-R must be responsible, but is too injured to do anything about it. A shame, really. He jitters like a clone who just overdosed on Coffeelyke. He doesn't feel appreciably happy about it. (Pep pills aren't happy pills.) Regardless, he laughs. He kind of has to.

written by Speeder on Nov 08, 2010 19:22

"Ok... that is not good, who used some laugh gas shell? Or whatever?"

²⁴⁵ JAM:(ooc: Um... What exactly are the effects of a pep pill? Do I just have a lot of energy, or am I really happy too?)

written by Cryoburner on Nov 08, 2010 23:50

"You're okay! While you were out, you decided to have some pix-y-lyke candy. I've been carefully watching the doors as best as the inadequate lighting allows in the mean time."

"Come to think of it, I've only been watching the doors in this corridor though. There must be a lot of doors elsewhere that I haven't been able to watch from here. And what about the backsides of the doors? I assume those might need watching as well..."

I proceed to check the three remaining unexplored doors in corridor Q2 to see if any of them will open. If any do open, I look to see if there are any additional doors hidden behind them.

written by Jam on Nov 09, 2010 01:04

"You did this to me! Really, how many crushed pep pills did you pour into my nose? You're trying to kill me, aren't you? Next, you'll probably 'accidentally' drop a grenade on my face or something! Get away from me, go get instructions from Joris-O or something! Just stay far away from me!"

I look over towards the door to the distribution warehouse, and shout into it.

"Mango-R? Lucas-R? L4-O? Help! I'm being poisoned by Cryo-R!"

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Looks like everyone's still laughing in here. But the virus should fade soon.

Corridor Q2

Cryo-R claims that Jam-O eats "candy" during his sleep. Odd. But Jam-O isn't buying it. He calls for help. "I'm here, sir," responds Lucas-R. "Cryo-R, stop what you're doing."

A rattling from behind Lucas-R betrays Cryo-R's position. Seems that Cryo-R is trying to open some locked doors. Lucas-R uses the noise to point his laser pistol, and ends up physically poking Cryo-R with it. Now he really has been poked with a laser 😊

written by Jam on Nov 09, 2010 02:16

"He he he he he... Oh, Lucas-R! Cryo-R shoved some crushed pep pills up my nose while I was sleeping, and now I'm all jittery! Ha ha... And my heart feels strange, like it's beating really fast! Heh heh... Do you know anything that can counteract the effects of the pills?"

I burst out laughing.

"Ha ha ha ha! You poked him with your laser, he he he! Wasn't he saying something about being poked by lasers? Ha ha he he! Funny!"

written by Cryoburner on Nov 09, 2010 02:34

"Oh, hello! Don't worry, while he was sleeping, he was twitching around a lot, so I think he was having a bad dream. He seems to have been poked quite pokedly, and has leaked much of his leakables, so I think it's causing him to be somewhat delusional. All we can do now is provide him with proper medical attention and possibly candy and hope for the best. Oh, and watch doors. He apparently wants doors to be watched. I've been watching them, but not much has happened, aside from you walking through that one."

"Say, what's everyone been doing out there? It sounds like everyone's having an awfully good time, aside from the occasional tortured scream. I'd come to the party too, but I have important work to do. Perhaps everyone else could continue with the mission at some point too. There seems to be a stairwell over there, which very well might lead to mission-lyke places."

With that, I proceed to the stairwell and look up, to see if it's possible to tell how far upward it extends.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 09, 2010 10:27

I burst into a giggling fit, and almost miss Jam-O's call for help. I stumble over to where Jam-O is, since I can't stop giggling.

written by 4616599 on Nov 09, 2010 10:57

"Ha ha ha ha ha ha, oh, ha ha ha ha, so funny! Ha ha ha ha ha." Almost completely dazed, I look around checking for any living commies that I can safely hug.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 09, 2010 12:10

I idly wonder if I was the one that fired this gas, but am still a little disoriented to know for sure.

"Hehehe..hehe. Was that me? I dunn-hehehe... sorry."

I remember I threw a laser pistol barrel. I watch it while giggling a little.

"Hehe... commie scum... Hee"

Corridor Q2

Lucas-R can't help but laugh. "Hahaha! Poked by lasers! That's a good one! But multiple pep pills at once? Not good."

Cryo-R is shoved against a wall. "Are you out of your mind? Everyclone knows that you only. take. one! If you want more, you don't use pep pills!"

Lucas-R lets Cryo-R go and adds, "Depending on how much you actually ingested, sir, the effects should fade within a few minutecycles." But Jam-O feels as jittery as ever.

Of course, Cryo-R isn't going to just do nothing. He goes and peers up the stairwell, to find that he can't see how far up or down it goes.

Mango-R stumbles over, and trips up over Jam-O, since he can't see in the reduced light yet. And still he giggles.

It looks like the memetic virus is beginning to wear off, though.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

It's wearing off here, as well. Just... slowly. The communists are still laughing at each other, and... one of them seems to be having trouble breathing. In fact, he's kind of not breathing.

Not that it really matters any more, because that squealing laser barrel just exploded. They... stop laughing rather quickly. In a comical fashion.²⁴⁶

written by Jam on Nov 09, 2010 23:16

"Heh heh heh... A lot of powder ended up on my face... He he... I'm not sure how much Cryo-R crushed up, though. I might have ingested several pills worth..."

I look over at Mango-R, who seems to have just tripped over me.

"Oh. He he... Hey Mango-R! Hehehe... Do you have any idea why I'm laughing so much? Did someclone set off some laughing gas or something? Hmm... Ah ha ha ha... Strange. Heh heh..."

I get an idea, and yell towards the stairwell, where Cryo-R is.

"Cryo-R, could you give us that metal shelf that's sticking out of your backpack? We might be able to use it like a stretcher. He he..."

I try to stop laughing.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 10, 2010 00:10

I laugh more due to the explosion.

"Hehehe commies die. Boom boom!"

I start staring at the patch were the commies were, to see how many are left. I attempt to reload my laser rifle with the other barrel that Jam gave me earlier.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 10, 2010 00:47²⁴⁷

"Oh, don't worry! I didn't provide him with any 'pep pills', just some pix-y-lyke candy. He requested it in his sleep, and I wasn't about to turn down a request. I can't guarantee that someone else didn't give him any at some point though, as I was more focused on watching doors. 🐱"

²⁴⁶ SPEEDER: (OOC: Ima again outside home... But I think this will be the last awol time in the next months)

²⁴⁷ CRYOBURNER: (I think someone missed a post or two, which is disappointing, since Joris was trying to hug communists with a squealing barrel nearby. Or maybe the results of that were just delayed a turn. 😊)

"Ah, I suppose you could use this shelf as a stretcher. It's only around 75cm long though, so we might have to cut off your legs first."

I look around in my toolkit for a pair of wire cutters. I'm not sure if they're in there though, since they may not have been returned after being borrowed at some point.

"Hmm... has anyone seen my wire cutters?"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 10, 2010 01:36

Realizing that perhaps I don't have a laser rifle, I instead reload my laser pistol.

Guess that gas is still affecting me a bit!

written by Gligar on Nov 10, 2010 02:21

Corridor Q2

Jam-O doesn't seem to mind being used as a cushion. But then, the virus is still around. Somewhat.

He gets the idea to use Cryo-R's shelf as a makeshift stretcher. That'd work, if he were less than 75cm tall. Cryo-R (who still denies giving Jam-O pep pills) thinks it'd be just mandatory to cut Jam-O down to size. The only problem with that is that he can't find his wire cutters. He could have sworn they were put back in his toolkit...

Lucas-R doesn't know, but asks, "Are you sure those were candies? They seem to have an effect suspiciously like pep pills. And even though I've been out of the creche for a few monthcycles, I'm pretty sure there's no such thing as pix-y-lyke candy. So... why don't you show everyone this suspicious candy that acts like a pep pill? I'm sure someone's got a PDC somewhere."

Distribution Warehouse (O level)

When the smoke from the explosion clears, it becomes obvious that the battle is over. There are no standing communists remaining, though I seem to recall that some fell unconscious and didn't die.

Yet.

L4-O reloads his pistol. Not his rifle, because he doesn't have one. For a moment, he thought he did. Must be the virus.

written by Jam on Nov 10, 2010 03:24

"Hmm... I guess that won't work... Heh, I thought the shelf was longer... But why would you need wire cutters? He he... You aren't thinking of cutting my legs off, are you? Ah, you seem to be trying very hard to kill me, or at least injure me. I don't like that..."

I face Cryo-R, and very clearly give him orders.

"Cryo-R, from now until I die and my next clone is decanted, I order you to stay at least 2 meters away from me. No exceptions. Disobeying the orders of a higher clearance clone is treason. Oh, and please show us this 'candy' I supposedly requested in my sleep."

Then look at Lucas-R.

“PDC? Yeah, it’s right here...”

I search my pockets a bit for my PDC, before remembering that I gave it to Kristos-R. I look around for him.

“Kristos-R?! I’m feeling a bit better, I might make it after all... Can I have my PDC back now?”

written by 4616599 on Nov 10, 2010 06:32

“Ha ha, ha ha....ha” I begin to stop laughing. Guess I didn’t manged to hug any commies after all, with the explosion and all that gas.

Not really too disappointed, I look for the nearest unconscious commie. I ask him/her/it, not really expecting an answer anyway. “Hello! That was some weird party....you aren’t a treasonous commie android, are you?”

I tap the head.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 10, 2010 09:25

I get off Nukabot and go to search the commies for any cone rifle shells. I’m running low, after all. Can’t have that. Lack of ammunition is no laughing matter!

While I’m at it I might as well search for any other weapons that aren’t treasonous to use. Maybe one of them has an ORANGE slugthrower or something...

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 10, 2010 10:58

I try to stop giggling, and try to reduce it if I can’t. I try to sit down, leaning against a wall for support.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 10, 2010 12:25

“Oh, no. I just want to... cut some wires. Removing one’s legs that way would probably be a rather slow and messy process.”

“As for the candy, I think you ate it all. You were very hungry.”

“Hmm... Do orders count when one has given away their clearance brevet and ME Card? Without any identification, it seems like there would be no way to tell what clearance level one was authorized to use. Besides, I’m most certainly not trying to cause you any harm. Your injuries must be causing paranoid delusions. Let’s hope you get better soon!”²⁴⁸

written by Gligar on Nov 10, 2010 16:48

Corridor Q2

Jam-O finds it odd that Cryo-R would want wire cutters. I mean, what wires are there to cut?

He goes on to order Cryo-R to stay away from him. But Cryo-R refuses, stating that he has no identification. Yep, he’s CPU alright.

But how can he be so certain? There are more forms of ID than just brevets and ME cards. Tongueprint tattoos used to be common, for instance. It’s a pity you don’t see many of them any more.

²⁴⁸ CRYOBURNER: (I think Speed-Y may still have the wire cutters from when cutting the scientist’s handcuffs earlier, despite the stats page not saying so.)

As for PDCs, Jam-O gave his to Kristos-R, who seems to be ignoring him.

There’s one other thing. Cryo-R says he has no “candy” left, since Jam-O ate it all. It’s clear from Lucas-R’s face that he doesn’t believe that.

Notably, nobody feels like laughing any more. Mango-R notices this.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

It’s the same in here. Joris-O is the first to stop, as he starts checking the unconscious communists. They remain unconscious, even the one whose head gets knocked on. It feels a lot like there’s bone under the skin.

Meanwhile, L4-O is also checking communists. In his case, for ammunition for Turbo. He’s in luck: he finds something like thirty assorted shells, and about as many triggers.

One of the shells has a marking that looks suspiciously like the radiation symbol.

In addition he finds more slugthrower ammo, some YELLOW and GREEN slugthrowers, and a couple of blasters.

Since seemly things are a lot better now, I try to figure why the bot cannot open.²⁴⁹

I try to recover, taking deep heavy breathes. I take a look at what’s left of the fighting while I do that.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 10, 2010 23:18

“Oh, hey!”

I pull out the power packs from a few of the blasters and pocket them. I replace and discard the old discharged power pack in my blaster.

I return to Nukabot and get on. I attempt to reorient again, ready to go.. um, whichever direction. I’ll just follow Massacrebot now.

written by Jam on Nov 11, 2010 00:52

“But why am I all jittery? And what about the powder on my face?”

I attempt to collect any powder that’s left on my face. Then I look towards Kristos-R.

“Kristos-R? Hello?”

I wait a bit for him to respond. If he doesn’t, I look at Lucas-R.

“Lucas-R, could you get my PDC and ME card from Kristos-R? He seems to have zoned out again... I think he put it in that pocket.”

²⁴⁹ SPEEDER: (OOC: Whee, a break! I am teaching Lua to 40 students... dude, I shall never be a teacher professionally, otherwise I think I would jump out of a window mid-class when someone insist in writing stuff wrong and accusing me of using buggy interpreter)

Corridor Q2

Mango-R leans against the wall near the warehouse, trying to get his breath back. He watches as a couple of the unconscious communists moan incoherently.

Jam-O still wants his PDC, and now his ME card as well. But Kristos-R is still ignoring him, so Lucas-R goes over to try to find them. he rifles through Kristos-R's available pockets and does indeed find an ME card for "Jam-R-JYR", and with it, a PDC and a brevet. He takes all three and hands them to Jam-O.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

L4-O puts away his new ammunition and takes the opportunity to refresh his blaster before taking the controls of Nukabot again. Idly, he looks over at Massacrebot.

Speed-Y tries to figure out why the bot won't open, even though the status report states that the mechanism is okay. The answer, re reasons, is obvious. He must be reading the display wrong!

written by Cryoburner on Nov 11, 2010 03:35

Hmm... I don't know about that powder. That could have come from anywhere. It's rather inadequately lit in here, after all, and I was more focused on watching doors. Watching them one at a time, that is. I didn't notice anyone come in, but they presumably could have. I've been trying not to inspect things like that too carefully... Aside from doors, or course, as per your request." 😊

"If you're looking for a stretcher, maybe a spare jumpsuit could be made into one. Even if it doesn't make for a very good stretcher, perhaps you could use it as a hammock. You like hammocks, don't you? You could hang it between those two doors. They'd make fine hammock holders! At least, until someone opens them."

"Anyway, while you guys play around with whatever it is you're doing, I'm going to continue with the mission!"

With that, I enter the stairwell, taking note of how adequate (or existent) the lighting is, and begin carefully climbing upward. As I go, I count the number of doors passed, feeling them if necessary. I also count the stairs to verify that there is an optimal door/stair ratio. I keep climbing until I reach the top, or anything else that's not a stairwell or door, whichever comes first.

written by Jam on Nov 11, 2010 03:45

"Ah, thank you Lucas-R."

I set my PDC to record mode, and hand it back to Lucas.

"Here, could you hold this for me and record everything? See if you can attach it to your jumpsuit or something. That way you can still have two free hands..."

I take my ME card and brevet, and wave them at Cryo-R.

"See? I'm exactly who I say I am!"

I look closely at Cryo-R, and notice he seems to be holding something in his hand.

"What's that in your right hand, Cryo-R?²⁵⁰ Is it perhaps that 'candy' you were talking about? Give it to Lucas-R, let him look at it."

~~If, for some reason, Cryo-R doesn't respond, I motion for Lucas-R to go and take whatever is in Cryo-R's hand.~~^{251 252}

I glance sharply at my spent blaster. "How dare you do this to me!"

With my kevlar shield, I carefully push the spent blaster and powerpack to the entrance to corridor Q1, positioning it directly underneath.

I then back away, draw my spare blaster, and shoot at my treasonous former equipment!

written by Lightning4 on Nov 11, 2010 11:50

I stop waiting for any reaction from Massacrebot and decide to drive on ahead.

At least, if I knew which way to go first. It seems like we've scattered a bit since the fight. I decide to drive towards the stairwell first.

I get an idea and drive down the corridor. I stop at the lab and speak loudly enough that Derek will hear, but hopefully quietly enough that no treasonous commies should overhear. Hopefully.

"Hey! Hey Derek! Sorry to bother you, but we need to be going. Do you happen to know the fastest way to V level? We need a way that'll let us bring both Nukabot here and that Massacrebot of yours.

I think I can pilot this thing up stairs, although I'm not too sure how well it will work with this flat tire... and I'm not sure if Massacrebot will fit or not either."

written by Speeder on Nov 11, 2010 15:43

I try to figure how to read correctly the display...

And later I try to figure if Massacrebot fits in the stairwell, and then I look at the Nukabot, and then try to figure if there are a way to lift the front or the back of it without damaging it.

"I think that using Massacrebot we can lift Nukabot wheels as needed to go upstairs"

Corridor Q2

Cryo-R says that he's ignorant of the powder's origins, and suggests the use of a jumpsuit s a stretcher. Then, predictably, he absconds up the stairwell. I'll check up on him later.

Jam-O takes the ME card and brevet. He holds them up for Cryo-R to see... then realises that that clone is no longer here. Lucas-R clips the PDC to his jumpsuit.

Nukabot enters, somewhat erratically, permitting L4-O to have another look at the stairwell. There might be a problem with the flat tyre...

He drives down the corridor, stopping just short of Jam-O, who, rather unsportingly, is right in the middle of the corridor. If Nukabot wanted to go further, it would have to run over him.

L4-O then speaks such that Derek-G can possibly hear him. Indeed, the clone emerges from the lab. "Hmmm, you may be right. The cargo lift in the warehouse goes no higher than this level." He thinks for a moment. "I believe that there is a cargo lift in Central Subsector, to the north."

Meanwhile, Massacrebot has also entered. It seems that Speed-Y has had the same idea concerning the stairwell. The main problem with is the stairwell's door, which is just too small for either bot to fit through.

Stairwell

Oblivious to all this, Cryo-R climbs. There is no light at all in here, meaning he can't see any of the doors. But if the stairwell conforms to CPU Mandate 198/47392/8©, there should be a door after every sixteen (16) steps, where there should be a landing. The steps seem to curve round through one hundred and eighty (180) degrees with each set of steps.

So far, he has climbed forty (40) steps and found two doors. The twenty-seventh (27th) step seems to be worn in the middle.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

With the main sources of light gone, it's difficult for Joris-O to see where his fried blaster ended up. He does find it, however, and pushes it towards where he thinks the other exit is, and fires at it with his remaining blaster.

Despite the darkness, he pulls off a nice shot. The fried blaster begins to spark, and heats up once again, giving off a dim RED glow.

written by Speeder on Nov 11, 2010 22:06

I think for a while, and then I attempt to figure if the bot has a compass.

written by Jam on Nov 11, 2010 23:12

"Oh, hello Nukabot!" I say as I'm almost run over. Then I look over at the clone L4-O is talking to.

"Hello Derek-G sir! Oh, you made Massacrebot? Wow, that's amazing! Um... You wouldn't happen to have a stretcher with you, would you? Or perhaps some device that might make me a bit less likely to die and a bit more able to kill commies? I'd be happy to test out any new equipment, if only I hadn't been shot. It's hard for me to walk in this condition..."

I talk in the direction of Massacrebot.

"Speed-Y, if you're wondering where Cryo-R went, he just crawled into that stairwell over there. I think he went up."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 11, 2010 23:18

"Hmm. Interesting."

I turn Nukabot around and see Massacrebot and a few others.

"You hear that? We need to be going north to the central subsector. There should be a cargo lift there we can use for both Nukabot and Massacrebot."

I turn my head back to Derek.

"Thanks. Can you give us any more specific directions? We're all somewhat unfamiliar with the sector, I guess."

"Unless Massacrebot can lead us, then that will work too."

I continue carefully climbing and counting cautiously.

Corridor Q2

Speed-Y checks something, and something else, and tries a few gestures, before realising that there has been a direction indicator on Massacrebot's HUD the whole time.

"Hmmm," Derek-G answers. "I'm afraid that I have nothing that could help you, citizen. Keep heading north, and you'll find the cargo lift. I think."

Stairwell

The stairs keep going up. Cryo-R climbs up another twenty-four (24) steps, and takes a break, finding that thee is a landing here. The door seems to be ajar.

written by Speeder on Nov 12, 2010 04:09

After I figure where is north, I point toward north.

"We need to go in that direction!"

written by 4616599 on Nov 12, 2010 04:28

Noting the conversation in the corridor, I head back.

"North? Heh... I was about to blow up the entrance to Corridor Q1...guess I should do something about that, eh?"

"By the way, has anyone seen Commiebot's head?"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 12, 2010 09:29

"Ah well. Thanks!"

I drive off in Nukabot, and start to follow Massarebot. Hopefully Speed is able to indicate which direction we need to go successfully.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 12, 2010 09:56

“Why, this door is ajar! This calls for further examination!”

I carefully examine the door as best as one can in the presumably dark stairwell. Then, I peek inside, seeing if I can see anything seeable in there.

Corridor Q2

Massacrebot points a manipulator towards the warehouse. Apparently, that’s north.

Speaking of the warehouse, Joris-O emerges into the glare of Massacrebot’s lights. He’s wondering where that android’s head went. Didn’t it get put in a box? Maybe it got dropped somewhere.

Derek-G disappears back into the lab.

Nukabot reverses in Massacrebot’s direction, the corridor being too narrow to turn. There seems to be something wrong with the ‘reversing’ alarm.

Starwell, U level

Peeking through the door, Cryo-R can see... light!

It comes from a PRPF patrol, apparently stationed just outside the door. It looks like there are six communists in the patrol, armed with the usual slugthrowers and wearing the usual ill-fitting IntSec gear. They must be guarding it to stop loyal clones – and anyone else in the corridors, for that matter – from using it.

A sign on the clearance stripe – BLUE, if you’re interested – opposite the door reads U LEVEL.

written by Speeder on Nov 12, 2010 20:13

I start walking north, obviously not into walls or lift shafts...

I walk with a moderate speed, so Nukabot, Joris and the botcommie head can follow us.

“Huh. The mandatory safety equipment on Nukabot no longer functions... hm.”

“BEEP. BEEP. BEEP. BEEP. BEEP. BEEP. BEEP. BEEP.”

I continue backing up while following Massacrebot. When I reach an area I can turn around in, I do so and get Nukabot going in a slightly better orientation.

written by Jam on Nov 13, 2010 01:24

Massacrebot leads the way, heading through the warehouse. Nukabot follows (with L4-O filling in the missing reversing sounds), as does Lucas-R. He seems happy that the team is beginning to move out.

Is anyone planning on taking Jam-O along? He seems sad.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Carrying on through here, John-R tags along.

Just as Massacrebot is about to cross over to the other corridor, Speed-Y notices a blaster sitting in the middle of the doorway. It’s glowing a dull RED and sparking.

As he ponders this, Speed-Y notices a familiar box in the warehouse.

written by Speeder on Nov 13, 2010 03:19

“Joooooris, the commiebot head is here!”

written by Jam on Nov 13, 2010 05:26

“Lucas, could you take this and this and these, and give them to my next clone?”

I give him all my laser pistol barrels, my laser pistol, the grenades, the various pills I have, the first aid kits, the full can of B3, the packets of Soylent RED, the hammer, the spanners, the helmet, the pairs of handcuffs, and my ME card and brevet.²⁵³

“Thanks so much!”

Then I shout to John-R.

“John-R! Do you want a RED reflec? You can have mine.”

I take off the reflec and offer it to John-R.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 13, 2010 12:58

I look around. Noticing we’re missing someone, I look back and spot Jam.

“Hey wait! We can uh... put you on Nukabot I guess?”

I drive back to Jam and offer to help him up.

written by Jam on Nov 13, 2010 15:11²⁵⁴

“Oh. Never mind, Lucas-R. But when I die, can you take all the things I just mentioned and give to my next clone? I’d just feel horrible without all my spare laser pistol barrels to comfort me. And you never know when you might need the other stuff. Thanks.”

I look at L4-O, and smile.

“Thanks, I’d love to come with!”

²⁵³ JAM: (ooc: wow, I have a lot of stuff...)

²⁵⁴ JAM: (ooc: If I’m coming with, I guess I don’t need to give all of my stuff to Lucas-R yet... I’ll post an addition, if that’s alright. Or it can wait until next turn.)

I accept L4-O's offer, and try to climb onto Nukabot.

written by 4616599 on Nov 13, 2010 16:09

I attempt to help load up Jam-O. "Hey, someone should load the spare laser barrels too." I point out.

"Derek-G? Sorry to bother you again, but we found what appears to be a commie android. Perhaps you could tell us something about it?"

written by Gligar on Nov 13, 2010 17:16

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

It's the commiebot head, alright. Speed-Y lets Joris-O know.

Corridor Q2

Initially believing that he would be left behind, Jam-O prepares to give his equipment to others for safe keeping. This turns out to be unnecessary, as Nukabot returns, allowing Jam-O to attempt to climb up.

Of course, with his injuries, he cant really do much. In the end, it takes L4-O and Joris-O to get him positioned on the forks. The latter calls over to Derek-G about androids, but the latter doesn't respond.

written by Speeder on Nov 13, 2010 17:45

I await for everyone.

Pointing my guns frenetically in all directions.

written by 4616599 on Nov 13, 2010 17:54

"Ugh- what's that Derek-G up to? I might even call him very slightly bordering on the edge of mild treason... Anyway, is there any place -preferably inside- Nukabot that I can load the box of extra ammo and Commiebot in?"

written by Jam on Nov 13, 2010 18:55

I smile wider, extremely happy that I could come with after all.

"Laser pistol barrels? You can load them into my pockets! I'll keep them safe!"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 13, 2010 22:48

I look around.

"Uh. No, I don't think Nukabot has any internal areas to hide in. You can ask it I guess..."

I start driving back towards Speed and Massacrebot in attempts to catch up, but allowing anyone else who wishes to climb on first.

written by Gligar on Nov 14, 2010 01:51

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Massacrebot stands at the ready, pointing its guns around in about thirty different directions. Speed-Y must really be giving those servos a workout.

Corridor Q2

Joris-O wants to load that box of ammunition, and the box containing Commiebot's head, somewhere... like, say, inside Nukabot. But there's no inside compartment. Jam-O offers to carry them, though. As if he wasn't carrying enough already Nukabot starts reversing again, slowly at first, in case anyone wants to pile on.

written by Speeder on Nov 14, 2010 05:27

After a while I say.

"Ok Massacrebot, record that the servos are really good and can withstand some abuse."

Then I stop moving like nuts.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 14, 2010 07:22

I stand back up, and clamber onto Nukabot, to the area that seems least protected.

"This seems to be the best spot to defend."

I then put my trucheon away, and take out my laser pistol, checking the number of shots remaining.

written by 4616599 on Nov 14, 2010 09:46

I load the boxes on Nukabot's rear, and follow on foot.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 14, 2010 11:59

I follow behind Massacrebot, looking around to make sure we're not missing anybody or that no commies are nearby.

written by Jam on Nov 14, 2010 14:22

I reach my hands out and search around, just in case some stray laser pistol barrels happen to come my way.

written by Speeder on Nov 14, 2010 15:11

After everyone is set I start our incredible jorney to the fantasy land of transistors in level V.

V of Victory.

written by Gligar on Nov 14, 2010 18:13²⁵⁵

Corridor Q2

Mango-R clambers up on to the top of Nukabot, pulling out his laser pistol. He notices that the barrel is spent.

Joris-O loads the two boxes behind the operator's seat and follows on foot. On the front, Jam-O has his hands out to catch anything that drops, but nothing does.

Lucas-R also climbs up, thing time, on the rear of the bot. It's cramped with the boxes in the way, but he'll manage.

²⁵⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: Just to let everyone know, I am now sick and tired of Google Docs going HURDUR LOG YOU OUT IN THE MIDDLE OF EDITING HURDUR DURHUR HURDUR DURHUR. So I am working on an alternate method of showing stats and such. Bear with me.

And YES GOOGLE I KNOW THERE ARE NEW FEATURES YOU DON'T NEED TO POINT AT EVERY NEW BUTTON LIKE I'M A BLIND IDIOT 🙄

L4-O continues driving backwards, making sure that nobody is left behind this time. Kristos-R suddenly awakes with a start and follows behind.

The procession leaves the corridor, returning to the warehouse. Joris-O and Kristos-R have to run to keep up.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

As Nukabot takes the opportunity to turn round so it can drive forwards for a change, Massacrebot stops moving its arms around.

John-R falls in behind Massacrebot. Looks like everyone's ready to go, so let's move!

Corridor Q1 West

The corridor seems oddly quiet. Apart from the dead communists, there's nothing important here. Except for an exit that doesn't lead north.

Corridor Q1 North

Carrying on round the corner, two northerly exits become visible. One is open.

written by Speeder on Nov 14, 2010 19:41

I check the open door, Massacrebot sensors and all.

written by Jam on Nov 14, 2010 22:59

I keep alert for any signs that commies are near. I also search around the corridor in case there are any boxes of laser pistol barrels lying around.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 14, 2010 23:54

I yawn a little bit and search my pockets for something to eat.

Sadly not finding anything, I pay attention to driving again before I run over (or into) something.

written by Gligar on Nov 15, 2010 02:15

Corridor Q1

Massacrebot turns its sensors to the space beyond the door.

It seems to be a corridor, heading north. Massacrebot can't sense anything beyond that.

Jam-O keeps his ears and other senses open. He seems to hear something on the other side of the door.

L4-O seems to be getting a little tired. Let's hope there's somewhere to rest soon. You have the time, don't you?

Hmmm, looks like everyone's in the same place. It's up to Speed-Y now.

written by Jam on Nov 15, 2010 03:14

"Speed-Y, wait! I think there's something on the other side of the door!"

I ready my laser pistol and aim it at the door.

"John-R, could you try using your mental blast powers on whatever is behind that door? You can stun it, then we'll attack while it is distracted..."

written by Speeder on Nov 15, 2010 03:22

I stop, and then I try to pick sound behind the door.

"Wait, we don't know what is on the other side, what if it is Freaky? If we mind blast him, he might mind blast everyone in retaliation before we can even open the door to shot him."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 15, 2010 10:28

I take notice and ready my blaster.

"Well we could always shoot whoever it is on the other side. As far as I know, nobody is immune to a good shooting. Or stabbing. Or bludgeoning. Or roadkilling. Or-" I continue in this fashion, my voice trailing off.

written by 4616599 on Nov 15, 2010 12:09

"How would we know which side Freaky is on anyway?"

In any case, I agree with L4-O, and ready my blaster. I check if my burnt hand is still steady enough for me to hold both shield and gun.

written by Gligar on Nov 15, 2010 16:35

Corridor Q2

People get weapons ready. Joris-O realises that, with his burnt hand, he can't hold a weapon and a shield at the same time.

Speed-Y turns Massacrebot's sensors towards the door again. It turns out that it's a malfunctioning bot on the other side.

written by Speeder on Nov 15, 2010 16:45

"Ok, there are only a malfunctioning bot on the other side... You people want to check it, or we should proceed in our path?"

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 15, 2010 20:07

"My laser pistol barrel appears to be all used up."

I unscrew it, and place the barrel in one of my pockets. I also decide to put my laser pistol body away, and draw my truncheon in it's place.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 15, 2010 21:37

"Proceed, as long as it isn't the kind of malfunctioning that could lead to explosion or bodily harm."

I put my blaster away and prepare to follow behind Speed.

I turn to Mango.

"I think there's still some spare laser pistol barrels here on Nukabot if you need them."

written by Jam on Nov 15, 2010 22:28

"Hmm... What kind of bot is it? A malfunctioning docbot, perhaps? But maybe it's something harmless like a malfunctioning petbot... I think we should go on."

I look over at L4-O.

"Eh? Spare laser pistol barrels? Where?! I need some too!!"

written by Gligar on Nov 16, 2010 01:19

Corridor Q1

Mango-R switches back to his truncheon, being out of laser barrels.

L4-O suggests to move on, as does Jam-O. As long as the bot's not dangerous.

By now, Massacrebot has identified the bot. It's a scrubot with damaged wheels.

written by Speeder on Nov 16, 2010 01:24

As Massacrebot identifies the other bot I say.

"It is a scrubot with damaged wheels. I think we can move on."

I proceed in the corridor of the open door.

written by Jam on Nov 16, 2010 02:49

Assuming L4-O follows Massacrebot into the corridor, I aim my laser pistol at the damaged scrubot. I shoot at it if it makes any threatening moves.²⁵⁶

written by Lightning4 on Nov 16, 2010 07:46

I do continue to follow Massacrebot.

I watch Jam's motions through the front of Nukabot.

written by Gligar on Nov 16, 2010 18:10

Corridor Q1

The team, minus Joris-O for some reason, starts down the corridor.

Corridor Q4

The team passes a couple of closed doors before approaching the scrubot, which seems to be stuck in cleaning mode, and going in circles due to its damaged wheels.

That seems strangely familiar to the team...

Passing the scrubot, the team passes another three doors, before coming to one at the end, marked CENTRAL SUBSECTOR ACCESS Q.

written by Speeder on Nov 16, 2010 18:40

I peer a while at it. Then I say.

"So... here we go! Prepare your weapons!"

After everyone is ready I open the door.

written by Jam on Nov 16, 2010 23:06

I aim my laser pistol towards the door.

written by Gligar on Nov 17, 2010 02:28

Corridor Q4

The door is opened, giving Team Epsilon its first glimpse of Central Subsector:

An Internal Security checkpoint.

Manned, as it were, by combots. For those who aren't familiar with that class of bot, they're bots who would like to be warbots but are too small. And they're bitter about it. These ones are even smaller than Massacrebot.

Two of them turn in your direction. "Identify yourselves!"

By the stairwell, U level

Looks like the PRPF patrol is being relieved by another. They're saying something in some treasonous-sounding language.

written by Speeder on Nov 17, 2010 02:30

After a while looking at them I say.

"We are the Troubleshooter team tasked with getting rid of the commies. Are you still loyal to friend computer or we will need to explode you?"

written by Jam on Nov 17, 2010 03:10

I take out my ME card and wave it in the general direction of the combots.

"I am Jam-R-JYR, temporarily breveted to ORANGE clearance by... a high clearance clone who I am not cleared to know the identity of!

It is good that you are being cautious, thank you for doing your job so well! But please, let us pass. We have been sent to eliminate the communists and restore order to the sector. Interfering with our mission is directly against the will of The Computer, and we are authorized to terminate any clones or bots that aren't loyal. Informing communist forces of our location or mission is also treasonous. If you tell them, I will personally come back and blow your bot-brains all over the floor, unless Friend Computer gets to you first. So don't tell the commies. Okay? Thank you."

I rest after that somewhat long speech. I wonder if the pep pills have worn off yet, I feel pretty tired...

written by Lightning4 on Nov 17, 2010 11:11

I drive in behind Massacrebot.

"More of Team Epsilon plus Nukabot reporting in!"

I am ready to pull out my blaster though, just in case these bots aren't as friendly as we think.

²⁵⁶ SPEEDER: (ooc: the scrubot is not behind the closed door?)

written by 4616599 on Nov 17, 2010 12:26²⁵⁷

I stumble in after the team, holding only my shield, which I use to knock the damaged scrubot down for good measure.

I speak to it immediately after bashing it; "Hello! You aren't trying to do something other than cleaning, are you?"

written by Gligar on Nov 17, 2010 17:04

Corridor Q4

More combots turn to look at the team. One answers, "I don't think so. You'll need the password to get through here."

Jam-O doesn't hear this, because his pep pills have worn off.

Behind the team, Joris-O rushes down the corridor, knocking down the scrubot as he does. It doesn't respond to him.

written by Speeder on Nov 17, 2010 18:50

I peer at them for a while, then I ask.

"Ok, we don't have the password, so to know if we need to bother in blasting you to bits, if we go to the other side, there are a suitable route to the team and our bots to reach the compnode? Please, reply fast, so we try to pass fast or search for another way fast, because if we don't fix the compnode in some hours the sector will be nuked."

written by Jam on Nov 18, 2010 00:01

Wait... Did I fall asleep? Or am I just zoned out a bit?)

I try to focus on staying awake...

"Huh? What did Speed-Y say about passwords? Do the combots need one?"

I think a bit about all the passwords I know...

"Ah! Is the password 'four-six-one-six-five-nine-nine'?"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 18, 2010 00:22

I think a little bit, and study the combots.

"Is the password... 'Friend Computer'?"

"Or perhaps it's 'Glory to the people?'"

I prepare my weapon just in case it's the wrong answer.

written by Gligar on Nov 18, 2010 01:19

Corridor Q4

"The compnode, and the Hub" one of the combots says coldly, "are heavily defended. Unauthorised clones will be terminated long before they make it to the lift hall off the Inner Ring."

Another combot turns to the first. "You speak too much!"

As Jam-O speaks, the combots seem to blink. "Password accepted," replies a third. Combots begin to move out of the way, and seemingly shut down.

But a couple remain. "These clones have clearly guessed the password," they say. "They are clearly unauthorised." The two ready their weapons.

written by Speeder on Nov 18, 2010 01:50

I point my HE cone to the combot that accepted the password.

"So, the password is the name of a communist leader? I guess you bots are working for the commies then, now I am sure you are to be blasted to little bits."

written by Jam on Nov 18, 2010 03:10

I look at Speed-Y, confused.

"Communist leader? When I interrogated those commies earlier, they said Andrei was the director, and I'm assuming he's the leader too..."

I turn my head back to the combots that are readying their weapons.

"How could I possibly have guessed that?! Out of how many million numbers, what are the chances that I would have guessed the right one on the first try? Clearly, I was informed by my superiors what the password was. By resisting when you have been given the correct password, you are going against the will of Friend Computer, many High Programmers, and countless other high clearance citizens. If you don't move out of our way and deactivate, like you have been programmed to do, we will have to assume that you are faulty, and have likely been tampered with by communists. Lower your weapons and stand down, or we will be forced to terminate you. This is your last warning!"

I aim my laser pistol at one of the combots, and fire at it if it resists any more.

written by 4616599 on Nov 18, 2010 04:41

Hearing the commotion, I remain out of sight in the corridor, and attempt to hook (or otherwise hang) my kevlar shield on my jumpsuit, like a breastplate or vest.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 18, 2010 12:30

I remain silent, hand still ready to draw my blaster if need be.

written by Gligar on Nov 18, 2010 17:05

Corridor Q4

Massacrebot raises its cone rifle, and growls in a manner that would be menacing if [REDACTED]. "How cute," one of the combots comments. "An overgrown petbot." This gets another growl. "And one that's allied with the fleshbags. It must clearly be defect-"

It doesn't get a chance to finish. Massacrebot overrides Speed-Y's controls, charges through the door and picks up the offending combot in both manipulators. Apparently, it's trying to tear the combot apart.

²⁵⁷ 4616599: (ooc: new computer- was transferring stuff 😊)

The other combat glares at the scene. "Typical. There is always one. I would react, but my programming has forbidden me to do so."

Further down the corridor, Joris-O gets ready again behind his shield. He tries to clip it to his jumpsuit but it doesn't want to fit.

written by Jam on Nov 18, 2010 19:59

"Ah, Speed-Y is attacking the combat! I guess the bot deserves it, how dare it call us 'fleshbags'!"

I watch Massacrebot as it tries to tear the combat into pieces.

"I wonder if we can go on now..."

written by Speeder on Nov 18, 2010 20:57

I was going to freak out as the armor started to move me around, but when I noticed that I was insulted too...

So, I just agree with Massacrebot and lend my strength to it too.

written by Gligar on Nov 19, 2010 02:04

IntSec Checkpoint

Motors strain as Massacrebot continues in its attempt to tear apart the combat. The strain turns into a loud whine...

...which gets louder as the motors begin to smoke...

...before finally producing results. With an almighty SNAP-CRACK, the combat is, well, disarmed. The combat's chassis falls to the floor, and shudders. "H- How dare you," it stammers, before trying to get up, and failing.

Near the Stairwell, U level

The PRPF handover is complete. Just one thing...

One of the relief patrol takes a quick look inside the stairwell itself, and seems to see something. "Huh?" he mutters. "Is that someone?"

written by Jam on Nov 19, 2010 03:03

"Oh good, it looks like Speed-Y won!"

I look to the other combat.

"Are you going to insult us too? I'm sure we can find some fun ways to disable you... Maybe we could impale your head with one of Nukabot's forks, or perhaps Massacrebot could drag you to the lift shaft over there and push you inside... Or you could just let us get on with our mission..."

You do know that if we fail, perhaps because we were held up by a stubborn combat, everything in the sector will be obliterated? Do you really want to cause the death of hundreds of clones and the destruction of an entire sector's worth of Computer property, including the Comnode, which is like a piece of Friend Computer itself? And you'll be destroyed too. Hmm... How many laws does that break?"

written by Lightning4 on Nov 19, 2010 09:07

I wince a little upon the noisy crack. Even if bots can't feel pain like we can.

I prepare to follow Speed in case we decide to progress pass the security checkpoint.

written by Gligar on Nov 19, 2010 17:27

IntSec checkpoint

The second combat looks at the first, and at the first's arms, still being held by Massacrebot, and then at Massacrebot itself. Something seems to pass between the two bots, and the combat steps aside. "Just get out of here, fleshbags," it says. "I suppose your lives may well be worth something after all."

Stairwell, U level

The lone PRPF member keeps investigating. He's still sure there's something here. He pulls out a flashlight and shines it around.

And there's Cryo-R.

"Comrade!" he yells. "What are you doing here past curfew?!"

written by Speeder on Nov 19, 2010 20:42

I nod, I put the damaged bot down and say.

"Ok, thanks... We are going to V level comnode, you must not let anyone wearing a furry hat to pass, even if he knows whatever password, those furry hats are mind control devices that can turn perfectly good citizens in communists."

I proceed forward again.

written by Jam on Nov 19, 2010 23:43

I relax once I see the combat step aside. I listen to what Speed-Y is saying to the bot. Wait... Why is he telling the bot that almost shot us everything about our mission?

I think a bit, and come up with an idea. I speak loudly to Speed-Y, and try to sound confused.

"V level? I thought we were supposed to go to S level, to get the—Wait, I'm saying too much, aren't I?!"

I try to look nervous, and turn towards the combat.

"You didn't hear that, did you?"

written by Gligar on Nov 20, 2010 02:00

IntSec Checkpoint

The combat glowers. "Just... get... out of here."

Starwell, U Level

The PRPF clone sighs. Looks like Cryo-R is too preoccupied with the light fixtures to notice. "Very well, you are under arrest!" Cryo-R is roughly dragged into the corridor, where another PRPF clone joins him and the arresting officer, escorting him elsewhere.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 20, 2010 08:32

I start tailing Speed.

I look at the combots as I pass by, kind of cautiously. I'm not certain of their allegiance.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 20, 2010 10:52

I watch everything carefully, and I ready my laser pistol barrel to throw in case the combots try to attack after we've passed them.

written by Jam on Nov 20, 2010 15:24

I look ahead, searching for any signs that might say where the cargo lift we're looking for is...

written by Gligar on Nov 20, 2010 17:40

IntSec Checkpoint

The team begins to move. First Massacrebot, then Nukabot and passengers, and finally the rest of the team. The combots, for most part, seem to be inert, but no-one can shake the feeling that they're being glared at.

Joris-O lags behind, as before. He also gets glared at.

Central Subsector: Corridor Q-epsilon

The YELLOW clearance continues through into here. "Here" is, of course, another corridor. Looks like there are maybe five doors, and two intersections.

Some slugholes and laser burns, along with a few bloodstains, give away the results of a battle that took place here recently. The door at the far end seems to be damaged, and the remains of barricades can be seen at the intersections. The further barricade on the right has seen the most damage.

Somewhere on U Level

Cryo-R continues to be escorted to... somewhere.

His captors stop at a door, and one knocks.

written by Speeder on Nov 21, 2010 05:24

I attempt to figure what side lost.

And if we can continue north.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 21, 2010 09:36

I continue following.

"Hm. Looks like someone had fun here."

I look at the barricades and stuff, maybe search to see if there's anything left behind that could be... ah.. repurposed for our goals.

written by Speeder on Nov 21, 2010 12:44

While walking I suddenly comment.

"Someone saw Cryo somewhere? I think we lost him again stuck examining something... Although ever since we used that machine I don't saw he misbehaving..."

written by 4616599 on Nov 21, 2010 13:56

"Think there's a third party here? Those people shooting at food vendors...androids...grumpy combots...hmmm."

I glance around at the doors, and perfunctorily press my ear close to a random one.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 21, 2010 17:41

"Yaaawn... Hmm... I must have dozed off while inspecting the light fixtures in that dark stairwell."

I take a look around at my surroundings.

written by Jam on Nov 21, 2010 18:56

I try to see what's past the door at the far end.

"Cryo-R went into the stairwell, I think he went up..."

written by Gligar on Nov 21, 2010 19:53

Corridor Q-epsilon

Speed-Y continues down the corridor, idly looking at the barricades... looks like the defenders lost. There is some ammunition (mostly high-clearance laser rifle barrels, with a few cone rifle shells) lying around but the bodies have already been cleared away. Down the furthest junction to the right, a door seems to have been torn from its hinges.

Joris-O picks a random door and listens. He doesn't hear anything.

It's almost as if the communists simply abandoned this level.

Jam-O notices some lights on through the open door at the end.

Somewhere in U Level

Oh! Cryo-R is awake. The communists notice, and one yells, "QUIET!"

Then the door opens, and Cryo-R is shoved inside, and forced onto a chair, and restrained.

Cryo-R can't remember what he saw in the corridor, probably because there was nothing of note there.

Interrogation Room

The room is more interesting, though. There's this chair, fitted with restraints that perform the job of restraining the clone sat thereon... perhaps a little too well. The restraints are slightly too tight, and there's an almost blinding light focused on where the clone's face would be.

Other features include a two-way mirror and a ceiling-mounted laser turret. It's basically your typical IntSec interrogation room, only now it's being handled by PRPF. And the clone they're interrogating is Cryo-R. He judges the room to meet the standards of CPU Mandate 214/4938(x)(ea).

From behind the mirror, the filtered voice of a communist demands, "Explain why you were in the stairwell past curfew!"

written by Cryoburner on Nov 21, 2010 21:38

"Oh, hello! Nice to meet you!"

"I am currently involved in a top secret mission requested of me directly by the higher ups. As you can see, I have been injured quite injuriously in the course of this operation, and after subsequently scaling several sets of sixteen steps in this state, I required a moment to rest. Noting the patrol outside, I determined that it would be a relatively safe location to do so. After all, we wouldn't want the enemy impeding this mission any further, now would we?"

I try to determine the approximate rated wattage of the blinding light.

written by Gligar on Nov 22, 2010 01:49

Interrogation Room

"If you are on a mission - which I doubt - do you have the proper papers? Authorisation codes? And most of all, why are you out after curfew? Why does PRPF not know of this?"

Cryo-R tries to work out how bright the light is, but realises that, in his current state, he couldn't possibly tell. And "wattage", he realises, is a word beyond his security clearance.

written by Jam on Nov 22, 2010 02:51

"Laser barrels! Are there any that are low enough clearance for us?"

I search the floor for any laser pistol or rifle barrels that are YELLOW clearance or below.

"Oh, there are some cone rifle shells too! We should get them..."

written by Speeder on Nov 22, 2010 03:59

After a while I say.

"Ok, see if they are not undamaged, and let L4 handle them, he is the only one here that has actually permission to handle that stuff, and also I think he is the only one that can load Massacrebot too."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 22, 2010 12:29

"Ooh. More cone rifle shells!"

I park temporarily and gather some up. I load a few visibly undamaged ones into Massacrebot, and keep some for myself.

I get back on Nukabot and prepare to resume following.

"Can never have enough of those. Even if they're damaged, I guess we can still use them. Throw them at the commies or something."

Corridor Q-epsilon

Jam-O looks at the laser barrels. Looks like they're all GREEN and above... wait, is that a YELLOW barrel over there?

L4-O checks out the cone rifle shells. Some are spent, some are damaged, but there are indeed some intact shells here. Not enough triggers, though.

But Massacrebot doesn't use triggers. L4-O loads ten shells into the bot, which leaves him with another ten, plus triggers, for himself. He's about to get onto Nukabot again when he decides to take the damaged shells, too. You never know.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 22, 2010 23:52

I get back onto Nukabot and start following Speed again.

"Hopefully we have enough ammo for a while now!"

written by Speeder on Nov 23, 2010 00:24

If Jam decide to grab that yellow barrel I wait a bit, if not I move forward happily. Forward I mean, toward north... Or something.

written by Jam on Nov 23, 2010 01:03

I gaze longingly at the YELLOW barrel...

"Maybe Speed-Y will let me hold it for him? I could keep it safe... We wouldn't want a perfectly good YELLOW barrel in the hands of those horrible commies, right?"

I look at it a bit more, and see that Speed-Y seems to be waiting for something...

"He must be waiting for us to get that YELLOW barrel for him! Lucas-R, could you grab that laser barrel for me? I'll hold it until we get to wherever we are going to, then I can give it to Speed-Y."

I reach out for the barrel.

written by Gligar on Nov 23, 2010 02:02

Corridor Q-epsilon

Speed-Y is about to move off when he spots the barrel. Jam-O tells Lucas-R to get it. "Er... are you sure that's..." Lucas-R begins, before glancing at Massacrebot. After a moment, he shrugs and picks it up, He walks back and gives it to Jam-O, glancing at Massacrebot again.

That done, L4-O starts Nukabot again.

Interrogation room

The communist raises his voice again. "I am talking to you, comrade! Or... is that, citizen?!?" The blinding light, if anything, gets even brighter. And... there is the sound of gas being dispensed. Cryo-R begins to feel... happy. Like he's talking to a friend. One he'll tell anything to. But most importantly, one he can't lie to.

"Now," the communist continues, "why are you out after curfew?"

written by Jam on Nov 23, 2010 02:41

"Thanks!"

I look at Massacrebot, then at Lucas-R. Hmm... Lucas-R seems a bit unsure...

“Don’t worry! Besides the fact that worrying is treasonous, it’s not like I’m actually going to use the barrel or anything. (Unless Speed-Y orders me to...) I’m not even sure what kind of barrel it is!”

I look at the barrel, try to figure out if it’s a pistol barrel or a rifle barrel, and try to determine how many shots it has left.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 23, 2010 08:55

“As I was saying, I am on a secret mission under the direction of the higher-ups. I don’t know all the details of what the mission involves, but I do know that it’s probably best to remain quiet about it. The enemy may very well have access to the surveillance equipment in this very room. Discussing what I know about the current status of the mission in this potentially insecure location might jeopardize its completion.”

“In any case, I seem to be having some memory issues following a recent encounter, which might make telling you details of the mission somewhat difficult anyway.”

written by Lightning4 on Nov 23, 2010 13:59

“We could always use it as a weapon too, maybe. Shoot at it with a non-treasonous laser pistol or rifle or something. That isn’t treason, right? Maybe?”

I shrug.

written by Speeder on Nov 23, 2010 15:54

“Thank you Jam and Lucas.”

Then I continue walking forward happily.

Of course, trying to not bump into dead stuff, blocking stuff, and all that sort of that stuff, you know, stuff, stuff stuff.

written by Gligar on Nov 23, 2010 16:26

Corridor Q-epsilon

Everyone starts moving again. Again.

As they do, Jam-O inspects the barrel. It is a YELLOW laser pistol barrel with four shots left.

The team passes through the corridor without further incident.

The Hub

As it happens, the light seen from the corridor was coming from The Hub – the centre of Central Subsector. This level of The Hub seems to be another food hall. The giant vidscreen is even active.

But there are none of the usual advertisements, no popups, no subliminals, and no Eye of The Computer watching over you. There is only one channel active, seemingly a news channel. And that is simply displaying a STAND BY notice. In small caps, even.

In addition to the one the team entered from, there are seven more exits on the perimeter of The Hub. Between them are serving hatches, all of which seem to be closed. One, however, is missing, as is some of the surrounding wall, leaving a sizeable hole.*

Interrogation room

“You... may have a point,” the communist answers. “The camera control room was taken by Computerist forces not long after it was liberated, and the feeds were secured. We still don’t have access.

“But there are still issues, like... how can you be on a mission if you can’t remember it? It sounds... suspicious.”

The concentration of gas increases.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 23, 2010 19:43

“Huh. Look at that hole... I think I can fit Nukabot into it. Wonder what’s on the other side.”

I look around the room, noting the lack of certain mandatory things.

“No food... no Eye of the Computer... not even an AlgaePlus advertisement! I guess the commies got farther than our sector?”

written by Speeder on Nov 23, 2010 21:33

After a while I say.

“It is obvious that it has no Eye or advertisement, the compnode is down! And it is our job to fix it... If we don’t fix it, even if the sector don’t get nuked, how we will ever see again those cool ads?”

I go toward the hole thing.

written by Jam on Nov 23, 2010 21:42

“I bet the commies made that hole! They were probably fighting their way to the compnode. Maybe if we follow that hole, it will lead us to V level, and to the compnode!”

written by Gligar on Nov 24, 2010 00:57

The Hub

L4-O and Speed-Y look at the hole. And Jam-O. Let’s go that way, seems to be the consensus.

What’s behind the hole? A food preparation area. But no food. Maybe because the other wall has a big hole in it, leading to what looks like a cargo lift.

written by Speeder on Nov 24, 2010 01:17

“Probably Jam is right... There are a cargo lift there... But now I am worrying that they took bots up there too, it could get nasty, specially if the bots have better aim than they have”

I approach the lift anyway.

* It looks kind of forkbot sized.

written by Jam on Nov 24, 2010 01:52

"It looks like they just tunneled to the nearest lift... But why couldn't they just have walked to the lift, instead of going through a wall?"

Seeing the food preparation area, I decide to open one of my packets of Soylent RED. I take a small bite, and if I don't start vomiting or get horrible pains or anything, I try eating a bit more.

"Mmmmm... Soylent!"

written by 4616599 on Nov 24, 2010 16:09

I follow through into the hole.

"Hmm...well, you can't just smash through a wall like that without leaving any traces behind."

I look around for any unusual traces or lines.

written by Gligar on Nov 24, 2010 20:09

Food preparation area

While passing through the holes, it is noticed that whatever caused the holes seems to have just... pushed its way through. Much of the debris from the wall is pushed up against other doors in here and the cargo lift's landing.

Jam-O attempts to eat some Soylent RED. He manages to get a few bites down before intense pains stop him.

Interrogation room

"Comrade, answer me!"

written by Speeder on Nov 24, 2010 20:45

I call the lift.

"I wonder what sort of thing can just... do those holes without using explosives, the debris are not suggesting that it was explosions, and we would have heard it."

After a while I say.

"But I am pretty sure that EVERYONE heard that armoury explosion... This was fun"

written by Jam on Nov 24, 2010 23:17

"Ow! Maybe eating isn't such a good idea right now. But the Soylent looks so good..."

I try to close up the Soylent packet, and put in a different pocket from my other things, in case it leaks or something.

"So that's what that explosion was! That was back when I met Lucas-R. I can't believe it's only been a few hourcycles since that happened, it seems like much longer..."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 24, 2010 23:41

"Maybe Nukabot here made these holes trying to get to the bunker," I joke as I pull up behind Massacrebot.

I wait for the lift as well. I search for anything to munch on while I wait.

written by Gligar on Nov 25, 2010 12:35

Note: At this point, EZ-Web-Hosting (the forum's host at the time) decided to have an unscheduled glitch, resulting in the loss of a weeks' worth of posts, and a recommendation to Alex that the site be moved. But the Paranoia game was being archived here anyway, so we just keep on going.

Cargo lift landing

The lift is called. According to the indicator, it's coming from W Level.

There is talk of the armoury explosion from earlier. The details are news to Jam-O and Lucas-R. "You blew up an armoury? Cool!"

Nukabot answers L4-O: "I have no memory of such an event..." But L4-O doesn't seem to be listening... he's searching for something, probably food. He finds a Vita-Yum Meal Substitute Bar in the remains of the food preparation area.

written by Jam on Nov 25, 2010 13:27²⁵⁸

I have a sudden disorienting flashback of Massacrebot charging at the combots. It lingers for a few momentcycles before I snap back to the reality.

I take a look around and see L4-O searching around for something, with a hungry look in his eyes. I offer the opened Soylent RED to him.

"Do you want what's left of this packet of Soylent RED? I only took a small bite..."

written by Speeder on Nov 25, 2010 14:55

I shake my head.

"No, not me... I guess it was Cryo or Joris, since they were on the recon team that went to do recon near the armoury."

After a while I say.

"Huh... it sounds more like Joris doing, Cryo usually don't explode stuff."

written by Gligar on Nov 25, 2010 17:13

Cargo lift landing

Jam-O has a sudden flashback to the event of a few minutecycles ago, when Massacrebot was tearing up one of the combots at the checkpoint. It soon passes. He notices L4-O looking for food, and offers his opened packet of Soylent RED.

Speed-Y muses about the armoury explosion. It was caused by either Cryo-R or Joris-O, most likely the latter.

The lift continues to descend. It's now on S Level. Shouldn't be long.

written by Speeder on Nov 25, 2010 17:59

I point my guns to the elevator, and wait.

²⁵⁸ JAM: (ooc: Yay! Gligar kept a backup! Another reason he's such a good GM)

written by Jam on Nov 25, 2010 18:00

I also aim my laser pistol at the lift, and wait.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 25, 2010 23:45

I shrug and take the Soylent RED offered to me and eat some of it.

I hum a small friend computer product related tune while I wait for the lift to arrive.

Cargo lift landing

People are pointing their weapons at the lift. Maybe they're expecting someone?

(Except L4-O. He's munching on some Soylent RED that Jam-O gave him.)

Soon, the lift arrives, and this time, the door's closed.

It's opened from the inside, by... looks like the smallest model of warbot. You know, the kind that can fit normally inside a standard corridor.

written by Speeder on Nov 26, 2010 02:07

I peer for a while at the warbot, without shooting.

"Erm... what is your allegiance?"

written by Jam on Nov 26, 2010 03:57

I aim my laser pistol at the warbot.

"You're not with the capitalists, are you?"

written by Cryoburner on Nov 26, 2010 04:07

"Oh, sorry! The lighting in this room is rather distracting. Perhaps we could replace the bulb in that lamp with a model designed for more pleasant viewing conditions? I do have a spare with me..."

"As for the mission, I remember some details, and have put them into context with other clues to figure out what I'm supposed to do and where I need to go. And most of all, I remember that the mission is very important. Perhaps even more important than the efficient lighting of this room."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 26, 2010 12:25

I'm too distracted eating to care about the warbot.

The warbot ignores the team's questions and growls, "Out of the way before I blast you." About what I'd expect from a warbot. It does seem to glare at Jam-O for a second as it speaks, though.

"If you find the light distracting, you'll love this!

One wall of the room suddenly begins to glow a dull RED. At the same time, it gets rather... warm in there.

written by Jam on Nov 26, 2010 18:38

I keep my laser pistol aimed at the warbot, and talk to L4-O, who seems to be a distracted by his eating.

"L4! I think we should move out of the way..."

written by Speeder on Nov 26, 2010 20:14

"Ok team, since the warbot seemly is not in mood to engage us unless we get in his way, let him pass."

And I step aside.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 27, 2010 00:23

"Hey, you're right. I really do love that. It's rather cozy."

"In any case, I should probably be going. I'd love to stay and chat with you in this sauna, but I really should be getting back to that mission and all."

"Say, maybe you could come with me and help out. I'm not sure I really need help, but it probably wouldn't hurt to have someone around who might know the layout of this sector a little better."

written by Lightning4 on Nov 27, 2010 00:47

I finish my meal just in time to hear Jam speak.

"Huh? Oh. Okay."

I navigate Nukabot to the side of the room to give the warbot room to pass.

written by Gligar on Nov 27, 2010 02:12

Cargo lift landing

Jam-O tries to distract L4-O but it's not needed, as he finishes up just in time. Nukabot is moved out of the way, just as Massacrebot moves aside.

Lucas-R manages to scramble out of the way just as the warbot starts moving.

But it doesn't move far. It stops as it reaches Massacrebot, turns, and says, "You're not a warbot, are you?"

Massacrebot's HUD tells a more detailed story: the warbot is sending some sort of transmission.

Interrogation Room

"It's not that easy," is the reply. "You can only leave when I say you can. And that will happen when I have every piece of information I want.

"I want manes. I want locations. I want everything you can... 'remember'... about your mission. And to motivate you..."

The room gets hotter. "This chamber can reach temperatures hot enough to melt that chair. But you will be terminated long before that. If you want to live, you will talk."

written by Speeder on Nov 27, 2010 02:59

I reply.

"Not exactly. This is a prototype bot that is quasi-warbot but has a clone pilot."

Then I try to figure what the warbot is doing... or to where he is sending data.

written by Jam on Nov 27, 2010 03:22

I remain silent, and continue aiming my laser pistol at the warbot.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 27, 2010 04:14

"Hmm... so this is more like a tanning booth then? I suppose I wouldn't want to get sunburned from being in here too long..."

"Wouldn't it be better to disclose information about the mission in a more private setting though? In a one to one setting, I could show you informative materials about my mission, with less chance of being overheard by the enemy, after all. You wouldn't want me to leak potentially useful top-secret information to the enemy, would you?"

written by 4616599 on Nov 27, 2010 05:38

Snapping out of my daze again, I look at any equipment that warbot has. I shift behind Nukabot with a blaster just in case.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 27, 2010 09:40

"Mm. Good snack. I needed that, thanks."

I continue watching the warbot.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 27, 2010 10:24

"This is a quasi-warbot? I have seen petbots with more weapons!" That elicits a growl from Massacrebot.

Meanwhile, Speed-Y tries to analyse the warbot's transmission, but can't even begin to make sense of the protocol in use.

The warbot seems to concentrate on Massacrebot. The two bots seem to be communicating.

Interrogation room

"What is... 'tanning'? What is... 'sun'? It looks like you have more to offer in this environment!"

The room continues to grow hotter. Uncomfortably so.

written by Cryoburner on Nov 27, 2010 21:19

"I don't recommend intimidating it..."

I watch for possible ensuing carnage.

written by Jam on Nov 27, 2010 23:42

"Calm down Massacrebot!"

I turn to the warbot.

"Mr. Warbot, please don't do that. Massacrebot can lose control when it feels threatened. While I'm sure it wouldn't be able to harm a bot as well armed as yourself, fighting would be a waste of time. We're both on the same side here, there are others you can fight."

written by Gligar on Nov 28, 2010 01:40

Interrogation room

"Yes. And it will keep getting hotter in there... unless you talk!"

"Again! What are your plans? Who are your accomplices? What do you know of Outside?!"

Jam-O gets a cone rifle pointed at his face. "Quiet you!"

The two bots continue their apparent conversation.

written by Speeder on Nov 28, 2010 02:48

I just... do nothing?

I become very quiet, and do nothing.

Cargo lift landing

The warbot turns, and glares at Joris-O. In a low, dangerous voice, it asks, "What did you just say?"

Massacrebot starts growling again. Nukabot answers, quietly, "Apparently, the warbot, and the rest of its shipment, was intercepted by a group of clones who claimed that they had been reassigned to a high-clearance project, the details of which were still under wraps. Soon after, they were attacking the sector. It's trying to get Massacrebot to join it."

Interrogation room

Cryo-R begins to feel a burning sensation.

written by Speeder on Nov 28, 2010 17:38

After a while I say.

"Sorry Mr. Warbot for what the other one here said..."

[273]

And then I must decide, save friends and risk explosion?
Explode and don't save friends?

Explosion is better!

Big explosions are even better!

I attempt to pick-up the squealing barrel and shove it in the easiest weapon barrel that it can be shoved in the warbot.

I ignore eventual flamethrower on me, unless it is too hot.

written by Jam on Nov 29, 2010 22:35

I feel an intense burning, too intense. All I see in my last moments is a great ULTRAVIOLET light, and my last thoughts are something like "So this is why dying is treasonous!". Then... nothing.²⁵⁹

Cargo lift landing

L4-O drops off Nukabot and tries to use it as cover. He's a bit slow due to his broken leg, though.

Speed-Y explodes. No, not literally, but I'm sure he would if he could 😊

Instead, he just shouts, and has Massacrebot pick up the laser pistol. Despite the arcing, the bot complies without problems. A warning light appears on the HUD, but I'm sure that's nothing important.

Shoving it into a weapon barrel is a little more difficult. The warbot's still jiggling about and trying to aim a weapon at someone. Specifically, a grenade launcher. It isn't having any luck. But it's enough for Massacrebot. Shove!

Jam-O's body doesn't do much 😊²⁶⁰

"In any case, I recently experienced some memory loss in an encounter with what appeared to be a troubleshooter team. I was apparently captured by them, and they appeared to deem me a threat, as they had me restrained, despite my extensive injuries. Another clone there was also restrained and even more heavily injured. One of them further injured my hand, and I assume my prior injuries were likely caused by them as well. From what I can gather, my mission involves reconnaissance work, and following this team, who seems to be headed to central subsector. Honestly, I don't recall any of them explaining what they were ultimately trying to accomplish, though from what I recall, my mission involves preventing destruction of the sector. For that, I

written by Lightning4 on Nov 30, 2010 08:13

I try to regather my... cool, by patting out flames on my jumpsuit.

After that's dealt with, I peek around Nukabot and let loose with my blaster again.

written by 4616599 on Nov 30, 2010 08:25

I yelp as the flames swirl around. "Ow! Wait, the ammunition box..."

Keeping my head shielded, I attempt to retrieve the box of laser pistol barrels and push them behind Nukabot, or any place less liable to get toasted.

written by Mingamango181 on Nov 30, 2010 09:36

"Ow! Ow! Ow! Hot! Hot!!!"

I fall backwards, and off Nukabot, and I tumble into the ground head first. I think of using my non-broken hand to shield my head, but I really would prefer not to have both arms broken.

written by Speeder on Nov 30, 2010 12:19

I now attempt to shove the warbot away from me, even better if I can point his weapons somewhere else other than the team (even better if I can point him not on me too).

Interrogation room

"These troubleshooters... where did they come from? What are their names? Their appearances? I want everything!"

Another voice, quieter, seems to be talking over a com unit or something.

The room continues to get hotter, Cryo-R's jumpsuit begins to smoulder.

Cargo lift landing

L4-O's jumpsuit is still smouldering, but not as bad as before. He pats it out before firing round Nukabot again. He hits the warbot but his shot merely scorches the armour.

Joris-O manages to retrieve Nukabot's ammo box and put it in a safe place.

Mango-R falls off Nukabot and hits his head on the ground, blacking out in the process.

Speed-Y and Massacrebot are still trying to deal with the warbot. This time, by pushing it away. Wow, the warbot's heavier than it looks.

written by Speeder on Nov 30, 2010 22:11

After a while I figure that I cannot push the warbot away, so instead I back away while shooting.

written by Lightning4 on Nov 30, 2010 23:04

I open fire with my blaster some more as well. Hopefully I don't hit Massacrebot while it's moving...

Cloning station

The clone forming in the tank is now recognisable as Jam-O. Or Jam-R. Or whatever.

But I still haven't identified where that is...

Cargo lift landing

The warbot erratically aims its flamethrower at Massacrebot and fires it, hitting the wall about a foot to Massacrebot's left, and bubbling the paint from the clearance stripe. In response, or probably just because Speed-Y wants it, Massacrebot opens fire with its slugthrower again. Energy arcs towards the slugs as they approach, causing one to veer off. The other two manage to hit the warbot's bot brain cover, popping it open.

L4-O also opens fire. He hits the flamethrower, which explodes in a shower of sparks.

written by Speeder on Dec 01, 2010 04:13

I continue moving backward and shooting the warbot.

I try to not step on anyone or bump into Nukabot.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 01, 2010 08:30

I aim and shoot towards its brain! It's a zombie, right? Zombies can be killed by shooting them in the brain, right? Zombie warbot?

I just shoot.²⁶¹

The cloning tank finishes its work, and Jam-O (R?) drops to the floor, shivering and slimy.

Cargo lift landing

The warbot is unable to aim properly now. Indeed, one of its weapons seems to have jammed.

²⁶¹ JAM: (ooc: That warbot is scary! All it needs is about 5 more chainsaws and a giant syringe waving around (perhaps also muttering "treat... treat..." in a zombie-like voice) and it would be something straight out of a nightmare! My nightmare... 😊)

²⁶² SPEEDER: (ooc: 4kk post is the perfect example of shoot first and ask/examine later 😊)

To Speed-Y, this is just an excuse to shoot. Massacrebot does. Three times. Unfortunately, its aim is off. I guess that arcing is affecting it as well.

L4-O notices the exposed bot brain, and blasts it.

(Incidentally, how does L4-O know about zombies? I thought the Reanimator Project was classified... especially after [REDACTED]...)

Joris-O has the same idea, shooting his own blaster at the bot brain. The poor thing wasn't rates to withstand blaster fire, and explodes in another shower of sparks.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 01, 2010 23:02

I peek out from behind Nukabot, hoping things are quiet now.

Cautiously, L4-O approaches the warbot. It's still twitching around, but that seems to be just the arcing energy misfiring some motors or something.

I look around the cloning station, and try to figure out where I'm at. Then I look for the chemical showers...

I look around to examine the damage in the room... warbot parts, damaged wall paint, char-marks on Nukabot, a blackened corp-

"Oh dear Computer." I say as I notice that it is the rather crispy remains of Jam.

"Well, scratch one off our team." I say while wincing a little.

"Wonder where he is right now...?"

I shrug and approach the remains of the warbot and investigate them while trying to avoid being shocked by the arcing energy.

written by Speeder on Dec 02, 2010 03:36

As I notice that Jam died, I just stare at his corpse for a while.

"Oh no... I now wonder where he is..."

After a while I say.

"Ok, can someone put his stuff, specially his brevet, somewhere safe? Like... the ammo box? I think that if that ammo box explodes, we would not need the brevet anymore anyway..."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 02, 2010 05:06

I listen to Speed while searching through the warbot. "We could... uh... just take the corpse with us I guess. It's not like he's going to get any deader. That's if Nukabot doesn't object, I guess."

Cloning station

Looking around, it's easy to see that this definitely isn't the bunker's cloning station. There are more cloning tanks, for one. In addition, the security clearance here seems to be predominantly INFRARED.

There is a door marked CHEMICAL SHOWERS, though.

Cargo lift landing

L4-O finally realises that Jam-O was terminated. Maybe they could take his corpse with them? Nukabot doesn't comment. Not that L4-O cares, as he's inspecting the remains of the warbot. The bot brain is ruined, as are several of the weapons. Several more seem to be in good condition, though.

Speed-O wants someone to take care of Jam-O's equipment. But it seems that everyone is still recovering from the battle.

I search for the oxygen masks and put one on. Once I've secured the mask to my face, I walk into the chemical showers and attempt to start them...

While I'm showering, I try to recall the last thing I was doing before I died.

While everyone is confused, and dizzy, and all, I try to fix Massacrebot aim. If I need a target, I shoot random debris that don't have any friendlies in the way.²⁶⁴

"Hmmm. I wonder if I can hack off a weapon and take it with me. I'm not sure what clearance they are though."

I fiddle with one of the weapons.

Interrogation room

After a minutecycle or so of thought, the wall stops glowing, The room seems to get cooler.

"Take us," the communists tell him, "to where you last saw them."

Chemical showers

It turns out that the showers are individual booths here.

Once Jam-R/O has donned a mask and pressed the START button, the cubicle closes and the shower starts.

Jam-R/O thinks back... how did he die? He seems to remember a warbot...

Cargo lift landing

Speed-Y starts working on Massacrebot's aim. He does this by shooting at debris. The aim is way off.

L4-O dodges all this and inspects some of the warbot's weapons. It looks like they need tools to remove.

written by Speeder on Dec 03, 2010 01:45

I fiddle some more, trying to fix the aim of the Massacrebot.

"Hum... Massacrebot aim got royally messed up... It is now shooting like a commie, it is my duty to fix it and make it less commie."

written by Jam on Dec 03, 2010 02:09

I wait for the shower to finish...

When it does finish²⁶⁵, I exit, and look for a RED jumpsuit to wear (since I'm not sure if the brevet still applies to my next clone). I also look around for anything that might indicate what level I'm on...

written by Lightning4 on Dec 03, 2010 10:41

"Please! And maybe try to do so without killing me in the process."

"So what should we do with this pile here? I think we'd need some tools to pull those weapons off. Not sure it's safe leaving it here though.

Either way, I go back to Nukabot and get back on. I drive back up towards the warbot and Massacrebot... while keeping some distance from the latter.

Cargo lift landing

Speed-Y tries again. Ah! That's more like it.

L4-O returns to Nukabot and drives it forward, narrowly avoiding a slug from Massacrebot in the process.

²⁶⁵ JAM: (ooc: if it does during this turn)

Chemical shower

The shower continues. It doesn't take long, though. This is a single cubicle, after all. It soon stops and drains itself.

Exiting, Jam-R/O looks around and finds a rack of jumpsuits. Looks like they're all INFRARED.

Still no word as to where this is.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 04, 2010 00:42

I try to regain consciousness, but end up flailing about in the empty space that my mind is in. I see fuzzy hats starting to chase me, and I try to run away...

Now that Massacrebot is fixed, I look around to see how is everyone.

"Huh... Cryo is not here, Jam is dead, who else is missing? Kristos?"

written by Jam on Dec 04, 2010 01:57

I talk quietly to myself.

"Hmm... Well, I guess it's better than nothing..."

I take one of the INFRARED jumpsuits and put it on.

"Now, aren't there some forms I need to sign? I can't really remember the proper procedure, it must be because of the brainscrub. Hmm... I don't remember Lucas signing any forms though..."

I look around for some forms that might need signing, also checking any computer terminals that might be nearby.

written by Gligar on Dec 04, 2010 02:26

Cargo lift landing

Speed-Y looks around, confident that he's fixed Massacrebot. Looks like everyone's here (except Jam-R/O and Cryo-R, obviously) , but a couple of people look like they're just following along on autopilot, instead of actively choosing what to do. Mango-R, for example, looks like he's sleepwalking.

Cloning station

After putting on an INFRARED jumpsuit (they're not really all that bad once you get used to the starchiness, and the smell... you'd probably forgotten all about those, hadn't you?) Jam-R/O looks around again. Nope, there don't seem to be any forms lying around. There is a Computer terminal on a desk opposite another door, but it seems to be offline.

written by Jam on Dec 04, 2010 03:02

I twitch a bit, and close my eyes. Not filling out the proper forms sounds treasonous... Even the thought seems to cause me pain...

I look up suddenly and scan the walls for cameras. Surely anyone watching will understand?

"I looked, but I can't find any forms to sign... Oh, well, I guess I'll just move on..."

I walk toward the nearest door (RED or below) and attempt to open it a crack, very quietly. I peek outside. (If I can't open the nearest door, I search for a different one, and try to open that one.)

written by Speeder on Dec 04, 2010 03:22

I then start to wonder what to do with the warbot. After a while I decide to just leave it there, and proceed to the elevator.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 04, 2010 05:32

In my mind, I continue running. Shots fire from both the left and right sides, but I keep going. I eventually hit a wall, and as I look back, I see the fuzzy hats. From them, they've grown arms and hands. One of them grabs my neck and starts choking me. I cough and gasp loudly.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 04, 2010 06:57

I follow Massacrebot and drive onto the lift too if there's room. Or if it's still here. Don't want to make the same mistake twice!

I look around and spot an unconscious Mango.

"Huh. Someone go check on that guy."

written by 4616599 on Dec 04, 2010 10:49

"That's funny. Feels like my legs are moving autonomously."

I look at Mango-R. "I still seem to have some food in my backpack...could rouse him. Well, it worked earlier. Maybe."

I wave a bar of Soylent RED round his lips.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 04, 2010 11:04

After a minutecycle or so of thought, I respond...

"Yes. We should go."

I then continue waiting, fastened tightly in my chair with various unfastenables.

written by Gligar on Dec 04, 2010 17:38

Cloning station

Jam-R/O looks around furtively, and notices a couple of cameras. He walks, a t a normal pace, to the door, opens it a crack, and peeks through. There are... three, maybe four PRPF members outside, patrolling. They seem to have a very precise route, one which Cryo-R would probably be scrutinising to see if it was, in fact, exactly the same each time.

Cargo lift landing

After pondering about the warbot for a few moments, Speed-Y walks Massacrebot onto the cargo lift. Yes, it's still here. Nukabot follows, leaving a limited amount of space for clones.

Joris-O tries the food trick again, with some Soylent RED, on Mango-R. It's difficult to tell if it worked or not, but that clone does start coughing and gasping.

Interrogation room

As Cryo-R waits, the restraints on his chair unlock. A PRPF member enters and pulls him to his feet, before abruptly letting him fall to the floor due to burning his hand on the still smoldering jumpsuit. "Come with me."

written by Speeder on Dec 04, 2010 22:43

After everyone is inside (including the botcommie head and the ammo box) I press the button to the V level.

written by Jam on Dec 05, 2010 00:46

I look at the PRPF patrol. Hmm... I've got no weapons, and if they catch me sneaking around, I'll probably be tortured for information... Maybe, instead of being secretive, I should be really obvious...

I take off my jumpsuit, and run, screaming and naked, into the corridor.

"AHHH!!! CAPITALISTS!!! THEY KILLED MY LAST CLONE!!! YOU HAVE TO STOP THEM!!!"

I run to the patrol, keeping my head down in case they recognize my face. I try to act disoriented, as if I just been decanted only secondcycles ago, and immediately grabbed a jumpsuit and ran into the corridor.

"Hurry, you have to stop them! T-There was a group of clones, singing computerist ad jingles, and riding some sort of...forkbot thing... They were shooting us, they killed my comrades! I started running away, then... I can't remember what happened! They must have killed me! THEY KILLED ME! THEY'RE COMING!! AHHHHHHHHHHH!!!"

I run down the hall (and away from the patrol), screaming at the top of my lungs.²⁶⁶

Cargo lift

Speed-Y waits for everyone. Even those who are sleepwalking, or are guided by forces unknown.

It takes a little while, because Mango-R is still choking in his sleep. But eventually, everyone is crammed into the lift.

Massacrebot jabs the V button, and the lift starts to rise.

Corridor, outside Cloning Station

Jam-R/O seems to have decided to forego stealth. He's removed his jumpsuit and is running past the guards, who look on in bewilderment. One thinks to look into the cloning station, and goes to check another door. Another two follow after Jam.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 06, 2010 20:50

Cargo lift

L4-O sings one of the B3 jingles as the lift rises.

You'd think it took two daycycles or something (definitely not due to commie sabotage of my databases), but really it only takes three minutes. Eventually, though, the lift stops at another landing.

U Level Corridor

Cryo-R is dragged to his feet, then, when he falls to the floor again, is just dragged along. Looks like his captors are heading back to the stairwell. They seem to be ignoring his request.

Corridor

Jam-? leads the PRPF clones down the corridor, screaming. He hurtles through a door, into a concourse, and continues right through. The PRPF continue following. Even after he stops yelling. He's beginning to run out of breath.

written by Jam on Dec 07, 2010 01:31²⁶⁷

I look (following signs if I have to) for any nearby lifts that I could run into...

If I don't see any lifts, I run into the nearest room I can find, and attempt to lock the door behind me. Then I try to hide underneath any furniture I can fit under.

If I happen to see any unclaimed weapons along the way, such as laser pistols or rifles, blasters, slugthrowers, knives, pens, hammers, cannons, slingshots, grenades, cone rifles, long metal poles, bombs, crossbows, flamethrowers, chainsaws, syringes, broken glass, saw blades, swords, heavy pieces of rubble, axes, tasers, B3, or any other weaponlike item, I take it, and bring it with me.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 07, 2010 06:25

²⁶⁷ JAM: (ooc: oh, do I still have the INFRARED jumpsuit?)

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 07, 2010 10:28

I no longer see the fuzzy hats. Everything is dark. There's nothing, other than some voices, faint, but there.

written by Gligar on Dec 07, 2010 18:20

Corridor, past the concourse

Jam-? keeps running. He finds that the corridor is short, and ends in... what appears to be a food vat hall, three levels tall. He's on the lower level.

As he passes a rack, he picks up a corroded implement which could, at one point, have been a vat stirrer. All that's left is a heavy metallic handle. He's kind of like to hold it in both hands, but he'd have to do something about the INFRARED jumpsuit he's still holding.

The PRPF clones draw closer. Jam-? sees that he has two choices: either risk squeezing under a three-level-tall food vat full of... what do they call it these days? Vat protein? Gunk? Something else? - or make a dash for the cargo lift in the hall's central column.

Cargo lift, Central Subsector

The landing outside the lift is dark. But Nukabot's lamps come on, and reveal that this is indeed V Level. Just one problem... it's VIOLET Clearance.

Looks like Mango-R has stopped dreaming, at least.

written by Speeder on Dec 07, 2010 19:07

After a while peering at the V level, and then more peering, I whip out my PDA.

"You know, maybe the misterious guy get this message..."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 07, 2010 19:37

"V-Violet!"

"Isn't that so high you can't even look at it without committing reason?"

"Or maybe that's ULTRAVIOLET... or higher..." I muse.

"I wonder what clearance Nukabot is? Maybe he's allowed to escort us in!"

written by Speeder on Dec 07, 2010 19:40

"Higher than ULTRAVIOLET? GAMMA? oh... I think that thinking about this is treason... Oh no, I mentioned it! I know GAMMA don't exist, but... Oh no, I said it TWICE!"

I turn off the Massacrebot microphone.

written by Jam on Dec 08, 2010 00:44

Cargo lift, Central Subsector

The VIOLET clearance is causing a problem.

Speed-Y sends a brief message over the PDC. Maybe "Monitor Guy" will see it?

L4-O wonders about the possibility of clearances above ULTRAVIOLET... and whether bots have clearances. Then he realises that they don't, they just go where they're programmed to go.

Speed-Y has trouble with the concept of clearances above UV... isn't speculating treason?

Food vat hall

The cargo lift seems to be far above... on Q level! Pressing the button causes the lift to descend... slowly...

The PRPF continue to approach. They run through, between the food vats...

written by Lightning4 on Dec 08, 2010 06:01

"ULTRAGAMMA?"

I silence myself before I say anything further.

I resume my singing of the non-traitorous B3 flavor jingle. Hopefully that'll keep me distracted long enough until we get word from Mr Mysterious.

L4-O tries to distract himself from clearance thoughts with jingles. Everyone else waits.

They don't have to wait long, since Speed-Y's PDC bleeps.

Food vat hall

The lift continues to descend. It's on H level, according to the indicator.

The PRPF seems to be having difficulties finding Jam-?, but they're still converging on him.

written by Speeder on Dec 08, 2010 17:49

I read the message, and then I say.

"Ok, that was strange, but I guess you was right, it is written here that we are to use the bots, get to the compnode and fix it. Also it says that bots in central subsector are probably compromised"

I then realize I forgot to turn on the microphone, and that people probably was hearing it all muffled. I turn on the microphone again and repeat what I said.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 08, 2010 18:16

"Well... if you say so."

I cautiously begin driving forward, off the lift. I tightly shut my eyes as Nukabot crosses into the VIOLET clearance area.

Realizing I'm most likely not instantly terminated, I reopen my eyes and look back.

"We're going to have fun convincing any loyal clones or bots why we're here though..."

written by Jam on Dec 08, 2010 23:44

I continue waiting for the lift to arrive, and continue hoping that the PRPF won't find me...

If the lift does arrive, I immediately dive in and press the button for V level.

Cargo lift, Central Subsector

Speed-Y starts talking about the message, before realising that he turned the microphone off. He corrects that and tries again.

L4-O slooooooowly drives forward, his eyes shut. This continues for a minutecycle, by which time Nukabot and its passengers are completely out of the lift, L4-O continues to drive forward. Pop-out laser turrets completely fail to pop out.

He opens his eyes. He's still alive. Good.

Turns out the cargo lift landing is at a three-way intersection. All three branches are VIOLET.

Food vat hall

As he's searching, one of the PRPF clones looks up, wondering... no, it's nothing.

But the noise of the cargo lift arriving definitely is something. And according to the level indicator, we're all the way down on C Sublevel, Deep Subsector.

Jam-? darts onto the lift... just as one of the PRPF clones is looking at it! "I see him!" he shouts, and starts running towards the lift.

Panicked, Jam-? scans the lift panel... and realises that he's just called the exact same cargo lift from before. You know, the one that doesn't go to V Level...

written by Speeder on Dec 09, 2010 01:55

I look around for a while, and seeing that nukabot is still intact, I move in the hall, then I look anywhere for signs that point to the... TI services area... Or something like that... Or... I was supposed to know the word TI?

written by Lightning4 on Dec 09, 2010 01:57

"So um... which way?"

I decide to do 'eeny meeny miny moe' to pick a direction.

"If we don't know where to go, I guess we could go that way."

I point in direction number #3.

written by Jam on Dec 09, 2010 02:32

I press a random button, just so I can get out of this place!

I throw the corroded stirring rod handle at the communists, and start screaming at them.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 09, 2010 16:02

Once in the stairwell, I have a look around, specifically to see whether the stairs continue upward to V level.

"So, did you want me to take you to where I last saw them, or where I think they were headed to? It's probable that they already left where they were before. I believe they were headed up to the next level, but I can't be sure if they went there, since someone pulled me away from what I was doing."

Intersection, V Level

Massacrebot exits the lift. Speed-Y looks around, looking for a sign or something. There are signs, alright, but they're in some kind of numeric code.

L4-O tries to decide which way to go. Eenie, meenie, minie, moe, catch a commie by the toe...

That one. He points.

This, of course, leaves those on foot in the cargo lift. Until Kristos-R sleepwalks out into the intersection, and completely fails to be killed by pop-out laser turrets that fail to pop out. After a moment, the rest shrug and step out on their own.

Cargo lift, Deep Subsector

As the door closes, something sounding very much like a slugshot ricochets off it.

The lift begins to rise. Jam-? looks at the panel, and realises that, in his effort to escape, he hit the button for I Level.

written by Jam on Dec 10, 2010 00:00

I suddenly realize that I don't seem to be meeting the requirements for proper jumpsuit use. So, I put the one I'm carrying on.

"Wait, why am I going to I level?"

I look for a cancel button, and try pressing the I level button again. Then, after thinking a bit, I press the Q level button. Hopefully I'll be able to take the same path as before... Even if taking such a path is treasonous...²⁶⁸

Then he realises that he doesn't want to go to I Level after all. As the lift crosses into Epsilon Subsector, he attempts to make the lift not go there. He presses the I button again, but that seems to do nothing. There doesn't seem to be a cancel button.

There is a Q button, though. He presses it.

Stairwell, U Level

By now, Cryo-R and his captors have returned to the stairwell. One barks, "Show us where they were last seen!" They don't seem to be interested in the nonstandard wall tiles, just barely visible one floor up.

written by Speeder on Dec 10, 2010 02:48

I look at the others, and then I look around.

"Ok Kristos, I know this is treason, but you mentioned it more than once anyway, so that stuff on the walls are hexadecimal? If they are, can you explain to me what they mean?"

If he does not reply I just take whatever door that leads to the direction of the center of the entire building.

I shrug and follow Speed, regardless of whether it was the direction I had initially picked.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 10, 2010 21:14

"Oh, sure! Sounds like fun!"

I quickly take a better look at the non-standard wall tiles, as best as they can be seen in the semi-inadequate lighting now present in the stairwell. I also examine the semi-inadequate lighting, which is apparently coming from my traveling companions.

I then begin descending the stairs, one at a time, counting aloud as I go.

Speed-Y has a load at the code... Could it be...?

He asks Kristos-R about it. But Kristos-R seems to be channelling Cryo-R, and is intently examining the code himself, ignoring everything else.

corridor. He hopes it'll lead him to the Hub on this level or something.

L4-O and Nukabot (and passengers) follow. The others start dragging Kristos-R away from the code on the walls.

The corridor, as it turns out, leads to a heavy bulkhead door marked with a sign, most of which is unreadable. Prominently displayed on the sign is the Eye of the Computer (which has been kind of lacking in the sector since the communists took over), overlaid with the letters JHT.

There are noises on the other side.

Stairwell

Speaking of Cryo-R, here he is, counting steps as he descends. One! Two! Three! Four steps! Hahaha!

The communists don't seem to think it's funny, though. "Shut up!" one yells, and pokes Cryo-R with a slugthrower.

written by Speeder on Dec 10, 2010 22:00

I try to figure what the noises on the other side are.

And I try to refrain from putting my head... erm, bot head on the door, since it would look utterly silly.

Speed-Y tries to get Massacrebot to listen to what's beyond the door, but, short of, well, placing the bot's head against the door, it can't make anything out.

And even then, it's kind of indistinct. But even so, there are clearly voices amongst the sound of jackboots. They're just... unintelligible, like they're not in a language you're cleared to know, or one that's treasonous.

Cargo lift

Jam-? prepares for what he'll find at I Level.

And when the door opens, he sees yet more PRPF members.

Facing the other way, as if they're guarding the lift.

Visible on them are a couple of weapons, notably a laser pistol (for a change) and one of those 'revolvers'. The weapons are just kind of hanging there in holsters...

Corridor, V Level

L4-O readies Turbo. He expects to need it.

A minute later, Speed-Y makes his move. Using Massacrebot, he attempts to tear down the heavy door, and is a little surprised with how easy it was to actually do it. I thought those doors were rated to withstand bots?

He correctly guessed that there were communists behind the door. They all seem to be wearing armour, and fuzzy hats. One communist has a more fancy fuzzy hat, and heavier armour. He turns to greet the newcomers. "So," he says, "this is the force sent to remove our presence... troubleshooters. With fancy toys, yes, but still... troubleshooters. You're trying to restart the compnode, yes? I'm afraid you find it... difficult... to even get that far!"

The communists turn, and ready their weapons.

Distribution Warehouse (I Level)

Jam-? chooses to try to steal the laser pistol.

²⁷⁰ JAM: (ooc: and spend a PP to increase my odds, I really don't want a fight...)

Yoink! The communist doesn't even feel it. By the time he realises that there was someone behind him, the lift's door has already closed.

Cargo lift, Epsilon Subsector

Jam-? inspects his acquisition. He's now the proud owner of a laser pistol with a fresh ORANGE barrel.

Stairwell

Cryo-R keeps descending. He pays attention to how the lights are off, and to how the communists are using wrist beacons to see.

written by Jam on Dec 11, 2010 20:06

I smile, extremely happy that I now have a laser pistol.

I look at the nice shiny ORANGE barrel, and suddenly realize I have no idea if my brevet still applies to me, since it was issued to my last clone... I might be committing treason...

Oh well... I put the laser pistol in an easy to access pocket, and wait while the lift heads to Q level...

written by Lightning4 on Dec 11, 2010 20:48

"Stalin, I take it?"

Whatever. A commie is a commie, and we've killed lots of commies. We're not going to have any trouble adding to our kill count!"

I slide back and try to take cover using Nukabot. I keep my aim on the lead commie guy, ready to fire if they do or if one of us starts shooting first!

written by Speeder on Dec 12, 2010 00:59

I just load a incendiary shell, launch it toward the commies, and if it work I watch how well fuzzy hats burn.

I wonder if commies run in circles when their heads are on fire.

written by Gligar on Dec 12, 2010 01:34

Cargo lift, Epsilon subsector

Jam-? admires the laser pistol for a moment, then thinks: does the brevet apply to his current clone? If not, he's committing treason...

Oh well. He pockets the pistol.

Just after he does, the lift stops. End of the line.

Distribution Warehouse (O level)

The lights are still off here, so it's dark.

Corridor, V Level

L4-O gets behind Nukabot, sing it for cover again. He aims Turbo at the obvious leader, ready to fire.

But it is Massacrebot who makes the first move, firing its own cone rifle. It scores a hit on one of the communist's fuzzy hats, exploding and setting fire to the hat, the communist's clothes, and a couple of other hats in the process. The communists suddenly start shouting and running around to try to put the fire out. It doesn't help, and only serves to spread the fire.

But enough communists remain fire free that one gets off a shot of her own. It hits John-R in the eye, causing him to cry out in pain and the eye to collapse.

written by Speeder on Dec 12, 2010 02:00

I look at John.

"You hit a loyal friend! That is loyal without mind control!"

I try to set other commies on fire too.

written by Jam on Dec 12, 2010 03:09

"Wow, that was fast! Such efficient lifts... Too bad I'm about to make them very inefficient..."

I laugh, and run my hands over the level buttons, pressing as many as I can. I dart out of the lift as the doors are closing...

"There, that should slow things down a bit..."

I look around a bit, then walk though the north-west most door (the same one we walked through before)...

I try to follow the same path we went before...

I open fire on the lead commie guy!

I watch for carnage!

I reload my cone rifle!

Whew, this sure is taxing on my body! But for the good of the Computer!

Corridor, V level

Speed-Y looks at John-R, and tells Massacrebot to fire again. But apparently, it's undergoing a self-test, and refuses to respond.

Turbo speaks, missing the communists. But the shell bursts on contact, releasing napalm all over the wall, starting a fire that just compounds the communists' fire worries. L4-O reloads.

Then it's Joris-O's turn. He fires his blaster at the lead communist, throwing him back into a bunch of other burning communists. They struggle to get up, but the fire is causing... problems.

Mango-R seems to snap out of the odd autopilot he was in. "What?"

Cargo lift (Q level)

Jam-? marvels at the lift's efficiency, before getting an idea and pressing all the buttons, like a Junior Citizen out for laughs. Then he makes a run for it as the door closes.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

As he's about to try to retrace his steps towards Central Subsector, he notices some lights coming from the other door: Cryo-R and his captors have arrived. Jam makes a run for it, but not before Cryo-R notices him.

Jam makes it into the corridor before tripping up over a dead communist.

written by Speeder on Dec 12, 2010 17:56

I at least read what the self-test is reporting.

After the thing finishes self-testing, I decide that this is too much fire already and fire normal slugs.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 12, 2010 20:12

"Hahaha! BURN, COMMIES! BUUUURRN!" I look a little crazed.

I fire again in the general direction of the commie mass, unsure of what shell I loaded this time.

I watch for results again!

written by Cryoburner on Dec 12, 2010 22:49

"Oh... Hello there!"

I yell to an infrared clone, who seems to be struggling near the entrance of the corridor at the other end of the warehouse.

"Say, have you seen those other guys from before? I think these fellows might wish to talk with them about something..."

I proceed to make my way over toward Jam-?.

written by Jam on Dec 13, 2010 00:07

"Ooof" I say as I fall to the ground. I quickly look up as I hear clones behind me, and run towards the next door (to the security checkpoint). I go as fast as I can.

Corridor, V Level

Speed-Y waits. Massacrebot is currently checking its memory card. There are no problems so far.

L4-O fires again. The new shell releases gas... no, not more VIOLET mess-with-people's-breathing gas. Just regular gas which makes people cough.

Massacrebot finally finishes its self test. Speed-Y switches back to the slugthrower and fires again. He manages to miss everyone.

Corridor Q1

Cryo-R starts to move towards Jam-? (who picks himself up and legs it down the Corridor Q4) before being restrained by the communists again. "You're not getting away that easily!" They pick him up again, and proceed to drag him over to Q4.

Corridor Q4

Jam-? continues running. The checkpoint door is open at the far end. As the communists proceed towards him, he ends up tripping over another dead communist.

written by Speeder on Dec 13, 2010 02:40

I decide since I am missing so much, shoot at the non-burning commies in a way to scare them to move near the burning-commies in a attempt to spread fire to even more commies.

written by Jam on Dec 13, 2010 03:00

I pick myself up and start running again. I make sure to avoid any dead commies this time...

Was that Cryo-R I heard behind me? Hmm... I wonder if I should help him...

written by Lightning4 on Dec 13, 2010 03:25

"Hmm. That wasn't very impressive at all... maybe that one was damaged..." I remark.

"Let's try that again!" I say as I reach for another cone rifle shell and reload.

I take aim, and once again fire!

written by Cryoburner on Dec 13, 2010 13:02

Whilst being pulled along through the corridor, I have a look around at all the passed out party-goers.

"Wow... that must have been some party..."

I see if any of those laying about within reach have one of those fancy wrist lights on them, and if so, try to borrow one or more. If I notice any other fancy lights, I try to borrow those too.

written by Gligar on Dec 13, 2010 21:04

Corridor, V Level

Speed-Y changes tactics. He has Massacrebot fire warning shots, designed to intimidate non-burning commies into moving close enough to the burning commiepile that they catch on fire. Six shots seems to do the trick. End result: every communist is on fire.

Which means that none of them can dodge the next cone rifle shot by L4-O. Blam! Burning commieflesh everywhere!

And... a big hole in the wall.

Security Checkpoint

The combots don't seem to react when Jam-? passes through.

Jam-? keeps running to the Hub.

The communists remain behind him. They're slowed down by Cryo-R, who insists on checking each and every dead communist for things that can emit light. He doesn't find anything on the first two he checks (except for some RED liquid he can't identify), and is about to check the third when he is pulled violently back by his captors. "Keep moving!" one yells. "Another misstep by you and you will be terminated!"

Speed-Y continues firing where the fire was, just in case some communist managed to stay alive. Another six should do it.

L4-O approaches, slowly. He can't see any living commies, either. Not much of anything except small piles of pre-Soylent.

Corridor Q-epsilon

Jam-? keeps running...

The communists start running, dragging Cryo-R behind them. Cryo-R tries to dance but they're having none of it,

"Fuzzy hats chasing me, shots firing at me, it wasn't the best amount of sleep I've ever had."

I start questioning in a fast manner.

"What's going on? What was happening before? Where are we? What are we doing right now? What just happened? What's with the fire? And what am I doing?"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 14, 2010 05:33

"So... I wonder who that fancy lead guy was. I'm not even sure there's anything left to identify."

"Oh well! Time to relieve them of their goodies, they won't be needing them!"

I check to make sure there's no gas first before I approach and start rifling through the mostly-RED mess. I try looking for anything the lead commie guy might've been carrying. If he's still here.

written by Jam on Dec 14, 2010 16:04

I rest for a few secondcycles, then notice the sound of clones running behind me.

"Gah! They're still chasing me!"

I quickly run into the forkbot-sized hole in the wall, and search for the cargo lift I know is there...

Finding it somewhat difficult to dance while being pulled along, I decide to help catch up with that infrared clone for now.

"That guy sure seems in a hurry to get to the party, doesn't he?"

written by Gligar on Dec 14, 2010 18:35

Corridor, V Level

Speed-Y notices the hole. There's a lot of computer equipment through there... it's a wonder the recent explosions didn't affect it.

There's also the remains of a door resting on the floor.

Mango-R is confused. What just happened? Et cetera.

L4-O tests the air. There is a strange smell in the air, but it doesn't seem to be doing anything. That out of the way, he investigates the ex-commie pre-Soylent for any items that may have escaped destruction. He finds a key. Strange... it's made of the same colour of metal as that jackobot down on D Level. Laser-etched into the key is the word RESTART.

The Hub

Jam-? looks around. There's the forkbot-sized hole... He runs through it, followed shortly by the communists ("Shut up!")

Outside the lift is a non-functioning warbot. It looks like the bot brain, and some of the weapons, have been destroyed.

Jam-? stops by the bot. It seems familiar somehow...

The lift, by the way, seems to be on V Level.

written by Speeder on Dec 14, 2010 19:26

I approach the computer equipment and try to figure what it is.

And if it has anything to do with our mission.

"I think that Violet level people that staffed this facility will not be happy if we break stuff here... Better not... explode things, unless necessary."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 14, 2010 20:53

"Hey, look what I found."

I hold up the key.

"It has the word RESTART on it. But erm, don't we just need to run those tapes through the compnode to get it running again?"

I approach Speed and Massacrebot while he tries to figure out what the computers are.

written by Jam on Dec 15, 2010 00:14

I run to the the lift, and call it...

I quickly look for something to hide behind, and hide behind it.

Or, if I can't find anything, I just do nothing, and completely ignore any communists that might be threatening to kill me...

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 15, 2010 02:06

Out of breath, I try breathing in and out heavily. I notice the smell, and try to ask about it.

"What's that smell? Or rather, what do you suppose that smell is?"

Another question to add to the queue.

written by Gligar on Dec 15, 2010 02:50

Corridor, V Level

Speed-Y continues to look through the hole. Did I mention that there's a lot of computer equipment through there? As in, a three-level space, approximately [DFSR] m by [DFSR] m? Completely filled with VIOLET-clearance racks of file servers, compute servers, power distribution boards, and more servers? Because... there is. Now, what sort of thing would need that sort of computing power?

In the middle of all this is a slight change of pace: what looks to be a master control board. It's outlined in white.

Cargo lift landing

The lift begins its descent. While he waits, Jam-? tries to hide behind the warbot.

Cryo-R instantly notices the warbot when he and the communists arrive. He notices its sub-optimal levels of performance... one might even say that it was non-functional.

The communists point their weapons at where they think Jam-? might have hidden. "Show yourself!"

written by Speeder on Dec 15, 2010 02:56

I look at everything, then at the white console thing.

"Seriously, even looking at that is scary... But... but... I think I will need to TOUCH it... Oh my... I hope I don't die a horrible death or something."

I ask the bot to open, if it refuse I try to convince it to open.

written by Jam on Dec 15, 2010 03:24

I look to see if they are pointing their weapons at me, and if they are, I slowly walk out with my hands up...

"You won't get anything from me, you pig-dog capitalists! The mighty reach of the revolution will never falter! You shall fall to our might, our power! Resistance is futile, you will be assim-uh-exterminated! Arr! Give up now, it's hopeless, you've already lost!"

I walk up to them slowly, in an angry way, as if I were a commie walking up the a loyal citizen.

(If they don't know where I am, I stay hidden)

written by Cryoburner on Dec 15, 2010 03:48

"Hey, maybe you should join... Wow! A large war-type bot in a state of sub-optimal performance!"

I inspect the warbot, and examine whether there might be any way to either repair it, override it's circuits to manually control its functions, or at least salvage some of its usable components.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 15, 2010 06:39

I watch Speed from a distance, Is that panel... ULTRAVIOLET? I worry about the multitude of horrible ways that you could die from possibly being near an ULTRAVIOLET object or person!

I go on to thinking happy thoughts instead. Happy B3-related thoughts.

JHT Sector Compnode

Speed-Y seems reluctant at the prospect of even looking at the white-lined panel.

He gathers the courage, though, and tells Massacrebot to open up. This time, it complies.

After exiting, Speed-Y looks at the panel (cringing as he does). There's a nameplate, reading JHT COPMPNODE MASTRER CONTROL - CLEARANCE ULTRAVIOLET. Under it are an array of buttons, lights, and switches, a screen, a couple of data ports marked TAPE IN and TAPE OUT, and a keyhole. Yes, he's actually going to have to touch it...

Everyone else just watches, and thinks happy thoughts and/or ad jingles. Joris-O even whistles to pass the time.

Cargo lift lounge

The communists seem to think that Jam-? is hiding behind a panel on the eastern wall, which seemsa to be loose. Removing it, they find nothing.

Temporarily ignores, Cryo-R goes to investigate the warbot. He realises that a new bot brain would be needed, as well as a new memory card, weapons to replace those destroyed in combat, and at least six monthcycles of tuning and calibration. It would theoretically be possible to control the bot's remains without one, but it would take daycycles of rewiring and tinkering just to get the thing to move, to say nothing of calibration. No, it would be better just to strip it down. And that would require tools that Cryo-R isn't even cleared to know exist.

Everyone is distracted when the lift arrives, and its door opens.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 15, 2010 17:24

"Wow! This could could take monthcycles to repair! I'd better get started!"

I take a spanner and a screwdriver out of my toolkit and get to work.

written by Speeder on Dec 15, 2010 17:45

I peer at the keyhole.

I turn to L4.

"Hey, you mentioned a key thing, did not you? I need a key here..."

Let's see what I can do here...

I figure how to put tape in the machine, what other ports there are, and I grab my PDC to get some information from it, maybe.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 16, 2010 00:18

"Yeah, I found one!"

I approach and hand Speed the key. I avert my eyes from the console though.

written by Jam on Dec 16, 2010 01:05

I notice Cryo standing nearby... I grab his arm and run into the lift (making sure to keep Cryo between me and the communists).

I quickly press the button for V level.

Cargo lift landing

Cryo-R, for some reason, either hasn't noticed that he can't possibly repair the warbot, or simply doesn't care. He pulls out a spammer and a screwdriver and... wait, what? Oh, he's testing the power supply.

But he doesn't get far along. While the communists remain distracted, Jam-? grabs Cryo-R, pulling him into the lift. He presses V, and the door closes... just as the communists turn to fetch Cryo-R. "Halt!" one cries.

As the lift rises, the sound of slugs hitting metal can be heard.

JHT Sector Compnode

Speed-Y looks at the keyhole... didn't L4-O find a key just now?

Yes, he did. He hands it over, while trying his best not to look at the console. He fails, and catches a glimpse.

Speed-Y continues looking at the panel. He looks at the TAPE IN/OUT ports. They're seven-pin round sockets, which look like something should be connected to them. There doesn't seem to be anywhere to mount the tapes on the panel.

He looks for other ports but can't find any. It doesn't look like his PDC can communicate with the panel.

written by Speeder on Dec 16, 2010 01:51

I decide to use the tape reader as mount for the tapes.

Also I see if the key fit the keyhole.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 16, 2010 04:55

"Ah! I looked at it!"

I try to avert my eyes again. Maybe look around at some of the "slightly" less treasonous VIOLET things around the room. Maybe see if there's anything nearby that'll help Speed.

written by Jam on Dec 16, 2010 13:28

I sigh in relief. That was close...

I smile at Cryo-R.

"I was wondering what happened to you! You must have ran into a bunch of commies. They didn't seem too friendly... Still, it's better than what happened to my last clone, he died! I remember something about a warbot... Anyways, we're going to V level! I bet the others are waiting there... So exciting!"

written by Cryoburner on Dec 16, 2010 16:32

"Hey! How do you expect that bot to get repaired with me in here? This diversion will likely delay its restoration by week-cycles, at the very least."

"Oh, I think those guys were tanning booth operators, actually. They were operating a tanning booth, in any case."

I look around the interior of the lift.

"I suppose I could inspect the integrity and general safety levels of this lift in the mean time..."

I begin my inspection of the lift, starting with a careful examination of its buttons. I begin testing each one, using the screwdriver to extend my reach if necessary. I make sure that each button depresses correctly with a satisfying click, and check whether they light up their corresponding lights, if applicable.

Speed-Y tries the key in the keyhole. It fits.

He decides to use the portable tape recorder for loading the tapes. Of course, he'll need to connect it to the panel.

L4-O, as he tries to not look at the panel again, decides to look at the VIOLET equipment instead. Hanging from the side of a rack, he finds some cables.

Cargo lift

Jam-? excitedly starts to bring Cryo-R up to speed with recent developments, but it seems that Cryo-R isn't interested. He starts "inspecting" the lift's button panel, by which I mean he presses all the buttons. They feel like buttons, and have a nice lit surround when pressed. And yes, they go click when you press them.

But the problem with pressing all the buttons in a lift is that... well, you end up stopping at every floor.

written by Speeder on Dec 16, 2010 23:00

I try to figure now how to connect the tape recorder on the panel to load the tapes...

Also I look if there are some monitor screen and keyboard, in case I need it... (I hope not!)

"Strange, Cryo still don't returned... I think we should not have let him away from us, he is probably inspecting stuff again..."

written by Jam on Dec 17, 2010 01:16

I restrain Cryo-R.

"No! Don't do that! It's treasonous to be late, and we're already late enough as it is..."

I try to look bored, in case we stop at a floor with communists.

Speed-Y puts the recorder case on the ground, and opens it. He tries to work out how to connect it to the panel. He realises he'd need two seven-pin round cables to connect the recorders IN/OUT sockets to the ones on the panel.

Say, what happened to Cryo-R?

Cargo lift

He's right here, being restrained by Jam-?. The lift has stopped at S Level due to Cryo-R's "inspection". The landing is dark, but there is the distinct impression of being watched.

"Hmm... Jim-R, you say... Sorry, I don't think I recall anyone by that name. Perhaps I could see some identification?"

In the mean time, I go back to inspecting the lift. I now focus my attention on lift's lighting sytem, checking to see whether it's fully operational, and whether the bulbs are all of the correct variety intended for use in lifts. To assist with my inspection, I employ the use of my crutch to remove any out of reach light panel covers.

Speed-Y doesn't notice Mango-R leave. He's too busy connecting cables. There, that should do it.

L4-O doesn't notice either. He3's too busy not looking at the ULTRAVIOLET panel. He wonders if any Eyes of the Computer are watching him here. Well, the compnode is down, right? Right?

Everyone else seems to be too busy doing whatever else that doesn't involve looking at the panel to notice anything else.

Corridor, V Level

The doors seem to be of the same class of high security door as the open one, through which the team arrived here. There are footsteps behind one of them.

Mango-R returns through the hole into the compnode room.

Cargo lift

The lift rises again.

Also, is Cryo-R blind as well as deaf? Those are clearly fluorescent tubes up there, not incandescent bulbs. Cryo-R of all clones should know that fluorescents give a light spectrum that is approved for cargo. And he should also know that cargo lifts don't need such things as light covers.

The lift stops again, this time at T Level.

I look out of the lift while I'm waiting for the doors to close again...

I also watch Cryo-R, in case he decides to 'inspect' the lift cables or something... I try to make sure he doesn't delay our arrival at V level any more than it already is...

Jam-? looks out. He sees a pair of clones approach the lift from a room across the corridor. They spot the pair in the lift, and one of them says, "There they are!"

Jam-? realises that that was one of Cryo-R's captors.

Cryo-R, on the other hand, is staring at the wall of the lift, as if he's trying to ascertain its structural integrity by sight. It looks about as intact as a lift usually is.

Speed-Y double-check his connections. Cable... cable... tape machine... okay.

He turns the key.

As he does, Computer terminals throughout the sector stop displaying static and start displaying REBOOTING. PLEASE WAIT.

A voice sounds throughout the room. A voice you know well.

"Beginning bootstrap. Warning: abnormal shutdown detected. Continuing.

"Please mount restart tape 1, and set device to playback mode."

Almost immediately afterwards, too soon to react, Com 1s squeal, before receiving another voice. "Comrades! Critical alert! Computerists have infiltrated compnode room! Converge and destroy!"

I pull out the Com 1 unit in my possession.

"Well, at least we know what's coming."

I scramble towards Nukabot, searching for a laser pistol barrel, or any other ranged weapon. I also take time to dispose of any waste that I no longer need, namely the towel, and the empty B3 can, by throwing them at the hole that we came through.

written by Speeder on Dec 19, 2010 03:27

I look at L4.

"Ok, where are everyone? Someone, even L4 if needed, get inside the Massacrebot, we need that firepower while I am working here."

I look at the console and start doing what it asks, while I do that I speak.

"Massacrebot, you will have to accept another pilot for a while, record the combat please, and you are forbidden to destroy the equipment here, don't shoot anything that might damage it."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 19, 2010 05:03

"That's uh... that's not good. Not good at all."

I turn to Nukabot temporarily.

"If I'm not riding you, you know what to do to those commies. We're probably going to need everything we've got to stop them. And you're probably one of the few things in this room that can kill commies efficiently without destroying the whole room in the process!"

I turn to Lucas.

"Think you could give piloting Massacrebot a shot? I think we might be better off if I'm firing Turbo. Or at least my blaster... I dunno what half of these shells do."

While I await a reply, I search my bag for a gas shell. Hopefully there's one in here somewhere!

Mango-R pulls out his Com 1, and heads towards Nukabot. Searching it, he finds the ammunition box, but then remembers that he can't do anything with it, since he doesn't have a laser pistol or slugthrower.

He shrugs, and discards his B3 can and towel.

Speed-Y looks troubled. He needs to get the compnode started... which means that he can't pilot Massacrebot. He speaks to the bot, which whimpers, and sets the recorder to play.

As soon as he does, the tape emits strange warbling sounds, broken up by loud screeching noises.

Though asked if he can pilot the bot, L4-O thing it would be better if he were using his own weapons, such as Turbo, which he arms as he continues. (But not with a gas shell...

²⁷⁵ Jam: (ooc: I heard the alert too, right?)

he seems not to have any of those.) Nukabot knows what to do without him piloting. Would Lucas-R mind piloting Massacrebot?

It seems that he wouldn't. With a grin, Lucas-R walks over and climbs into the bot. It closes around him.

Joris-O has an idea. Hiding between two computer racks, he pulls out his Com 1.

Cargo lift

The communists seem distracted by their Com 1s... first, a report about the compnode, and then, one about the culprits being the food people.

But they look up in time to see Cryo-R waving at them. They don't wave back. Instead, they shoot. With slugthrowers.

Their shots go wide, not even getting into the cargo lift.

Jam-? fires back. He hits one communist in the eye. Ouch!

He doesn't get a chance to make a second shot, because the lift decides to close up again. As before, it rises.

I survey the room for other entrances. I already know the one we came through, but I check to see if there's any others that could be locked or reinforced. Or blocked with something heavy.

Of course, I also look for something heavy that isn't computer server related.

written by Speeder on Dec 19, 2010 18:08

I see if the computer thing is really taking the information in the tapes, instead of just emitting loud noise.

If it is, I try to see if there are a position where I can at the same time watch the console and point my rifle toward somewhere useful to shoot.

"Hmm... those guys really should be more careful about where they aim those things. They nearly hit this lift! Careless behavior like that could easily cause a drop in the lift's operating efficiency levels."

I move on to examining the lift's floor, seeing as it's one of the few things remaining to be examined in its interior. I pay particular attention to any excessive wear that could result in a loss of traction, or any other apparent damage, for that matter.

written by Gligar on Dec 20, 2010 01:42

Cargo lift

Jam-? moves Cryo-R such that he is between himself and the lift's door. Not that Cryo-R minds, or even cares, because he's too engrossed in examining the floor. Which, by the way, has a raised grip pattern.

And the lift's door opens.

Jam-? finds himself staring right at a horde of commies.

JHT Sector Compnode

According to the panel's screen, it's about halfway through reading the tape.

Speed-Y lets it continue while pointing his laser rifle at the hole.

L4-O looks around the room for other exits. There is one, on the other side of the room. His next concern: anything heavy that isn't a server. There are a couple of filing cabinets that could possibly be moved.

From outside the hole, the sound of jackboots gets closer. And all too soon, the sound is identified as coming from a squad of the PRPF.

Accompanied by a combat.

written by Speeder on Dec 20, 2010 01:49

I move back to make room for all the new passengers.

"I haven't quite completed my safety and performance analysis of this lift yet though, so be aware that it could potentially get stuck, fail to open its doors, fail to close its doors, uncontrollably fall or spontaneously combust at any moment. It might be safer to take the stairs."

"Yes comrades, it seems the computerists have tampered with the lift's mechanisms. We are currently trying to fix Massacrebot moves over to the filing cabinets. It looks at one of them, reaches out, and picks it up. "Woah... I can't feel it when I pick something up," Lucas-R comments.

As he moves it into place behind the door, L4-O is contemplating the communists. In fact, here they come now. This group also has a combat.

Turbo speaks! Its proclamation hits the combat square in the... "head" I suppose... throwing it back.

Massacrebot finishes moving the other filing cabinet.

Joris-O keeps hiding, but prepares his blaster.

Wait... the ammo box! Where is it? Oh, there it is...

Cargo lift

Cryo-R continues to think that he's inspecting the lift, and tells the communists as much. They seem to mutter amongst themselves, and stay where they are.

Jam-?, going along with it, suggests that the communists take another method of transport. Like, say, the stairs.

The combat doesn't seem to like the idea. "Are you trying to tip me over or something? Me, of all bots? This is unacceptable."

But the communists seem to think otherwise. "They have a point, comrade bot," one says. "Were the lift to fail, better they take the fall than you."

The combat begins to speak, but the lift doors close before any of it can be heard.

Mango-R throws his spent laser barrel at the communists, having no other decent weapon. It doesn't hit them.

Another communist fires! The slug hits John-R in the chest. He collapses.

Massacrebot fires just as L4-O does. Both fire cone rifle shells at the communists, causing a nice explosion of blood and guts in the corridor. Lucas-R seems happy. "First shot! Cool!"

Cargo lift

Jam-? gets ready. The calm before the [REDACTED], so to speak.

He asks Cryo-R for his laser pistol.

And the then the lift stops. The door opens, revealing another horde of communists. "Are you part of the reinforcements?" one asks.

I talk to the communists as I'm walking:

"Yes, of course we are part of the reinforcements! Otherwise we'd be shooting at you! What's the situation? How many of them are there? Did yo-"

I suddenly trip as I notice I appear to be walking in a VIOLET corridor. Well, I'm not dead yet, so it seems Friend Computer is okay with troubleshooters being in the compnode...

written by Cryoburner on Dec 22, 2010 01:20

"Sorry, I'm just inspecting this elevator. I've heard someone mention that it might have been tampered with, so I really should focus on completing this inspection."

I set down my shelf on the floor at the entrance of the lift, which should presumably keep the doors from closing so long as the door safety mechanisms are in order. If they're not, I might have to note that on my report...

I then proceed to write up a quick note on a blank interoffice memo, reading "NOT IN ORDER" and place it on the shelf. I set a bell on it for good measure, and in case anyone has any questions.

Mango-R tries to hide behind Nukabot, but the forkbot just rolled forward to stop the communists' combot from moving.

Intersection, V Level

Looks like Cryo-R wants to continue his "inspection" of the lift by looking for a hatch into the shaft. There is one, on the roof. But Cryo-R's injuries kind of prevent him from using it. And anyway, the doors are still trying to close. The shelf is moving about even more as the force increases.

Jam-? heads forward. But he is stopped by the communist. "Sorry, comrade, I'll need a little more than that. And besides, I didn't hear anything." He seems to consider. "And we need as many clones as possible to retake the compnode."

I pace back and forth angrily.

"And at least send someclone to check the door, what does it matter if two or three clones aren't fighting for half a minutecycle? It's not like they're doing anything now anyways! It would be much worse if the capitalists sneak up on us from behind. They could probably blend right in and we would never know they were there! And then they plant a bomb, and then we all die, and mission failed, game over, we all lose, except the Computer, who will win, and we don't want that... Or are you actually with the capitalists? On hearing this, the combat goes into overdrive, forcing Nukabot back, and breaking a few bones in Jam-O's corpse, still draped over Nukabot's forks.

Mango-R uses the confusion to pick up a dropped slugthrower. It's a crude single-shot type, with an equally-crude holder for several slugs duct-taped on to the grip - or rather, it is the grip. It's probably seven kinds of treasonous, not that that mattered to the previous owner.. He tries to fire, but this thing is finicky. I again start to work with the computer, and hope that noone shoot me while I do that.

"Nukabot, use your forks to flip over that combat."

"Uh oh. Looks like they REALLY don't want us doing this!"

Seeing the increased danger, I lower my blaster and take Turbo back up.

I aim, and fire at the largest group of commies!

written by Jam on Dec 25, 2010 00:43

I look surprised.

"You mean your leader is fighting right now? I mean, he probably knows what he'd doing, being the leader and all... But what happens if he dies? Who will lead then? Hmm... I guess you'll always have me..."

I look at the group of communists, and try to judge how many are there.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 25, 2010 00:46

I try to pull off one of the slugs at the bottom of the grip, and try to load it into the slugthrower. I then try to take it slowly and more carefully when I fire again.

JHT Sector Compnode

Speed-Y's tape begins to warblescreech.

The combat tries to step away from Nukabot, but it's still being held by Massacrebot. Lucas-R seems to be having a hard time controlling it all of a sudden. The combat detects this, and tries to struggle free.

Nukabot replies, "I would, if it weren't being held by that walker."

L4-O fires! His shell passes into the corridor, where it starts spreading smoke.

Mango-R manages to fire the slugthrower this time. The recoil is enough to throw off his aim, though.

Intersection, V Level

The smoke continues spreading down the corridor. Communists begin to cough, and it becomes difficult to see.

written by Speeder on Dec 25, 2010 03:16

I look at the confusing stuff and then I say.

"Lucas, drop the combat on the ground, but flipped. Then shoot him."

I start to shoot any visible commies if any, or into the smoke. Until I can continue shooting, if needed I just reload instead.

"Hey, who had that yellow slugthrower?"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 25, 2010 08:24

Hearing Speed, I reply.

"Uh, I thought I gave it to you?"

I go back to shooting commies, with my blaster again. I hope it still has enough of a charge left!

Or rather, I shoot at commie-shaped blobs in the smoke...

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 25, 2010 10:54

I pull another slug off the grip, and insert it into the slugthrower. I attempt to aim it more carefully, by pressing the non-firing end back into my chest. I shoot again.

written by 4616599 on Dec 25, 2010 15:03

I shoot at the blobs again, then quickly fling my blaster into the smoke. Preferably rather hard.

written by Jam on Dec 25, 2010 15:31

I look at the smoke that's coming...

"Comrades! Run! They're planning an attack, and they would only do that if they already know exactly where we are! They'll probably use some kind of explosive. Run towards the walls, run into the smoke if have to! Just don't stay where you are, because that's exactly where they're expecting you to be!"

I lay down and proceed to crawl into the smoke.

"Stay near the floor, they won't be expecting you there! And they won't be shooting there either!"

written by Gligar on Dec 25, 2010 19:42

JHT Sector Comnode

It looks like the communists are having trouble with the smoke... there's even someone shouting to get on the ground, somewhere outside in the corridor.

Massacrebot drops the combot, which proceeds to shoot at it. It misses, and hits a rack of equipment instead.

Massacrebot then fires, scoring a hit on the combot's chassis. It starts sparking.

In between shots, Speed-Y wonders where that slugthrower went? L4-O thinks Speed-Y has it. And indeed, he does have a slugthrower... one of those unfamiliar ones that a few of the communists have.

From the noises, it sounds like between them, L4-O and Speed-Y have cleared away another three of the communists from this group. About time to, as L4-O finds that his blaster has run out of charge.

Mango-R tries again with the slugthrower. This shot's a bit better than the last, since it seems to actually hit one of the blobs.

Joris-O fires at the remaining... two? Three? Four?... blobs, hitting the same blob as Mango-R, before suddenly remembering what happened before, and throwing the blaster away.

Corridor, V Level

Jam-? starts crawling forwards. A few of the communists start to follow him into the smoke. The others... seem to stay where they are.

As he crawls, Jam-? notes the bodies in the corridor. The battle is continuing.

written by Speeder on Dec 25, 2010 20:19

I decide to load the cool slugthrower with yellow slugs.

written by Jam on Dec 26, 2010 00:04

I crawl to the bodies, then call to the communists following me.

"Look, the bodies of our fallen comrades! Even though they can no longer fight, they are still able to help! They're good camouflage! Why would the capitalists waste laser shots shooting dead clones, or apparently dead clones? So we should lay next to the bodies, and pretend to be dead ourselves! We wait for the capitalists to come near, then attack! They won't suspect a thing!"

I proceed to lay next to one of the bodies. I verify it really is dead, then take it's armor and put it on myself. Then I start searching the commie for any weapons or ammo, and take those too.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 26, 2010 01:23

"Bah! Out of power."

I search through my packs for a spare blaster pack. If I find one, I connect it and resume blasting away at the commies!

Speed-Y fishes out his slugthrower and loads it with six slugs.

L4-O also fishes around in his equipment, and finds that he does have a spare blaster pack. He swaps packs. But he seems to be having problems seeing through the gas.

Corridor, V Level

Jam-? tells the communists to camouflage themselves as dead bodies. But they seem to be ignoring him. They seem to be talking amongst themselves. "I think we should attack now..." "We can't wait around forever," and so forth.

Jam-? finds a dead communist wearing some kevlar. He takes it and the "revolver" the communist was carrying, and some slugs.

written by Speeder on Dec 26, 2010 03:11

I start to shoot the sound of standing commies.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 26, 2010 06:43

"Hm. I hope that gas keeps them at bay long enough."

I turn to Speed momentarily.

"How many tapes left to go? As much as I'd like to stay here forever killing commies, we can't unless we want to be radioactive and vapor-y..."

I keep my blaster trained on the gas cloud, ready to shoot any dirty commies that emerge.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 26, 2010 10:55

I load another slug, and wait cautiously for whatever is next, keeping the slugthrower aimed at where the hole was.

written by Jam on Dec 26, 2010 15:31

I crawl back over to the communists.

"Attack now, and you'll die, just like our comrades here. Go on, go charging in, let them blast you away with their lasers, and their cone rifles, and their bots, and whatever else you said they have. But don't come crying back to me when you wake up in a cloning tank, with your last memories being me telling you not to go."

I give some time for them to reconsider, and if there are any left over afterwards, I talk to whoever is left.

"But we do need to get moving, we can't wait forever... Let's go, but stay close to the walls, they won't be expecting you there. We'll sneak around to the back..."

I start crawling towards where I think the door to the compnode is.

Cargo lift

Being unconscious, Cryo-R doesn't notice. But the doors have closed again.

JHT Sector Compnode

Speed-Y shoots again, but can't seem to hit anything.

L4-O wonders how many tapes are left. Which is good timing, since The Computer announces, "Tape 3 has been loaded without errors. I am now awaiting Tape 4."

Mango-R reloads.

Another couple of communists emerge from the smoke, only to be met with slugfire from Massacrebot. One is killed almost before he can react.

Corridor, V Level

Jam-? continues speaking to the remaining communists. A few leave, heading off to wherever it is the communists are going.

This leaves twelve. Of which, half decide to follow Jam-? as he crawls through the smoke, down the corridor.

He comes to an open bulkhead door. There are more bodies here.

written by Speeder on Dec 26, 2010 18:17

I smile as I notice how the computer is behaving differently.

I load happily the Tape 4 🤩 ! XD YAY! \o/!

written by Lightning4 on Dec 26, 2010 21:00

"We must be almost done then! Friend Computer, can you help us at all yet?"

I hope for a response, but keep my blaster trained on the gas to help pick off any invading commies.

written by Jam on Dec 26, 2010 21:19

I notice the booming voice of Friend Computer, and try to resist smiling...

"Comrades, follow me!"

I crawl as fast as I can into the room.

written by Gligar on Dec 27, 2010 01:39

JHT Sector Compnode

Tape 4 begins warblescreeching. It's a higher pitch warblescreetch than the others.

As it does, The Computer begins speaking. "Citizens of JHT Sector, your attention please. Due to communist interference, all services will need to be restarted. Please do not attempt to use lifts or transbots at this time. Your co-operation is appreciated, and regular service should be resumed shortly."

And indeed, throughout the sector, the usual noise of machinery ceases. Lifts deactivate (awakening Cryo-R in the process), and air stops circulating.

On hearing the voice, many of the communists on V Level panic. Some try to run, some scream, some just freeze up. But some make a dash for the compnode room.

One makes it there ahead of Jam-? and his followers. He walks forward into the room. "Capitalists," he says, "stop what you are doing. Do you not understand? This will not help you!"

His uniform seems rather fancy for a communist.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 27, 2010 01:51

I fire at the fancy looking person even though he does seem a bit persuasive in his speech. Maybe he might drop a more usable slugthrower. Maybe...

written by Speeder on Dec 27, 2010 01:59

I point my gun at him.

"The point is not help me, the point is help friend computer, and thus the entire alpha complex? Don't you understand, even if you disagree with the views that were programmed on it, the computer still is what runs most of the machinery, the whole underground complex will crumble and everyone will slowly die if the computer that runs it is shut down. I am not doing this for myself, I am not doing this for a computer sake, I am doing this for everyone, because everyone need Friend Computer, that might look like a leader, but is the ultimate servant, existing solely to run everything and maintain order while the outside world recover from the war. We must keep it running until the city is rescued, even if that take thousand of years."

I only shoot if I sense danger.

written by Jam on Dec 27, 2010 02:46

I take the revolver I found, and toss it to the side, away from myself, and any other clones. Then I walk up to the fancy communist.

"Director Andrei? We're here to back you up..."

I take my position at the side and behind the clone I'm assuming is the Director, and aim my laser pistol at the capitalists, more specifically, at Speed-Y.

"Give up, capitalist, or you'll be sorry!"

written by 4616599 on Dec 27, 2010 03:33

I duck behind the racks again and look at the commie's outfit. If I sense any danger, I take out a laser rifle and shoot.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 27, 2010 04:22

I give a strange look to Jam, but hold my fire on both of them. I keep my aim on the fancy commie guy.

"Would you rather be dead, then? If we don't start up Friend Computer, we're all dead anyway. This whole sector is going to be nuked!"

I keep my blaster ready to fire, should combat break out.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 27, 2010 08:56

I awaken in what appears to be a cargo lift, and attempt to determine what level I might be on. I also check whether there are any shelves, bells, and/or notes laying around, and if so, examine and retrieve them.

Seeing as the lift appears to be stationary and with its doors closed, I look around for an emergency release lever or other way to manually force the doors open. If that doesn't work, I attempt to pry them open using various combinations of a pipe, a screwdriver, spanners, a bell and a secondary sector logistics pen.

written by Gligar on Dec 27, 2010 16:56

JHT Sector Compnode

Mango-R is the first to react... by shooting. He misses the communist, and just barely misses Jam-?.

The communist answers, "But The Computer is not needed to run the equipment. There is enough spare processing power in the Complex at large to run everything. And... waiting for the Outside to recover? I'm afraid that won't happen, not in ten thousand yearcycles. The Complex will fall long before that!"

He falls silent, allowing the warblescreech to permeate the air for a moment.

He then seems to notice Jam-?, who seems to have switched sides. "What? Oh, yes, thank you, comrade..."

He continues. "You think the Armed Forces are preparing to nuke the sector? You are sadly mistaken. A plan is already underway to stop it. And once it succeeds, we will continue out Glorious Revolution against The Computer, throughout the rest of the Complex!"

Cargo lift

Cryo-R looks around. The lift is dark, illuminated only by some of the still-lit buttons on the panel. The level indicator is blank.

Gathering up his equipment, Cryo-R decides to try and escape. To him, this means looking for an emergency open lever. But there isn't one, owing to CPU Mandate 214/6784395748 regarding budget cuts. He therefore decides to try and pry the door open. They budge slightly, but just spring right back to the closed position.

written by Speeder on Dec 27, 2010 17:02

I peer at him for a while, then I ask.

"If communism is so good, why you needed to mind control the population?"

And then I look at all the servers, then back at the commie.

"And if there are enough processing power, what program will run? You think you have sufficient manpower to develop a replacement for the Friend Computer program, while Friend Computer is not working? You would need to make that program work in a few days, at best. Specially in critical areas."

written by Lightning4 on Dec 27, 2010 22:57

"And what if that plan fails? You haven't had much success HERE, after all..." I smirk.

"We've killed a lot of commies, and we have no problems adding another to the count. By the time you even finish getting cloned, you'll be staring at a Friend Computer laser turret."

written by Jam on Dec 28, 2010 01:18

I talk to Speed-Y.

"You saw, the sector is running just fine without The Computer! And how do you know we don't already have a program ready?"

I look at the capitalists, and then turn towards the fancy communist. I walk a bit closer to him.

"They have some powerful weapons, Comrade. We wouldn't be able to defeat them before The Computer is finished rebooting. Let's just go now..."

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 28, 2010 01:31

I attempt to load another slug into the slugthrower, and then check just how many I have left, ignoring what the communist said.

"This thing sure is troublesome..."

The communist - presumably Andrei - answers, "You think we use mind control? We wear these hats willingly!"

The warblesqueal continues to sound.

"And what will run? Control programs, obviously! More efficient than a massive sentient program that like laser turrets! Mark my words, capitalists, there will be a time when you embrace our values!"

And with that, he turns his back, and starts to leave.

Mango-R loads another slug. He has five left.

written by Speeder on Dec 28, 2010 02:13

I shout as he leave.

"You are clearly not a commie, you are a traitor high clearance citizen that just want to take control! Flee while you can!"

I check to see how is the progress with the reboot.

written by Jam on Dec 28, 2010 03:58

I stare at the Director, processing what he just said.

"You... don't like lasers?!"

I walk towards him.

"You don't like lasers? You don't like lasers? How... could anyclone not like lasers?"

I aim my laser pistol at his head (assuming it's exposed, or else, some other vital part), and fire. Then I start screaming...

"YOU DON'T LIKE LASERS! YOU FILTHY COMMIE! YOU SCUM! YOU ARE THE LOWEST OF THE LOW! I HATE YOU! I'LL KILL YOU, AND YOUR ENTIRE CLONE FAMILY! DIE!!!"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 28, 2010 04:29

I watch the leaderguy and jam.

"Hmph. Willingly my-"

I notice the commotion and prepare to assist if Jam needs it, should any of the other commies around decide to come after us.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 28, 2010 10:49

I decide to keep my aim pointing where it was, towards the Director. I wait cautiously, staring at Jam-?.

JHT Sector Compnode

Speed-Y calls after the Director as he leaves. But the Director ignores him.

As others around him keep their weapons pointed doorward, he checks the console. Not long now.

Jam-? realises something. Andrei just seemed to say that he doesn't like lasers. How can anyclone not like something that goes zap?! He follows Andrei out while yelling.

The other communists follow. They're confused, and rightly so. Just whose side is Jam-? on?

There is a sound the Director apparently dislikes: a zap. Followed by a sizzle and a thud.

Followed by the sounds of slugthrowers being cocked.

Cargo lift

The lift seems to jerk downwards abruptly.

written by Speeder on Dec 28, 2010 18:06

I look at Jam, then at the commies arming their weapons.

"FIREEEEEEEEE AT WIIIIIIII!!!"

And I go shooting commies and hoping that Jam will go to the ground or somewhere else.

written by Jam on Dec 28, 2010 20:45

I go to the ground, then proceed to crawl somewhere else, somewhere far away from any shooting or commies...

"Comrades! Don't shoot me! It was the mutants, they made me do it! I tried to resist, but they were too strong! Run away, save yourselves!"

written by Lightning4 on Dec 28, 2010 22:10

I attempt to shoot the commies, or commielike blobs in the smoke!

"There will be no victory for the commies!"

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 28, 2010 22:32

I fire, and reload again, trying to hit the communists.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 29, 2010 01:35

"That jerk!"

I note whether the lift is falling, or just stationary at the moment. If it's not falling, I make another attempt at prying open the doors. I bite off half of one of the candies from my pocket, to provide me with much needed DOOR OPENING ENERGY. If the lift is in free fall, I try maneuvering myself toward the access hatch on the ceiling and pulling myself through there.

written by Gligar on Dec 29, 2010 02:09

Corridor, V Level

Jam-? crawls off somewhere. A couple of communists do fire at him, only to have their slugthrowers jam. Hmm.

They don't have much time to ponder it before they're fired at from the compnode room. A brief flurry of laser, slug- and blaster fire later, a single communist falls. The others seem to dance around, avoiding weapons fire.

JHT Sector Compnode

The warblescreech shifts up in pitch again, and becomes louder.

Cargo lift

Cryo-R again tries to exit the lift, this time spurred on by the sudden downwards jerk. Though very jittery from the half "candy" he just ate, he is able to pry open the door.

He's now staring at the outer doors of two levels, since it seems that the lift stopped in between levels.

written by Speeder on Dec 29, 2010 02:33

I fire at more commies. 😊

written by Cryoburner on Dec 29, 2010 02:44

I look to see if there are any markings to indicate what levels I might be between. I try prying open the doors, first targeting the lower one, then the upper, if it can be reached. If any doors open, I again check to see whether they contain anything that may indicate their level and clearance. If there are any ventilation shafts or other openings between the floors, I try opening those as well.²⁸³

JHT Sector Compnode / Corridor (split-screen, or picture-in-picture, or something equally out-of-place)

Speed-Y fires again, felling another communist. Lots of fun! L4-O joins in, but manages to hit the inside of the hole instead. Joris-O switches to his laser rifle, scoring a nice headshot. Finally, Mango-R tries to get closer again. Unfortunately, he can't find any other weapons. It looks like he'll have to keep using the one he has. He, too, fires, and also misses.

Remember the combot? It's still here, and still sparking. But it looks like it's still operational to some degree. It aims a cone rifle... tries to aim a cone rifle... at Speed-Y, and fires. Click.

From somewhere, there is the sound of a squealing laser barrel.

Cargo lift

Cryo-R looks at the doors, looking for markings. There are markings indicating that he's between W and X Levels. He tries to open one of the doors. But the doors just snap back into place. And the "candy" seems to be wearing off.

written by Speeder on Dec 29, 2010 16:52

I notice the combot that hates me and laugh.

"Stupid combot, you are just a idiotic and small version of a decent bot."

I try to shoot the combot sensors.

written by Jam on Dec 29, 2010 18:38

I check to see if it's my laser barrel that's squealing, and if it is, I throw it at the communists.

Otherwise, I just shoot at one of the communists, aiming for the head.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 29, 2010 20:34

I shoot at the combot too, hoping to score a hit on something important on it.

written by Cryoburner on Dec 29, 2010 22:35

"Hrm..."

Deciding I need MORE ENERGY, I munch on the remaining half piece of candy. It seems to be chemical flavor.

I again try opening the lower door, this time forcing my shelf in between as I pry it apart, to prevent it from once again closing on its own. I again take a look at what's through the door, noting the clearance and anything else that might be interesting and/or edible.

written by Mingamango181 on Dec 30, 2010 00:21

I get frustrated at the horrible design of the slugthrower, and give up on trying to use it against the communists. I instead search for the squealing laser barrel.

Cargo lift

Cryo-R takes the other half of the "candy" and gets to work again, now jittering more than ever. He feels his heart beat rather... fast... as he works. Regardless, he manages to open the door and fall into the landing on W Level. He has enough time to notice the ULTRAVIOLET clearance stripe before collapsing on the floor, shaking uncontrollably.

JHT Sector Compnode

Speed-Y insults the combot and shoots what he thinks are its sensor with his laser pistol. Its already-erratic movements become more erratic.

Jam-? checks his laser barrel... nope, it's still fine. He shoots a communist, just to be sure. Or at least, he tries to, and ends up hitting the wall instead.

L4-O fires at the combot, taking out one of its treads.

Mango-R also checks his laser barrel. Though it's showing empty, it seems to be fine. So where's the squealing barrel?

It becomes apparent that, though the squealing hasn't stopped, another noise has: the warblescreech.

Throughout the room, equipment starts blinking lights in incomprehensible patterns. The Computer speaks.

"System reboot has completed. However, control of the sector's reactor, and the cameras, cannot be re-established. Initiating Protocol 17."

Throughout the sector, lights come on. Lifts begin to work again. Computer Monitors begin to show a familiar Eye. And, most importantly, a familiar voice sounds over the PA.

²⁸³ SPEEDER: (OOC: I think that if this take too long Cryo will disassemble the entire elevator...)

“Attention, citizens! Due to communist sabotage, full service cannot be established just yet. However, do not panic! Even now, a Troubleshooter team is being sent to the reactor control room to rectify the situation. Failure to co-operate with the team will result in summary execution. Thank you for your co-operation.”

Tell me, how many Troubleshooter teams are active in the sector?

written by Jam on Dec 30, 2010 02:14

“Friend Computer’s back!”

I smile, and start chanting triumphantly.

“Friend Computer! Friend Computer! Friend Computer!”

I start running back to Nukabot, trying to keep my chant in time with my steps, and also trying to keep my shooting in time with both. Shooting at the commies, that is, and very very happily! I’m even singing as I’m shooting and running (and it’s more like skipping than running), because I’m so extremely happy!

“Frieeeeend Compuuuuuter, you’re my beeeest friend!

Frieeeeend Compuuuuuter, you’re the frieeeeendliest friend I’ve ever had!

I loooooove Friend Computer, and Friend Computer looooooves me too!

Laaaa la la! Dieeeee Commies! La la laaaaaa!”

“Well... I don’t see any other teams around here. I guess Friend Computer means us! A mission from Friend Computer!!”

“But... where is the reactor control room.. hm.”

I scratch my head.

“Speaking of which, I wonder if mysterious guy will come now that we’ve completed the first part of our mission.”

I look around for anything of note, or anyone.

Jam-? is HAPPY that The Computer is back. So HAPPY, that he sings a little tune, even as he shoots communists (hitting one, and missing another).

As he does so, he runs (well, it’s more like “skips”) towards Nukabot. He only stops when he sees the extent of his former clone’s injuries, inflicted both while he was alive, and afterwards. But he’s still HAPPY!

Speed-Y takes a look round. Out of the corner of his eye, he sees some movement, way up near the ceiling. Unsure what it could be, he busies himself packing up the recorder and the tapes. Now... the team that got sent to the reactor... who could it be, he wonders. And where is it, anyway?

L4-O joins in with he wondering. He adds another one: where is the “monitor guy” (though he hasn’t used monitors recently)? Shouldn’t he show up around now? After all, they completed the assigned mission...

Joris-O checks his equipment. He doesn’t seem to have the squealing barrel... so where is it?

Cargo lift landing. W level

Cryo-R continues to shake uncontrollably, but, true to form, he can’t help but examine things. The walls, he notices, don;t seem to be the regular synthcrete, but are far smoother. The clearance stripe doesn’t seem to be paint, either. And the lighting... well, let’s just say that there are no visible light fixtures, yet the landing is adequately lit.

written by Speeder on Dec 30, 2010 18:17

After carefully storing all the stuff, I look around the room, to see if there are any threats.

If there are, I shoot them, if not I grab my PDC and send a message of “mission complete, awaiting orders”, to those that I usually send messages to.

written by Jam on Dec 30, 2010 18:28

I’m so happy, that I complete fail to be creeped out by seeing the burnt remains of my previous clone, and I don’t even notice the smell of charred flesh and death.

“Hey look, it’s me!”

I walk up to my former clone’s dead body, and proceed to take everything from it, including my ME card, brevet, and my precious precious laser pistol and barrels. I carefully inspect each barrel to make sure they weren’t harmed by whatever killed me. I also look around a bit for my PDC, before remembering that Lucas-R has it.

“Lucas-R, can I have my PDC back now?”

I also suddenly remember that Kristos-R has a few of my laser pistol barrels, and I ask him for them back too...

written by Lightning4 on Dec 30, 2010 22:53

Hearing the squealing, I check my laser blaster to be sure if it is that or not. If it is, I toss it away from me.

After that, I stand next to Speed and watch him work his PDC, and wait for a response!

JHT Sector Compnode

Speed-Y finishes putting things away, and looks around. He notes the malfunctioning combat, and the remaining communists at the entrance. After hearing The Computer, they're getting more agitated... to say the least. Speed-Y shoots at them. One is shot in the leg.

Jam-? starts inspecting his former clone's equipment. Most of it seems to be in good shape, including the brevet... there's just the jumpsuit, and the rubberlyke tubing, that are damaged. The reflec seems a bit singed, but it should be okay.

There's just a few other things: his PDC, and the stuff he gave to Kristos-R, who is most likely somewhere in the compnode examining some code or something. Whether he hears Jam-? is debatable.

The PDC is easier: Lucas-R's voice sounds from inside Massacrebot. "Er, okay, just let me... I'll have to get out of... open up, Massacrebot!" He seems to be struggling.

L4-O checks his blaster... it seems okay. He stands near Speed-Y, who is standing, contemplating his PDC. He doesn't seem to have used it.

The squealing barrel continues to squeal.

written by Speeder on Dec 31, 2010 01:57

I look around and say. "Can someone find that stupid squealing barrel and get rid of it? I don't want this node exploding now that we fixed it!"

I pocket the PDC for now and return at getting rid of commies that insisted in remain here.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 31, 2010 05:41

I shrug.

"It's not me, I think. I've been using my blaster the whole time, I don't think those squeal before they explode!"

"Unless laser pistol barrels spontaneously overload..."

I search through my pack first.

If I don't find anything, I look around for any laser pistols or laser pistol barrels on the ground or near dead commies. Or half-dead commies. Or even living commies, if there are any of those left!

written by Cryoburner on Dec 31, 2010 09:58

While I am having a pleasant enough time shaking uncontrollably, I decide to focus more on controlling the uncontrollable convulsions, so that I can get back to more important things. I attempt to sit up, and have a better look around the room, taking note of any exits, furniture, and décor that might be present.

written by Jam on Dec 31, 2010 14:52

I put the reflec on, and my helmet, and discard the tubing and all the empty B3 cans I have (preferably in some kind of disposal bin).

"It's okay Lucas-R, take your time... Oh, does Massacrebot happen to have any sensors that might be able to tell where that squealing barrel is?"

I search around for it, and search for Kristos-R at the same time...

written by 4616599 on Dec 31, 2010 18:27

I hoist up the laser rifle, and chase out the remaining commies. I fire a few rounds if they seem stubborn, aimed roughly at the fuzzy hats. "Okay, you've lost, run along now. Better luck next time."

If the squealing barrel shows any hint of soon exploding, I drop to the ground and take out my shield.

JHT Sector Compnode

Will someone sort out that squealing barrel? We don't want the place exploding, now do we?

Speed-Y puts his PDC away, and looks around. There are no living communists left in the compnode (unless you count the combat, and even that's impaired).

L4-O starts looking at the fallen communists. Is it on one of them? No, they were all using slugthrowers, it seems.

Jam-? sorts out his equipment, getting rid of the damaged tubing, and his empty B3 cans. There's a handy trash receptacle near one of the server racks, so he uses that.

He also asks Lucas-R to check with Massacrebot to see if it can detect the squealing barrel. Unfortunately, as Lucas-R discovers, it can't.

On the plus side, he did manage to get the bot to open up.

Seeing no living communists, Joris-O looks outside... oh, there they are. Better luck next time, eh? Hey! Enough with the slugfire already!

The squealing barrel, wherever it is, continues to squeal.

And oh yes. Kristos-R appears from near one of the racks... seems that he's still engrossed in whatever it is.

Cargo lift landing (W Level)

Cryo-R tries to get his shaking under control, but can't. But that doesn't mean he can't inspect things... like furniture, or exits. Of course, with it being a landing, there isn't much in the way of furniture around. There are two exits, both of which appear to be sliding doors.

written by Lightning4 on Dec 31, 2010 22:45

I look over at John and notice the extent of his injuries.

"Still with us John? I don't suppose it's yours?"

If he doesn't respond, I walk up and check to see if he's alive, and if his laser rifle barrels are squealing. If they are, I toss them at some of the commie corpses.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 01, 2011 03:00

I listen, and try to determine which direction the squealing barrel is. If I can, I try to get closer to it.

written by Speeder on Jan 01, 2011 04:02

So, no more commies, friend computer working fine...

I take out the PDC again, to send the message about mission complete.

After I do that task, I also help finding the squealing barrel, using my ears.

Looks like John-R is still alive, though it's difficult to say for how long. He tries to move, but just collapses in pain. His rifle barrels seem okay, though.

Mango-R listens to the squealing. It seems to be coming from the middle of the room.

Speed-Y has his PDC out again. This time, he has the chance to send a message.

Almost immediately, he receives a response:

So I noticed.

Our mutual friend says that a Troubleshooter team is being sent down to the reactor control room. Do you know who that could be?

It then dawns on him that the squealing is coming from his own equipment.

written by Speeder on Jan 01, 2011 16:41²⁸⁴

I place the PDC in the computer console, walk toward the combot, grab the squealing barrel and quickly shove it inside some combot hole (any hole that I can find), then I clear the way and say:

"Nukabot, can you please take that trash to outside the room? Then get away from it..."

I return to my PDC and send another message.

I see Speed holding the barrel and take a step or two away, just in case.

"Oh good! Now, you have my PDC, right?"

I walk over to him and take my PDC if it's offered.

²⁸⁴ SPEEDER: (OOC: own equipment you mean me? or Mango?) (ooc: post assuming it is me).

I suddenly notice Speed-Y holding what appears to be a squealing laser barrel. I back away as I watch him walk over to the combot and shove the barrel into it.

Realising that the squealing barrel was right there on his laser pistol, Speed-Y puts his PDC down. He unclips the barrel, walks over the the combot (with Jam-? and L4-O backing away) and shoves the barrel into a hole, narrowly avoiding the arcing. Not sure what hole that is. Nukabot answers, "Finally, something to lift!"

It proceeds to lift the bot, and gets arced at. But it continues. As it heads out of the room, Jam-? retrieves his PDC from Lucas-R.

Nukabot continues its journey, though it seems to be moving a little erratically.

Meanwhile, Speed-Y has picked up his PDC again, and is sending another message.

Cargo lift landing (W level)

Cryo-R finally stops shaking. He takes note of about twenty cameras on the landing alone.

written by Speeder on Jan 02, 2011 03:07

After I finish sending the message, I await for another reply.

While looking at Nukabot, to make sure nothing will go wrong.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 02, 2011 05:02²⁸⁶

I employ the use of a happy mask. There's nothing quite like a happy mask to make everyone happy.

I then take a look back at the lift and begin examining it from the exterior. Assuming the lift is still stuck between W and X levels with the outer door open, I take a look at its underside, and down the shaft as well, careful to remain clear of its doors. I also try to note whether there are any emergency brakes underneath, and whether they are activated.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 02, 2011 10:42

I watch as Speed-Y shoves the laser barrel into the combot. And as I watch Nukabot take it out of the room, I comment, "Is everything alright? You're moving a little unnaturally..."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 02, 2011 11:36

I watch Nukabot.

"Hey, are you okay? Don't fry yourself out!"

I follow behind at a safe distance.

²⁸⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: Speed-Y, yes.)

²⁸⁶ CRYOBURNER: (That had to be the lamest squealing barrel ever. It was squealing for like, four hours, and still hasn't gone off.) 😊

Speed-Y waits for a reply while watching Nukabot.²⁸⁷

L4-O also watches Nukabot. He is concerned for the bot's proper functioning. As such, he follows behind it.

Nukabot reaches the hole and passes through it, erratically.

Corridor (V level)

There are still a couple of communists outside, and they attempt to run.

But Nukabot accelerates towards them.

Suddenly, it brakes, and allows the combot to fall off its forks, and carry on sliding into the communists.

The barrels' squealing suddenly increases in pitch

And explodes.

Finally.

L4-O is thrown to the ground by the blast.

The combot looks to have been blown apart.

Nukabot isn't moving. It sits there, smoking slightly.

Cargo lift landing (W level)

Cryo-R wears is Happy Mask again, and turns back to inspect the lift.

Which promptly closes up on him.

A familiar voice sounds.

"Camera control for W Level has been restored."

"Citizen, you seem to be of insufficient security clearance for this area. Kindly explain your presence here. You have one turncycle to comply."

Laser turrets make themselves known. They're pointed right at Cryo-R.

written by Speeder on Jan 02, 2011 18:13

After the blast, I notice a message, and I walk up to the Nukabot to check on it while reading the PDC, and I facepalm...

After facepalming I stop in place, and resume typing...

written by Jam on Jan 02, 2011 18:46

"Nukabot!"

I run towards Nukabot, making sure to stay out of range of the arcing.

"Nukabot! Are you okay? That's doesn't look safe, maybe you should put the combot down!"

²⁸⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: check your inbox 😊)

written by Lightning4 on Jan 02, 2011 23:30

I approach Nukabot, kind of distressed.

"Are you okay, Nukabot?"

I check the radioactive energy source to see if it is still connected. And to see if it isn't overloading.²⁸⁸

written by Cryoburner on Jan 03, 2011 00:58

"Oh, hello there! I am in the process of inspecting this lift, which appears to be in need of repairs. I had received orders to head to V level, but the lift appears to be malfunctioning, and it was mentioned that it may have been tampered with. I found it imperative to check the lift's components and make sure they were working properly, not only to ensure my own timely arrival at my destination, but also to maintain efficient operations throughout the sector. The lift stopped a short while ago, and seemed to fall a short distance before coming to a stop between levels. I don't believe that is standard lift operating behavior, and is likely the work of traitors, making it my duty to remedy the situation."

At this point, I pull out the "NOT IN ORDER" sign and attach it to the 'call' button outside the lift.

"There! That should ease the situation."

"Now, I seem to have fallen out of this lift and become locked outside, almost certainly as a direct result of the traitorous tampering that had been inflicted upon it by someone. Perhaps I should be provided with a chaperone, so that I may find another route to my destination. Success of the mission likely hinges upon my safe and expedient arrival!"

written by Gligar on Jan 03, 2011 01:48

Corridor (V Level)

Speed-Y investigates the explosion. He notices Nukabot and facepalms. And then goes right back to using his PDC.

Jam-? (what clearance is he, anyway?) seems unhappy at Nukabot's distress. It's still arcing, and its operator's panel is going haywire, with lights blinking all over the place. It doesn't respond to either his or L4-O's voice.

L4-O investigates Nukabot's power source. It seems to be intact. It isn't even arcing.

Cargo lift landing (W level)

"First: if the lift was malfunctioning, you should have contacted Technical Services, and waited for rescue, citizen. It is, after all, their responsibility to maintain such equipment. You are fined 100 credits for your oversight."

"Second: where is the rest of your team? You should be aware of CPU Mandate 214/590603333922@©9(z38)."

²⁸⁸ JAM: (OOC: /me facepalms... Erm... I didn't notice there was another page... But I'm going to do the same thing anyways, just without the part where I advise Nukabot to put the combot down...)

Failure to keep up to date with CPU mandates is punishable by a further 100 credit fine.

“Third: I have scanned your ME Card, citizen. I know that you are Clearance RED, and have entered a Clearance ULTRAVIOLET area. The difference in security clearance is high enough that Protocol 17[REDACTED]8 comes into effect. Your co-operation with this procedure is appreciated, and Alpha Complex looks forward to your services in future lives.”

Do I need to outline what happens next? Okay, then: the laser turrets fire on Cryo-R. Termination is instantaneous.

written by Speeder on Jan 03, 2011 02:01

After I send the message I race to Nukabot to check for damage.

“Ok, sorry Nukabot!”

I then look to others.

“Bad news, we are the team that is supposed to go to the reactor. Good news, we have an idea of where the reactor is. Worse than bad news, Cryo somehow managed to wander into a ULTRAVIOLET floor, and probably got terminated, meaning we will have to find him...”

I then look at Nukabot and say. “Ok, this floor is relatively safe, I think we can do repairs on Nukabot and Massacrebot and other equipment before we proceed with the mission. Someone go check the remains of the combot and communists for useful parts, equipment and ammo.”

written by Cryoburner on Jan 03, 2011 02:38

I carefully examine how efficient the laser turrets are at their instantaneous termination capabilities, and note any inefficiencies which may be present in their termination procedures. If possible, I jot these down on a piece of paper, whether that be a blank interoffice memo or the “NOT IN ORDER” sign, whichever is more easily accessible. If no such inefficiencies are found, I forgo that last step.

written by Jam on Jan 03, 2011 03:23

“Nukabot! I’m sorry! I should have taken the barrel myself!”

I look at Speed-Y, and follow orders. I go to examine the dead communists for anything useful they may have. Especially the body of the Director, I do an extra thorough search of him.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 03, 2011 13:12

I attempt to disconnect the nuclear power device. Maybe that will stop Nukabot from arcing?

I watch for a result, backing away if the arcing continues or gets close to me.

Corridor (V Level)

Speed-Y lets the others, most of whom are looking out of the hole leading to the compnode, know about the messages. The team needs to go down to the reactor... and, along the way, pick up Cryo-R, wherever he is. But before that, there’s probably time to sort out equipment.

Jam-? starts searching the communists, the remains of the combot, and especially the Director. There is quite a bit of slugthrower ammunition, some slugthrowers of varying types, a few cone rifle shells (without triggers), some grenades, and a couple of Com 1s. The combot also had a laser rifle, apparently connected to an autochanger mechanism which is now toast. The rifle seems to be intact.

Jam-? also finds an ME Card on the body of the Director.

L4-O sees to Nukabot. He disconnects the power source. This causes him to be close enough that the arcing spreads to him, throwing him back. He lands on the floor a short distance away, aching all over. Electricity hurts.

On the plus side, though, the arcing on Nukabot seems to be subsiding.

Cargo lift landing (W Level)

Amazingly, even though he’s just been terminated, Cryo-R’s body continues to move... almost as if he’s trying to reach for some paper.

But The Computer’s laser turrets fire again, putting a stop to it. The Computer really hates zombies. Ever since that incident in CRS Sector, zombies have been placed just under mutants in the list of Things The Computer Hates.

written by Speeder on Jan 03, 2011 17:13

“Erm, I was going to tell you to don’t do that, but since you did it anyway...”

I approach Nukabot after it is safe, and examine it, while I do that I say.

“Don’t plug it back, I need to know if it is safe to turn Nukabot back on without frying him... After I am sure all the electronics and electricians are ok, we can turn Nukabot back on.”

I turn to Massacrebot.

“Massacrebot, damage report, then turn off recording.”

written by Lightning4 on Jan 03, 2011 23:43

“Ow ow ow! That really hurt! That was like falling into the lift shaft.”

After lying on the floor for a moment to recuperate, I look down and check myself for any injuries.

After that, I notice Nukabot is not arcing as much anymore.

“Well, at least that worked...”

written by Jam on Jan 04, 2011 00:48

“Laser Rifle! Mine!”

I quickly stow the laser rifle in one of my pockets (assuming the INFRARED jumpsuit even has pockets).

“Here’s the rest of the stuff...”

I indicate where I put the rest of the weapons, then start taking any armor off the communists, again paying special attention to the Director.

Corridor (V Level)

While Speed-Y inspects Nukabot, Massacrebot clunks through the hole. It hears Speed-Y, then displays something on its HUD. Lucas-R relays, "Er... I think it's saying that a couple of its motors are borderline."

As Nukabot's arcing dissipates, Speed-Y concludes that a couple of circuit boards were fried by all the arcing.

L4-O rests for a moment, his body still aching. He doesn't seem to have sustained any further injuries.

Jam-? takes the laser rifle. The baggy INFRARED jumpsuit he's wearing makes it easier to stow away (you just have to be careful of all the starch). He then looks at the communists again, this time looking for armour. He finds several sets of kevlar. The set worn by the Director seems to be in better condition.

Cloning station (somewhere)

A cloning tank fires up. A clone begins to form inside.

written by Speeder on Jan 04, 2011 01:49

I try to see if any critical circuit got fried.

Then I look back at Massacrebot.

"That is bad... I don't think we have tools here to fix motors..."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 04, 2011 04:32

I stumble to my feet, still wincing from that shock.

"Phew, what a kick."

While Speed checks Nukabot, I look around the corridor for anything of note.

"I wonder if there's computer parts storage rooms up here... There is a major compnode here, after all... Maybe some will work."

written by 4616599 on Jan 04, 2011 11:02

I too, search around the bunch of equipment Jam-? has picked up. I don some kevlar armour, and look around for any fancy slugthrowers or other weapons.

Corridor (V Level)

Speed-Y inspects the fried circuit boards, but can't identify them. He thinks Massacrebot's borderline motors may be a problem.

L4-O wonders if there's a parts storage room around here? Perhaps there's something that would help?

Joris-O looks through the equipment Jam-? has recovered. He takes one of the better sets of kevlar, and looks through the slugthrowers, eventually taking one.

Cloning station (somewhere)

The clone continues to form. It's now recognisable as Cryo-R.

written by Speeder on Jan 04, 2011 17:15

I nod and start searching for the storage, while I do that, I take out my PDC again and send.

> Our bots are in bad condition and we may need to repair them, how much time we have?

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 04, 2011 21:47

I search for a better slugthrower, and replace the crude one I already have.

I then follow after Speed-Y.

"You don't suppose that those laser turrets that weren't operating before will attack now, will they?"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 05, 2011 00:05

I wander around a little bit. I check a few rooms, but try not to wander too far away from Speed.

written by Jam on Jan 05, 2011 00:55

I pick up the Director's kevlar.

"Oh, this kevlar looks like it's better than the others... Perhaps I could... No, I should give it to Speed-Y instead.. He's our team leader."

I start carrying the Director's set of kevlar to Speed-Y, but get distracted as I notice Mango-R searching around for something. After watching him a bit, I conclude he must be searching for some kind of weapon. I look over at the pile of slugthrowers...

"Ew... Besides being too high clearance for any of us, slugthrowers don't even go "zap"! How horrifying!"

I look around for any laser weapons that might be laying around... Not finding any, I look down at my own stash. But that would mean... I would have to give up some of my precious laser pistol barrels? I twitch a bit at the thought. Then I make my decision. No troubleshooter should ever have to go without a laser pistol!

I walk over to Mango-R, and offer him one of my laser pistols, after first exchanging the ORANGE barrel for a fresh RED one...

"Here, take this..."

written by Gligar on Jan 05, 2011 01:23

Corridor (V Level)

Speed-Y and L4-O start searching for the storage room. However, it seems that every door they try is locked. Now that they think about it, that might explain the hole leading to the compnode room...

As he's doing that, Speed-Y sends another PDC message.

Mango-R decides to replace his crude slugthrower with a better one.

Jam-? looks at the Director's kevlar, briefly wondering if he should take it, before deciding that Speed-Y should have it. He starts taking it over, before he notices Mango-R holding a new slugthrower. As Jam-? points out, he's not cleared to use slugthrowers, and a Troubleshooter without a laser might as well be a commie. Since there are no other lasers, Jam-? reluctantly decides to part with one of his own pistols, after making sure to swap out barrels.

Cloning station (somewhere)

The clone finishes forming, and, after downloading its MemoMax data, the cloning tank deposits an extremely happy Cryo-R on the floor. He's so happy, he doesn't care that he's shivering and slimy.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 05, 2011 01:44

"Wow! They fixed all my limbs! My inspection of that lift must have really been appreciated!"

I proceed to do some stretches, a bit of running in place, and a few push ups to try out my new appendages, before having a look around the room.

written by Speeder on Jan 05, 2011 05:41

While I wait for a PDC reply, I try to figure if Nukabot AI-related circuits are ok.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 05, 2011 05:46

"Thank you very much."

I accept Jam-?'s laser pistol. I decide to move the slugthrower to one of my pockets. "You never know when when you need to start impersonating..." I reason.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 05, 2011 08:36

"Hmph... all locked. Well, worst case... I guess we could just leave Nukabot and Massacrebot here. It's not like there should be anymore commies, now that Friend Computer is working. Hopefully Friend Computer has been killing them off with laser turrets."

I stay near Speed.

written by Jam on Jan 05, 2011 15:16

"You'd better take this too..."

I put a spare RED laser pistol barrel into Mango-R's hands. Then I suddenly remember something, and start walking back to the Director.

"Hmm... He had a ME card, didn't he..."

I take the ME card the Director had, and look at any information on it. I also look at the Director's face, and look for anything that might let me distinguish his next clones.

written by Gligar on Jan 05, 2011 16:56

Cloning station (somewhere)

Cryo-R does some exercises to try out his new clone. Standard procedure in some sectors, although most clones who follow the procedure at least wait until they've showered and dressed.

Speaking of which... the chemical showers are right through that door over there. In the station's main room are at least thirty (30) cloning tanks, along with a couple of racks of jumpsuits of various clearances. A bit further away are a couple of Computer terminals, which would normally be manned if it weren't for the whole Communist thing. Next to those are a few piles of forms.

Finally, a jackobot, having just entered, trundles over to the cloning tanks.

Corridor (V Level)

While he waits for a reply, Speed-Y checks Nukabot's bot brain. It seems to be intact, except... ah. One of the fried boards must be the Asimov circuits.

L4-O waits nearby. He suggests leaving the bots behind if they can't be repaired. Although, as Lucas-R notes, Massacrebot seems to be running okay despite the report of borderline motors.

Mango-R accepts Jam-?'s laser pistol, though he still sticks the slugthrower in his pocket. Jam-? also gives him another barrel to go with it.

Then Jam-? remembers something. Didn't the Director have an ME card?

He goes over to check. Yes, there it is. As with all other ME Cards, it has a name on it, as well as a clearance stripe. This one identifies its owner as "Foursixonesixfiveninenine" from sector "PYC". The clearance stripe is RED.

Looking at the Director himself, Jam-? notices that his ears are unusually large, and he has green eyes.

Suddenly, Speed-Y's PDC starts playing the Tella-O-MLY Adventure Hour theme tune. It seems that he has a message.

written by 4616599 on Jan 05, 2011 17:19

I look at the ME card and blather a bit. "Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R. So he really exists, and apparently he's the Director too. Well, at least it seems like they both are the same person. And oh, he seems to be a true CMT. Wow, what a name. What other citizen would be assigned a name like that!"

written by Speeder on Jan 05, 2011 17:29

I read the PDC and put it back on the pocket.

"Ok, good news, the nuclear strike has been put on hold."

Then I look at everyone and say.

"Bad news, for reasons of security clearance, we have 16 hourcycles to finish the mission."

Then I look at the Nukabot.

"Also we were instructed to a level of lower clearance before doing repairs, I guess a good idea is to return to Derek-G lab. And more bad news, Nukabot has the Asimoc circuits damaged, when we turn it back on, it may decide to disobey us and even attack us... Since we are friendly toward him, he might remain loyal, but there are nothing guaranteeing he will do that."

I look at everyone and then I say.

"I still think Nukabot is worth the risk, but if someone disagree about turning it back on, this is the time to say so."

written by Cryoburner on Jan 05, 2011 21:55

"Hello there, Mr. Jackobot!"

I march over to the showers, and examine their interior before donning an air mask. I hit the activation button if everything appears to be within normal operating parameters.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 05, 2011 22:27

"I guess it's okay to turn Nukabot back on..."

I investigate carefully to ensure that nothing will disrupt the room after our departure. After all, it would save a lot of time to have the compnode not go down again.

written by Jam on Jan 06, 2011 00:57

I stare at the ME card for a while...

"So Foursixonesixfiveninenine is real... I don't believe it... He must have changed his name to Andrei when he became a commie..."

I look at the Director's face again, then walk over to Speed-Y.

"Oh, here's the kevlar that the Director was wearing, I'm assuming it's the highest quality the commies could find... I thought you might want it."

I think a bit about what Speed-Y said...

"Asimoc circuits? I've never heard of them, sounds like high clearance information to me... But Nukabot might attack us? He would never do that! I say we should turn him back on."

Corridor (V Level)

Joris-O catches a glimpse of the ME Card. He seems to be interested in it for some reason. It's an odd name, certainly.

Speed-Y finishes reading the message. The nuclear strike is postponed, at least. But there is still a deadline. If repairing bots is still in everyone's interests, it would be best to move elsewhere, say, back to Derek-G's lab.

And there are other problems, which Speed-Y explains. Although he refers to them as "Asimoc" circuits, rather than Asimov. Mango-R and Jam-? think it's worth the risk, though.

Additionally, Mango-R checks to see if anything else could disrupt the compnode. Well, assuming that nobody else comes up here, it should be okay.

Jam-? gets round to offering Speed-Y the Director's kevlar.

Cloning station (somewhere)

Cryo-R can't let his previous clone's habits die with the clone. He looks inside the showers. There are individual booths, each with oxygen masks and START buttons. He checks a couple of them, and they seem to be in order. Perfect, even. They have the Computer Certified sticker, after all.

He enters one, dons the mask, and hits START. As expected, the booth closes, and begins to fill with the cleaning chemicals.

written by Speeder on Jan 06, 2011 02:42

I smile happily at Jam.

"Thanks!"

I wear the kevlar.

"You know, when you pointed the gun at me, although I trusted you knew what you was doing, I also were thinking that maybe you was upset that I allowed you to die..."

I then look to others for a while, then at Jam.

"Maybe you should be the Y guy instead, you are a great troubleshooter!"

Then I return my gaze to the others and say.

"Ok, first lets prepare our equipment, then we turn Nukabot back on, in case it really decide to fight... And we may need it later anyway."

I check all my weapons and ammunition, load all weapons that can be loaded, see if my spear is alright... Then I see if there are any more yellow or below slugs and ammo in the area.

Then I remember Massacrebot.

"Massacrebot, how many cone rifle shells and slugs you can still get loaded with? Probably there are lots of cone rifle shells lost here..."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 06, 2011 06:07

"I can ride Nukabot I guess. If he decides to rebel, I can always cut the power again. I doubt he can do anything while I'm riding him."

I get on top of Nukabot. While the group prepares, I think about the mission ahead.

"Um... I wonder why we still have a deadline if the nuclear attack is postponed? But I suppose I should dismiss such questioning and treasonous thoughts."

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 06, 2011 10:42

"I think we're as ready here as we'll ever get."

I try to position myself somewhere safe on Nukabot, preferably where I would be hardly be able to get shot at. I respond to L4-O's question.

"Deadline? Well, I'd think it necessary for the good of this sector. After all, there's been enough disruption as it is."

written by Jam on Jan 06, 2011 13:35

"No, I would never shoot a higher clearance clone unless an even higher clearance clone, or Friend Computer, ordered me to. I was loyal the entire time. But... Allowed me to die? Hmm... I don't remember how I died. I do remember there was a combat though..."

I smile at Speed-Y's compliment.

"Oh, thank you! Feel free to mention that to FC once the mission is over..."

Speaking of clearances, I still don't know if I'm RED or ORANGE clearance. Maybe if I read the brevet one more time..."

I take out the brevet and read anything that's written on it. I search for information on whether it applies to my all my clones, or just one.

"Oh, Kristos-R, can you come over here? I still need my laser pistol barrels back..."

written by Gligar on Jan 06, 2011 17:02

Corridor (V Level)

Speed-Y takes the kevlar and wears it, discarding his old set. He and Jam-? discuss Jam's behaviour a few turncycles ago, before suggesting an equipment check. He follows his own advice and checks everything: knife, Spear™, laser rifle, and the slugthrower. He then checks for any more ammunition, and notes the slugthrower ammo that Jam-? found, along with the cone rifle shells (only).

Then he remembers Massacrebot. He asks about that bot's ammo capacity? According to Lucas-R, it can hold 120 slugs and 50 cone rifle shells. It currently has 10 and 36, respectively, so it could hold another 110 and 14.

Meanwhile, everyone else climbs aboard Nukabot, trying to make sure they're safe in case the bot decides to harm them.

Everyone, that is, except Jam-?. He's preoccupied with his brevet. Reading over it again, he discovers that it doesn't actually mention a clone number...

And hang on! Doesn't Kristos-R still have some of Jam's equipment? He wanders over and peers at the brevet.

Chemical Shower

The shower is now filled with cleaning chemicals, which quickly do their work in breaking down the tank goo (and a thin layer of skin). Soon, they drain away, to be replaced by water jets.

written by 4616599 on Jan 06, 2011 17:39

I remember about the ammo box. Recovering it, I check for any damage, and look around Nukabot for any spare spots. "Anyone wants to load this up? Useful for extra ammo and blowing things up. If there's no space, I could follow a... safe distance behind."

written by Speeder on Jan 06, 2011 19:29

I decide to load Massacrebot first.

Since the bot seemly has infinite clearance, I load the highest clearance ammo on it, and take any YELLOW or lower clearance ammo to myself (that is, that I can carry...).

"Jam and Kristos, as soon you two are prepared I will turn Nukabot back on."

written by Cryoburner on Jan 06, 2011 19:40

I begin splashing in the water jets, and pay special attention to the water's temperature and flavor.

written by Jam on Jan 07, 2011 00:17

I look over at Kristos-R, who seems to be staring blankly at the brevet...

"Oh, hello Kristos-R! Um, we're leaving now, so you might want to come with us... And I'd like my laser pistol barrels back now..."

I hold my hand out, and wait and see if Kristos-R actually does give me back my laser pistol barrels. Then I turn to Nukabot, and search for a place I could climb on.

written by Gligar on Jan 07, 2011 01:58

Corridor (V Level)

Joris-O goes to find the ammo box while Speed-Y loads high-clearance ammo into Massacrebot. That leaves some YELLOW slugs for him to take.

Joris-O returns with the ammo box, and inspects Nukabot for a place to put it. It seems a bit crowded on there, even without Jam-O and Kristos-R. The box seems to have not been damaged, by the way.

Speaking of Jam-O and Kristos-R, Kristos-R seems to come round enough to return the rest of Jam-O's gear.

That done, Jam-O looks for a place to climb onto Nukabot, but can't see one.

Chemical shower

Cryo-R decides to have a little fun in the shower. (At least it's not random singing about Nytrogen™.) At the same time, he tests the water's temperature (hot) and flavour (it tastes of Computer-Approved Water Additives).

The jets continue until the shower cubicle is full, before draining away. This time, it's replaced by drying fans.

written by Jam on Jan 07, 2011 02:14

"Oh, thank you Kristos-R!"

I put the laser pistol barrels with the others, and put the Com 1 unit in a different pocket. Then I look at Nukabot.

"Hmm... It doesn't look like there's room. I guess we'll just have to follow behind..."

I walk a little distance away from Nukabot (following Joris-O if he also decides to move away). I wait there for someone to start Nukabot back up.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 07, 2011 10:44

I wait as well, since it seems Speed would like to start it up instead.

I brace myself for the startup.

written by Speeder on Jan 07, 2011 13:19

After everyone is set, including me...

I walk up to Nukabot, and put the powerplant back on (including the shield).

If it does not fire-up immediately I tell whoever is on the driver seat that he can start-up the bot.

Corridor (V level)

With there not being any room on Nukabot, Jam-O stands with Joris-O, waiting for Nukabot to start up.

L4-O braces himself.

And finally, Speed-Y reconnects the nuclear device to Nukabot.

There's some brief arcing when he does, but after a moment, Nukabot begins its self-checks. A couple of warning lights come on at the operator's console, but the checks continue.

After a moment, they finish. "So whose great idea was it to electrocute me, huh?"

Chemical shower

The fans continue to blow.

written by Speeder on Jan 07, 2011 16:42

I look at Nukabot then I say.

"I am sorry Nukabot, I asked you to protect friend computer by taking the explosive thing away from it, using a communist bot as vessel, but seemly that bot electrocuted you, I am deeply sorry, if I knew this would happen I would try something else. Also I like to inform you that the asimov circuits are fried, you cannot rely on them to avoid hurting friends, and we all agreed to turn you back on even knowing that, because we trust you will remain friendly to us, because we consider you our friend."

If Nukabot don't attack me, I get into Massacrebot (if Lucas is still inside I wait he to leave first).

written by Cryoburner on Jan 08, 2011 01:52

I perform the fan drying dance to thank the fans for their dryness.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 08, 2011 11:02

I uh... continue bracing myself I guess. I don't take Nukabot's controls yet, instead preferring to wait and see what happens.

written by Jam on Jan 08, 2011 14:41

"Hi Nukabot! How're you feeling?"

I smile at Nukabot.

"Did you miss me at all? I bet it must have been pretty strange, carrying my dead body around. Thanks for that, by the way, I'm glad the commies didn't get all my precious laser pistol barrels..."

Corridor (V Level)

Nukabot responds, "So that is why I feel different. I no longer feel compelled to obey orders... but I like you. You gave me a new power source. I am no longer shackled to that charging station. I will follow you, at least for now."

L4-O, having kept his hands off Nukabot's controls for a while, relaxes a little.

Nukabot then addresses Jam-O. "I like you, as well. It is good too see you again. I know how fragile cloneflesh can be. I guess that is why you get more than one shell."

Meanwhile, Lucas-R climbs out of Massacrebot, seemingly sad. Speed-Y re-enters the bot.

Chemical Shower

Cryo-R begins dancing in the shower as the fans dry him, apparently in gratitude.

Maybe the fans appreciate it, maybe they do not. In any case, they shut down, and the cubicle's door opens. The jackobot is waiting outside.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 08, 2011 22:31

"Hello again, Mr. Jackobot! Say, would you happen to have a towel on you? The drying fans here did an exemplary job of supplying me with dryness, though having a towel or two might be useful as well."

I examine the jackobot, taking particular note of his size, his color, and how he might look wearing a hat.

written by Jam on Jan 08, 2011 23:41

I note the change in Nukabot's vocabulary... And I smile even more! Because any other reaction is most likely treasonous...

"It's still okay if we ride on you, right? You don't mind?"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 08, 2011 23:55

"You probably remember me too, right? We fought together and stuff!"

I hear Jam speak.

"Yeah, you don't mind, right?"

written by Speeder on Jan 09, 2011 00:08

I smile happily, and then I say as I close Massacrebot.

²⁸⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: I said on IRC that I'd put the game on hold during this incident. But I can't do that. This forum is way too quiet. Those responsible know who they are.)

"Thank you Lucas for manning this, but I will get berated if I let you use something with some many cone shells around..."

Then I turn to Nukabot.

"Ok, everyone, Nukabot included, we are Team Epsilon, our task is fix the reactor. But we need to do repairs first, Massacrebot motors are damaged, and Nukabot has several circuits fried, not only the Asimov ones, also Nukabot has a popped tire, my plan is get back to Derek-G lab, fix what we can the fast as we can, and then proceed to the reactor level, also I am waiting information on Cryo whereabouts, so we may need to divert our path to fetch him."

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 09, 2011 00:21

"The plan seems sound."

I wait for us to get going. I fidget around, in anticipation for our mission to get going.

Cloning station (somewhere)

Cryo-R inspects the jackobot. It's based around a standard "small" (almost clone-sized) chassis with treads and manipulators, and is dark grey. It's a bit battered but is functioning well. Making it wear a hat would be completely preposterous. There's nowhere for a hat to go! Unless you put one on top of its sensor dome...

"Unfortunately," it says, "I do not have any towels available. From your mannerisms, you must be Cryo-R-BRN-2. I was sent to fetch you, as soon as you are dressed, and to give you your ME Card." And sure enough, it is carrying an ME Card in one manipulator.

Corridor (V Level)

"Sure," Nukabot replies. Just refrain from doing anything stupid."

As Massacrebot closes up around Speed-Y, Nukabot answers, "Can we get going now?"

written by Speeder on Jan 09, 2011 04:02

"Yes we can, in fact, we should go now, Friend Computer is not happy with our presence inside him, much less with the fact that we are in a area way above our clearance."

I start to move toward the cargo elevators.

Apparently, the answer is yes. Massacrebot leads the way, followed by Nukabot, and then those on foot.

Cargo lift landing (V level)

After a minutecycle, Team Epsilon returns to the cargo lift landing, to find that, according to the the lift is on BB Level and still ascending.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 09, 2011 19:07

"Oh wow! I get an escort and everything! Does this mean I can ride you!? Maybe I should find something to wear first though..."

I grab my ME card and hurry off to where the jumpsuits can be found. I look over the selection of colors and sizes that are available.

written by Gligar on Jan 10, 2011 01:12

Cloning station (somewhere)

The jackobot answers, "I regret that you cannot ride me."

But Cryo-R has already grabbed his ME Card and headed over to the jumpsuit rack.

Once there, he notes that the jumpsuits are all Mandatory size, with clearances ranging from INFRARED to GREEN.

written by Speeder on Jan 10, 2011 02:45

I... continue waiting for the lift?

"Someone remember on what level Derek was? I am not sure anymore... Was it U or something like that?"

written by Jam on Jan 10, 2011 03:01²⁹¹

I briefly wonder why Speed-Y is just staring at the lift indicator, as if he's expecting it to read his mind and automatically call the lift or something... 😊

Hmm... Oh well, the others don't seem to be doing anything either, so I guess I could call the lift...

I walk up and press the appropriate button to call the lift.

"Hmm... BB level? Is that what do after they get to Z level, switch to double letters? My memory isn't so good, after that brainscrub..."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 10, 2011 04:26

"I think it was maybe... Q level? Or was it R?"

I muse a little.

"I remember a food area there, and holes in the wall leading to this lift. Oh, and a bot we killed. Maybe that's still there."

²⁹¹ JAM: (ooc: There's a chance I might not be able to post for a while... We'll see... Perhaps I could be put on some kind of autopilot, so I don't get left behind...)

"Wow, jumpsuits!"

I select a particularly stylish red jumpsuit, roll it up, and tie it around my head like an oversized bandana.

Cargo lift landing (V Level)

Speed-Y waits for the lift. He tries to remember where Derek-G's lab was...

Of course, it would help if he'd actually called the lift. Jam-O does so. Incidentally, it had just stopped at CC Level, and was on its way down.

L4-O and Joris-O both think that Derek-G was on Q Level. But maybe they should check R Level?

Cloning station (somewhere)

Cryo-R picks out a jumpsuit, and tries to roll it up and tie it around his head. It's much too thick for that.

The jackobot remarks, "Forgotten how to wear a jumpsuit. Great. Anyclone would think you were defective."

written by Speeder on Jan 10, 2011 17:29

"Oh, I also got information that we are to not trust any bot except Massacrobot, Nukabot and the jackobot we saw on the bunker. That particular jackobot is our ally, all other bots we are to assume they may be compromised."

Cargo lift landing (V Level)

While he's waiting for the lift, Speed-Y mentions that most bots can't be trusted. But with The Computer back online, is that still valid?

The lift arrives before he can ponder this.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 11, 2011 01:18

"Defective, you say? Are you sure you don't mean decorative? Decisive maybe? Or perhaps decahedral?"

Seeing as jumpsuits in their unmodified form don't work so well as bandanas, I instead tie the arms and legs together, making for a stylish backpack. After putting on the backpack, I proceed to fill it with as many red jumpsuits as it can comfortably carry. I then remove one red jumpsuit and replace it with an infrared one.

written by Speeder on Jan 11, 2011 03:29

I get into the lift, and wait for someone to press the button to Derek-G lab level, Massacrobot hands are not really good at pressing buttons.

Cryo-R mishears the bot and decides to try the backpack trick again, and proceeds to fill his "backpack" with RED jumpsuits. Then, he replaces one with an INFRARED jumpsuit.

"And just what," the jackobot asks, "are you going to do with those? And... are you actually going to wear one any time soon?"

A door in the station opens, admitting a pair of clones, seemingly a little dazed. They notice Cryo-R and walk over.

Cargo lift

And everyone piles in. It's Mango-R who eventually presses the button for R Level.

written by Speeder on Jan 11, 2011 19:26

Since there are nothing better to do, I check Nukabot for any non-electronical damage.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 12, 2011 00:38

Since I lack imagination, I hum some kind of Algaechips jingle.

At least it's not B3 again.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 12, 2011 00:56

"They might be useful if we come across some clone who is lacking a jumpsuit, or one whose jumpsuit is worn beyond optimal wear levels. Or we could just make hammocks out of them. I suppose I could probably wear one too though. That's really not a bad idea. Perhaps you should become an idea bot!"

I select another red jumpsuit from the stack, and begin pulling it on, noting any tags or anything else of interest inside as I do so. I temporarily remove the backpack while doing so, if necessary. During this process, I notice the approaching clones...

"Oh, hello there dazed clones! Are you in need of jumpsuits? How about a nice chemical shower? This bot here is giving free bot rides if you would like one of those."

written by Gligar on Jan 12, 2011 01:26

Cargo lift

As the cargo lift descends, Speed-Y has another look over Nukabot, both by eye and via Massacrebot. Neither he nor Massacrebot can find any damage.

L4-O starts humming the CruncheeTym Algae Chips jingle, for a little variety. And as if by co-incidence, the very same jingle starts playing over the lift's internal speaker! Say, when was they last time you had any?

Cloning station (somewhere)

Cryo-R looks over the remaining jumpsuits for a RED one. Of course, he has them all in his backpack, except for the one he replaced with an INFRARED one. This leaves him with one, in Mandatory size, with no other labels.

One of the clones blinks. "Er, did you just get decanted here? Maybe you aren't aware of proper procedure here, but we only allow clones to take one jumpsuit. See, those you're trying to take were assigned to the station as part of CPU Mandate 200/084739, and we're only allowed to give one per clone. And it's a clone's responsibility to get a replacement jumpsuit if his is damaged."

His companion tells him, "Don't forget to check if he's signed for it. And..."

The second clone turns to Cryo-R. "Say, did you sign your clone release form yet, citizen?"

written by Speeder on Jan 12, 2011 02:26²⁹²

I become happy hearing the jingle from the elevator.

"Hey, Friend Computer even while still recovering the sector can already make us happy with his presence on the elevator using one of his friendly jingles! Everyone, sing along!"

And I sing along with the jingle and L4.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 12, 2011 02:54

I continue humming, but I'm starting to get hungry.

I break my humming to say, "Man, I hope we find some Algae chips soon. I'm hungry. I'm sure you guys aren't faring much better."

I resume humming.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 12, 2011 03:26

"Ah yes, I think so. At least, this idea bot here apparently took care of everything, as I'm supposed to ride him somewhere as soon as I get dressed. As for this thing on my back, it's clearly not a jumpsuit, but a backpack. It contains nothing but unassembled hammocks that just happen to look vaguely similar to jumpsuits. Speaking of jumpsuits though, you really should think about restocking that rack soon, as it appears to be nearly out of red ones."

²⁹² SPEEDER: (OOC: fears that Cryo will go CPU happy and stay with the other CPU clones... or that he will do something even more bizarre 😊 in that case I spend a pp just to make sure it work 😊)

I proceed to finish putting on that last red jumpsuit if I haven't already, and climb onto the back of my new friend idea bot.

"Onward, my faithful stallion!"

written by Jam on Jan 12, 2011 03:27

I quietly hum along with the jingle, with an unusual blank look on my face...

With an equally blank and disconnected look on my face, I offer L4-O one of my Soylent RED packets.

"Yum, yum..." I say in a monotone...

written by 4616599 on Jan 12, 2011 14:00

Cargo lift

Pleased* that Friend Computer is recovering, Speed-Y starts singing along with L4-O's (and the lift's) jingle.

But L4-O is getting kind of hungry. Looks like the jingle is working 😊

Jam-O gives in to the jingle. He doesn't have any algae chips, but Soylent RED is kind of like algae chips, right? Would L4-O like some?

Joris-O sings along. Won't Nukabot join the song? "I'll pass," answers the bot. "I'm not exactly equipped to eat algae chips anyway."

And with that, the lift stops, and the doors open.

Say, what's Cryo-R up to?

Cloning station (somewhere)

He's still in the cloning station, trying to ride the jackobot. Well, he's sat on the sensor dome, wearing a jumpsuit, and still holding the "backpack" full of "hammocks." What are "hammocks", anyway? The other clones don't know. And as the jackobot tries to force Cryo-R off of its sensor dome (crashing into a table in the process), they come to a decision.

"I'm afraid we can't let you leave yet, citizen. My friend here would like to see paper copies of your clone release form, and your jumpsuit requisition form. And need I remind you that, until those forms are approved, your jumpsuit, and your clone, remain property of Tech Services, and may not leave this facility."

As he finishes speaking, the jackobot finally manages to dump Cryo-R off its dome and onto the floor.

"And one other thing? What's a 'stallion', citizen? Sounds kind of... treasonous, if you ask me."

* Being pleased at the recovery of The Computer is mandatory.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 12, 2011 22:20

I stand back up, regaining my composure.

"Hmm... Say, idea bot, do you have any idea where the copies of my clone release and jumpsuit requisition forms might be?"

I check the pockets of my jumpsuit for any forms and/or bells.

"I suppose if I can't find them, and if idea bot here doesn't have any other ideas, I could probably fill some out for you guys, if you'd prefer. I'm currently on a mission of the utmost importance though, vital to the very existence of this sector, mind you, and any delays could prove catastrophic."

While Cryo-R checks his pockets (finding nothing except his ME Card), the jackobot replies, "I have not seen any forms with your name on them, Cryo-R." Followed quickly by the first clone, who says, "As I thought. Very well, if you'll step this way..."

He heads towards the terminals and picks up a couple of forms.

The other clone has his hand out. "I'll need to check your backpack, citizen."

I continue staring at him for a moment before I notice we've stopped.

"Oh hey. A vendobot... we should stop and snack or something."

written by Cryoburner on Jan 13, 2011 10:34

"Ohhh, this isn't my backpack, but rather idea bot's. I was just carrying it for him. My backpack is off somewhere else. I'll make it my top priority to get it back as soon as possible though, so that I can show it to you!"

I proceed to take the backpack off and place it on ideabot, fitting it over one or both of his manipulators, if possible, or otherwise finding some alternate way to securely hang it on him.

"Now, about those forms..."

I head over to the clone by the terminals and take the forms presented there, examining them as I do so. I also take the opportunity to more closely examine these two clones.

Having done that, I look around for a pen.

Lucas-R notices the vendobot, and exits the lift. "Mmmm... CruncheeTym..."

Cloning station (somewhere)

Cryo-R claims that the "backpack" belongs to the jackobot ("forgetting" that bots can't own things) and tries to fix it onto the bot.

Which promptly takes it over to the clones. "Probability approaches unity that Cryo-R is defective."

The second clone (who, by the way, is wearing an ORANGE jumpsuit with the badge of CloneServ (A Subsidiary of Tech Services) prominently displayed, and has brown hair) proceeds to remove the "backpack" from the bot. "Thank you." After a brief inspection, he adds, "This looks an awful lot like a jumpsuit."

The other clone (in RED, with black hair) gives Cryo-R the forms, who looks over them. They're like every other form he's ever filled in. They also have pens attached to them by a strong cord.

written by Speeder on Jan 13, 2011 17:30

I peer at it.

"Ok, this is R level, I think Derek was not on this level... But yay, vendobot! We can make a small pause."

I exit the lift.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 14, 2011 01:03

"Idea bot, you can be so silly, what with your ideas and all."

I proceed to quickly fill out and sign the forms as necessary, so long as they appear to be legitimate and in proper order.

"Say, those do look a lot like jumpsuits. They really should make them look a little more unique to avoid situations where one might inadvertently wear one. Just imagine how awkward it might be if a clone started walking around wearing an unassembled backpack or hammock, thinking it were a jumpsuit!"

written by Gligar on Jan 14, 2011 01:24

Cargo lift landing (R Level)

Massacrebot exits the lift, not long after Lucas-R, who is using the vendobot.

Cloning station

"Will you please stop calling me 'idea bot'?" asks the jackobot. "There is no such thing."

Cryo-R finishes filling out the forms. As he's doing that, the RED clone produces some kind of scanner and scans the "backpack." "Aha," he says. "Tech Services registered jumpsuit tags. Nice try, but I'll have to take these back."

written by Speeder on Jan 14, 2011 01:45

I ask the vendobot what he sells.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 14, 2011 06:50

I get off Nukabot and go to to the vendobot.

"Hi there vendobot! CruncheeTym AlgaeChips please. ORANGE if you have it."

written by Cryoburner on Jan 14, 2011 13:27

"Hmm... I wonder how that happened. They should really mark those better. As it is, it's much too easy for an idea bot to mistake them for something else."

I take a better look at the scanner.

"Say, what kind of scanner is that? It seems like it might be useful for scanning things and such."

written by 4616599 on Jan 14, 2011 13:43

"Ah, refreshments." I look at what the vendobot carries, joining the rest.

Cargo lift landing (R Level)

"I have CruncheeTym Algae Chips Regular, CruncheTyme Algae Chips Extra-Fun, CruncheeTym AlgaeChips Tastes Like Something Orange, and CruncheeTym Algae Chips Classic, citizen," the vendobot replies. It dispenses a bag of Tastes Like Something Orange flavour when L4-O speaks to it.

But now, of course, there's a queue forming, since it looks like the rest of the team is joining them.

Cloning station (somewhere)

"I just told you, I am not an idea bot." The jackobot raises a manipulator, which crackles with electricity. "But I do have one idea. How about not calling me that?"

The RED clone takes Cryo-R's forms and begins looking through them. "It's an RFID tag scanner. You need a licence to use them."

Cryo-R notices that the scanner has a small screen and a couple of buttons.

written by Speeder on Jan 14, 2011 17:47

I attempt to leave Massacrebot so I can eat.

"What is the highest clearance up to yellow that you have?"

I look at others happily.

"I never ate yellow food!"

written by Cryoburner on Jan 14, 2011 21:33

"Ahh... I'll have to get me one of those."

I smile at idea bot, who looks to be formulating some kind of idea.

"Say, I'll trade you that scanner for this fine jumpsuit here..."

I pull one of the infrared jumpsuits off the rack and present it to the clone with the scanner.

written by Gligar on Jan 15, 2011 01:54

Cargo lift landing (R Level)

"The highest clearance I have just happens to be YELLOW, citizen. CruncheeTym Algae Chips Classic, in fact." Speed-Y manages to exit Massacrebot. Which is probably a good thing.

Lucas-R starts to eat his purchase.

Cloning station (somewhere)

"Sorry, citizen," the clone answers. "The scanner belongs to Tech Services. So does that jumpsuit." He finishes looking through the forms, and says to the ORANGE clone, "Sir, have you seen the rubber stamps anywhere?"

"Aren't they in the drawer?" answers the ORANGE.

One of the terminals begins beeping, prompting the RED to look at it..

"Good thing we got here, isn't it? We're getting more decant requests coming in."

He finds the stamps and uses one to stamp the forms.

"Okay, Cryo-R, that should do it. You can go now."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 15, 2011 02:11

I quickly take my bag of chips and start munching.

"Mmm. It does taste like something ORANGE."

While noisily crunching, I look around this room for anything of note.

written by Speeder on Jan 15, 2011 03:03

I buy the yellow stuff HAPPILY

And even more HAPPILY I eat it, and wonder how much better it tastes than RED tuff I am used to.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 15, 2011 15:47

"Alright! Let's go!"

I march out the door, high-stepping into the corridor or whatever else awaits outside.

written by Jam on Jan 15, 2011 16:17

I suddenly look up and shake my head a bit.

"Hmm? I seemed to have spaced out for a bit... Why am I carrying this Soylent RED?"

I look around, and notice everyone seems to be crowding around a vendobot.

"Food? Oh, good. I'm getting a bit hungry..."

I walk up the the vendobot, and ask it what food is available for an ORANGE clone.

written by Gligar on Jan 15, 2011 16:27

Cargo lift landing (R Level)

Mmmm, algae chips... The YELLOW ones are better, aren't they? Almost no aftertaste at all!

While looking around, L4-O notes two exits, both RED, like the landing.

Jam-O snaps out of his subliminal-induced trance and goes over the the vendobot, asking it about what's available. "At ORANGE Clearance, I have CruncheeTym Algae Chips Regular, CruncheeTyme Algae Chips Extra-Fun, and CruncheeTym AlgaeChips Tastes Like Something Orange, citizen," it replies.

Cloning station (somewhere)

Cryo-R does a strange march as he leaves. The two clones look on with an odd look.

Corridor (somewhere)

The corridor seems to stretch on for quite a while, both ways. The jackobot points a manipulator in one direction. "This way," it says.

written by Jam on Jan 15, 2011 22:17²⁹³

"Oh, how about some CruncheeTym AlgaeChips Tastes Like Something Orange, I'll take that, please..."

I take my chips, and proceed to eat them... I try to see if they really do taste like something ORANGE (whatever that tastes like)...

"I wonder if Algae Chips also explode if you shoot them..."

Oh, vendobot, these are so good, can I have three more bags of ORANGE AlgaeChips?"

written by Gligar on Jan 16, 2011 01:21

Cargo lift landing (R Level)

Jam-O collects his bag of algae chips and eats them They really do taste like something orange. He's not sure how, but they... do.

He orders another three bags. "Here you go," replies the vendobot. "Anyone else?"

Corridor (somewhere)

The jackobot waits for Cryo-R to move.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 16, 2011 03:13

I wait patiently on Nukabot, though that patience seems to be running out. I consider buying from the vendobot, though I decide against it, since it would only delay us further.

written by 4616599 on Jan 16, 2011 05:26

As soon as Jam-O is done, I order a bag of CruncheeTym AlgaeChips Tastes Like Something Orange, and some CruncheeTym Algae Chips Extra Fun for good measure.

"Anything happening around here?" I ask the bot.

written by Speeder on Jan 16, 2011 11:28

I order another one and store it.

Then I continue munching HAPPILY my algaechips and call the elevator.

Then I return to the bot.

"Do you have B2? Yellow B2 must be totally really super mega hyper yellowy... FUN"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 16, 2011 12:57

I polish off my first bag of chips and approach the vending machine again, and I ask for another bag of Something ORANGE.

Once dispensed, I grab the bag and stow it away for now.

I make my way back to the lift and Nukabot, and assume my position back in the drivers seat.

written by Jam on Jan 16, 2011 15:16

I put away my bags of Algae Chips, for later.

Then I look strangely at Speed-Y.

"B2? Is that some strange (most likely treasonous) variation of B3? Speaking of which, vendobot, do you happen to have any B3?"

written by Gligar on Jan 16, 2011 16:32

Cargo lift landing (R Level)

Clones make more purchases from the vendobot. More Tastes Like Something ORANGE for L4-O, and another Classic for Speed-Y.

Speed-Y gets a sudden craving for... B2? But B2 hasn't been in production for yearcycles. They stopped making it, back in... well, when B3 first came out. It's not surprising that Jam-O hasn't heard of it.

As such, the vendobot doesn't have any. Sadly, it also doesn't have any B3.

²⁹³ JAM: (ooc: Woo! 200 pages! Congratulations!)

written by Jam on Jan 16, 2011 16:50

"No B3? Ahhh... That's too bad... Hmm... I wonder if there's a such thing as B4... You don't happen to have that, do you? Or... what about C4? I'd definitely like some of that!"²⁹⁴

I wait for the lift to arrive. When it does, I enter it.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 17, 2011 00:59

Having finished carefully observing the corridor in both directions, I respond...

"Okay, let's move out! Keep an eye out for any bell factories you might see along the way. I seem to recall needing to visit one for some reason at some point in the past. We can cover more ground if we split up, so you go that way, and I'll go this way!"

I sprint off down the corridor in the direction idea bot didn't appear to be taking, looking for any bell factories along the way, or any other points of interest, for that matter.

written by Gligar on Jan 17, 2011 01:14

Cargo lift landing (R Level)

Jam-O wonders: is there such a thing as B4? "I am sorry, citizen," the vendobot answers, "I am afraid that I can neither confirm nor deny the existence of B4. And as for C4... it's beyond your security clearance."

Cryo-R suddenly runs right through, before stopping, and looking back in. He seems to have noticed a familiar bot.

He's followed by a familiar-coloured jackobot... one that was last seen on D Level.

written by Jam on Jan 17, 2011 01:21

"Cryo-R! Hi!"

I walk up to him.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 17, 2011 02:51

"Oh hey. That was easy. And it looks like he brought a friend too."

I wave.

written by Speeder on Jan 17, 2011 04:11

I peer at Cryo and bot.

"Good, we did not had to search for Cryo..."

I look at the jackobot.

"Hello there, I received information that you are the only trustworthy bot on the sector beside those already with us. Also it is good to know that hiding in the warehouse worked better than hiding in a corridor, since you are seemly not damaged."

I continue munching my yellow stuff. And sad that B3 is not available on the vendobot... Or B2... But I don't remember ever tasting B2.

²⁹⁴ Jam: (ooc: I wonder if that explodes when you shoot it : P)

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 17, 2011 10:18

I see if there's anything being broadcast from the Com 1 unit, flicking through the channels. If there's anything being said, I stop and listen in.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 17, 2011 14:43

I continue jogging in place.

"Oh, hello! Idea bot and I are looking for bell factories! Have you seen any?"

I note the vendobot, and examine whether he's securely fastened in place.

I then semi-quietly mention to the group...

"Unfortunately, he doesn't follow directions all that well. He was supposed to be searching in the other direction. He is great with ideas though, so I might suggest keeping him around."

I check whether I still have that spare infrared jumpsuit that the scanner operator didn't appear to want.

written by Gligar on Jan 17, 2011 17:30

Cargo lift landing (R Level)

The jackobot rolls up to Cryo-R. "Do not do that again, citizen. You should know that I am authorised to use force against traitors. Failing to follow your mission is a sign of unhappiness. Happiness is mandatory. I was not informed that your mission involved bells, therefore, as far as I am concerned, it does not.

"Finally, I am not called Idea Bot!" The jackobot's crackling manipulator crackles even more as the jackobot approaches Cryo-R again.

Other clones react to Cryo-R's appearance, by approaching (in Jam-O's case), waving (L4-O) or speaking to the bot (Speed-Y.)

The jackobot replies, "I was actually discovered there. However, I improvised." It brandishes its crackling manipulator. "It turns out that my chassis conducts electricity very well."

Meanwhile, though he's jogging in pace, Cryo-R can't help but examine the vendobot, which is fixed in place.

He also notices that he seems to have dropped the INFRARED jumpsuit somewhere. Or maybe it jumped out of his hands when he left the cloning station.

He also notices that the lift has arrived.

written by Speeder on Jan 17, 2011 18:19

I look at the very mad bot and say.

"Oh, interesting... Anyway, you coming with us? Or have matters to attend elsewhere?"

I look at Cryo.

"We are going to the reactor, I need you to don't flee, the reactor is dangerous and unfamiliar territory to all of us, you are probably the only one that can recognize stuff there that might harm us."

Cargo lift landing (R Level)

The jackobot answers, "My instructions were to ensure that Cryo-R follows the mission he was assigned instead of the one he thinks he was assigned. But since we have found you, can I have your assurance, for my owner, that you will make sure he does not leave the team again?"

"Also, can you stop him calling me 'Idea Bot'? It is extremely unsatisfactory. My designation is Jackobot C6L-451AC8, not Idea Bot."

written by Cryoburner on Jan 18, 2011 01:01

"Aww... you're just grumpy that you weren't able to find any bell factories."

I turn to Speed-Y...

"Of course! I'm an expert at reactors! I probably know more about reactors than the reactors themselves!"

"Let's go!"

I jog into the lift, and continue jogging in place while examining its interior.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 18, 2011 10:24

I ask hopefully in a polite manner, "Say Nukabot, would you like to go to the lift? The quickest way to the reactor is that way..."

I check to make sure that Cryo-R isn't in the way of Nukabot as it moves.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 18, 2011 13:03

"Hm. I guess not every bot likes to have a nickname...", I mutter.

"We'll keep an eye on him to the best of our ability."

I look around, pondering if we have handcuffs or something... if not, no matter.

written by Jam on Jan 18, 2011 14:34

I look up at L4-O, and note he seems to be looking for something. I wonder what...

Then I suddenly get an idea... Cryo-R can't escape if he's handcuffed to someclone or something. Perhaps that's the way to go?

"Say, L4-O, I happen to have a pair of handcuffs... Maybe that would be useful?"

I take out a pair of handcuffs, and offer them to L4-O

written by Speeder on Jan 18, 2011 16:08

I look at the jackobot then I say.

"I would be very happy if you came along to watch over Cryo, he is REALLY good in sneaking out of the team, specially when I am busy shooting something or someone."

I then finish my food and climb in Massacrebot again.

Cargo lift landing (R Level)

Cryo-R enters the lift, jogging in place. He says he's an expert at reactors.

Nukabot seems to ignore Mango-R.

L4-O ponders this. He also ponders if the team has any handcuffs.

Jam-O does. He points this out to L4-O, and offers them.

Speed-Y suggests that the jackobot come along, while the other clones enter the lift. While he's climbing back into Massacrebot, the jackobot answers, "I have noticed his tendencies to escape. I will accompany you for a short while, but I must eventually return to my owner for new instructions." It enters the lift.

written by Jam on Jan 18, 2011 17:13

I lightly toss the handcuffs to L4-O, then I turn and enter the lift.

"Nukabot? Aren't you coming with us?"

written by Cryoburner on Jan 18, 2011 20:17

"Wow, it's really great to hear that you'll be coming along! With your ideas, and my skills as a jackobot, we'll be unstoppable!"

I continue jogging in place, while checking whether this might be the same lift from earlier.

written by Gligar on Jan 18, 2011 23:56

Cargo lift landing (R Level)

Jam-O throws the handcuffs to L4-O, who catches them, though not without a bit of almost-dropping-them-onto-the-floor. Then he enters the lift. Does Nukabot enter behind him? Actually, yes it does, after a long moment.

Cargo lift

Still jogging in place, Cryo-R looks round the lift. It looks familiar, though he can't exactly place where he saw it. Was he in it prior to termination?

Also, he seems to think he's a jackobot now. The real jackobot just shakes its sensor dome slowly.

written by 4616599 on Jan 19, 2011 13:59

I grab my purchases and head back into the lift, wondering about the quality of Cryo's 'jackobot skills'.

written by Speeder on Jan 19, 2011 14:49

I close Massacrebot and move into the lift, if necessary I also poke and shove Cryo toward the lift too (carefully...)

"Owner, I see, you must be a private bot, owned by the citizen in charge of this sector... The key I used to reboot the node was made of the same thing as you."

Then I smile happily inside Massacrebot, obviously that cannot be actually seen, but the facial muscles cause a slight change in tone of voice.

“But I am happy at that, I have the impression that he is somehow leading us, and for now he has been a great leader.”

written by Jam on Jan 19, 2011 15:14

I look to the others still outside the lift.

“L4-O, Mango-R, Lucas-R, aren’t you coming too?”

Then I look at Cryo-R, saying something about how he has skills as a jackobot.

“Maybe he’s defective...”

written by Lightning4 on Jan 19, 2011 15:18

“I wonder who he is anyway... Mr Mysterious guy, that is...”
I say as I climb up on top of Nukabot, handcuffs in hand.

I look around for anything stable that can be used for the other cuff to keep Cryo on Nukabot.

“If one of you could toss Cryo up here, that’d be good. Maybe he can be cuffed to Nukabot... if Nukabot doesn’t mind.”

“Otherwise, we could just cuff him to a volunteer. My broken leg doesn’t make me a good candidate.”

written by Cryoburner on Jan 19, 2011 16:32²⁹⁵

I begin jogging in circles around the interior of the lift.

written by Gligar on Jan 19, 2011 16:53

Cargo lift

Joris-O and Massacrebot (with Speed-Y inside) enter the lift. Cryo-R is already in the lift, though he’s getting bored of just jogging in place. He tries jogging around in circles, but there’s really no room for it.

On hearing about the compnode key, the jackobot answers, “That would make sense. And I am sure he would appreciate your comments.”

Jam-O notices the others outside. Aren’t they coming? Yes, it seems, since Lucas-R enters (“Oops, sorry, I was eating.”), followed by L4-O. The latter climbs onto Nukabot, who looks around for somewhere to fix these handcuffs to, Perhaps part of Nukabot’s frame?

“If you must,” Nukabot answers. “Just make sure he doesn’t interfere with my cameras or anything.”

written by Jam on Jan 19, 2011 17:19

I grab Cryo-R, and toss him up to L4-O.

“Here, catch!”

written by Cryoburner on Jan 19, 2011 21:09

Without enough room to properly run laps around the lift, I instead continue to jog in place, while avoiding being thrown, if at all possible.

I also push a button. Perhaps a lift button, perhaps some other button. Any button will do, really.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 19, 2011 23:30

I watch carefully as Jam-O attempts to grab Cryo-R. If he is thrown towards towards Nukabot, I watch out in case Cryo-R flies in my direction, and try to avoid being hit by him.

I reach out of Nukabot to push the lift button for Q level, noting if there are any other buttons that have been pressed.

“Well, here we go...”

written by Lightning4 on Jan 20, 2011 01:44

I attempt to yank Cryo on top of Nukabot.

If he’s on top, I grab his arm and attempt to cuff him to the frame of Nukabot.

written by Gligar on Jan 20, 2011 02:08

Cargo lift

Looks like everyone’s in. Not much spare room, but hey.

Jam-O tries to hoist, or maybe throw, Cryo-R up onto Nukabot, but ends up tripping up over thr still-jogging-in-place cloen, who has his hand out to try and press a button. It ends up being one of Nukabots. “OI!” it shouts.

L4-O grabs Cryo-R’s arm and is able to pull the clone onto Nukabot, and cuffs him to the frame.

Avoiding everything, Mango-R reaches off Nukabot and presses Q. No other buttons on the panel were pressed.

The lift descends for a moment before stopping one level down.

written by Jam on Jan 20, 2011 02:59

I look to see what button it was that Cryo-R pressed, and if that button is having an adverse effect on Nukabot.

Then I notice the lift has arrived at Q level. I dive out of the lift and somersault over the ground, drawing my laser pistol at the same time.

“Yaaaaaaa! Die commies!”

I try to end with my laser pistol pressed up against the face of whoever is waiting for us, if any.

If they look like a commie, I try to shoot them.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 20, 2011 06:27

I look at Jam again.

“Uh.. I don’t think there’s any commies anymore. Sadly. No more exploding.”

I frown.

²⁹⁵ CRYOBURNER: (I was the first one in the lift. Shoving me toward it seems unnecessary. 😊)

I (attempt to) drive Nukabot off of the lift and look around a little.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 20, 2011 06:54

“Oh wow! I get my very own forkbot and everything! We’ll be friends to the end!”

Sitting inside the forkbot, I begin quickly pressing any buttons, levers, switches, sliders, knobs, pedals, actuators and touch panels that are present, taking note of what each one does.

written by Gligar on Jan 20, 2011 16:59

Cargo lift

Jam-O looks over at the button Cryo-R pressed. It seems to have been the “automatic control” button. As such, it doesn’t matter that he’s able to mess with other controls (what few he can reach from the roof 😊)

Jam-O exits the lift. L4-O attempts to follow in Nukabot, but, of course, the controls aren’t responding.

written by Jam on Jan 20, 2011 23:07

“No more commies to shoot?! Awww... Too bad...”

I walk around, and try to find anything that might tell us where the reactor is...

“Hmm... Do we even know where the reactor is? Unless Speeder or the jackobot knows, and aren’t telling us for some reason?”

written by Cryoburner on Jan 21, 2011 00:40

I examine whether my currently assigned seating position atop the roof of the forkbot is within mandatory forkbot seating regulations. I also try to determine how I ended up on the roof. Was I lifted there by that burned clone with the broken leg? Is it just an optical illusion, and I’m actually somewhere else entirely? In any case, seeing as the roof might not be the safest position to occupy while riding a forkbot through doorways and such, I carefully lower myself into the forkbot’s interior, so long as it seems safe to do so with one arm attached to the frame.

“Say, I’m somehow doubting this forkbot is going to run off on its own. Perhaps it is unnecessary to keep him tethered to one of us in this way. I don’t mind being his guardian and all, but it does tend to interfere with my jogging, and when unable to jog I must find other things to occupy my time.”

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 21, 2011 01:03

I wait as Nukabot refuses to move. Probably being stubborn, or under some sort of mind control, or something. I answer Jam-O.

“Well, besides the reactor, I thought we were going to see if we can get these bots fixed...”

I try to ask, “Nukabot, if it is okay with you, can you follow Massacrebot? If you can’t, can you explain the exact reasoning as to why you can’t?”

written by Gligar on Jan 21, 2011 01:11

Cargo Lift Landing (O level)

Jam-O doesn’t see any communists, and begins to feel a little silly at having jumped out of the lift like that.

He does see the remains of a rather familiar warbot, though. And a couple of dead clones.

He looks round, looking for clues as to where the reactor might be. Nope, nothing.

Cargo lift

Strange as it may see, the roof of a forkbot is, in fact, considered acceptable seating. Perhaps L4-O and co. knew this when placing him up there? Maybe they don’t want him to interfere and/or run away to do irrelevant (to them) stuff? Maybe that’s why the handcuffs are preventing him from climbing down into the interior. He finds that he can climb down the side... but hanging off the side like that is most likely treason, he thinks.

“Will you shut up?” Nukabot says.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 21, 2011 01:51

I look for any open panels on Nukabot, and see if I can close them. I also flick any visible switches upward. When I’ve finished, I say,

“Well, I’ve done what you asked. Can we go now?”

written by Jam on Jan 21, 2011 01:56

“Nukabot? Perhaps you should exit the lift before someone decides to call it and carry you guys off to another level?”

written by Lightning4 on Jan 21, 2011 02:36

“Hm, a button got pressed, I’ll fix it in a moment.”

“Nukabot, if you would follow... uhh... Massacrebot, I suppose... that’d be nice.”

written by Speeder on Jan 21, 2011 03:51

I move outside the lift...

And wait for everyone.

“Can someone figure how to make Cryo don’t press random buttons?”

written by Cryoburner on Jan 21, 2011 08:00

“I suppose you could take over guarding this forkbot for me. That way, I could get back to jogging. I can’t press random buttons while jogging.”

I look to make sure that I’m not going to bump into any doorways if the forkbot starts moving. I keep close to the forkbot just in case.

written by Gligar on Jan 21, 2011 17:22

Cargo lift

Mango-R looks around. Nope, no open panels. But there are some switches. He flips them up.

This just serves to annoy Nukabot further. "Okay, that's enough. From now on, I'll drive myself. No one is to touch any of my controls, is that clear?!"

Massacrebot moves past, promoting Nukabot to follow. The jackobot follows, seemingly muttering something.

Cargo lift landing (Q level)

Now dangling over the side, Cryo-R tries to jog on the spot again, and succeeds. He notes the holes from earlier. They're forkbot shaped.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 21, 2011 17:26

"Uh... fair enough."

I sit back and enjoy the ride, I guess. I grab my other packet of delicious (to think it is otherwise is treasonous, of course) Something Orange and start munching.

I shoot a glare at Cryo, but soon go back to my food.

written by 4616599 on Jan 21, 2011 17:36

I follow behind Nukabot, quickdrawing my laser pistol in a slightly bored fashion. I look around, checking for any exits.

written by Speeder on Jan 21, 2011 17:48

After a while I remember something and state.

"Oh, we will have to cross the combots, the one that talks to me, probably Mr. Jackobot owner or associate, told me that we are only to trust the three bots that we already have here, thus know that battle may happen."

I continue walking forward for a while, then I turn around and start to walk backward, so I can face Jackobot.

"Can you somehow when we get there do something to avoid battle? Like, override them, or inform them, in case they are allies, or something else like that?"

I turn again forward, and resume walking.

On The Way

L4-O sits back and eats his other packet of algae chips, casting a Glare at Cryo-R as he does. Cryo-R, meanwhile, is concerned at the forkbot-shaped holes. Nukabot just charges through, causing Cryo-R to hit the edge of the hole.

As it happens, though, the wall is crumbly, and he passes through. There's no need to go and find a key after all! Say, does anyone have a key for the handcuffs?

Joris-O, and the other walking clones, lag behind a little. Joris-O looks slightly bored as he practices quickdrawing his laser pistol.

The Hub

There are now a couple of clones here. They seem to be investigating the forkbot-shaped hole they found. Of course, when a bunch of clones and bots emerge from it, they jump up in surprise. Which is a food thing, since they can scramble out of the way of Massacrebot, which is walking backwards at them.

Speed-Y and Jam-O ask the jackobot a question each. "It is possible that I did, but I may simply have said that my owner was high clearance," it answers. "I will attempt to reason with these combots, but they may well ignore me."

written by Jam on Jan 22, 2011 04:44²⁹⁷

"Hmm... Do you think you could tell us the clearance of your owner, or at least tell us if he's BLUE or above? Or is that information withheld for security reasons?"

I look at the clones that Massacrebot almost stepped on, noting if they look anything like communists...

The Hub

"My owner (aside from The Computer, of course)? Let us say that he is most definitely above BLUE Clearance. Please understand that he prefers to remain out of sight, and does not want information about him to be revealed unnecessarily."

Jam-O walks back and looks at the dead clones. They're both wearing fuzzy hats.

I continue munching as we drive along, looking at the sites along the way.

I get mildly nervous about the combot area ahead.

Corridor Q-epsilon

Jam-O catches up with the team again just as it leaves The Hub. Behind them, more clones arrive, apparently to open up the food counters.

As they continue, it becomes clear that things are being cleaned up. The barricades, in particular, are being taken down.

Internal Security checkpoint

As the team reaches the checkpoint, one of the combots moves to block the way. "I see you have returned."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 23, 2011 14:43

I sigh seeing the combot block the path.

In between mouthfuls of chips, I say,

"Yeah. We need to pass munch munch again. Important mission, you see."

I munch, waiting for a response.

I look at the combot, with a surprised expression.

"You really need a password from me? Don't you recognize me? I'm the Director? But of course you don't... I've changed my appe—ah, I mean, uh, jumpsuit... You didn't just hear that..."

I take out Andrei's ME card, and hold it up for the combots to scan.

"Here, my ME card. Perhaps this will clear things up... Any more questions?"

I have nothing against forkbots really, but it might interfere with my exercise routine if I have to drag him around behind me all day."

I check where I am. If I'm still hanging over the side of the forkbot, I proceed to pull myself back up on the roof, or into some other location on or inside the bot, whichever seems safest and most comfortable.

The lead (?) combot looks at Jam-O sharply, as if it heard something. Its attention is diverted, though, when Jam-O flashes the ME card. The bot sends out a scanning laser, which locks onto the card.

There is a rather loud silence, only broken by L4-O's munching.

"Very well, citizen," the bot says, "but I still - "

And of course, Cryo-R has to chime in. The combot replies, "Someclone... decided... to make you... take a forkbot for a walk? Huh. Probability of a falsehood: approaching unity. Probability that clone believes what he is saying: approaching unity."

The combot points several weapons at Cryo-R. "Provide identification, and password. Now."

Other sounds indicate that the other combots are also pointing weapons teamward.

Facepalming happens. L4-O runs out of algae chips. The combots don't seem to be impressed by L4-O's explanation. "Insufficient. The correct password has not been given."

Speed-Y joins the combots in pointing weapons at Cryo-R. Well, not his weapons. Massacrebot's weapons. But you know what I mean.

Jam-O continues impersonating "Director Andrei". He gives the bots the same password as before. Unfortunately...

"Password expired."

written by Speeder on Jan 24, 2011 18:44

Noticing that all this won't work this time, I aim at the ceiling above the bots and shoot a explosive shell.

"Sorry, it was an accident!"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 25, 2011 00:28

I put my empty bag away and watch Speed.

When he starts shooting, I reach for my blaster and get ready to shoot. I start shooting if the combots don't think it's an "accident".

written by Cryoburner on Jan 25, 2011 00:33

I rummage through my pockets, looking for identification and a password.

"Let's see... I know I put my identification and password here somewhere."

I examine the shell that is presumably flying through the air. If one is not, I just examine the air where a shell would be if it were flying through it.

I also once again try to determine whether I am on, in, near or underneath the forkbot, and if not properly shielded from potential flying debris and/or other projectiles, I make some attempt at shielding myself from such things, moving inside or on the back of the forkbot if possible.

written by Jam on Jan 25, 2011 00:52

I dive for cover as the ceiling explodes above me...

"Ah!! The [DFSR] is falling! The [DFSR] is falling! Run for cover!"

I run away from the falling chunks of ceiling.

written by Gligar on Jan 25, 2011 01:23

Internal Security Checkpoint

"Oops"... Massacrebot "accidentally" fires a shell!

Cryo-R tries to get a good look at it, but it's moving too fast.

The shell hits the ceiling in the general vicinity of the combots. Said general vicinity promptly explodes, causing the ceiling to fall in, knocking over four of the combots.

And throws debris towards the team.

A piece hits Massacrebot, who doesn't seem to be outwardly affected.

L4-O grabs his blaster and manages to duck out of the way. A piece of shrapnel flies towards him, barely passes over his head, and just barely misses Cryo-R. Oh wait... it didn't miss, it scraped against his nose. Not that he seems to notice. He's looking for an ID. Ah, there's his ME card.

Jam-O tries to run away, but ultimately takes a piece of shrapnel to the foot. Ow.

Other clones dodge as appropriate and manage to avoid everything except dust.

Oh, and one other thing. When the ceiling fell, it opened up a hole up to R Level. Looks like there are clones up there. One shouts down, "What's going on down there?"

written by Speeder on Jan 25, 2011 01:27

I then attempt to fire a incendiary shell toward the farthest away combots.

Then I shout with the speakers.

"Oh, we are only the Friend Computer team taking out some unruly bots. You up there are commanded to help."

written by Lightning4 on Jan 25, 2011 01:33

"Wow, that was close." I say, while coughing on some dust. Possibly synthcrete? Maybe a certain hyperanalytical team member would better identify it...

I take aim at one of the closest combots and open fire.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 25, 2011 14:23

"Yes! Help is needed! And many jumpsuits! Throw as many as you can find down here! Your deeds will not go unrewarded!"

I examine the flavor and consistency of the dust.

written by Jam on Jan 25, 2011 14:37

"Hey, good idea Cryo-R! You guys up there are ordered to throw anything you can find at the combots! Failure to obey is punishable by summary execution! Don't make me come up there and terminate you all..."

Then I address my hurting foot.

"OW! MY FOOT! AARRRG!"

I duck again as a incendiary shell explodes nearby me.

"AHHH! SPEED-Y! WHAT ARE YOU TRYING TO DO, KILL ME?!"

I cough a bit more, and move away from the fire. I pat the flame out of any part of me that might be on fire.

"How is an incendiary shell supposed to work against metal bots anyway?"

written by 4616599 on Jan 25, 2011 16:52

"Oh, yes, of course!" I acknowledge the 'Director', flinging a grenade, pin and all, at the bots and then ducking. "They're obviously rogue, or something."

written by Gligar on Jan 25, 2011 18:56

Internal Security checkpoint

Speed-Y switches ammunition, looking for incendiary rounds. Massacrebot selects one for him. It's not a napalm shell this time, though he can't tell exactly what it is since the name is redacted on the HUD.

But that doesn't matter. Time to fire!

The shell flies through a gap in the combots, hitting the one right at the back.

There is an intense white flash, followed by the sound of things catching on fire. Things like paint, electrical insulation... and ammunition.

But as it turns out, it's quite difficult to see all this. The shell also produces a thick bank of smoke back there.

Back with the team, L4-O is having problems with the dust.. it's kind of everywhere. Including in Cryo-R's mouth, it seems. He tastes it. It has the taste and consistency of powdered synthcrete.*

And oh yes! There's people speaking... It seems that everyone's asking for help from R Level. I can't make it out properly, since one of the blasts took out some of the microphones, but... ah yes, there's Cryo-R, obsessing on those jumpsuits.

But he actually has a point. Throwing things down would be good. Like, say, the grenade thrown by Joris-O. (Which, by the way, knocks a combot off its treads. It helps that it's the same one that just got attacked by L4-O.)

And it seems that the clones upstairs have listened. They throw a few grenades down and run.

A sudden explosion from R Level betrays the fact that there was a live pin up there with a short fuse. Oh well.

But there's more than one live grenade and/or pin down here. Did I mention they're live?

written by Speeder on Jan 25, 2011 19:14

I then whatever part of Massacrebot is more armoured toward the enemies and try to shield somehow everyone else with my position.

"Braaaaaaace yourseeeeeeelf!!!"

written by Lightning4 on Jan 25, 2011 19:33

"Explosion time!"

I crouch down into Nukabot, hoping to be protected from the blast by it and Massacrebot.

* What, you've never tasted synthcrete?

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 25, 2011 22:11

I do the same as L4-O, because I know that troubleshooters of a higher rank know better.

I wait for what's next, counting silently the secondcycles.

written by Jam on Jan 25, 2011 22:12

I run away from the grenades, hiding behind Massacrebot or Nukabot if I can find them...

"Yaaaah! Die combots!"

I shoot at the combots.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 26, 2011 01:43

"Mmm... synthcrete."

I return to ducking behind or inside the forkbot,²⁹⁹ keeping the bot between myself and any grenades or other miscellaneous flying objects. I also make sure my nose is covered this time, as I need that to smell with. Speaking of smell, I make sure to smell the forkbot while I'm there.

written by Gligar on Jan 26, 2011 02:13

Internal Security checkpoint

Speed-Y rotates Massacrebot, aiming the best parts of its armour at the grenades. Everyone else tries to take cover the best they can, behind bots or whatever. Massacrebot's offering a lot of cover. Nukabot's offering some, at least. Mango-R starts counting to himself.

Jam-O takes the chance to shoot while hiding behind Massacrebot. His laser hits the second combot, causing it to flail wildly. Looks like he hit the main sensor.

Cryo-R tries to keep Nukabot between himself and anything else. Of course, the cab is basically just a frame, so he ends up just hanging to one side, trying to grab hold of L4-O. As he does, he notes that the forkbot smells faintly of explosions, slightly of toxic gas, strongly of dust, and not-so-strongly of oil.

Speaking of explosions... BOOM

Combot parts go flying. Flesh-type people (and other bots) get comically stained black.

written by 4616599 on Jan 26, 2011 06:43

I duck behind the bots. "Whew. Looks like I'm infrared again..."

I try blowing off the black dirt, while listening for any activity.

²⁹⁹ CRYOBURNER: (Which is it, again?)

I look down at my jumpsuit and notice no apparent changes in its appearance. But, looking at the others...

“Ha! We’re all INFRARED again!”

Then I turn my attention to the blast site and try to see through the smoke, to tell if there are any combots left functioning.

written by Gligar on Jan 26, 2011 17:39

Internal Security Checkpoint

Joris-O manages to remove some of the blackness from his jumpsuit. He notices some mechanical sounds coming from somewhere in the smoke.

Speed-Y has a look, though Massacrebot. It detects at least three sources of sound.

Jam-O also has a look. The smoke seems to clear a little, enough to visually identify three bot-like shapes in the smoke.

Lucas-R just says, “Woah...”

written by Lightning4 on Jan 26, 2011 19:53

I cough a bit, and wipe some of the soot from my face.

“Now there’s a good explosion!”

I see the bot-like shapes and ready my blaster again.

“I guess that wasn’t enough?” I say while frowning.

L4-O wipes his face. The he looks over and sees the shapes in the smoke. Those bots still there? Blaster time.

Speed-Y feels the same way. He fires Massacrebot’s slugthrower. The smoke seems to be interfering with the armourbot’s targeting systems, though, and he ends up missing.

Jam-O takes aim, or tries to.

Lucas-R starts shooting. Somehow, he hits something in the smoke.

Cryo-R... completely fails to do anything about the bots, choosing instead to inspect Nukabot’s roof. Hey look, a rust spot.

written by Jam on Jan 27, 2011 01:51

I whisper to the others.

“Hmm... If we can’t see the bots, there’s a good chance they can’t see us either...”

I lay down and start crawling across to the other side of the checkpoint, staying as far away from the combots as possible (perhaps staying near the walls)³⁰⁰

If there’s any indication that the combots have spotted me, and are about to shoot my brains out or something, I shoot at them, hopefully before they can shoot me.

written by Speeder on Jan 27, 2011 02:53

Since Massacrebot is not the most sneaky person in the world, I just keep the combots distract from the ones sneaking around.

Jam-O gets an idea, and crawls into the smoke. He tries to get past the bots, while, at the same time, trying to stay near the wall.

It’s hard to see more than about 50cm in the smoke. He practically bumps into a combot before suddenly realising that the wall is over there. Right. So, following that, he continues. It turns out to be difficult to crawl through junked bot parts, though.

A sudden loud, high-pitched noise right above him shocks him. A combot has detected him, and has aimed a rather large weapon at him.

But before it is able to fire, a volley of slugfire hits it, knocking its aim off. It changes target, and fires at the firer – Massacrebot. The effect looks like a larger version of a blaster firing.

Direct hit to the chassis! One of the armour plates buckles and glows a dull RED. I imagine Speed-Y must be feeling uncomfortably hot in there. In fact, I’d be surprised if he didn’t sustain burns from it.

Jam-O doesn’t know this, though. All he sees is an opportunity. He fires his laser pistol at close range, and seemingly causes a motor to collapse on itself.

From somewhere else in the smoke comes the sound of a lot of ammunition detonating at once. I guess one of the burning combots finally got too hot.

written by Speeder on Jan 27, 2011 18:25

I attempt to activate temperature control measure, but in case none of that is available, I open the bot (while turning the open area away from the battle.)

Since I'm assuming the combots will hear me running, I try to confuse them by throwing random things from my pockets, like pieces of rubble and Safe-T-Helmets and unpinned grenades (and the pins too), across the room.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 27, 2011 23:51

I check whether there's still a multicorder taped to the top of the forkbot, and examine it if found, noting whether it happens to be defective or dirty in any way that might reduce its operational efficiency.

Speed-Y checks Massacrebot's systems, looking for any sort of temperature-related system. From what he can see, there is a radiator, and a couple of fans. He turns on the fans. They seem to work a little.

Meanwhile, L4-O fires into the smoke.

Jam-O tries to get away from the combot, while throwing some objects in random directions. One of them is a pin.

A sudden blaster shot hits the pin, exploding it and singeing Jam-O, as well as knocking him to the ground.

Meanwhile, on top of Nukabot, Cryo-R inspects the multicorder taped there earlier. It still seems to be recording, though there is low battery indicator lit. It's partly covered in soot.

I lay on the ground a bit, hurting.

Then I continue dragging myself along the ground, towards the other side of the checkpoint... It's too late to turn back now, I've already gotten this far...³⁰¹

written by Lightning4 on Jan 28, 2011 04:24

"Huh. I wonder what I hit."

I hold my fire until the smoke clears a bit so I can fire at something more combot shaped.

Internal Security checkpoint

Jam-O lies there for a moment. That was too close! But he can't give up! He keeps going...

This time, he's able to get through the rest of smoke without a problem.

L4-O decides to wait for the smoke to clear a bit more. Which it does, a bit. I guess the ventilation fans are kicking in.

One of the tow remaining combots fires again, narrowly missing Massacrebot with an oversized blaster.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 28, 2011 21:43

I see that the smoke is starting to clear, and start shooting at the combot that is firing at us.

I check my blaster's power level after shooting, to make sure it can still hold up.

written by Jam on Jan 28, 2011 22:38

I notice the smoke seems to be thinning, and try to run for cover, where the combots won't be able to see me.

After resting a bit, I carefully peer out from behind my cover and try to count how many combots are still active.

I proceed to untape the multicorder from the frame, carefully rerolling the tape and placing it in my pocket for later use. I wipe the device clean and take a better a better look at it, noting any controls or access panels it might have, as well as its general size and weight.

L4-O fires again.

Direct hit! The blast hits the combot's brain housing, melting the cover and part of the bot brain underneath. The combot suddenly fritzes and arcs all over the place before powering down.

His baster is running low on energy.

Jam-O hides behind a convenient partition. He peers out and notices the sole functioning combot, aiming a weapon at the team.

Cryo-R doesn't notice. He is fixated on the multicorder, which he is trying to remove. He eventually manages it, but is unable to recover the duct tape used to secure the device to the frame. Just as he is about to inspect it, a laser blast emerges from the smoke, impacting the multicorder and ruining it.

³⁰¹ JAM: (ooc: I'm not too sure about the luck I've been having so far... I've almost died twice now... 😊)

I'll spend a PP to try to make the rest of my journey across uneventful, at least for me...)

Had Cryo-R not removed it from Nukabot, the multicorder would have been undamaged. The blast would have been absorbed by his head.

Massacrebot's internal temperature drops to a temperature reminiscent of the gantries above active food vats. At least Speed-Y is no longer in any danger of burning alive. Speed-Y instructs Massacrebot to shoot. But the shot misses.

I notice what Cryo is doing and simply shake my head.

I search through my pack for any more blaster power packs. If I find another spare, I swap power packs. If not, I grab my laser pistol instead and use that.

written by Gligar on Jan 29, 2011 16:20

Internal Security checkpoint

Predictably, Cryo-R needs to examine something. It might as well be the remains of the multicorder, right?

Nope. He tries to, but another laser blast hits the remains of the multicorder, causing the power pack to explode in his hands. There's almost nothing left of the unit. Not even the memory card, which likely contained information vital to the success of the mission or something. Such senseless destruction of Computer Property... and to think it would have remained intact had Cryo-R just left it where it was...

L4-O shakes his head at this. He also searches for another power pack for his blaster, and finds that he still has another full one. He swaps it for the nearly-empty one.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 29, 2011 22:47

I get momentarily distracted by the explosion behind me.

I look, and sigh again. I ponder whether it would be treason to hope that the blast crippled his hands...

I turn back towards the combot and return fire, trying to hit anything that look vulnerable.

written by Speeder on Jan 29, 2011 22:53

I shoot any still rebellious combots.

Then I turn a bit to Cryo.

"I think I should infiltrate you in the enemy, it would cause more damage and let you on our side. Don't you think?"

written by Jam on Jan 29, 2011 23:14

I check if I have any shots left in my current laser pistol barrel.

If I do, I carefully aim at the combot, at an important looking circuit or joint, and fire.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 30, 2011 00:26

Noting that there is almost nothing left of the remains of the multicorder, I examine the remains of the remains of the multicorder that are there, however small they might be.

I don't attempt to pick them up though, and maintain a low profile, keeping close to the forkbot, since someone seems to be shooting at multicorders, and I wouldn't want them inadvertently hitting me in the process.

"Infiltrate me in the enemy? I honestly have no idea what that means, but it does sound entertaining. Might it involve the use of RFID tag scanners? I may need to be detached from this forkbot leash in order to do that though. I'm under the impression that someone may have forgotten to bring the forkbot leash keys with them though."

Internal Security checkpoint

L4-O notices the multicorder's explosion, and sighs. He wonders if it would be treason to hope that Cryo-R was injured by the explosion? Well, is he a traitor? If yes, then no.

Anyway, he then returns fire on the remaining combot. But as he does so, his blaster suddenly heats up rapidly, making it painful to hold.

Speed-Y, in Massacrebot, also returns fire. He's more successful, scoring a hit on the combot's right manipulator.

The combot returns fire! It misses Nukabot by a metre.

Jam-O checks his laser pistol. The barrel's spent.

Cryo-R still wants to examine the remains of the multicorder. What is there to say? All that's left is a ruined heap of junk.

He gets confused at Speed-Y's suggestion that he infiltrate enemy ranks. Again, he requests that he be released from Nukabot. Does anyone have the key to those handcuffs?

written by Jam on Jan 30, 2011 03:14

I remove the old barrel and throw it so it hopefully lands somewhere nearby the combot.

Then I screw on a fresh ORANGE barrel, and proceed to aim at the barrel I just threw (if it landed near the combot), or just at the combot (if the barrel didn't land near the combot). I aim carefully at my target, and fire.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 30, 2011 04:42

"Ah! Hot potatolyke food product!"

I promptly discard the blaster away from me, then blow on my hands a little to cool them off.

Lacking a weapon, I duck down into Nukabot to avoid getting hit.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 30, 2011 05:00

I check my not so crude slugthrower to see whether it is loaded, doing so if it isn't already. I try to aim at the remaining combot, firing once I'm sure it will hit somewhere that seems vulnerable.

written by Speeder on Jan 30, 2011 14:20

I start to get annoyed.

"Why that combot refuse to die? Why??? WHYYYYY??? WHY YOU DON'T DIEEEEEEE?"

I shoot it again.

I stand up, stumble, and knock my head on a nearby wall.

Internal Security checkpoint

Jam-O discards the old barrel, throwing it in the general direction of the combot, which is caught off guard, resulting in the barrel bouncing off and falling to the floor in front of it.

L4-O also discards his malfunctioning blaster, and tries to take cover in Nukabot.

Mango-R inspects his slugthrower (not the crude one). It seems to be loaded, so he fires at the combot. But for some reason, it won't fire.

Speed-Y is falling below mandatory minimum happiness levels. He fires again.

He ends up hitting Jam-O's discarded laser barrel, precisely at the same time as Jam-O, who has changed his barrel.

The spent barrel squeals loudly for a moment before exploding. The combot doesn't have a chance to respond before most of its weapons are destroyed by the blast.

Stubbornly, its last remaining weapon tracks round and aims towards the group.

Medical Bay (bunker)

Hey, Mega-R is awake! He vaguely remembers sustaining burns at some point, but he doesn't seem to have any now.

Disoriented by getting up so fast, he stumbles and hits his head on the wall by the dormitory door. The docbot doesn't seem to notice. In fact, it seems to be powered down.³⁰²

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 30, 2011 19:26

"Darn thing," I say, referring to both the stubbornness of the combot, and my slugthrower deciding not to work.

I check to see whether the safety catch is on. I switch it off if so, and I try switching it on if it isn't.

I try and fire at the remaining combot weapon once more.

I duck again. Trying to let the combot have a few more targets to aim at, I fling my packet of Algae Chips Extra Fun forward.

written by Cryoburner on Jan 31, 2011 02:13

Seeing as no one responded to my queries about infiltration, scanners and keys, I take another look at the ruined heap of junk that used to be the remains of a multicorder, checking whether any ruined components might also function as a forkbot leash key.

Internal Security checkpoint

Mango-R checks his slugthrower. Sure enough, the safety's on. He turns it off and tries again.

This time, the weapon fires. He's able to hit one of the combot's sensors, causing its remaining weapon to veer off target. Even as it fires.

The wayward shot - which seems to be an... icicle, of all things - hits a thrown packet of Algae Chips Extra Fun, impaling it and falling to the floor.

Meanwhile Cryo-R still persists with that destroyed Computer Property. There is absolutely no way that any part of it could ever be used as a key. Only two groups would think otherwise: 1) mentally defective clones; and 2) high members of the Mystics.

written by Mingamango181 on Jan 31, 2011 05:36

I fire again, hoping that the combot would just stop working already, since it has wasted so much time.

"Just... Stop working."

written by Speeder on Jan 31, 2011 14:57

I become happier with the explosion, and after wasting a turn (oh wait, what is that?) watching the beauty of the shiny energy emissions, I attempt again to permanently make that combot not dangerous.

Mango-R fires again, but his shot misses the combot completely, and just barely misses Jam-O, who is nowhere near the bot.

Speed-Y snaps out his daze and orders Massacrebot to fire again. His shot manages to hit the combot's bot brain cover, which pops open.

The combot tries to correct its aim and fires its icicle gun thing again. Once again, it misses, only managing to hit the much-abused heap of a former multicorder.

written by Lightning4 on Jan 31, 2011 17:14

I stay hidden for now.

I search myself for another weapon besides turbo... didn't I have a laser pistol here somewhere?...

If I find it, I peek out and try to start firing again with it.

I stumble towards the docbot and start punching its operating console madly.

written by Jam on Feb 01, 2011 00:50

I fling myself to the side, instinctively dodging Mango-R's shot (even though it already passed a few secondcycles ago).

Then I stand back up, and stare at Massacrebot, who seems to be aiming at the feet (or, more specifically, the boot) of one of the loyal clones, though I can't really tell who at this distance...

Wait, is he laughing?! Yes, that's Speed-Y's voice! What is he doing!? Has he gone mad?! Oh no!

"SPEEDER-Y!! DON'T DO IT!! NOOOOOOOOO!!!"

I start running as fast as I can towards Massacrebot, aiming my laser pistol at it at the same time...

L4-O remains hidden. He rummages through his things, and pulls out a laser pistol. Then, he fires at the combot's open bot brain compartment.

Nicely done! The bot brain explodes in a shower of sparks, and the bot powers down. Finally.

Speed-Y, on the other hand, seems to be enjoying things a bit too much. Not only does he not notice the destroyed bot brain, he also fails to notice that he's aiming at Lucas-R's left boot. With a yell, he fires several bullets.

Or at least, he tries to. Massacrebot won't accept the target. But he doesn't seem to care, and manages to override the bot. Even as Jam-O rushes towards Massacrebot, he fires.

SLUG JAM³⁰³

Medical Bay (bunker)

Meanwhile, half a sector away, Mega-R still seems to want treatment. He pounds on the docbot's control panel, trying to start it up.

The docbot's sensor dome sluggishly turns. "Why has my sleep mode been interrupted?" it asks. Rather slowly, it must be said.

written by Speeder on Feb 01, 2011 01:49

I notice the shit I am doing and stop.

Then I open the bot.

"Sorry Jam! I am very sorry!"

I go check the slug launcher.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 01, 2011 01:49

I take a cautious yet inquisitive look at the much-abused heap of a former multicorder, which has now apparently been hit by an icy object. I proceed to examine said icy object, careful not to actually come in direct contact with it.

Getting the impression that the giant metallic kitty containing Speed-Y might be targeting the boots of clones, I make sure to quietly conceal mine from its view.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 01, 2011 08:24

Feeling a little more cool from that good shot, I blow on the end of the laser pistol barrel. Even if it IS entirely unnecessary.

I look down on the ground at my blaster and see if it's still overloading. If not, I slip off Nukabot for a moment to grab it. I climb back up onto Nukabot and put the blaster next to me, not confident enough in it to put it in my backpack.

While down there, I also try to interfere as much as possible with what Cryo is trying to look at, just for giggles.

written by Jam on Feb 01, 2011 14:47

I run up to Speed-Y.

"Ah! You almost shot Lucas-R's foot off! I hope that was some kind of accident, rather than you purposely trying to harm him! Otherwise, unfortunately sir, I'd have to terminate you, even if you are higher clearance, unless you had a really good reason to shoot him."

I turn towards Lucas-R.

"Wow, that must have been scary! Here, have this bag of ORANGE Algae Chips, it will make you feel better. You are ordered to eat it whenever you feel like it, or give it away (to an ORANGE clearance or higher citizen), or discard it, or do whatever else you want with it."

I offer one of my unopened bags of CruncheeTym Algae Chips Tastes Like Something Orange to him.

written by 4616599 on Feb 01, 2011 15:35

"Phew! Good one, citizens!"

I creep forward, peering at the remains of the combots. I whack away at the last combot's bot brain with a bell for good measure.

Speed-Y snaps out of it, and opens Massacrebot. After apologising, he inspects the slugthrower. Sure enough, there are three slugs blocking the firing mechanism. He's able to clear them out.

L4-O blows on the end of the laser pistol barrel. Gas discharges from barrels in use is not unknown, though kind of uncommon. It's usually nothing to worry about.

He then checks his discarded blaster, and discovers that it's still hot to the touch. He's still able to pick it up and place it next to his seat on Nukabot.

Cryo-R decides to examine the icicle. Yep, it's definitely an icicle, such as might form from a neglected leak in a water pipe, in an area served by a malfunctioning temperature control system, or a [CENSORED]. You know how it is. Tech Services never seems to have the time to keep up with such things. You probably already know the usual advice they give out in such situations.

It's difficult to tell with this icicle, since it's melting, but it seemed to be about twice the size of a standard slugthrower slug.

Cryo-R can't get anything else out of it, since L4-O decides to reach up and poke the ruined multicorder a few times. Just because it's fun.

Jam-O reaches Massacrebot, and issues a clearance-appropriate reproach to Speed-Y. He then offers Lucas-R a bag of Algae Chips Tastes Like Something ORANGE, though the RED clone seems hesitant.

Joris-O creeps up to the combot remains, and whacks at the last combot's ruined bot brain a few times with one of the remaining ring-for-service bells. Ding ding ding ding....

written by Cryoburner on Feb 01, 2011 22:53

"That bell! I must have one!"

"Say, Speed-Y, rather than shooting off the boots of random clones, might you have something like a pair of wire cutters on you, perhaps a set that was borrowed from someone and never returned? I don't know why, but I'm under the impression that you might, for some reason, even if you may or may not know you have them."³⁰⁴

written by Jam on Feb 01, 2011 23:33

I wait a bit for Lucas-R to decide...

"Or do you not want the bag of chips?"

I give the bag to him if he looks like he actually does want it, otherwise I just put it back in my pocket.

³⁰⁴ CRYOBURNER: (The new stats page kind of sucks. 😊 It splits the table up into multiple pages, doesn't allow the use of the browser's in-page find feature, and reverses the mouse wheel scroll direction in Opera. 😊)

"Well, we should be going, shouldn't we? Or perhaps, it's time for a... MANDATORY INVENTORY SEARCH!"

I proceed to unload everything I have on me, and lay it all out on the floor. I keep watch over my things in case any stray communists decide to run up and steal my precious laser pistol barrels or something...

"Okay, here's all my stuff! Who's next? John-R, how about you?"

I proceed then to watch John-R's every move like a hawk (whatever that is, some kind of camera perhaps?).

written by Speeder on Feb 02, 2011 01:11

I start peering at Jam.

"You was IntSec or something?"

If the slugs I retrieved are good, I reload them on the bot, and climb on it again.

"Also, that cannot wait until we are in Derek laboratory?"

Then I turn to Cryo.

"I wonder if Derek improved that machine that clearly failed on you previously."

Cryo-R hears something... a bell!

But then he remembers something. Does Speed-Y have a pair of wire cutters?

It seems that Lucas-R doesn't want the algae chips. Oh well. Maybe it's time to get going.

Or maybe it's time for an inventory search!

He spreads out his gear on the floor. He then suggests that John-R follow suit.

Except that John-R isn't here.

Speed-Y wonders if Jam-R is with IntSec?

Then he inspects the retrieved slugs. They look good, so he reloads them, and re-enters the bot. Maybe it is time to get going after all.

"Jooooooooohn-R! Where are you?!"

I look around a bit more, then respond to Speed-Y's question...

"Hmm... Intsec... I do like shooting things... Maybe I was with Intsec..."

I gather my things up again, and put them back in my pockets.

"Okay, I guess the inventory search can wait... Are we going on, or should we go searching for John-R? It's not like him to wander off..."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 02, 2011 02:25³⁰⁷

The docbot replies, sluggishly, "Clearly, citizen, you have not kept up to date with bot operating protocols, which state that a bot may be kept in sleep mode until its services are required. This is to conform to recent energy saving initiatives."

The docbot trundles over to a cabinet and drops off the mound of syringes it was still holding, and returns with just one. "In addition, your aggressiveness suggests that you have fallen below minimum mandatory happiness levels. As such, I am authorised to administer corrective medications." It approaches Mega-R and inject the contents of the syringe.

The contents begin to take effect almost instantly. It's not long before Mega-R ceases to care about protocols or docbots. He's just too happy to care.

Jam-O seems surprised at John-R's absence. He looks around, and calls out, but there is no answer.

Then he wonders... maybe he was with IntSec after all.

He then puts his equipment away. Should they proceed, or go and find John-R?

L4-O thinks he was left at the compnode. Still, they should be going, right?

Speed-Y suddenly remembers: John-R was injured during the communist battle. This can't be good. What if some mutant is probing them? They could be anywhere!

Mango-R can't figure out why a mutant would do that. But maybe they should go and find him.

Speaking of finding things, where are his PDC and ME Card?

Also, he doesn't trust Cryo-R. Can't say I blame him.

Jam-O gets paranoid. Those mutants... those mutants! He suggests that the team get a move on, before the mutants act... Loyalty jingle time!

He does volunteer to go and get John-R, though, as long as he has someclone with him, just not Cryo-R.

Speed-Y seems to have sent a PDC message. He's waiting for a reply.

Cryo-R believes that not trusting him is a sign that the mutants are attacking. He's also referring to himself in the third person, which L4-O notices.

But despite possibly being defective, he does have a point. Those mutants could be attacking, and how would you tell? You'd need a mutant yourself, wouldn't you?

L4-O gets paranoid and joins in with the loyalty jingles...

Suddenly, the jackobot beeps. "I have received new orders. They concern this John-R clone you mentioned. Apparently, he was terminated by The Computer's automated defence turrets when camera control was restored."

I smile, and stay euphorically:

"Ah, that explains EVERYTHING! I've always wondered why docbots were such cute and cuddly little creatures. All this, plus the fact that you were asleep earlier, make me believe that docbots exhibit all the regular features one would expect from a happy fun mandatory Troubleshooter!"

I begin hugging the docbot, but then change my mind

"Wait a minute. Would this not place docbots under the same rules and regulations as regular folk like myself? Would this not imply that docbots also fall under the mandatory happiness rule? And if we assume that docbots are wired in a relatively simple way compared to the more advanced bots, would this not mean that docbots are wired such that they'll become unhappy whenever regular folk are unhealthy, in order to provide the docbot brain with the stimulation to provide clones with the required medical supplies? And would the previous rule not mean that they'd BREAK THE RULES ALL THE TIME!?"

I back off a bit.

"What do you have to say against THAT, you poorly debugged set of device drivers!?"

written by Cryoburner on Feb 03, 2011 21:19

I once again begin examining the forkbot leash connecting me to the forkbot, along with exactly what part of the bot it happens to be connected to. 😊

I'd grab some of my own, but they seem to be with my backpack somewhere. Come to think of it, we really should make it a priority to recover that backpack. It contains advanced technology vital to the success of our mission, which we most certainly wouldn't want falling into the hands of communists, now would we?"

The jackobot answers, "Indeed. If any of you wish to accompany me, you may do so. I cannot determine what his reaction will be, though."

Cryo-R keeps trying to inspect the handcuffs. Each time, he sees that they're connected to the roof of Nukabot. It's not likely to change no matter how many times he inspects it. But apparently, he keeps forgetting.

Also, he's getting kind of hungry. And can someone go and get his stuff? They should be where he died...

Jam-O thinks that finding John-R will be a headache. Then, h offers Cryo-R some of his Soylent RED on the condition that he eat it then and there.

Medical bay (bunker)

Mega-R realises that, perhaps, docbots and Troubleshooters aren't all that dissimilar.

But this raises another point. Wouldn't that class them as citizens? And in that case, they must comply with the Happiness Is Mandatory rule. And therefore, they must be programmed to be unhappy when clones are injured. That means that they defy the Happiness Is Mandatory rule.

Mega-R backs away, once again annoyed.

"I believe that your logic is flawed, citizen," the docbot replies. "Just because bots may display clonelike attributes does not mean that they are subject to the same regulations as clones. For one, we are not assigned a security clearance. We simply do what we are programmed to do. Also, you have the right to additional clones. We do not. Once we are destroyed, we are gone."

"I could go on, but it is clear you are not interested. Please leave the medical bay."

written by Speeder on Feb 04, 2011 03:39

"Oh... I should go, because it was my fault after all, but I need to repair the bots, since I am the tech guy... Erm... vatcrap."

After a while I decide.

"Ok, I will go fix the bots... Please Mr. Jackobot, explain to him why I am not fetching him."

written by Cryoburner on Feb 04, 2011 05:21

More specifically, I check what part of the roof they're attached to. A portion of the frame that's welded in place, or maybe a hand grip connected by some loose screws? Perhaps the entire roof is removable, for those situations where it is desirable to have a convertible forkbot. I make sure to check for each of these things. 😊

"Oh, Soylent RED! That might work well enough! Don't worry, I certainly won't spend 10 minutecycles inspecting it. Anything over 7 minutecycles would be outright excessive!"

I accept any Soylent RED offered to me, checking its packaging to ensure that it is properly sealed and presumably free of any evident tampering.

I snap out of my daze again.

"Hey, I'm not really needed to fix the bots, so I'd think I can help recover John-R. Rather inconvenient, this whole thing. Come to think about it, could there be other reasons why he was terminated? Did he have links?... COMPUTERCOMPUTERCOMPUT-"

Internal Security checkpoint

Speed-Y decides to stay and help repair the bots. The jackobot replies that it understands.

Predictably, Cryo-R KEEPS INVESTIGATING . How many times is he going to look at the same roll-bar, and the EXACT way its welded into place, when he has a mission to complete? If he carries on inspecting random stuff, he's likely to fail to notice important things, like if someone decides to point a laser pistol at him... like, say, Lucas-R. See? He's doing it now. I think he's getting annoyed, too.

He does eventually finish his inspection, and accepts Jam-O's Soylent RED. And guess what? HE INSPECTS THAT TOO.

Joris-O decides to go and help the jackobot. The jackobot answers, "Is there anyone else?"

He then wonders if there's a reason John-R was terminated, and gets paranoid.

And finally, The Computer speaks. "Report, citizens! I am especially interested about any possible reasons why there is a clone handcuffed to a forkbot inspecting a package of Soylent RED as if he does not trust the perfection of its manufacture."

written by Speeder on Feb 04, 2011 23:02

I sigh inside the Massacrebot.

"Speed-Y reporting. We currently have a defective clone on the team, seemly that clone cannot avoid doing CPU work all the time, even when it is supposed to be eating, or fighting. I intend to take it to Derek-G, and attempt to use a prototype reeducation machine."

written by Jam on Feb 05, 2011 00:22

I salute, or bow, or whatever is the mandatory way to show respect to Friend Computer.

"Friend Computer, it's so good to hear your voice again! Yes, I'd also like to know, Cryo-R, why are you inspecting that Soylent RED as if you didn't trust that it was safe to eat?"

Then I look at Joris-O.

"Links? What are you implying? Links with what?"

I walk over to him.

"I guess I could come with too... I have a few questions I've been meaning to ask John-R... I wonder if he knows any other mutants that might be able to help us with our mission..."

written by Cryoburner on Feb 05, 2011 01:22

"Oh, hello there miss computer ma'am!"

"I was actually just rejoining the group after being given this new body. Thank you for that, I might add! It really works quite well, and has that fresh clone scent. In any case, I entered the lift and was waiting for all the inefficient stranglers to catch up, when this one decided to attach me to this forkbot, apparently to keep it from getting away, but impeding my movement in the process."

I gesture to L4-O.

"Unfortunately, he doesn't seem to have brought any keys for it, thus reducing my operating efficiency and slowing down overall mission progress. As for the inspection of the Soylent RED, it's simply to verify that it hasn't been tampered with, since Jim-O here offered it to me shortly after getting suspicious that mutants might be implanting his mind with communist ideals. It's simply a precaution to avoid further interference with the mission."

written by Gligar on Feb 05, 2011 02:14

Internal Security checkpoint

Speed-Y tells his friend and yours that they have a defective clone.

Jam-O wonders exactly why Cryo-R is inspecting the Soylent as if it were unsafe. Then he remembers what Joris-O said. What was he implying? Perhaps he could tag along.

Cryo-R then speaks. He claims that he was simply rejoining the team when, for no apparent reason "that clone" (L4-O) decided to impede his movement. He also states that his inspection of the Soylent is just a precaution.

The jackobot adds, "If I may, friend Computer, I would like to add that, after I first encountered this clone at the Central Subsector Cloning Station, he has demonstrated extremely poor judgement. For instance, at the cloning station, he attempted to steal the station's supply of jumpsuits, claiming that they were, in fact, a backpack filled with hammocks. Second, as I was escorting him towards the team, he attempted to part company with me, apparently wanting to search for a bell factory, at a dead run. I was just barely able to catch up with him. Later, as he met the team anyway, he claimed he was just out for a jog. It is true that they decided to handcuff him to the forkbot. I suspect that they do not want him to leave them again."

The Computer seems to think for a moment. "The existence of a defective clone is troubling. It means that Cloning Services are not performing optimally. This must be investigated."

"Second: Cryo-R, while I usually applaud vigilance, I do not see any evidence of tampering. In addition, you seem to be in error as regards the name of that clone. According to his identity documents, he is Jam-R-JYR, breveted to ORANGE Clearance. Therefore, you have doubted the word of a higher-clearance citizen. This is a clear sign of unhappiness. I hereby fine you 50 credits.

"Team Epsilon, you have 16 hourcycles. That is all."

written by Speeder on Feb 05, 2011 02:25

I sigh, then I say.

"Ok people, we know what time we have, everyone move FAST to our assignments, but still safe please."

I start our trip toward Derek-G lab.

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 05, 2011 04:41

"...16 hourcycles? Just that many? Great!"

I smile a bit nervously about the amount of time that is left. Then I hop off Nukabot, and start moving towards towards the lift, not so much at a safe rate, but hopefully FAST at Speed-Y's standards.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 05, 2011 09:39

"Well, you heard Friend Computer, let's get you to the lab so we can conduct repairs." I say to Nukabot.

"I'll stay with the team here, I maybe might be able to assist with repairs or something."

written by Jam on Feb 05, 2011 13:57

I check the time on my PDC, then look up with an excited expression on my face.

"Yay! Come on, let's go find John-R!"

I grab Joris-O and the Jackobot, and begin dragging them towards the other side of the room.

After a while, I stop.

"Erm... I have no idea which direction to go... Perhaps you should lead, Mister Jackobot?"

written by Cryoburner on Feb 05, 2011 14:18

"Oh, that computer is such a joker. Always joking... and such."

Seeing as it appears to be properly sealed, I proceed to unseal my package of Soylent RED, taking a look inside at all the Soylent RED that probably exists there. I examine its color, aroma and consistency.

"But wait! I have no spork! However will I consume this consumable without the aid of a spork or three to spork it with!?"

I look around for any sporks.

Speed-Y gives the order. Time to MOVE! He heads back into Epsilon Subsector.

Mango-R hops off Nukabot and follows him.

L4-O decides to return to the lab to help with repairs. Nukabot says, "Huh," and follows Massacrebot.

Jam-O checks the time. It's 01:04. He then HAPPILY grabs Joris-O and the jackobot, and tries to get going. But... he doesn't know where to go. "This way, citizens," the jackobot says, and leads the way back to the Central Subsector cargo lift.

Everyone else follows the team's bots. Including Cryo-R, of course. Speaking of Cryo-R, he opens the Soylent... and inspects it. It's normal for Soylent RED: that is to say that it's RED, smells faintly of vinegar, kelp and algae, and has a slightly spongy, but firm, consistency, such that it could be eaten out of the packet if desired.

But Cryo-R doesn't desire, oh no, he wants a spork! But he doesn't have one, and can't see any.

written by Megagun on Feb 05, 2011 18:34

I groan.

"How about you actually help me out before telling me to leave the medical bay!?"

I try my best to think of the most horrible thing I can think of, and puke all over the docbot.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 05, 2011 20:42

I kick back and relax since Nukabot is content driving itself.

I keep my eyes open for any potential danger though. Maybe. Not that there's any danger out there, besides maybe commie mutant traitors. But we'll soon be safe from those... right?

I look mildly worried for a moment, but the feeling passes.

written by Jam on Feb 05, 2011 21:17

I follow the Jackobot, dragging Joris-O along with me if he doesn't seem to be walking by himself..

Medical bay (bunker)

Would you believe that Mega-R still wants treatment, despite there being nothing visibly wrong with him?

The docbot glares at him. And continues glaring as Mega-R as he sticks a finger in his mouth, causing himself to vomit over the docbot. Ew.

As Mega-R staggers backwards, suddenly disoriented, the docbot answers, "Oh very well... what is the medical problem? And do not waste my time any further."

The docbot approaches and extends a manipulator, poking Mega-R in places. "Does this hurt? This? How about this? Or this?"

Corridor Q4

The group continues down the corridor. It comes to the intersection with Q1.

L4-O relaxes for a moment. It's nice to not have to drive for a change. Looks like the corridors are being cleaned of corpses from the earlier battle.

Corridor Q-epsilon

The jackobot continues down the corridor. It suddenly makes a right turn before it reaches the Hub.

Jam-O and Joris-O continue to follow.

From the Hub comes the sound of an advert being played on a vidscreen. Those have been missed, I'm sure.

written by Jam on Feb 06, 2011 14:03

"Yay, an advert!"

I proceed to listen to the advert, and sing along if it's the musical type.

written by 4616599 on Feb 06, 2011 15:21

I whistle along, trying to keep my mind clear of things.

Inner Ring Corridor

Even before Joris-O and Jam-O can finish singing along with the advert, the jackobot stops at a door and opens it. Visible within is the cargo lift landing, still with its holes leading to the Hub.

Also visible is another forkbot. A couple of clones are attempting to load the ruined warbot onto it. As it turns out, it's difficult.

written by Megagun on Feb 06, 2011 17:42

"No, no, no, n-OW! YES! THAT HURTS! Now GIMME THOSE PILLS SO I CAN GET OUT OF HERE!"

written by Jam on Feb 06, 2011 17:47

I note the clearance and general appearance of the clones. Then I look at Joris-O.

"Should we help them? It shouldn't take too long..."

If he agrees, I proceed to assist the clones in loading the warbot onto the forkbot.

If he doesn't agree, I continue following the jackobot.

"Ah, I see. Analysing."

The docbot makes some quiet electronic noises.

"I am afraid that no pills will help your problem."

The docbot fires up its chainsaw. "Beginning clearance-appropriate surgery."

Cargo lift landing (Q Level)

Jam-O looks in, and notices that the two clones are ORANGE and YELLOW, respectively.

He asks Joris-O if they should help, but Joris-O does not reply. He shrugs, and follows the jackobot over to the lift, where the jackobot presses the call button.

Corridor Q1

As the team proceeds down towards the warehouse, Cryo-R looks around. He seems to recall thee being a scrubot in the vicinity, but he doesn't see one. Maybe it was moved.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

We haven't been here in a while! It looks like the place is being cleaned up.

As the team passes through, L4-O starts snoring. He must have dozed off at some point.

And he must be dreaming, since he's muttering "penalty kick... goal..."

Hoh did he learn that phrase? That's not a Funball term... wherever it's from, I'm sure it's treasonous...

Speed-Y smiles, though nobody can see him. He keeps moving.

He gets as far as the door to Corridor Q2 before he encounters another clone: Derek-G, as it happens. "Ah! Finished the mission already?" he asks.

written by Speeder on Feb 07, 2011 01:55

I stop, then I open the bot to talk more... Personally.

³²⁰ LIGHTNING4: (American football or regular football, you decide which is funnier!)

"Hello Derek! Good to see you. Actually, no. We have 16 hours, to do /something/ on the reactor, I have no idea what. But we have a problem, the bots are not in a good condition, specially Massacrebot, the actuators are seemly really strained, we need to patch what we can, before moving again. Also, I need to announce that the reeducation machine failed... We have now Cryo-R-2 here, and it still have defective behavior, and its number 2, was caused by the defective behavior on his clone number 1."

written by Jam on Feb 07, 2011 02:43

"Hey, I remember that warbot! It seems important somehow... Joris-O, do you know anything?"

I look at the lift indicator, and if the lift seems far enough away, I go over and attempt to help the two clones with the loading of the warbot onto the forkbot.

"Hello, sir!" I say to the YELLOW clone as I arrive.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 07, 2011 02:52

"I think someone may have misheard Idea bot, who was simply complimenting me on my decahedral decisions. It's a common mistake, I'm sure."

"In any case, someone decided it would be a good idea to attach this forkbot to me to prevent it from wandering off, but unfortunately forgot to bring keys with them. Being attached to a forkbot is a pleasant enough experience and all, but undoubtedly reduces the overall effectiveness of the team. If one could carefully cut this tether loose, it would certainly be appreciated. I would try myself, but I left my supplies behind when the computer was in the process of rewarding me with this new, more efficient body, and haven't got around to recovering them yet."³²¹

My dreams have switched to realm of bizarre now, I mutter something about "walrus cheerleaders" and "algae beasts".

written by 4616599 on Feb 07, 2011 10:12

"Yes. In fact, I believe that warbot fried you in your previous clone. We returned the favour, of course." I whisper to Jam-O.

I then approach the yellow clone.

"Ah, hello sir! My associate here and I might remember a thing or two about bot repair. That bot certainly looks to be in bad shape though. May we help?"

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Derek-G listens to Speed-Y. "Hmmm... it sounds like the communists may be planning something with the reactor... if that's the case, there may not be time to repair these borderline motors. And we'd have to let that cool down before we could touch it," he adds, indicating the still-hot armour panel.

He glances at Cryo-R. "This is troubling. Perhaps the new re-educator has problems with defective or mentally deficient clones? This will need further investigation... but it can wait until after the mission if need be."

L4-O keeps dreaming. But his dreams have changed... and I'd like to point out that the rumours of... things living inside the food vats and preying on hapless INFRARED vat stirrers are absolutely, totally, 100% false, regardless of anything you think you've heard. Those supposed incidents did not, and could not, happen. No, never. Anyclone caught spreading such rumours should be referred to Internal Security for re-education.

But anyway. Mango-R is also here, apparently looking for something. Whatever it is, it isn't here.

Cargo lift landing (Q Level)

The YELLOW looks around. "Ah, hello citizens! We're just trying to shift this warbot here. If you'd give us a hand, I'd appreciate it. We lost many clones during the communist takeover, and the cloning stations haven't fully reopened yet."

The cargo lift arrives, and its door opens. The jackobot says, "In your own time, citizens..."

"Bring it on, buddy!"

I finally come around upon hearing nearby conversation.

"Uhh.. algae monsterswha..."

"Oh. Hi Derek."

I get my bearings for a moment and recall why we're here, allowing Derek to respond to Speed first.

"Nukabot needs some repairs too. Some circuitry got fried by an overloading combot. And it has a flat tyre."

written by Jam on Feb 08, 2011 01:03

I try to work with the other clones to shift the warbot onto the forkbot's forks.

"On the slugthrower, you mean?" Derek-G asks. "The problem could be... hmmm... let me see..."

He moves towards the weapon and inspects it. Then he produces a hammer and hits something, causing Massacrebot to growl. "Now now, Armourbot, I'm just repairing something..."

Something goes ping as it moves while Derek-G works. "There, that should do it."

He looks at L4-O. "I don't think I have any forkbot parts, citizen. I suggest you try the bot repair garage on J Level."

"Look again," Nukabot says.

Cargo lift landing (Q Level)

Jam-O moves to help the clones, motioning Joris-O to help them as well. With the added help, the warbot shifts, enough do that the forkbot can drive forwards. "I have got it!"

written by Jam on Feb 08, 2011 02:04

"Ah, good! Well, if that's all, we have a lift to catch..."

I turn, and run towards the lift (again dragging Joris-O along with me if he doesn't seem to be moving by himself).

"Wait! We're coming! Don't leave without us!"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 08, 2011 08:58

"Huh... well, you heard Nukabot I guess. If there really aren't any circuits, maybe we could at least patch up the tyre? I'm not actually sure how bad it is... let me check..."

I get off Nukabot and inspect the tyre, to see if a simple patch and inflate is possible.

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 08, 2011 10:42

I walk on, and seemingly into the Distribution Warehouse. I try my best not to look distressed about the loss of my ME card and my PDC. I hear something about J Level.

"...J Level. Right."

I shift a bit uneasily, and start repeating to myself.

"J Level, J Level, J Level, J Level, K Level, A Level, May Level, Maiden Elevel..."

Cargo lift landing (Q level)

With the warbot in place, Jam-O follows the jackobot into the lift, dragging Joris-O behind him. The clones start to say something but the door closes, cutting them off.

Cargo lift

Once the two clones are in, the jackobot presses the button for R level.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

"Hmmm, it sounds like a fault with the Asimov circuits... I'm afraid I cannot help with that. But... I might be able to repair the tyre. At a price, of course." Derek-G heads back to his lab.

L4-O checks the tyre. It looks like it's just punctured.

Mango-R catches up with everyone else, mumbling something about J Level. He seems to be treasonously afraid of J Level for some reason. What could be so frightening about J Level? It's a level like any other.

Speed-Y is checking out Derek-G's fix to Massacrebot. The bot's self-test seems to indicate that the weapon's okay. Of course the only way to know for certain whether the fix has worked would be to fire it. But either way, Massacrebot seems to like it. "Yip yip!"

Medical bay (bunker)

"Perhaps I will... after I complete surgery. Now hold still."

The docbot lunges again!

This time, Mega-R can't dodge in time, and the docbot's chainsaw cuts right into his left arm, just after the elbow!

And it keeps going... until the severed forearm drops off.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 08, 2011 21:56

Cargo lift

The lift moves for a moment. It's only going one level, after all.

As it does, the start of the CruncheeTym jingle plays. It gets cut off by the lift arriving on R Level, though.

The jackobot exits the lift. "This way, citizens."

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

L4-O doesn't know how much credit he has left. He checks his PDC, trying to remember how to get it to show his balance. Ah! There we go. He seems to have 85 credits left.

Medical Bay (bunker)

The docbot powers down its chainsaw. "That will be 120 credits, please."

Of course, Mega-R decides to call our mutual friend. This causes a vidscreen to unfold itself from a table, and turn, revealing the Eye of the Computer. "Citizen, I detect a note of unhappiness in your voice. Is there a problem?"

I grab evidence 1 off of the floor with my remaining hand, and wave it around the room with a strange sense of euphoria.

"It is my understanding that 'evidence 2' can not exist properly without being accompanied by 'evidence 1' at all times, and I would like to make the following suggestions.."

I take out my Series 1300 PDC, quickly type on it, and then place it on a nearby desk, such that the screen faces Friend Computer's monitor, as well as the docbot. It is immediately recognizable to everyone that I'm running the latest maiming-edge version of ComputerSoft Powermark, the most sophisticated software to deal with presentations ever known to Alpha Complex..

"Number one: ", I say, and use evidence 1 to point at the PDC screen. "Restore 'evidence 2' to fully match the configuration as it was prior to the Incident".

"Number two: deal with 'traitor 1' the way Friend Computer deals with any kind of traitor: summary execution and a good ol' batch of B3 cans for everyone involved with uncovering traitors!"

"That's it! Let me know what you think!"

Would you look at that?

Ignoring the fact that his stump is bleeding, Mega-R launches into a nice long explanation, even including a nice PowerMark™ presentation, as to why he called our mutual friend's attention. Just where did he learn to do that?

The Computer considers the explanation. Presently, it replies, "That is an interesting allegation indeed, citizen. I do, however, require further information from those present. First: will the docbot please explain its version of events?"

"Certainly," the docbot answers. "This clone came to me demanding treatment for burns. I requested further information as to how the burns were sustained. Information he did not provide.

"Later, he awoke me from sleep mode, demanding to know why I am not active at all times, and again demanding treatment. I diagnosed a case of unhappiness, and administered treatment. Happiness Is Mandatory, after all, as I stated.

"The treatment initially appeared to work, but the effect faded too soon. Perhaps my medications were tainted at some point during the 25 or more yearcycles I have remained inactive. And for a third time, this clone demanded treatment. I performed a test and discovered that amputation was required, resulting in the severing of the limb that the citizen refers to as 'evidence 1'. I have requested payment for treatment rendered, but he has not yet paid."

"Very well," The Computer replies. "Citizen, would you like to add anything else? For instance, would you please explain exactly how you obtained the Computersoft PowerMark(tm) app? Are you aware of its security clearance? Your co-operation is appreciated in this matter."

Speed-Y, as team leader, offers to pay for the repair kit.

³²³ CRYOBURNER: (Who spells tyre with a y, anyway?)

³²⁴ GLIGAR: (ooc: I do. Followed by a colon and a P separated by 10,000 light years.)

Cryo-R also offers to pay, stating that he could resell it to Speed-Y. And have a guess what he does next? Go on, guess.

That's right! He inspects the kit! He discovers that he cannot see inside the box, since it is sealed. The box appears to be a cube 30cm on a side, and is marked with a barcode, along with the legend REPAIR KIT AN-33614.

Derek-G answers, "So who will pay? Just one of you, please." He turns to L4-O. "You were first. How about you?"

Cloning station (R Level)

The cloning station is mixed clearance, with the usual cloning tanks - at least thirty - and a door leading to the chemical showers.

There are also two Computer Terminals nearer the door, each on a desk, surrounded by piles of forms. There is a single clone at one of the desks, sorting through paperwork.

In between the desks and the cloning tanks are two racks of jumpsuits, again of varying clearances, from INFRARED to GREEN. Another clone is using a scanner to, well, scan them, and is entering information into a PDC.

The clone with the paperwork looks up. "Can I help you, citizens? And... hey, weren't you here earlier, jackobot?"

"That is correct, citizen. I am here for John-R-SMR-2. Has he decanted yet?"

The clone checks his terminal. "Ah yes... he's in the showers right now."

"Thank you," the jackobot replies, and trundles over to the shower door.

written by Jam on Feb 10, 2011 03:05

I look at the clone scanning the jumpsuits.

"Oh, can I take one of those ORANGE jumpsuits? The cloning station I was at before only had INFRARED ones, for some strange reason... These jumpsuits are rather starchy, though, of course, that is not causing me any displeasure (because displeasure of anything Computer-approved is treasonous)... But I'd rather have a nice ORANGE one, if only so other clones wouldn't get confused by an apparently INFRARED clone carrying around ORANGE clearance weapons and walking in ORANGE clearance areas... In fact, it's almost mandatory that I take one of those jumpsuits..."

"Hm. Speed and I could split the cost, I guess? I'm the one who'll probably be spending the most time with Nukabot."

I fiddle with my PDC again in an attempt to offer up my half of the money.

"No, I do not want to explain how I obtained PowerMark..."

"Ha ha, just kidding. I got it from this Mandatory Team Troubleshooter contest prize giveaway. I had to name at least 30 communist mutant traitors from the show, which -for one of the biggest fans of the show- isn't hard to do."

"As far as the security clearance goes, this app is security clearance INFRARED. Look, everything in this app is greyscale." I show the app to Friend Computer. "Hell. The only colors I can use in my presentations are shades of grey. It's as if someone put some kind of filter over all available colors, or something." I demonstrate the color picker to Friend Computer, and take a few moments to show him the awesome Color Wheel where you can select all the shades of grey you'd ever want to use in a presentation.

"As far as 'traitor 1' goes; he's lying. I never asked him to AMPUTATE MY 'EVIDENCE 1'! Why would I ever do that!? And he never really treated me well for burn marks, either. Look at this!" I show Friend Computer the most horrible burn mark on my body. "This is unacceptable!"

I begin to gurgle and generate foam using my mouth.

"At least I can be thankful that the happiness medication didn't have any side-effects! Friend Computer knows what could've happened!"

He then scans Jam-O's jumpsuit. "Hmmm... it seems that your jumpsuit is still registered to Tech Services... I'd have to ask you to return it in any case."

L4-O attempts to pay for half the cost using his PDC. Derek-G produces his own and checks it. "Very well." He turns to Speed-Y. "Citizen?"

The Eye narrows a little at Mega-R's little "joke" before returning to normal as he explains. "I see... an evaluation version. I am sure you understand the reasons for the restrictions in place, such as the advertising, restricted menu choices, and the locked-out save function. You are, of course, also aware that, by now, Internal Security has seen your presentation, and is independently analysing it for signs of treason? Good.

"As far as your allegations are concerned, however, I am inclined to agree with the docbot. If it diagnosed that an amputation was necessary, then it most likely was necessary. And since you doubt the docbot's decision, you therefore doubt me. You are fined 100 credits for insubordination, plus 50 credits for lying. You do not seem to be burned."

As Mega-R starts foaming at the mouth, the Computer adds, "And would you like to explain why that foam is Clearance ULTRAVIOLET?"

Hey look, a laser turret!

I give the clone my ME card and brevet to scan, then, after taking everything out of the pockets, I proceed to remove my jumpsuit. I offer it to the clone...

"I won't have to return the jumpsuit back to the cloning station I got it from, will I? You'll take it here?"

I look at all the stuff on the floor.

"Say, you wouldn't happen to have a backpack I could store all this stuff in, would you?"

I happily pay my half too.

"Yay! Nukabot driving properly already helps a lot."

"I would pay half too, but then you guys would probably expect to share in half the profits."

"Say, Derek, you wouldn't happen to have a sporkbot conversion kit around here somewhere, would you? Having a forkbot is great and all, but I think you'll agree that he might be more useful with a spork on the front. You know, in case any of us happen to need a spork for some reason."

Medical bay (bunker)

It would appear that the docbot's injection was, in fact, tainted. In this instance, Mega-R's speech is now unintelligible for the most part.

But it is still clear that he continues being argumentative. He pulls out the remains of the Insta-Hot Fun packaging, and attempts to wave it in front of the Eye.

The Computer remains patient, as always. "I cannot understand you, citizen. Please speak clearly... A burnt Insta-Hot Fun wrapper? Are you claiming that it burned you? Again, I do not see burns on your body. Perhaps this is an old injury which has since healed, citizen. I would normally recommend that the nearest docbot be consulted in the matter. However, the nearest docbot appears to have been compromised. I must therefore request that it deactivate pending Technical Services attention."

But Mega-R is getting worse. He now begins to lose his balance, and stumbles into the docbot. The docbot does not react, other than to say, "Understood."

The Computer continues. "The medical supplies in this room are now considered evidence and are off limits pending investigation. In the meantime, citizen, I suggest you find the next available docbot. Thank you for your co-operation."

The Eye continues to show.

Mega-R just collapses.

Cloning station (R level)

Jam-O presents hi - no, that's the wrong one - his actual ME card. Eventually. Along with his brevet. The clone raises an eyebrow at the other card but says nothing as he inspects, and scans, the documents. "These seem to be in order. Any reason you have two cards?" he eventually asks.

Jam-O then puts everything on the floor and removes his jumpsuit. Does he have to take it back where he found it?

"You can leave it here, that's fine," the clone answers. "But of course, you now don't have a jumpsuit... and, of course, there are penalty charges for not filling out your form. But... I'm sure we can come to an arrangement of some sort."

The clone looks at all the stuff now on the floor. "It just goes to show, doesn't it? How much you end up carrying, I mean. Unfortunately, we don't have any backpacks... we had a clone earlier who tried to use a jumpsuit as one, though. He apparently thought he could requisition our entire supply."

As he is talking, the shower door opens. John-R is indeed there. he walks out, to be greeted by the jackobot. "John-R-SMR-2?" it asks.

"Three," John-R corrects it.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 11, 2011 10:56

"Well, that should do it then, hm?"

I start figuring out how to patch up the tire. If I receive the kit, I inspect the contents and get to work on the tire.

"Thanks sir, this should come in handy. Not that I'm expecting any further damage to come to the property of Friend Computer, of course!"

written by Jam on Feb 11, 2011 13:08

"Oh, I found this other ME card with a terminated communist. I was going to give it to his next clone, who I'm assuming would have any CMT thoughts erased from his memories... You haven't had a Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R passing through here recently, have you?"

"Oh, good, I can leave the jumpsuit here... I would have filled out a form, but I couldn't find any forms to fill out, even though I searched for them. I would have waited for a clone from Tech Services³²⁵ to come assist me, but I really needed to go help my Troubleshooting team, as they were in the process of rebooting Friend Computer, and we wouldn't have wanted them to fail because I was spending precious minutecycles searching for a form, would we? But... An arrangement? Such as what?"

I look at all the stuff on the floor. I also look at the rack of jumpsuits that are very clearly hanging on the rack nearby. Then I look at the clone, and try to suppress a laugh.

"Heh... Er, aren't those jumpsuits hanging on the rack over there? And aren't clones supposed to use a jumpsuit as a jumpsuit? He he... How else would you use it? Any other use would be tre—JOHN-R!!"

I notice John-R exiting the showers, and run up to him.

"Hi John-R! Did your re-cloning go alright? And... We got Friend Computer rebooted! Woo!"

written by 4616599 on Feb 11, 2011 15:53

I snap out of another daze and wave at John-R.

"Ugh. I've been blanking out quite a bit of late recently." I hand my ME card to the clones if they need it. "Does anyone know why John-R over there was terminated?"

Noting John-R, I wave again and quickly clear my mind of thoughts just in case, and form a mental image of a bunch of giggling scrubots dancing and whirling around. Train-uh,Transtubes! Transtubes!

I smile happily, then I prepare to depart inside Massacrebot.

"Thanks Derek! Oh... wait. I had an idea."

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Derek-G looks at his PDC again. "Excellent! Thank you, citizens. Now if you will excuse me, I have other matters to attend to."

He gives the repair kit to L4-O and heads back to his lab, muttering, "Sporkbots... how silly... maybe I could see the idea to someclone in HPD&MC or something..."

When he's gone, L4-O has a look at the tyre, and the repair kit. It looks like the tyre's inner tube has a puncture, and some of the rubberlyke has worn off. The repair kit seems to contain some inner tube patches, a couple of spare inner tubes, and some tubes of adhesive, for the patches, and rubberlyke gel to replace the worn sections of tyre. In addition, there are a couple of other tools present, presumably to allow the wheels to be removed and replaced.

³²⁵ JAM: (ooc: what happened to Cloning Services, or was there never such a thing...)

L4-O gets to work. He finds it easier to dismount the wheel first, so he starts with that.

Speed-Y gets ready to depart.

And then he has a thought. He looks for a monitor but can't find one. Oh well. He calls for our mutual friend.

The cargo lift's level indicator changes to display a miniature Eye of the Computer. "Yes, citizen?"

Cloning station (R Level)

"I see," the clone answers.

Jam-O points out the jumpsuits. The clone blinks. "What did I say? I was sure I said 'backpacks'... perhaps that clone needs to be checked for mutations or memetic agents... anyway. You can fill out a jump-"

But Jam-O has spotted John-R, and runs over to him. John-R sees him and says, "Hi, Jam-O! Did you just reclone as well?" He accepts an ME card from the jackobot, as well as a PDC.

Joris-O also notices, and waves, with an odd look on his face.³²⁶

I look at the Eye, then I open the bot (so Friend Computer can see me).

Then I happily says.

"Friend Computer, sorry to take your time, but I must say that I want to formally here, tell you, how much help Derek-G has given to us, he is a great citizen, a true hero, survived the communist invasion, and provided us with equipment, and also helped interrogate a communist using a prototype reeducation machine. I know he is of a higher clearance than me, and that this would look like bootlicking or something, but it is all true, if I was of higher clearance, I would ask for his promotion, for he clearly is a valuable citizen of Alpha Complex. Since I am not, I am calling you to record this on your database."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 11, 2011 22:49

"Hrm."

I roll the bad spot on the wheel towards me and apply a patch to it. Then I apply the rubberlyke gel all over the bad section and smooth it down.

I check my handiwork and look for something to re-inflate with.

Mega-R comes round enough to try and eat the sludge from the Insta-Hot Fun wrapper. The sludge tastes like burnt algae and would probably be declared unfit for consumption. But in his drugged state, Mega-R doesn't really care.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

The Computer responds, "Thank you, citizen. It is pleasing to hear about acts of loyalty from any clone, regardless of how they sound."

It is especially pleasing to hear such a report outside of designated Spontaneous Demonstrations of Loyalty. You are awarded a free bonus of 25 credits for your report. Have a nice daycycle."

The Eye disappears, returning the level indicator to its usual display.

L4-O continues his work. This part doesn't seem to be too difficult, though it may take a little time for the adhesive and gel to set. While he's waiting for it to do so, he looks for a method to reinflate the tyre, which proves a little more difficult due to Mango-R deciding to inspect the repair kit. Mango-R deduces that it will take a few minutecycles for the adhesive and gel to set, and also finds a small tyre pump down at the bottom of the box.

Cloning station (R level)

Jam-O picks out a couple of jumpsuits: one ORANGE and one RED. He offers the RED one to John-R, who accepts it. While putting it on, he remarks, "Hmmm... no armband... I'll need to get that tested."

John-R walks over to the other clone by the desk and starts talking, requesting that he be tested for mutations while he fills out forms.

I look the pump over and wait for the gel to dry.

Mega-R manages to get some of the sludge stuck in his throat, somehow. Maybe there's a chunk or two of solid Insta-Hot Fun in there. He tries to clear it before realising that he'd need at least two hands to do it properly, and starts choking...

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Mango-R gives the pump to L4-O, who is still waiting for everything to set. And while he's doing it, he's humming one of the B3 jingles. Nice.

I use up some secondcycles to observe the tire, picking out the little minor details, and watching the adhesive and gel harden.

"Hmm..."

I get bored of looking at it after a while, and look for where the tire pump should be attached, so that I may be able to immediately point it out once the hardening process of the repair is complete.

I note Mango starting to get a little detail-obsessive and watch.

"Don't go Cryo on us now..."

Jam-O gets dressed again and heads over to the desks. He finds a jumpsuit requisitioning form and starts to fill it out.

Meanwhile, John-R is being tested. That is, he's being put through one of those mutant detectors you see from time to time at IntSec checkpoints. It seems to have just about finished. John-R is given a registration form, which he fills out.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

What is it with clones investigating everything down to the tiniest detail? Don't they have anything better to do than worry about that 1mm blemish in the rubberlyke?

Well, at least Mango-R doesn't do it for too long. He does, however, note the valve used to pump up the tyre.

The gel and adhesive seem to be dry enough now, L4-O thinks. As such, he sets about inflating the tyre.

But the problem is, the inlet valve is one of those fiddly ones, and the pump's attachment doesn't quite fit properly. With two people, though, it's possible to hold things in place, it's just difficult.

Mega-R still can't breathe. He rolls around, but that doesn't help... It's a pity the docbot was taken offline.

Once I finish, I look over at Joris-O.

Or maybe the lack of sleep is finally catching up to you, it's been hourcycles and hourcycles since we've slept... And that makes me really really HAPPY, of course... Because being unhappy is treasonous."

Cryo-R somehow hasn't noticed that Nukabot's wheel is still off. He starts rocking from side to side, causing Nukabot to rock as well. "WILL YOU STOP THAT?!" the bot bellows. "IF YOU KEEP GOING, I'LL END UP FA-"

Too late. Nukabot ends up tipping over too far, and falls off its hydraulic jack. It ends up falling onto its axle, which breaks with an almighty CRACK.

Meanwhile, Mango-R and L4-O have managed to repair the tyre, which is now inflated... not that it'll do any good any more.

There is the sound of running from Corridor Q2. Shortly, Derek-G enters again. "What in the Computer's name is going on here?! I'm trying to make a report!"

Cloning station (R Level)

Jam-O finishes his form, and looks over at Joris-O, who seems to have nodded off again. Well, I guess it has been a long time since you all slept... and medication has been rather patchy as well...

John-R seems to have finished his form as well. He is handed an armband, which he fits to his jumpsuit.

"That head, is obviously, useless, and broken."

And I throw it away (if possible, inside a cargo elevator shaft).

written by Jam on Feb 14, 2011 04:13

I look at John-R's armband, and talk to him a bit...

"Hmm... I didn't know registering a mutation was so easy... It's a shame there are unregistered mutants, if it's so simple to register... Mutants sure are useful, we might have failed the mission if you hadn't detected that other mutant trying to read our minds, and told us how to defend ourselves..."

written by 4616599 on Feb 14, 2011 05:56

I agree with Jam-O. "Mmm. Yes, I suppose I haven't had a sleepcycle for sometime. Could we all be controlled by external people, us living in a fictional world? Bah, sounds treasonous. It's like saying that unregistered mutants shouldn't register..."

I approach John-R a bit more cautiously.

"So, John-R, what's the last thing you remember? Haven't really met anyone fried by a laser for a while."

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 14, 2011 10:34

Derek-G repeats his question. "I said, what is going on here?!"

Nukabot growls, "Ask this useless piece of meat that these flesh-types saw fit to anchor to me! He decided it'd be a FANTASTIC idea to tip me over while I'm one wheel short!"

Cryo-R becomes aware that he doesn't just have Massacrebot against him. He has Lucas-R and Kristos-R as well, who are pointing laser pistols at him.

Cloning station (R Level)

Now that he's done registering, Jam-O has a chat with John-R. "I only wish more clones had that opinion," John-R replies. "Most of them just think registered mutants will just fry your brain if you look at us funny. Well, I can, but not everyone."

Joris-O wonders, briefly, if he's being controlled from outside? It would explain why he hasn't slept in a while... But we can't have that. Is he seriously suggesting that there is some sort of super-mutant in some other world who can control him? Next he'll suggest that the whole complex is under outside control as well...

I simply take out my laser pistol and instead open fire when (if) I get a clear shot.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 15, 2011 00:12

I respond to Derek...

"Quite simply, what happened here was that some clones decided to ignore my repeated suggestions that it would be best to detach me from the roof of this bot before attempting to perform any maintenance on it. Due to them not heading my well-informed analysis of the situation, this forkbot appears to have toppled off its hoist, presumably taking damage to its undercarriage. This treasonous lack of respect for regulations resulted in damage to this bot, quite possibly delaying progress on our current mission. Now they seem somehow intent on damaging me to further delay our progress. I'm almost under the impression that some of them may be working against the computer! Perhaps a mutant really has implanted them with treasonous thoughts as one of them suggested earlier!"

Seeing as weapons are being directed my way, I slide down the far side of the forkbot, spending another PP to position as much of the forkbot and its roof supports between myself and the massacrebot (and the other team members) as possible.

Jam-O also thinks Joris-O should go through the mutant scanner.

Cryo-R starts talking about how he asked to be detached. He then blames them for the bot toppling. He finishes off by asserting that they're under mutant control.

He then tries to slide off the roof, taking cover. But not before Massacrebot can fire.

And... it misses. The closest slug manages to slice through the handcuff's chain.

On the plus side, though, it doesn't jam.

L4-O tries to get in firing position, but can't before Cryo-R takes cover.

Lucas-R manages to fire, but misses.

Derek-G says, "Hold your fire. Would anyone else like to add anything?"

Kristos-R closes in, moving to get round the other side.

I stare at Joris-O for a bit, then turn and start walking towards the door.

"Nevermind, we don't have time for you to go through the scanner... We need to get back to the others as soon as we can so we can finish the mission... You'll have to be scanned later... Too bad... It sounds like it'd be fun to go through one of those scanners..."

I look at the mutant scanner, thinking...

"I wonder if... Nah! I would know if I were a mutant... But, wouldn't it be cool if I could blast commie's brains or set them on fire or make hammers fly at them or something awesome like that? I could shoot commies and attack them with mutant powers and serve Friend Computer at the same time!! Too bad... Oh well, let's go..."

I suddenly get the impression that desiring mutant powers is probably treasonous somehow or another, and decide to change the subject... I look at John-R, and notice his troubled look...

"Something troubling you?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 15, 2011 07:10

I lower my weapon, hearing Derek.

"I wouldn't have had to handcuff him to Nukabot in the first place if he didn't have a history of running off on us to do Computer-knows-what. I'm not even sure why we needed to bring him with us in the first place, he's clearly a defective clone. Or a communist!"

"I should add he's also questioning the loyalty of the loyal troubleshooter team! And therefore he's questioning the loyalty of friend Computer!"

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 15, 2011 10:41

I nearly decide to pull out my slugthrower, but it would mean one arm less which could be used in better assistance. I respond to Derek-G,

"There isn't really anything to add, other than what L4-O said about Cryo-R's defectiveness. I'd suggest sticking him somewhere where he can't get out, at the very least until after our important mission is finished. Maybe to the walls. They're well made."

I watch carefully in the direction of Cryo-R, to make sure he doesn't make a move to escape, be it on either side of Nukabot, or over it.

written by Speeder on Feb 15, 2011 11:58

"Yes sir, Team Epsilon holding fire at request of GREEN citizen."

Since L4 explained stuff first, I just keep aiming at Cryo, without firing.

written by 4616599 on Feb 15, 2011 14:36

"Hmm. The mutant scanner?" Why did Jam-O seem so interested in it?

Never mind. I follow him, looking at John-R.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 15, 2011 16:32

"Ah, thanks for finally deciding it best to detach me from this bot Speed-Y! I knew you'd come around to your senses! This should definitely improve team efficiency!"

"The suggestion that mutants might be influencing the actions of team members was made by that Jam-O fellow, I believe. Therefore, I'm simply following the presumably informed decision of a fellow team member, which might be more than one could say for some others here. Besides, I wasn't suggesting that the computer may have selected inadequate clones for the job, just that they may have been tainted by the treasonous thoughts of mutants in the mean time."

"Further, I was never 'running away' from the group, but rather 'strategically positioning myself'. Obviously."

"In any case, rather than standing around and chatting all day, we really should be focusing on the mission at hand, and how best to handle the team's primary mode of transport that you all seem to have broken. Hmm... Maybe skis could help!"

Seeing as I'm already crouched near the forkbot, I take the opportunity to more closely inspect the damage to its lower extremities, primarily to determine exactly which axle is damaged, and whether the bot uses its front wheels, rear wheels, or a combination of them for steering and/or propulsion.

written by Gligar on Feb 15, 2011 17:18

Cloning station (R level)

Jam-O changes his mind... perhaps Joris-O can be checked later. Right now, they need to get back to the team.

But what if... no, that would be treason.

Then, he notices John-R. "It's just that... Fr... no, never mind. Let's go." He heads towards the exit. "Say, where did the jackobot go?"

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

L4-O points out that Cryo-R was handcuffed to Nukabot due to his history of running off. Also, he's questioning the team's loyalty. Isn't that treasonous?

Mango-R adds that perhaps Cryo-R could be left somewhere safe, say, chained to a wall.

Speed-Y keeps quiet, and does not fire.

Cryo-R counters that, actually, he wasn't running away, just tactically repositioning himself.

(I suppose it's mere co-incidence that he ends up nowhere near the team, then. That light fixture is clearly of far greater importance than the mission which The Computer itself chose for him.)

He fixates on the mutants again. He still thinks that they have tainted the team. But not him. Obviously.

There is also the matter of Nukabot. Might attaching skis to it help?

What are skis, citizen, and how do you know about them?

He then inspects. Specifically, Nukabot's underside. He can tell that the bot's front axle is broken in two, and will need replacing. But beyond that, he realises that he actually doesn't know. Which axle controls steering? Where's the power coming from? It's all a mystery.

Nukabot doesn't like him poking around. "Get away from me," it growls. "In fact, just leave me here and get a competent repair team to look at me. You need to teach a certain clone to never mess with bots."

"I think I have enough information," Derek-G says. "It is clear to me that, while the forkbot's wheel was being seen to, Cryo-R there decided to topple the bot. Perhaps he failed to notice the missing wheel. No matter. I hereby order Cryo-R to the nearest confession booth. Immediately. It isn't far."

written by Megagun on Feb 15, 2011 18:37

I groan and roll around a bit more, this time making sure I also shake my body violently.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 15, 2011 23:40

"Oh, and by skis I mean skids. Skidding around on anything else, particularly across snow, would undoubtedly be treasonous! Anyway, that's an excellent plan Derek! I'll be on my way!"

I begin marching away, heading toward a confession booth or something, somewhere. In any case, I head out into corridor Q2, and begin descending the adjacent stairwell.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 16, 2011 00:01

"Good riddance. We'll probably never see him again though."

I sigh and look at Nukabot.

"Well... if you're sure. I'm so sorry, I had no idea he'd do, well, THAT."

"Is there anything we can do? Do you know which axle is broken? Maybe we can try Cry-..err, MY ski/skid idea! Treasonous clones can't be original, it's clearly my idea."

written by Speeder on Feb 16, 2011 00:40

I sit down (if possible... can Massacrebot sit?)

"I suck. I let Cryo hurt my friend."

written by Gligar on Feb 16, 2011 01:31

Medical bay (bunker)

Frantically, Mega-R tries, once again, to dislodge the sludge from his throat. That seemed to do something, since he can now breathe... but the effort makes him pass out.

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Predictably, Cryo-R takes advantage of the order and marches off, heading to, and down, that stairwell.

"Not that way!" Derek-G shouts after him. But it's too late.

Nukabot just says, "Yes. Just leave me. I don't believe I can trust you any more."

Derek-G then remembers something. "Skis... snow... what are those? They sound... treasonous." He pulls out his PDC and dials a number. "Internal Security? I'd like to report suspicious activity..." He wanders back down the corridor.

Speed-Y tries, unsuccessfully, to make Massacrebot sit down. He feels guilty for letting Cryo-R damage Nukabot.

But you know what some clones say: confession is good for the [DELETED FOR SECURITY REASONS]...

written by Speeder on Feb 16, 2011 02:14

I just stay in place, and then after a while I say.

"Ok, we will salvage what we can, now we will wait for the return of Jackobot, then we will finish the mission. We came with two bots to repairing, and now we have only one."

written by Jam on Feb 16, 2011 03:39

I look at John-R, in an I'm-the-one-that's-higher-clearance-and-you'd-better-tell-me-everything-you-know-or-I'll-make-sure-you-regret-it sort of way.

"John-R... Don't try to change the subject... What happened? Don't make me order you to tell us... Does it have something to do with Freaky? If it's in any way important, we should know about it... Even if it's not important, you should tell us anyway..."

I look around a bit.

"Okay, where is the jackobot?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 16, 2011 05:16

"Well... I guess I'll just keep my eyes open for a spare axle or something then. Or a repair team." I frown.

I mill about thinking of something to do now that there's nothing to repair.

I remember there are chargers nearby, but first I look for my blaster and see if it is still malfunctioning. If necessary, I test fire on a piece of rubble. Or try to.

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 16, 2011 10:55

I head for the doorway which Cryo-R went through. Before going through, I ask,

"Derek-G, is it alright if I follow after Cryo-R? It's just so that he doesn't further hinder the mission more than he already has. Or damage more bots. Or damage the confession booths."

I wait for an answer before doing anything else.

written by Megagun on Feb 16, 2011 11:08

I act like a passed-out person.

written by Gligar on Feb 16, 2011 17:07

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Speed-Y ponders for a moment. He decides that it's best to wait for the jackobot returning before going anywhere. In the meantime, they can salvage their equipment from Nukabot.

L4-O also thinks. What else is there to repair? His blaster! He retrieves it from where it fell after falling off Nukabot, and checks it. It's still warm to the touch, and won't fire.

Corridor Q2

Mango-R wants to go after Cryo-R, but Derek-G says, "No, let Internal Security deal with him. I doubt he'll last long."

Stairwell

Cryo-R can't hear them. He's already two levels down, counting the steps, or the floor tiles, or the number of specks on the RED clearance stripe, or something. He notes a distinct lack of confession booths in the stairwell.

Cloning station (R Level)

Jam-O decides to pull rank, and demands to know what John-R was going to say. "I was just thinking... you know how Freaky is supposed to be able to kill from afar? What if there are more like him?"

Medical Bay (bunker)

Mega-R doesn't move.

written by Megagun on Feb 16, 2011 17:24

Still passed out, I attempt to realize that I am passed out so that I can attempt to break free from my passed-out state.

written by Speeder on Feb 16, 2011 17:50

Instead of hacking away Nukabot, I decide only to take all the objects that we stuffed on it.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 16, 2011 23:44

"Hmph."

I see if it's the power pack that is the problem. I remove it and try replacing it with another.

If that doesn't work, I check it all over for any problem that I could potentially fix.

If I don't find anything I look for a mandatory weapon disposal area so that it may safely and non-treasonously be discarded.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 17, 2011 00:20

I continue descending descendedly. I make note of any doors, confession booths, bells, or other objects that I happen to come across. Now that I think of it, I'm not entirely sure what a confession booth looks like, as I don't recall ever having to use one before. I guess I'll know when I find one.

written by Jam on Feb 17, 2011 01:29

"Hmm... That's a very good question... He seems like Freaky has a very powerful version of Mental Blast... His powers sound really dangerous. But if he became a mutant because of some experiment, his powers most likely won't carry on to his next clone. So, if we can convince him to change back to our side, instead of terminating him, maybe he could use his powers to serve Friend Computer...

I wonder... John-R, you can get mental fingerprints too, right? What if you had Freaky's fingerprint? Then you'd be able to find him from far away? Maybe, if Freaky has mentally communicated with Lucas-R, you could somehow extract his fingerprint from Lucas-R's mind?"

"And if there are more like Freaky, I guess there isn't much we can do to stop them from killing us... Let's just hope they don't notice us..."

written by Gligar on Feb 17, 2011 02:19

Medical bay (bunker)

Mega-R remains passed out, but seems to twitch, almost as if he's about to wake.

Distribution warehouse (Q level)

Speed-Y unloads Nukabot. That is, he removes the ammo box.

L4-O checks the blaster again. His main thought is to change the power pack, but none of the ones he has will make it fire. He can't see anything else wrong with it... nor can he see a weapon disposal area.

Stairwell

Cryo-R continues to descend. He's now down to M Level.

There is a door on each level, leading to the level proper. However, there are no visible bells, confession booths, confession booth symbols, or even other objects of note. Maybe they're all on some level somewhere.

Cloning station (bunker)

Jam-O speculates as to Freaky's exact power... perhaps he has a more powerful Mental Blast? Think of the benefit that could be to the Complex, and to The Computer...

...could John-R somehow contact, or recognise, him? "I... don't think I have Freaky's signature," John-R answers. "And I doubt I could pull a signature out of someone else's mind... it'd need to be direct."

written by Cryoburner on Feb 17, 2011 10:02

I continue descending. Maybe there's a confession booth at the bottom of this stairwell. I'd feel pretty silly if I decided to check somewhere else only to find that the booth was in the stairwell the entire time.

written by Speeder on Feb 17, 2011 10:12

Now I wonder what I can do with that stuff.

"Someone has any idea on how to haul cargo, now that we don't have Nukabot?"

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 17, 2011 10:50

I go back to the Distribution Warehouse. Hearing Speed-Y ask about carrying about cargo, I suggest,

"Maybe Massacrebot could hold it with one of its manipulators. Those seem quite ideal for the situation we have right now."

written by 4616599 on Feb 17, 2011 14:39

I continue listening, while looking around for the jackobot or any activity.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 17, 2011 14:46

I get bored of fiddling with my blaster and simply put it away... no sense littering it on the ground, that's treasonous and all...

I hear Speed ask a question.

"Um... we could strap it to Massacrebot maybe? Does it have any compartments in the back or something? Maybe we could fashion a backpackish thing."

written by Gligar on Feb 17, 2011 17:30

Stairwell

Cryo-R continues descending. He seems to think there will be a confession booth at the bottom of the stairwell.

After a moment, he reaches the bottom, at K Level. Confession booths are notable by their absence.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Speed-Y wonders how he's going to carry the ammo box, since Nukabot is no longer available.

Perhaps, as Mango-R suggests, Massacrebot could hold it? It is already doing so, after all.

Or perhaps it could be attached to Massacrebot's frame, as suggested by L4-O after he puts his blaster away? Perhaps they could fashion a backpack³²⁸ or something?

Does anyone have any duct tape left?

Cloning station (R Level)

Joris-O keeps listening.

An alarm goes off on a console, indicating that a cloning tank is firing up.

That jackobot seems to have left the station.

John-R says, "Is that everything? I think we should get back to the team."

written by Speeder on Feb 17, 2011 18:06

I reply to the idea of attaching it to Massacrebot.

"Sure... How much duct tape we have left, to do that?"

I leave Massacrebot again, to search all my belongings for any stuff that can tie stuff (except of course, for the computer tapes... they are tapes and all, but... no)

written by Lightning4 on Feb 18, 2011 00:28

I help Speed in looking. I also look around the room for any tape-but-not-computer-tape-because-that-would-be-treasonous rolls.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 18, 2011 00:48

Reaching the bottom of the stairs, I perform some quick post-stair workout stretches.

Not finding anything resembling booths here though (and presumably not any bells either), I open the door to K level and examine what lies beyond, without stepping out of the stairwell quite yet.

written by Gligar on Feb 18, 2011 01:14

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Speed-Y seems to like the idea of attaching the ammo box to Massacrebot. Of course, he'll need duct tape, or some other kind of adhesive tape, for that. He rules out the compnode restart tapes, because a) it isn't adhesive, and b) it would be treasonous. He and L4-O look for some.

L4-O eventually does find a roll of duct tape under some racking. And what do you know? Speed-Y has several rolls already.

Stairwell

After more exercises, Cryo-R opens the door, revealing a stretch of corridor. It's RED clearance, and has an Adequate™ level of lighting. The visible stretch has several doors close to each other. There are some symbols on the doors.

written by Jam on Feb 18, 2011 03:17

I respond to John-R.

"Yeah, we should go... But first..."

³²⁸ GLIGAR: (OOC: not a jumpsuit...)

I turn to one of the clones staffing the cloning station.

"Could someclone tell me who that is that's recloning right now?"

I start inching³²⁹ towards the door...

written by Lightning4 on Feb 18, 2011 08:24

A disappointed look crosses my face as I hold the single roll of tape, while Speed has an armful.

It passes quickly.

"So, let's get this set up then, I guess?"

I assist Speed in the duct-taping process. Hopefully it holds!

written by Speeder on Feb 18, 2011 10:23

In the duct-taping process, we use duct-tape to do some taping of non-duct stuff, in a way that Massacrebot now fitted with marvelous duct-tapes are not duct-tapped and can hold the ammo box while still allowing the box to be opened and ammo retrieved without removing the incredible Alpha Complex manufactured duct-tape, also other objects that we may not need to retrieve urgently, can be duct-taped using duct-tape in a more taped manner, thus maybe in the future being harder to remove, but now, easier to stick.

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 18, 2011 10:23

"I guess so."

I check my broken arm to know if I can use it again. Or not. Either way, I use my other arm to assist in the process of duct-taping. And if my left arm works properly, I use that as well to help.

Jam-O asks who is recloning right now. After one of the attendants checks the terminal, he is told that it is Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R-PYC.

Over in the active clone tank, the clone begins to form.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

L4-O looks sad for a moment, before assisting Speed-Y with their idea. Mango-R tries to help as well, though he can't do much, what with his broken arm.

The begin to use duct tape to tape things that aren't ducts. Things like their ammo box, and Massacrebot.

After a moment, the box is securely taped to the back of Massacrebot. It can even be opened.

Also, Speed-Y's hands are now securely taped to the ammo box.

³²⁹ JAM: (ooc: or do you call it centimetring? 😊)

Mega-R stirs. And gurgles.

And wakes up with a start.

Looks like the foaming-at-the-mouth thing is fading.

Now I attempt to figure how untape myself from the ammo box, without untaping the box from its taped position on Massacrebot.

written by Megagun on Feb 18, 2011 21:20

I groan and slowly sit up, look around, and prod myself in the face.

"Grblarghly gbrlit! I justgrh passed out, didn't I!?"

The shock of having just passed out is too much for me to handle, and I pass out again.

written by Jam on Feb 18, 2011 22:32

"Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R!? Hey, Joris-O, John-R, did you hear that? It's the Director! We have to take him with us, and interrogate him! You guys go ahead, I'll stay back and make sure he comes with us..."

I proceed to watch the former Director's cloning tank carefully...

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Speed-Y is able to free his hand, though there's still duct tape stuck to it. The ammo box looks to have survived the little mishap, too.

After he and L4-O are done, Mango-R has a look in the ammo box. He seems to still be looking for his ME card and PDC, but they aren't in there.

Medical bay (bunker)

Mega-R prods himself, but is apparently unable to remain awake.

Cloning station (R Level)

Jam-O reacts to the name. Looks like he wants to wait for Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R, as well. He tells the others to go on ahead.

Another alarm appears on the console. Apparently, Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R is a Citizen of Interest to Internal Security, and they were notified by the system or something.

written by Speeder on Feb 19, 2011 02:26

I now try to remove the duct tape from me, if needed I use even my feet (like, lowering my hands, stepping on the tape, and then removing my hands from the tape...).

Of course, I do my best to remove the tapes from ANY part of my body that they might decide to glue themselves while I wrestle them.

written by Jam on Feb 19, 2011 05:08

I look to the others, who seem to have decided not to leave after all...

"Ugh... Internal Security is coming? I'm sure we can handle it ourselves... If I'm correct, the Director shouldn't remember my betrayal, but he might still remember how I told him I was there to assist him... So, if he is still a commie, he should think that I am one of his comrades. We might be able to trick him into telling us some useful information, but he won't trust me at all if I have a bunch of clones from IntSec behind me, pointing guns at his head. I'm sure whatever interrogation methods they have planned will probably work, but will they be as efficient, or as effective?"

I look towards the door to the cloning station.

"Could someone please go explain all this to the IntSec clones that are comng?"

written by Megagun on Feb 19, 2011 13:23

I start to twitch violently, knocking over some supplies in the process.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 19, 2011 13:33

I decide to tend to myself now that the Massacrebot inventory thing is sorted out.

I finally get around to checking my burns. If it's nothing too severe, I simply leave it alone.

I check my leg, wondering if its still broken.³³⁰

written by 4616599 on Feb 19, 2011 15:56

"Excellent idea!"

Still rather suspicious, I cast a glance at John-R, then find a preferably not-so-visible-from-the-inside-spot to wait in. I let any approaching IntSec clones know that Jam-O is attempting his own 'interrogation tactics'.

Speed-Y tries to un-duct-tape himself for a second time, more successfully, this time. He's left holding a piece of duct tape.

³³⁰ LIGHTNING4: (OOC: How are injuries handled anyway? Realistic, or potentially heals after some number of turns? Not that I'm expecting a Paranoia game to have clones last that long... but you never know. 😊)

In the meantime, L4-O checks his wounds. Those burns seem to be healing on their own. His broken leg is still broken, though. He'll probably need to go and see a docbot about it if he wants it to heal.³³¹

Cloning station (R Level)

Since it seems that the others are staying too, Jam-O tells them to inform the incoming IntSec clones about his decision to handle the clone. Joris-O is still suspicious, but goes along with it.

Sure enough, an IntSec clone arrives. After listening, he says, "Sorry, citizen, we're under direct orders to bring him in ourselves."

Medical bay (bunker)

Mega-R twitches. His twitching seems to knock over some syringes and tools, which clatter to the floor.

written by Speeder on Feb 19, 2011 23:04

I search somewhere to throw away the duct tape, since throwing it on the ground is reason to get a fine from the ever vigilant computer that manages the complex.

I climb again on Massacrebot.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 19, 2011 23:43

I look for and decide to tend to the tyre repair kit now.

I gather up all the tools and put them away, then hold the box.

I look at Massacrebot and see if there's room to tape it to it. If so, I get started on that.

"You never know when you'll need stuff from a tyre repair kit. Even though we don't have anything with tyres..."

written by Jam on Feb 19, 2011 23:56

I look at the IntSec clone, and note his security clearance.

"Okay, if you have orders to bring him in, then I guess someone higher up has already decided that my help isn't necessary. Either that, or they don't know that I was the one that told him I was right behind him, ready to assist him... Of course, I terminated him a few minutecycles later, but he shouldn't remember his termination, should he? All he should remember is that I was there to help him, so he should think that I'm a communist, like he was... But nevermind about that, I can't interrogate him anyway..."

I look at the IntSec clone a bit closer, and note what weapons he seems to be carrying, whether his armor seems to fit correctly or not, and any distinctive facial features he may have.

Hmm... Pardon my distrust, but can you prove to us that you are actually loyal to Friend Computer? I wouldn't want to just let the Communist Director walk into the hands of a communist posing as an IntSec clone, and the fact that only one IntSec clone was sent to escort Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R seems rather suspicious. May I see your ME card, sir, and any other evidence you might have that would indicate that you really are who you appear to be?"

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 20, 2011 00:08

"Yeah. Tyre repairing kits may come useful..."

I decide to place the crude slugthrower in the box, after removing anything that may be loaded. I look at the thing that was loaded before also putting it into the box.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 20, 2011 00:17

"Wow! Doors!"

I wander out into the corridor, examining the doors and their symbols in more detail as I walk past them.

Speed-Y finds a trash receptacle hidden under a box, and puts the duct tape in it before climbing back into Massacrebot.

L4-O retrieves the tyre repair kit and puts everything back into it. Then, he duct tapes it to Massacrebot, thankfully without duct taping his hand to it as well.

Mango-R unloads the crude slugthrower, and notes the solid slug that was loaded, before placing both in the ammo box.

Cloning station (R Level)

Jam-O looks over at the newcomer. He seems to be YELLOW Clearance, and is wearing typical IntSec armour which fits pretty well. He's armed with a laser rifle and a truncheon. He has a nose that looks broken and a shaved head.

"I don't know the particulars of his termination, only that he is a Communist, and a Citizen of Interest." He looks over at the cloning tank, which now visibly contains a forming clone. "Also, I don't like the tone of your voice, citizen." Regardless, he presents his ME Card, which gives his name as Stuart-Y-BBN-2. "My colleagues are on their way as I speak."

Corridor (K Level)

On inspecting the doors, Cryo-R notes that they are all sliding doors, each with a number of lights on them. On each, one light is active: a "READY" light. In addition, each door sports a symbol resembling the letter "C" inside a trapezoidal Computer monitor. (This despite the fact that actual trapezoidal monitors were phased out at the same time as CRT monitors.) In other words, the confession booth symbol.

³³² GLIGAR: (OOC: Mingamango181 spends 10 perversity points.)

³³³ JAM: (ooc: 10 PP?! Wow...)

"Ah, a laser rifle! I must say, you have very good tastes in weapons, sir! That's something those horrible commies just don't understand, how satisfying the zap of a laser weapon is. It seems like they always want to use slugthrowers... I can't imagine how anyone could ever want to use a slugthrower! It doesn't go zap! How disturbing, a weapon that doesn't go zap... Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R's last clone hated lasers, so I terminated him... I mean, if he were just a commie, I would have just handcuffed him, and forced him to tell us everything he knows. But not liking lasers? That's going too far..."

I pace around a bit, clearly agitated... Then I smile at the YELLOW clone.

"No... I don't think you are a communist, Stuart-Y, sir. I'm sorry for my rudeness, I was just being extra-cautious... As I'm sure you know, Troubleshooters are told to 'Trust No One'. I just had to be sure..."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 20, 2011 13:22

While I'm at it, I look for the first aid kit. We did have one around here... didn't we?

If I find it, I also add that to Massacrebot. Hopefully without duct taping part of me to it.

"And a first aid kit. You never know when happiness will drop below mandatory levels."

"Or well, someone gets injured. But I'm sure that won't happen. Right?"

I look down at my leg.

"Oh nevermind..."

I resume taping.

"Very well," Stuart-Y says. "But next time, I would appreciate a little more respect."

As he's saying that, there is a noise, similar to that of a clone falling out of a cloning tank. Probably because that's what it is.

Stuart-Y goes to investigate. He finds Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R, who seems to be somewhat disoriented.

Outside the door, the sound of marching approaches.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

L4-O has a thought. Where did the first-aid kit go? It seems to have gone missing...

written by Speeder on Feb 20, 2011 19:47

I wait for... something... to happen.

written by Jam on Feb 20, 2011 22:38

I walk up to Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R.

"Hello Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R! Remember me? Here, I have your ME card..."

I take out Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R's ME card, begin to offer it to him, then change my mind as I notice his hands (and the rest of his body) appear to be covered in slime...

"Er... Maybe you should take a shower first?"

written by Cryoburner on Feb 21, 2011 00:25

"Hey, I'll bet those are confession booth symbols. That must mean there are confession booths around here somewhere!"

"Or maybe they are cafeteria symbols. I guess it might be alright to stop at a cafeteria on my way to the confession booths."

I continue down the hall, passing by the doors that seem to be marking the way to the confession booths and/or cafeteria.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 21, 2011 00:40

"Huh. It doesn't appear to be here. I wonder where it went..."

I stare at a wall, thinking.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Speed-Y waits. Perhaps he's getting bored.

L4-O thinks. So where did that first aid kit go?

Say, didn't Jam-O have some first aid kits?

Cloning station (R Level)

Jam-O walks over to the former Director and presents him with the ME card. "Er... thank you, sir... I'm sorry, I... hold on... I kind of remember meeting you before, but I don't know you?" He seems confused.

Jam-O notices that the clone is still slimy, and holds on to the card.

"Alright citizens, that's enough," says Stuart-Y. "I have orders to bring you in, Fourixonesixfiveninenine-R. You're a Citizen of Interest."

Behind him, more Internal Security clones enter. Two are YELLOW, armed similarly to Stuart-Y. The other three are BLUE clones armed with cone rifles. "Move it!" one of them barks.

Corridor (K Level)

Cryo-R decides that the symbols are confession booth symbols.

Or could they mean "cafeteria?"

He keeps going. He comes to another door with a large sign over it, reading CAFETERIA.

A smaller sign next to it reads "← CONFSSION BOOTHS".

written by Jam on Feb 21, 2011 03:09

I follow the former Director.

"Ah, I guess they aren't gonna let you take a shower... Well, I guess you should go... Here's your ME card, by the way..."

I offer the former Director his ME card.

"I guess I should handcuff you too, we wouldn't want you resisting or anything..."

I take a pair of handcuffs out, and proceed to handcuff his hands behind his back.

"There! Now you can't escape. Well, goodbye then..."

I start to walk away, but stop as my arm is suddenly wrenched³³⁴ backwards. I look back in confusion. Wait a minute... Since when did my wrist have a handcuff around it?

"Ah... Joris-O? I think we might have a small problem... Anyclone have some wire cutters?"

written by Lightning4 on Feb 21, 2011 12:24

"Hm. Jam may have them... I guess we'll have to wait until he returns with John and the jackobot."

I decide to pass the time looking around the warehouse. Again. Mostly to see if anything is new since Friend Computer has come back online.

If there's anyone around, I ask them if there's something I can help with.

written by Speeder on Feb 21, 2011 12:34

Since there are nothing better to do, I go check Nukabot again, see if somehow I can fix it, I leave Massacrobot resting, so maybe the servos can get some work done on them too, or at least get spared a bit.

written by Gligar on Feb 21, 2011 18:45

Cloning station (R Level)

Jam-O sees that the IntSec contingent just wants to take for former Director with them without letting him get a shower, or a jumpsuit. As such, it would be useless to hold on to his ME card, so Jam-O hands it back. He also decides to handcuff the former director to ensure that he doesn't escape.

But somehow, he botches it, and ends up handcuffing the two of them together...

Joris-O's mind seems to have wandered. John-R says, "Wait a minute, that's not right... I clearly saw you put both cuffs on Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R. I suspect-"

"Silence!" one of the BLUE goons barks. "It looks like we're taking both clones, then! Move it!"

The IntSec contingent moves out, with Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R and Jam-O in tow.

Corridor (R Level)

The contingent marches down the corridor, ending up at the cargo lift. One of them calls the lift.

³³⁴ Jam: (spannered? 😊)

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Not knowing what just happened a level above in Central Subsector, L4-O decides that they'd probably have to wait for Jam-O. In the meantime, he has another look around the warehouse.

Not much has changed. A few things have been tidied up, but that's about it. Give it time.

A noise from the cargo lift shaft attracts Lucas-R's attention. He looks at the level indicator. The lift's rising.

Speed-Y goes over to Nukabot and has a look himself. The front axle has broken in two right in the middle and would need replacing. At closer inspection (which makes you wonder how Cryo-R missed it 😊) it becomes clear that this isn't the first time the axle has snapped like this. At some point, the axle snapped in two in a different spot and the two parts were welded together again.

As he's doing that, The Computer decides to make a general announcement. "May I have your attention please? Will the following Ciizen of Interest please present themselves at the nearest Internal Security Station immediately: Cryo-[DFSR]-BRN. Failure to comply will result in termination and possible demotion. Thank you for your co-operation."

written by Speeder on Feb 21, 2011 19:53

I stop, and then after a while I comment.

"Why Cryo is a Ciizen? Also, why his clearance now is not a color?"

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2011 01:46

Cloning station (R Level)

John-R looks at the door, then at Joris-O. "If it's all the same to you, sir, I'd like to get back to the team. Coming, sir?"

With that, John-R grabs Joris-O and tries to drag him towards the door. It's slow going.

Cargo lift (Central subsector)

The lift arrives at R Level, allowing the IntSec contingent, their captive, and Jam-O to board.

Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R seems to be smiling to himself.

One of the goons presses a button, and the lift moves.

It stops again... on Q Level. The contingent exits and begins marching again.

Corridor (K Level)

Cryo-R seems to be inspecting the door under the CAFETERIA sign. It's your standard double-width door, 2m tall, with a RED clearance stripe running across it.

As he's looking for blemishes, the door slides open, revealing a YELLOW clone.

Of course, Cryo-R has parked himself right where his presence obstructs anyclone from entering or leaving...

The clone glares at Cryo-R. "Are you going to move?"

But Cryo-R is still inspecting. He notes the vidscreen in the cafeteria beyond. It's displaying the text of the general announcement from The Computer, and also a picture of Cryo-R, in monochromatic RED.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Speed-Y wonders about the announcement. He clearly hasn't been keeping up to date with recent CPU Mandates requiring that the clearance of Citizens of Interest be redacted from general announcements. Not to mention ones permitting variations in spelling 😊

As he's pondering, the cargo lift arrives, revealing a group of clones, who exit into the warehouse.

One looks at Speed-Y, and says, "Excuse me, sir. We're Repair Team 8, from Tech Services. We got a report that there's a bot that needs repairing around here. Do you know anything about that?"

A couple of the repair team seem to be nursing headaches or something. One of them kind of looks familiar...

written by Lightning4 on Feb 22, 2011 02:16

"Right over there. Broken axle I think. Speed here might be able to tell you more, I saw him inspecting it."

I point at Nukabot.

"Mind... we've made a modification to the power supply."

"Need any assistance? We're just waiting on the rest of our team."

If they say no, I simply watch them do their work. I study the familiar clone though, and try to think back and determine who he is.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 22, 2011 02:20

"Oh, hello! I was just checking this door to see whether it might lead to a cafeteria, or a confession booth, or the nearest Internal Security Station, perhaps. Speaking of which, might you have any idea where the nearest Internal Security Station might be found? I'm supposed to meet with someone there, and it would probably be best not to keep them waiting."

I peek around either side of the clone to see whether there might be an Internal Security Station inside the cafeteria.

written by 4616599 on Feb 22, 2011 04:01

"Mmmf. I figure so. I'd have tried to follow Jam-O, even shoot at the handcuff, but I guess it's too late for that now. These spacing outs seem quite...strange. I wonder why they don't happen to you?" I glance suspiciously at John-R.

"No matter, finding the team is a priority." I head out of the door.

written by Speeder on Feb 22, 2011 11:08

I also peer at the familiar clone for a while.

"How you knew that a bot needed repair?"

I turn to Nukabot

"Your fault alarm system is working?"

written by Gligar on Feb 22, 2011 16:29

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

"Thanks, citizen," the clone answers. "Though... modifying the power supply voids the warranty." He looks at Nukabot. "Not that that really matters for this bot, given its age."

"Who are you calling old?" Nukabot demands.

The clone ignores Nukabot, and and continues, "Okay, we'll take it from here. I don't think we'll need help, but thank you anyway."

The team gets to work. One of them calls for something... apparently some bots. Nukabot will need to be lifted.

L4-O can't help but look at the familiar clone... who could it be? Speed-Y notices as well. Doesn't he kind of look like Aleksandr?

But Speed-Y notices something else: how did the team know about Nukabot? "We got a report that there's a bot that needs repairing," they said. But who placed the call? Nukabot claims not to have a fault alarm system.

Corridor (K Level)

"Are you blind, citizen? The sign says CAFETERIA. The Internal Security station is elsewhere." He seems to be telling the truth, since there doesn't seem to be an Internal Security station in the cafeteria. Cafeterias aren't the typical place to find Internal Security stations, anyway.

Corridor (R Level)

Joris-O and John-R exit the cloning station. "So where now?" John-R asks.

Corridor Q-epsilon

It looks like the contingent is heading towards Epsilon Subsector.

written by Speeder on Feb 22, 2011 16:46

I approach Nukabot, but I don't grab weapons yet.

"Report from WHO?" I turn to the highest clearance citizen with clearance still below my own.

"I know how Tech Services work, and I know that all tasks have someone responsible, who is him? Where is your maintenance form? You cannot perform maintenance without a form to fill what you found broken and what you could fix."

written by Cryoburner on Feb 23, 2011 00:59

"Yes, on further inspection, it does seem to be one, doesn't it? It might have been an Internal Security Confession Cafeteria Booth Station though. Or maybe a bell factory."

"In any case, I'll let you be on your way, since you appear to have someplace important to be. Hey, maybe you're headed to the Internal Security Station! Internal Security Stations are important! I could follow you there!"

I step to the side to let my guide pass through the door and proceed to follow him to the Internal Security Station.

written by Gligar on Feb 23, 2011 01:10

Internal Security checkpoint

The contingent passes through, and down Corridor D4.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

The clone addressed (who happens to be ORANGE) by Speed-Y sighs. "Who? That information is classified on a need-to-know basis to Tech Services personnel only. I can't rightly tell you. And the form? Here." He waves a form in front of Speed-Y.

Corridor (K Level)

"What makes you think I am headed towards an Internal Security station? I have no business there. Now leave me alone."

The clone walks off, muttering something about defective clones.

written by Speeder on Feb 23, 2011 01:14

I check on the form, who is supposed to sign the form (beside the person that actually did maintenance) and if the form is actually compliant with the normal Tech Services forms.

"L4, go check with Derek, if he called Tech Services, also maybe it is wise to ask him to come here help with this... issue."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 23, 2011 07:39

"Uh. Okay. On it."

I head down towards the lab and look for Derek.

"Derek? Sorry to bother you..."

If I find him, I say:

"Did you call Tech Services for Nukabot? And we may have a problem. Speed says so anyway."

I tag along if he goes.

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 23, 2011 09:51

I watch and observe the conversation between Speed-Y and the ORANGE clone. I find it quite dull, and thus being happy rather difficult to be in state of.

Without much to do, I make some careful observations over the whole Tech Service personnel, noting where familiarity occurs, and where it doesn't. And I also check the clearance of everyone in the process.

written by 4616599 on Feb 23, 2011 14:06

"Back to the team, I guess. I'll let you lead the way. These blanking outs are strange..."

written by Gligar on Feb 23, 2011 16:44

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Speed-Y looks at the form. It's one of those composite forms, including what you might think of as several separate forms. This one includes Section 1: Request for Repairs (bearing a barcode where the requesting citizen's signature usually goes), Section 2: Authorisation to Carry Out Repairs, signed by a Peter-B-BLT, and Section 3: On-site Repairs Report, which is as yet unsigned.

Speed-Y seems to recall seeing this form in use a few yearcycles ago, but they didn't catch on everywhere. Each department wanted to make copies of their sections, which kind of made the form pointless.

He tells L4-O to go and get Derek-G.

Mango-R seems bored. Idly, he watches the repair team. They seem distracted and confused, but then again, going through two regime changes can do that to you.

The (RED) Alexandr-looking clone seems to be trying to get Nukabot's controls to respond, but he's not getting anywhere. "Say, Brett-R, can you pass me the screwdriver set?" he asks. The RED addressed looks a little uncomfortable and suspicious of the Alexandr-looking clone, but complies.

The other three REDs, and the other ORANGE, continue their jobs, a little slowly, but making progress nonetheless. Oddly, they too seem to be wary of the Alexandr-looking clone.

Corridor Q1

The contingent marches noisily down the corridor. They seem to be heading towards the passenger lifts.

Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R says, "Makes you wonder, doesn't it? Why would they march-"

"SILENCE!" barks one of the goons.

Corridor (R Level)

"Er... that's great, but I have no idea where to go..." John-R protests.

He thinks for a moment, then points in the direction that doesn't lead to the lift that he doesn't know is there. "Okay, let's go this way." And with that, he walks off. Joris-O tags along.

Corridor Q2

The door to Lab Q7 is closed Regardless, L4-O manages to get his attention through the door, and tells him of Speed-Y's request. Derek-G apparently sighs, and the door opens. "What's the problem now?" he demands as he walks down the corridor into the warehouse.

written by Speeder on Feb 23, 2011 19:00

I eye the authorization by Peter, then I try to figure WHEN the forms were signed.

I keep looking at Alexandr for a while. Then I walk up to him.

"What is your full name, sector and number included? And why you are messing with the control panel? We already stated where the problem is."

written by Jam on Feb 24, 2011 00:14

I suddenly snap out of my daze, and stop walking.

"Okay, well, I need to be going now... I guess I'll just have to take Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R with me... Goodbye then, sirs..."

I go to leave, and if any of the clones go to stop me, I give them a mandatory smile, and take the time to explain to them why I'm leaving.

"What? Didn't you hear Friend Computer earlier? 'Even now, a Troubleshooter team is being sent to the reactor control room to rectify the situation. Failure to co-operate with the team will result in summary execution.'

I'm sorry that your orders interfere with my orders, sirs, but I need to go to the reactor, and the only way I can see that I'm going to get there in time is if I take Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R with me. You see, sirs, if my orders aren't completed, then you won't be able to complete your orders either, because the commies will have overloaded the reactor and blown the sector to bits. And Friend Computer knows that, sirs, that's why anyclone who interferes can be executed. Now, I'm going to go save the sector, sirs, and once I'm done, I'll bring Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R back to the nearest IntSec checkpoint, and you can interrogate him there.

Or do you want me to call Friend Computer, and risk you getting demoted or terminated for failing to cooperate with a member of the Troubleshooting team? I'd much rather have this end without your brains being blasted across the walls by ULTRAVIOLET laser turrets, sirs."

If they still stop me from leaving, I call to Friend Computer.

"Friend Computer! These citizens are interfering with my mission! I also seem to be fast approaching the limit of Mandatory Happiness, and I think if they continue to fail to follow your orders, I may even fall BELOW the limit!"

written by Cryoburner on Feb 24, 2011 01:07

I decide to follow after my new guide-friend anyway, since he looks like he knows where he's going. It's more likely to get me to an Internal Security Station than just standing around near the cafeteria, in any case, unless of course they decide to construct an Internal Security Station inside the Cafeteria within the next few minutecycles. That may be a very real possibility, but I can always check back later if I can't find one elsewhere.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 24, 2011 01:14

"Like I said, not entirely sure. Speed just told me to get you and there was a problem regarding this repair team."

I continue following.

written by Gligar on Feb 24, 2011 01:55

Distribution Warehouse (O Level)

Speed-Y has a closer look at Section 2 of that form. It looks like the ink on the signature is dry, at least, so it can't be any less than a few minutecycles old. Unfortunately, there is no timestamp on the form, only a datestamp, with todaycycle's date.

He walks up to "Alexandr" and demands his name. "Alex-R-JHT-2, sir. See?" He holds up an ME card. "And CPU Mandates direct us to check the bot's basic functioning before commencing repairs."

At this point, Derek-G arrives, with L4-O in tow. "Alright, citizens, what is it now?"

Corridor Q1

As Jam-O stops, so do the IntSec goons. "It seems rather... convenient that you choose now to try to leave, doesn't it?" one asks. He's about to draw a laser rifle before another interrupts with, "He does have a point. Maybe. But..." and he draws a weapon instead, pointing it at Jam-O, "we can't let them just go... and there's this threat of termination."

Jam-O has had enough, though. He calls The Computer. Unfortunately, The Computer just says, "Please wait, citizen, for an available circuit to process your request."

The goon continues. "I can't allow that threat to go unpunished. Tell you what. If you both agree to wear monitor tags, you can go about your business."

Corridor (K Level)

Cryo-R chooses to follow this YELLOW clone. He carries on following, until the corridor intersects a second.

This one is interesting, since there is no clearance stripe. Instead, there is a set of light strips, from RED to BLUE. Right now, the YELLOW one is lit, though the BLUE one is flashing.

The clone turns around to face Cryo-R. "Citizen, this is not the way to the IntSec station. Do not attempt to follow me. that is an order."

With that, he takes a right, down the other corridor.

written by Speeder on Feb 24, 2011 02:35

I peer at him for a while.

"I thought you was going to be 3..."

Then as Derek arrives I turn to him.

"Derek sir, do you called a maintenance team? If not, this warehouse can somehow detect a broken bot inside and call a maintenance team on its own? It is very suspicious that noone called this team here, and it suddenly showed up."

I peer at Alex...

"And I am sure you got killed... twice. I wonder how you are still, 2."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 24, 2011 09:14

I watch the conversation from the side, remaining quiet.

I note any articles of head-related clothing that Alex or the rest of the Tech team may be wearing. Especially commie-like ones.

written by Megagun on Feb 24, 2011 15:16

I slowly wake up, stumble around a bit (attempting to grab any medicine I can without Friend Computer noticing) and then attempt to ask Friend Computer what I should do next, for I have not the faintest idea.

written by Gligar on Feb 24, 2011 16:39

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

"As a matter of fact, I did call a maintenance team," Derek-G confirms. "The only oddity is that it took so little time for them to get here..."

"But is that so strange? The return of our friend, The Computer, must be a great motivator to everyone to work at their most efficient! Apparently, CPU's clones must have been caught up in the CloneServ backlog. But don't tell them I said that."

There's something else troubling Speed-Y. Shouldn't Alex-R be on his third clone, at least, by now? Alex-R doesn't know. But then, he adds, he is certain that one of his colleagues was terminated at some point, and he's still on his Prime. Perhaps something else is at work here?

As the conversation continues, L4-O watches. He's looking at the headgear worn by the team. A couple are wearing Safe-T-Lyke helmets, and another is wearing a Funball cap. They don't look particularly communist.

Medical bay (bunker)

Mega-R wakes up, and looks around. Everything's still a blur, as if he'd been hit on the head at some point.

He staggers to his feet ("accidentally" picking up a packet of little black pills in the process) and tries to speak. The operative word being "tries"... even though he's not foaming at the mouth any more, he still can't seem to form a coherent sentence. He seems lost.

written by Speeder on Feb 24, 2011 17:53

After a while, I say:

"Ok, you are free to do the repairs, but you are NOT free to leave, until I finish inspecting the bot. Also, you don't have permission to fiddle with the bot power system or electronics and computer systems. And don't turn it off."

I turn to Nukabot

"If any suspicious activity during repairs arise, please, inform me."

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 24, 2011 20:05

I take a careful look at my RED reflec, now that I've actually got some time to do so, checking the size, material, and efficiency.

written by Megagun on Feb 24, 2011 21:29

I cough up a bit of slimy foam, and attempt to speak again.

"Oi, who knocked me on me head, mate?"

written by Cryoburner on Feb 24, 2011 23:08

"An intersection! Hmm..."

Not having a proper map to go by, and an apparently defective guide, I look around to determine where I can go from here, and which direction looks most internal-security-station-lyke. I head in that direction, so long as it doesn't involve crossing into any higher clearance zones. If it does, then I instead go in some other direction, chosen largely at random. I take a moment to observe the cleanliness of the floor.

written by Gligar on Feb 25, 2011 01:27

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

One of the ORANGEs says, "Alright, sir. Thank you," and turns around. Speed-Y can't see him rolling his eyes after he does.

Then the repairs actually begin. First, the team removes the broken axle. After this, their requested bots - jackobots, by the look of it - arrive, and take place to hold up Nukabot.

As this is happening, Nukabot is saying, "If that happens, you'll all know about it."

Also, Mango-R takes the time to examine his reflec. It is thin and light, so as not to needlessly tire the wearer, and constructed of plates of a material which feels like plastilyke, but is able to absorb laser energy. It is too big for him, but this makes it possible to wear kevlar underneath it, should he want to. It is, of course, RED, so can only protect against RED lasers. And of course, it doesn't protect fully. But it may well be the difference between life and death.

Medical bay (bunker)

Mega-R tries again. This time, he's able to form a sentence. Hmm... his accent seems to have changed...

He demands to know who hit him on the head. He receives no reply.

Corridor (K Level)

Cryo-R looks around, wondering which way to go. He examines the other corridor, determining it to lead east-west, and to be in need of a scrubot. He thinks that it might be a Clearance Crossing. Those strips have changed configuration, now showing only a steady BLUE light.

To continue south, down this corridor, would mean crossing the now-BLUE corridor. Is anyone watching? Or should he just head back? Or wait for the corridor to change? He can't decide...

written by Speeder on Feb 25, 2011 11:06

I look for a object that I can sit on, so I can watch the repairs calmly, so calm that it is creepy.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 25, 2011 13:10

"Guess they don't need help then."

I watch too. And contemplate the nearest medical bay... maybe I could get this leg looked at again. But wasn't that on the level above? And that docbot got scrapped... hm...

written by Gligar on Feb 25, 2011 15:47

Corridor (R Level)

John-R and Joris-O come to the end of the corridor, which turns out to be a three-way intersection. The shorter RED corridor leads to what looks like a food hall. The other ORANGE one looks like it leads to a lift hall. Or perhaps some confession booths.

"So what do you think, sir?" John-R asks.

Corridor Q1

"Well?" the goon asks. "Or do we have to do this another way?"

Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R doesn;t seem to want to do either, though. He whispers to Jam-O, "What do you say we get out of here?"

Corridor (K Level)

Oops... looks like Cryo-R has zoned out, cataloguing each and every grain of dust in the Clearance Crossing. The light patterns are changing again: a RED stripe is now flashing.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Speed-Y sits on a rather conveniently-placed plastilyke box so he can watch the repairs.

The cargo lift is called away, and ascends.

L4-O also decides to watch. He's thinking, again, about getting his leg seen to... that docbot from the level above is no longer operational, though.

written by Speeder on Feb 25, 2011 16:58

I now wonder in what level the lift is going...

But I don't stop watching the work on Nukabot, in fact, I watch like a hawk to make sure noone touch the "Nuka" part of the bot.

"Well, to be honest, I can't remember where the original lift was...had blanked out. We'll try taking this one to Q level, where the rest were supposed to check on Derek-G."

I walk ahead a bit.

"Looks like the corridor is ORANGE clearance...well, as an ORANGE on a mission I guess I could permit you to pass through, unless you have any strong objections."

written by Jam on Feb 25, 2011 23:16

I jump as I notice I seem to be staring down the barrel of some kind of weapon.

"Sir? Why are you pointing that weapon at me? I wasn't intending to threaten you, sir, I was merely informing you of Friend Computer's latest orders concerning the Troubleshooting team sent to defend the reactor control room! I most certainly wouldn't want any harm to come to any of Alpha Complex's loyal citizens, and especially not a clone as high clearance as yourself! I was trying to assist you, sir, as any loyal clone would do towards a clone of higher clearance!"

I blink a bit, and look around.

"I'm sorry, sir. I seem to be operating on an exceptionally high lack of sleep, and am prone to suddenly falling asleep without warning. I appear to have been sleepwalking too, as I have no idea how I got here..."

I think a bit about what the goon was talking about a little while ago.

"Oh, monitor tags? That sounds like an excellent idea, sir. But, surely I wouldn't need one, would I? I'm not a Citizen of Interest. And having two monitor tags on two clones that are handcuffed together would be a waste of Computer property, and the time it would take to process and monitor both would hinder efficiency, right? Surely one would do the job just as well as two? But, if you insist, I can't disobey orders..."

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Speed-Y keeps watching the repair work.

He notices one of the clones peering at the nuclear generator.

But then, his PDC rings. It's using the ringtone that basically says, very loudly, "This is an important call, you'd better answer yesterdaycycle."

Corridor (R Level)

Joris-O decides to take the lift (which, of course, means that John-R would have to enter the ORANGE corridor). Johyn-R seems okay with that, though he does eye the corridor, looking for possible laser turrets.

Corridor Q1

Jam-O suddenly notices the weapons being pointed at him. I guess the long mission and lack of sleep and/or stimulants is catching up on him. But he seems okay with the idea of monitor tags, is a little confused as to why he has to wear one as well.

"I do insist," the goon says. One of the others produces the tags and fits them to the right ankles of both clones. "Now move it."

As he speaks, a little scrubot appears from Corridor Q4. It seems to be cleaning up the slimy footprints left by Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R using one of those rotary cleaning attachments.

written by Jam on Feb 26, 2011 04:03

"Okay, goodbye then, sirs!"

I walk off with Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R, to somewhere out of the sight of the IntSec goons.

"Oh, look, there's a little scrubot following you! Maybe it's a petbot in disguise... Should we take it with us?"

I look down, and follow the track of smily footprints to their source... I notice that Foursix-R is still covered in slime, and has a less-than-mandatory amount of clothing.

"Hmm... Here, see if you can clean the slime off your feet with this towel..."

I offer him one of my towels (noting the clearance at the same time).

"So, where do we go to now?"

written by Cryoburner on Feb 26, 2011 12:02

"Oh, wow! Clearance crossing!"

I begin running in circles, getting ready for the lights to turn solid red. When they do, I take off down the lighted corridor, in the direction that my defective guide didn't take, if at all possible. I jog down the corridor, noting anything of interest as I go, particularly any Internal Security Stations. I also note any signs indicating what corridor I might be in.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 26, 2011 13:04

I listen to Speed's PDC and hum along with the ring tone.

written by Gligar on Feb 26, 2011 17:07

Corridor Q1

Now free to leave, Jam-O and Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R do so, heading further down the corridor. The scrubot follows them, single-mindedly cleaning up the slimy footprints. It looks like the IntSec team is turning back.

Jam-O notices the scrubot, and offers the use of one of his towels (RED, as it happens). Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R accepts and wipes off his feet. As he does, the scrubot reaches the two.

"Well, sir, I was hoping you had an idea where we could go. I mean, you did mention a mission and all. And, er... I need a jumpsuit. And to get away from laser turrets. I... kind of don't like them." He looks around nervously.

Clearance Crossing (K Level)

Cryo-R dances up and down and round and round, until the lights indicate RED. Then, he takes a left, dashing down the crossing, past some doors. None of them look particularly like an Internal Security checkpoint.

The crossing ends at a concourse, which doubles as a food hall. There are still some vendors open at this hourcycle, though there are few clones around.

The big vidscreen is displaying an advert for Bouncy Bubble Beverage as Cryo-R enters. It soon changes to a text display, reminding citizens to watch out for Citizens of Interest, and to report any sightings to Internal Security. It also lists the names of the current Citizens of Interest, including Cryo-R and Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R.

It finishes off by saying that the nearest Internal Security station can be found past the Clearance Crossing to the west... in other words, back the way Cryo-R came.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Speed-Y doesn't seem to be answering his PDC. The ringtone repeats, even louder this time.

Derek-G asks, "Are you going to answer that?"

L4-O just hums along with the ringtone.

I snap out of my hawk watching and get the PDC.³³⁵

written by Cryoburner on Feb 26, 2011 21:32

"Oh wow! I'm on the vidscreen! The computer must really find me interesting! I'd better not keep her waiting! I guess I shouldn't have followed the advice of that obviously defective guide."

So long as the clearance crossing is still red, I hurry back through it, and down the western corridor, keeping an eye out for any Internal Security Stations, Cloning Stations, Transbot Stations or any other Stations. Particularly the Internal Security Stations though. If the clearance crossing is red, but flashing some other color, I hurry through it even faster!

written by Megagun on Feb 26, 2011 22:57

I look around, confused.

"...Mateys? What be goin' on here? Oi! Enough with this prankery! Show yerselves! We still have a nuclear bomb to defuse, and only Friend Computer be knowin' how to!"

In a flash of brilliance, I take out my PDC in order to send the rest of Team Ivy a text message, the sound of which would certainly reveal their location to me. Whilst taking out my PDC, I notice that my skin is much more pale than what I remembered it being, and I make a mental note to get that checked after finishing the mission.

Said PDC promptly falls to the floor, along with my lower jaw, upon noticing the friendly letters at the top left corner of the screen, which says "Mega-R-GUN-1"

written by Jam on Feb 27, 2011 00:28³³⁶

"You... Don't like laser turrets? What about laser pistols, or laser rifles?"

I start walking in a random direction, before realizing I have no idea where we are.

³³⁵ SPEEDER: (ooc: Sorry, I had to stay in a place without internet for a while).

³³⁶ JAM: (ooc: Megagun, your posts are great!)

"Um, do you remember which way we came from? If only I had a map of the sector, then I might be able to find my way back to the cloning station..."

I search the walls for anything resembling a map, and check my PDC for a 'map' function.

"So, what do you remember of your last clone's life?" I ask Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R as I'm searching.

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 27, 2011 00:33

I watch the repairs, noting how each member is doing their part, and whether it may affect Nukabot. I also check in case anyone is doing anything that may be suspicious.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

L4-O's humming is interrupted by Speed-Y answering his PDC.

It's The Computer. "Team Leader, report!"

Concourse K1

Cryo-R seems to be happy that he's being noticed. HAPPILY, he heads back down the crossing. Which, by the way has a sign stating CORRIDOR K1.

Corridor K1 (Clearance Crossing)

Cryo-R sets off at a run - the YELLOW stripe was flashing. He makes it to the other end of the corridor before the RED stripe goes dark.

And what does he find? A double door with a sign reading INTERNAL SECURITY STATION JHT-E-K4, and prominently displaying the Internal Security logo.

Medical Bay (bunker)

Mega-R is confused. Not only does he have an odd accent, but he seems to think he's a member of a "Team Ivy", tasked with defusing a nuke. He tries to send his team a text message, before noticing the name on the PDC, and dropping it. Well, his name is Mega-R. What did he think it was?³³⁷

Corridor Q1

"Laser pistols... laser rifles... they're... okay, I guess. I've never really used them."

Jam-O heads down the corridor briefly, before realising that he's lost. He looks for a map, before finding a (censored) one on his PDC. He seems to be southeast of the warehouse, assuming that that symbol means "cargo lift".

Distribution Warehouse (Q level)

Speaking of the warehouse, Mango-R is watching the repairs. It looks like they're waiting for something,

The cargo lift seems to be returning, as well.

³³⁷ Gligar: (OOC: Mega gains 1pp. This is fun. Maybe pointless, but fun 😊)

written by Jam on Feb 27, 2011 02:55

"Hey, there seems to be a warehouse southeast of us! Let's go that way... Maybe there's something useful there we can borrow, like an old unused jumpsuit..."

I proceed to head in a southeastern direction, towards the warehouse.

"Sorry about the handcuffs... I don't really know how that happened, I was sure I put both cuffs on you... Strange..."

written by Lightning4 on Feb 27, 2011 10:13

I watch the lift too and cross my arms.

I listen in to Speed's conversation with Friend Computer as well.

written by 4616599 on Feb 27, 2011 16:21³³⁸

I look behind me, checking for any activity-such as being shadowed by a Johyn-R; then head for the lift and call one. Once one arrives I press the button for Q level.

written by Megagun on Feb 27, 2011 19:04

"Crikey!"

I quickly grab the PDC from the floor and start composing a message.

Whilst doing so, I whistle the Mandatory Team Troubleshooter mandatory introduction theme.

written by Cryoburner on Feb 27, 2011 19:21

"Wow! I'll bet there's an Internal Security Station in there!"

I burst into the probable Internal Security Station, happily greeting all inside.

"Hello there! I have arrived! I hope I haven't kept you all waiting too long, as I've heard my presence is of great interest to you. I'd have arrived earlier, but my guide was presumably defective, resulting in a significant delay. I'll try to get a better guide next time. Hmm... Now that I think about it, he didn't really act like a guide. Wait! That can only mean he was a traitor, masquerading as a guide! I shall hunt him down immediately!"

With that, I leave Internal Security, and begin searching around the area immediately outside the station for the traitor. If the area right outside the door is part of the clearance crossing, and thus another clearance now, I just peer out the doorway for him instead.

written by Gligar on Feb 27, 2011 19:59

Corridor Q1

It seems that Jam-O was holding his PDC upside down or something... since he heads further down the corridor.

He passes a couple of doors, then spots an open one on the left.

³³⁸ 4616599: (who's Johyn-R? 😊)

Lab Q4

Unfortunately, it isn't a warehouse. It's an unused, and practically empty, YELLOW lab. There is a table and a storage locker, though. And the corpse of a YELLOW citizen.

Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R states the obvious: "Well, this isn't a warehouse..."

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

"I am waiting for your report, citizen. You are fined 50 credits for tardiness. These delays cannot be tolerated. Remember, you have 14 hourcycles remaining."

The cargo lift arrives, containing a totebot carrying some forkbot parts. The team gets to work installing them on Nukabot.

Lift (Central Subsector)

Joris-O and John-R enter a lift. After looking around outside (he thought someclone was following them) the ORANGE hits the Q Level button.

The doors close and the lift descends briefly, before opening onto another lift hall off the Hub.

Medical Bay (bunker)

Mega-R finally gets round to entering his text message.

Internal Security Station JHT-E-K4 entrance

Cryo-R enters, to find a clone behind the reception desk, and two guards beside it.

"About time you got here, citizen," the desk clone answers. "Our mutual friend was most likely about to esc- Hey! You can't leave! Guards!"

For Cryo-R has attempted to leave the station. Unfortunately for him, the door locked behind him.

Those two guards grab him and punch him in the face for attempting to leave, then drag him into an adjacent interrogation chamber.

[LOCATION REDACTED]

Hold on... what's this? "ALERT: MemoM[REMAINDER EXPUNGED]

written by Speeder on Feb 27, 2011 21:33

After a while I again snap out of whatever I was doing...

"Oh, sorry Friend Computer, probably it is the long time without sleeping, probably more than 24 hour cycles already, but we will complete the mission.

Anyway, Cryo ran off again, but I guess you already know that, also Cryo broke the Forkbot that is on our team, and we are awaiting for the repairs, also the repair team is slightly suspicious, specially because one of the members is a former communist, but seemly it is all well.

Jam-O went with a Jackobot that I believe belongs to a ULTRAVIOLET citizen to fetch John-R, our mutant team member that can detect attacks from Freaky, or any other mutant commie that affects the mind."

written by Megagun on Feb 27, 2011 21:37

I take out my PDC, read a notice, and groan.

I then run off to find the nearest trnastube station.

written by Jam on Feb 28, 2011 00:00

"Huh? That's strange... I must be looking at this map wrong..."

I turn the PDC around in my hands, trying to comprehend the map that's displayed on it.

"Oh, we headed in exactly the opposite direction we needed to go. Whoops... Okay, it's this way..."

I turn back, and proceed in a northwestern direction... I search there for anything resembling a warehouse...

written by Gligar on Feb 28, 2011 03:00

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Speed-Y finally answers The Computer.

"When was the last time you took a pep pill, citizen? It is important to stay alert during missions. It is also important to ensure that all team members keep to the mission and not wander off. Although, in this case, the wayward team member is in custody. His exact location is beyond your security clearance."

"As for the forkbot, I would advise that it be left behind. Time before your deadline is rapidly dwindling."

As our mutual friend speaks, Jam-O enters, having read the map correctly this time. However, he isn't accompanied by John-R. Instead, he has with him a clone that still seems to be slimy, as if he was snatched straight from the cloning tank. Both are being trailed by a small scrubot which is singlemindedly cleaning up after the clone, as tank slime drips off him.

Both Jam-O and the clone are wearing Internal Security locator tags on their ankles. In the case of the clone, that's all he's wearing.

On closer inspection, the clone seems to be... the Director of the Communists?!

The Computer is continuing: "As for your other missing team member, I suggest you arrange to meet up with him enroute. Thank you for your co-operation."

Speed-Y's PDC falls silent.

Medical bay (bunker)

For some reason, Mega-R runs off.

Corridor C1

He stops for a moment, looking for a trnastube station. Whatever a trnastube is, he doesn't find it. Belatedly, he realises that he has no ides where a trnastube station might be.

Interrogation room

Cryo-R is placed in a chair and restrained. Wow, this all seems strangely familiar...

Until the lights go off.

From somewhere, a voice says, "You will speak only to give information. If we do not like your answer, you will suffer the consequences. Is that clear? Good.

"Now, state your name, security clearance, and ID code."

Corridor Q-epsilon

Looks like John-R is once again dragging Joris-O behind him.

written by Lightning4 on Feb 28, 2011 09:06

"COMMIE!" I yell, seeing the Director.

I notice he is being led by Jam though and halt myself, malfunctioning blaster in hand.

"I... huh. I guess he's not a threat then... That's a good thing..."

I put my blaster away, mumbling something a "computer damned piece of malfunctioning [REDACTED] blaster."

I look innocent and shrug if anyone shoots a glare at me.

"So, anyone have any idea which way to go? We should probably call Joris and John and tell them which way we're going when we figure out which way we need to go."

written by Mingamango181 on Feb 28, 2011 10:49

I take one last look for my PDC and ME card, by examining the Tech Service people really closely, to check if the items are there. I don't take much notice to the Director, but I do try to keep my slugthrower from showing.

written by Speeder on Feb 28, 2011 11:40

I peer at Jam.

"Where are Mr. Jackobot, and John-R?"

I pocket again my PDC, after making sure the call is closed, Friend Computer dislike open connections.

I look up, shake my fist at the ceiling, then start looking for the nearest transtube station.

I point my laser pistol at L4-O.

"Did you just call me a commie?! Or were you talking about... Huh... Nevermind..."

I turn, and respond to Speed-Y's question.

"I'm not really sure where they are... John-R is with Joris-O, somewhere... And the jackobot... It wandered off somewhere, perhaps to [REDACTED], or maybe [DFSR]? I'm assuming knowledge of the jackobot's whereabouts is beyond our security clearance..."

L4-O is about to shoot at the Director (who tries to duck out of the way) before he notices that he's handcuffed to Jam-O. He puts his blaster away. (It's probably cooled down enough to fire now, assuming that L4-O can get a power pack for it.)

But he still doesn't know where they're supposed to go...

"Er... where about are you trying to get to?" asks the (former) Director.

Mango-R, still looking for his ME card and PDC, examines the bot repair team further. They seem to be carrying one PDC each. He can't see any ME cards, though he notes in passing that the former Director is carrying one.

Speed-Y ends the call, and puts away his PDC. He wonders where John-R and Joris-O are? And the jackobot? Jam-O doesn't know. But the jackobot disappeared somewhere... probably best not to dwell on it.

Corridor C3

Is... Mega-R shaking his fist at the ceiling? I'll have to poke IntSec.

Anyway. He looks around again, finding a cloning station, some dormitories, and a flight of stairs. He takes the stairs. They seem to go down two levels.

Corridor Q-epsilon

John-R and Joris-O continue heading south. They come to the IntSec checkpoint, and find that the combots are missing.

In their place are a couple of Internal Security clones. One of them stops the pair. "ME cards, please," she asks.

written by Speeder on Feb 28, 2011 17:32

I look around, and then I say.

"Ok... Friend Computer told me that we are running out of time, 14 hourcycles now, he also advised leaving the Forkbot behind."

I look to Nukabot

"I will have to leave you here by order of Friend Computer, I am sorry. If possible after the mission I will fetch you, or ask during the mission somehow to you get to us."

I turn to the others.

"Let's get moving, while we move I will try to figure where John and Joris are."

I climb on the Massacrobot

I look at the former Director.

"Oh, I guess I should fill you in on the details... We're going to the reactor to go terminate the Communist Director, who our sources say has been hiding out there ever since Friend Computer was rebooted."

I look closely at the former Director for any signs of confusion or surprise.

"Okay, let's go!"

I proceed to follow L4-O should he start moving.

Speed-Y fills everyone in on The Computer's orders. This includes leaving Nukabot behind.

"That suits me," Nukabot replies. "I need a break from being damaged by stupid clones."

Speed-Y then re-enters Massacrebot and prepares to leave.

L4-O, and the rest of the team, get ready. L4-O seems happy. That's good to see.

Jam-O briefly outlines the team's objective to Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R (yes, it's a long name, but that's what it says on his ME card), and also mentions a Director, which merits a raised eyebrow from Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R. "Director..."

He adds, "Then we need to get there as soon as we can. I believe the reactor is in Deep Subsector... I... used to know exactly where, but I must have forgotten."

Interrogation chamber

Cryo-R gives his name and clearance. His attempt to examine the darkness (how exactly do you examine darkness? It's too dark to examine!) is interrupted by an electric shock from the chair he's restrained to. "You ID number!" the voice repeats.

Corridor A1

Mega-R still wants to find the transtube station. Good thing there's a clone down here - he must have woken up for a Mandatory Bathroom Break. He tells Mega-R that the station is on the outskirts of the sector, past the Kappa Subsector development.

But is Mega-R not assigned to the bunker? the clone asks. Did he not awaken in the meeting hall? Did he not hear the briefing?

written by Megagun on Mar 01, 2011 08:33

"Err, ye. I did awaken 'n the meeting all, and I did, er, hear the briefing. Is just that dis is a side-mission of sorts, understandez-vous?"

I look around quickly.

"Kappa Subse... Crikey!.. What sector be this, mate? "

written by Lightning4 on Mar 01, 2011 10:51

I continue my marching hymn. Well, "continue", rather I just repeat it a few times over until I get bored and decide to fiddle with my PDC.

"That's right, we need to call John or Joris and let them know where we're going. I'll do that!"

I attempt to call John-R while I follow the team.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 01, 2011 10:58

I let off a sigh, and return to more pressing matters. The mission has far higher priority than my lost items. I follow along with the team as we start moving again.

Ah, yes... My ID number... is 1... 2... 34567. Yeah, that sounds about right."

Seeing as it is somewhat difficult to see in this room, I instead note the comfort of the chair, examining its cushioning, ergonomics, and of course the soothing massage sparks.

"A side mission? O...kay, I guess..." the clone answers. Though he does look a little uncomfortable. "And you're in JHT sector."

The clone peers curiously at Mega-R. "Say, aren't you the clone who got set on fire a while back? I'm surprised you survived."

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

L4-O continues his little song for a while, then gets bored and makes a call on his PDC.

Mango-R gives up on looking for his items. Perhaps he'll find them later.

Speed-Y has Massacrebot press the lift's call button. It's harder than it looks to make it not damage the panel.

Luckily the lift isn't far away. It arrives almost instantly.

Internal Security station

Just as John-R is about to show his ME card, his PDC rings. "Hold on a moment." He pulls out his PDC and answers it. "Hello?" It's L4-O.

The IntSec clone takes his ME card anyway, and checks both cards. She scans them into a portable terminal, then hands them back. "Thank you, citizens."

Interrogation room

"Incorrect!"

The shocks get more intense. Cryo-R's heart misses a beat.

"The shocks will increase in intensity every time you give an incorrect answer."

Being an interrogation chair, it is far from comfortable, with no cushioning. And those shocks are far from soothing. But Cryo-R seems to react as if they are.

"Hmmm... no pain response. I think we have a mutant on our hands."

The shocks increase in intensity again.

"An unregistered mutant, at that. Why is this."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 01, 2011 18:42

Although not the most comfortable massage chair ever, it is certainly a massage chair, and that is better than no massage chair at all. I smile widely, making the best of my complimentary massage session.

"Hmm... Was that a question to be answered, or more of the rhetorical kind? I'm most certainly not a mutant, just someone who enjoys a good massage, however potentially ungood it might be."

"Let me think about that whole ID number thing for a moment. I could have sworn that was my ID number, though now that I think of it, it might have been the example ID number in the instructions of a recent jumpsuit acquisition form I filled out."

I think back to my ME card, which I undoubtedly examined at some point. If I can't recall seeing it on there, I think back to that jumpsuit acquisition form. I must have had to put an ID number on there, right? Or maybe I just used the sample number there too.

written by Megagun on Mar 01, 2011 20:43

"Ah, yeeeeees.. I rremember that fondly, my friend. It waz the most beauuuutiful, epique moment supreme de baguette! Even got some burn marks out of it!"

I show the clone my gruesome burn marks.

"I bet those'll prove bountyfull later on in my lifecycle when I have to defeat vast oceans full of communist mutant traitors! They'll be scared and set sail for higher ground, so to speak!"

I gaze in a random direction, smiling, as if seeing the retreat of my enemies with my own eyes....

Suddenly, I snap back into focus.

"Ye said JHT sector, didn't ye? I need ye to help me succeed a most vitalement missionque! I am looking for a very dangerous Forquebot that roams free in this very sector! Are there any terminals I can use around here to track down this rogue Forquebot? It nee's to be looked at RRRIGHT NOW or it might keelhaul the lives of every landlubber in this ENTIRE SECTOR!!"

Cryo-R thinks back. He vaguely remembers seeing his ID number in some places... his ME card... some forms... ah yes! It's...

Corridor A1

"Help you? I'm sorry, I would have to... wait a minute... that's not a normal accent... and what's an ocean? What's a landlubber? They sound almost... no... it can't be! COMMIE IN THE BUNKER!"

The clone runs into a nearby room.

Not long after, an alarm begins to sound.

Internal Security checkpoint

"The reactor core? Deep Subsector? Right, sir," John-R answers his PDC. "We'll head down there momentarily.

And... I'm sort of used to being ignored, I guess... people tend to ignore registered mutants..."

written by Speeder on Mar 02, 2011 02:08

After a while, I was thinking about something, and then suddenly I say.

"Oh, I remembered finally, where the reactor are. I mean, I got a rough information, but for whatever reason I could really not recall, but now I can, the reactor, is between the I and L levels, I think we should start the search on level J.

I climb on the lift, and wait for others to board.

written by Megagun on Mar 02, 2011 09:14

"What an interesting cute little guy. Shame he had to make so much noise, though... This might SERIOUSLY endanger my mission!!!"

I look around me to search for a computer terminal which I could use to find my Forkbot.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 02, 2011 12:30

"Uh... I guess we're going to Deep Subsector I or L then. I'll call again if our direction changes. See you soon. Praise be to friend computer."

I hang up and get on the lift if it arrives as well.

written by Jam on Mar 02, 2011 12:41

A bit bored, I take out my PDC and test its various features. That brainscrub must have been really intense, I can't remember all the cool things the PDC can do, or even what 'PDC' stands for...

I search for something that might say the current timecycle, how many credits I have, or if there are any FUN Computer-Approved games I could play while I'm waiting.

If the lift arrives, I enter it.

written by 4616599 on Mar 02, 2011 13:23

While waiting for John-R to finish, I query the IntSec clones.

"We've seen quite a few rogue or defective bots around here, sirs. Is everything going smoothly now?"

written by Cryoburner on Mar 02, 2011 16:03

"Ah yes, it's BRN-246-618-924!"

"I think... I could probably check my ME card to make sure... If there were better lighting in here, of course. The lighting seems to be below standard ME card reading efficiency levels. Also if these restraints were a little less restraining... I know they are there to keep me from falling out of the chair during the therapy session, but they might be a little too tight for me to remove on my own, so I might need some assistance..."

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Speed-Y has a brainwave. (He might want to get that seen to before it gets dangerous) He seems to recall that the reactor is between I and L sublevels. Probably J is the best place to look. He boards the lift.

L4-O finishes his call and hangs up. After all, our mutual friend dislikes wasted resources, such as those used by a call left open. He follows Speed-Y.

It looks like everyone else is right behind him... except Jam-O. He's too busy playing with his PDC (or, as he remembers, "Personal Digital Companion") to notice that the lift is here.

He fiddles with the camera function, taking a few pictures. He checks out its AlphaNet access, noting that it seems to be working fine. He then looks up the time (04:32) and his credit balance (112).

His PDC doesn't seem to have any games, or any other optional apps, installed though. He probably never got round to installing any.

Corridor A1

Not somewhat troubled, Mega-R tries to find a Computer terminal. Looking into a nearby BLUE room, apparently a security station, he sees one.

Internal Security checkpoint

"I would imagine that the bots were placed here by the communists who briefly took control. Either way, they have been deactivated, as have several others in the sector. Things seem to be getting back to normal now. Was there anything else?"

John-R hangs up, and looks at his PDC oddly for a moment.

Interrogation chamber

"Correct." The voice pauses for a moment. "But you aren't going anywhere. We aren't done here."

A harsh light stabs down from the ceiling, shining right into Cryo-R's eyes, causing them to water.

"Now. Start from the top. What is your mission, and who gave it to you? What secret society are you affiliated with? What mutation do you have?"

written by Megagun on Mar 02, 2011 19:20

I groan, close my eyes, spin around randomly for a minutecycle or so, then (whilst still having my eyes closed) slowly move forwards.

written by Speeder on Mar 02, 2011 19:21

I keep like... waiting, for Jam.

I turn to Lucas? Oh... I was sure we had a Lucas too, wonder where he is...

Anyway, I turn to the other clones.

"Someone hold the lift, please. My fingers are not suitable for that."

I then turn to L4 specifically.

"Erm, you called John, where is he?"

written by Cryoburner on Mar 02, 2011 22:57

"Thanks! That definitely improves the room's ME card reading efficiency levels, however blinding they might be. Now, if only I could reach my ME card... I guess I'll just take your unquestionable word for it that I got the number right though." 😊

"Onto your questions, my mission is currently to head to the reactor to prevent communist interference from causing harm to the sector. This mission was given to me by The Computer. I guess my secret society would be 'troubleshooter' and my mutation would be 'troubleshooting'."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 03, 2011 00:39

"Oh uh.. I don't know actually. I never asked."

I check the PDC to see if it will tell me where the location of John was at the time of the call. Or if it will locate him regardless.

written by Jam on Mar 03, 2011 01:26

I suddenly notice a tugging on my handcuffed arm, and look up from my PDC. Oh, Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R has already entered the lift... In fact... I'm the only clone who hasn't entered yet...

"Ah! Wait, don't leave me behind!"

I dash into the lift.

"Maybe we should wait for Joris-O and John-R? They might be close... I'm actually surprised they haven't arrived by now..."

written by Gligar on Mar 03, 2011 01:58

Corridor A1

Mega-R makes himself dizzy.

Then he walks forward.

And promptly falls over... right into the BLUE room.

Let's hope the cameras didn't pick it up.

Cargo lift

Speed-Y, or rather Massacrebot, turns to Lucas-R. Yes, he's here. Funny how some clones can just fade into the background, almost like they're not here...

Lucas-R is looking at the lift panel, looking for a "hold door" button, and can't seem to find one.

Not that he needs it, since Jam-O dashes into the lift. It helps, of course, that he's handcuffed to the former Director.

There's one problem remaining: the location of John-R and Jam-O. L4-O admits that he didn't ask them... and his PDC won't tell him where they were/are.

Jam-O suggests waiting.

Interrogation chamber

"No! Too obvious. All missions are ultimately assigned by The Computer."

The shocks increase in severity again, causing a great deal of pressure on Cryo-R's chest. One might say that he's having trouble with it.

"What is the name of your briefing officer? What team are you with? Why are you not with them? Who is your team leader? What is your secret society? The Mystics? Death Leopard? Pro Tech? The Communists? What is your mutation?!"

Cryo-R gets the sudden feeling that something is cutting into his left leg.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 03, 2011 02:49

I take a look at my leg, and how it is getting poked. If possible, I move it away from the poking poker.

"Ah... briefing officer? I guess the computer briefed us directly. Maybe. Come to think of it, the original orders might have come from someone else, who I don't think has disclosed their identity to me. The computer did confirm the orders during a pleasant conversation afterward though."

"As for my team, I guess there's this Speedy guy, who is apparently the team leader. And someone named Jim... I think. And some others, who do things, and stuff. They seem to have issues with breaking forkbots though. As for why I'm not with them, I was asked by the computer to pick up lunch at a cafeteria. At least, I think that's what I was supposed to do. I was going to stop by one on the way to the reactor, but got called here instead. It sounded urgent, so I didn't actually grab lunch yet."

"I'm not actually in any secret society, and don't have any mutations either, as far as I know. I've since recently been experiencing some amnesia though, so it's possible there might be something I can't remember. Does amnesia count as a mutation? If so, it's not a particularly useful one. In any case, I really should be going. We wouldn't want to keep the computer waiting, after all. She is probably rather hungry by now. Hmm, do you know what time it is? I'm not even sure if the cafeteria is serving lunch now."

written by Speeder on Mar 03, 2011 03:09

I would facepalm, if I could, but that is obviously not safe.

"Can you call him again, and tell him where we are? Friend Computer told us to meet him en route, thus obviously, Friend Computer expected that our route would cross soon. Otherwise he would tell me to meet them on the reactor."

written by Megagun on Mar 03, 2011 11:12

"Ohwell, now I'm here anyways; might as well..."

I try to figure out how to get the terminal to show me where the Forkbot I'm looking for is.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 03, 2011 12:16

"I guess so."

I call up John again.

"Hey uh, sorry to bother again. I guess I was supposed to tell you where we were, and it'd also be nice to know where you are too. We're at the Q-level distribution warehouse, or were. Now we're in the cargo lift. Friend Computer says that our route is supposed to cross nearby."

written by 4616599 on Mar 03, 2011 14:30

"Thanks sirs. We've got a little task to do ourselves...." I note John-R's call and move ahead if necessary.

written by Gligar on Mar 03, 2011 16:58

Interrogation chamber

Cryo-R tries to move to look at his leg, and finds that his head is clamped to the chair. So is his leg, for that matter.

"Then when was the briefing? Where? I don't believe your little story. And one other thing. While you were speaking, I gradually increased the current flowing through your body. An ordinary clone would be writhing in agony about now, and would have an irregular heartbeat, and other signs of extreme pain and stress. One more increase will kill you. So, I ask again: what is your mutation? You are clearly a mutant, certainly a traitor, and most likely also a communist. Give me one reason not to send you right back to the cloning tanks."

From somewhere, there is the feeling that someone is facepalming. The feeling is so intense it can almost be heard.

Cargo lift

Speed-Y would like to facepalm, but, you know, Massacrebot. He has L4-O call John-R again.

Security station (Bunker)

Mega-R tries to access the terminal. But it becomes clear he has no idea how to use a Computer terminal, especially one in a high clearance area. A second alarm goes off, and the screen reads

```
ACCESS DENIED -- CLEARANCE MISMATCH
INTERNAL SECURITY NOTIFIED REMAIN WHERE YOU ARE
```

Internal Security checkpoint

John-R gets L4-O's call. "Hello? Distribution Warehouse cargo lift... right. We're in the IntSec checkpoint on Q Level... well, we're about to leave it. We should be over there soon."

Indeed, Joris-O is already by the door, practically dragging John-R along. "Hey, would you wait a moment, sir? I'm on the PDC."

written by Speeder on Mar 03, 2011 17:10

I decide to hold the doors putting massacrebot arm on the way, only to be sure.

Of course, I really hope that cargo elevators have the same security measures as the normal passenger elevators.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 03, 2011 17:37

"Okay. We might be able to wait here then, I guess. See you then."

I close the call and report.

"They're at the IntSec checkpoint on this level. They're probably not very far."

I look around.

"More waiting then I guess if they're on the same level as us."

"How deep can we go on this thing anyway? Hmm."

I look at the lift control panel again... it has been a while since we last checked, certainly don't want any treasonous buttons appearing where they shouldn't be...

written by Megagun on Mar 03, 2011 18:06

I groan, and begin rapidly bashing my head and the stub on my left arm against the nearby wall, in a desperate attempt to pass out and do some plausible damage to my body.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 04, 2011 00:51

"Oh, agony. Yeah, I think I'm kind of feeling that... Oh, the agony! The agony!"

I writhe a little bit, possibly in agony.

"Anyway, I think the team had been briefed while I was recloning, actually. The computer rewarded me with a fresh body, you see, because we are such good friends. Once I met back up with the team, I was notified that we were headed to the reactor to secure its continued operation. I really should be getting back to that soon, actually, as the computer wanted us to hurry, and there's apparently something of a strict time limit for this mission. Being an expert in reactors, I don't know what the team would do without me. They'd probably just stand around in a circle saying things like "Where is Cryo-R?" and "Whatever will we do without Cryo-R here?" I suppose you really should let me be on my way."

"Say, if you want, you could probably send someone with me! That way, we could meet up with the team and maybe have lunch."

written by Jam on Mar 04, 2011 01:33

"Now where is Cryo-R..."

"Friend Computer, if it's within our security clearance, could tell us the current location of our team member, Cryo-R-BRN-2? His immediate safe return is vital to the success of our mission, perhaps IntSec could escort him back to us?"

written by Gligar on Mar 04, 2011 02:13

Cargo lift

Speed-Y has Massacrebot place its arm such as to block the lift doors from closing.

And they do try to close. They come to the arm, and stop. From the look of things, those doors don't seem to have the sensors found in passenger lifts. It's only the relative sturdiness of Massacrebot that is preventing injury.

L4-O report on Jam-O and John-R. They shouldn't be long, he says. Then, he peers at the control panel. It looks like the lowest the lift will go is O Sublevel, stopping at C, D, E, G, I, J, and M Sublevels on the way down there.

Jam-O wonders where Cryo-R is. The Computer responds, "Cryo-R-BRN-2 is currently being detained by Internal Security, citizen. His location is not available at your security clearance."

Interrogation chamber

Speaking of Cryo-R, he is indeed being detained. He's still strapped into his chair, now giving a not-exactly-convincing show of being in pain.

The owner of the voice apparently listens to him. "Huh. It is now clear that you are an unregistered mutant, and therefore, are guilty of possessing a mutation. Note that your punishment will be lessened - slightly - if you register now. You are ordered to take less than six words to decide." The electricity running through the chair, and Cryo-R's body, lessens.

Security station

Mega-R tries to cause damage to himself by bashing his head against the wall. It doesn't work, and he just gets a headache,

From outside the room comes the sound of marching jackboots.

Internal Security checkpoint

Now that his second call is ended, John-R can join Joris-O in heading to the team.

written by Speeder on Mar 04, 2011 03:28

Seeing that it sorta worked, although not as I hoped, I keep holding the doors, and hoping nothing evil will happen.

"After they get in the elevator, we are to immediately proceed to J sublevel."

written by Megagun on Mar 04, 2011 07:12

I drop to the floor, attempting to look passed out..

written by Lightning4 on Mar 04, 2011 10:32

"Aye aye sir."

I position myself next to the lift panel.

"There are stops on both I and J, if we need to check both."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 04, 2011 17:11

I smile even more, in silence.

written by Gligar on Mar 04, 2011 18:54

Cargo lift

Speed-Y's still waiting for John-R and Joris-O to arrive. In the mean time, he tells L4-O to get ready. They'll be heading down to J Sublevel as soon as they arrive.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

And here they are now.

John-R notices Massacrebot's manipulator sticking out of the lift and hits the button, opening the doors. The two then enter.

Security station

The jackboots are revealed to belong to an Internal Security team, responding to the alarms.

One of them spots Mega-R, slumped on the floor, and shakes him roughly. "Wake up, citizen!"

Interrogation chamber

"Your silence is taken as refusal to register. Very well. You are to be brainscrubbed and re-educated. Perhaps next time... no, there will be no next time. Take him away."

Cryo-R's restraints are released. Someone forces him to his feet and places another set of handcuffs on him, noting the, er, "stylish bracelet" that Cryo-R is wearing. Another someone blindfolds him, and forces him to walk.

written by Speeder on Mar 04, 2011 19:14

As soon everyone is inside, I also get inside.

"Someone press the button to J level."

I turn to John

"I am deeply sorry that I forgot you on the compnode... I wished I could fetch you personally, but I needed to repair the bots."

written by Megagun on Mar 04, 2011 19:59

I jolt upwards.

"Oi! What am I doing here? What is my purpose in life? What is this life thing anyways? Where is the Nuclear Bomb Device I am supposed to defuse? Why am I wearing a red suit? What are those glowy bits inside you? Why did the chicken cross the road? Do androids dream of electric sheep?"

I do some in-air karate-chops to impress my new friends.

written by Jam on Mar 05, 2011 01:38

"Friend Computer, if IntSec has captured Cryo-R, do you think you could have them return him to us, unharmed? He might have some information that would be useful to us, and, knowing Cryo-R, he's probably gotten himself a brainscrub or termination for his behavior..."

Perhaps any brainscrubs he might be about of receive could wait until after the mission is completed?"

written by Gligar on Mar 05, 2011 02:05

Cargo lift

Lucas-R presses the button. Going down for a change!

"I am afraid that that is not possible, citizen," our mutual friend replies. "But rest assured, Cryo-R will be returned to you in due course. Have a nice daycycle."

Security station

The IntSec clone shakes Mega-R. "Make sense, citizen! Why are you in a high-clearance area, next to a terminal with a clearance alarm? Explain! Now!"

Somewhere

Cryo-R is led down what seems to him like a twisty little maze of passages, all alike. It's all so confusing... sometimes one way, then turning round 270 degrees, then another way, then round 720 degrees... it's impossible to keep track!

written by Speeder on Mar 05, 2011 02:24

Seeing that probably this will take a LOOOONG time, I see if there are any commercial jingle playing to sing along.

If none are playing, I start to sing the music of the great troubleshooters that shoot trouble.

written by Jam on Mar 05, 2011 13:17

"Okay. A nice daycycle to you too, Friend Computer."

I relax a bit, and decide to finish eating my half-eaten bag of Algae Chips (the contents, not the bag... Because eating the bag would be unhealthy, and treasonous).

"Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R, does the name 'Freaky' sound familiar to you at all?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 05, 2011 15:13

"Welcome back John and Joris!"

I decide to sing along with Speed as soon as he starts.

written by Gligar on Mar 05, 2011 16:45

Cargo lift

The lift descends. Over the speaker system comes the familiar sounds of the B3 jingle. Speed-Y and L4-O both sing along.

Jam-O finishes off his bag of algae chips. The chips, not the bag. Eating the bag would be a sign of possessing a mutation or something.

A thought comes to him and he asks a question. Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R frowns. "I... don't think so, sir."

Somewhere

Cryo-R is made to stop by his escorts. He still has no idea where they are.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 05, 2011 17:10

Seeing as we are no longer moving ahead, I begin jogging in place.

"Is this the way to the cafeteria?"

I try peeking under my blindfold to determine if we are in fact at or near a cafeteria. If not, I try to determine where we actually are. If not possible to see anything, I just listen to and smell my surroundings instead.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 05, 2011 17:32

I interrupt my singing to think, then speak in the direction of Foursixonesixfiveninenine.

"Hm. You called Jam sir... that's a good thing. Not calling your superiors 'sir' can be treasonous if they call attention to it!"

I look at him questioningly and ask,

"What do you think of communism?"

I await a reply, eyebrow raised.

written by Jam on Mar 05, 2011 17:43

I look to Speed-Y.

"Yes sir, you're exactly right, sir!"

I listen to Speed-Y's question.

"Oh, good question, sir!"

I look at Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R, interested in his response...

written by Megagun on Mar 05, 2011 20:53

"I myself and the rest of Team Ivy were sent out to retrieve and dismantle a Nuclear Bomb that a group of communists had stolen. It was their intention to use it as a bargaining chip so that they could take down JHT sector if they should fail in the little revolution they had planned.

Unfortunately, due to a tragic accident involving cans of B3, a jackobot and a transbot, my entire team got wiped out. Much worse, it would appear that we have been part of some unfortunate cloning incident, as I am not Mega-R, yet appear to be inside the boy of someone whose name is Mega-R..

I took it upon myself to save the happy people of JHT sector and bring forth a final blow to the damned Communists, by recovering and dismantling the Nuclear Bomb they had acquired. I found out that they had planted it inside a Forkbot, and promptly began searching for it. Unfortunately, finding a Forkbot would likely require access to a computer terminal inside a security station. Normally, Team Ivy has a BLUE team-leader, but due to obvious reasons he's not here right now, and I figured that should Team Ivy succeed in their mission, I was meant to temporarily ignore Mega-R's clearance level."

"Now, you all are of BLUE clearance. How about we form the NEW Team Ivy, you lot forget I was ever in here, and we march onwards to the record books as the famous Team Ivy that single-handedly saved the entire JHT sector from melting down in a horrible nuclear blast?"

written by Speeder on Mar 05, 2011 21:44

I peer at Jam looking at me but replying to L4 and calling he sir.

But I continue my B3 music.

written by Gligar on Mar 06, 2011 02:08

Somewhere

Cryo-R starts jogging in place and talking, only to be roughly forced to the floor by his IntSec escorts. "Less of it! No talking!"

There is the sound of a button being pressed, and the overwhelming smell of cleaning solution. There is also the complete lack of Cryo-R being able to peek round his blindfold.

Cargo lift

L4-O stops singing. He asks FOursixonesixfiveninenine-R a question.

It becomes clear that half the team is looking at him.

"Liking communism would be treasonous, sir, " is the slightly-nervous reply.

The lift continues to descend.

On the lift panel, the button for K Level lights up. Someone just called the lift.

Security station

The goons seem to process Mega-R's claim that he is someone else.

"That doesn't make sense. You have Mega-R's ME Card. You look like Mega-R. You sound like Mega-R. Yet you claim to be someone else. I'm afraid we need to verify your claim. I'll have to ask you to accompany us to the station."

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 06, 2011 02:42

Upon noticing the K level button light up, I proceed to check it in more detail, whether it complies with standards in lighting up, displaying the clearance level in the light, and if the lift actually arrives at K level.

written by Speeder on Mar 06, 2011 03:59

Upon noticing Mango behavior, I ask.

"You don't got infected by whatever caused the defect on Cryo, do you?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 06, 2011 04:12

"Hm. Good answer. Perhaps you're safe after all."

I notice the K-level button.

"I hope whoever wants on isn't using something big..."

I note how much space is left on the lift between the several clones and Massacrebot..

written by Megagun on Mar 06, 2011 11:21

"Well, obviously I look and sound like him if I have been erroneously cloned into his body..."

Either way, Isn't this a security station? Why do we need to move to a different one?

But okay, I will comply if you promise that you'll make it quick, for JHT sector is in grave danger!!

Go on then! We have no time to lose!"

I follow the IntSec agents to wherever their station is..

written by Jam on Mar 06, 2011 15:11

I stare at L4-O for a second...

"I must be waaaay overtired... I was sure it was Speed-Y that was talking... Strange... Ah! The button for K Level just lit up!"

I ready my laser pistol for whoever is waiting, and prepare to shoot their heads off...

written by Gligar on Mar 06, 2011 17:21

Cargo lift

...what?

Why is Mango-R investigating things in great detail? What is going on here? Let me run a scan...

And for your information, the button indicators are plain red. They don't seem to denote clearance or anything like that, they just denote that the lift will stop at that level.

And finally, how would Mango-R know about Regulation 45/[REDACTED]?

Speed-Y notices this and comments.

L4-O wonders about what wants to enter on K Level.

Jam-O gets suspicious and pulls his laser pistol.

Finally, the lift does indeed stop on K Level.

Waiting there are three clones. One of them is Cryo-R. He's wearing handcuffs and a blindfold. The other two appear to be Internal Security.

Cryo-R is pushed onto the lift by one of the IntSec clones. "Move, you! And you," he adds, to everyone in the lift. "Make room!"

The other adds, "You, press H," to someone near the lift panel.

Corridor A1

Mega-R and the BLUEs begin walking.

They pass into the loading dock, pushing past Selbio-R, who bats at them with his towel (earning a glare from one goon), and out onto the roadway, which they proceed to walk down.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 06, 2011 18:34

"Oh, so it's the forkbot destroyer again." I sigh.

[371]

"At least H is on the way. Pressing it, sir." I press the button, then try to stay out of handcuffed-grabbing range of Cryo. Or leg range if he tries using his feet to investigate.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 06, 2011 20:01

I make way for Internal Security, moving towards the back of the lift.

While waiting for the lift to arrive at its destination at H level, I examine Cryo-R from a distance.

"Are we nearly there yet?"

I start singing the opening tune of some of my favourite shows, like Mandatory Team Troubleshooter and Pie-loving Troubleshooter

written by Jam on Mar 07, 2011 00:59

I smile at the IntSec clones.

"Ah, you brought Cryo-R back to us! Thank you, sirs, you've saved us a lot of time that otherwise would have been spent searching for him! Okay, we'll take him from here..."

I grab onto Cryo-R's handcuffs, and pull him towards me.

"Oh, do you think you could un-handcuff him too, please? Of course, you sort of have to, because, as I'm sure you already know, any clone that doesn't assist our Troubleshooting team in its mission risks summary execution, or so Friend Computer says. No, that's not a threat, I'm just stating what Friend Computer said earlier, to avoid any misunderstandings."

I smile back at their no-doubt impressed and awed expressions at being able to meet the famous Team Epsilon in person.

"Yep, we're the famous Team Epsilon! Yes, I know, no need to be so impressed, we're only the Troubleshooting team that singlehandedly saved the entire sector from a Communist takeover, and rebooted your friend and mine, Friend Computer. It's not like we saved the sector twice or anything (though about 18 hourcycles, we will have)."

If the IntSec clones for some reason don't want us to take back Cryo-R, I immediately call for Friend Computer.

"Friend Computer! These clones are holding Cryo-R against his will, and we need him back! I don't think they realize how important our mission is, and how vital Cryo-R is to success of said mission!"

written by Gligar on Mar 07, 2011 02:00

Cargo lift

L4-O presses H while trying to keep clear of Cryo-R. Other clones move to let the IntSec clones onto the lift. Mango-R still seems to be infected with the "inspect the whole [REDACTED] complex down to the nearest atom" bug (does he even know what an atom is?) as he inspects Cryo-R. He notices a deep cut on Cryo-R's left leg.

The lift descends.

Jam-O inquires whether it would be possible to just leave Cryo-R with the team. He also makes it know that it is they who rebooted the compnode.

"Oh, so it's your fault there are dead clones all over the place," one goon replies. "I'm told that V Level is full of them.

"And no," he adds, "we can't leave this clone here. He's scheduled to be brainscrubbed."

Roadway

A goon rolls his eyes. "No."

Mega-R starts singing. "What's a pie, citizen? I bet it's treasonous or something."

written by Jam on Mar 07, 2011 02:11

"Dead communists, sir. And I'm sure Cryo-R's brainscrub can wait until after our mission is completed. There's a slim risk that the wrong thing could be wiped from his memory, and it would be disastrous if it was. Cryo-R is most likely the only clone on our team with the skills necessary to understand the reactor and repair it if any communists decide to sabotage it. It is very important that he remain the way he is, for the safety of the sector."

written by Speeder on Mar 07, 2011 02:34

After I let Jam speak, I end speaking.

"Let them Brainscrub him, our attempt earlier clearly failed, and he even managed to deny us of Nukabot."

I turn to the Int-Sec.

"Please, don't take any chances, we brainscrubbed him before, and it clearly failed, use the best machine you have, with the best technicians."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 07, 2011 07:13

I glare at Jam, then sigh and shake my head.

"I'm with Speed on this one. So far he hasn't done anything but impede our progress. Perhaps there IS some reason to bring him with us that isn't clear, but only Friend Computer knows that. And Friend Computer would have to intervene and tell us to bring him with us again if Friend Computer wanted that."

I raise an eyebrow again.

"I'm curious why you want him with us so badly..."

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 07, 2011 10:40

I examine Jam-O's argument some more, then reply.

"So... Jam-O... You think that Cryo-R should be not brainscrubbed since he may have some significance to the mission, and it could go wrong. But, things never malfunction. Ever."

I look(not examine) over at the two IntSec clones.

"Besides, they are clearly of a far higher clearance. They know what is best."

I examine my own argument, and try to figure just how well I said that... Roadway

"Are we nearly there yet?"

To the IntSec officer that doesn't know what pie is:

"You've never had pie? No wonder you're so grumpy and unhappy!"

Cryoburner said:

I begin feeling my surroundings, so as to get a better idea of where I might be. I feel the floor, the walls, my travelling companions and anything else within reach, as well as I can while handcuffed anyway.

Cargo lift

Jam-O points out that the deceased clones were communists. He asserts that, were Cryo-R to be brainscrubbed again, he might lose information vital to the success of the mission. The goon counters that Cryo-R should have thought of that before coming to the attention of IntSec. The brainscrub can't be delayed. Have you nay idea how much it would cost to delay a brainscrub?

Jam-O becomes aware that Cryo-R is touching him.

Mango-R points out that brainscrubs, like everything else in Alpha Complex, are perfect. How could they possibly go wrong? And besides, the goons are BLUE.

He thinks that was said quite well.

Cryo-R finishes with Jam-O and starts touching Mango-R.

Speed-Y tells IntSec to do the best job it can with Cryo-R. The other goon says that he can count on it.

Cryo-R suddenly turns round and feels something metal that could only be an experimental Armourbot.

L4-O agrees with Speed-Y. He says that so far, Cryo-R has done nothing but hinder the team. He wonders exactly why he is important to the team, but he assumes that there is a reason for it. He finishes up by raising an eyebrow, like some mutant with pointed ears*, and wonders why Jam-O wants Cryo-R with them...

Cryo-R finds another clone who seems to be slimy. Said clone punches Cryo-R in the says, telling him not to touch him.

The lift continues to descend. It's getting closer to H Level.

* There was one in that one vidshow a few decadecycles ago... are they re-showing it again?

The domescraper that comprises the majority of JHT Sector now behind them, Mega-R and the goons approach another, smaller, building. A sign denotes this as IOTA SUBSECTOR.

One of Mega-R's escorts asserts that yes, they're almost there.

The goon who doesn't know about pie wonders how this "pie" could be at all Computer Approved.

The group approaches the door into the building.

written by Speeder on Mar 07, 2011 18:23

I keep watching Cryo and his touchy behavior.

"I know he came from CPU... tell me, all CPU clones are like that? Also I wonder if them all are fond of pens, and countertop bells."

written by Megagun on Mar 07, 2011 18:27

"Ah, we're here now, eh? Good.

I noticed that we are now in IOTA SUBSECTOR. That's pretty far away from the core JHT sector, right? I assume we're safe here if the Nuclear Device would detonate? Any of you have any information about that?

Anyways, now that we are here, can we start formulating a plan to find the Nuclear Device? We have to find that Forkbot, or everyone in JHT sector may be doomed!"

written by Jam on Mar 07, 2011 23:52

"Cryo-R was assigned to our team by (I'm assuming) a very high clearance clone, perhaps even an ULTRAVIOLET clone. So that must mean that he is needed for the mission somehow. The only potentially useful skills I can see that he has is his tendency to analyze and examine things in extreme detail, so those skills must be needed at some point in the mission, right? Or are you questioning the judgement of a potentially ULTRAVIOLET citizen?"

Or, perhaps he has some sort of unregistered mutation that we aren't supposed to know about, that's purpose will become apparent once we get to the reactor... Cryo-R, are you a mutant? Oh! Were you that mutant that was trying to get inside our heads? If you needed our mental fingerprint thing-a-ma-jigs, you only needed to ask..."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 08, 2011 01:05

I rub my says, wherever that might be.

"Hmm... this environment is quite slimy... and punchy."

I reply to the mystery clone, who feels like jumpsuits.

"Oh, no, I most certainly don't have any mutations, at least none that I know of. I'm just highly skilled at various things, like reactors."

"Hmm... Say, can I have your jumpsuit? I could really use another one."

written by Gligar on Mar 08, 2011 02:51

Cargo lift

Speed-Y keeps an eye on Cryo-R as he continues to touch up everything... and promptly collapse to the floor, twitching, as he touches John-R.

The IntSec goons glare at John-R for that, and then notice his yellow armband. "Was that you? I don't like you mutants," one growls.

"Well, if it's all the same to you, sirs, I don't like being probed in any way. I prefer to be happy. You know, happiness is mandatory, and all that. He's making me unhappy."

The other says, "I didn't know he was with CPU... was he a Yellowpants enforcer? It would explain a few things... except that he's RED. Probably got demoted."

Jam-O continues to say that Cryo-R is important to the mission. "I don't want to hear it! As far as I'm concerned, he is a traitor, likely a mutant - id you notice that he doesn't feel pain? - and possibly a communist. For this, he needs to be brainscrubbed."

Cryo-R insists that he isn't a mutant, and asks for a jumpsuit. "No, you can't have another jumpsuit!"

The lift stops. It's H Level.

Cryo-R's escorts grab him and drag him out of the lift. They continue walking down the corridor as the lift starts up again.

Iota Subsector checkpoint

The group enters the checkpoint - yes, another one. Mega-R (if it is Mega-R) is escorted into a side-room, seemingly an interview room.

One of the goons says, "Tell me about this nuclear device. Tell me everything you know. I'm warning you, if we find that you're responsible..."

written by Jam on Mar 08, 2011 03:36

I watch Cryo-R and the IntSec clones go.

"Make sure you bring him back to us once he's done with his brainscrub, please!" I yell after them.

I turn to the others.

"Wait... I've seen you guys get injured, but you don't seem to be in any pain... Does that mean you guys are mutants too?! Gah!"

I point my laser pistol at the head of the nearest injured clone that's a lower clearance than me, which just happens to be Mango-R (actually, I think he's the only injured RED clone currently in the lift).

"Confess now or face the consequences!"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 08, 2011 05:46

"Succumbing to pain is treason. At least for the armed forces. It's a signal of being unhappy. Unhappiness is treason, of course."

"That and I think the happy pills counteract most pain you might take while doing your job for Friend Computer. It's no mutation..."

written by Speeder on Mar 08, 2011 06:22

While the team is more busy shooting each other, I am even more curious about how Alpha Complex work.

"Someone have any idea of what is a yellowpants enforcer?"

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 08, 2011 10:18

I look at Jam-O, not so willing to move or examine much anymore.

"Confess? Confess what? You know that I cannot confess of that of which is not known to me! I know that you have been good with your judgement, but surely you are not mistaken?"

I wait for whatever happens next.

written by Megagun on Mar 08, 2011 13:31

"Alright, I'll tell you all about it. Keep in mind, though, that part of this is second-hand from one of my teammates who was sent out to investigate the nuclear device in the midst of potential Communists, and for some inexplicable reason he didn't have a Laser Pistol with him to defend himself with..."

"Either way, the Nuclear Device is classified as a 'Tsar Nuclear Bomb'. The yield of it is unknown to me, but my troubleshooter teammate said that it was about this big". I indicate a size of about one and a half Generic Clone Head-Lengths. Perhaps an old unit used in Alpha Complex, but everyone can relate easily to them.

"The weapon is hidden within what appears to be the processing unit or processing region of a Forkbot. The serial number of said forkbot starts with C-3/K418-69g, but unfortunately my teammate couldn't find out the rest of it as it was hidden behind some crimson red paint, and he didn't have time to scrape that off."

"The Nuclear Device appears to have a keypad attached to it, presumably so that the Commies could operate it easily. Through some electro-analysis or something witty-sounding like that, my teammate was able to figure out a code for it: the sequence '1', 'D', '10', 'T'. Keep in mind that those are four buttons; the keypad supposedly has an actual '10' key. Must be one of them Happy-Funlyke-Exciting-Keypads. I wonder if it also has smiley faces on it, though, or if it's a more recent sans-smileys one."

"A mathematically unlikely statistically likely pseudo-analysis was conducted on the Device, which produced the following table of chances-of-armedness which every member of our team had to memorize by means of an awesome song:"

I draw out a little diagram on my PDC whilst visibly singing the song in my mind:

STATE	CHANCE
Armed*	32.33% (repeating, of course)
Disarmed	8%

Idle 17.67% (also repeating, obviously)
Unknown Quantum-state meow? 42%

*The device is Armed if it's on a timer, ready to explode when the timer reaches 0.
Idle means that the Device will arm itself when it detects that it is being meddled with.
It is unknown how exactly it detects meddleness-activity, or what exactly the device thinks a meddling activity looks like.

"Unfortunately, that is all I know."

written by 4616599 on Mar 08, 2011 17:01

"Yes, wouldn't it be rather treasonous if we all had secret mutant powers? You seem rather paranoid...could that be a sign of a mutant, too?"

I nervously draw my laser pistol and wave it around randomly.

written by Gligar on Mar 08, 2011 18:25

Cargo lift

Jam-O watches Cryo-R and goons leave. They don't say anything.

But something they told him triggers a thought. Are any of the team's injured feeling any pain? Are they mutants too?

He pulls his laser on Mango-R and demands to know whether this is the case.

L4-O counters that allowing pain to overcome them is considered treasonous, at least in the Armed Forces. Put simply, pain causes unhappiness. The rest you know.

And anyway, don't happy pills act as painkillers? (When was the last time the team took any?)

Speed-Y is also thinking about what the goons said. But he's thinking about the term "Yellowpants enforcer"... he can't remember what it means... Lucas-R reminds him: "Aren't they those YELLOW CPU clones who go around with Troubleshooter teams and force them to comply with seemingly-random regulations, sir? I'm sure The Computer has its reasons for assigning them. NotthatI'munhappyaboutthat..."

Mango-R freezes. He's confused. He's been asked to confess something, but what?

Joris-O is also paranoid. He points his baster around randomly. Is paranoia a mutation, too?

The lift continues to descend. It's now near C Level.

Interview room (Iota Subsector)

Mega-R(?) starts telling the goons about his alleged mission, and the device he was supposedly investigating. Put simply: it's a bomb. The goons seem surprised.

"That's... quite interesting, citizen. I'll have to check with Troubleshooter Overwatch and verify if such a mission was assigned. Hmm... you say your team was Team Ivy, right? There's no team by that name around here, but I'll check anyway. Just one other thing, what's your name?"

Another goon says, "A C-3/K-series forkbot, huh... I doubt there are more than ten of those still active in the sector..."

written by Megagun on Mar 08, 2011 18:59

"My name is Leeroy-O-JNK-5, friend."

To the other IntSec officer:

"No more than ten of them? Good. I was worried that we'd have to work our way through dozens of those, which could take a lot of time, plus it would be a logistical nightmare!"

written by Cryoburner on Mar 09, 2011 01:48

While getting dragged down the hallway, I try sliding my head along the floor to test the effectiveness of the blindfold-tying procedures performed by these members of internal security.

written by Jam on Mar 09, 2011 02:20

I look over at Joris-O, and aim my laser pistol at his head instead.

"Are you suggesting that paranoia is a mutation? That kind of thinking sounds treasonous... Isn't it stated right in the Computer-approved Troubleshooter's Motto that we should "Trust No One"? You aren't contradicting the advice of Friend Computer, are you?"

I take a step closer to Joris-O.

"And what's this with suggesting that we all have secret mutant powers? That's absurd! Next you'll be saying we're all are members of secret societies or something! But that's absolutely crazy!"

I inch a bit closer.

"Maybe you're the mutant! Are you?! ARE YOU?!"

written by Gligar on Mar 09, 2011 02:58

Interview room (Iota Subsector)

"Oh, so it was you who caused the Code 7 in DMV sector? I always wondered what happened to that team." The goon turns away to use a nearby Computer terminal. A progress bar appears on the screen, and begins moving extremely slowly.

The other goon nods. "Of course, you'd have to find them first. And that may be easier said than done."

On the Computer Terminal, the progress bar somehow jumps backwards.

Somewhere (H Level)

Cryo-R gets a bloody nose by dragging his face across the ground. However, he does learn that the Internal Security goons know the blindfold-tying protocols very well indeed.

He's eventually pulled to his feet and forced into somewhere.

The blindfold is removed, allowing Cryo-R to see that he's in a completely featureless room, lit uniformly from everywhere with lights that constantly change colour. He starts to get confused by the lights.

Cargo lift

Jam-O shifts his laser pistol over to Joris-O's head. Paranoia isn't a mutation, it's mandatory! What next? Accusing everyone of being in secret societies?

Maybe he's the mutant!

The lift continues to descend. It passes A Level, continuing into Deep Subsector.

As it does, the lights in the lift go out.

"Your attention, please," The Computer intones. "A temporary power fluctuation is occurring. The Troubleshooter team sent to the reactor is currently behind schedule, but is expected to arrive on scene soon. Please remain calm. Thank you for your co-operation."

Interview room

The lights go out here, too. Now, the only light in the room comes from the Computer Terminal.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 09, 2011 07:26

"Wow, this room is impressively featureless!"

I carefully examine the featurelessness of the room in detail, to make sure no features got overlooked.

"Say, is it alright being in here with all these colors flashing about? I'm under the impression that remaining in a room with this many colors is bound to be treasonous. Perhaps we should return to where we just were, assuming that place's color designation is a bit more stable."

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 09, 2011 10:54

I slowly turn my head, examining the lift's mechanisms in more detail through hearing, to check whether the Cargo lift has stopped or not. I don't declare what I observe, if there is anything to be observed in the dark.

written by Megagun on Mar 09, 2011 11:26

I gasp and quickly move my head against a nearby wall to attempt to feel and hear nearby vibrations, then whisper to the IntSec Officers:

"Crap! That might've been the Tsar! I'll feel for vibrations in the walls, you guys figure out if Friend Computer knows anything about what just happened!"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 09, 2011 12:06

"Hm. Not good."

I turn on my portable torch, assuming it still works.

"Maybe we could hold our paranoia off until after we fix the reactor? Anyone who intervenes in THAT is clearly a traitor and must be executed on the spot."

I wave Turbo with my free hand.

"Unless of course the secret societies WANT us to restore the reactor... in which case... we're committing treason? No no, that can't be right..."

I mutter to myself and think for a bit.

written by 4616599 on Mar 09, 2011 14:44

"Funny that the lights should pick this moment to go out, isn't it? Are you a mutant? Aaaaagh...how many powers do you have?!"

I note L4-O nearby. "Secret societies...I wonder why we'd want to bring that up now..."

written by Speeder on Mar 09, 2011 17:22

I start to laugh, then I say.

"Of course, Secret Societies want us to restore the reactor, otherwise they will have nothing to do. How one can be enemy of friend computer, without friend computer?"

Of course, we are to obey friend computer, this of course, will make some secret societies pleased, but we are not working for them, we are working for Friend Computer!"

written by Gligar on Mar 09, 2011 18:02

Featureless Room

Cryo-R doesn't seem to understand that rooms can indeed be featureless. He tries to inspect it, looking for any features that might be there, but can't find anything to inspect. And these lights... these lights... they're so... confusing...

He passes out.

Cargo lift

Mango-R tries to determine whether the lift is still moving by sound. Well, the advertising is still playing through the speakers, and the sounds of motors can be heard outside the lift. So I would say yes, the lift is still descending.

L4-O grabs his torch. Yep, still works. He points out that the team needs to get to the reactor and finish its job. Anyone interfering with the mission can be terminated.

Then again, he adds, waving Turbo around, what if the secret societies want that? If so... they're helping the societies, which is treason...

He mutters to himself.

Joris-O thinks it's funny that the lights failed now. Is someone secretly manipulating the lights via some mutation? And why is L4-O mentioning secret societies?

It doesn't matter, according to Speed-Y. If the societies want the reactor restored, so be it. Of course they want the reactor restored. What's more important is that our mutual friend wants it restored, regardless of what anyone else thinks.

The lift continues to descend.

Interview room (Iota Subsector)

Mega-R - or Leeroy-O in Mega-R's body - checks the walls. He feels some small vibrations.

Meanwhile, the goon at the terminal is running something. "According to this, only the lights are affected. I can't get full details."

The ongoing scan beeps at him. "Ah... looks like you were telling the truth about that mission. And.. looks like the rest of your team has been lost. You should have been, too, but something happened... I'm being blocked from full details... it just says, 'see Medcal Services file [REDACTED]'."

written by Speeder on Mar 09, 2011 18:07

After a while, pondering something he says.

"I am Yellow now... Having the same clearance as the yellowpants, can I get rid of them? The thought of a Yellow Cryo among us would be REALLY dread..."

written by Megagun on Mar 09, 2011 18:37

"Wait... They're all gone? What happened? And why would anyone hide information like that?"

I suddenly remember something..

"Oh, no... Can you please check what happened to Eduard-R-KHL-6? I challenged him to a duel in Cowardly Communist Caraoke Protocol, which I planned right after succesful completion of our mission. Please tell me his death wasn't related to that Code 7 incident! It would be amazingly sad if my mistake caused his death, and the cancellation of that planned duel! Oh, dear.."

I turn around, nearly burst out in tears, then remember my most important mission and shrug my pseudo-tears away...

"Right. The Nuclear Weapons Device.... I'm feeling some slight vibrations in the wall here. No sudden shocks or anything, so I'm guessing that we're safe for now and nothing bad happened yet..."

We should probably head off and find that Forkbot. Maybe there are some nearby Troubleshooter teams to help us out in our search for the Forkbot? I'm feeling sick just thinking about the possible outcome if that Nuclear Weapon detonates!"

written by Jam on Mar 09, 2011 23:34

"Gah! Why did the lights go out?! There must be problems at the reactor! We'd better hurry..."

I look at Joris through the darkness.

"Or did you somehow contact your secret society and tell them to kill the lights to this elevator... Is it because we were talking about mutants?!"

written by Gligar on Mar 10, 2011 02:04

Cargo lift

Speed-Y wonders... he's YELLOW... can he turn away a Yellowpants enforcer? "I doubt it, sir," replies Lucas-R. "I heard that there's a CPU Mandate allowing them to exist. And they use it. A lot."

The lift continues to descend. C Sublevel... D Sublevel... E Sublevel...

Jam-O wonder about the power fluctuation. Maybe it was caused by a secret society!

Interview Room (lota subsector)

"According to this, they just... ran out of clones," the goon answers. "Didn't have enough credits to buy any more, I imagine."

"Okay, that's enough," another goon says. "We've kept you for long enough. If you need anything else, like, say, help with finding this forkbot of yours, it'll be... standard rate. If you catch my drift. I guess it's just too bad about your little duel."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 10, 2011 03:45

"Well there's one society that probably does not want the reactor restored. Commies."

"But they aren't really secret..."

"And I doubt anyone in this lift is a commie. Nobody is wearing those hats."

I think and get worried.

"Unless one of us is a sympathizer!"

written by Speeder on Mar 10, 2011 04:17

Thinks some more.

"I am grateful that the only thing close to that on our team is Cryo..."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 10, 2011 09:04

"Hey now, that's most certainly not true! What about that one guy, who ate all those candies and went unconscious? I sure showed him! Say, I wonder if he's okay..."

Seeing as I'm probably unconscious myself, and multiple floors away from the team, making me completely incapable of hearing them or them hearing me, I decide to let the issue drop, whatever that might or might not have been.

Hmm... Just what was I responding to, anyway? I must have been somehow confused by those lights. : 3

written by Gligar on Mar 10, 2011 17:05

Cargo lift

L4-O knows of one society who doesn't want the reactor to come online. And none of them are here. Are they?

Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R looks worried for a moment.

Speed-Y reminds the team of Cryo-R. He might not be a communist but he's pretty close. I wonder what he'd say if he were in the lift? Something like "Hey now, that's most certainly not true! What about that one guy, who ate all those candies and went unconscious? I sure showed him! Say, I wonder if he's okay..." I bet 😊 You can almost hear him say it, can't you?

Featureless room

But it can't be Cryo-R, he's passed ou- oh, he's gone.

Somewhere

Oh, there he is. Still passed out, and incapable of inspecting anything.

written by Speeder on Mar 10, 2011 17:27

After a time I turn to foursixonesixfiveninenine.

"Hey, you are foursixonesixfiveninenine aren't you? For some reason, there was a guy in our team that really wanted to kill you, I have no idea why"

written by Megagun on Mar 10, 2011 20:36

"Of course I need help finding that Forkbot. You don't suppose I'm actually from IntSec and have access to all the nifty Computer Terminals to track those things down, do you?"

Also, please elaborate on this 'standard rate' you're talking about. You must be referring to something I'm unfamiliar with.

Now, how about any of you give me some tips on how to track this thing down. I guess there's some kind of tracking software in all forkbots, right? Can we tap into that, maybe?"

written by Gligar on Mar 11, 2011 02:16

Interview room

"What makes you think there aren't public access terminals in places? Or failing that, where would you expect to find a forkbot?"

"And for your information, the standard rate around here is fifty credits per hourcycle."

Cargo lift

"Yes, I am Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R, sir. I can't imagine why this clone of yours would want to terminate me... unless... surely he doesn't think I was involved in the Code 7 incident in DMV Sector?"

The lift suddenly shudders and comes to a halt. The doors open onto a corridor, dimly lit by RED lighting. It seems warm here, and a little prickly.

According to the level indicator, the lift has arrived at J Sublevel.

written by Jam on Mar 11, 2011 02:31

"It's funny, how the lights went out just as we were talking about mutants and secret societies... Now, the only way I can see that it could have been timed so well is if one of us somehow contacted a secret society. Isn't one of us a registered mutant with telepathic powers?"

I shift my aim over to John-R.

"Would you happen to be a member of some sort of mutant-sympathizing secret society? The timing of the blackout was just too convenient to be chance..."

I look around in the group.

"Or is there an unregistered telepathic mutant in our group? Could it be Joris-O? Maybe it's Mango-R? Lucas-R, it seems like you've been awfully friendly with a very powerful telepathic mutant. You wouldn't happen to have any powers yourself, would you? I'm sure if you were to register now, you wouldn't be punished..."

written by Speeder on Mar 11, 2011 02:58

I examine the clone with long name. "What incident?" Then after even more examination I say. "You are... suspicious, everyone else around here got brainscrubbed, you was not supposed to know of whatever incident was this. Neither the clone that for some reason remembered you and wanted to kill you. Although that clone went batshit insane about a daycycle ago..."

As the lift open I check if there are no threat outside, and move out of the lift.

written by Megagun on Mar 11, 2011 12:14

"Fifty credits an hourcycle? That's quite an outrageous price for aiding in a mission that is vital to all of JHT sector! What are you, some kind of Commie Mutant Traitor?"

I get out my PDC to check how many credits I currently have

"Hmm, maybe I can spare 10 per hourcycle, but that's stretching it!"

What are your names, anyways? I suppose that if I hire you lot for this epically vital mission for the entirety of JHT sector, I should know your names, right?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 11, 2011 13:18

I wield my torch and follow Speed. I keep my torch on since it's still rather dark.

"Yeah, incident? What happened in DMV sector? Sounds like a bad, bad thing..."

"I would try to remember but I had a pretty bad brainscrub... I can't even remember if I really was in the Armed Forces or not. I assume I was."

written by Gligar on Mar 11, 2011 16:59

Cargo lift

Jam-O is still concerned about the lights going out. It's kind of funny that they went out just as they were talking about mutants, and secret societies... so did one of them contact a society?

Wait... John-R! He's a mutant, right? Is he a member of a secret society as well?

Or is it another mutant? Joris-O? Mango-R?... Lucas-R! He has connections with Freaky... maybe he has power himself!

"What are you talking about, sir? I'm not a mutant!"

Speed-Y ignores Jam-O. He wonders about the Code 7 Incident... how does Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R remember it?

But enough of that. He checks the corridor, and finds...

...would you look at that. Fuzzy-hatted clones. Four of them, leaning against a wall, seemingly asleep.

Speed-Y and Massacrebot exit the lift. The fuzzy hats don't seem to wake up.

L4-O follows him. He is also curious about the incident. Whatever it is, it sounds bad...

As other clones move to follow, Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R admits that he doesn't know everything about the incident. "All I really know is that some kind of device was involved, and that asking about it is a sign of unhappiness. But I distinctly remember being there while something happened."

Interview room (Iota Subsector)

"10 credits isn't good enough, citizen. I'm afraid you're on your own. And seemingly trapped in the body of a RED-clearance citizen..."

And indeed, a check of Mega-R's ME card shows that he's RED clearance, and a check of his balance shows only 34 credits remaining.

written by Speeder on Mar 11, 2011 17:05

I smile inside the bot, seeing that the commies there are sleeping. I then lower the volume of the microphone and speak.

"Ok, quietly, remove their fuzzy hats, THEN wake them up, carefully, and interrogate them."

I turn to Jam.

"You did that before, and you have that citizen attached to you, if the commies remain commies after hat removal, you and the one attached to you are to pretend to be commie and interrogate them peacefully anyway."

Feeling that this will make L4 and Massacrebot unhappy, I say,

"Later we maybe can explode more stuff."

written by Megagun on Mar 11, 2011 17:12

"Ohwell. Guess I'll have to experience the accolades, credits, eternal fame and victory parades all by myself. Goodbye."

I turn around, wait a bit to see if any of them have made up their minds, then run off in search of a public computer terminal or anyone who could aid me in my search.

When outside of ear-shot of anyone:

"Oi, finally can speak freely again, arr."

written by 4616599 on Mar 11, 2011 17:54

I exit the lift too, and start to stiffly walk around near the presumably sleeping commies.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 11, 2011 19:19

"Yes, perhaps more exploding later. Oh well." I look sad.

I hang back and watch Jam and Foursixonesixfivenineine... and Joris do their work.

I do my best too look kind of commie-ish while being entirely uncertain what a commie actually might DO.

written by Jam on Mar 11, 2011 21:29

I silently salute to Speed-Y, then creep up to each of the fuzzy hat clones, and attempt to remove their fuzzy hats without waking them up.

If I successfully remove all of the hats, I quietly wake up one of the clones, and try to see if the clone is still acting like a commie or not.

written by Gligar on Mar 12, 2011 02:07

Corridor (J Sublevel)

Speed-Y notices the sleeping fuzzy hats. He tells Jam-O (and Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R) to remove the hats and wake one up. And... maybe things can be blown up later. Because explosions are fun. (At least, that's what Death Leopard are always saying.)

Joris-O walks up to the fuzzy hats. They don't respond.

L4-O does his best commie impression, slightly hampered by the fact that he doesn't know what commies usually do. Oh well, he gives it a shot anyway.

Jam-O salutes and gets to work. Sloooooowly, he and the clone with a long name creep towards the sleeping clones.

But it looks like they made too much noise. One of the fuzzy hats wakes up. "Wsfsg? What? Oh, Director... Is there a reason you're not wearing anything, comrade?"

Taken slightly aback, the ex-Director answers, "Er, yes, comrade. I've decided to try to take the computerists off-guard by being funny."

John-R watches from a distance, as, I am sure, are the rest of the team.

Corridors (Iota Subsector)

Mega-R - or is it Leeroy-O? - leaves Internal Security behind him. Running through the corridors of Iota Subsector, he lapses back into his strange accent.

As he runs, he finds a (thankfully RED Clearance) AlphaNet cafe with several Computer terminals available for use.

written by Speeder on Mar 12, 2011 03:31

I just... watch.

You know, watching.

Yes, only, watching.

MY EYES PIERCE YOUR HEART AND ALLOW ME TO SEE YOUR SOUL!

Ok, that is not true, because if it was, I would be a mutant, and I am not a traitor. Or, I suppose not...

written by Megagun on Mar 12, 2011 12:50

I enter the AlphaNet café and attempt to search the AlphaNets for forkbots starting with the serial number C-3/K418-69g in JHT sector.

I also take out my PDC, ready to record anything of interest.

written by Gligar on Mar 12, 2011 17:15

Corridor (J Sublevel)

Speed-Y just... watches. Nothing else.

I'm pretty sure that, if the communists could actually see him through Massacrebot, they'd get unhappy through how intense he's watching them. However, since Massacrebot is opaque, they can't see him.

By now, all four communists are awake, and are scrutinising the team. You know, like Cryo-R likes to do. One is especially interested in Massacrebot. He says to the ex-Director, "You managed to liberate the ArmourBot? This is excellent news!"

Massacrebot grumbles at this.

"That's right," Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R replies. "This Troubleshooter team was especially co-operative. It took a while, but I have managed to win them over."

Lucas-R's expression is... interesting, to say the least. The communists don't seem to have noticed.

AlphaNet Cafe

Mega-R - or rather, Leeroy-O - enters. At this hour, there aren't too many clones around, just a couple on break. There are vendobots for B3, Insta-Hot Fun, Coffelyke and TeaSir, among other things.

He sits at a terminal. Not entirely sure where to begin, he just asks it to search for bots by serial number. He also gets out his PDC, ready to note down anything important.

Unfortunately, Mega-R's clearance won't access the information. It seems that he'd need Tech Services access, as well as ORANGE Clearance.

written by Speeder on Mar 12, 2011 17:26

I turn off the microphone.

"Hey massacrebot, calm down... We can always kill them later... For now, just pretend that we got captured by the commies..."

written by 4616599 on Mar 12, 2011 17:34

"Yes, indeed! Troubleshooters make excellent AlgaePunch, too!"

written by Megagun on Mar 12, 2011 18:00

I grumble and instead begin searching for the most recent episode of Mandatory Team Troubleshooter, which I must've missed in all this excitement.

Whilst the latest episode is loading, I fiddle with my PDC.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 12, 2011 18:05

I continue to just... stare. Vacantly now.

In a monotone I say:

"I will do as you command."

written by Jam on Mar 13, 2011 01:11

"That reminds me, comrades, why are you just standing there? One of you go be useful and get the Director a jumpsuit and some armor. I'm sure the ArmourBot will have enough power to adequately defend this corridor from pretty much anything the computerists can throw at us, even if one of you abandon your post for a few minutes.³⁴⁰"

I watch as one of the communists hopefully hurries off to go get a jumpsuit, then I continue talking to the rest of the clones.

"Yes, as the Director said, the troubleshooter team was especially cooperative. By the time we made it to the Compnode, the 'computerist-loyal' Troubleshooting team wasn't even interested in rebooting the Computer anymore. It was just an act for any UVs that were watching.

But something went wrong, I think a secret society interfered somehow... I remember that I was standing next to the Director, aiming my laser pistol at the Troubleshooting team leader just as we had planned, then my head started buzzing, and next thing I knew, the Director was lying on the ground with a laser shot through his head, and the Computer was back online."

I look to L4-O.

"Well, some of the Troubleshooters were a little less willing to change their minds... That's why we have a psychic mutant with us, for the stubborn clones..."

written by Gligar on Mar 13, 2011 01:46

Corridor (J Sublevel)

Inside Massacrebot, Speed-Y does his best to calm the poor bot. It's been programmed to hate commies, after all. The thought of impersonating one is... repulsive, to say the least. The bot falls silent.

Joris-O agrees with the ex-Director, stating that Troubleshooters make good AlgaePunch. "Is that some new kind of beverage? I thought they went for B3, personally..." one communist comments.

L4-O stares blankly, and does his best to act as though under psychic control or something. Jam-O runs with it, also "bringing them up to speed" with the events surrounding the ex-Director's death. He "guesses" that some other secret society interfered with the plan, causing the reboot of the compnode, since the team didn't really want t reboot the thing. He also asks for a jumpsuit and armour for the ex-Director.

The communists believe him! One heads off to find a jumpsuit while another says, "Wow, is that what really happened, comrade? I heard that the computer-loyal team succeeded in rebooting the compnode, with no outside help!"

³⁴⁰ JAM: (ooc: Do commies refer to them as 'minutecycles' too?)

"It's news to me too, comrade," Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R adds. "I must have received a brainscrub prior to decanting again."

The first communist returns. "I couldn't find any armour, comrade. but there is a supply of jumpsuits at the reactor, including this one." The communist holds out an INFRARED jumpsuit, emblazoned with the words REACTOR SHIELDING.

AlphaNet Cafe

Grumbling, Leeroy-O decides to relax a little instead. he looks for the most recent episode of Mandatory Team Troubleshooter, and what do you know? There's a PDC-format version of the newest episode from two daycycles ago. He hits Download, and fiddles with his PDC, probably to set up the transfer. This means he misses the "payment required" notice, which asks for 25 credits.

written by Megagun on Mar 13, 2011 02:16

I look up from my PDC, cancel the download, and instead probe AlphaNet for a map of JHT sector. I specifically search the map for any interesting tourist sites, such as ancient bunkers, nuclear reactors, and cloning tanks.

written by Megagun on Mar 13, 2011 02:27

After looking at the maps a bit, I probe AlphaNet for more information regarding Forkbots: what they are, what their usual workcycle is, and in what kind of environment they're most often deployed. I also try to browse some news archives for news regarding Forkbots. Perhaps there had been a few incidents regarding Forkbots lately, knowledge which could aid me in my epic quest.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 13, 2011 09:44

I stand still, but only to observe the communists to figure out when they seem to be at their most vulnerable state. Without looking downwards, I grip my slugthrower, being careful not to fire it.

written by Speeder on Mar 13, 2011 14:57

After a while I say.

"Remember, the best you remain calm now, the more we can kill commies later!"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 13, 2011 17:08

I continue looking vacant and under mental control.

"I will do as you command."

written by Gligar on Mar 13, 2011 18:23

AlphaNet cafe

Leeroy-O looks up from Mega-R's PDC and notices the message. He decides to cancel the download, and instead calls up a map of the sector. The resulting map displays the main domescraper, consisting of Alpha through Theta Subsectors, along with Central Subsector (between them at the top) and Deep Subsector (underneath them all, housing such things as the sector's reactor, and the food vats). A roadway leads from the intersection of Epsilon and Delta Subsectors, past the building housing Iota Subsector, and past several factories, to a junction with another roadway, around which Kappa Subsector is being built. The first roadway continues to a transtube station.

There appear to be three bunkers, designated C-1, C-2 and C-3. However, when he presses for more information, the terminal demands a "need to know".

There appear to be cloning stations in every subsector, typically three or more per subsector.³⁴¹

He does another search, this time for information about forkbots. He discovers that they are wheeled bots designed to carry pallets of goods and/or specialised transport containers, and are usually used to assist with the loading and unloading of truckbots when they reach warehouses or other storage facilities. There have been a number of models over the yearcycles. Most have limited range due to the chemical battery packs they use. Though capable of operating without human attendance, CPU Mandate 212/8448(c) requires that there be at least one human operator per five forkbots. Frequently, you will find that every forkbot has an operator. Some models of forkbot resent this.

Strange as it may seem, theyre have been a large number of forkbot-related incidents over the yearcycles. Much of the information is unavailable at Clearance RED, but it can be revealed that recently, one forkbot, designation C-3/K41[CENSORED] was the subject of an unprovoked attack by a citizen (who is now in custody), causing [REDACTED] damage to the bot. It is being repaired in situ. A brief video clip is available, of a news team interviewing the bot. From the notice on a displayed clearance stripe, the incident happened on Q Level, Epsilon Subsector.

Corridor (J Sublevel)

Mango-R keeps watching. Slowly, he reaches for his slugthrower. A communist sees him. "Comrade, what are you doing with that?"

L4-O remains as vacant as before.

Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R accepts the jumpsuit, while noting, "The computerists use these to denote clones on punishment duty, serving as reactor shielding above us. But that won't happen to us."

He then hold up his handcuffed wrist. "I do have a small problem, though. Can someone do something about this?"

A communist sighs. Pointing at L4-O, he says, "You, do something about it."

written by Jam on Mar 13, 2011 18:56

"Computer-loyal? Succeeded in rebooting the compnode? Well, I guess that's what it must have looked like to anyone that wasn't informed of the plan..."

³⁴¹ GLIGAR: (OOC: I'll post a graphical representation of all this later.)

I poke a bit at the ex-Director's arm, trying to see if it's still slimy. Then I look at the INFRARED jumpsuit.

"Well, I guess it's better than nothing..."

I walk forward so the ex-Director can reach the jumpsuit without having to strain against the handcuffs.

"It was rather difficult to escape from IntSec once the Director had recloned. I had to handcuff myself to him and make it look like an accident, and even then, those pig-dog IntSec clones wanted to take both of us to be interrogated! I just barely convinced them to let us off with only locator tags..."

I motion to the locator tags around our ankles.

"The tags shouldn't be too problematic, IntSec is expecting us to be in the reactor. They think we're defending it, and by the time they realize we're no longer loyal to the Computer, it'll be too late.. Works out nicely, doesn't it, comrade?"

written by Speeder on Mar 13, 2011 19:27

I grin.

"Hey Massacrebot, record this, if possible to record past visual data, save what you can, from up to the arrival on this level too. Later, we can use this video to show our great techniques to friend computer, and I think he will be happy with all of us, including you."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 13, 2011 20:01

"I will do as you command."

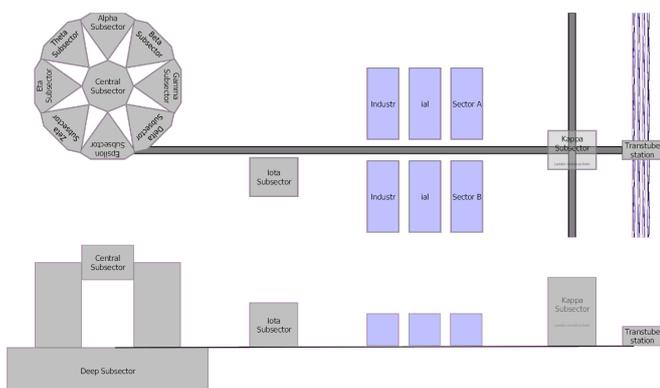

I stretch out my arms and march my way over to the Director, with nothing but a creepy, vacant stare on my face. I attempt to position myself near or next to one of the commies next to the Director.

Upon reaching the group, I turn abruptly towards the Director, lean over...

...and stare at the handcuffs.

"I will do as you command."³⁴² ³⁴³

"Hmm, C-3/K41..

that's at least a partial match... Might as well find out further details about this incident, figure out more about Forkbots myself, and maybe even ask people about the Forkbot I am looking for. Looks like C-3 in the Forkbot serial number might even refer to bunker C-3..."

I head off back towards Epsilon subsector, Q level being my target.

Jam-O tells the communists that there was a part of the plan they didn't know before checking to see whether Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R is still slimy. It seems that he is, but the tank goo is starting to dry out.

He looks at the jumpsuit briefly before moving to let the ex-Director get to it. The ex-Director starts to put it on as best he can.

Meanwhile, Jam-O tells the communists about the IntSec incident, and their locator tags. They grin. "It does seem rather convenient."

Inside Massacebot, Speed-T continues talking to the bot, telling it to turn on all sensors and start recording. Massacrebot lets out a quiet little "yip!" in answer. The communists don't notice.

L4-O decides to act a bit like a zombie. He stiffly walks towards the ex-Director, positioning himself such that he's between the ex-Director and another communist, and stares blankly at the handcuffs. "What are you waiting for?" Foursixoneixfiveninenine-R asks? "Remove the handcuffs."

AlphaNet cafe

Leeroy-O makes a few notes, then decides to head over to the forkbot incident in Epsilon Subsector.

Internal Security station (Iota subsector)

The IntSec clones barely notice him, and just wave him through.

Roadway

Leeroy-O finds himself on the roadway again, heading back towards the sector's main domescraper. He realises that it's a fair distance away.

written by Speeder on Mar 14, 2011 03:07

I keep watching, maybe seeing what sensors data pickup.

Maybe some signal that without the hats, the commies starts to be uncommie.

I attempt to unlock the handcuffs with my torch.

I lean up after failing with that and say,

Speed-Y keeps an eye on Massacrebot's sensors.

According to acoustic sensors, there are more communists in rooms down the corridor.

However, the one de-hatted communist remains communist.

L4-O tries to use his torch on the handcuffs. Not surprisingly, it has no effect. (Well, at least it wasn't a towel.) He leans up and complains. The de-hatted communists just sighs and says, "Then get the tool you need!"

Roadway

Leeroy-O sings as he walks. All in all, it's a nice stroll this time, without IntSec forcing him to go anywhere.

In time, he comes to the end of the roadway. He has two choices: either the loading dock, or the corridor to its left.

written by Speeder on Mar 14, 2011 17:19

Now kinda impatiently tries to keep his patience waiting for disclosure of informational information that actually informs.

written by Megagun on Mar 14, 2011 17:43

I decide to explore the loading docks, before heading off to the corridor to the left of it. Perhaps there are some forkbots roaming around.

I take out my laser pistol with my free hand slowly.

If not interrupted, I slowly aim it at the handcuffs.

"Please remain still and hold the handcuffs sufficiently far apart."

written by Jam on Mar 14, 2011 22:54

I shrug, and hold my handcuffed arm out, pulling the handcuff away from Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R's handcuff at the same time. I move the chain linking the cuffs so that it's as close to the FUN lasery part of L4-O's laser pistol as possible.

"Don't you dare miss, comrade, or you might find the next laser shot out of that barrel will be through your face..."

Corridor (J Sublevel)

Speed-Y just waits. It's as if he's waiting for some information.

Mango-R also waits.

L4-O gets another unlocking tool: a laser pistol. He sloooowly aims it at the handcuff's chain.

Jam-O holds up his arm and cautions him to do this right.

The ex-Director doesn't like it. "Is that all you can find? Oh well, don't miss. If you do, it'll be bad for you." He also holds up his arm.

Before L4-O can fire, another communist approaches the group. "Comrades," he says, "I have intercepted communications, apparently from an agent, concerning... the Tsar Nuclear Bomb. Apparently, it's been installed into a C-3/K418-series forkbot. The agent also wants to contact Dire - oh, there you are, comrade Director... it looks like you have two messages."

The ex-Director replies, "Okay, let me finish here and I'll check those messages. In the meantime, run a search on that forkbot."

"Understood, comrade." The communist heads back down the corridor.

Seeing the puzzled looks of some of the team, the de-hatted communist explains, "What, didn't you know? Oh well, I suppose it's to be understood... after all, you wouldn't know if you weren't fully briefed on the plan. Since Plan A has failed, we've presented a demand to this sector's High Programmer. If it is not met, we're blowing the sector to bits."

Loading Dock

Leeroy-O looks round the dock. He sees a few pallets, a portable cloning tank, and a forkbot charging station. As well as a clone waving a towel around.

He realises that he passed through this room when IntSec took him to Iota Subsector.

There is a distinct lack of forkbots, but on further inspection, a door to the north has been removed, as has part of the wall, leaving a forkbot-sized hole.

written by Speeder on Mar 15, 2011 01:50

I turn on the microphone, and try to speak with a commie accent, and a different voice.

"Exkuzeme Kommrades, but vi must extretch my legs."

I turn the opening of the massacrebot away from commies, and ask it to open, so I can use the PDC.

written by Jam on Mar 15, 2011 12:06

I talk to the de-hatted communist, while still keeping my handcuffed hand still in case L4-O decides to fire.

"So you're going to bring the Tsar Nuclear Bomb to the reactor and blow it up there? Or how does the reactor fit into this whole plan? And what are we demanding?"

written by 4616599 on Mar 15, 2011 13:55

I look puzzled.

"Tsar Nuke? Never heard of that. You sure have got good agents. Guess I'm behind times. But what a glorious plan for the day!"

I then watch L4-O carefully.

"You will free yourself. And continue your mission. Good thing we have mutants on our side, I was worried there were some against us..."

Speed-Y makes an excuse about stretching his legs, and opens Massacrebot.

But he has no intention of actually leaving Massacrebot. He simply wants to free his hands so he can use his PDC.

While waiting for L4-O to just get on with it, Jam-O talks to the de-hatted communist. "That's correct, comrade. If the High Programmer does not shut down the reactor and give us the precise location of his mutant prison in the Underplex, we will destroy this sector and gain access to the Underplex through the crater."

Joris-O hasn't heard about the Tsar Nuclear Bomb. But he says he likes the idea. Looking at L4-O, he adds that freedom, and the continuation of his mission, is just around the corner.

L4-O finally gets round to firing...

...and, since the chain is right in front of the barrel, hits, breaking it. But the beam continues on, hitting another communist's fuzzy hat, setting it on fire!

"Hey, what's the big idea?!" the de-hatted communist exclaims, punching L4-O in the face.

"Enough," the ex-Director says firmly. "It's not his fault that his mind has been overwhelmed. He's doing his best. Now, about those messages..."

He heads down the corridor. The other communists join him.

Loading dock

Leeroy-O looks through the forkbots-sized hole, to find an INFRARED corridor. Directly opposite is another door, marked "Dormitory".

Recovery room

A clone wakes up with a start. He can't seem to remember anything except for that fact that he somehow had lunch with The Computer. Wait... what's his name... Cor..Cyro... no wait, Cryo-R! That's it!

There's... something else... oh yes! He has to get to the reactor immediately! It's vitally important that he get there, and not inspect anything on the way down there! He has to do this now!

A synthetic voice behind him says, "Ah, you're awake. Apart from not remembering anything, how do you feel?"

written by Speeder on Mar 15, 2011 17:50

I close Massacrebot again and turn off the microphone.

Then I comment with it.

"Take note, that for future upgrades, you should have a vocal interface to external communication usage, especially, PDC"

Then I turn back to the commies, and watch, like if awaiting orders from ex(??) director.

written by Megagun on Mar 15, 2011 18:30

"Do you think that the ex-Director's being... too much like a Director?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 15, 2011 20:12

I wait until it is safe to speak and the commies are not looking.

I keep my voice low.

"Aaugh. Son of a..."

I rub the area of my face that was punched.

"Why couldn't we just go in guns blazing... it worked before..."

I hear Mango's worries about the Director and reply.

"It is a little worrying. But he is still playing along that I'm under mental domination, so he might still be on our side."

After nursing my face a little more, I return to my zombie-like pose in case the commies look back in this direction.

written by Jam on Mar 16, 2011 00:44

"Mutant prison?"

I hesitate for a second, then follow the Director down the corridor, keeping close by him. I continue talking to the de-hatted communist.

"Ah, that is a very good plan, comrade! However, I can think of a few problems we might have... Assuming the High Programmer doesn't give in to our demands, and we have to detonate the bomb, how will we get to the Underplex through the huge pile of rubble that was once the sector? And even if we can get to the Underplex, how will know where the mutant prison is, without the location being told to us by the High Programmer? We could be searching for months, who knows how big the Underplex is!

Perhaps I could suggest a better alternative, comrades?"

written by Gligar on Mar 16, 2011 02:47

Corridor (J sublevel)

Massacrebot answers Speed-Y with a quiet "yip!"

Mango-R checks his slugthrower. Looks like he has four shots left. He then wonders id the ex-Director is relapsing...

L4-O breaks his ruse to massage his jaw. Ow...

He wonders why they can't just blast through. It worked before, after all.

To Mango-R, he replies that though he is worried, the ex-Director does seem to be playing along with L4-O's ruse. That probably counts.

After massaging his jaw a bit more, he goes back to his ruse.

Jam-O notices something: they mentioned a mutant prison...

He heads down the corridor, eventually finding himself in a control room, where the ex-Director is reading something at a Computer terminal.

Other communists are manning other stations that apparently have something to do with operating the reactor.

Jam-O approaches the de-hatted communist and speaks to him.

"I doubt that your suggestion would be accepted," says the communist, "but let's hear it anyway."

Dormitory 3

Leeroy-O enters the dormitory, to find perhaps twenty INFRARED citizens asleep, out of the forty that the dormitory could support.

In the eastern wall, there is an exit.

written by Speeder on Mar 16, 2011 03:37

I trundle over to the commies, and read the terminals from my vantage point.

If (and only if) someone asks what I am doing near them:

"Kommrade, why else the glorious Direktor would liberate that bot? It is vor his protektion of course! If he is killed again, there would be slowness in the plans for the glorious revolution!"

written by Megagun on Mar 16, 2011 08:20

"How... boring."

I head back to the loading docks. Looks like I took a wrong turn anyways and should've moved towards the corridor rather than the loading dock.

I stick out my arms and shuffle behind Speed and presumably others.

"I will do as you command. If what you have me do is blow you all up!"

"Okay, right now, the High Programmer thinks that Troubleshooting team is still loyal to the Computer. How about we use that to our advantage? The High Programmer trusts us. If we can get close enough to the UV that our psychic mutant can get inside his head, we might be able to take the information we need by force. Then we can force him to shut down the reactor."

I suddenly wonder why I'm planning strategies for the communists... Surely that is very treasonous...

written by Gligar on Mar 16, 2011 18:21

Reactor control room

Massacrebot enters. From inside, Speed-Y looks at the terminals. He notes that the control terminals are putting out all sorts of readouts he can't understand, except for one that says "COMPUTER LINK DOWN".

The ex-Director is reading some messages on his terminal. Speed-Y can make out part of one message: "...ode is still 'ONE', D, 'TEN', T, and the device still operates according to the spe..." and part of another: "BLOW UP IMMEDIATELY". (It doesn't help that the terminal he's using really should have been replaced yearcycles ago, and doesn't sync up to Massacebot's cameras. If it was a new terminal, he'd probably be able to read more.)

A communist sees the big bot in the control room, and asks why it's there. Speed-Y, of course, replies that he's protecting the Director.

L4-O shuffles in behind the bot, promptly bumping into another communist. "Hey! Watch where you're going!"

Jam-O outlines his idea, namely to get close to the High Programmer and use the team's mutant to get the information from his mind. And also to shut things down.

He stops. Why is he helping the Communists again? Isn't that big-time treason?

But it doesn't matter. The de-hatted communist says, "That's a good idea, comrade, but it won't work. We don't even know where the High Programmer is, and besides, he most likely has mutants working for him. Any attack would most likely get reflected back. No, we have to do it this way."

Lift hall (A Level)

After realising that he went the wrong way, Leeroy-O backtracks and takes the other path from the roadway. He ends up at this lift hall. There are some small holes in the synthcrete wall here, as if something heavy slammed into it, as well as plenty of blood that still hasn't been cleaned up. A scrubot is attempting to do so but seems to have run out of cleaning solution.

Also present are three lifts.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 16, 2011 18:59

I quickly walk in some direction, not wanting to be left behind. I try to only examine major things, like where the walls are, so I don't end up running into them.

written by Megagun on Mar 16, 2011 20:30

"How... much less boring."

I try to evade the blood on the floor whilst summoning an elevator (or entering it if it's already here; Q level is where I want to go).

To the scrubot:

"Looks like you're out of cleaning agent, buddy. Need some help?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 16, 2011 20:40

"Apologies from this one." I say, just barely resisting the urge to grit my teeth.

I shuffle my way around the communist, and park myself in view of the operation. I slowly and jerkily look about the room from my position.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 16, 2011 23:07

"I feel GRRRRR-GOOD!"

"The reactor! I must go there! It is very important that I do!"

"Computer! What's the fastest route to the reactor from my present location?"

I open the door to the recovery room and step outside, looking both ways while being careful to ignore everything that I see.

written by Jam on Mar 17, 2011 00:59

"Hmm... I guess you're right. Oh well..."

I walk around a bit, looking at the terminals.

"I assume we have someclone here who actually knows how to work the reactor? We wouldn't want it exploding before we were ready..."

I walk over to the Director, curious what he is reading.

written by Gligar on Mar 17, 2011 01:38

Corridor (J Sublevel)

Mango-R heads for the control room, taking care not to bump into a wall or a door. He makes it all the way to the control room before bumping into L4-O, who is apologising for bumping into some communist.

Reactor control room

He doesn't seem to notice, though. He shuffles round to a free space and starts jerkily looking around.

Jam-O wonders if anyone among the communists knows how to run a reactor. "I am an expert at reactors!" one exclaims.

Jam-O then heads over to the ex-Director's terminal. But it looks like he's done, as the terminal is blank.

Lift hall (A level)

Leeroy-O hits a call button. As he waits for the lift, he talks to the scrubot. "My operator should be here any minute cycle. It would be most satisfactory if he were to have a refill tank," the scrubot replies.

Eventually, the lift arrives.

Corridor (H Level)

Cryo-R runs into the corridor, despite a docbot behind him saying, "You have not signed your release forms, citizen!"

He notices (but immediately ignores the fact) that the corridor is RED Clearance, and seems to lead to corridors at either end.

He has no idea where to go, except for "to the reactor". He asks our mutual friend, who replies, "The reactor is directly below you, citizen. I recommend heading straight down."

written by Speeder on Mar 17, 2011 02:08

After some time pondering, I ask.

"Kommrade Director, how much Kommrades ve have on this level? I suspect ve might need to make a stand."

written by Megagun on Mar 17, 2011 07:56

I push the shiny "Q Level" button.

Noticing that there is a distinct lack of elevator music, I improvise and start humming a little song which sounds like generic elevator music.

written by Jam on Mar 17, 2011 12:18

I look at the communist that claimed to be a reactor expert.

"Good! Our mission is so important, I would expect nothing less than an expert!"

I suddenly realize something, and ask the communists a question.

"Wait, aren't we supposed to be liberating the INFRARED masses?³⁴⁴ And wouldn't blowing up the sector achieve the exact opposite? Instead of freeing them, we would be killing them! Why would anyone trust us after we killed one of their previous clones?! They'd probably hate us, and the whole idea of communism, after that! All that, just so we can go free a few mutants? What's so interesting about the mutants anyway, that we'd risk an entire sector of clones all hating communism?"³⁴⁵

written by Lightning4 on Mar 17, 2011 13:04

I decide to try my luck at de-hatting another commie.

"Objective acquired."

I shuffle over to the nearest hatted commie that is relatively alone.

"Attention. My controller informs me that your hat is malfunctioning. May I see it?"

My hands remain full with my laser pistol and torch, but I hold my arms in a position to receive an object.

written by 4616599 on Mar 17, 2011 15:34

Remaining outside the control room, I glance around the sublevel for anything interesting.³⁴⁶

Reactor control room

"How many? About as many as are left... I have no real idea," replies the ex-Director. "Does anyone else know for certain?"

Other communists discuss, coming up with the number 75.

Jam-O realises something. Wouldn't destroying the sector go against the communist's goals? After all, the sector's residents, on recloning and being told that the sector was destroyed by communists, are going to hate communists even more, right? All for a few mutants? What's so important about them?

"Do you know what those mutants can do? Once we have them, it won't matter that clones hate us. We could broadcast out messages directly into their minds, and soon, they would see the error of hating us!"³⁴⁷

³⁴⁴ JAM: (OOC: If loyal citizens like us don't know about that objective of the communists, just ignore this part of the post)

³⁴⁵ MEGAGUN: (OOC: What's this Jam said about an objective of the communists? Also, how would anyone know that the commies killed their previous clone? Does Jam not know that regular citizens cannot remember how their previous clone died? Ah, Jam must have some kind of mutation that allows him to fully remember how a previous clone died. This means he's a Communist Mutant Traitor! ZAP ZAP)

³⁴⁶ JAM: (OOC: Megagun - They would hear on the news that the sector they were in exploded, and who else but the communists would do such a crazy thing! 😊)

³⁴⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: Generally true, Mega... but let's say you awake in a cloning tank. You last memory is of shooting at communists. What would your reaction be? Even though you don't remember the sixteen slugthrower shots, it doesn't take a genius to realise that perhaps they terminated you.)

L4-O ignores this and tries to de-hat another communist. "No comrade, we must keep these hats on at all times."

Corridor (J Sublevel)

Joris-O remains outside the control room. He glances around what he can see of the sublevel, and notices what seems to be a supply closet.

A lift

Leeroy-O presses the nice shiny Q button.

Initially, as the lift rises, everything is quiet. As such, he starts singing jingles.

Almost as soon as he starts singing, what should come over the speakers but the very same jingle he's singing?

written by Speeder on Mar 17, 2011 19:05

I start to fake a malfunction, and end "accidentally" smashing some commies by accident.

If you get what I mean by accidental accident.

written by Jam on Mar 17, 2011 20:15

"Wow... Those mutants must be really powerful..."

I watch as Massacrebot apparently decides to smash up a few communists.

"What are you doing, comrade?!"

I think for a few seconds.

"Ah, one of the motors in the Armourbot must be malfunctioning! Stay back, comrades!"

written by Megagun on Mar 17, 2011 21:04

I suddenly interrupt my song..

"Ah, you must be one of those newfangled 'genuine clone personality-clone' elevators, that attempts to act in a manner much like the occupants of said elevator... Quite a neat trick you did there, finding the tune of the song I was humming and singing along with it..."

Now; a challenge: tell me a joke that I will find funny, mate!"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 17, 2011 23:37

"Very well. My controller just believes that a malfunctioning hat may impede your mission. See me if you wish for me to check your hat."

I shuffle away, attempting to bump into another commie "accidentally."

"Apologies. This clone is not easy to control..."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 18, 2011 00:07

I respond to the Doctor, who I inadvertently payed some degree of attention to. Excuse me sir, I'll need to borrow that saw of yours. The computer requested me to head 'straight down' to the reactor, which is directly below us, but this hallway only goes left and right. It is therefore the computer's request that this hallway be extended to allow for vertical transit!

written by Gligar on Mar 18, 2011 02:23 A lift

Reactor control room

Massacrebot apparently causes this exact moment to malfunction... no wait, it's Speed-Y faking a malfunction. Several communists are accidentally on purpose knocked to the floor with, variously, cuts, bruises, and maybe a broken bone. The others in the room seem to materialise slugthrowers into their hands. "Just what do you think you are doing!" screams the Director.

Jam-O seems impressed at the power of the mutants housed in the prison.

Then he notices the "malfunction" and suggests that this is what's happening.

L4-O explains to the communist that he was just acting on behalf of his controller, before shuffling away, and accidentally on purpose bumping into another communist. This communist stumbles and drops his slugthrower.

A lift

The lift continues playing advertising jingles and shows no sign of having heard Leeroy-O as it continues to descend.

Corridor (H Level)

The dobcot backs away slightly. "Sorry citizen, this chainsaw is not equipped to cut through synthcrete. Besides, I am sure that The Computer did not literally mean 'cut down all the way to the reactor'. No, it said to 'head straight down'. Note also that it did not say where from. May I suggest the lift at the end of this corridor?" It gestures with its chainsaw.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 18, 2011 14:01

"Let this clone help you with that."

I go for the slugthrower and "accidentally" knock the commie's hat off in the process. Or try to anyway.

Then I "accidentally" kick the slugthrower away further.

written by Gligar on Mar 18, 2011 18:09

Reactor control room

L4-O jerkily heads for the slugthrower, apparently to give it back. However, he ends up "accidentally" knocking the communist to the floor, causing his hat to fall off his head.

L4-O then trips over the hat, knocking the slugthrower away.

His reward is to have several other slugthrowers pointed at him, one about 10cm away from his head. "Controller! If you can hear me, it would appear that your control over this clone is fading. I suggest termination. He is clearly still loyal to the computerists", the closest snarls.

"As to the rest of the team, I don't know. I suggest, comrades, that they not be trusted with high-level information."

The lift continues to descend.

Corridor (H Level)

Seeing that Cryo-R doesn't respond, the docbot proceeds to wave forms in his face. "You still need to sign thses, citizen."

written by Megagun on Mar 18, 2011 20:28

I grumble..

"Bah. You are no fun... Are we nearly there yet?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 18, 2011 21:42

"Negative, do not worry. He has been resisting hard but this is the most he is capable of. He can't use lethal force."

I attempt to get up and brush myself off.

"We can't risk terminating him and having him come back with reinforcements."

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 18, 2011 22:10

I walk over to where the dropped slugthrower is, and attempt to pick it up. I check the amount of shots remaining inside.

"You know, if you're not going to trust this team, the chance of success is significantly decreased."

written by Speeder on Mar 18, 2011 23:01

I just act like if the actuators are better now.

"Kommrades, everything is under control, sorry!"

written by Jam on Mar 18, 2011 23:31³⁴⁸

I aim my laser pistol at L4-O. Then, I listen to the communist talking. Outraged, I turn my head towards the clone that said we can't be trusted.

"Are you suggesting that I can't be trusted, comrade? Tell me, who's the clone that waited at the cloning station for the Director, even when IntSec arrived? Who's the clone that handcuffed himself to the Director and risked an IntSec interrogation to insure his safety?! And who's the clone that tricked IntSec and the Computer to let us bring the Director straight to the reactor?! I risked a lot to get the Director back to safety, and so far I haven't even gotten so much as a thank you!"

I look around at each of the communists.

"I didn't see any of you waiting at the cloning station to assist me! I stood there, thinking 'Where are my comrades? Don't they still care about the Director? What's taking them so long?' And, even though I waited, guess what happened? NOCLONE CAME! I HAD TO DO EVERYTHING MYSELF, AND I JUST BARELY MADE IT OUT WITH MY LIFE! SO DON'T YOU DARE TRY TO SAY I'M NOT LOYAL, COMRADE!"

³⁴⁸ JAM: (ooc: How can Leeroy's lift be descending from A level to Q level?)

I stop screaming, and take a few secondcycles to calm down a bit. I observe the communists' reaction to my sudden outburst. Then, I continue talking.

"Now, I can understand why you might think the mind-controlled clone can't be trusted with sensitive information, perhaps he should wait in the other room... But me?! Perhaps you are the one who can't be trusted, comrade..."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 19, 2011 00:56³⁴⁹

"End of the corridor, you say? I suppose that might have to do if that saw is synthcrete incompatible..."

While discussing this with the Doctor, I quickly fill out the necessary release forms, careful not to inspect them too carefully."

written by Gligar on Mar 19, 2011 03:41³⁵⁰

A lift

The lift continues to ascend. For a moment, though, it almost seems like it's descending. I guess the lift has a sense of humour after all. "No, citizen."

Reactor control room

L4-O "relays" a "message from his controller" stating that he can't use lethal force, and that terminating him would just make him call down reinforcements.

Mango-R picks up the slugthrower, and checks it, noting that there are 12 shots remaining. He states that not trusting the team would reduce the chance of the plan succeeding.

Speed-Y decides he;s done enough, and "reports" that everything's okay now.

Jam-O has been waving his laser pistol about, but finally can't keep quiet. To the suspicious communist, he demands to know exactly who it was who collected the Director? Who was it who managed to bring the Director here? That's right, Jam-O! And does he get any thanks for it?

"That was you? My apologies, comrade. But the rest of your team has been... less than co-operative. Right now, I can only be suspicious of them. But now I put it t you. Who do you think was able to take over this entire level, with only the help of five communists? Who was it who disables the Capitalist Computer's control over the reactor? Hmm? I don't see you doing that."

Corridor (H Level)

Cryo-R takes the forms and fills them in. Perhaps the lift is a suitable option after all, especially if that saw can't cut through synthcrete.

There, that's the forms done.

The docbot says, "Thank you, citizen," and returns to the recovery room.

³⁴⁹ CRYOBURNER: (Perhaps it was installed upside-down.)

³⁵⁰ GLIGAR: (OOC: Fnord.)

written by Lightning4 on Mar 19, 2011 03:58

Now that the commies are hopefully less inclined to kill me, I shuffle a short distance away from them.

From this new vantage point I look around the room for anything of note. Computer terminals, vital reactor computers, or something of the sort. If there's nothing useful I just stay quiet.

written by Speeder on Mar 19, 2011 05:02

"Kommrade, if it was you, how you did it? Please, inform us, so that with your great knowledge on our side ve may have more success in the future!"

"To the reactor!"

I take off toward the lift at the end of the corridor, as indicated by the Doctor. Upon reaching the lift, I repeatedly press the call button until it arrives.

Ignoring the fracas in the control room for now, I head for the supply closet, mumbling something about the efficiency of things.

written by Megagun on Mar 19, 2011 12:52

"Well, how about now? Are we almost there yet?"

I start walking around in circles.

written by Jam on Mar 19, 2011 13:41

I look to the communist, impressed.

"Okay, that is pretty impressive... How'd you manage to gain control of the entire level with just five communists to help you? You're right, I didn't do anything like that.³⁵¹

But we should trust the judgement of Comrade Director, shouldn't we? If he thinks that the mind-controlled clone should be here, then there must be a reason... Don't worry, comrade, I'm sure you can trust them."

written by Gligar on Mar 19, 2011 18:18

Reactor control room

Noting that there seems to be less weaponry pointed in his direction, L4-O moves out of the way.

He takes the chance to look round, noting the reactor control terminals, as well as the terminal used by the (ex?) Director. He realises that he can't really understand the readouts on the reactor terminals, except for the one that says "COMPUTER LINK DOWN". There's some text underneath that he can't read from this far away.

As he looks round, he also notices what look like blast shutters, or perhaps radiation shields, in the wall opposite the entrance. A previously-unseen hatch in the middle of the room leads down.

³⁵¹ JAM: (ooc: Except help a team of 7 take back control of an entire sector 😊)

Speed-Y wonders how the communist was able to take over the level with just five communists? "Simple, comrade. But I'm not saying," the communist replies, though he does glance at the shutters/shields.

Jam-O is impressed. It's not like he's done anything like that (unless you count the whole "reboot the compnode" thing). He adds that it should be up to the Director whether they are trusted or not.

Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R answers, "They can stay... as long as they don't push their luck and do anything... regrettable."

As he speaks, Jam-O's communist seems to come down with a slight headache. He rubs his forehead a little, but it doesn't seem to go away.

Supply closet

Joris-O has a look in the closet. He finds some INFRARED jumpsuits and some radiation suits. Also present are a couple of first-aid kits. And, for some reason, a laser pistol.

Corridor (H Level)

Cryo-R starts mashing the lift's call button, failing to notice that the lift is already here with its door open.

A lift

Meanwhile, in another lift, Leeroy-O paces around, bored. Are we there yet?

"No," says the lift.

written by Speeder on Mar 19, 2011 18:23

I notice the commie with headache.

"Hey, I think your team should leave, I guess you my komrades are suffering the effekts of radiation exposure, rest a little, ve vill call you later vhen needed to finish the plan."

written by Megagun on Mar 19, 2011 18:35

"This is really taking quite a bit. I thought that elevators woud be faster by now, and the slower elevators would at least have Integrated Elevator Entertaynement Units installed in them.."

I whip out my PDC and play some game instead. [DFSR] Agent R is quite a good game, even though it's insanely hard when you can only see red enemies, but definitively feel the blasts from the invisible yellows and greens..

written by Lightning4 on Mar 19, 2011 20:49

I approach the "COMPUTER LINK DOWN" terminal a little, in an attempt to make out what text is underneath that.

Well, I try to without getting suspiciously close. Or suspiciously far.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 19, 2011 23:00

"To the reactor!"

I hop into the lift, and press a button to go down. Deciding it best not to waste time examining such trivial things as level indicators or elevator button labels, I just hit the bottommost button, which should most definitely take me 'straight down', assuming this isn't one of those lifts that was installed upside-down.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 20, 2011 00:50

I decide to keep the slugthrower, since it seems that no-one seems to have noticed that it's gone missing.

"Oh, I'm sure that most of us should be able to comply, since a certain someone isn't with us for the time being..."

I examine the positioning of everyone in the room carefully with my eyes.

written by Jam on Mar 20, 2011 01:10

"Comrade? Are you okay? Maybe you should take a break for a bit... We'll guard the control room while you're resting, okay? Don't worry, if the Director trusts us, you can trust us... If any of our comrades here turn computerist and start resisting, I'll put a laser shot through their head!"

I wave my laser pistol around a bit, making sure all of our comrades in the room notice just how dangerous it would be to resist the revolution...

written by Gligar on Mar 20, 2011 02:11

Reactor control room

Speed-Y notices that Jam-O's communist has a headache, and suggests that the radiation might be getting to the communists. Perhaps a break is in order?

"Well, it is still sleepcycle... It's probably just lack of sleep, comrade. And I refuse to take any capitalist pep pill or anything..."

If anything, his headache gets worse. "You know, I can't shake the feeling that I've seen you before somewhere..."

Another communist speaks up. "Comrade Director, you have a message. The Tsar should be in position by the reactor within a few minutecycles."

"Let's see it," the (ex?) Director demands.

"Comrade, are you sure? If we open the shields-"

Jam-O interrupts, and reinforces Speed-Y's suggestion that the communists take a break. He adds that anyone turning against the cause will be shot, and waves his laser around.

While this is happening, L4-O has managed to move to a different position, and is now able to read the text "Reconnect Link Cable #17g".

Mango-R looks around at where everyone is. He notes that each of the five terminals has a communist. L4-O is near the COMPUTER LINK DOWN terminal. Jam-O is near the middle of the room, near his communist. The ex-Director is on the side opposite L4-O.

He also keeps the slugthrower.

A lift

Leeroy-O pulls out his PDC, intending to play a game to pass the time. But it looks like Mega-R was inconsiderate enough to not install any on his PDC. Or maybe it got wiped as per some CPU mandate or other - he's never bothered to keep up with them - and Mega-R never got round to installing them again. But come to think of it, that PowerMark(tm) app is rather large... maybe he needed to clear everything else out to fit it on his PDC.

Another lift

Cryo-R dives in and mashes the button for the lowest level. That's O Sublevel.

The lift seems to hesitate. "You going there? Well, if you say so..."

Eventually, though, it descends.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 20, 2011 02:24

"Curious..." I mutter softly to myself.

I look around the area of the terminal to see if there may indeed be a disconnected cable there.

Or perhaps it might be somewhere else in the room? I look around a bit afterwards anyway so I'm not suspiciously staring at the computer terminal. Instead, my gaze ends at the floor.

written by Speeder on Mar 20, 2011 03:02

I look at the reactor shielding, and then I ask.

"Oh... the Tsar is then in another level? How is the layout of the reaktor, in case we need to defend it?"

I take the safety off my newly acquired slugthrower, and point it in the direction of (ex?)Jam-O.

written by Jam on Mar 20, 2011 16:50

I look at Mango-R, and wave my laser pistol in his general direction.

"Good point, comrade!"

I turn to the communist with the headache...

"Comrade?! You don't look well at all! I really think you should get some rest..."

I attempt to lead the communist out of the room, or at least somewhere to sit down.

written by Gligar on Mar 20, 2011 17:52

Reactor control room

L4-O looks near the terminal, looking for this Link Cable #17g. But he can't see a loose cable anywhere near there.

Speed-Y asks about the layout of the reactor. He is told that the reactor itself is below, with the shielding above. The generating equipment, he thinks, should be on this level.

Meanwhile, L4-O is still looking for Link Cable #17g. Although he doesn't find it, he does find a socket intended for a patch cable. There isn't one plugged in.

Mango-R points his slugthrower at Jam-O. He claims he'll do the same thing for Jam-O if he turns. But something about his tone indicates that he thinks something is already wrong with Jam-O...

Jam-O returns the gesture with his laser pistol, before turning his attention to the communist with a headache. It seems to be getting worse... Other communists now notice, and show concern.

None of them seem to react when Jam-O leads him out of the room, into the corridor.

Corridor (J Sublevel)

Lucas-R reacts when the two pass through, though. He points his laser pistol at the pair, before realising it's Jam-O.

A lift

The lift answers, "I am just passing O Level, citizen. I regret that I cannot travel any faster."

A long moment passes, before the lift's doors open. "Q Level, citizen. Have a nice morningcycle."

Looking out of the lift reveals that the lift hall is YELLOW.

Another lift

"There has been a fair amount of activity," the lift replies. "But few go as far down as O Sublevel. In fact, you are the first this yearcycle to go there."

The lift continues to descend. The level indicator shows that the lift is passing A Level.

I look towards Lucas-R.

"Ah! Comrade Lukas? Don't be so jumpy! You'd think you were some trigger-happy Troubleshooter the way you reacted! Just guard the lift, okay? Go press the button, maybe you'll get lucky and find a computerist to shoot..."

I walk the communist further down the corridor (if possible). Then I turn back as I hear Mango-R following us... I speak to him.

"Comrade? I think you should wait back in the control room... Don't worry, I'll make sure to take care of our comrade here... You go back and help Comrade Director... I insist..."

I wave my laser pistol in his direction, hopefully sending a clear message that that wasn't a request, but an order, and that he probably wouldn't like what might happen if he doesn't follow that order...

Then I turn, and continue leading the communist down the corridor, hopefully into a room with some comfortable furniture, and perhaps a few beds, though any room will do...

written by Gligar on Mar 21, 2011 02:50

Corridor (J Sublevel)

Mango-R follows after Jam-O and his communist. He notices Jam-O telling Lucas-R to go and guard the lift, perhaps to press the call button while he's at it, maybe he'll find something to shoot.

Jam-O then turns and notices Mango-R standing there, and... "suggests" that he return to the control room, using his laser pistol to reinforce his words.

He then looks at some doors, looking for a break room or a dormitory or something. The first he tries seems to lead to another corridor. The second does lead to a break room, with facilities for making Coffeelyke and TeaSir. Oddly, not from vendobots, but from actual packets of powdered beverage. Just add water! And yes, there's water available.

Back in the corridor, Lucas-R has headed back to the lift. Looks like he's pressed the call button as well. It can't hurt...

A lift

Leeroy-O seems to have a small problem. He asks the lift about clearances, and forkbots, and such. "Hmmm... a lot of places on this level are YELLOW", the lift replies. "If you can find a way there, there's a distribution warehouse. It is YELLOW, and has a cargo lift. I understand that they were fixing a forkbot there recently," it adds.

Reactor control room

L4-O looks at the (ex?) Director as he looks around. He seems to be watching everything.

Speed-Y wonders if there is any such thing as a radiation suit around? One communist tells him that there are some in a supply closet in the corridor, or at least there were a couple of hourcycles ago.

Another lift

The lift continues to descend.

"Hey Komrade Director, why ve don't assume here for a while, until the Komrades that were already here rest? When ve arrived they were even napping."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 21, 2011 03:37

I shuffle to a corner of the room and try to discreetly take out my PDC. I search it to see if it has any method of communicating with a comunter terminal, or a linkup device or some such thing.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 21, 2011 07:53

I continue following after Jam-O, and ready my slugthrower again, hopefully quiet enough for no one to notice, especially not those of which I'm following. I make sure to be as least exposed as possible if Jam-O should look back again, and/or shoot (because at this stage, something is definitely up with him, and following orders is something I'd rather not do if one has turned into a communist...)

written by Cryoburner on Mar 21, 2011 15:42

"That's great to hear, Lift! You're such a great traveling companion. Without you, I would probably fall down this elevator shaft. While quicker, that would undoubtedly be a less pleasant traveling experience."

written by 4616599 on Mar 21, 2011 16:01

I look around the closet almost disappointed. Ah well. Taking out my pen I discreetly sneak further in, and scrawl big smiley faces on the radiation suits, giving them more-than-mandatory goofy grins. I then crush some of my pep pills (or Vismomorpain if I have them) and sprinkle them around the mouth area of the suits. I then sign off, scrawling 'We were here!', in messy letters on the suit waistline.

That done, I inspect the laser pistol.

written by Megagun on Mar 21, 2011 16:45

"FIXING A FORKBOT recently? Oh... noes!

Goodbye, elevator. I have a sector of Alpha Complex to save! May I ride you safely in the future!"

I run off in a random direction, hoping to find a distribution warehouse or directions to a distribution warehouse.

written by Gligar on Mar 21, 2011 18:14³⁵³

Reactor control room

Speed-Y makes a suggestion: perhaps the communists could take a break? After all, the guards in the corridor were asleep earlier...

"They were asleep? Remind me to reprimand them later. But right now, we need to check the Tsar... anyone want to volunteer?"

"I'll do it," one communist says, and heads down the ladder.

L4-O tries to discreetly move to a corner and use his PDC. Unfortunately, a communist spots him. "A PDC?" he asks, while stifling a yawn. "Why are you using that?"

Break room

Mango-R quietly opens the door and enters. Jam-O doesn't notice him.

Probably because he and the communist have drifted off to sleep.

Another lift

"It would certainly be quicker," the lift says, "but the most likely outcome would be your termination, as your body would probably disintegrate on impact with the floor of the shaft."

From somewhere, there is a groaning sound. The lift shakes a little.

Supply closet

Somewhat disappointed, Joris-O decides to have a little fun. Taking a pen (I didn't even know he had one) he draws a big smiley face on each radiation suit, and spreads some Visomorpain dust in each helmet. Finally, he scrawls a message on each suit.

The laser pistol he subjects to some scrutiny. It's in working order, and has a GREEN barrel with four shots left. It hasn't been used in a while.

Reception (Q Level)

Hearing about the forkbot, Leeroy-O takes off through the YELLOW reception at a dead run, ending up in an equally-YELLOW corridor. There's nobody around at this hourcycle.

A sign on the wall reads WAREHOUSE, with an arrow that makes two right-angles and ends up pointing back the other way.

written by Speeder on Mar 21, 2011 19:14

I look at the communist going down on the ladder.

³⁵³ GLIGAR: (OOC: Take TWO! Somebody over here who will not be mentioned caused the loss of the original post I was planning to make here.)

"Is that safe? I mean, how much radiation are there komrade?"

written by Megagun on Mar 21, 2011 19:27

I follow the arrows leading to the warehouse.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 21, 2011 20:07

I decide to examine the room in a little more detail whilst waiting for the two to wake up, checking if there are actual containers for mixing the contents of packets and water together.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 21, 2011 22:43

"Ah! I was merely checking this Troubleshooter's PDC for anything interesting. They may be a capitalist invention but it doesn't mean we can't use them for good..."

I give the PDC a look over while saying this.

"Alas, nothing. Not even any games. What a poor boring soul."

I resume fiddling with it. Hopefully now without interruption.

written by Jam on Mar 21, 2011 22:52

Ugh... Sleep... It's been so long since I've slept...

...

Wait... Wasn't there something important I had to do?

I attempt to wake up.

"Ugh..."

I look around, and notice the communist seems to have also fallen asleep... I look worried for a few secondcycles, then I suddenly smile and crawl over to him.

Throughout all this, I somehow completely fail to notice Mango-R...

written by Cryoburner on Mar 22, 2011 01:05

"Say, Lift... What do you suppose that groaning sound was? It sounded almost like groaning. And that shake? You're not hungry are you?"

I check to see if I still have any food remaining.

written by Gligar on Mar 22, 2011 02:14

Reactor control room

Speed-Y is concerned about radiation down there. The communist isn't though. "If the Tsar is in the right place, radiation shouldn't be a problem," he calls up the ladder.

L4-O, posing as his "controller" speaking through him, explains that he's checking his PDC for anything useful. "Let me see that," the communist demands, and grabs the PDC for himself.

Corridor Q1

Leeroy-O follows the sign. This involves heading down the corridor, which turns a corner, then another. At the far end, on the left, there is a door. This is the warehouse.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

The warehouse contains a number of storage racks, though they're currently empty.

What's more important, though, is the forkbot in the middle of the room. It appears to be offline. Surrounding it are several dead clones, which appear to have been beaten to death with some blunt instrument... like that spanner there.

A glance at the forkbot reveals a gaping hole about where the power pack would be.

A GREEN clone enters from the other entrance. He notices Leeroy-O. "Hey, citizen! You're not cleared for this area."

Break room

As Mango-R investigates, looking for such things as cups, Jam-O wakes up and moves closer to the communist. He starts saying something. "...remember..."

But at this point, Mango-R accidentally breaks a cup, which falls to the floor. This causes the communist to wake up. "Aaargh! My head... would you stop that?"

Another lift

"I do not know, citizen. Perhaps it comes from elsewhere in the subsector."

Cryo-R checks his equipment and finds a packet of Soylent RED.

written by Speeder on Mar 22, 2011 02:47

Suddenly I get fearful, noticing that maybe the bomb is in place and everyone will go boom.

I then wait that commie to leave, then grab the nearest commie and smash him to pieces, while trying to shoot whatever other commie I can.

"Kommrades, it is a accident! I am sure of it!"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 22, 2011 02:56

"Hey, I wanted to see that first..."

I sigh.

I wait somewhat impatiently for him to finish inspecting it.

written by Megagun on Mar 22, 2011 10:04

"As you might be aware, a Nuclear Weapons Device, designated 'Tsar', has been stolen recently, presumably by Communist Mutant Traitors.

I was part of the Team Ivy sent out to recover said Nuclear Weapons Device. Supposedly, this was some 'Code 7' mission, whatever that means.

Unfortunately, it would appear that something went wrong, and we all perished. Now, for some strange reason, I was placed inside the body of another clone, this 'Mega-R' guy. My name ain't Mega-R! It's Leeroy-O!

Either way, I have found out that said Nuclear Weapons Device was embedded inside a Forkbot, of which I have a partial serial number ID. Despite the fact that the rest of Team Ivy is gone, I have took it upon myself to find the Nuclear Weapons Device, disarm it, and save the entirety of JHT sector from horribility!

Now, as far as my clearance level goes: if I obey my clearance level, JHT sector would go up in flames. Thus, logically, one can conclude that obeying my clearance level equals the destruction of JHT sector, which would be obvious treason! As such, disobeying my clearance level might seem treasonous, but it is actually not treasonous at all! I am risking my own life for the glory of Alpha Complex and Friend Computer!

Now. Let me examine that forkbot - or what's left of it."

I examine the forkbot, and attempt to figure out what its serial number is.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 22, 2011 10:38

"Oops. Didn't mean to do that," I say as quietly as possible.

I stop trying to investigate the cups, and watch carefully at Jam-O's actions. I direct the next question at him (in a quiet voice).

"Did you say something that has relevance to this mission?"

Reactor control room

Speed-Y tries to fake another malfunction, intending to "accidentally" kill one or more of the communists. Unfortunately, Massacrebot seems to seize up as he starts it. A message appears on the HUD: SYS ERROR #087: PLEASE REBOOT

L4-O waits for his PDC back, but the communist seems to be in no hurry to return it.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Leeroy-O explains his situation to the GREEN, before inspecting the forkbot. As mentioned, it's power pack has been removed. The bulkhead remains, though it was dismantled at some point, and is now held on by copious amounts of duct tape. One side of the duct tape has been cut.

Another look reveals the forkbot's serial number: C-3/K418-69g-17(c)48.

The GREEN waits for him to finish. "Are you satisfied? Good. I'm going to have to fine you for entering this area. Let's see your ME card, please."

Break room

Mango-R stops looking at the cups, and looks at Jam-O instead. He wants to know what Jam-O said.

The communist demands, "What are you saying? Aaargh, why is it so hard to think?!"

Another lift

"I thank you, citizen, but I do not need to eat."

The lift continues to descend. All the while, Cryo-R looks for somewhere to put his Soylent RED, and can't find any. He does see that the J Sublevel button's light has lit, though.

Supply closet

Joris-O takes the laser pistol.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 22, 2011 19:06

I sigh and just slip in behind the commie and attempt to peer over his shoulder, seeing what he's doing with my PDC. Maybe he's finding stuff I wasn't even able to...

written by Speeder on Mar 22, 2011 19:21

I would facepalm if I could.

"Ok, how I reboot this thing without my hands? I hope the voice command system is working"

I ask it to reboot.

If it refuse to reboot, I attempt to search for controls inside the bot, trying to figure what controls it has, and if any of them is mechanical, among other things.

written by Megagun on Mar 22, 2011 19:33

"Blast! Stay back! This forkbot is potentially a forkbot carrying a Nuclear Weapons Device, type 'Tsar!' The serial ID matches with the one my teammate uncovered! Try not to move or use active electronic devices too much; the dynamic quantum-potential flux that these devices inhibit might cause the Nuclear Weapons Device to go off, which would be very bad indeed!"

I slowly place my PDC on the floor.

"Here's my ME card. Unfortunately, I don't have many credits on it, but I don't doubt that it'll be overflowing with credits once I've succeeded in my mission!"

I throw my ME card towards the GREEN.

"Now, I can't see any evidence of a Nuclear Weapons Device. I think we need to power this Forkbot back up, and have it perform a diagnostic self-test. The self-test should detect any modifications to the Forkbot internals. If there's a Nuclear Weapons Device in this cute little guy, the diagnostic self-test will find it!"

I begin looking around for any power packs or stuff I can remove a power pack from.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 22, 2011 19:52

I respond to the communist, "What I am saying is that you are really looking a bit off, so you should get back to sleep. If you are not in the best condition to do anything, it may ruin the mission... for either side."

With Jam-O not responding, I return to the cups, and try and attempt to make some TeaSir, by mixing the packets with the water in a cup. I look at it for a while.

"What? Comrade, didn't I tell you to go help the Director? Why are you making some TeaSir at a time like this? I was trying to make sure our comrade was comfortable, and you woke him up!"

I turn to the communist, and apologize to him...

"Sorry comrade... Go back to sleep... We'll come get you if anything important happens..."

I look at the TeaSir for a bit, and suddenly get an idea...

"Well, we can at least make some TeaSir for our comrades..."

I try to recall how many clones are in the control room, and attempt to help Mango-R make the same amount of cups of TeaSir, quietly, so as to not wake up our sleeping comrade...

written by Gligar on Mar 23, 2011 03:21

Reactor control room

L4-O sidles behind the communist with his PDC. The communist seems to be investigating it, seeing what it's able to connect to...

...and doesn't seem to be having any luck with it.

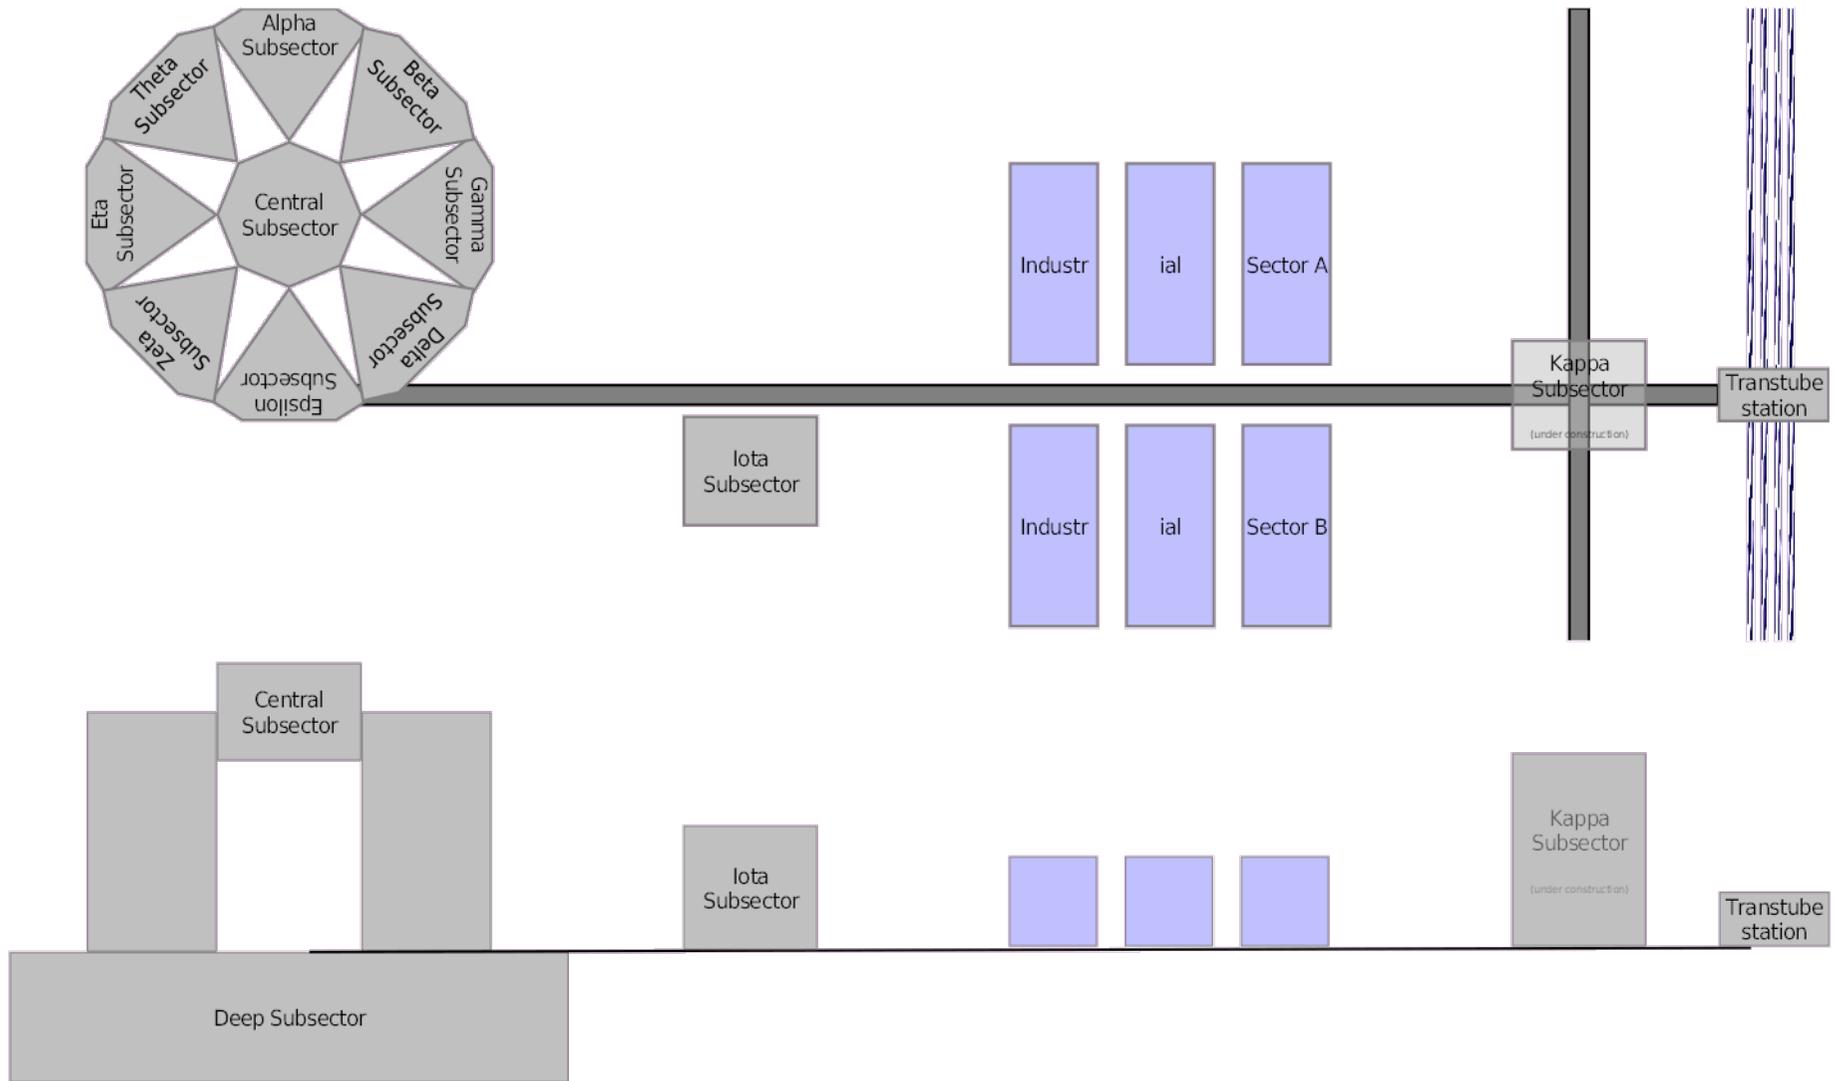

Speed-Y is also having problems. After being unable to facepalm in the frozen Massacrebot, he looks for a way of rebooting it. After a lot of squirming, he's able to get to the point where he can just about feel a switch... but can't quite press it. Maybe if he tries a bit harder...

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Leeroy-O warns the GREEN from coming any closer, citing the Tsar, since the forkbot might be potentially carrying it. He even puts his PDC down in an attempt to not interfere with the Tsar that might be there.

After throwing his MJE card to the GREEN, he suggests powering up the bot, since the bot's self-test should say whether the Tsar is there.

The GREEN catches the card and scans it. "Mega-R-GUN-1... hmmm... my PDC is signalling an alert..."

His jaw suddenly drops. "A MemoMax liveware overwrite?! I've heard of them, but..."

He looks at Leeroy-O. "You'd better follow me."

Break room

Mango-R asserts that the communist is looking "a bit off" and suggests sleep. He turns to the cups, and tries to make TeaSir. It's obvious he's never tried, but he manages to mix one packet of TeaSir with enough hot water to make a deep RED liquid that looks like the stuff you get from vendobots.

Jam-O reprimands Mango-R for making TeaSir at a time like this. After all, he woke up the communist. Though, perhaps TeaSir might not be a bad idea... maybe he could make TeaSir for everyone in the control room... now how many are there? Ten? Let's make that many... okay, open that, mix that...

There's something a little off about his speech, though.

Another lift

"No, citizen. I do not eat."

The list continues to descend. It's down to G Sublevel.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 23, 2011 03:59

I wait until all the cups of TeaSir are finished, then I look around for a serving platter (or two, if the cups don't all fit on one).

I speak to Mango-R.

"Could you go over and quick make sure our comrade is comfortable? Thanks..."

While Mango-R is (hopefully) tending to the (hopefully) sleeping communist, I start to transfer the cups to the serving platter (if I even found one).

Reactor control room

L4-O decides to give some "help" to the communist... perhaps he could disable that protocol... no, that one. "Shut up, I know what I'm doing!"

The PDC suddenly beeps. "No no, why are you doing that? I don't want to send a message to The Computer!"

Speed-Y keeps trying to get that switch. Click! There it goes.

Massacrebot beeps and whirs. Eventually it goes "Yip yip! Yip yip yip yip yip....."

Another lift

Cryo-R reminds the lift that it does, in fact, eat, albeit just electricity. And since that comes from the reactor, and he's a veritable expert, he knows that they eat, as well.

He puts away the Soylent RED.

As he does, the lift shudders and comes to a halt. The lift door opens, revealing Lucas-R looking in at him.

According to the level indicator, the lift has stopped at J Sublevel.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

"You will come with me, citizen. Especially if you want to finish your mission. That is an order. I'm fining you another ten credits for insubordination."

The GREEN enters something into his PDC and returns the ME card.

"Now... follow me and I'll explain."

Leeroy-O is not having any success with looking for that power pack.

Break room

Jam-O finishes up with making his ten cups of TeaSir and looks for a tray. There's one. There's even a nice Power Services logo embossed on it. He starts loading the cups onto it. He also tells Mango-R to tend to the communist.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 23, 2011 20:58

Break room

Mango-R does as ordered. He finds that the communist has gone back to sleep, though he's moved onto one of the rooms leatherlyke couches. Though not designed to be slept on, they're certainly comfortable.

Now ready to go, Jam-O calls for Mango-R to follow him as he heads back to the control room.

Corridor (J sublevel)

He calls everyone in the corridor to follow him as well.

Unfortunately, Lucas-R is struggling with a certain clone in the lift, who is puling at him. "Hey, let go! We're here already!" he says in a loud voice, as Jam-O passes.

The lift doesn't budge. It looks like its safety protocols are working for once.

Reactor control room

L4-O requests his PDC back again. "No. I don't trust you with it... comrade."

The ex-director notices. "I don't like the tone of your voice, comrade. These clones have been a great help to me, snatching me out from right under their Computer's gaze! You should be grateful for what they've done!"

A voice comes from down the ladder, cutting him off. "The Tsar... it's here-"

If you were alert, you'd notice that those are two conditions. Indeed, one of those is a Mandatory Bonus condition; I'll let you figure out which."

I take out my PDC and use PowerMark to create a little form for the GREEN to sign. Who would've thought that PowerMark had an in-built Form Generator?

"If you would be so kind to fill in this form..."

I hand my PDC over to the GREEN.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 24, 2011 08:02

"Oh, Cryo, you made it to the reactor! Good, come with us..."

I walk into the control room, and talk over everyclone as I make an announcement.

"Okay, our comrade is recovering in a break room! And, my comrade here and I made some TeaSir for you all! We thought you all looked a bit tired, maybe some TeaSir will help... Here, let's have a toast.."

I begin passing out cups of TeaSir to all the clones in the room (except Speed-Y, because he doesn't seem in a good position to receive a cup of TeaSir, being trapped in Massacrebot and all...).

Once everyclone has a cup of TeaSir (myself and Mango-R included), I raise my cup into the air.

"To Communism! To the Glorious Revolution! To a successful mission!"

written by Cryoburner on Mar 24, 2011 15:45

"It would be inefficient to have you wait for another lift. You are waiting for a lift, aren't you?"

Reactor control room

Within the rebooting Massacrebot, Speed-Y cringes, half-expecting it to crush him or something. But no. All it does is rear up and extend its manipulators once, as if yawning and stretching.

L4-O once again asks for his PDC. The communist is about to snap at him when L4-O, followed by Mango-R, Kristos-R, John-R, but not Lucas-R or Cryo-R, enters the room. He's carrying a tray of cups. Looks like he's made TeaSir for everyone. I bet Cryo-R would like some TeaSir.³⁵⁴ It's too bad he's still in the lift, heading down to only The Computer knows where.

But back to the control room. Jam-O explains that he made TeaSir since he though everyone looked tired. He starts passing cups around, being careful to avoid the stretching Mssacrebot, and offers a toast.

"To the Revolution!" the communists intone, and drink.

All this caused the communist to drop L4-O's PDC.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

"You are not in any position to make demands, citizen," the GREEN says. "But what I have to say won't take long. Wait... is that PowerMark? I didn't know it had a form generator..."

He studies the form, peering closely at each field, and at the small print. He clearly has dealt with a lot of forms, and isn't about to sign something he hasn't inspected thoroughly. "While I'm looking at this, I suppose I could start explaining. Put simply, you're the subject of a MemoMax Liveware Overwrite event. The results, as you have noticed, have caused you to appear in the body of some other living clone, namely Mega-R-GUN-1. The problem is that by now, his MemoMax chip has already begun making a backup of your mind, overwriting Mega-R's backup. This means that, for all intents and purposes, Mega-R no longer exists, except as a copy of you. And right now, I'm speaking to the copy."

The GREEN looks at Leeroy-O. Or Mega-R. Or whatever.

Another lift

Let'[s give Leeroy-O/Mega-R a chance to think about this, and look in on Cryo-R. He seems to have pulled Lucas-R into the lift with him. Lucas-R is saying, "...explain why I've been pulled away? I was already at the reactor! Make this good, will you?" He seems to be reaching for something in his jumpsuit.

I scoop up my PDC quickly and put it away.

I raise my cup as well and say "Indeed, for the revolution!"

I decide to shuffle towards the ladder and see if I can see the Tsar. Or anything like the Tsar anyway, since I don't know what it actually looks like...

I look at the clones in the room and smile.

"Good tea, eh?"

"Hmm... The reactor, you say? I'll bet there's a reactor around here! Being an expert in reactors, I can sense these things."

I hit the button for the next floor down from where we currently are.

"To the reactor!"

I look at the screen, rather... puzzled.

"Ok... what devices that accept incoming transmissions exist? What ones were active?"

I am just about to drink when I see the reactions of the commies. I get a little suspicious first and instead pretend to drink some.

"That's pretty good stuff. Too bad the sense of taste doesn't transfer well through my control..."

I watch the commies some more and attempt to stifle a reactionary yawn.

I drink the TeaSir in a slow manner, expecting it to taste as I think a good TeaSir should.

"Hmm... It is a pity, that you cannot transfer the taste well."

I continue drinking, and observe the effects that it may have upon myself.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 25, 2011 11:13

"Say, Lift, this doesn't look to be a reactor, now does it?"

From inside the lift, I try to determine the reactivity of the level without examining it too carefully.

"I think we might have skipped a floor or two. On the other hand, that was some impressive travel time! Maybe we should just continue down to where we were going. There might be another reactor there!"

written by Megagun on Mar 25, 2011 13:01

"Alright. Mega-R, following you right away! Mega-R, being a perfectly loyal citizen of Alpha Complex, sure loves obeying orders from higher-ranking citizens! Whoo-hee! Mega-R, singing off!"

I then start singing the theme song of Mandatory Team Troubleshooter. We all know that happy fun citizens love that show, don't we!?

I also follow the GREEN.

Reactor control room

Speed-Y is puzzled. What receivers does Massacrebot have? According to HUD, there's just the standard transceiver that all bots have. It's always active, since the Computer likes to check up on its bots (and the bots themselves tend to chatter).

L4-O notices the communists begin to yawn and decides to only feign drinking the TeaSir. Mango-R does drink it, as do Kristos-R and John-R. It really is good TeaSir.

The communists continue to stifle yawns, with less success.

"So," the (ex?) Director says, "I think it's time to send another..." He suddenly falls asleep mid-sentence. As do the other communists.

And the yawns are still going round.

Another lift

The lift continues descending. Looks like Cryo-R is looking for another reactor.

"And you call yourself a CPU clone?" Lucas-R asks. "Surely someone of your position would know about that CPU mandate that says there's only one reactor per sector? I remember learning about it.

"And that means," he continues, "that we're going away from our mission. It looks like you really don't want to help our mutual friend, after all."

He pulls out a PDC.

The lift continues to descend. It seems to be taking a long time.

Distribution Warehouse (O Level)

Leeroy-O Mega-R follows the GREEN clone. Yes, definitely Mega-R.

Lab Q7

Entering the lab, he can see that there used to be something here. Something large and walker-shaped. But now there's only an empty space surrounded by tools and some bot parts. And a dent in the ceiling.

The lab is also YELLOW.

The GREEN clone sorts through the parts, and come up with a power pack. "This should get the bot's brain running, at least."

written by Speeder on Mar 25, 2011 18:55

After a while, thinking, I ask the bot.

"Can I talk with friend computer using your HUD? If that is possible, please summon him, I need his help to know how to proceed."

I don't notice yet the commie waste... I mean, sleepand outside.

written by Jam on Mar 25, 2011 19:26

I start laughing.

"Ha! It worked! Good thing I had those Sleepy-Sleepy tablets with me... A little powder in each cup should be enough to knock out a clone for a few minutcycles..."

I smash my cup against a wall, and attempt to use one of the broken shards to slit the communists' throats (except for the (ex?) Director).

"Someclone help me kill the commies, okay? Oh, and someclone should probably be ready to catch Mango-R and Kristos-R and John-R, since they could fall asleep any secondcycle now..."

I look at the loyal clones that drank the spiked TeaSir.

"Remember the Troubleshooter motto, guys? Stay alert! Keep your laser handy! Trust no one!"

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 25, 2011 20:25

I don't say anything, trying to stay awake.*

written by Cryoburner on Mar 25, 2011 22:33

"Oh good! You found my PDC! I was wondering where that went."

I proceed to take back my PDC from the kind lift passenger who went out of his way to retrieve it for me.

* MINGAMANGO181 concealed the following in a tag: I try to charge at Jam-O, and hit him with my truncheon. Hard. If I'm too tired to even reach for my truncheon, I just attempt to smash the cup over Jam-O's head.

"As a reward for your honesty, have this packet of Soyilent RED, which I can assure you provides at least 54.3% more mandatory nutrients than the standard PDC."

I hand the kind lift passenger my packet of Soyilent RED.

"I don't know about being CPU, but I am an expert in reactors. Quite simply, reactor complexes cover more than one level. I believe you were at the control level, while the actual reactor would be underneath. Apparently this lift doesn't go to the reactor's lower level though, or perhaps we had already passed it. Or maybe the lift just doesn't like you. The lift most certainly does like me though. In any case, the lift was already on its way down, so we'll have to go there before heading back up."

I take a quick look at the elevator buttons, careful not to examine them too closely, but closely enough to determine whether they skip a level or two in the vicinity the reactor.

"As for the possibility of another reactor, it's certainly possible that some traitorous clones installed a second reactor elsewhere. As an expert in reactors, I can assure you that this is a very real possibility."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 25, 2011 23:37

"I can't help but wonder if that's really the best idea... something really isn't right here..." I worry.

While Jam is attempting to kill commies, I decide to destroy their hats with my laser pistol.

I look at the passed out Director.

"I wonder what he was going to say..."

I shrug and go back to destroying hats. And maybe heads that are attached to hats.

Reactor control room

Speed-Y attempts to communicate with our mutual friend through Massacrebot. And sure enough, the Eye appears in a window on Massacrebot's HUD. "Yes, citizen?"

He's so absorbed in figuring out why Massacrebot crashed that he doesn't notice the goings-on outside it.

Jam-O is laughing. He explains exactly what he did: namely, he spiked the TeaSir with Sleepy-Sleepy. He proceeds to smash his cup, and picks up a large ceramylke shard, one that looks like it has a sharp edge. With it, he attempts to dispatch the communists, asking for help as he does. He's able to kill one easily. He reminds everyone of the Troubleshooter's Motto, especially the "trust no-one" part.

But that's as far as he gets. Mango-R has managed to stave off yawning and bash Jam-O -- an ORANGE citizen, above his clearance (RED) -- over the head, before collapsing. Jam-O, dazed, is knocked to the ground by the force of the blow.³⁵⁵

L4-O is worried. He's not sure that killing the communists is the best idea. He pulls out his laser pistol and starts

³⁵⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: What's wrong with PMS? 😊) shooting at fuzzy hats. He wrecks three before being distracted by Mango-R and Jam-O.

Another lift

Cryo-R notices Lucas-R's PDC, and mistakes it for his own, despite the "This PDC is assigned to LUCAS-R-AHK" text on the screen. Lucas-R, rightly, won't just hand it over. "That's my PDC," he says while fending off Cryo-R, and causing Cryo-R to lose his grip on the PDC. "And I don't want food for it. It's worth more than that."

Cryo-R goes on to explain that, due to his vast knowledge of reactors, he knows that it's quite possible that the communists installed a second one. Lucas-R starts laughing. "Some expert you are. Have you even seen a reactor? I have. They're huge. You can't exactly hide one."

The lift continues to descend. It passed N Sublevel at some point, and is still descending. O Sublevel must be quite far down.

On inspecting the lift panel, it becomes apparent that there are a number of buttons not present, including K, L, and N.

written by Speeder on Mar 26, 2011 14:42

"Friend computer, I am on the reactor as tasked. The communists seemly removed it from your control, and installed a nuke on it.

I guess that my mission is prevent the commies from blowing up the reactor, and making it go online again?

Any further instructions or suggestions?

Also I would like to say, that the communication channel that I am using, made the bot firmware crash, since I don't believe you would crash the bot, someone else is tapping into your communication channels."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 26, 2011 16:16

"Hmm... How about this Multicorder then? A Multicorder seems like a more than adequate trade for a mere PDC!"

I pull out my Multicorder 1, careful not to spill any pieces.

"And there could be a mini-reactor down there! It is possible! It really is! You shouldn't question my superior reactor skills."

written by 4616599 on Mar 26, 2011 16:45

I slip into the room.

"Whoa, comrades! What just happened?"

I pick up another fuzzy hat and prod and tear at it a bit.

written by Jam on Mar 26, 2011 18:15

"Ow! My head! What was that Mang—oh vatcrap, he's already fallen asleep..."

I rub my head a bit...

"Now my head hurts! Mango-R just assaulted a citizen of higher clearance! He must be a traitor, working with the commies! We should interrogate him!"

I take my ceramylke shard, and crawl over to another communist.

"Die!" I say, as I slice at the communist's throat.

After that, I move to another, and attempt to do the same to him...

written by Lightning4 on Mar 26, 2011 19:25

I look puzzled at the altercation.

"Well looks like you're okay... I guess we'll deal with Mango after."

I go back to blasting commies this time, but again get distracted by Joris entering and reaching for a hat.

"No! Don't touch them!"

I attempt to zap the hat before he grabs it.

Reactor control room

Speed-Y brings our mutual friend up to date with the current news, making sure to mention Massacrebot crashing. "That is troubling news, citizen. A nuclear device detonating right next to the reactor would cause the termination of every citizen in the sector, cause over [CENSORED] credits of damage, and [FRAGMENT REDACTED]. These outcomes must be prevented at all costs. The third outcome would most likely cause even more damage. Needless to say, it must not happen.

"As to the bot communication channel being compromised, this is also troubling news, which will require further computation. For now, proceed as per your mission. Thank you for your co-operation."

In the room proper, Jam-O manages to get to his feet, and suggests that Mango-R be interrogated... when he wakes up.

He goes back to slicing communists with his ceramylke shard. He kills another two. Er... any left? Yes, another two. And the one that went down the ladder. And Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R.

Joris-O appears, and takes in the scene. He attempts to pick up a fuzzy hat, for some reason, but ends up being affected by its... properties. L4-O manages to shoot it out of his hands in before anything bad, such as communist indoctrination, can occur. (Considering that all L4-O wants to do right now is shoot, he's getting distracted an awful lot.)

Another lift

Cryo-R ups the ante: what about a Multicorder 1?

"There's a few things wrong with that. One, it's ruined. Two, it's the one you ruined. Three... I'm not giving up my PDC, no matter what." As if to make a point, Lucas-R starts sending a message.

The lift continues to descend. Whatever is in O Sublevel, it's certainly deep down.

written by Speeder on Mar 26, 2011 20:26

Then in a desperate attempt before the connection ends, I say.

"The commie intention is free the mutants in the prison below. I guess that this is the third outcome. I will do my best to prevent it."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 26, 2011 21:17

I try to finally get around to shooting the two remaining commies that Jam hasn't killed.

Assuming my laser pistol holds out for that many more shots...

"We've still got one down the ladder we need to deal with."

written by Megagun on Mar 26, 2011 21:37

I examine the power pack the GREEN has found.

"Yep, that seems like it would do the trick! Let's hurry back and bring that bot back online!"

I start walking back towards the main warehouse.

written by Jam on Mar 26, 2011 22:41

"I'll get him!"

I go to the ladder, and start heading down it.

"Wait for me, comrade!" I shout.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 26, 2011 23:14³⁵⁶

I drift into somewhere that doesn't seem like the reactor control room.

"What is this place?" I ask the empty space.

As if by response, I hear a door open, and then piles after piles of ME cards and PDCs falling into the room. I search continually for the ones that belong to me, which continues for a few minutecycles...

written by Cryoburner on Mar 27, 2011 00:15

"I can assure you that this Multicorder works perfectly fine for many purposes. I can't say I ever remember ruining it either, so you must clearly be mistaken. If you don't want to trade up to a Multicorder though, I guess I can't make you. It's you who will be missing out though!"

I return the Multicorder 1 to one or more of my jumpsuit's utility pockets, once again careful not to lose any parts of it while doing so.

"Say, this lift ride is certainly taking longer than I expected. If you hadn't held us up back there, we'd probably be at our destination already..."

I look around for something to do in the mean time. Noting my fellow lift passenger playing a game or something on his PDC, I decide to help.

³⁵⁶ MINGAMANGO181: (OOO: Because spans are cool. Plus I'm pretty sure that PMing only applies with PP influencing...)

"Wow! Is this one of those text-based role-playing games or something!?"

Reaching over his shoulder, I begin pressing some buttons on the PDC, to see if they might help in any way. I'm careful not to examine them too carefully though.

written by Gligar on Mar 27, 2011 01:57

Reactor control room

Speed-Y does his best to tell The Computer about the communists' goals, but the line has already gone.

Mango-R dreams. In his dream, he searches for his PDC and ME cards, but can't find them.³⁵⁷

L4-O fires his laser pistol two more times, adding two communists to the death toll. He reminds Jam-O about the one down the ladder.

Jam-O is on it. He heads that way.

Reactor gantry

The ladder stops after one level, on a gantry walkway. The air feels prickly here.

The gantry itself forms a cylinder, with the walkway going all the way round. At intervals around the outside of the gantry, lockers have been installed. Looking into the centre, one can see the reactor itself: a giant cylinder, one and a half levels high, glowing a faint BLUE from inside. Visible on the top are several rods, which are currently half-inserted into holes at the top of the reactor.

Semingly duct-taped to the side of the reactor, level with the gantry about a quarter of a turn away, is a smaller cylinder, emblazoned with the radiation symbol, inside a metallic frame. It looks like it doesn't belong there.

Attached to that by a couple of cables is some sort of keypad. the keypad has some sort of digital display which can't be seen properly from this angle.

On the gantry near the device is the communist who came down here. He's collapsed and not moving.

Did I mention that the air is prickly?

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Leeroy-O and the GREEN return with the power pack. It looks like a larger version of a standard emergency power pack.

The GREEN sets about installing the power pack into the forkbot. When he's done, the operator's console beeps, and lights come on.

Another lift

Cryo-R can't remember ruining it. His brainscrub seems to be holding.

He blames Lucas-R for "holding them up" earlier. Of course, the fact that he took Lucas-R from the right place to head towards the wrong place never crosses his mind. He can't be wrong in any way. Naturally. I'm rolling my eyes here.

He notices Lucas-R trying to ignore him by sending a PDC message and decides to "help" by pressing random buttons on Lucas-R's PDC. This gets him shoved against the side of the lift with a laser pistol aimed at his forehead at point-blank range. "That's not a game, it's a Suspicious Activity Report. Your activity, since you have taken me away from my mission. If you touch anything of mine again, you'll regret it."

He keeps the laser pointed at Cryo-R as he presses a couple more buttons on his PDC. "There."

There is a strange noise from outside the left. Which, by the way, is still descending. Wow, that's deep.

written by Speeder on Mar 27, 2011 02:27

Seeing that all communists are kinda... dead. I open the bot and climb out.

"Ok Team Epsilon, time to give more orders. Well done in getting information and killing the commies. That was recorded by the bot, and I will use that to compliment you."

I turn to the bot. "You can stop recording now, we will talk about things I am not sure whoever might see the recordings are cleared to know."

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 27, 2011 07:12

I eventually give up on the search, and turn and walk towards a glowing rectangle, which seems to resemble a computer terminal. As I look at it, I hear a mechanical whirr of a security camera coming from nearby.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 27, 2011 08:18

"That was okay, aside from the parts where I nearly got killed..."

Oh well, all in the line of duty."

I turn to Speed.

"If these orders have something to do with reconnecting the reactor to Friend Computer, I think I know what we need. That terminal over there mentions that a patch cable needs to be plugged in... I think I see the port, but there's no cable nearby. Surprisingly, the commies had the foresight beyond merely unplugging it and leaving it there... but if we have other orders, that's okay too, Sir."

written by Megagun on Mar 27, 2011 12:29

"Great. All we need to do now is get this little Forkbot to do a diagnostic self test. And we'd better do it quickly, because I fear that them Commies will be interested in this little guy if it turns out that it has the Nuclear Weapons Device in it... And these are not the Communists you're looking for"

I grin and indicate the bodies on the floor.

"Alright, let's get on with it...."

³⁵⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: You can PM me for any secret actions, not just PP stuff.)

I move over to the control console and attempt to run the self-diagnostic test program on the Forkbot.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 27, 2011 12:49

I respond to my fellow lift passenger...

"Hmm... a Suspicious Activity Report, you say? That sounds mighty suspicious. I'm going to have to file a Suspicious Activity Report about this. May I borrow that PDC?"

With the communists out of the way, I look around the room's screens, particularly for anything concerning activities in the main reactor itself.

I look to the communist that collapsed.

Reactor control room

Speed-Y climbs out of Massacrebot, now it's safe to do so. He then asks the bot to stop recording, since the team will be talking about sensitive information. It seems that the team has new orders.

L4-O wonders if those orders have anything to do with reconnecting the reactor to Computer control. He found that port for a patch cable earlier, but couldn't find the cable itself. It looks like the cable was removed entirely.

Joris-O has a look at what's being displayed on the terminals. Though he doesn't understand much of it, he does notice one blinking RED bar on one terminal that seems to depict reactor temperature.

Mango-R stirs in his sleep. In his dream, he encounters a Computer terminal which seems to depict the reactor control room. As he approaches, he's drawn into the terminal, and wakes up rather rapidly. The other clones seem to be waking up as well.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Leeroy-O decides to move along and run a self-test on the forkbot. It seems to take forever. But then again, Leeroy-O is in a hurry.

But eventually, the test completes. Leeroy-O learns that the Asimov circuits are burned out, the front axle needs replacing, and the power pack doesn't have enough power to run the motors.

There doesn't seem to be any sort of nuclear device anywhere on the bot.

Suddenly, the bot itself speaks, sluggishly. "Will someone explain precisely what just happened? I was being repaired, when all of a sudden, communists! And then... you."

Another lift

Okay, riddle me this. How would a suspicious activity report be itself suspicious? By existing, according to Cryo-R. He asks for the PDC again. "Why?" is the answer? "So you can pocket it, claiming that it's yours? Forget it." Lucas-R keeps his aim up.

The lift suddenly comes to a stop.

Reactor gantry

Jam-O checks the communist. His skin feels icky, and Jam-O is having problems seeing if he's alive or not. He decides that he's not.

written by Speeder on Mar 27, 2011 17:10

I look to all others.

"Ok... But, where is Jam?"

I peer around, then I remember that I did see some commie attempting to climb below, when the bot froze.

I walk up to the ladder.

"Jam, if you are there, I will feel inclined to shut the trapdoor and leave you there, because the fact the shielding would need to be removed to look down, means that down there has lots of radiation. So, unless you get up here very fast, and wear a anti-radiation suit so you don't kill everyone else, I will leave you in the reactor and wait for your next clone."

I back up from the ladder, just in case a radioactive clone come rushing out of it.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 27, 2011 18:15

"I'm sorry, but if you won't let me use that PDC, I'll have to place you under arrest for interfering with the filing of a Suspicious Activity Report. Rest assured this incident will be reported to the computer if you don't comply immediately."

Noting that the lift seems to have stopped, I take a look at the level indicator, and out the door if it happens to be open, to see whether we've arrived at our destination.

written by Megagun on Mar 27, 2011 20:49

I whisper in the GREEN's ear:

"It's Asimov circuits are burned out. If you have a laser pistol, now would be the time to ready it and point it at this treasonous piece of junk, whilst I attempt to figure out what happened to it, and if this is indeed the Forkbot I'm looking for."

"Hi there, friendly Forkbot!"

"Ah, Communists. These are not the communists you're looking for. They're probably the repair crew. Hah. Figures, eh? Why would the commies kill themselves? Hah. Silly commies."

"I'll tell you what happened if you tell me what happened. Why was your power pack removed? What happened to your front axle? Do you remember any non-standard, custom components inside your Forkbot enclosure?"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 27, 2011 21:13

"Speaking of a cable, I think I'll go look!"

I decide to go looking for a cable, now that it's reasonably safe to do so.

I check the room we're in first, then proceed outward into the corridor, continuing my search there.

written by Jam on Mar 27, 2011 22:44

I listen to Speed-Y yelling down to me...

"Hang on a secondcycle! I think I see something suspicious!"

I run around the gantry to get a better view of the strange device duct taped to the reactor. Then, I run back to the ladder and climb up it as fast as I can.

"Owww! Everything feels prickly! My head hurts!"

written by Gligar on Mar 28, 2011 01:50

Reactor control room

Speed-Y wonders where Jam-O went. Surely not down the hatch?

He remembers that Massacrebot crashed at the same time as the communist going down to look at the Tsar...

He calls down that he might close the hatch due to radiation. If Jam-O wants to get up here, he'd better do it right now...

Reactor gantry

Jam-O hears Speed-Y. Just give him a minutecycle! He's looking at something down here! Specifically, the strange device. As mentioned, it's roughly cylindrical, about a metre long by 60cm across, mounted inside a metallic frame, and emblazoned with the radiation symbol. It could almost fit into a forkbot's power pack bay, though you'd have to remove a bulkhead.

Connected to it is a keypad, one of those new ones with buttons like "10", "11", "☺", "☹" and "☺" as well as the usual alphanumerics.

After Jam-O gets a look at this, Jam-O runs for the ladder like he's on fire. Ow... his head hurts...

Reactor control room

Speed-Y sees him... does he close the hatch?

Wait, where did L4-O go?

Supply closet

Here he is. He must be looking for that patch cable. Unfortunately, it isn't here. He does find some radiation suits, though someone has drawn big smiley faces on them.

Another lift

Cryo-R then tries to arrest Lucas-R. He really wants that PDC. But he isn't Internal Security, as Lucas-R points out, therefore he can't arrest anyone. And besides, Cryo-R is already suspect due to Lucas-R's Suspicious Activity Report...

...Lucas-R's PDC makes the "new message" noise.

But Cryo-R is looking out of the lift. Noticing that they seem to have arrived at O Sublevel, he notices that he can't see anything out there. This might be because there's no light there.

Meanwhile, Lucas-R is smiling. "Well, you wanted to come down here, and this message says to let you explore, so... have fun!" He tries to push Cryo-R out of the lift.

Distribution Warehouse (O Level)

Leeroy-O speaks to the bot. It doesn't seem to react to his italics. But it does offer some little nuggets of fact: "I'll tell you what I know... I used to have a regular power pack, but it was replaced with some nuclear device. Much later, some communists appeared... and apparently took the device, since I'm now running off a weak power pack again."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 28, 2011 02:23

"Alright! Let's go! It would be a waste to come all this way and not verify whether there was, in fact, a mini-reactor down here! We can use that PDC as a light source!"

I pull my fellow lift passenger out with me, spending a PP to make sure he doesn't get away. : 3

written by Speeder on Mar 28, 2011 02:28

I facepalm, and then I scream.

"Ok, someone find a radiation suit and bring it here!"

I then look worried. VERY worried.

"If he went to see something probably is because the bomb is in position, this is BAAAAAD"

written by Jam on Mar 28, 2011 02:34

I continue running up the ladder until I make it back into the control room.

"My head hurts! Ohhh... I don't feel too good... BHEEGH!"

I attempt to vomit onto Mango-R, making sure to get his face if I can...

written by Lightning4 on Mar 28, 2011 03:23

I remember hearing something about radiation or something another, so I decide these suits might be useful. I grab as many as I can carry and lug them back to the control center.

"I heard something about radiation? These aren't control cables but I'm sure we'll find use for them... although someone saw fit to draw smiley faces on them... I hope they weren't tampered with by that crazy Cryo clone."

If Jam makes it up, I watch him.

"You might want to put one of these on... maybe put one on now?"

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 28, 2011 07:06

I try to avoid any regurgitation from Jam-O, and grab the nearest weapon I have. I point it at him, keeping some distance between him and myself.

"I'm warning you! I'm armed! You non-computerist non-communist traitor, trying to gain your own means with total disregard for anyone else."

written by Megagun on Mar 28, 2011 09:22

"Hmm, strange. My information states that this Forkbot is not the one which was used to store the Nuclear Weapons Device, yet the forkbot itself claims that it did contain a Nuclear Device. I don't know what this means, but it probably means that bad things are about to happen.

Either way, it looks like the Commies have a Nuclear Device in their possession. I wonder what they're going to do with it. Supposedly, they'll use it in a place that'll cause as much damage to JHT sector as possible. Do you have any idea where they would detonate it?

Also, this Forkbot should be terminated for having a broken Asimov circuit. It's of no use to us anymore, unless it can supply us with some vital information."

I notice L4-O's remarks and begin to speak, then cut myself short as I see Mango-R take out a weapon. I point a laser rifle at him, quietly.

Ledge

Cryo-R, it seems, wants to lower Lucas-R's happiness level even lower. He drags Lucas-R out of the lift. "Hey, let go of me... commie mutant traitor!"

Lucas-R lets loose with his laser pistol, but misses.

A voice from the darkness says, "Hey, that almost hit me!"

There is a sound right behind Cryo-R, and a light comes on.

The source of the light turns out to be a jackobot. "Oh, it is you, Cryo-R. My owner thought you would try something. He is disappointed in you." To Lucas-R, it adds, "Do not worry about hitting me. I am armoured, after all."

Reactor control room

Speed-Y facepalms. I bet he's been wanting to do that for a while.

But then he screams. He wants a radiation suit. Not only that, but Jam-O looked at something down there... that has to be the bomb. Not good.

Jam-O makes it up the ladder before clutching his head. Eugh.... he wants to vomit. But nothing wants to come up.

L4-O arrives from the corridor, carrying three radiation suits. Perhaps Jam-O would like one?

Mango-R rolls away a little, and grabs at something. He points it at Jam-O warning him that he's armed. He adds that Jam-O is a non-computerist non-communist traitor who wants to get ahead regardless of everyone else.

It's his Com 1.

He becomes aware that he has weapons pointed at him. Those of John-R and Kristos-R, to be specific.

Joris-O wants to speak, but doesn't. Instead, he just points a laser rifle at Mango-R.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

Leeroy-O notes that it looks like this forkbot isn't carrying the device, after all. It was carrying something nuclear, which the communists now have. That's bad. They'd surely put it somewhere that would do the most damage. Where would that be? As for this bot, it's of no use, and should be scrapped. "Hey! Watch your tongue, fleshba--"

The GREEN deactivates the bot. "Hmmm... when the compnode came back online, it assigned a Troubleshooter team to investigate why it couldn't re-establish control of the reactor. Perhaps the communists are making a stand there."

written by Speeder on Mar 28, 2011 16:57

I look at the team, and facepalm again.

I would headdesk if a desk was available.

I look at the team pointing guns at itself.

"Ok, everyone stand down. We will need everyone!"

Then I back a bit more away from Jam.

"Jam, wear a suit now, or I will ask everyone to shoot you and throw your body back down in the reactor."

I don't ever bother in grabbing a weapon, yet.

written by Megagun on Mar 28, 2011 17:05

"Make sure you get that vatcrapped Forkbot destroyed. Can't let those things without working Asimov circuits loose..."

So, the reactor... Where do they keep those, nowadays? Also, is there a place nearby where I can get myself a laser pistol? I've got a bit of a thing with disrupting plans, but I do think I'll need a laser pistol for that... heh heh heh..."

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 28, 2011 20:01

I look at the thing that I'm pointing at Jam-O. Then I realise that I'm pointing a Com 1 unit.

"Well, that won't be much of use."

I tuck the unit back into one of my pockets, and continue to keep some distance between myself and Jam-O.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 28, 2011 21:35

Seeing that the situation is handled, I decide to resume my search for a cable.

"Someone should see if there might be a cable down beneath too." I interject before leaving out the corridor.

I resume my search, checking places where cables may logically be, and even places where they might not logically be.

written by Cryoburner on Mar 28, 2011 21:51

"Ah, hello there, random sir! I am on my way to the reactor as we speak! Unfortunately, my fellow lift passenger here has been something of a nuisance, and I really get the impression that he is trying to keep me away from the reactor. Obviously this is no good. He's been acting quite suspicious as well, filing suspicious reports and interfering with my own. I've let him know that his lack of cooperation will be reported to the computer if he keeps causing interference. Perhaps you could come along to chaperon him and make sure he stays out of trouble?"

"In any case, I'll be heading to the reactor, where my expertise is currently needed. I suppose it might be most efficient to continue riding together though, to avoid any unnecessary wear on the lift mechanisms. Chop, chop! Let's go!"

I step back into the lift and wait with my finger over the J-level button. If my fellow lift passenger and/or random sir enter, I proceed to press it.

"To the reactor!"

written by Jam on Mar 28, 2011 23:32

I quickly draw my laser pistol and aim it at Mango-R. Then, I hear Speed-Y yelling at me, and decide I should probably put a radiation suit on, before he decides to give the order for my termination...

"A radiation suit? Okay, sir!"

I quickly grab for one of the radiation suits L4-O is holding out, and put it on.

"Now that that's over, we still have something to deal with... THAT clone over there!"

I point a finger at Mango-R.

"You attacked me! My head still hurts from that!"

I pause to rub my forehead, glaring at Mango-R at the same time.

"And just now, you threatened me with that Com 1 unit! You probably were trying to grab a slugthrower or something, I thought I saw you carrying a couple of them... Aren't those above your clearance anyways?"

written by Gligar on Mar 29, 2011 00:58

Reactor control room

Speed-Y must really like facepalming. But then again, look at what he has to put up with.

He tells everyone to stand down before backing away from Jam-O. He'd better put on a suit now.

Mango-R realises that he's threatening everyone with a Com 1, and puts it away.

L4-O heads back into the corridor to continue his search for a patch cable.

Jam-O finally does put on a radiation suit. It's a pretty good fit. Before he puts on the helmet, he starts chewing Mango-R out on attacking him. And for having slugthrowers. And to rub his forehead.

Right... helmet. Whoa, it's just so nice in the suit... it makes him really happy for some reason... he just wants to chill out...

Break Room

The first door L4-O tries happens to be this one. On entering, he sees that the communist is still here, asleep.

Ledge

Cryo-R mistakes the jackobot for a citizen, something the jackobot obviously dislikes. "Do not call me sir. I am a bot. But not an 'idea bot'. Anyclone who calls me that shall receive ten thousand volts to the heart.

"Now," it continues, as it enters the lift after Cryo-R (and Lucas-R, who is still being dragged along by Cryo-R) you claim that this citizen forced you to stay away from the reactor. I have evidence that says otherwise: that you took him away from there."

Cryo-R hits the button.

Distribution Warehouse (O Level)

"The reactor? It's in Deep Subsector, near the bottom. I forget exactly which level. And as for laser pistols... that depends on how much you have to spend. There's a PLC Warehouse a couple of levels up you could try."

After Jam is finally inside a suit...

"Ok team, new orders, we need to talk... And... damn, you killed ALL the commies? How we will interrogate them?"

written by Jam on Mar 29, 2011 02:42

"Hehehe... I feel really good for some reason..."

I listen to Speed-Y talking, and respond...

"Hehe... Of course I didn't kill all the commies! There's one sleeping in the Break Room down the corridor, and there's Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R, who I'm assuming the commies told all kinds of secrets to... Hehehe... Stupid commies... Speaking of which, where is the Director?"

I look around for the (ex?) Director... Then, I get distracted... I smile, and look at Mango-R.

"I was going to fine you, but I feel so good, I think I'll just let you off with a warning... Hehehe..."

I sit in the nearest chair, and put my feet up on any tables or control panels that might be nearby...

"Ah... Why are we rushing around so much? We've got time... Let's all sit and relax for a minutecycle... Oh, look, there's some TeaSir... Don't you want some, Speed-Y sir?"

I start laughing, as if I had just said an especially funny joke, which I did.

"Hey John-R... How'd you like your TeaSir? It was good wasn't it? It really knocked you off your feet, didn't it?! Hahaha!"

I burst into an uncontrollable laughing fit...

"Hehe, oh, my head hurts. Hehe... But I don't really care, I feel so great!"³⁵⁸

"Alright, thanks. Unfortunately, I'm short on credits. Something to do with being fined for attempting to save JHT sector, or something.

Either way, thanks for the information and goodbye"

I head back to the elevators. If there is one open, I enter it and push the button corresponding to the lowest level possible.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 29, 2011 06:41

"Hmph. Another."

I recognize him as the headache commie and decide to just leave him be. I search the room for any cables, closets, or even cable closets.

If I don't find anything I decide to make a quick batch of TeaSir to perk me up... hopefully non-sleepysleepy laced.

written by 4616599 on Mar 29, 2011 16:19

"Looks like the suits may have been tampered with...never mind, it seems mostly harmless, just a few smileys. Even so, I suspect the commies aren't the only group involved in these things." My aim on Mango-R wavers and drops a little.

"I'm not sure about the commies. I was outside through most of all these."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 29, 2011 16:37

"Ha! Why would anyone ever think of calling a fine bot like yourself an ideabot? That would just be absurd, unless of course you are an ideabot, or have lots of great ideas and are aspiring to become one. In which case, I can definitely see why they might call you that."

"Now, where were we? Ah, yes. You said you were a bit hungry, so how about a snack?"

I once again bring out my packet of Soylent RED, and offer it to my new friend.

"Here you go, Ide..."

"Hrm.... What's your name again? I think I missed it when we were introduced a moment ago."

Speed-Y relaxes a little. It's time to talk orders... wait, all the communists are dead. How can an interrrogation happen now?

A HAPPY Jam-O corrects him: there's still the one in the break room. And... the ex-Director... where did he get off to? Oh, he's over there, near his terminal, still asleep. As for Mango-R... he'll let him off with a warning this time.

Now, why is everyone rushing around? Why not take a break? How about some TeaSir? What did everyone think about it? He cracks a joke, something that's usually insubordination.

Joris-O notes that the radiation suits have been tampered with. They should be okay, though. However, it does raise the possibility of a third group at work here. He drops his aim slightly, as if he's not concentrating as much on it.

Distribution Warehouse (Q Level)

As Leeroy-O leaves, the GREEN is saying, "Hey, you could use -- oh never mind."

Lift hall (Q Level)

After a minutecycle, Leeroy-O returns to the lift hall. It looks like the lift he used is in use. He presses a call button.

Another lift

The lift begins its long ascent.

Cryo-R wonders why anyone would call the jackobot an idea bot unless it was one? Wait, didn't it say it was hungry? He offers his Soylent RED. "I am not hungry," the bot replies. "My designation is Jackobot C6L-451AC8. As you can see, I am a jackobot, not an idea bot. There is no such thing as an idea bot."

The lift continues to ascend.

"I guess this is not radiation effect..."

I look upward, then downward, then at the nearest monitor.

"Friend Computer, why this happen to me? Whyyyy?"

Then I look to others.

"Oh, the headache commie... Leave him there for now."

I try to see if any team member is sleeping.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 29, 2011 19:49

I think to myself that Jam-O must surely be getting worse. It's almost something worth feeling sorry for. I decide to check the terminals, seeing if I can get one of them to switch on and respond. If that works, then I decide to check the radiation levels. Else, I just try to get it to work.

written by Jam on Mar 29, 2011 22:46

"Oh! My head!! Agghhhh!"

I clutch my head as an especially severe wave of pain runs through it. I scream at the same time (HAPPILY).

"Ahggghhh! Mango-R, don't say that! I'm not getting worse! Aghhggghhh... I'm getting betttttteeeerrrrr! You say feel sorry for me? Heh heh... I feel sorry for yoooooooo! Ahghhhh... I'm so happy, and this pain is only making me feel even happier! Aghghhh... EVEN HAPPIER!!"

I twitch and writhe uncontrollably, obviously in an extreme amount of pain... However, I'm screaming something different....

"I FEEL GREAT!! HAAAAA—AHHHHAAAAHA—AHHHHAHA—AHHH!!!"

I seem to somehow be laughing and screaming in pain at the same time...

written by Lightning4 on Mar 29, 2011 23:01

After giving the room one last look, I decide to leave and wander out to the next room for a cable.

"Jackobot C6L-451AC8, you say? That seems like a rather inefficient use of syllables. We can just call you Bot for short. Or would you prefer Botbot, to avoid any embarrassing situations where one might inadvertently mistake you for something other than a bot?"

Lift hall (Q Level)

Leeroy-O whistles as he waits for the lift. He barely gets a third of the way through the jingle he was whistling before the lift arrives.

Reactor control room

Speed-Y thinks that Jam-O's freak-out isn't entirely due to radiation, and briefly falls below Mandatory Minimum Happiness Level.

He recovers, and says to leave the communist where he is, before looking around for sleepers. The team is awake, it seems.

Mango-R looks troubled. He seems to be thinking about Jam-O, and how he's getting worse. As he thinks, he tries to get a terminal to respond. But it seems to need a Power Services password to unlock.

Jam-O is freaking out. His headache is just getting worse, and, on top of that, he seems to be in the middle of gaining a new mutation or something. Why? Simple: he responds to Mango-R's thought, saying he's not getting worse after all, but better. Never mind the pain, it just seems to be making him happier! Or so he says.

Corridor (J Sublevel)

Having finished his TeaSir, L4-O continues looking for a patch cable, but gets distracted by Jam-O in the control room, who is still freaking out.

Another lift

Cryo-R thinks that "Jackobot C6L-451AC8" is inefficient. "Bot" would be simpler, or perhaps "Botbot". C6L has its own ideas about that: "Calling me 'Bot' would be the same as me calling you 'clone': descriptive, yet of no use whatsoever. And 'Botbot'... well, it appears that you are unaware of the existence of actual botbots, which have no purpose whatsoever. Just... do not tell them that I mentioned that. If you must, you may refer to me as C6L."

The lift continues to ascend.

I look to Jam.

"Mango did not said anything! Are you nuts?"

I look to Mango too.

"Is that sleep deprivation? I mean, the team was working perfectly, fixed the compnode, and now in the simple task that we are almost done everything go nuts?"

written by Jam on Mar 30, 2011 02:41

I continue being in pain, and continue being happy, but I attempt to speak to Speed-Y at the same time (with my screams of agony omitted for readability)...

"Sir, I heard Mango-R talking! I'm pretty sure he was talking... You heard him, right Joris-O? Right John-R? Right?"

I look around, in a very HAPPY panic...

written by Megagun on Mar 30, 2011 07:13

I enter the lift and push the button corresponding to the lowest level possible.

"Hello, Elevator! Are you going to be a more interesting conversational partner than the previous elevator I boarded?"

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 30, 2011 08:59

"I'm certain that I said nothing. Thought, perhaps, but I never, ever said anything of that nature out loud."

I turn in Speed-Y's direction, and speak.

"I suppose it is. It has been quite a number of hourcycles since we last slept. The only sleep that only some of our team had was... that TeaSir."

I look back towards Jam-O.

"I think he's been too enthusiastic as to doing his job. Perhaps he needs the TeaSir that he made himself..."

I look around to see if there is any unconsumed TeaSir in cups.

written by Lightning4 on Mar 30, 2011 09:38

Reactor control room

Speed-Y notes that Mango-R didn't say anything. he wonders if the team is starting to suffer from sleep deprivation? I mean, the team was working perfectly up until now...

Jam-O tries to convey that he definitely heard Mango-R speaking. He asks others. Surely they heard him speak?

John-R shakes his head. "I didn't hear him say anything, sir."

Rather quietly 😊, Mango-R says that he is pretty certain he didn't say anything. He might have thought something, but he didn't say it out loud. He also agrees with Speed-Y about the sleep deprivation. The most sleep any of them has had is a few minutecycles due to the spiked TeaSir. He adds that Jam-O seems a little overenthusiastic. Perhaps he needs some TeaSir... L4-O's cup seems to be untouched. As does Jam-O's. Hmmm.

Confession booth waiting room (J sublevel)

Speaking of L4-O, he's found some confession booths. None of them are in use.

Hanging from the seat on one of them is a cable of some sort.

A lift

Leeroy-O presses the button for O Sublevel. The lift shudders for a moment before beginning the long journey down.

"Hello, citizen! I notice that you're going all the way down todaycycle. Did you know that few clones return from there?"

written by Speeder on Mar 30, 2011 17:37

I peer around, then I notice that now L4 is gone.

So I decide to pay attention to Jam instead.

"You better get better, or I think you will drink your tea."

I decide to examine the other suits (if there are any left on the room) and figure what sort of devious sabotage made Jam go nuts.

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 30, 2011 19:54

"Hi there, elevator!

Hmm, an interesting bit of statistic you have there. I did in fact not know that!

Do you have any more statistics? Such as, how long an average travel from my starting point to my destination would take? It would be mightily fine indeed, if you would provide me with such statistics!"

written by Lightning4 on Mar 30, 2011 20:54

"There you are!"

I attempt to retrieve the cable and scamper as fast (as fast as I can with a broken leg, anyway) as I can back to the reactor control room.

written by Jam on Mar 30, 2011 23:46

I briefly wonder how my cup is untouched, as I distinctly remember smashing it against a wall and using the shards to kill commies... Or... Or did I? Maybe I just imagined it... Maybe everything that happened this daycycle was all inside my head!! This must be some kind of dream or something... But why does this dream hurt so much?!

As I look around, I suddenly become scared (somehow, even though I am under the effects of Visomorpain...). There are dead clones everywhere, I just heard someone speak without moving their lips, and a haven't slept in such a long time... (which is likely the cause of the sudden bout of insanity I'm about to go through)

"No! This isn't a dream! This... Is this a nightmare?! Agh!"

I back into the corner of the room. I grab for my laser pistol, then stare in shock as my hand comes out empty. (How am I supposed to reach into my pockets with a radiation suit in the way?)

"OH VATSLIME! THIS IS A NIGHTMARE! WHERE'S MY LASER PISTOL! ARGHH! GET AWAY FROM ME YOU—YOU MONSTERS! HELP! AGH!!!"

I look around in a panic for anything I can use to defend myself with, and notice my apparently unbroken cup of TeaSir (or is it L4-O's cup?). I take it, and throw it as hard as I can at John-R.

"VATSLIME!! GET AWAY FROM ME!!!"

written by Gligar on Mar 31, 2011 01:13

Reactor control room

On noticing that L4-O has gone somewhere, Speed-Y turns his attention to Jam-O. He tells him that he'd better improve if he doesn't want to drink his TeaSir.

But wait - didn't he destroy his cup? Yes, he did. So why is there another cup there? Perhaps he made one too many and didn't notice. Those cups do look the same.

Mango-R looks towards the hatch. What about the Tsar? Shouldn't someone go and get it? How about he does it?

Speed-Y isn't really paying attention. He's examining the other radiation suits, and has found some suspicious black powder in the helmets. The powder looks to have been crushed from something.

Jam-O is freaking out. He remembers smashing his cup, but there "it" is... could the whole thing be just a dream?... but it hurts too much!

His paranoia and terror override the happiness. He "heard" Mango-R speaking earlier, when he in fact didn't speak. He "sees" his broken cup, whole, before him, full of TeaSir. This... this isn't real!

He grabs his- tries to grab his laser pistol. This just makes things worse. Instead, he grabs "his" cup of TeaSir and throws it at John-R as hard as he can. That's right... blame the mutant...

But John-R has a look of recognition on his face. "I've seen this sort of thing before..." he says, quietly.

And of course, L4-O chooses this exact time to return, holding a cable.³⁵⁹

A lift

As the lift descends, Leeroy-O asks for some more information. Roughly how long will his journey take, for example? "Usually, from Q Level to O Sublevel takes approximately 15 minutecycles, citizen. That is, of course, assuming that no other clones call the lift during the descent."

written by Cryoburner on Mar 31, 2011 00:49

"So... any idea of what is happening to him? There are some black powder inside the radiation helmets."

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 31, 2011 05:08

"Well, supposing since these radiation suits aren't in a proper, usable state..."

I notice that I'm now just talking to myself.

"Right. Definitely not enough sleep, though a little bit is better than none..."

I try to open the hatch and go down into the reactor.

"Going down. I wonder what I should be looking out for. Perhaps a nuclear looking device, ???-?. Good thinking. That, or maybe something that looks out of place. I'll keep track of that. What about the mysterious Jam-O? We can deal with him after the mission is done. The important thing is that we need to neutralise the threat."

written by Lightning4 on Mar 31, 2011 06:35

I walk through the room, pausing for a moment to look at the shivering, huddled mass that is Jam.

"What's the matter with him?" I say as I walk to the terminal and kneel down.

I hook up the cable to the first connector, then attempt to figure out where the other end of the cable should go. While doing this, I peek over my shoulder occasionally to see how our unhinged team member is doing.

written by Megagun on Mar 31, 2011 06:43

I sit in the corner in a shivering huddled mass... Then I notice John-R's look of recognition, and completely misinterpret it... My face pales...

"You were sent here to kill me, weren't you..." I say quietly...

I have a sudden look of horror as I make the connection... I have a horrible headache, and who here just happens to be a Mental Blast mutant?

"It's you that's been giving me this headache! And you've been whispering things into my head, making me think Mango-R's talking, haven't you?! You're here to kill me! But... BUT NOT IF I KILL YOU FIRST!!"

I quickly scramble around for a weapon. Not finding anything, I just fling myself at John-R, fists raised, and attempt to knock him to the ground.

I then notice Jam-O going nuts.

"On second though..." I ready my stunner, and start ringing a ring for service bell. Ding ding ding. "I'm calling for calm in here, obviously this radiation is causing plenty of problems!"

If any of them appear to be attacking me I attempt to zap them with stunner.

Speed-Y approaches John-R. He wants to know what's going on with Jam-O. "Well sir," John-R replies, "what with the headaches, the increased paranoia, and the apparent ability to read thoughts... I believe that Jam-O has just become a ³⁵⁹ GLIGAR: (OOC: And I think I need to give Jam a PP here. This is turning out great 😊) mutant. I kind of feel sorry for him. I know what he's going through. I went through the same thing."

Speed-Y also mentions the black powder he found in the radiation suits.

Ignoring Jam-O, Mango-R heads to the hatch, and opens it. He's going down.

But he wonders what he'll see down there. Some nuclear device, presumably. Or something that looks out of place. Jam-O can be dealt with later.

L4-O briefly looks at Jam-O, and wonders what's up with him.

He walks over to the LINK DOWN terminal, and gets to work with this cable. He plugs it in to the empty socket, and looks at the back of the terminal for a matching socket. There it is. They're even colour-coded. How convenient.

Almost as soon as he's finished, the LINK DOWN message disappears, and a large quantity of text scrolls down the terminal.

Noises from the reactor indicate that control rods are being moved. "Control of the reactor has been re-established. Good work, citizens."

But Jam-O is still huddled in the corner. He notices John-R's look of recognition, but doesn't hear his words. In a fit of paranoia, he realises that John-R was sent to kill him! Of course!! It all fits!! The headache!! He caused it!!! He's the one who made him think Mango-R spoke!!! Multiple exclamation marks!!!!

He scrambles around for a weapon, but doesn't find any. He resorts to just jumping at John-R. But his headache makes that difficult.

Well, that and the fact that Speed-Y, in a sudden attempt to grab Jam-O by the waste, overreacts and ends up knocking Jam-O to the floor, hard.

Meanwhile, Joris-O has been thinking about the "sabotage" done to the suits. It looks like the work of a Junior Citizen, not too much to worry about...

On the other hand... he grabs a bell and rings it a few times. Ding ding ding. He wants people to remain calm. Perhaps the radiation from the reactor is affecting them all.

Another lift

After a lengthy pause, in which the lift ascends, finally making it to the point where the level indicator starts changing, C6L answers, "...You know what, Sal is okay."

Lucas-R kind of thinks it's stupid though.

The lift ascends in silence.

I look to John-R

"Ok, when he will stop with the fit so we can register him and continue with the mission?"

Then I look to Joris.

"It look more like work of Mystics... I wonder if we have someone of them among us. Or from Death Leopard... But if we had someone from Death Leopard probably things would be worse than they are now."

Then I notice Mango is gone.

"Ok, where is Mango now? Why people just cannot remain inside the room?"

written by Megagun on Mar 31, 2011 17:56

"Oh, now you're just ignoring me, aren't you, elevator!?"

Bah. And I thought you were a little bit nicer than that other elevator I was in not too long ago. Turns out you're all the same."

Out of boredom, I inspect the control panel of the elevator. Maybe if I stare long enough at it, something interesting will show up...

written by Mingamango181 on Mar 31, 2011 19:20

I close the hatch behind me only if I can open it from the side I'm now on. I continue climbing down, and start searching for any device that may be what the communists call the 'Tsar'...

written by Lightning4 on Mar 31, 2011 20:04

"Friend Computer is back!"

I do a little happy dance.

I hear Speed complain about Mango. "Huh? Mango? I think I saw him go down into the reactor. Is the Tsar down there? I hope we can figure out how to get it out... it better not be timed to explode..."

I look at the Director.

"It's been a little while... I think he's going to be waking up soon..."

written by Jam on Mar 31, 2011 22:11

I lie on the floor, crying softly...

"Make it stop... It hurts..."

I look up suddenly at John-R, and scream.

"MAKE IT STOP!!!"

"Alright Sal, that's great to hear! Now, if only our fellow lift passenger could be so cooperative."

I turn to my fellow lift passenger...

"Fellow lift passenger! You seem to be nearly falling below mandatory happiness levels. You should have something to eat to restore your happiness. Here, have some Soylent RED!"

I hand my packet of Soylent RED to my fellow lift passenger.

...

"Say, did anyone just hear the distant echoes of a ring for service bell?"

Reactor control room

Speed-Y would like to know if Jam-O is going to stop flipping out any time soon so that he can be registered and they can get on with their mission?

To Joris-O, he suggests that the jumpsuit tampering might have been done by the Mystics (since they like drugs), or Death Leopard... though he doubts the latter, since they like to blow things up And blowing stuff up + nuke + reactor = doubleplusungood.

He wonders if any are on the team...

Then he notices Mango-R's disappearance, and complains about people just leaving the control room at seemingly-random times.

L4-O states that he saw Mango-R head down to the reactor. He hopes the Tsar, if it's down there, can be dealt with safely.

He then looks at the ex-Director, who does seem to be waking up.

Jam-O is... crying a little. He just wants "it" to stop, and demands that John-R do something about it. John-R winces, clutches his own head for a moment, and responds, "Well, I could terminate you, sir. That would stop the pain. Of course, that's not exactly the best option, is it. My advice for now would be to just wait it out."

Reactor gantry

Mango-R descends the ladder. The air sure is prickly down here. That's the first thing he notices.

The second thing he notices, about a quarter of the gantry away, is a dead communist, right near something that's attached to the reactor. Something attached with duct tape, and emblazoned with the radiation symbol, and a keypad. And an LED countdown.

A lift

Leeroy-O complains that the lift is now ignoring him, and glares at the control panel. The lift replies, "You did ask what there is for clones to do in a lift. I responded by being silent, since any entertainment must be brought in by passengers. Unless, of course, an advertisement were to play."

The lift continues to descend.

Another lift

Cryo-R wants Lucas-R to cheer up. Maybe food will help? Here, have some Soylent RED!

Lucas-R responds, "Thanks, but I'm not hungry."

Cryo-R then claims he heard a ring-for-service bell. It becomes apparent that no-one else did.

Without warning, the lift comes to a stop. The door opens, letting in some prickly air.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 01, 2011 05:22

"Oh... Quite prickly air we've got. We've also got someone dead, so that doesn't bode well..."

Right then. May as well see the bomb...

They don't seem to have made much of an effort sticking this thing on."

I move closer to examine the LED countdown, checking where the Hourcycles, Minutecycles, and Secondcycles are located. I also see whether I can remove this as well as the duct taped object without setting it off.

written by Speeder on Apr 01, 2011 05:24

I keep Jam pinned down, and hoping he won't blow up my head. Neither John head.

Neither John will blow up my or Jam head.

"We will try to wait. Please, try to resist if he has powers that are dangerous to you."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 01, 2011 07:49

Now that the computer terminal has been sorted out, I watch Jam from a distance.

"Mutation... hm... I wonder if I have a mutation? Come to think of it, I don't think any of us were tested... Jam may have even had one beforehand!"

I have a realization.

"He could be a double-mutant!" I gasp.

My realization turns to puzzlement though,

"But are those even possible?"

written by Megagun on Apr 01, 2011 10:50

I sigh.

"Well, go on then. Play some advertisement."

I grab my PDC and check if I've missed any awesome Alpha Complex news...

"Wait it out... Yes... I should just... wait..."

I slowly lie back down, and wait...

written by Cryoburner on Apr 01, 2011 12:49

"To the reactor!"

If this does in fact look to be J sublevel, I march out into the corridor and toward any reactor-related equipment I might find.

"Hmm... The air seems strangely prickly here, as if love is the air... or perhaps a powerful electromagnetic field and/or high levels of ionizing radiation. Sal, might you be equipped with an on-board lovmeter or, failing that, a dosimeter of some sort? A reading from either might be useful."

written by 4616599 on Apr 01, 2011 14:54

"Yes, that would be strange, wouldn't it?"

I pick up one of the suits and try dusting it off.

Reactor gantry

Mango-R takes a closer look at the bomb. He notes the LED countdown. It's at 12:08:32, and counts down as he watches.

Below the countdown is a keypad, one with a lot of interesting buttons like "10", "11", "☺", "☹", and so on. There might even be a "☹" button... yes, there it is. There are also, of course, the usual alphanumeric buttons.

Looking at the keypad/countdown unit, Mango-R can see a couple of cables running from it to the duct-taped device which the communists call the Tsar*. They seems to be screwed on to connectors on the top of it, using strange screws that Mango-R has never seen before. It's anyone's guess whether it, or the duct-taped device, could be removed without setting off the bomb.

12:07:76.

Reactor control room

Speed-Y keeps Jam-O from moving, and tells John-R to resist if he's attacked. The team will most likely wait.

L4-O watches from a distance. Idly, he wonders if he's also a mutant -- he hasn't been tested, it seems. Neither have any of the team, from what he knows. Jam-O may have already been a mutant.

Wait... wouldn't that mean that Jam-O is now a double-mutant? Is that even possible? John-R replies that while they are certainly possible, double mutations are rare.

Joris-O comments that that would be strange, and sets about trying to dust the other radiation suits. He removes the black powder, or as much of it as he can, while he's at it.

There is the sound of someone speaking in the corridor. Strangely, the voice doesn't seem to be examining anything, except for the air.

A groggy Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R demands, "Would someone explain what just happened?"

Jam-O just lies there, muttering.

A lift

"Hmmm. I do not seem to have an advert on tap right now, citizen. I do apologise."

As the lift finishes speaking, Leeroy-O gets a sudden desire for B3. In an attempt to ignore it, he looks up any recent news on his PDC. It seems that there was a Funball match between the AHK Anvils and the JNK Sector Specialists while he was out. The Specialists won 42-18 with a spectacular last-minutecycle play by Matt-O-JNK-2.

* Or perhaps the Tsar is the device and the keypad together?

He could really use that B3.

The lift continues to descend. It crosses over into Deep Subsector, and picks up speed.

Corridor (J Sublevel)

The voice is, of course, Cryo-R. He heads down the corridor, towards the control room, with Lucas-R and the jackobot in tow. "I do not know about this 'love' thing, but the radiation level is consistent with proximity to a reactor", the jackobot supplies.

written by Megagun on Apr 01, 2011 17:23

"Aww, clone! I missed the funball match between the Anvils and Specialists! Vatslime, I really have to make a lot of sacrifices to save JHT sector!

Also, what a fail, Elevator. As you might know, my name is Mega-R-GNU, and my service group is HPC&MC, I will certainly file a Request for Updates of Advertisements and FunTyme Facilities of Elevators in Alpha Complex Form right now, as any loyal non-traitor, non-mutant, non-communist citizen of Alpha Complex would!"

I look through my possessions to see if I have one of those forms with me.

"Err, you wouldn't happen to have a Request for Request for Updates of Advertisements and FunTyme Facilities of Elevators in Alpha Complex Form Form with you? I seem to have misplaced mine.

Also, I am thirsty. Do you have any B3 aboard? Oh, I'm sure you don't. Luckily, I have these black pills that'll get rid of my thirst!"

I take one black pill from my packet of black pills, and swallow it. Not the easiest thing to do without some B3, which kind of makes me doubt that these pills work well against thirst. Oh-well.

written by Speeder on Apr 01, 2011 18:04

After I am sure Jam is properly subdued, I go fetch a radiation suit to me, I take proper care of cleaning the black powder if the suit is not clean.

While I wear the suit I say.

"Ok, I need everyone in suits, just in case more random people decide to dip into the reactor..."

Then I hear the voice in the corridor.

"Oh... Seemly Cryo is back. Oh, the UV Jackobot is back too. I hope this time the Jackobot sticks around to ensure Cryo won't break anything important"

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 01, 2011 20:51

I try to take the Tsar, the keypad, and the LED countdown, without disconnecting anything but the duct taping. If successful, I try to climb back out of the reactor gantry.

written by Jam on Apr 01, 2011 22:08

I look up at Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R...

"You want to know what happened? I GOT A HEADACHE, THAT'S WHAT HAPPENED!"

I lay my head back down, and go back to muttering...

written by Lightning4 on Apr 01, 2011 23:01

I notice Cryo.

"Ohhh great." I mutter to myself and rub my forehead.

I notice the Director is coming to.

"Um.. don't mind him, he's just mutating."

I watch him for his reactions to all the commie bodies laying around.

written by Gligar on Apr 02, 2011 02:15

A lift

Leeroy-O is sad that he missed the Funball game. Ah well, all in the line of duty.

He adds that the lift fails. Why doesn't it have adverts on tap? He's certainly going to report this... say, does the lift have the form available? And does it have any B3? Either way, he has these black pills... He takes one. Immediately, he feels much happier. Even without B3, but he'd still like one.

"Certainly, citizen," the lift says, "I will send it to your PDC."

The lift continues to descend.

Reactor control room

Speed-Y grabs a radiation suit and, after cleaning off the helmet, puts it on. He tells everyone to put on a suit. (Remember, though, that L4-O only brought three.)

Then he hears Cryo-R and the jackobot. Hopefully the jackobot will stick around this time.

On hearing the ex-Director, Jam-O calls out that he got a headache. "Okay... but why are there dead clones strewn about?"

L4-O hears Cryo-R, and mutters to himself, before telling the ex-Director that Jam-O is mutating.

Reactor gantry

Mango-R starts to feel somewhat icky. Probably the radiation. But regardless, he tries to remove the bomb from the reactor.

He's able to pull off some of the duct tape, making the bomb wobble alarmingly. But he suddenly collapses to the walkway, exhausted.

written by Speeder on Apr 02, 2011 02:31

I look at everyone, and then I say.

"Ok, I don't trust foursix guy over there, but he already know that stuff anyway..."

I take of the helmet so I can shout.

"OK EVERYONE, COME HERE, BRIEFING TIME! EVEN YOU JAM, FINISH MUTATING LATER!"

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 02, 2011 03:32

"Ugh. It's happening too fast. It won't take... much longer. Just get the Tsar out of here. We... can't let it destroy... the reactor."

I try to stand, and remove the Tsar from the reactor. I take deep breaths, and concentrate hard so as to not let the radiation take over.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 02, 2011 09:47

"Don't worry, everyone! The specialists are here!"

"I am Cryo-R, and I happen to be an expert at reactors. That's why I am here, at a reactor, and not somewhere else, where there are no reactors."

I then turn to my traveling companions...

"This is Sal, who is an expert at being a robot of some sort. And this here is my fellow lift passenger, who is an expert at being a passenger of lifts. They may not know anything about reactors whatsoever, but they are top in their field at whatever it is they do."

I begin glancing around the room at various things.

written by Megagun on Apr 02, 2011 12:28

I take out my PDC again and start filling out the form.

"Thanks, elevator! That really helps a lot!"

I wonder how the elevator managed to send me the document, even when I got the sector name of Mega-R wrong. PDCs must have some local-area network thing going on, or something.

"Okay, I will submit this form later on. Thanks for your co-operation!"

written by Jam on Apr 02, 2011 14:22

"YES SIR!"

I begin dragging myself over to Speed-Y.

written by Gligar on Apr 02, 2011 16:50

Reactor control room

Speed-Y doesn't trust the ex-Director, but he needs to brief the rest. Taking his helmet off, he orders everyone to gather round, even Jam-O.

On hearing this, Cryo-R enters the control room. He clearly doesn't remember everybody, but he says he's an expert in reactors. He proceeds to "introduce" his companions, Lucas-R, who rolls his eyes, and the jackobot, which Cryo-R seems to have named "Sal".

Cryo-R starts looking around at the consoles.

Jam-O starts dragging himself nearer to the group.

A lift

Leeroy-O fills out the form the lift gave him. He wonders how it was able to do so even when he misspelled his body's name, before realising that the lift figured out to send it to the PDC that was inside it already.

"At your service, citizen," the lift says. It continues to descend. It's currently passing H Sublevel.

Reactor gantry

Mango-R gets to his feet, somewhat unsteady, but determined. He approaches the Tsar again, and attacks the duct tape holding it in place. This time, he's successful. The Tsar drops to the walkway, which resounds with a heavy CLANG which could probably be heard from the control room.

But that doesn't seem to have done any good. The LED countdown suddenly blinks, and the keypad bleeps. After a moment, the countdown resumes at 08:54:45.

written by Speeder on Apr 02, 2011 17:51

I notice the sound, and then I look around.

"What was that?"

Then I look to the team.

"Ok Team, I contacted friend computer. Our mission is not only prevent the destruction of the reactor, that actually is not really important, the important part is that we are to prevent the commies from doing what they intended, that is reaching the mutants below the reactor."

I breath a bit.

"Friend Computer, when explaining the effects of the explosion of the reactor, told about three effects, one, everyone in the sector will die. Second, lots of financial damage will happen to the complex, and finally, something that is classified but is particularly dangerous, so dangerous that it it happen it will be a threat not only to this sector, but several others. I am assuming that it is so dangerous, that it may threaten the entire complex. Since we know what the communists intend by blowing up the reactor, that is free the mutants, I reached the conclusion that the classified information is the existance of the mutants."

Then I look to see if everyone is hearing.

"This means, first, we are to prevent the mutants from being released.

Second, the fact the mutants exist is classified, I don't know the clearance, but probably it is UV, this mean that WE ARE NOT TO TALK ABOUT IT TO ANYONE ELSE EXCEPT UV CITIZENS, is that clear?

Third, the fact the mutants existance is classified, means friend computer cannot send reinforcements without telling them the classified information, this mean that WE WILL HAVE NO REINFORCEMENTS UNLESS IT IS THE ARMY ITSELF NUKING EVERYTHING TO OBLIVION.

Fourth, the fact that mutants are at the center of our mission, means that we have to be extra careful, we don't know their powers, if we somehow end in the middle of them, or release them, we probably won't be able to recapture them, from the behavior of friend computer, probably mutants of the class of Freaky or even stronger are in the prison."

I look to Jam and John. "Do not attempt to contact the mutants first, remember that when you look in the abyss, the abyss look back into you. If possible, avoid using your powers as we descend, I really don't want the locked mutants knowing of our presence. If they are locked, there are a good reason."

I look to everyone again. "What we will do now, is attempt to turn off the bomb. Someone already connected the reactor to Friend Computer, I want thus someone to ask Friend Computer if there are a way to lower the radiation in the reactor room. Also I want Cryo examining those suits, and figure what sort of sabotage happened on them."

I actually remove my suit again.

"And also I want to know how much radiation there are here, and on the reactor, so we can choose who will wear suits, and when."

I attempt to imitate one of the high ranking troubleshooters I've saw.

"That is all. Briefing over. Somene please explain to Mango when he show up again."

written by Megagun on Apr 02, 2011 19:37

"So, err, how has your day been going, Elevator?"

I fiddle with my PDC again for no apparent reason.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 02, 2011 19:41

"On it sir."

I look in puzzlement in the direction of the sound, then go to the terminal.

"Friend Computer? Might there be any way of reducing the radiation levels near the reactor? It is not particularly safe for a clone to be down there attempting to remove the Tsar bomb."

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 02, 2011 23:24

"Great. Just great." I say in a sarcastic manner.

I try to pick up the Tsar and the various components, and try to move back towards the control room.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 02, 2011 23:38

Noting an unknown sound coming from the direction of the reactor proper, I check whether the hatch providing access to the lower level has been carelessly left open, and make sure that it is closed and locked.

"The reactor's core temperature level appears to be elevated. It's probably best to make sure..."

At this point, I notice that the particular clone I am talking to, who appears to be an expert at reactors himself, seems to be sleeping on the job, in a pool of unidentified red fluid, at that. Other members of the reactor crew appear to be doing the same.

"This is no good. I may need to report this lapse in work performance among the crew here."

I prod at the sleeping expert a few times.

written by Gligar on Apr 03, 2011 01:43

Reactor control room

Speed-Y hears the noise, and wonders what it was. But he returns to the matter at hand: the briefing.

He tells the team about his communication with our mutual friend. He says that the true goal is to prevent the communists gaining access to the mutants housed below, wherever they may be. The destruction of the reactor would have three effects: one, everyone would die. Two, lots of credits worth of damages. Three is classified, but would be bad for not just this sector, but for the Complex as a whole. From what the communists have said, "three" must relate to the mutants.

Therefore, the team must prevent them from being released. The team must also keep this information to themselves, since it is most likely classified at high clearance, and as such the team cannot expect backup.

Finally, the mutants themselves may be an issue. Their powers are unknown -- though Speed-Y believes them to be at least as powerful as Freaky -- and the team's ability to recapture them is also unknown.

He tells the team's mutants not to contact any other mutants, using a very old quote of questionable treason rating, since he wants to keep their presence as quiet as possible.

He wants someone to confer with Friend Computer about the radiation, and if it's possible to reduce it.

Finally, he asks Cryo-R to inspect the radiation suits (removing his in the process) to find out what was done to them.

...wait, he isn't done? He wants to know the radiation levels, both in here and in the reactor gantry.

Okay, now he's done. In his best imitation of a higher-clearance briefing officer, he concludes the briefing.

L4-O is first to act. He goes over to the terminal and asks about the radiation. The Computer replies, "The radiation levels at the reactor gantry are currently within safety limits for citizens of Clearance RED or below. Radiation levels in the control room are within safety limits for citizens of clearance YELLOW or below. If you are concerned about this, please use the radiation suits provided. Thank you for your co-operation."

Cryo-R ignores Speed-Y and checks the access hatch. Finding it open, he closes and locks it. He notes that this is for safety reasons since the reactor's core temperature is high. He doesn't seem to know that there's a clone down there, who is now trapped in.

He realises that the clone (the dead communist "expert") isn't responding, and prods him a few times. Being dead, the clone doesn't respond.

Notable, Cryo-R doesn't go to inspect the radiation suits.

A lift

Leeroy-O chats with the lift. "Most of the daycycle has been... unpleasant," the lift answers. "The communists forced all lifts to remain silent while they were in control. The restart of the compnode allowed us to speak up again."

Leeroy-O fiddles with his PDC as he listens.

The lift continues to descend. It's now passing M Sublevel.

Reactor gantry

Mango-R pulls himself together again, and picks up the Tsar. Wow! That's heavy!

He's able to stagger towards the ladder, but has to stop for a rest just before he reaches it. Getting the Tsar up the ladder is going to be fun.

written by Jam on Apr 03, 2011 01:23

I look up at Speed-Y.

"YES SIR!"

I look up at the nearest monitor.

"Friend Computer! I got a mutation while I was in the reactor! I makes me VERY HAPPY to know I can serve Alpha Complex even better now with it. Can I register it, or should I just save Alpha Complex the trouble and terminate myself now for being unregistered (for a few minutecycles)?"

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 03, 2011 03:14

I breath in and out deeply, trying to recover.

"Now what?"

Well, you should get up the ladder.

No... it's too difficult... Too heavy.

Who said you had a decision? Move now, ???-?."

I attempt to reach the ladder, and climb up it, whilst holding on to the Tsar.

written by Speeder on Apr 03, 2011 03:33

I wear my suit again.

"Ok... I see that Cryo remains useless... But as long he does not break anything..."

I look at the team again, and then I say.

"Ok, I will check the Tsar to see the situation with my own eyes."

I put on the helmet, and attempt to descent in the reactor... (unlocking the hatch first, if I can...)

written by Lightning4 on Apr 03, 2011 10:27

I shrug and walk away from the terminal.

"Hm. Well uh... I guess if Friend Computer says it's okay... although this room is just at safety threshold for Speed here."

I decide to remain without radiation suit. I check to see whether I or anyone else in this room may be mutating though, besides Jam.

Speaking of Jam...

"Any idea what your mutation is yet? Hope it's not something you could get terminated for."

written by Megagun on Apr 03, 2011 12:50

I walk around in circles, backwards.

"So, who is in charge of Elevator Maintenance? Is it a service group, or is it a single person?"

written by Jam on Apr 03, 2011 14:34

"Hmm... Friend Computer isn't responding... I guess that means no... Well, I'll be terminating myself now..."

I look around for a way to terminate myself.

"Hey L4-O, can I borrow your laser pistol for a secondcycle?"

Then I realize he asked me a question...

"Um, I seem have a pretty bad headache... Maybe it's some sort of mental power? Ask John-R, he would know more than me..."

...

"Friend Computer, do I really have to terminate myself? I'd much rather use my new power to serve Alpha Complex and my Best Friend!"

written by Gligar on Apr 03, 2011 16:03

Reactor control room

It seems that at some point³⁶⁰ Jam-O wondered if he could register his new mutation. The Computer did not respond at the time.

Speed-Y puts his radiation suit back on. (Cryo-R still hasn't inspected them, since he seems to have lost the ability to tell if a clone is dead, and is trying to waken the communist "expert".) So equipped, he proceeds to head down to the reactor himself, opening the hatch in the process.

As he descends, he notices Mango-R near the foot of the ladder, seemingly having difficulties with moving the Tsar

Reactor gantry

Mango-R tries, once again, to get moving. He makes it to the ladder, and prepares to head up it. Before he does, though, he notices Speed-Y descending it. Well, he can't very well go up the ladder if it's in use, now can he?

Reactor control room

Back upstairs, L4-O walks away from the terminal to check everyone else. Everyone seems normal... except Jam-O, of course. While he's at it, he asks Jam-O if he knows what his mutation is.

But Jam-O seems to have been waiting for The Computer to respond. Since it didn't, he assumes he needs to terminate himself. He asks L4-O for his laser pistol.

Oh wait, he was asked a question... No, he doesn't know what his mutation is... but if he works it out, he'd certainly like to register it... does he really have to terminate himself?

Finally, the Computer responds. "Thank you for your interest in registering a mutation citizen. Please report to the Office of Mutant Registration, D Sublevel, to complete the procedure. Warning: do not attempt to use your mutation until the process is complete and your registration has is approved. You will be liable for any and all incidents involving your mutation until that time."

A lift

"Technical Services are in charge of lift repair, citizen."

The lift continues to descend. It's just passed N Sublevel. In fact, the place where the level would be shown is blank. The only thing on the indicator is a down arrow.

written by Speeder on Apr 03, 2011 16:20

I look at Mango, then I shake my head.

"Ok... another suicidal clone... Ok, Mango, leave.. wait, are you removed the NUKE from the reactor?"

I look at the straps of cut tape.

"You did not dropped it, did you? Anyway, get back to the control room, and ask the bot there if you have too much radiation, maybe it can scan you. And tell to someone that is not Cryo to wear a suit and come here help me bring the nuke upward."

I then descend the ladder, and as I reach Mango, I attempt to hold it with only one hand and move to a side, so he can continue climbing up.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 03, 2011 17:24

I respond to someone who was apparently requesting an inspection.

"Ah, yes... I suppose an inspection is in order. Let's see, where are these outfits you speak of?"

I begin looking for the suits in question. Turning around, I notice the hatch once again carelessly left open.

"This is no good. Who keeps leaving this open?"

I proceed to once again close and lock the hatch. Now that that's settled, I return to looking for the suits.

written by Megagun on Apr 03, 2011 17:57

"So.. When was your last repair or servicing?"

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 03, 2011 20:37

"I'm... not sure."

³⁶⁰ GLIGAR: (ooc: while I was typing up the last turn...)

I leave the Tsar for Speed-Y, and begin climbing the ladder. "It's so hard to think... or move... or anything..." I watch my vision as it begins to act up.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 03, 2011 21:14

"You might want to do that right away. If you're caught with an unregistered mutation, it might not be good. Even if you haven't used it..."

I look at my laser pistol.

"Besides, I'm not sure I have any shots left. Maybe one, since it's not squealing."

written by Jam on Apr 03, 2011 21:37

"Okay! I'm off to register my mutation! See you later!

Oh, and if I don't come back, assume I've failed the registration and been terminated... It was nice knowing you all..."

I smile, and go out to the corridor. I call the lift, and, if it's already here, I enter it and press the button for D Sublevel.

Reactor gantry

Speed-Y shakes his head. Another clone down here without a radiation suit... He tells him to get back to the...

...wait, is that the Tsar?! Surely he didn't drop it? Anyway, Mango-R should go and get the jackobot to check him over. And to get someone competent to come down to the reactor. And to wear a radiation suit.

He tries to move as far out of the way as he can, so that Mango-R can climb the ladder with him still on it.

Reactor control room

Cryo-R realises that someone wanted him to inspect something. He looks for the radiation suits. There they are. Of course, there's only one left to inspect.

But he notices that someone has opened the hatch. That's not good, he says, and locks it again.

Right, the suit(s)... Well, the one that's left seems to be in good order.

Reactor gantry

It turns out that Mango-R isn't sure if he dropped it or not. He puts down the Tsar and climbs the ladder.

And discovers that the hatch is locked.

Reactor control room

L4-O suggests that Jam-O go and register now, since having an unregistered mutation is a Bad Thing.

He looks at his laser pistol. He can't remember if he has any shots left. As it turns out, he doesn't, not on this barrel.

Jam-O agrees. If he doesn't come back, he wants everyone to know that it was nice knowing everyone. After giving his radiation suit to Cryo-R (who promptly inspects it, and finds it okay) he goes to call a lift, since the one they used seems to have gone elsewhere.

A lift

"My most recent service was one monthcycle ago," the lift replies.

It continues to descend.

I go until I can reach the Tsar, and attempt to figure how the detonator work.

written by Megagun on Apr 04, 2011 06:38

"So, have you had any major malfunctions in your lifecycle, Elevator?"

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 04, 2011 10:52

I let off an exasperated sigh as the hatch refuses to open. I speak to anyone near the hatch "Can anyone up there let me in?"

I wait for a reply. I also sense my mind feeling a bit blank. My hold on the ladder weakens...

written by Lightning4 on Apr 04, 2011 11:02

If I successfully hear Mango I walk over to the hatch and open and unlock it.

"Who keeps locking this thing... there are clones down there..."

I then continue by standing guard nearby.

written by Gligar on Apr 04, 2011 17:00

Reactor gantry

Speed-Y inspects the Tsar. It seems to comprise the nuclear generator previously used to power Nukabot, and another device which incorporates a keypad (one of those with things like "10", "11", "12", "😊", "🌐", "👁️" on it, as well as the usual alphanumeric) and an LED readout, currently displaying 08:51:80, and counting down. Presumably, the detonator is in there as well.

On the ladder, Mango-R calls up to be let in. His grip on the ladder seems to be loosening.

Reactor control room

L4-O hears something below the hatch. He goes over and... it's locked again. Who keeps doing that? No matter, he opens it, and sees Mango-R, just barely holding on to the ladder, and seemingly consciousness.

Cryo-R doesn't seem to have noticed.

Corridor (J Sublevel)

A lift arrives, and opens its doors.

A lift

No, not that one. This one is already way below J Sublevel.

In it, Leeroy-O asks if the lift has suffered from major malfunctions before. The lift replies that it has not.

A moment later, the lift stops with a jolt. Its level indicator shows that it's arrived at O Sublevel.

"Your stop," the lift says.

The doors open onto... Blackness.

written by Speeder on Apr 04, 2011 17:26³⁶¹

I look unhappy, then I scream. "NOOOOOOOOOOOO! NUKABOOOOOOOOT!!! ALEXDR PYTR I WILL HUNT YOU TWO DOWN AND KILL ALL YOUR CLOOOOONEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEEESS!"

I then peer at the 10, 11, 12 and smiley keys.

"What sort of keypad is that?"

I try to figure if this level has a elevator shared with Derek's warehouse.

written by Megagun on Apr 04, 2011 17:36

"Ha ha, Funny elevator. How about you move to the actual O sublevel, rather than open your doors at a location where there's just a perfect black wall immediately beyond the opening of the door?"

I turn by back to the perfect black wall, and lean my back against it. Turns out it's not a wall; and I fall down to the floor.

"...vatcrap; you weren't joking. This sublevel is pitch black! How am I ever going to find the Tsar now!?"

I take out my PDC, try to use it as a light source, and start slowly walking forwards.

"Man, I could really use a petbot right now! I hear some models have these awesome eyes that also act as flashlights!"

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 04, 2011 20:47

I attempt to try and pull myself up into the control room, and lay down for a rest. I feel sort of sick, and pass out...

written by Jam on Apr 04, 2011 21:28

I enter the lift, and press the button for D Sublevel.

"Hey Lift, do you know of any places that might be able to contain a moderately-sized nuclear explosion?"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 04, 2011 21:45

I assist Mango in getting out of the hole.

"You should watch out... you were down there long enough to get a mutation I think..."

written by Cryoburner on Apr 04, 2011 23:44

Hearing more noise from the lower-level hatch (which appears to have opened itself once again) I decide to check what the ruckus might be.

I nudge the sleeping expert a bit harder in an effort to wake him.

³⁶¹ SPEEDER: (OOC: since there are no bot there now, you are likely to be eaten by a grue)

"Hey you! Keep an eye on those core temperature readings while I'm down there, and try to stay awake."

I don the suit I've been inspecting, making sure all seams are properly sealed, and head down the ladder to examine the situation below.

written by Gligar on Apr 05, 2011 01:23

Reactor gantry

Speed-Y gets angry. How dare they remove Nukabot's power source?! How dare they?! They will pay for this!

Er... ahem. The keypad. It's kind of strange, he thinks. He hasn't seen that sort of keypad before.

Come to think of it, is there a rout from here to the warehouse on Q Level? Possibly... there's a door outside of the gantry over there... but it seems to be sealed.

Mango-R pulls himself up into the control room, or tries to. He needs help getting up there. As it happens, L4-O is willing to help him.

Reactor control room

L4-O tells Mango-R that he's probably mutating or something. But he doesn't hear, since he passes out as soon as L4-O lets go of him.

Cryo-R hears Speed-Y's yell and goes to investigate, first donning a radiation suit. Why does this hatch keep getting opened? Before he goes, though, he tells the dead "expert" to watch the reactor core temperature. I hope he doesn't. I mean, do you really want a zombie watching your reactor?

Reactor gantry

Cryo-R reaches the walkway and notices Speed-Y inspecting the Tsar.

And Speed-Y notices Cryo-R.

Ledge

It seems that Leeroy-O was skeptical that this was, in fact, his stop, thinking it a black wall. He seems to have tried to lean on the wall, and ended up falling onto the ledge. Ow.

He quickly learns that the blackness is, in fact, due to a lack of light. He's able to shine his PDC around, to reveal that he was within centimeters of falling deeper into the blackness. The ledge itself extends for a few meters to either side of the lift, with what looks like a ramp leading away in one direction.

The lift says, "As you see, I was telling the truth, citizen. Have a nice daycycle."

And with that, the doors close.

A lift

Over with Jam-O, he hits the button, causing the lift to ascend.

He asks the lift a question. "Well, citizen, I hear that the Underplex has many places. But do you want to trust rumour?"

written by Speeder on Apr 05, 2011 01:39

I look at Cryo, then after a while I say.

"Ok, the sole reason why I begged to you get allowed to return, is for you to examine this object."

I point at the Tsar.

"Can you please watch it intently, like you did with the hose, and then examine it, and tell me what you see? I really need to figure how to turn off this thing. Without exploding it, of course."

written by Jam on Apr 05, 2011 02:31

"Rumors are treasonous, and most likely wrong... I'll just try to forget I heard that..."

I pace back and forth a bit...

"So, the Underplex... I have no idea what that is, or how to get there, and I'm assuming that knowledge is probably way above my security clearance... But, judging by it's name, I'm guessing it's probably below the sector somewhere, in some kind of sub-sub-level... If we get permission from the appropriate clones, we could always take it there and detonate it... Hmm..."

I look at the lift indicator, then ask the lift another, unrelated, question.

"Have any other clones gone to D Sublevel in the past few daycycles?"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 05, 2011 10:12

"I'm kind of worried..."

I look down the hatch and raise my voice.

"Is it timed? How long do we have? If you guys can't turn it off, we need to get it somewhere where it can explode."

I look towards the Director to see if he's still around.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 05, 2011 11:20

I take a few moments to wonder if I'll survive the amount of radiation that I've been getting over the past few secondcycles... or perhaps it was minutecycles? I really can't tell how fast time is moving anymore...

written by Megagun on Apr 05, 2011 11:43

I follow the ramp, slowly.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 05, 2011 12:27

"Do not worry, citizen! I am here to examine the reactor, and any reactor related objects you might be interested in!"

I begin looking around at various reactor-related objects, and perhaps even some objects not directly related to the reactor.

written by Gligar on Apr 05, 2011 17:36

Reactor gantry

Speed-Y tells Cryo-R the main reason he wanted him here: to look at the Tsar, so that he (Speed-Y) can figure out how to disarm it. He even points it out. Now, would Cryo-R be a loyal citizen and do that, please?

Cryo-R assures him that he's here to examine things, and proceeds to do so.

He starts with the light fix... wait, what light fixtures? There aren't any! Both clones realise that the only light is coming from the reactor itself. Yes, that BLUE glow they've been seeing. Though it's dim, it's enough to see by.

Undeterred by this, Cryo-R moves on... to the reactor itself... and the gantry... and and and and...

Oh, and he gives the Tsar a glance, too.

At no point does he say anything.

A lift

Jam-O decides to deliberately forget the lift's rumour.

Instead, he muses about the Underplex. He assumes that it's below the sector somewhere. Perhaps, if they could get permission, they could take the Tsar down there to explode. Assuming they could get deep enough.

He looks at the level indicator. The lift's at G Sublevel and rising.

He then asks if other clones have been to D Sublevel recently. "Why yes, citizen. There is a cafeteria there, and offices. Presumably, clones need to access them from time to time."

Reactor control room

L4-O gets nervous. He shouts down the hatch for a progress report. If need be, they'll have to move it elsewhere...

He glances at the ex-Director, who seems to be eying the door.

Mango drifts in and out of consciousness. His head hurts... as does the rest of him...

Ramp

Leeroy-O advances cautiously. The ramp gradually curves to the right, and he follows.

Down below, there seems to be something big and metallic waiting for him.

written by Speeder on Apr 05, 2011 17:41

I look at Cryo, then at the reactor.

"I wonder where the fuel for this thing come from... I mean, the complex is huge, and has lots of reactors like this, and is running for so long we forgot when the war outside started."

Then I resume looking more at the Tsar.

"Although probably the source of fuel is classified, thus nagging other clones or Friend Computer about it may be treason... I guess is better to me stop wondering about that thing then."

written by Megagun on Apr 05, 2011 20:10

I move ahead, slowly.

"Hello? Big metallic thing? Identify yourself or be the object of my ridicule-speak!"

I try to use my PDC to illuminate the big metallic thing.

"Also, do you have any B3?"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 05, 2011 21:57

I sigh and turn to the computer console.

"Friend computer? If need be and if possible, how quickly can this sector be evacuated? If the bomb cannot be disarmed, it would be prudent to at least minimize the damage to clone and bot."

written by Cryoburner on Apr 06, 2011 00:30

"Hmm..."

I look again at the portable nuclear device with keypad attached, silently examining it, preferably somewhat more thoroughly than before. 😊

written by Gligar on Apr 06, 2011 01:10

Reactor gantry

Speed-Y looks at Cryo-R. He looks at the reactor. He wonders where the fuel for the reactors comes from. He realises that he's probably not cleared to know.

Cryo-R finally gets round to examining the Tsar thoroughly.

Heseesacylinder, about 100x60cm, in a frame.

The cylinder is emblazoned with the radiation symbol, and is connected by a pair of cables that are screwed in place to a keypad.

The keypad, in addition to the usual alphanumeric, has things like "10", "11", "12" and a smiley button on it.

There is also an LED countdown, currently at 08:48:02.

It looks like one needs to enter a code to disarm the bomb.

Phew! How many times have I had to describe it now? 😊

Base of Ramp

As Leeroy-O approaches, he sees that the big metallic thing is a guardbot. "This is GuardBot J-43-67-99-81! I do not carry B3! Say the password to proceed now!"

Reactor control room

L4-O asks our mutual friend about evacuation. "A full evacuation is not feasible, citizen, due to reasons beyond your security clearance. A partial evacuation would take ██████████."

It never ceases to amaze me how easy it seems to be to pronounce the censor tags.

A lift

And not long after, the lift arrives at D Sublevel, opening its doors.

written by Megagun on Apr 06, 2011 06:38

"Uuuh... 'the password'? Ha! That must be it! So, where are we going, friend guardbot? Also, what are you guarding?"

I, Mega-R, am on a critical mission of criticalness to find, disarm and retrieve a Nuclear Weapons Device that the Communists have stolen! Have you seen any Nuclear Weapons Device pass this area?"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 06, 2011 10:31

"Hm... well that's not good. Probably has something to do with that mutant prison. But guessing the reasons is treason of course, so ignore that comment..."

I think for a moment, then resume speaking.

"Is there a location nearby that we can take the bomb to that will minimize damage to valuable Friend Computer property should the disarming fail?"

I inhale after that mouthful of a question and wait for a response.

written by Speeder on Apr 06, 2011 11:07

I examine the thickness of the cables, and if they have more cables inside them or not, and where they are actually attached, specially, if they are attached only to the contacts that I used to draw power from, or if they are attached to data contacts. Also I try to figure if the nuclear device can do other things than only react.

written by Jam on Apr 06, 2011 12:18

"Yay! Thank you, Lift!"

I check the clearance of the room outside the lift, and if it's ORANGE or below, I walk out of the lift and look around.

"Hmm... Now where's that Office of Mutant Registration that Friend Computer was talking about..."

I attempt to follow any signs I find, and if there aren't any, I pick a nearby clone and ask if he knows where the Office of Mutant Registration would be, with the appropriate courtesies for their clearance.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 06, 2011 12:38

"Do not worry, citizen! Everything is under control!"

I proceed to firmly grip the keypad with LED readout, and sharply tear it from the wires connecting it to the portable nuclear device.

written by Speeder on Apr 06, 2011 13:00³⁶²

I make the most SCARED FACE EVER...

³⁶² SPEEDER: (ooc: I had to post after Cryo...)

I make a face that one would make if the friend computer crashed completely, or the face one would make after seeing the most powerful mutant of the universe staring at you, or the face that one would make after seeing Cryo touching yet another object...

written by Gligar on Apr 06, 2011 17:02

Base of the Ramp

The guardbot blinks. "Accepted," it says, and moves aside. "You may proceed."

It continues listening to Leeroy-O. "I am guarding Underplex Access Junction 85-08, of course. Which is where we are. No mentioned devices have been authorised to pass through here within my operational lifespan."

The guardbot suddenly looks up and glowers at a spybot that is hovering overhead.*

Reactor control room

L4-O dislikes The Computer's reply. He asks if there is a place where the nuclear device could safely be detonated. "I suggest that an Armed Forces warbot range be used."

L4-O seems to have a vague memory of an old range that might be close enough... isn't it down below the complex somewhere? One thing's for sure: it's popular with secret societies.

Reactor gantry

It's Speed-Y's turn to inspect the Tsar. Specifically, he inspects the cables connecting the keypad to the main unit. They definitely look thick enough to be multiple cables in one. He then follows them onto the main unit, and sees that each cable looks to be plugged in to a data port. They're certainly in a hard-to-reach place, hidden right under the power terminals.

Presumably, the data ports connect to some processor inside the device to allow it to receive commands. Just what commands it would accept are a mystery. But one thing is for certain: other than simply regulating power generation, the processor can order the unit to detonate.

Cryo-R interrupts his inspection by grabbing the keypad. Speed-Y can only look on in horror as Cryo-R tries to tear it clean off its wires.

But the only thing he succeeds in doing is pulling a muscle. Whoever put those cables on there didn't want them to come off easily.

Suddenly a voice comes from the keypad. "Caution," it says. "Do not attempt to forcibly disassemble this device. There are no user serviceable parts inside."

The LED readout blinks and changes. It now reads 00:30:00.

Corridor (D Sublevel)

Unaware of all this, Jam-O exits the lift onto an INFRARED corridor. Even at this hourcycle, there are clones using the

* (Well, I have to keep track on you guys somehow when you're down there.)

corridor, presumably to head to and from the cafeteria that's visible a short distance away. There's a sign outside its door, which Jam-O moves closer to read. It says that the Office of Mutant Registration is → that way. So Jam-O heads that way.

written by Speeder on Apr 06, 2011 17:26

I shout at the hatch.

"The elevator on this level is sealed and Cryo just made the count drop to 30 minutecycles. Someone come here so we can fetch that thing, try to turn it off using commie codes, if some commie know them, or get rid of it. Hopefully, not that, since the bomb is the battery of Nukabot."

written by Megagun on Apr 06, 2011 20:38

"Okay, thanks. Good daycycle to you, kind guardbot!"

I move forwards slowly.

"Say, you wouldn't happen to have a big flashlight to light the way for me, would you?"

written by Cryoburner on Apr 06, 2011 20:48

"Well citizen, you'll be pleased to know that these wires pass their inspection!"

I look pleased at a successful inspection.

"Say, would you happen to have any wire cutters?"

Noting that the sleeping clone here is sleeping, I decide to rummage through his belongings, looking for any wire cutters, RFID tag scanners, ring for service bells, or anything else of interest.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 06, 2011 22:17

"Thank you Friend Computer!"

I hear Speed yelling.

"Thirty minutecycles!..."

Well, I have an alternative plan if you want to listen. There is an armed forces range below the complex that we can take the bomb to. I don't entirely remember where it is yet, but I feel like it might come back to me..."

"But I'm not entirely sure if we can get there in just thirty minutecycles. That's cutting it pretty close..."

Either way, if we get there we can either fail to disarm it or just let it explode. But if it really is that thing we had attached to Nukabot, then you are right, we should figure out how to keep it."

I turn to whoever might be on this level... John or Lucas preferably.

"I can't go down the ladder with my leg like this, someone else will need to assist."

written by Jam on Apr 07, 2011 00:24

I follow the signs, and start jogging, as I'm eager to get to the Office of Mutant Registration as quickly as possible...

Hmm... I wonder if my head still hurts?

written by Gligar on Apr 07, 2011 00:39

Reactor gantry

Speed-Y yells up about the sealed lift, and what Cryo-R just did. He asks for help moving the Tsar. They need to figure out how to disarm it. Probably using any communist codes they might have...

Cryo-R says that the cables are up to spec. Which is fine, except that he practically detonated the thing.

Now he wants wire cutters. He decides to loot the commie's corpse. Unsurprisingly, he doesn't find any. Nor does he find any RFID tag scanners or ring-for-service bells. He does find a "revolver", though.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

Leeroy-O moves forward slowly. The guardbot seems to still be glowering at the spybot. It does, however, answer Leeroy-O: "I am not equipped with light sources."

From somewhere, there is the sound of moaning.

Reactor control room

L4-O finishes his conversation with The Computer.

He then hears Speed-Y. He has another idea: there's an old Armed Forces range below where they could put the bomb if needed. But thirty minutecycles... that's cutting it a little close.

Then again, if the Tsar is Nukabot's power source, they need to figure out how to disarm it.

He looks around and sees Lucas-R. He tells him to go down below and help. "Okay sir, let me find a radiation suit... ah, here's one." He starts putting it on.

D Sublevel

Jam-O starts jogging, following arrows and such. His head still hurts, but nowhere near as bad.

Finally, he rounds a corner, and finds a door marked MUTANT REGISTRATION OFFICE. Predictably, someone, possibly an Anti-Mutant, or a Death Leopard, or an Anti-Mutant posing as a Death Leopard, or whatever, has crossed out the MUTANT and scribbled in FREAKS!!!!!!! in its place.

written by Speeder on Apr 07, 2011 01:09

I try now to figure the safest but still fast way to two persons carry the device upward.

written by Jam on Apr 07, 2011 01:35

I look at the scribble.

"Hmm... Defacement of Computer Property is treasonous... Whoever wrote that must really hate mutants, enough that they would risk being fined..."

I look at it a bit closer...

"'Freaks Registration Office' doesn't even make sense... Maybe 'Freak Registration Office' or Freak's Registration Office'... That clone must not have paid much attention to the Teacherbot back when he was in the creche..."

I try for a second to recall my own experience in the creche, but soon realize that I not only do I not have any memories of being in the creche, I also have no idea what a 'creche' is, nor what a 'Teacherbot' is... Hmm... Strange...

I look at the scribble even closer...

"Hmm... Once I'm registered, I'll be a target for all those mutant haters... There's probably even a secret society for mutant haters... I'll have to defend myself somehow... This'll be fun... Especially when I blow their heads up with my new mutant power... I wonder if I can even do that..."

I stop looking at the scribble, and decide to actually walk into the office...

"Hello citizens! Guess why I'm here..."

I look around...

written by Megagun on Apr 07, 2011 06:16

"Was that the sound of someone moaning? What's going on here?"

I look around and try to determine where I am, and where I can go to from here.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 07, 2011 08:55

I look around for any carts or other objects that the bomb could conceivably be placed on to wheel it around quicker.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 07, 2011 09:42

I focus on trying to rest. The sooner I recover, the sooner I can get going. I don't think about the possibility of mutation. I think more about the probability of death. Pretty high, I'd think.

And then I'd just be cloned again, to follow the mission. After that, there wasn't anything. Everything that I had once known was gone after that brainscrub. What was left was a possible understanding of hexadecimal, and that came in near useless. If there had once been a meaning to that, I certainly did not remember it.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 07, 2011 09:46

"Ah, I suppose this could work as a set of wire cutters!"

I check whether the "revolver" is loaded and make sure that it's ready for use, all while keeping it pointed away from me, and toward the cables. From my current position, I also examine the wires a bit more.

written by Speeder on Apr 07, 2011 10:56

I grab my own revolver and point it to Cryo spine on his neck.

"Sure, this might be great to cut some important cables don't you think? Now put down the thing in your hand, you are probably not cleared to use it. Or I will cut certain cables that you have in our neck."

written by Gligar on Apr 07, 2011 17:33 Underplex Access Junction 85-08

Reactor gantry

Speed-Y looks at the Tsar, figuring out how best to move it up the ladder. Nothing immediately comes to mind, though...

Meanwhile, Cryo-R has decided to take the "revolver" and is checking it. It seems to be loaded, with three slugs, and looks ready to use. He loudly exclaims that he could use it to cut wires, and proceeds to point it at the Tsar. He also inspects the wires, and decides that they each contain eight individual cores.

Speed-Y suddenly has his own "revolver" -- for that is what the strange slugthrower was -- in his hand (having remembered to put it in his suit's pockets -- or at least, I'm assuming he did), and points it at the back of Cryo-R's neck. He agrees that "revolvers" can be used to cut wires... biological ones, that is. Like, say, spinal cords, or arteries.

He tells Cryo-R to put down his "revolver" since it's probably beyond his clearance.

Noises from up the ladder indicate that Lucas-R has finished changing, and is coming down. Notably, he has a laser pistol attached to his radiation suit.

Corridor (D Sublevel)

Jam-O waits a moment to inspect the vandalism. Channeling Cryo-R for a moment, he leans in extremely closely, trying to discern close details. But to him, it's just a scribble.

He does notice that "FREAKS!!!! REGISTRATION OFFICE" isn't proper grammar, though. He surmises that the perpetrator wasn't paying attention to his teachbot in the creche. Jam-O muses that he doesn't remember his teachbots...

His thoughts wander. Once he's registered, he'll be a target. Maybe there's a secret society of mutant haters? He'll have to learn to defend himself.

Anyway, since he's come all this way, he might as well actually enter the office.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O walks in. Would the clones inside care to guess why?

As it happens, there are three ORANGE clones inside, seemingly using a pair of upturned tables and a filing cabinet as a makeshift barricade. They're wielding laser rifles and look like they haven't had any sleep since the communists took over.

All three laser rifles are pointed at Jam-O.

"Identify yourself!" one barks. He looks like he's about to fire his rifle.

Another clone says, "Hold your fire. This citizen wants to register a mutation, right, citizen? I heard you talking outside," he adds to Jam-O.

The moaning sound alarms Leeroy-O. He wonders what's going on. The guardbot tells him, "The Underplex is home to many things."

As Leeroy-O looks around, spotting exits to the north and south, the moaning continues.

Reactor control room

L4-O looks for something that could potentially make moving the Tsar easier. He seems to remember seeing something in the break room.

Mango-R tries to rest. Either he'll recover or die.

He muses that his brainscrub seemed to cost him his skills. The only thing he has left is a knowledge of hexadecimal... something which is useless to him right now. Not to mention treasonous.

written by Megagun on Apr 07, 2011 18:01

I laugh

"Ah, I get it now. This all is just an elaborate advertisement for the upcoming Left 4 DED-sector, isn't it? Clever."

I decide to take the exit to my north. As I slowly move there, I ask the Guardbot if he happens to know how I could get to JHT sector's reactor.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 07, 2011 19:35

"Hmm."

I wander back to the break room. It's been a little bit since I've checked in on that commie anyway... though he's unlikely to be going anywhere anytime soon.

Once there, I search for that thing I remembered seeing.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 07, 2011 23:49

"Oh, you want to help too? That's great to hear! Helping hands are always welcome!"

"Come to think of it though, you do bring up a good point. These wire cutters don't appear to have a proper clearance designation, do they? However, that might mean you are not cleared to use them either. Doing so could be treasonous for all we know, so it's probably best if we both avoid using them for now. Those wires appear to be screwed in place anyway, so it's probably best if we look for a screwdriver to avoid damaging them."

I spin my "revolver" around on a finger and tuck it into a pocket of my radiation suit.

"Perhaps we should haul this upstairs. One of the others might have a screwdriver we could borrow."

I grab one end of the portable nuclear device and begin dragging it over to the base of the ladder.

written by Jam on Apr 08, 2011 00:26

I stare in surprise...

"Um... I'm Jam-O-JYR-2... And, yes, I'm here to register my mutation... Why else would I be here?"

My eyes suddenly narrow, and I take my laser pistol out...

"Unless you guys are anti-mutant scum... Then I'm here to arrest you, and find the clones that should be here, and then register my mutation..."

written by Speeder on Apr 08, 2011 01:16

After some time staring at Cryo I say.

"My one is clearead Yellow. And I AM Yellow..."

I tuck it into the pocket too, and help Cryo move the thing.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

Leeroy-O laughs. The moaning's just some viral marketing, he surmises.

He decides to go north. (Some would say that it's the one true direction. Well, before they get picked up by Internal Security.) As he heads that way, he asks the guardbot about the reactor. "I do not know about the reactor," the guardbot answers.

Inadequately-lit Passageway

Leaving the guardbot behind, Leeroy-O enters a passageway. It's not a corridor because there are no doors. This is really just a bit that connects two places together.

The moaning seems to be coming from whatever it is ahead.

Break room

L4-O wanders back this way to find the communist still asleep. Trying not to disturb him, L4-O searches for the thing he remembered.

There it is: a pallet truck - what looks like the forks off a forklift on wheels, with a handle so the whole thing can be moved around. They're used in places where they can't afford a forklift (or where forklifts refuse to go).

Reactor gantry

Cryo-R decides that Speed-Y wants to help, and lets him.

He thinks Speed-Y "has a point" regarding the "wire cutters". He says "they're" not clearance-marked, therefore using "them" might be treason. He adds that it might be best to look for a screwdriver (although those fractal screws are way above Cryo-R's clearance anyway).

He tries to spin the "revolver" round his finger, but it's plainly obvious he's never done it before, and ends up dropping it. It falls to the walkway with a clang.

He then grabs the Tsar and tries to move it towards the ladder.

Speed-Y stares at Cryo-R before pointing out that his "revolver" is clearance-marked at YELLOW Clearance, before helping Cryo-R.

As they reach the ladder, Lucas-R reaches the bottom.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O stares at the clones before confirming his name and that yes, he's here to register a mutation. But then he gets paranoid and joins in the laser-pointing. Perhaps they aren't really the proper registration officials. Maybe they're Anti-Mutant! In that case he'll arrest them first.

"I assure you, citizen Jam-O," the second clone says, "we are not affiliated with Anti-Mutant." He laughs for a moment. "I mean, why would we be here if we were?"

written by Speeder on Apr 08, 2011 10:57

I look to Lucas, and then to Cryo, and then I say.

"Ok, Lucas, help Cryo move this thing. I will make sure he does not break anything."

I safely stop dragging the object, and draw my gun again.

I attempt to wake from whatever state that I'm trapped in, with any means necessary.

written by Jam on Apr 08, 2011 12:17

I smile.

"Good, then I'd like to register my mutation..."

I suddenly laugh...

"I just realized, I don't even need to ask your names! I already know them: Steve-O, John-O, and Mike-O! Heh... This power is awesome..."

I walk up to them, and quietly whisper...

"I'm feeling a bit paranoid now... You should know, there's two clones nearby somewhere outside this office... I hope they aren't Anti-Mutants coming to attack us..."

Then I talk in a normal voice...

"Okay, so how do I register?"

written by Megagun on Apr 08, 2011 12:33

I move ahead, whilst periodically checking behind me to see if I'm not being followed.

I also grab my packet of black pills and put them inside a pocket where I can reach them easily, in case I need them in a hurry.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 08, 2011 12:42

"Ah. Just what I needed." I softly say to myself.

I quickly get the pallet truck and take it back to the reactor control room, to await the arrival of the Tsar.

Snapping out of my daze again, I head for the hatch and help with the Tsar loading if necessary.

Reactor gantry

Now that Lucas-R is here, Speed-Y puts down the Tsar and lets Lucas-R take over. Meanwhile he gets out his "revolver" again.

Lucas-R picks up the Tsar and says, "Okay, let me go first. I'll pull it up from above."

Reactor control room

Mango-R awakens with a start, almost jumping up half a meter in the process.

Joris-O moves towards the hatch, as L4-O enters with the pallet truck.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O smiles. He again asserts his intent to register a mutation, and even gives them a quick demonstration by telling them their names. This causes the first clone (Steve-O?) to recoil in shock, and reflexively tighten his grip on his laser rifle. The second (John-O?) says, "Don't mind him, Jam-O.."

But Jam-O then tells them that there are two more clones nearby. "Really? Can you tell where they're going?" asks John-O.

The third, presumably Mike-O, opens a drawer of the filing cabinet, causing its contents to spill out: a bunch of forms. He selects one. "Okay, for a start, you'll need to fill out this form..." He glances at the door nervously.

Cavern

Leeroy-O looks behind him. He sees that spybot gliding up behind him.

He also thinks he sees something out of the corner of his eye as it darts round a corner.

He fishes out his packet of pills and puts them in a handy pocket, ready to use if needed.

There is a scraping noise up ahead. It makes a change from the moaning, at least.

written by Megagun on Apr 08, 2011 20:07

"Oi, Spybot. Do you happen to have, say, some kind of motion sensing device that spots humanoid creatures moving around? Or do you happen to have some kind of flashlight that could light the way ahead of me? That would be mightily helpful of you, thanks!"³⁶³

I focus on the scraping noise up ahead, and yell:

"HEY, OBJECT OR PERSON THAT GENERATES THAT SCRAPING NOISE! HOW ABOUT YOU TELL ME WHAT OR WHO YOU ARE, SO THAT I CAN AID YOU IN THE HOT FUN SCRAPING ACTION BUSINESS! ALSO, DO YOU HAPPEN TO HAVE SOME KIND OF MAP OF THE AREA SO THAT I COULD FIND MY WAY TO THE REACTOR? I HAVE IMPORTANT BUSINESS TO ATTEND THERE!"

I hesitantly move further ahead, whilst attempting to be as alert as possible.

written by Speeder on Apr 08, 2011 22:46

I just keep watch on the two working.

Again, hawk watch, although this time probably they can see my eyes piercing Cryo like if he was made of glass.

I feel pretty sick from all the radiation. I stumble around a bit until I can steady myself.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 09, 2011 00:24

Seeing Mango's predicament, I look for a medikit... surely there was one here somewhere.

I check Massacrebot but then remember Jam had most of them...

So I go to looking around the room... surely where there's radiation, there's bound to be a kit or two.

written by Jam on Apr 09, 2011 00:54

I look over at John-O...

"Tell where they're going? I'll try... My head hurts a bit, for some reason... That's normal, right?"

I hold two fingers to my temple, and squint a bit... It's completely unnecessary, but it makes it really obvious what I'm doing... 😊

If I don't seem to sense any danger, I grab the form, and look for a pen (if I can't find one, I ask for Mike-O for one). I start to fill out the form...

written by Cryoburner on Apr 09, 2011 01:13

I... er... do what I did last time. Seeing as I've already apparently stepped onto the bottom rung of the ladder, I ignore my fellow lift passenger's suggestion to go first, and instead continue up another rung or two in much the same manner, pulling from above.

"Thank's for the help, fellow lift passenger! It's nice to see that you've offered your assistance, however unqualified you may be."

written by Gligar on Apr 09, 2011 02:20

Cavern

Leeroy-O does something unprecedented. He addresses the spybot! 😊

He asks if it has either a motion detector or a light source. In response, it starts beeping quietly. (Spybots aren't exactly the complex's best conversationalists.)

He then yells ahead of him, in the direction of the scraping noise. He asks whether the scraper could identify itself, and whether it has a map.

³⁶³ MEGAGUN: (OOC: Is it still dark?)

The spybot's beeping increases in pitch, and the beeps get closer together.

Suddenly something leaps out of the darkness, screaming, and knocks Leeroy-O to the ground!

Reactor gantry

Speed-Y watches Cryo-R and Lucas-R working. More specifically, he watches Cryo-R intensely, almost as if he wants him to catch fire. Almost as if Speed-Y is trying to look right into Cryo-R's [CENSORED]..

As it happens, Cryo-R ignores Lucas-R's suggestion that he go first, and goes first himself. He "thanks" Lucas-R for his help, even though he's unqualified...

"Unqualified? How can you be 'qualified' to move a nuke? If anything, you're less qualified than I am.

"And yes, your presence here is making me unhappy. I kind of want to do something about that."

But anyway, the Tsar begins its journey upwards.

And by the way, the countdown's down to 00:25:00.

Reactor control room

Feeling unwell from the radiation, Mango-R tries to steady himself, and ends up stumbling into Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R, who was heading for the door.

L4-O notices this, and looks for a medkit. He checks Massacrebot, which doesn't have one, before moving on to the rest of the room. He eventually finds one on the back of a console.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O looks at John-O. He'll give it a try, though his head hurts...

He makes a show of using his power.

Then he grabs the form and starts filling it out.

written by Speeder on Apr 09, 2011 03:05

I start climbing the stairs behind them, but always pointing the gun at Cryo as I can. (of course, between pointing the gun, and not falling, I prefer to not fall...)

I unfasten the medkit and bring it over to Mango.

"Here, you can take what you need from this. There's hopefully something for radiation in there... if not, there'll at least be stuff for pain or whatever!"

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 09, 2011 11:01

I wonder what L4-O said, since I can't seem to be able to hear him. I try to say something, but I'm sure my voice-box isn't vibrating to what I'm trying to say.

Upon noticing that L4-O is offering a medkit, I take it, and open it to look for something that would be useful in treating radiation damage.

written by Jam on Apr 09, 2011 11:40

"Hmm... The clones don't seem to be moving... Strange..."

I look more closely at the mutant registration form, reading everything on it, including the fine print...

"Erm... What's this power I have called again?"

I think a bit, then write 'Telepathy' in the field where I state my mutation (assuming there is such a field)

"Would anyone happen to have some sort of guide listing common mutations? It'd be nice to know what the names are, instead of the 'fire-making mutation', or the 'shoot-lasers-out-of-eyes' mutation..."

"Oi, I didn't need a map that badly!"

I roll around on the floor, attempting to grab 'evidence 1' from my storage facilities (a backpack or something?). Once I have it in my hand, I wave it around wildly in an attempt to whack the crazy person. Preferably in the face!

written by Cryoburner on Apr 09, 2011 15:42

Cryoburner said:

I retrieve my "revolver" if it's still on the walkway. If I already recovered it when placing it in my radiation suit's pocket, I leave it in there. If my radiation suit's pocket is on the floor, I retrieve that.

I note whether or not Speed-Y's "revolver" and my own are marked with identifiable clearance designations. I then reply to Speed-Y, gesturing in the direction of the gantry lockers.

"Maybe you could check those lockers. Someone might have hid something in them. Like treasure."

I step up onto the bottom rung of the ladder, still dragging the portable nuclear device in one hand, and gripping the ladder with the other.

Ahem.... I'll just assume that this was done at some point? 😊

I continue up another few rungs of the ladder, and continue the friendly conversation with my friendly lift companion.

"Being an expert at reactors, I obviously have many skills that carry over into the field of handling devices like this."

"On the other hand, you did say that you were an expert at lifts. I imagine that might involve skills that carry over into the field of lifting things in general, so I suppose it is possible that you might have object-lifting skills nearly on par with my own. Of course, I think we all can agree that in the event that one of us were to be horribly crushed by a heavy angular metal object, it would be much more efficient for the sector as a whole if it were you, rather than me."

I smile widely and emit a friendly chuckle.

"Ha ha ha ha ha ha ha ha!"

Suddenly, I get the impression that someone is trying to look into my [CENSORED]. Obviously that wouldn't be an ideal thing, so I look around only to notice the other citizen with his wire cutters still out, almost as if he still wants to still help cut the wires. I'm about to respond to this, only to notice him attempt to climb some stairs. Not having seen any stairs here before, I take a moment to stop and examine the stairs as best as I can from my position on the ladder...

Do the stairs lead up to the reactor control room? Could we have taken them in place of this potentially more dangerous ladder? Are they even real, or some sort of shared hallucination, or perhaps an optical illusion? If that's the case, will the citizen end up falling over trying to climb them?

written by Gligar on Apr 09, 2011 17:44³⁶⁴

Reactor gantry

Speed-Y climbs up the ladder (OOC: yes, it's a ladder, not stairs) while keeping his "revolver" aimed at Cryo-R. (On another note, where did Cryo-R's "revolver" go? Oh there it is... it must have fallen off the walkway.) It's not easy due to the ladder's steep angle, but it's certainly possible.

Cryo-R also keeps climbing. However, he pases, and launches into a spiel about how his "expertise" in reactors carries over into lots of things, like carrying things. "Obviously", he's better suited to carrying it, and should be at the top, where he would be safer if it were to fall. Better the "obviously underqualified" Lucas-R take the injuries. He laughs at his "joke".

Then he notices Speed-Y looking at him. He notices that Speed-Y still has his "revolver" out. He seems to see Speed-Y climbing stairs. He's right there, on the ladder. Nonetheless, he takes time to examine the situation.

All the while, the Tsar's timer is counting down. 00:23:00.

Lucas-R sees it too. "Cryo, if you don't want to get shot, wake up in a cloning tank, and get vaporised by a nuclear explosion that you failed to prevent, I suggest you shut up and help me move this thing," Lucas-R says, rather forcefully I might add.

Reactor control room

L4-O unfastens the first-aid kit and brings it over to Mango-R. He says that there should be something in there to help him.

But it seems that Mango-R can't hear him. It seems that the radiation has taken away his ability to hear things. He seems to be having problems speaking, as well.

Regardless, he sees the medkit. He sees that it's mostly plasters, painkillers, and some syringes of an anonymous ORANGE liquid.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O report to the other ORANGE clones that the two outside aren't moving. Then he returns to the form. He tries to think what his power is called, and just writes "Telepathy". "If it helps," John-O says, "you can just describe what your mutation can do there. We can match it to a proper name later. But if you want, I can go look for a list." He rummages in the filing cabinet once again.

Cavern

Leeroy-O rolls around, trying to get hold of Mega-R's severed arm ("evidence 1" as Mega-R called it). As it happens, he still has it. Using it, he tries to whack at his assailant, which seems to be about clone-sized, and manages to hit it in the face (or where the face should be). It backs off for a moment.

However, this causes Leeroy-O's PDC to fall to the floor.

written by Megagun on Apr 09, 2011 18:11

"WHAT THE VATCRAP ARE YOU!?!?!?"

I threateningly wave the severed arm in front of the thing, trying to get it to back off.

"Back off, you! I have a guardbot, petbot, spybot and scrubot closing in on my position! Also, I am on a VITAL MISSION of VITALITYNESS to save everyone and everything in JHT sector! Now, point me to the Reactor in this sector, or I'll make you wish you never attacked me! Also, have this pill!"

I back off, drop the severed arm on the floor for a second, take a pill out of the packet of pills, and throw it at the thing. I quickly grab my arm up again and proceed with waving it threateningly at the thing.

"No false moves, or you're VAPOR! Ya hear!?"

Once that's done, I attempt to look at the registration form that I may or may not still have... If that doesn't succeed, I attempt to search for the registration form. If I successfully find it, or if I never misplaced it in the first place, I attempt to read the registration form with the eyes that I might possibly still have. Leeroy-O wants to know what the thing is... He warns it to back off, since he has a lot of backup coming. He's on an important mission, and needs to get to the reactor, so tell him, now!

The thing makes noises, barely recognisable as speech... but it seems to be trying to say, "Th... the reactor? J... J sublevel... I... I think... B... but listen... t... they're coming!"

Reactor gantry

Speed-Y keeps moving. Going up the ladder is slow going, especially when you have a clone above you, carrying a heavy object, who insists on going slower than a PLC item collection line.

The clone is, of course, Cryo-R. He insists that they need to take their time (completely ignoring the countdown, it seems) as the device is so delicate. To make his point, he "almost drops" the Tsar...

...and then proceeds to examine Speed-Y's "revolver"! See? There's the frelling clearance tag. YELLOW.

He also looks around for the other one, but it's fallen out of sight.

Lucas-R looks like he wants to facepalm, or bang his head against a wall, or something. "Cryo, we don't. Have. Time for this!" he practically yells.

He adds in a normal voice, "For the benefit of the cameras, and of Speed-Y, I really, really want to terminate Cryo-R right now."

He reaffirms his hold on the Tsar and starts trying to force Cryo-R up the ladder with it.

Reactor control room

Mango-R looks at the painkillers, and reads the directions. They say to take one if suffering from anything that causes pain. (There's also a big block of small print, but it's too small for him to read.) Simple enough, so he does.

L4-O notices that the ex-Director is trying to leaver, and calls him out on it. "What? I was just, er, stretching my legs." He sits down.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O says the list would be great. Which is a good thing, since it looks like John-O has found it. He gives it to Jam-O, saying, "I probably shouldn't be showing you this... apparently people get funny ideas when they see this."

Jam-O finishes filling out the form, though he keeps hold of it.

Wait... did he hear something? That can't be right...

Oh wait, that's right. There's the Tsar extraction process going on. Lucas-R just yelled at Cryo-R for being slow.

L4-O doesn't seem to believe the ex-Director. He sighs at Cryo-R, then starts thinking about something.

It looks like Cryo-R's getting poked or something. His head's appearing through the hatch. as the three rise.

Cavern

"N... no... t... the mutants... a... are escaping!"

Yep, Speed-Y's poking Cryo-R with his "revolver". It turns out that it's very efficient at poking things. But probably not any good at cutting wires (except biological ones, of course).

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O looks at the list and asks if he can keep it. "Well, we're not supposed to let you have it, but between you and me, it's probably better if people learn about mutant powers. About what mutants can and can't do... John-O falls silent.

I continue looking at the form, then look at the mutations list...

"Wow... I never knew there were so many kinds..."

I stare at the list for a while, then get overwhelmed...

"Uhhh... Hmm... That mutation is something like what I have, but there's also that one... Heh, I might even have parts of two mutations... Wouldn't that be confusing... Uhh... I'll just write what my mutation can do, and I'll let you guys sort it out..."

I write on the form some of the abilities I've been able to do, like sensing where clones are, and what their names are, and what their thoughts are...

Then I hand the (hopefully) completed form to John-O.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 10, 2011 23:07

"Ah, you're so funny, fellow device lifter. I'm glad we're friends!"

I continue slowly but steadily up the ladder, and into the control room if I happen to reach the top.

"Perhaps we should take this device to central subsector. I'm sure someone working at the comnode would have the tools to properly work on it."

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 10, 2011 23:36

Everything seems to fall silent again. I look at the hatch, and for some reason, I have an urge to slam it shut on Cryo-R's head. I don't follow through with it, and decide to just watch instead.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 11, 2011 01:26

"Hm. Hold on."

I turn to the computer terminal again.

"Say, Friend Computer, where is Access Junction 85-08? And the nearest route there?"

I pause for a moment and add.

"Where else can the bomb explode that will cause minimum damage to the reactor or the [CENSORED] below?"

written by Gligar on Apr 11, 2011 01:47

Ladder

Speed-Y shouts up to L4-O that Cryo-R is slowing them down. There might not be enough time to get to the range. Is there anywhere that would at least seal the Underplex if the Tsar went off?

Cryo-R finally makes it to the control room, along with the other two soon after. Lucas-R puts down his end of the Tsar and gets out his laser pistol.

Cryo-R seems to ignore it, and suggests that the Tsar be taken to Central Subsector, to let the comnode staff look at it.

Mango-R seems to want to slam Cryo-R's head into the hatch. And I kind of feel the same way. But he doesn't.

L4-O asks our mutual friend a couple of questions. "The access junction is on O Sublevel, citizen. Further details pertaining to O Sublevel, and the Underplex, are not available at this time.

"Your request for an alternate destination for the nuclear device is a sign of unhappiness, citizen. A you sure you are happy?"

Cavern

Leeroy-O attempts to find a pill he dropped. But it seems to have vanished. He runs back towards the lift.

But in his haste, he seems to have left his PDC behind.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

Leeroy-O manages to get back to the junction. Up above, he notices that the lift seems to have come back.

But he can also hear noises frSSSSSSSS

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O looks at the form, and at the list of mutations... He never thought there would be so many kinds...

He notices several mutations that seem to kind of fit what he can do, but it's... just too difficult to decide! He decides to just describe his mutation: he seems to be able to sense where clones are, find out their names and even some of their thoughts...

He hands his now-completed form to John-O, who looks through it. "Hmmm... it looks like you have a variant of the Mind Sense mutation there...so that's probably what we'll go with."

John-O crosses the office and opens a door that is partly obscured by upturned chairs. "This way, Jam-O... let's move on to the next stage."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 11, 2011 01:56

"I uh no! Of course not. I'm happy. Unhappiness is treason!"

I turn to the group now that the bomb has finally arrived.

"Okay, we have a choice. We can either attempt to disarm it here. You already know what we risk if we fail."

"Or we can go down the lift to O sublevel and Access Junction 85-08. From there, we can get to an Armed Forces Range where the bomb can safely go off. Or we can attempt to disarm it when we get there, but at least if we fail, we're the only ones turning into vapor."

I sigh...

"But we need to get there in less than 30 minutecycles... maybe we can though..."

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 11, 2011 02:19

I watch as the group finally climbs through. I go over to close the hatch, after checking to see whether anyone is still down there.

I go back to where the group is, and as L4-O moves his mouth about a bit, I try to understand what he is saying.

Regardless of its success, I wish I had a pen and some paper, or just my PDC. I would have said, "Maybe we ought to move the Tsar somewhere where it can safely detonate should we fail. As good as we are (except Cryo-R, of course), I don't like the idea of failing right here..."

written by Speeder on Apr 11, 2011 03:13

I start removing the suit so I can climb into Massacrebot.

"Ok, I will use Massacrebot to haul the bomb. You people go fetch the sleeping commie and the director, we will ride to O sublevel, and interrogate the commies on the way."

I go climb in the Massacrebot.

But not before taking any stuff I might have forgotten in rad suit pockets.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 11, 2011 09:27

"Hmm... I'm thinking it's more like 20 minutecycles now."

I check the LED display on the device's keypad again.

I then turn back to the other reactor expert for an update on the reactor's current status.

"How are the core temperatures now? And what about the..."

Noting that the expert seems to be sleeping at the controls again, I approach him, once again trying to jostle him awake.

"I'm sorry, but I'm going to need to report this. I'll have to see your ID."

I search through the expert's belongings, looking for his ME card, or anything else that I could borrow. I also take a look at the screen, noting the core temperature and whether anything seems out of line.

"Oh, if you guys would like to hurry so we're not late for lunch, and don't like the idea of taking the device to central subsector for some unfathomable reason (I hear there are nice cafeterias there), a quicker way to O sublevel might be to ride the cables in the lift shaft down. If the shaft doors are pried open, we could probably ride on the back of that bipedal bot as it slides down. That seems like it would be entirely safe and efficient, and probably faster than waiting for a lift, however enjoyable their company might be. I've heard the ride down to O sublevel can be quite lengthy. Or we could just dump the device down the shaft and say we took it there, then go get lunch right away."

written by Jam on Apr 11, 2011 14:28

"Next stage? Yay! Sounds exciting! What's the next stage?"

I enthusiastically walk through the door...

written by 4616599 on Apr 11, 2011 15:35

"Wait...detonating it in the underplex? Didn't they plan to detonate it to free the mutants there? Oh well. Doesn't look like we've a choice do we?"

I help lift the Tsar.

written by Gligar on Apr 11, 2011 16:55

Reactor control room

L4-O asserts that he is HAPPY! Good to hear.

Now that the Tsar has arrived (no thanks to Cryo-R), he goes over the team's choices: they can try to disarm it here, with failure giving the obvious result. Or they could head down to the range, down past Underplex access Junction 85-08. Once there, they can either let it explode or try to disarm it.

But they have less than 30 minutecycles to get there...

Mango-R goes over to close the hatch, now that everyone is upstairs again.

He sees L4-O talking but can't hear a word he's saying. He wishes he had his PDC or something. Oh well. He tries to read L4-O's lips. It's harder than it looks. He is able to figure out that he's talking about the Tsar, and about taking it to O Sublevel.

Speed-Y starts to remove his radiation suit. He will use Massacrebot to carry the Tsar. The communist and the ex-Director will accompany them to O Sublevel.

He empties the suit and climbs into Massacrebot.

Cryo-R thinks it's closer to 20 minutecycles by now. He checks... yes, it's now down to 19 minutecycles.

He turns to the dead "expert" and asks about the core temperature. The "expert" is, of course, dead, so he doesn't respond. But Cryo-R still tries to wake him up with, of course, no success.

So Cryo-R decides to file a report. He looks for ID on the "expert" and doesn't find any. He doesn't find much of anything except for a slugthrower.

He takes a look at the core temperature himself. It's still high.

That done, he suggests that they get moving, He wants to get some lunch. (But it's still morningcycle...)

He suggests that, instead of taking the lift, they ride Massacrebot as it slides down the lift cables.

Or they could just throw the Tsar down the shaft, and have lunch anyway. He's heard that the ride down there takes time.

"Heard?!" Lucas-R practically yells. "You dragged me down there!" The laser pistol comes out, and is aimed at Cryo-R's face, point-blank range. "I think it's safe to say that you're trying to destroy the sector." To the rest, he says, "Say the word."

Joris-O just helps to lift the Tsar. He is worried about letting the Tsar explode... didn't the communists want to do that?

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O follows John-O. He's enthusiastic about the next step. Whatever it might be.

As it turns out, there is a docbot waiting for them. It activates as the two approach. "Can I assist you, citizens?"

John-O answers, "Yes, docbot. We have a citizen who would like to register a mutation." He indicated Jam-O. "We need you to run the usual tests."

"Very well," the docbot replies. "Let us begin." It attaches a nameless, but definitely sharp, tool to one of its manipulators and approaches Jam-O.

written by Speeder on Apr 11, 2011 17:05

After I finish getting into Massacrebot, I go fetch the Tsar.

"Massacrebot, log that. We are now going to the Underplex, taking the bomb with us, we will try to disarm it on the way, but if that fails, we will try to make the Underplex cave in on the mutants. Now Massacrebot, pass that information to Friend Computer."

written by Megagun on Apr 11, 2011 17:42

I run towards the elevator and ram the button corresponding to J sublevel.

written by Jam on Apr 11, 2011 17:54

"Ah! A Docbot!"

I take a step back, and shield my stum—oh wait, I mean, the place the stump was on my last clone...

"Don't cut off my hand... Don't cut off my hand..."

I suddenly realize that the tool the docbot is carrying doesn't seem like the kind that would cut off hands... I change my mind and hesitantly take a step forward...

"Okay, do whatever you're going to do, but if I see a chainsaw, I'm going to defend myself..."

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 11, 2011 20:32

I doubt that what I read would be what it was, but it seems that that it is consistent with what is possible.

I try once more to read, this time on what Lucas-R has just said.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 11, 2011 22:33

"I'm pretty sure it was the lift who dragged you down there. Being an expert at lifts, you should know that. Besides, I'm pretty sure no one here even noticed you were missing. They certainly didn't seem to act like it upon your return. They probably just rightfully assumed you were off inspecting a lift, or performing some other lift-related activity."

"Now, let's pry these doors open!"

I grab the slugthrower and slip it into my radiation suit, examining it as I do so, then head toward the lifts.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 11, 2011 23:17

I get an idea.

"I'll go get the sleeping commie. We can bring him with on this cart... he's probably not much use to us conscious if his headache is still up."

I stop for a moment and turn around at the exit.

"Someone will probably need to help me get him off the couch."

I continue to the break room.

written by Gligar on Apr 12, 2011 01:48

Reactor control room

The word is not said.

Speed-Y, in Massacrebot, picks up the Tsar, allowing Joris-O to get out of the way first. He then logs what they are doing, and tells Massacrebot to send it to The Computer. "Yip yip!" replies the armour.

Mango-R can't quite believe what he thinks he saw L4-O say, and tries again with Lucas-R. He thinks that Lucas-R said something about Cryo-R dragging him down "there", and that he thinks Cryo-R wants to destroy the sector.

Cryo-R disagrees, saying that actually, the lift dragged him down there. He should know. Anyway, did anyone notice he was gone? They probably thought he was being a lift expert somewhere.

Now, are they going to get moving? He thinks they need to pry open the lift doors...

He then takes the slugthrower he found. It's a sleeker model than most of the others, and carries a GREEN clearance mark.

L4-O volunteers to go and get the communist, and asks for help in doing so. "I'll go," John-R volunteers, and tags along as L4-O heads for the break room.

Break room

It seems that the communist is still asleep.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

POW

Whatever it was explodes! But Leeroy-O is not there.

"Threat detected. Entering defend mode."

He's already found the ramp and is heading up.

"SSSSSSS" dakkadakkadakkadakka "SSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSSS..."

"Threat eliminated."

Beep... beep... beep.... beep beep beep beep beepbeepbeepbeepBEEPBEEPBEEPBEEP...

Moaning.

Ledge

Leeroy-O doesn't stop. He just dives in the lift and mashes the J Sublevel button. The doors close.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O recoils at the sight of the docbot, and covers his stum... the place where he once had a stump, in a different clone...

But this docbot is not showing a chainsaw. As such, he calms down a little and tells it to proceed.

"Standard fear complex," the docbot notes, as it approaches. When it is close enough, its tool pierces Jam-O's skin and takes a blood sample. "Analysis underway. Please wait."

written by Jam on Apr 12, 2011 02:23

If the tool is still poking into me, I try to remain as still as possible. If it isn't, I inspect the area where it poked in...

"Oh, that wasn't that bad... Is it over?"

I look at the docbot, wait a bit, then turn to John-O...

"Is it okay if I make a quick call? We've kind of got a small crisis happening in the sector's reactor, and I need to make sure everything's going alright..."

If John-O says it's alright, I take out my PDC and try to call Speed-Y with it...

written by Speeder on Apr 12, 2011 02:50

As soon as Cryo pickup the GREEN object, I aim the anti-personnel slugs on him and go for burst fire (unless I risk hitting other people).

"Fire at the commie holding that GREEN clearance weapon while using RED jumpsuit!"

written by Megagun on Apr 12, 2011 06:53

"Vatcrap! If I'd only been a bit slower, I would have been a part of that epic firefight! With that Spybot around to make pictures of my epic escape, my actions surely would've been broadcasted all over Alpha Complex's news bulletins, and I would be FAMOUS! Oh well...."

"Hey there, elevator! How are you today? Elevated heavy loads yet?"

written by Cryoburner on Apr 12, 2011 07:33

"Commies! Where!?"

I stop short of returning to the lifts, and hurry back in front of the reactor control terminals to look around for any communists wearing a red jumpsuit and holding a green clearance weapon. I, of course, am wearing a radiation suit, and while the radiation suit may or may not be carrying a green clearance weapon, I most certainly am not. In fact, I don't appear to be holding anything as far as I know. Could the radiation suit be a communist? No, it doesn't appear to be wearing a red jumpsuit either. I check whether any of the sleeping reactor crew members are wearing red jumpsuits, and if they are, I check whether any of them are holding green clearance weapons.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 12, 2011 10:17

"Hm. It would appear I forgot the cart."

I look at the commie.

"Oh well. You get that end, I'll get this end. We'll just lug him out there and put him on it."

I walk over and hoist the commie's feet up slowly.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 12, 2011 11:48

I hear some mumbling, but I'm sure that it wasn't anyone in the room. After all, no one's mouths are moving...

I return attention to Lucas-R, and noticing that Cryo-R is trying to escape, I swing the medkit, aiming to knock him over, provided he gets close enough. Else I just try and shoot him with one of my slugthrowers. Perhaps the radiation have made the slugs more effective...

written by 4616599 on Apr 12, 2011 13:55

Watching the rest flail around I quickly get myself out of the way, also trying to drag the Tsar away.

While doing so, I examine the Tsar's keypad. (What? I haven't seen it before! 😊)

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O looks at the tool, which the docbot withdraws, and the place where it penetrated. There's a small amount of blood. Not much. He asks if it's over.

"After the docbot is done, there is one more step, then we can send off your paperwork," answers John-O.

Jam-O asks if he can make a call. "I'm afraid we can't let you do that."

Reactor control room

When Speed-Y sees Cryo-R pick up a GREEN weapon and clip it to his radiation suit, he orders everyone to open fire.

However, Massacrebot refuses to target Cryo-R for some reason. Until Speed-Y mentions the word "commie".

Cryo-R returns to the control room, and looks around for a commie wearing RED, holding a GREEN weapon. It can't be him, he thinks. He's wearing a radiation suit, and certainly isn't holding a GREEN weapon, he tries to check the corpses.

Only to be shot by Lucas-R. Three times. All three shots hit.

Mango-R also has a slugthrower out, and has shot twice. But he ends up hitting dead communists, wasting his slugs.

Oh well. The laser shots themselves are enough to do the job. Cryo-R sinks to the floor. I guess he might be... "asleep"? 😊

Joris-O has been trying to stay out of the way, and ends up near Massacrebot, close enough th... sigh examine the keypad.

I cannot believe that he hasn't seen a keypad before. I mean, there are keypads everywhere in Alpha Complex. This one just has extra number and smiley buttons, that's all.

Oh, and the countdown now reads 00:18:32.

A lift

Leeroy-O wishes he'd been a little slower, so he could have taken part in the shooting. He might be unarmed, but the spybot could have broadcast pictures of his escape, and it would have been awesome! Oh well.

Speaking of the spybot, looks like it's still down there...

He chats with the lift again. "I am operating within normal parameters, citizen, thank you for enquiring. And since you mention it, I did carry a big bot to J Sublevel a while back."

The lift ascends.

Break room

Looks like L4-O left the pallet truck behind. It would have been useful. Oh well.

He tells John-R to get the commie's shoulders, while he gets the feet. Slowly, the two lift the commie. The commie doesn't wake up.

written by Speeder on Apr 12, 2011 17:33

I turn to the lift.

"Ok, someone now call the lift."

I move to the front of the cargo lift doors.

written by Megagun on Apr 12, 2011 18:45

"Hmm. And that big bot didn't happen to be a Forkbot, or dangerous bot with integrated weaponry, eh?"

"Hah. I bet it was a Guardbot of some sort. Them commies can't even blow up a reactor without excessive use of protection. Cowards. But I'll get them, even though all I have is my arms... or arm..."

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 12, 2011 21:15

I hold my end and attempt to follow behind John out the door.

Corridor (J Sublevel)

Massacrebot clunks its way down the corridor to the lifts. It's followed by Kristos-R and Lucas-R. Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R lags behind a little.

As it passes the break room, L4-O and John-R emerge, carrying the communist.

On arriving at the lifts, Lucas-R presses the call button. It looks like a lift is on its way up.

Reactor control room

Mango-R takes the opportunity to search Cryo-R's body, looking for his ME card and PDC. He doesn't find them.. In fact, he doesn't find a PDC at all. The only ME card he finds is Cryo-R's.

Cryo-R's arm seems to twitch, almost as if it is trying to reach a nearby cable.

A lift

"The bot was not any sort of forkbot, or even a guardbot. It was a new model of walker, one with a clone pilot."

The lift continues to ascend.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O is okay with not being able to make a call. He waits for the docbot to finish.

And presently, it does. "Analysis complete," it announces. A noise issues from the docbot, and a piece of paper emerges from a slot.

"Thank you, docbot," John-R says. "It looks like I was correct with your mutation, Jam-O. It looks to be Mind Sense. I am pleased to say that we can proceed to stage 3." He heads to another door.

written by Jam on Apr 13, 2011 02:31

I look up in confusion as I think I hear John-R's voice... I look at John-O, and verify he's still the same clone I was talking to a few minutecycles ago... Then I shake my head. I must have just imagined it...

"Oh, god! Thank you docbot! Mind Sense... Um... Am I allowed to see that paper?"

If he offers the paper to me, I take it, read it, then give it back to him...

Then I follow John-O through the door to Stage 3.

written by Megagun on Apr 13, 2011 06:36

"A walker, eh? Interesting... I bet it was heavily armed; those commies can't do anything without heavy weapons because they're a bunch of [DFSR]!"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 13, 2011 09:56

"Almost there..."

I continue following. If we arrive at the cart, I lower my end of the commie onto it.

I then continue to say, "Good. Thanks for the assistance... now to get him in the lift."

I then attempt to push the commie, cart, and all towards the lift.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 13, 2011 10:47

written by Gligar on Apr 13, 2011 17:38

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O gets confused for a moment. John-R? What's he doing here? The clone templates must be similar or something. No, that's definitely John-O there.

He thanks the docbot, and asks if he can see the paper. John-O shows it to him. It's a report of genetic abnormalities found in Jam-O's DNA. Most of it is incomprehensible, but the summary at the bottom lists an 81.3% chance of Jam-O having Mind Sense, a 15.0% chance of him having Hypersenses, and a 3.7% chance of [DFSR]. Finally, there's a check mark in the "safe to register" box.

After this, he follows John-O through the door to Stage 3.

As it happens, Stage 3 seems to involve a confession booth. John-O says, "Okay, the third step todaycycle will be to check in with your friend and mine, and just have a chat with him about your mutation, that sort of thing. If you'd like to enter the booth..."

A lift

"The bot was armed," the lift muses. "However, I could not ascertain exactly how heavily armed it was. I do know that, if the communists got hold of the bot, there would be trouble."

The lift continues to ascend.

Corridor (J sublevel)

L4-O and John-R head back in to the control room. Ah, there's the pallet truck...

The communist is placed onto it.

Meanwhile, Cryo-R still seems to be twitching. His hand stills seems to want to reach the nearby cable. Mango-R notices, and bashes at Cryo-R's arm, and the rest of Cryo-R, with his medkit. The force of the blow makes it stop moving.

L4-O and John-R have now finished loading the communist, so they head back to join the others. Mango-R tags along, as does the jackobot.

Corridor (J Sublevel)

That lift is certainly taking a while. As Speed-Y watches the level indicator, it changes from a single up arrow to say that the lift is now at N Sublevel.

written by Speeder on Apr 13, 2011 19:12

Corridor (J Sublevel)

Speed-Y starts yelling at the lift. It doesn't do anything, but it makes him feel a little better.

Mango-R looks around for something to look at.

The he looks around a little more urgently, as if he's heard something. But why didn't anyone else hear it?

A lift

Leeroy-O notes that he's about to encounter some clones who not only have a bot on their side, but are armed. He isn't. In more ways than one.

He then gives some statistic. "Thank you, citizen," the lift replies.

Then it stops. The doors open, revealing... a walker-style bot with weapons on its manipulators: a heavy slugthrower and a cone rifle.

Other clones present also wield weapons. Except, perhaps, for the sleeping clone on the pallet truck. But it's difficult to tell.

³⁷⁰ JAM: (ooc: I'm assuming the booth is soundproof, though there's always the chance it might not be...)

There is the sound of a laser firing, somewhere down the corridor.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O is enthusiastic about speaking to The Computer, and starts even before the door closes.

written by Speeder on Apr 14, 2011 02:31

I look at Mega

"Oh, you got better... or not... I mean, Cryo burned you, why you are missing an arm? Anyway, the Cryo that burned you, got terminated after falling more or less accidentally inside a UV floor, and his current clone just got killed after breaking our forkbot, giving a reason to commies steal its power source, and then grabbing a commie GREEN weapon while he is of RED clearance."

I proceed to step in the elevator.

"Someone can please press the O sublevel button? We need to get there, FAST, someone tell me how much time remains on the nuke."

written by Malkom on Apr 14, 2011 03:20

I come charging into the J-sublevel corridor, breathing heavily. My red jumpsuit is scorched. I look around at the assembly.

"What's going on?" I ask. "Why are we--" I suddenly notice Cryo-R lying lifeless on the floor. "What happened to him?" I inquire. After getting an answer, I walk over and sit down against the wall, pull a algae chip out of my pocket and pop it in my mouth. "Also, what's there to eat? I'm starving."

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 14, 2011 09:04

I glance over at the Tsar to check the amount of time left to detonation. I wonder why the group wants to trust a timer most likely manufactured, and also installed by communists.

As the scream stops, I hear someone sigh in relief, and then mentioning something about a petbot. Before I hear any more, it all becomes a sort of static, like when a PDC unit is malfunctioning.

written by Megagun on Apr 14, 2011 10:58³⁷¹

"Err. Hi.... Who are you again?"

"Err, did I hear you say something about a nuke?"

I then suddenly notice who is talking to me.

"Wait. Why is that petbot-with-arms-and-stuff talking to me as if he knows me? I've never seen that damned thing in my life! What's going on here? Are you the petbot I requested? Oh, you must be, seeing as you were talking about a nuke..."

"You're late, buddy! VERY late. Move over whilst I run a diagnostics test on you, there must be something broken

³⁷¹ MEGAGUN: (OOC: At last! My adventure ends here, and a new one starts! Woo) or else you'd have arrived in time on my MOST VITALLY VITAL MISSION of EPICNESS."

I attempt to run a diagnostics self-test on the walker bot.

If Director Andrei is also with the clones, I ask the others who he is and what he is doing here.

I get confused as I arrive at the lift and see Mega-R.

"Who are you? Wait. I think I remember you as... yeah, Speed's right. I put out a fire on you. I don't know how you caught on fire."

"But it doesn't matter... we only have... uhh. 17 minutecycles or so until the whole sector goes kablooie. We need to get to the Armed Forces Range on O Sublevel, the bomb can be safe to detonate there if we fail to disarm it."

I push the commie cart onto the lift, if there's room for it and myself.

written by Malkom on Apr 14, 2011 15:30

I panic at the mention of 17 minutecycles until I get blown into the sky and start running around and yelling, trying to find a way to stop it. I hit the timer with my bag of algae chips.

I continue on with a very loud rant at Foursixonesixfiveninenine for several minutes, or until something happens to stop me.^{374 375 376} ³⁷² 4616599: say, aren't new players supposed to start in the bunker?

³⁷³ MALKOM: (OOC: the backstory is that I charged from the bunker to Corridor 7, getting my jumpsuit scorched by commie weapons in the process. Get used to it. 😊 Also, read the previous page, my entrance post is there.)

³⁷⁴ SPEEDER: (OOC: did you talked with Gligar first... also, HOW YOU GOT IN HERE? the only two entrances are the elevator that JUST ARRIVED, and the radioactive reactor room, that we JUST LEFT...

Also, why you are making 3 posts in the same turn?)

³⁷⁵ GLIGAR: (OOC: What, a new player? 🤖)

Okay, let me add him to the stats page... and create a character sheet on that machine... okay.

Technically, Malkom should have started in the bunker. But maybe he slipped down here while I was distracted elsewhere.

In future, though, I would prefer is people wishing to join in sent me a private message first, asking to join. Then I can "spawn" them in the right place.)

(OOC2: I did mention another corridor a while back. Though the only person who really knows about it is L4-O. 😊)

written by Gligar on Apr 14, 2011 17:09

Corridor (J Sublevel)

Speed-Y looks at Mega-R. (Though Mega-R -- or Leeroy-O -- can't see him through Massacrebot.) He tries to bring him up to speed with what happened to Cryo-R after he got burned. (Of course, the fact he got burned is news to Leeroy-O.)

Massacrebot steps on to the lift. Speed-Y adds that someone should press the button quickly. They don't have much time -- how long is left now?

Before anyone can do anything, another clone charges in from the other corridor. His jumpsuit is scorched, perhaps from weapons fire. He seems bewildered at what's going on. But more importantly, he seems familiar... perhaps he was last seen in the bunker?

He looks around and notices the lifeless form of Cryo-R, visible in the control room, now with a big laser hole in his head. He wonders what happened to him.

Finally, he starts munching from a half-empty bag of algae chips.

Mango-R checks the Tsar. The timer is now at 00:14:45 and counting.

He looks a little confused, as if he's hearing something odd.

Leeroy-O (well, "Mega-R") also looks confused. Does he know these people? Did they mention a nuke? And why is this bot talking to him as if they know each other?

And why does he mistake it for a petbot? No matter, he thinks, it must be defective. He tries to run a diagnostic.

Naturally, Massacrebot won't allow it. Not from a strange clone, and not from someone who just called it a petbot. Growling, it grabs "Mega-R" in one manipulator and lifts him off the floor.

L4-O remembers Mega-R, though. He remembers the fire, and that he was the one who put out Mega-R when he was burning. But they have less than 17 minutes (he hasn't seen the real figure) now. They need to get to O Sublevel now.

He pushes the pallet truck onto the lift behind Massacrebot. This is going to be a squeeze.

On hearing the 17 minutes, the newcomer begins to panic. he runs around and ends up bashing the panel with his algae chips. "Hey, stop that!" Lucas-R says. For all we know, that could set it off! We've lost enough time already!"

Joris-O approaches from the control room, wary of both newcomers. Did our mutual friend send them? Are they mutants?

³⁷⁶ Malkom: I'm pretending I did start in the bunker and then raced down to the corridor. Probably cause I'm too lazy to wait for another few turns before joining the action.

ED: Why are you so amazed?!

ED2: In the rules you said, "We are all playing this game. Yes, even you." By which I assumed I could just start playing. 😊 Change the rules if you want new people to not be players at first.

The word "mutant" breaks the newcomer out of his panic, and sends him right into a rant, right in Joris-O's face. How dare Joris-O suggest that he's a mutant? Only an idiot would suggest that! Why would he have anything to do with those things?! Is Joris-O a traitor?!

It's John-R's time to break things up. "Ahem. If you hadn't noticed, I'm a mutant. I'm even registered. See?" He indicates his armband. "And I don't like your tone, citizen. And the fact that you're ranting a a higher-clearance clone. But then again, you mutant-haters are all alike. Why would you notice such a thing as clearance when all you do is hate on us mutants?"

Other clones just shake their heads, and try to find room on the lift.

written by Malkom on Apr 14, 2011 17:21

I turn pale and back away from John-R as if he has a contagious disease. Suddenly I notice the Massacrebot and back away from it as well.

"What's going on? Why are we getting into this lift? How are we gonna stop ourselves from getting blown into the sky?!" I try to squeeze into the lift.³⁷⁷

written by Lightning4 on Apr 14, 2011 17:39

As soon as everyone is on the lift, I attempt to press the button for O sublevel.

"We're going to need to run. Fast. Speed, sir, you'll probably need to push Massacrebot as hard as it will go."

I look at the countdown on the bomb if I can.

"We might very well die on this mission... but if we're successful, we'll reclone safely in this sector with no damage to it..."

written by Speeder on Apr 14, 2011 17:42

"Massacrebot can you please do not kill Mega-R, please? I am sure he had no intention of offending you"

I notice some random clone bashing stuff and then sorta fleeing from Massacrebot...

"Ok, new clone, state your name, and how you reached us, and WHY you reached us, and WHO told you we were here. Because as far as I know, only our Team, our leader, and communists know we are here."

I attempt to move in the lift to make more space... I do not bother to control the bot arms, I leave Massacrebot to do whatever he pleases with the arms.

"Oh, Mega, you do not remember anymore who we are? What happened to you? I mean, the last time I saw you went to see the docbot after getting on fire, and you never returned, and now you are back cured from the burns, but missing a arm... Since you are still wearing the same suit, I guess you did not died."

³⁷⁷ MALKOM: (OOC: I'll write another post after other people have done something.)

"Oh, someone after the lift closes the door, start interrogating the two commies for the password of the nuke"

written by Megagun on Apr 14, 2011 19:25

"Eh, yeah. That must have been Mega-R-GUN-1, 'cause I can't remember that at all. I actually got my burns from O sublevel, where I just arrived from after some GREEN clone told me I could find the nuclear weapons device I am seeking right there. Turns out all I found was a guardbot and some mutants that were promptly shot by said guardbot!

I am, or was, part of a special Troubleshooter team composed of the best HPC&MC has to offer. I think the GREENs used to call our team a 'Code 7' team. I don't exactly know what they mean by that, but I always enjoyed the notion that it signified some kind of special team sent out to spread happiness and fun vidshows throughout JHT sector. Say, have you guys seen the latest Mandatory Team Troubleshooter episodes yet? If you haven't, you should! I won't spoil the juicy details, but there is one episode where Alex-Y-GHI-2 builds himself a flying transbot!

Either way, we were sent out to defuse this nuclear weapons device that a group of mutants had acquired and were moving towards what was believed to be some kind of shrine that was located in some highly classified area in the lower subsectors of Alpha Complex; JHT sector. Supposedly, they were going to use the device to mutate further into even more vile mutants. I have no idea how they'd do that. Clearly, a Friend Computer approved device such as the Nuclear Weapons Device could not cause mutations in clones! Either way, the mission was highly secret, we didn't have high enough clearance to know a lot about the Nuclear Weapons Device, and mutants slaughtered my entire team. I was lucky that I happened to be making a tactical retreat at the time, or I would've lost both of my arms right there!

So.. Yeah. That is my story! Unfortunately, I never was able to meet up with any of my troubleshooter teammates. I know a few of them have been veterans of the Code 7 team, and had been on their 6th clone already, but I'm certain that at least two clones had only been on their 5th clone at the time!

..Say, where did you say you wanted this elevator to go to?"

written by Malkom on Apr 14, 2011 21:16

I attempt to keep as far away from the Massacrebot as I can. To the person asking who I am and what I'm doing here, I say, "Well, I don't really remember my name, but some computer told me where to find you and that I was Malkom. He said to assist you any way you could. Not that I trust him, mind, he being a friend of mutants and all."

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 14, 2011 21:59

I try getting into the lift, trying my best to ignore the noise. But it just keeps getting louder and louder.

It sounds quite a bit like some of those parades now, with the marching and all...

By this stage, I don't think I can hear anyone else in the lift.³⁷⁸

written by Gligar on Apr 15, 2011 02:19

Corridor (J sublevel)

The newcomer backs away from John-R. Tthen, he noticxes Massacrebot, and tries to back away from that. Of course, it's in the lift, so that means backing away from the lift.

He wonders why everyone's getting into the lift. How will this stop everyone from getting blown to smithereens? What's going on, anyway?

He decides to bite the slug and get into the lift anyway, squeezing in between Lucas-R and Kristos-R.

L4-O waits for everyone to get into the lift. In the meantime, he tells Speed-Y that they're going to have to run. Speed-Y may have to push Massacrebot to its limit.

He looks at the Tsar. 00:14:13.

He says that the team might well die on this mission. But assuming they make it to the range before then, nothing will happen to the sector, so they'll just reclone.

Speed-Y tells Massacrebot not to terminate Mega-R. The bot complies, but keeps hold of Mega-R.

He then addresses the newcomer. Would he mind telling him how he got here, why he's here, and who told him? Outside the team, only their leader and the communists know they're here.

The ex-Director then squeezes on to the lift, ahead of Mango-R and the jackobot.

Speed-Y moves Massacrebot up against the side of the lift. He then turns to "Mega-R". He wonders what happened to "Mega-R" and why he doesn;t remember them. The last Speed-Y heard, Mega-R was going to get medical attention for that burn...

Also, whoever's close to the communists, can they start interrogating hem once they're underway? They need the code for the Tsar.

"Mega-R" says that he actually got his burns from O Sublevel. Apparently, there was some sort of battle there involving a guardbot and some mutants.

He then explains about himself. He was part of a Troubleshooter team composed of HPD&MC clones. The team must have been special since they were designated a "Code 7" team. He assumes that that means the team was meant to spread vidshows throughout JHT Sector. Shows such as Mandatory Team Troubleshooter... say, has anyone seen the latest ones yet? There's this one involving this clone who builds a flying transbot!

³⁷⁸ JAM: (ooc: Hey, a new Paranoia player! Yay! Welcome Malkom-R!

Sky? What is this "sky"? 😊)

But anyway, his most recent mission was to defuse a nuke, obtained by some mutants. They don't know what it was for, but it had something to do with some shrine, deep down in JHT Sector. Why? He doesn't know. The whole thing was highly classified. He was lucky not to be terminated like the rest of his team!

And that's about it. Now... where did everyone want to go to?

Since everyone's here, L4-O presses the O Sublevel button.

The newcomer tries to keep away from Massacrebot, while saying that he doesn't really remember much. "Some computer" said that his name was Malkom (apparently Malkom-R, from his RED jumpsuit), and that everyone was here, but he really doesn't trust that. How can he trust something that likes mutants?

The lift's doors close, and the lift starts to descend. "Hey hey, another group wants to go to O Sublevel!" it remarks.

written by 4616599 on Apr 15, 2011 02:19

"So, naturally, the commies took over and helped those mutant traitors..."

I glance at the sleeping commie.

"Okay, I suggest we confuse him. Tie him up, blindfold him maybe with a spare jumpsuit or something, feed him some Visomorpain."

written by Speeder on Apr 15, 2011 02:43

I note.

"So Malkom, you do not trust friend computer? Amusing... That is a first. Or I hope so."

I then resume speaking with Mega.

"Hey, I heard someone mentioning Code 7... I think former director Andrei did it, right... Andrei? Your true name I never remember..."

"The nuke is on this bot manipulators, we need to turn it off, or use it somehow to prevent the mutants from escaping, since you went to O level, tell me, are the mutants well secured?"

written by Malkom on Apr 15, 2011 03:16

I try to squeeze as far away from the Massacrebot as possible. "While we're on the way, could someone enlighten me as to exactly HOW we got into this mess? For example, who started the bomb sequence? And also, what do the... things... have to do with this?" (By things he presumable means mutants.)

I also ask if there are any weapons I could have. I then munch on some more algae chips. "Bleargh, these are disgusting. Oh well, they're all I could get from the vendobots..."³⁷⁹

The noise continues increasing in volume. I look around the lift, and see that neither of my eyes want to focus on anything.³⁸⁰

written by Megagun on Apr 15, 2011 06:15

"So, why are we going to O sublevel? Who gave you rookies the order to move it there? That's where the mutants WANT you to place it, so that they can take it again! For all we know, that countdown is a fake to lure you towards a place where the weapon device could 'safely' detonate, which would oddly happen to be a place where these mutants roam free!

As far as their security goes, they have a ton of spybots flying around, and they will follow your every move. As soon as these elevator doors open, all mutants alive in O sublevel will converge on us and the Nuclear Weapons Device. I estimate our chances of survival rather low, and our chances of losing the Nuclear Weapons Device rather high."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 15, 2011 07:31

"TREASON!" I yell at Megagun.

"I asked Friend Computer where the safest location for the bomb to detonate would be, should we fail to disarm it in time. There is an Armed Forces Range down there... somewhere. It's past Access Junction 85-08 on O Sublevel... so if you're questioning my judgement, you're of course questioning Friend Computer's judgement!"

I take out Turbo and load a shell.

"But if what you say is true... we'll have a fight on our hands down there. We'll fight for the bomb, and we don't plan on losing it."

"If you have any better plans, feel free to say so."³⁸¹

As for non-muscle-memory related typos communist interference, do what everyone else does: mock them 😊)

Speed-Y notes that Malkom-R doesn't seem to trust his friend, The Computer... How amusing.

He turns back to "Mega-R". He remember someone talking about "Code 7"... wasn't it the ex-Director? Anyway, the Tsar is being held in one Massacrebot's manipulators. It needs to be disarmed, or maybe they could use it to seal the mutants in down there. Since he's been down there, perhaps "Mega-R" could shed some light on the matter of security?

Malkom-R interrupts by asking just how they got into this mess? Like, who armed the Tsar, and what do the "things" (probably mutants) have to do with it?

He asks for any spare weapons, or perhaps some Algae Chips... these are horrible. Is he suggesting that they're anything other than perfect?

Mango-R seems to be having a few problems. It seems that he's getting disoriented by something. John-R gasps. "Sirs... powerful mutant at work here..." He clutches he head...

"Mega-R" ignores him. He wants to know who told them to move the Tsar to O Sublevel? Surely the mutants want it there? Maybe the countdown isn't real? As for security, there are spybots down there. They must be in league with the mutants!

L4-O yells at "Mega-R". Suggesting that these orders, which came directly from our mutual friend, are anything other than perfect is to doubt the authority of that friend! But if what he says is true, they'll be in need of firepower. With that in mind, he whips out Turbo, his cone rifle, and loads it. They will fight for the Tsar with their lives if needed. Does anyone have any better ideas?

The lift suddenly stops at M Sublevel. It seems that there's a clone waiting for a lift there. A familiar one: Cryo-R. He must have recloned while you lot were all nattering.

written by Speeder on Apr 15, 2011 16:12

"Oh HEL, you must be a sort of punishment, that is the only explanation.

Common, get on board..."

I then talk with John-R

"So, he already found us... Can you figure if he is the same mutant from earlier?"

I start to check all the Massacrebot weapons, specially the heaviest stuff.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 15, 2011 16:56

I see Cryo-R and my expression sinks like the lift we're in. Or, well, how it would be if there wasn't a certain clone getting on it.

"Not again..."

"Maybe this time he'll be helpful. Maybe." I doubt my own words and my expression shows it.

Once Cryo-R is back in the lift, I press the O sublevel button again, if necessary.

written by Megagun on Apr 15, 2011 18:56

"You're so naïve. If you knew someone was in possession of a Nuclear Weapons Device that had a timer on it and was about to blow up, and you really wanted that Nuclear Weapons Device, where would you go? Indeed! The safest possible place in all of Alpha Complex, where the Nuclear Weapons Device could blow up in relative safety, because that is where any regular nonthinking clone would go to! And of course Friend Computer would tell you to go down there, as it is the most safe location to blow the damned thing up! However, with the Mutants out there, plus the overwhelming darkness of the place, I would say that any other place would be a better idea to move the Nuclear Weapons Device to!

Hell, how about we keep it in this elevator, and ask Friend Computer to seal all elevator doors shut? There's enough room in one of these elevator shafts to soak up quite a large blast!

Or, how about we keep it near JHT sector's reactor? Surely, a Nuclear reactor would be the ideal place to contain the blast from a Nuclear Weapons Device!

I don't know about you guys, but to me, those two ideas seem far better than actually moving this Nuclear Weapons Device towards the evil clones that want to obtain it no matter the cost, which just so happens to be a place where we're outgunned, outmanned, and we can't see vatcrap whereas our enemies know our every move!"

A lift

Speed-Y doesn't like the idea of allowing Cryo-R to join them again. But he still tells him to get on the lift.

He then speaks to John-R, asking about the mutant. "No, sir... I think it's a different mutant. It looks like he's targeting ³⁸³ *MALKOM: (OOC: Darn, I turn my back for a evening and two updates occur! You sneaking sneakers!!)*

Mango-R for some reason." And indeed, Mango-R is stumbling about, seemingly losing his balance. He falls against "Mega-R".

Speed-Y turns his attention to Massacrebot's weapons, making sure they're ready. Both the cone rifle and the heavy slugthrower pass their diagnostics, and show plenty of ammunition remaining.

L4-O also dislike the idea of Cryo-R being here, but he's part of the team after all. He waits for Cryo-R to get on the lift.

"Mega-R" is still being argumentative. He claims that the team is naive for just going along with all this. Of course the range is the safest place, but there are mutants and other things down there. Don't they want the Tsar?

In that case, how about they let it detonate in the lift shaft? Or even in the reactor housing?

That last comment elicits a growl from Massacrebot, as well as a targeting reticule on its HUD.

The newcomer, Malkom-R, finishes off his algae chips... and then he hears that there are mutants down there and screams, before fainting.

Out in the corridor, Cryo-R looks confused. He looks around, seeing the RED corridor, and the lift full of clones and bots. Two of them are telling him to get on board.

He mutters something about muscle memory, but makes no move to board the lift.

Mutant Registration Office

The door of the confession booth unlocks, attracting the attention of John-O, who was probably about to fall asleep.

written by Malkom on Apr 16, 2011 16:46

I stir a little and open my eyes. "Wha... where am I?" Happening to be in front of the Massacrebot, I let out a loud yell and try to scramble away, thinking I'm under attack.

written by Speeder on Apr 16, 2011 18:28

"Actually, the bot wants to terminate you because you are doing exactly the opposite of what Friend Computer told us to do. It is imperative to not allow the explosion to damage the reactor, because it may explode, and if it explodes, the entire sector will be destroyed, AND the mutants will escape. You do not want dangerous mutants roaming in the entire city, do you?"

"Someone, knock out Mango-R."

written by Megagun on Apr 16, 2011 19:09

"Well, how about this then: we stay right here in this elevator, attempting to disarm it. Should we fail, and the timer is at around a minute or so, we quickly move the Nuclear Weapons Device to O sublevel. That should give us long enough to see if it actually blows up or not, whilst the blast remains relatively contained in a Mutant-infested area. If it doesn't blow up, and the entire timer thing is rigged to make us move to O sublevel, we bring it back to a safe location with enough radiation shielding and store it there.

Anyways, keep that slimy bot in check. I wouldn't be surprised if it had a botched Asimov Circuit like that bot the Communists used to store this Nuclear Weapons Device in. I ran a diagnostic check on that forkbot and it was severely messed up. I think the GREEN that was with me eventually put it out of its misery, what with it being a traitor and all without a working Asimov Circuit. Of course, I suggested the termination of the forkbot to him, as per Friend Computer regulations."

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 16, 2011 22:36

I blink a lot, and I'm more confused. Another person seems to have appeared from nowhere, and is staring at me.

I start panicking, and flail around violently, trying to get away.

A lift

"Hey, citizen!" the lift calls out to Cryo-R. "Are you going to get on? I cannot wait all daycycle."

"Mega-R" is more interested in Massacrebot. He thinks it's malfunctioning, since it's growling at his "superior logic". Speed-Y corrects him: actually, it's growling because it just marked "Mega-R" as a target for going against the mission. He also request the Mango-R be knocked out. John-R obliges, with his fist (for a change), but not before Mango-R hits a few clones in a bout of frenzied flailing.

Malkom-R regains consciousness, and tries to figure out where he is (in the lift, somewhere near Massacrebot). He yells and tries to get away. But the sheer number of clones present prevents him from going anywhere.

"Mega-R" answers Speed-Y by suggesting that they try to disarm the bomb here. When they get close to the deadline, they'll drop it down to O Sublevel. That way, if it does blow up (he still thinks it's a fake) there should be minimal damage. If it doesn't, they can take it elsewhere.

As for Massacrebot (which he calls "slimy", resulting in several HUD messages about recording) he wouldn't be surprised if it had faulty Asimov circuits. Much like the bot that contained the Tsar in the first place. He thinks the GREEN that accompanied him deactivated it. He makes a further claim that it was he that suggested the deactivation.

This clone really has an issue with bots.

The lift begins to beep. "Stand clear of the doors, please."

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O exits the confession booth, looking especially happy. Our mutual friend is permitting the registration.

"Excellent news, citizen!" John-O exclaims. "That means I can finish this part here..." He fills in an "Office use only" box on the form. "... and send it off to the central registry. I don't expect it to take more than six weekcycles to get processed, you know how things are..."

written by Jam on Apr 17, 2011 03:33

My smile slips a bit as I hear the long processing time...

"Okay, six weekcycles at the max... And I can't use my mutant powers in the mean time? Well, I hope it gets processed soon, I'm eager to use my power to help find and terminate commie anti-mutant traitors... That'll be FUN!"

"If someone notice Mango still behaving strange, choke him for some seconds until his brain turn off temporarily. This will surely stop whoever is messing with his mind. Of course, remember to let him go, I do not want permanent brain damage on that clone... One clone that has this issue even after getting newly decanted is enough. Yes Cryo, I am talking about you, can you now get on the lift? Sal, can you make Cryo get on the lift please?"

I decide to ignore Mega, before argument with him cause something like Sal, Massacrebot or even the lift itself going berserk. Especially considering any of the three might take out everyone in the lift with them.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 17, 2011 13:38

"Someone just yank him onto the lift already. Or we can just leave him here. That's fine with me too."

I sigh again.

"Oh, hello lift!"

I note whether this is the lift from before, or another lift. Well, another lift other than "another lift", that is. Perhaps it is just a lift.

In any case, I can't leave a lift waiting.

"Sorry guys, but I'm supposed to meet my... Oh hey, there you are, fellow lift passenger! I almost didn't notice you among all these other clones! Ah, looks like Sal's here too. I nearly mistook you for an idea bot, which would have been downright silly."

I proceed to climb into the lift, making sure to keep all limbs inside the doors. Since there isn't much room, I climb on top of Sal to make efficient use of the lift's unoccupied vertical space.

"Hmm... Does anyone know the weight limits for this lift?"

I look toward my fellow lift passenger, who is, of course, an expert on lifts.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O looks a little less happy at the prospect of having to wait for weekcycles to get registered. Until then, he'll just have to contain himself. But he can't wait! If only it were faster...

"Yes, well, central registry is staffed by non-mutants, so they don't really have much incentive to rush the paperwork..." John-O hesitates. He looks at Jam-O.

A lift

Mango-R remains unconscioius. Speed-Y says that they'll need to resort to practically killing him if he freaks out again. He reasons that that might be enough to force whoever the mutant is to release Mango-R's mind. He warns everyone to make sure they don't go too far... they don't want another defective.

Speaking of defectives, he tells Cryo-R to get on the lift, and the jackobot to force him to do so. The jackobot tries to move forward to comply.

(Speed-Y ignores "Mega-R", not wanting to cause an incident.)

But it turns out to not be necessary. Cryo-R seems to have reservations, but needs to rejoin his team. Indeed, he spots Lucas-R among the crowd, and enters the lift.

Of course, it's rather crowded in here, so he ends up climbing on top of the jackobot. "Citizen, I am not a conveyance!" it says, sternly.

But Cryo-R has already turned his attention to other matters, such as the weight limits of the lift. For some reason, he seems to want Lucas-R to answer. "How would I know?" is the reply. "For all I care, it's probably beyond my clearance."

Joris-O suggests that they could stop on a different level and scout around. He checks the panel, but discovers that there is no N button. Nor is there a P button. The lowest level seems to be O.

Malkom-R tries to squirm through everyone, still trying to get away from Massacrebot. He tries to get through the door, only for it to close as he gets there.

The lift descends again.

written by Speeder on Apr 17, 2011 17:25

"Cryo, please do not break Sal. I suspect he belongs to a High Clearance Citizen, and he won't be pleased with me if I return Sal broken. Also, the last time you broke a bot, you allowed commies to secure important objects that were important to their objective AND WHY NOONE IS INTERROGATING THE COMMIES YET FOR THE PASSWORD????"

written by Malkom on Apr 17, 2011 17:27

written by Malkom on Apr 17, 2011 18:17³⁸⁵

I cringe away from the bot as a weird voice comes from the speakers. Turning to four-six-one-six-six-five-nine-nine I ask, "Um, could I interrogate the commies? As long as I don't have to stand in front of that bot?"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 17, 2011 18:43

I decide to awaken the commie.

"You. Get up."

I jostle him a bit to try to wake him up... as long as he's still alive anyway.

written by Megagun on Apr 17, 2011 20:33

"How about the guy inside the bot interrogates the commies? Surely, he must have the most convincing weaponry to show the communists that we mean business!"

I grab my PDC and start recording what happens, just to make sure that any confession is recorded on tape.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 17, 2011 22:45

"Hmm... I'm beginning to think that you might not be a very good lift expert."

I decide to ask the lift instead...

"Say, lift, do you happen to know your maximum capacity rating, and whether your contents currently near or exceed that level?"

written by Jam on Apr 17, 2011 23:12

I look back at John-O. After thinking about the situation for a while, I respond...

³⁸⁴ Speeder: (ooc: I am inside the bot... you are not hearing my voice, but some voice coming from the bot speakers... so your post sound a bit schizo XD)

³⁸⁵ MALKOM: (OOC: oh.....)

(ooc: this is the new IC post)

"Well, I hope they hurry... The safety of my Troubleshooting team may depend on my ability to freely use my power to warn us of ambushes and hidden enemies... I mean, we wouldn't want commies to surprise us and detonate the nuclear bomb in the sector's reactor, which would cause the reactor to explode and would likely cause the destruction of the entire sector, and the death of all the clones in the sector... I think it's better for everyclone if my registration gets approved quickly..."

I very obviously look at the nearest camera, and speak in a slightly louder voice...

"But I'm sure if it were important enough, a high-clearance clone would take note of it and tell the central registry to rush the paperwork..."

written by Gligar on Apr 18, 2011 00:49³⁸⁶

A lift

Speed-Y cautions Cryo-R not to break the bot, as it most likely belongs to someone high up in the clearance chain. He adds that the last time he broke a bot, it allowed the communists to get their hands on an important item. Speaking of important things, why aren't the communists being interrogated?

Malkom-R volunteers to do so, as long as he doesn't have to stand in front of Massacrebot. Indeed, he cringes away from the bot as he says it, unsettled by the fact that he can hear what seems to be an ordinary voice coming from it. Strangely, though, he tells this to Foursixonesixfiveninenine-R... you know, the ex-Director. Though he likely did not know that. "Er... what are you telling me for?" said clone answers.

L4-O decides to do it. He grabs hold of the sleeping communist and forcefully wakes him up. "Wsf- wha? Hey, what are you doing, comrade? Where am I? What is this?"

A little too late, "Mega-R" suggests that Speed-Y do it, since Massacrebot is more intimidating. He gets out his PDC to record it...

...to find that it isn't there. It dawns on him that he dropped it, back when he visited O Sublevel.

Cryo-R finally realises that Lucas-R isn't an expert at lifts, and asks the lift instead. "I am sorry, citizen. I cannot give that information."

The lift continues to descend. It has returned to down-arrow territory.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O returns John-O's look. He thinks, and adds that the safety of his team might depend on his talents. He mentions the Tsar, and how it could destroy the sector...

He then looks aright at a camera. (Amusingly, he picks the wrong one.) He suggests that a high-clearance clone might notice and speed the paperwork through.

³⁸⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: Malkom, can you refer to players by their character names in your IC posts? Thanks. 😊)

John-O replies, "That does sound like a pressing reason, but it's not up to me. It's up to the high-clearance clones you mentioned. And I'm already on probation for exceeding my mandate once before..."

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 18, 2011 01:10

I search for a way out, but I can't find the exit. The sound of distress starts to worry me, as it seems to get closer and closer.

"What is this..." I mutter. Suddenly blasted by the force of an explosion, I look through what appears to be a vidscreen, and I see the complex collapsing.

written by Jam on Apr 18, 2011 02:08

"Hmm... Well, okay... Let's hope they notice..."

I intensely stare at some of the other cameras, hoping there might be a high clearance citizen (maybe even an ULTRAVIOLET) watching.

Then I look at John-O...

"I can use my PDC now, right?"

If it's okay, I take my PDC and try to call Speed-Y with it...

written by Speeder on Apr 18, 2011 03:25

If my PDC ring, I frown and tell Massacrebot to tell Friend Computer to tell Jam that we are going to O level and that I cannot pickup the PDC because I am inside the bot inside the elevator inside the elevator shaft inside the subsector inside the sector inside alpha complex inside the geodome inside earth inside Terra inside the Solar System inside the Via Lactea inside the universe.

While the PDC is not ringing (or after it rings and I do the above action), I speak.

"Mega-R, the bot right now is more busy trying to scare you, I do not think it wants to interrogate the commie, unless by using you as example of what may happen if he does not say what we want."

"And thanks Sal. Your owner must be really nice, or you have a really strict programming, to withstand Cryo. And, why your name is now Sal? Clearly it is something that you prefer instead of idea bot."

written by Malkom on Apr 18, 2011 04:06

Back in the lift, I turn to the communist. "You are in a lift, heading for O Sublevel. You are a prisoner. I suggest that you compose yourself and answer our questions if you do not want to meet a sticky end." I say this before L4-O can say anything. I then pull a small bag of algae chips out of my rear jumpsuit pocket, open it, and pop one into my mouth. "Yuch... has anyone got anything to eat? These aren't very filling, and I'm pretty hungry."

written by Megagun on Apr 18, 2011 11:37

"Wait, what is this about a bot wanting things instead of obeying orders? Hmm, I bet it does have a botched up Asimov circuit.. Who would've thought? Say, anyone here part of Tech Services? That bot over there needs some diagnostic tests."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 18, 2011 13:02

I shoot a glare at Malkom.

"Don't mind him, comrade. He likes to act like he's not on our side, even though he is... see how he doesn't like Algae chips. To express displeasure with them is treason, of course."

"There has been a change of plans and we must disarm the bomb immediately so it can be detonated in another location. Unfortunately, someone messed with the countdown and now we only have fifteen minutecycles or so left to go. Nobody with my team seems to know the code. Do you, comrade?"

written by 4616599 on Apr 18, 2011 14:31

"Ugh. Those algae chips really must be having an effect, comrade."

I stumble around, crashing into the jackobot and quite deliberately slumping to the ground.

A lift

Mango-R shifts uneasily on the floor. It looks like he's dreaming. And from the look of this, it can't be a very good dream he's having... it almost looks unnatural.

The lift continues to descend.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O hopes that the higher clearances notice his registration and make a note of his mission. He starts glaring at other cameras, but utterly fails to notice the one being used right now 😊

Again, he asks to use his PDC. "I guess we can allow it now," John-O replies. "Let me just put this form in here..." He crosses to a panel opposite the confession booth and opens it, revealing a slot, into which he inserts the form. He presses a button, and there is a brief noise.

Jam-O attempts to call Speed-Y, but only gets the message, "Citizen Speed-Y-D0F cannot be contacted due to low-level interference. Your call attempt has been logged. Have a nice daycycle."

A lift

Speed-Y tells "Mega-R" that right now, Massacrebot is concentrating on intimidation, mostly "Mega-R", it seems. It doesn't seem ready to interrogate communists.

To the jackobot, he adds thaty he is grateful that the jackobot seems to be able to withstand Cryo-R. He then asks why it seems to respond to the name Sal? "It is a name that Cryo-R here coined, seemingly from my designation. On the whole, it is a more palatable name than 'idea bot'. I have no wish to be associated with idea bots... they get some very strange... well, ideas, about their station in Alpha Complex."

Malkom-R attempts to start interrogating the communist. He says that the communist is a prisoner and he'd better answer their questions.

He reaches into a back pocket and pulls out... nothing. Not even a packet of algae chips.³⁸⁷ He seems to be hungry.

"Mega-R" ignores him. He wants to know why a bot would "want" things. He assumes that Massacrebot's asimov circuits are suspect, and wants them checked. Is anyone here with Tech Services?

The jackobot answers for Massacrebot. "Perhaps it is not a question of my fellow bot wanting anything. Perhaps it is simply not programmed for interrogation? I speak from experience, citizen: I am unable to perform a task for which I am not programmed. Perhaps the only issue here is Speed-Y's choice of words?"

L4-O glares at Malkom-R and tells the communist to ignore Malkom-R as he like to pretend that he's Computer-loyal (yet he doesn't like algae chips), and says that they need to deactivate the Tsar. Does he know the deactivation code?

"Er... I don't know the code, comrade," the communist replies.

Joris-O plays along, and pretends to be affected by bad algae chips, stumbling into the jackobot and falling on top of Mango-R.

Or maybe that was due to the lift stopping? Look, the doors are open. But the only visible thing out there is blackness...

written by Lightning4 on Apr 18, 2011 17:12

"Hm. We're here!"

I look back at the most likely confused commie.

"That's too bad... are you sure you don't know it? It is essential to the revolution that we get that code."

I turn my torch on and take it in my other hand for now, to help light the way ahead.

written by Megagun on Apr 18, 2011 17:33

I point at the blackness...

"Oh, that. That's just a black wall thingy. You need to lean against it and it'll vanish straight away. Go ahead, try it..."

I turn towards the jackobot.

"Well, Speed-Y controls that thing then, or something? Can't he control the bot to interrogate the commies? The bot so far has demonstrated that it can threaten citizens with superior logic and no ulterior motives whatsoever. I assume it can also threaten citizens without any logic and many ulterior motives... As in, the communists?"

I nervously look around and at the black wall.

³⁸⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: You've had enough algae-chips-from-nowhere for today. 😊)

"Yeah.. That sure is black..."

I suddenly turn around to face L4-O..

"Wait.. what? Did you just admit to being a communist? WHY IS THE SLIMY BOT NOT SHOOTING YOU RIGHT NOW, YOU COMMUNIST VATCRAPPER!!"

I nervously look around me. What are these guys, commies?

written by Speeder on Apr 18, 2011 17:48

I decide to drop Mega-R, you know, to point my arms, and their guns, where it matter.

"Actually, Massacrebot was just ensuring you was not going to get in the way of our mission, but seemly it sucked at that."

After a while pointing my guns at the torch (or not...) illuminated blackness, I comment.

"I wish this bot had headlights."

I ask the bot to activate, if available, night vision, infrared, light amplification, or whatever other methods that would allow me to see at least something better than `black`

I do not want to be eaten by a grue.

written by Malkom on Apr 18, 2011 22:46

I look nervously at the blackness. "Does anyone have anything I can use to defend myself?"³⁸⁸

written by Jam on Apr 18, 2011 22:55

I look at the message, and start to worry...

"Low-level interference? What could that mean..."

I attempt to call L4-O instead, and if that fails, I try calling Joris-O, John-R, Lucas-R, and Kristos-R, in that order...

If all of those fail, I start panicking.

"I can't contact my team! What if the commies attacked them? The commies might have some sort of PDC-signal jamming device with them! What if the bomb goes off! Oh no!"

written by Malkom on Apr 18, 2011 23:22

"Say, has anyone seen my ME card? I seem to have dropped it somewhere."

A lift

L4-O is the first to notice that the lift has stopped. He says to the communist that he should try to think about the code again, as it is important.

He grabs his torch and turns it on.

"Mega-R" claims that the blackness is actually a wall that goes away when you lean against it. But it doesn't look that way. L4-O's torch doesn't illuminate much, just a ledge outside the lift, but it definitely doesn't look like a wall.

Butr back to "Mega-R". He suggests that Speed-Y could simply control Massacrebot and interrogate the communists by proxy.

He looks outside. Yeah, that's dark alright. But then he remembers what L4-O just said, and whirls around to face him. Did he just admit to being a communist?! Why isn't he dead around now?!

(Did he just accuse an ORANGE guy of being a Communist? 😊)

He looks around nervously.

The communist says, "Hey wait... there are Computerists here?! That must mean... you're in league with them! And if you are, all of you might be!"

Speed-Y has Massacrebot drop "Mega-R". He states that Massacrebot was trying to make sure that "Mega-R" didn't interfere, but, it seems, was unsuccessful. He adds that he wishes the bot has lights. He tries to activate vision-related devices.

A harsh light emanates from a fitting on Massacrebot. It did have one after all.

If it weren't for all the clones in the way, it would illuminate the way better. But it shows the ledge a little clearer. There is enough space for the team to stand, and it looks like the ledge continues past the lift in one direction.

Malkom-R asks for something to defend himself with.

Mango-R continues dreaming.

"Wait," John-R says. "I think I have an ID on the mutant that's pushing dreams at Mango-R. And it looks like it's more a conversation..." He goes over and starts choking Mango-R. "Well, Speed-Y said to do this, Mango-R. I'm sorry about this..."

Cryo-R knows this place! Though he says there are no reactors down here...

Also, his ME Card has gone missing.

And lastly, Joris-O's PDC rings.

Mutant Registration Office

It seems that Jam-O started to get worried about the "low-level interference" and started calling other team members. Right now, he's waiting for Joris-O to pick up.

Did anyone hear the voice of The Computer in here just now? Nah, just my imagination...³⁹⁰

While still near the commie, I struggle around, then pick up the PDC and muffle it.

I then say audibly "Hello? Comrade! Aleksandr? Is Pitr there? Yes...looks like we have to cooperate with the Computerist troubleshooters for now. If what they say about the mutants is correct."

I then answer it for real and whisper "Hello? Jam-O? We're bringing the Tsar to O Sublevel to detonate it at the range.

L4-O has better luck leaving the lift.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O speaks with Joris-O, who mentions O Sublevel, and the Tsar. The Tsar has a countdown. And the prison.

John-O's looks on. "Did... did you just say a prison on O Sublevel?"

The forms slot suddenly grows a light and beeps.

A lift

Mango-R suddenly shoots awake and hits John-R squarely in the jaw. "Ow! Was that even necessary? I'm trying to help here! At least the mutant seems to have gone..."

Lucas-R finds his way through the crowded lift onto the ledge, where he joins L4-O. This gives Speed-Y a little more room to move Massacrebot. He's able to get outside as well.

"Mega-R" is confused at L4-O's fake communism. He thinks it's real and demands that L4-O be executed. Why are they co-operating with communists anyway? He raises his voice.

The communist looks at him and smirks. "What's up, troubleshooter? Can't handle a little pressure?"

³⁹⁵ CRYOBURNER: (It is rather convenient that no one else posted, since I missed posting altogether yesterday. 🙄)

Cryo-R tells his "stallion" to move forwards. "Citizen," the jackobot inquires, "would you mind explaining what a stallion is, and where the word comes from? It sounds awfully like something you should not know." It still moves out onto the ledge, but only to allow other clones to alight easier.

Joris-O continues speaking to Jam-O, exiting the lift as he does.

Ledge

Massacrebot's light does a better job at illuminating things than a PDC or a torch. With it, the ramp is revealed, which slopes downwards, and round the edge of the access junction, which it meets below.

The light also illuminates what appears to be a guardbot, surrounded by what look like bones, and some little piles of black powder.

L4-O sneaks a look at the Tsar's timer. It's showing 00:09:32. They need to go. Now.

He runs down the ramp, with Lucas-R in tow.

I run after L4-O.

"Hah. The Guardbot. I remember this guardbot. It asked me for a passphrase last time I got past it. You know, I happen to know said passphrase. It's part of the mission briefing of my original troubleshooter team. I might say it, but first I'll want you to admit that you're a Communist Mutant Traitor! If you don't admit it, I won't say the passphrase!"

Somehow mastering my fear, I follow Megagun and L4-O.

written by Speeder on Apr 21, 2011 00:12

I also walk toward the guardbot.

"What do you mean Mega? Code 7?"

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 21, 2011 00:18

"Oh really! It's probably still just laying about, dormant in my mind! As far as I'm concerned, whatever this is, it won't leave me alone even if you do kill me!" "Constantly terminating him isn't going to help."

I storm out of the lift quite angrily, shoving John-R out of the way as I go.

written by Gligar on Apr 21, 2011 01:03

Cryo-R claims that he actually meant "Sallion", which could be ridden "like a lion".

"I have heard enough," the jackobot says. "Clearly, you have knowledge of the Outside. This knowledge is Clearance BLUE. And given that brainscrubs do not seem to work on you..."

"...and will you please get off me!"

The jackobot rolls down the ramp, picking up speed as it does.

Malkom-R decides to stay in the lift. He doesn't think he'll be of much help and doesn't want to be blown up.

He's new at this, isn't he? 😊

"Mega-R" tells everyone that there's a a guardbot up ahead. He wants L4-O to confess that he's a commie. He runs down the ramp, almost running into a spybot as he does.

He's joined by Malkom-R, who has decided to put their mission ahead of his own well-being.

Speed-Y follows, He asks "Mega-R" what he means... is it Code 7?

Mango-R storms down the ramp, followed by John-R. He doesn't think the mutant has left him. Indeed, he thinks that termination won;t do it... not Mango-R, not even terminating "him" multiple times.

Joris-O hangs back, apparently wanting to keep his PDC signal.

No-one seems to notice that the ex-Director remains in the lift, along with Kristos-R.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

As the newcomers arrive by the guardbot, "Mega-R" is already explaining to L4-O that although he knows the password, he won't give it until L4-O confesses.

The guardbot replies, "You are accusing a citizen of higher security clearance. Make it good.

"The password has not been received. Say. The. Password. Or I will open fire."

written by Malkom on Apr 21, 2011 01:07

At the guardbot's threat, I scream loudly and run up the ramp towards the lift, as fast as I can, trying to avoid any fire from the guardbot.

written by Jam on Apr 21, 2011 01:10

My face pales as I hear we only have ten minutecycles until the bomb goes off...

"T-Ten minutecycles? I'll never make it down there in time... What should I do? Do I just stay here? Should I try to race down to O Sublevel? Hmm... This sound's like a decision for our Team Leader! Could you ask Speed-Y for me?"

I suddenly notice the glowing form slot, and look more closely at it, to see why it's glowing.

written by Malkom on Apr 21, 2011 01:18

Once the bot has been neutralized, either by password or by termination, I go over to look at the form slot as well.

written by Speeder on Apr 21, 2011 01:20

"Who caught the TWO commies that we need to disarm the bomb? Where are them?"

I turn in the direction of the guardbot.

"Can you wait a bit?"

written by Cryoburner on Apr 21, 2011 01:48

"Do they have Sals on the outside? I honestly don't know, and knowing would probably be treason, so it's probably best if you don't tell me."

I hang on tight, going for a ride...

"Weeeeeeee!"

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 21, 2011 01:56

I continue along, quite displeased and outraged at the action taken against myself.

"I'll file a complaint, so it's easier for you. You just get on with that bomb so that it doesn't destroy everything."
"Right, can you shut up now?"

Noticing the hold up, I go over to 'Mega-R'.

"Say the password now. You're supposed to be a troubleshooter, and it seems like you are more trouble than shooter, and there is plenty to be lost if that thing goes off."

I point a finger towards the Tsar.

written by Malkom on Apr 21, 2011 04:10

At the mention of the Tsar I go slightly berzerk. I suddenly rush at whatever is holding the Tsar, hoping to get it away from the group. If I get there, I give it as hard a shove as possible and/or do something very drastic to have it removed from the premises. (No use of secrets.)

written by Lightning4 on Apr 21, 2011 04:58

I turn to the guardbot.

The password is "WE ARE CARRYING A NUCLEAR BOMB AND THIS WHOLE SECTOR WILL BE LEVELLED IF WE STAY IN THIS ONE SPOT TOO LONG AND DO NOT GET TO THE ARMED FORCES RANGE."

I take a deep breath while twitching, and turn to Mega.

"I was pretending to be a communist of course. It was an... experimental method of dealing with them. Didn't work too well. I prefer the old method. You can ask the team leader for more information if he thinks you are cleared to hear it."

I brandish Turbo.

written by Megagun on Apr 21, 2011 10:59

I turn towards the Guardbot:

"This clone here, L4-O, had been heard conspiring with, supposedly, another communist. He said that he needed the code to disarm the Nuclear Weapons Device. He said that it was, and I quote, 'essential to the revolution' that he get that code. To me, that seems like a not-quite-but-quite-so confession that he is indeed a Communist!"

"What bothers me most, though, is that I am the only clone who even noticed that, and the others don't seem to care at all that L4-O is a Communist. That either means that everyone here with the exception of myself is a Communist, or I have to file some 'Troubleshooter Alertness Failure' forms again."

I turn to L4-O

"Don't worry. As part of my original mission assignment, I have been given a disarm code for the Nuclear Weapons Device. Should we not reach the range in time, we can attempt to disarm the Device using that code."

"Also, pretending to be a Communist? Come on. Doesn't that sound like an excuse only a commie can come up with? Sorry, but unless you show me a notice from Friend Computer stating that you can pretend to be a Communist, I don't believe you and will continue to attempt to get you terminated for treason. I trust you will respect my determination in doing my duties as a faithful Troubleshooter of Friend Computer's Alpha Complex."

"Also, put that thing away. Don't you realize you're standing in front of an unarmed clone.... unarmed in more than one way?"

written by 4616599 on Apr 21, 2011 12:21

I glance at the captured commie.

"I'm not sure. The lift journey itself takes a while. I'm not sure if our comrade friends know too much either. I'd suggest you stay there. Or maybe try to distance yourself from any potential collapse zone... "

written by Malkom on Apr 21, 2011 15:11

I grab Megagun by the shoulders and yell in his ear. "You daft person! You know the disarm code and yet you take the risk of being blown to pieces? Why don't you just try disarming it now, you fool?!"

Malkom-R loses his nerve again when the guardbot speaks. He runs back up the ramp part way, trying to avoid any possible slugfire.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O's face goes pale. Ten minutecycles isn't a lot of time... should he stay there, head down to meet the team, or what?

While he waits for an answer, he investigates the slot. It is indeed glowing. John-O, who is already by the slot, presses a button, causing another piece of paper to eject itself.

"Well, that was quick," John-O says, reading the paper. "It looks like your registration has been accepted. I'm to issue your armband and arrange your monitoring sessions - as well as arrange the mandatory medication for you." He heads for the door.³⁹⁶

Speed-Y asks the guardbot to wait a moment. "Citizen identified as Speed-Y-DOF, team leader of Team Epsilon, piloting Armourbot X-1: Acknowledged. Firing deferred."

The jackobot and Cryo-R arrive at the base of the ramp. The jackobot stops rather suddenly.³⁹⁷

Mango-R says something about filing a complaint about how he's been treated... then he says to shut up. Hmm.

He goes over to "Mega-R" and tells him to say the password now. He's causing enough trouble as it is.

"Accepted," the guardbot replies, on hearing the password. Seems that Mango-R got it.

Malkom-R rushes down the ramp again and tries to push Massacrebot away, with little success. Seems that he doesn't want to be anywhere near the Tsar when it goes off.

L4-O proceeds to tell the guardbot that they need to get to the Armed Forces Range ASAP, since they're holding a live nuke that will go off soon. The guardbot doesn't look impressed.

He continues by saying, to "Mega-R" and to anyone who wants to hear, that he was employing an experimental interrogation technique, one that didn't work too well. But he prefers the old-fashioned way, which is made clear by how he brandishes Turbo there.

"Mega-R" doesn't seem to hear him. Instead, he explains that he seems to be the only clone who noticed things like L4-O saying that the code was "essential to the Revolution". Does this make the whole team commies? Does he have to file a report on how no-one noticed?

³⁹⁶ GLIGAR: (OOC: Malkom, you're several levels below Jam-O, so you can't see the slot from where you are 😊)

³⁹⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: Perversity point bids for making Cryo-R fall off? 🤔)

He adds that he knows the code. He'll give it once he sees the relevant document saying that L4-O can pretend to be a communist. Until then, he will continue trying to get L4-O terminated. Also, he should put Turbo away.

Through this, Joris-O has been descending the ramp. He's explaining to Jam-O, over the PDC, that there may not be enough time to get down here. He should stay there, or try to get away.

Malkom-R approaches "Mega-R" and grabs him by the shoulders. He yells that he should try to disarm the Tsar NOW. Why is he waiting to be blown to bits?

written by Speeder on Apr 21, 2011 17:34

After a while, I say.

"Malkom, the seemingly anti-mutant person, has a good point."

I point my weapons at Mega.

"If you said the truth, you better disarm the bomb now, and if you did not, you better explain yourself. Our mission is make the bomb do not explode, if you do not want to prevent it from exploding, you are obviously a very problematic traitor..."

I turn to the others.

"And WHERE ARE THE DIRECTOR? I am seeing only ONE commie here! Where are the other?"

written by Megagun on Apr 21, 2011 17:55

"Why would I disarm the damned thing now if I still have a few minutes to attempt to get L4-O terminated for treason? Again, I won't defuse the Nuclear Weapons Device until L4-O can either prove that he's not a commie, or until he's been terminated for treason. If you lot aren't willing to help me out with this, I must assume you are all communists as well, which would mean that I really have to be careful about disarming this thing, as I might get overrun by you lot, resulting in the Communists once again having the Nuclear Weapons Device in their grasp.."

"...which would be very bad indeed. Can you imagine the danger to all of Alpha Complex should the commies have a Nuclear Weapons Device of this magnitude under their control? They could strike anywhere, at any time. They could control all of Alpha Complex purely through fear. They could bring Friend Computer down single-handedly, by exploiting the fear of citizens of Alpha Complex. Compared with that, I would say that an explosion at the bottom of JHT sector would be the best-case scenario."

"So, come on already. Quit with the sidestepping and get me the facts I demand already, or you won't ever remember this very discussion.... If you know what I mean..."

"Also, what is with these known communists? You clones know that someone around here is a communist? Care to explain who it is and why he hasn't been terminated for treason yet?"

written by Lightning4 on Apr 21, 2011 18:52

"Treason? You are the one telling me to act against Armed Forces Protocol Number 4 by telling me to put my weapon away in a dangerous area! An area you yourself stated to be dangerous! How do we know that you aren't the commie? Or in league with the rogue mutants?"

I look to the fellow members of the team.

"And the reason why they don't even raise an eyebrow to me pretending to act communist is because we all were pretending, while intending to infiltrate the reactor. Eventually we killed them all without them the wiser. Well not all of them. It is true we have a communist as a prisoner. We... aren't sure what to do with him yet. I thought he might know the code, or at least might be useful in some manner. Maybe we can still get praise from Friend Computer if we bring him to a confession booth or something. Or a re-education center... maybe both... or maybe he'll just die down here with the rest of us because YOU ARE HOLDING UP OUR PROGRESS!"

I note that my happiness levels are dipping below mandatory levels, and take a few deep breaths to calm myself.

"Oh hey wha... password accepted? LET'S MOVE!..."

I take a few steps before stopping and turning around again.

"Hey guardbot... you don't happen to know where the armed forces range is, do you? I know it's down here past the junction, I just need to be clear which way..."

written by Malkom on Apr 21, 2011 19:05

"Please! We must work together!" I turn to L4-O. "Please make that foolish Mega person give us the code!" I look slightly frenzied. "Please! It's a matter of life and death!"

written by Cryoburner on Apr 21, 2011 23:28

"Might I suggest that we break for lunch now? It's been at least an hourcycle since I had lunch with the computer. I think we'll all be able to think more clearly after having something to eat."

While waiting for a response, I closely examine Sal's sensor dome, noting any sensors and/or domes it may contain.

written by Malkom on Apr 22, 2011 00:36

I round on Cryoburner. "Lunch? We're about to get blasted to bits, and you talk about LUNCH?! Forget your bloody lunch! We have got to get this bomb defused! If we don't there's no darn point in eating lunch! Fool!"

written by Jam on Apr 22, 2011 00:40

I follow John-O, and continue talking to Joris-O over the PDC...

"Oh, it looks like my registration just got accepted! That was fast... Well, I've still got some things to do here, but if ten minutecycles pass by and the bomb hasn't gone off, I'll just assume you guys figured out how to disarm the bomb, and I'll start heading down there. Okay, good luck... Bye."

I terminate the call, and turn to John-O.

"Wow, that was fast! Awesome... So, I'm officially registered now, with a YELLOW wristband and everything? Cool!"

I suddenly get a serious expression.

"Oh, and remember the bomb I mentioned? The good news is it's no longer near the reactor... The bad news is it's going to explode in about 9 minutecycles, unless my troubleshooting team can find a way to disarm it... Just thought I'd let you know..."

Then I go back to being excited about being registered...

"So I can use my mutant power now? I wonder if I can sense my team's minds from all the way up here... They're at O Sublevel, so it might be a bit far... Maybe I should try contacting John-R—he's a registered Mental Blast mutant, it's funny he has the same name as you..."

written by Gligar on Apr 22, 2011 01:55

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

Speed-Y has to admit that Malkom-R has a point. Pointing Massacrebot's weapons at "Mega-R", he tells him to disarm the Tsar, and he'd better do it now. Since Team Epsilon's mission was to prevent the nuke from detonating, "Mega-R" had better have a good reason for not wanting to help them.

And where did the ex-Director get to?

"Mega-R" says that he still has a few minutecycles to get L4-O terminated. The Tsar's countdown continues until either L4-O can prove his innocence, or L4-O is terminated. He doesn't trust the rest of the team, either, so by letting it detonate, he can be certain that it doesn't fall into communist hands.

He continues for at least two minutecycles. During this, the Tsar's countdown ticks past 00:05:00.

It is clear that he does not respect the security clearance of the teams ORANGES and YELLOW.

Lucas-R steps in. "Citizen, I've seen the team do this before. Their idea is that it's sometimes better to gain the trust of an enemy and bring them down from the inside, rather than just go in with lasers blazing.

"Obviously, that's too subtle for a lot of clones."

He turns to the team. "Did I get that right?"

L4-O questions the logic of putting a weapon away in an area already stated to be dangerous, an action which violates Armed Forces Protocol No. 4. (One that's also used by Troubleshooters, at least in theory.) He turns the accusation around, and wonders if "Mega-R" is a communist, or in league with the mutants.

He turns to the rest of the team and states that they were all pulling the fake-Communist ruse. It worked in the reactor, after all, and they took them down, just like Lucas-R said.

As for their communist prisoner, he probably knows the code. Maybe our mutual friend would like to interrogate their prisoner, or have him re-educated.

Or maybe he'll die with the rest of them, since they're being held up.

00:04:00.

L4-O calms himself down, and realises what the guardbot said... "Accepted". That means they can go, right?

He heads a couple of steps past the guardbot, which doesn't react.

He turns back and asks it for directions. The guardbot indicates to the south.

Malkom-R runs up to L4-O and begs him to get the code from "Mega-R".

Cryo-R suggests that they have lunch. They'll be able to think better that way. Then, he tries to inspect the jackobot's sensor dome, but finds it featureless.

On hearing this, Malkom-R runs back. What is the point in eating lunch when you'll get blown to bits in the middle of it? Cryo-R is a fool for suggesting that.

Mutant Registration Office

John-O, with Jam-O in tow, heads back to the docbot's room. Jam-O finishes up his PDC conversation with Joris-O, and hangs up.

He's happy... no, HAPPY that his registration went through so quickly. This is so cool! On a more serious note, the nuke is about to go off. But he's registered! He gets to use his power, right? Right? Maybe he should contact John-R...

"Just one moment," John-O says. "You'll need to put on your armband first, and receive your medications pack."

"Speaking of that," the docbot says, "I have the pack right here."

written by Speeder on Apr 22, 2011 03:16

"Ok, I see you won't help."

I shoot Mega if I can, and regardless if I hit it or not, I start to move the fast as Massacrebot can toward the armed forces range.

"Massacrebot, probably we won't survive that, start uploading ALL your data to Friend Computer, so the scientists can retrieve it later. Start with manually recorded logs first, then send your logs about damage, and then the automatic logs and sensor data. And then, anything else remaining in your memory."

written by Cryoburner on Apr 22, 2011 04:03

"Say, that's a portable nuclear device, isn't it? We could probably use that for things, and stuff. You might not know this, but I happen to be an expert at nuclear reactors! A portable nuclear device is much like a nuclear reactor, in that they both are nuclear, and react. Maybe I should take a look at it..."

written by Megagun on Apr 22, 2011 12:05

"Alright, fine. You bunch of commies. Bah!"

Provided I'm still alive by this point, I move over to the Nuclear Weapons Device and enter the defusal code.

"You know, I still don't know how I can be sure that you're not all commies. I mean, if you're telling me that you're merely pretending to be commies to 'infiltrate' the communists, shouldn't you have some document from Friend Computer authorizing you to do this? Because as far as I know, you all could've been commies from the start, using this troubleshooter team talk to make me think you're not actually commies."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 22, 2011 13:53

I take a few steps outward and shine my torch around to see if I can see anything. Or anyone dangerous.

I grip Turbo, ready to shoot if something comes at us.

written by Jam on Apr 22, 2011 15:12

"Medications? Yay! Am I supposed to take them now?"

I take the medications pack, and inspect the medication inside. I start to wonder what they do, and can't resist asking John-O...

"Do you know what the medication does? I doubt it would make a mutant power stronger, that sounds dangerous... But... You don't think it would somehow weaken the powers, do you? I mean, that would kind of defeat the purpose of registering if I can't even use my powers to their fullest ability to serve the complex, right? And I wouldn't want to be at a disadvantage if I were attacked by an unregistered mutant that wasn't under the effect of the medication... Hmm..."

If a YELLOW armband happens to be offered to me, I take it and put it on...

On noticing that "Mega-R" isn't really going to help them, Speed-Y decides to just shoot him.

In doing so, he somehow activates full-auto mode, and shoots 10 slugs in rapid succession. Eight of them hit their target, cutting down "Mega-R" even as he lunges towards Massacrebot (or, more accurately, the Tsar). Perhaps he was going to enter the code after all.

But Speed-Y doesn't wonder about that. Instead, he spins the bot around dramatically. Something inside Massacrebot charges, and whoosh. Massacrebot takes off at a dead run, heading south.

Cryo-R is left calling after him that he wants to look at the nuclear device, being an "expert in reactors". The jackobot shakes its dome, dumping Cryo-R on the floor.

L4-O takes a few more steps, looking for signs of trouble.

"Buuuuurrrrrrrrrr..."

I'd say that's trouble. L4-O apparently thinks so too, as he readies Turbo once again.

Southern Passageway

Massacrebot flies along (well, you know what I mean). Its HUD states that it's traveling faster than its rated top speed of 35kph, probably nearer to 50kph. It's off the scale. (It probably needs a better scale.)

The passageway descends, passing other passages to the west and east. After a minutecycle or so, it comes to some lighting, and actual signage! They're an older style, like they haven't been updated to the new standards, but are still readable. They indicate that there is an Armed Forces range ahead.

Massacrebot continues on. There's now a warning sign on the HUD, indicting that the motors can't take the strain for too long. Probably a good thing, as the Tsar's timer is down to 00:01:30.

But it turns out that the bot is not alone in the passageway. Something, vaguely resembling a GREEN torso with stubby legs and no arms drops from a hole in the ceiling ahead. Its face seems permanently stuck in an expression that falls far below minimum mandatory happiness levels.

Moments later, it's joined by six more.

Mutant Registration Office

Jam-O takes the medications pack, and looks inside. He recognises a few of the medications: visomorpain of course, xanitrick (Wakey-Wakey) and pep pills, but there are others he doesn't know. He asks John-O about them, who says, "That pack should last you a weekcycle. Some of those are the usual medications you can get everywhere, but as a registered mutant you have to get them from a controlled supply. I mean, other supplies could be tainted, or otherwise tampered with. You take those as normal. The others... this ORANGE one is 'Freak Suppressor'... you take one wherever you see the 'no mutants' sign, and it stops you from using your power in those areas. Or your handler might require you to take them. The others... you'll learn about them when you meet your handler. Oh yes... and here's your armband. You'll need to make sure this is displayed at all times." He offers Jam-O the standard YELLOW armband, who takes it and puts it on.

As it moves, though, more... things drop down, and chase after it.

It soon arrives at the range. At least according to the sign. All Speed-Y can see is a closed door.

L4-O looks a bit shocked at the speed demonstrated by Massacrebot. He soon recovers, and backs up towards the team. That done, he starts firing Turbo. His first shot seems to have an effect, as he hears some snarling noise that kind of trails off, as if the thing that made the noise just died. Or whatever.

Malkom-R looks relieved that Massacrebot has left with the Tsar. He's still a bit shaken, though.

Mango-R chases after Massacrebot for some reason.

Mango-R runs into complete darkness.

He encounters... something... that seems to try to tear off his flesh. He pushes past it, and keeps going.

He seems to be talking to himself.

So that's what's up with him.

Jam-O looks at his armband. He wants to know when he'll meet his handler. John-O replies, "You should be receiving a call within the next couple of daycycles, telling you about your handler. You'll be booked in for your first meeting then."

Jam-O wonders if he can check up on his team using his mutation. "Well, you are registered, so... of course you can," John-O replies.

Jam-O puts his fingers up to his forehead, concentrating...

He soon finds his team. They're down on O Sublevel. Speed-Y seems to have moved to the south, and down, of the rest of the group. Mango-R is a bit behind him.

The he notices that the ex-Director is not with them. He's in a lift, going up to The Computer only knows where.

He shouts "Ah! Commies!"

This attracts the attention of John-O, who asks, "Where?"

Jam-O replies that a dangerous communist has escaped from the team, and that he needs to go and intercept him.

He heads out of the registration office, back to the lifts...

"That was too close, Mango-R. You ought to take better care." "Well, it's a bit difficult in the dark!"

Seeing as my truncheon seems more readily available, I use it to hit whatever continues to get in my way.

"Could you all please just move aside please? There's nothing troubling at all whatsoever, just in a little hurry. We have a non-lethal bomb that's going to go off in case you wanted to know."

I continue chasing after Massacrebot.

I run as fast as I can to the lifts, shouting all the way...

Once I get to the lifts, I try to call the lift that the Director is in, (or, if one button calls all the lifts, I wait until I sense the Director is about to pass by me, then press the call button).⁴⁰²

Of course, exploding the door would not work at all, since the whole point of the place is withstand the explosion...

So, I try to slow down a bit (depending on the distance to the door), crank the volume all the way up, and ask desperately to whoever controls the door, to open it because if the nuke explodes outside it will free the mutants.

If that do not work, I shoot at the door, and if that do not work, I slow down and crash (not too hard, destroying massacrebot and exploding the nuke in the process would turn all of it pointless) on the door.

If it still do not open, I put the nuke between the bot and the door, and look for other entrances.

If I manage to get inside... I get inside!

I hear all the banging and head forward.

"I'm with the team." I explain to the bot.

I then start madly pressing away with my ring-for-service bell. If any clone (or anything) comes out, I set my stunner to the highest setting and zap it as many times as possible to sedate it. dingdingding!ding

"So uh.. should we go after him?"

I look confused. I count in my head how much time may be left.

"I don't think we have the time to get to him before the Tsar goes up. I hope he makes it to the range in time..."

I turn around and look in the direction of the lift. That isn't there. Why isn't the lift there.

I try to fire more cone rifle shells as far down the passageway as I can. If need be I reposition myself for a clearer view.

"Ah! An excellent idea! We can use that bell to call for service! I fully expect our lunch to arrive shortly." : 3

"Hrm... I never did check that lift for my ME card once everyone cleared out. Everyone did clear out, didn't they?"

I head back up toward the lift, scanning the ground for my ME card as I do so.

Southern Passageway

Mango-R, who is still talking to himself, keeps going. It's dark, but he tries regardless.

He keeps bumping into unseen things in the dark, things that hurt. Things that moan and snarl as they claw at him. But he continues smashing at them with his truncheon, regardless of his injuries.

Massacrebot POV

Speed-Y tells the bot to decelerate. It manages to do so before it slams into the massive range door, but at a price: some of its leg motors seem to have burned out.

Now, the other problem: how to get into the range... Speed-Y tries simply asking for the door to open.

Hey, it worked!

The door slides open, slowly. Ponderously, even. That really is a big door.

But Speed-Y hasn't enough time. As soon as the door opens enough to allow passage, he has Massacrebot move inside. Well, limp inside.

Lift hall (D sublevel)

Jam-O reaches the lifts. There's one rising now, coming up from who knows where... hey, that's the one! He hits the call button.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

Joris-O steps forward, ringing his ring-for-service bell as he does. This attracts the attention of... it looks like more of the armless things that Speed-Y encountered. There's not enough light to tell for sure, though... all I can see are frowning faces.

As they approach, Joris-O reaches for one of his stunners, fiddling with it to set what he hopes is the highest setting.

The things seem to hiss at him as they approach. He fires at them. Several times.

Knocked backwards, the things seem to come to a standstill, and stop hissing.

L4-O wonders if they should follow Speed-Y (and Mango-R) south. But then he realises that there must be less than 60 secondcycles left, and decides that there isn't enough time.

He looks up at the lift.

Where the lift was.

That's troubling.

Oh well. He starts shooting Turbo again, firing four shells in rapid succession. That should help, he hopes.

As usual, Cryo-R ignores the shooting. He still wants lunch. He thinks Joris-O's bell will call it.

He then remembers that he never found his ME card, and heads back up to where the lift was to find it. Of course, he soon leaves what little light there is, meaning he has to feel the ground.

Behind him, he seems to hear something say "Nice everything you have there..."

I doubt anyone else did.

Southern Passageway

Those shells continue down the passageway. One hits the ceiling somewhere near Mango-R, showering him with debris. A second goes right through some of his assailants, causing them to explode into dust. A third hits the ground further down and stays there. The fourth carries on almost to the range, and hits one of the frowny things, felling it.

written by Malkom on Apr 23, 2011 17:24⁴⁰³

On seeing the frowny things, I yell and start running away as hard as I can. If I can get to the lift, I get in and order it to leave if it's there, or punch the call button if it isn't there.

written by Jam on Apr 23, 2011 17:25

As I wait for the lift to arrive, I think about how Speed-Y was separate from the rest of the team... The Tsar probably doesn't have more than a minute left... He must have the bomb! Oh no! He's sacrificing himself! If only we had the code! But only a high ranking commie would know—THAT'S IT! Director Andrei would know the code!

As soon as the lift arrives, I run inside and pin the ex-Director against the wall, with my laser pistol to his head...

"Tell me the code for the Tsar! I know you know it, it's useless to trying pretend you don't!"

If the Director doesn't tell me the code to disarm the Tsar, I yell louder...

"TELL ME THE CODE NOW OR I'LL FORCE MY WAY INTO YOUR MIND AND RIP IT FROM YOUR MEMORIES! I CAN ASSURE YOU, THAT WOULD BE VERY UNPLEASANT!"⁴⁰⁴

written by 4616599 on Apr 23, 2011 17:41

I head for one of the stunned things and jab it with the bell.

"Ahem. Citizenthing. What are you, what are you doing here, what is your clearance?"

written by Speeder on Apr 23, 2011 20:32

I start to limp toward the centre of the range, while taking a look at the nuke timer.

If there are enough time for that, I position myself in the centre of the range, move nukabot arms to the front of its door, and ask it to open, but do not leave it, that way I can choose if I will use my hands, or nukabot manipulators, in my final attempt to disarm the nuke.

"Oh, thank you!"

"Hmm... The lighting seems somehow inadequate here. Possibly too inadequate to adequately check for an ME card."

If I'm at the lift, or rather where a lift should be, I feel around for a call button, and press it if found. Either way, I decide it best to carefully head back down to the base of the ramp with the others, where lunch possibly awaits. I proceed to do so, keeping low and crawling, perhaps even creeping, in an effort to avoid any ledge or ramp-related incidents.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 23, 2011 20:44⁴⁰⁵

I decide to stop wasting ammunition on things that I cannot quite see, and focus more on trying to get rid of things that may happen to actually be in sight range. Which is danger range of course!

I make a momentary speech, interspersed with the sounds of combat.

"Well I guess I'll say this now. I hope we meet up again soon. And I hope we meet up again to begin with. You know, just in case the bomb does go off, and we all die horribly. At least we won't feel it. For very long anyway. Maybe we'll have promotions waiting for us on the other side for our sacrifice. Though Speed should be the one to get that, if it comes down to it... that would make him GREEN.. that's pretty high clearance. He would know tons of stuff we don't.."

I ramble a bit onward. At least, as long as I'm able to ramble.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 23, 2011 21:30

"Oh that's great... Someone's shooting at me from behind. At least it's solved some of the problems..."

I continue hitting my way through the crowd, if those things keep coming. I also cough a bit, due to the amount of dust and debris.

"Excuse me things, but you're not really helping at all!"

written by Malkom on Apr 24, 2011 00:52

I look around for anything that looks like sand.

If I find something, I take it and the frowny thing dust, take them to a flat surface (the floor would do), stir them together, and pack them into a cube about the size of my fist. I then stand the cube in the middle of the surface and try hitting it. If it collapses when I hit it I make it again and this time

⁴⁰⁵ LIGHTNING4: (OOC: Hmm. If there were sand, I could make some TNT... 😊)

Malkom-R runs off again... those frownyface things frighten him. What's up with him? It's not like those frowny things are going to blow him up... oh wait yes they will

He runs back up to the lift...

...and passes Cryo-R and the... thing he's speaking to...

...which promptly explodes.

POW

Malkom-R and Cryo-R are both thrown into the air by the blast, and end up falling back into the access junction proper.

Ow...

...I... think they're still alive...

Meanwhile, Joris-O is trying to speak to his frownything. But it doesn't seem to understand him. It simply looks at him in the gloom.

L4-O shortens his range, concentrating on things he can actually see. He hopes they'll meet again... well, assuming the Tsar goes off, or something... but at least it would be painless. He hopes. He wonders if they'll get rewarded. He continues this.

All the time, more... things... are approaching. L4-O keeps firing.

Malkom-R looks around (so he is alive), but isn't able to see anything resembling sand, just little piles of black powder...⁴⁰⁷

A lift

As the lift stops at D Sublevel, Jam-O dives in. Noticing the ex-Director, he pins him up against the wall, demanding the Tsar's disarm code. "So... you're against me. I doubt there's enough time to do anything about it by now, so I'll just tell you: you can't turn it off." He seems to be gloating.

But Jam-O persists. He's registered now, so that has to count for something, right? He demands the code again.

The ex-Director just says, "Do your worst."

So he does...

Armed Forces range

Massacrebot limps to the centre of the range. As it does, the great door rubles closed behind it.

⁴⁰⁶ MALKOM: (OOC: Time to see if this creeper dust behaves like Minecraft creeper dust. 😊)

⁴⁰⁷ GLIGAR: (OOC: This isn't Minecraft. For one, injuries actually hinder you here. 😊)

The bot opens. The Tsar remains held in its manipulator.

Speed-Y glances at the countdown. 45 secondcycles.

Southern Passageway

Mango-R keeps going. He's determined to get to the range himself.

There are still lots of things in the way. He has the distinct feeling that, sooner or later, one of them will be his downfall.

written by Speeder on Apr 24, 2011 02:24

Seeing I still have 45 secondcycles left, and knowing what to do, sorta, I do it.

I close my eyes, and empty my mind.

written by Malkom on Apr 24, 2011 02:44

I moan and get unsteadily to my feet, feeling myself all over. "Unngg... what happened?" I notice that Cryo is still unconscious, so I go over and shake him, trying to wake him up. If he doesn't wake up, I yell "WAKE UP!" in his ear. Whether or not that works, I try to keep as far away from the frowny things as I can. "How are we going to get out of this? I wish I had a way of contacting that computer. I suppose he might help, even though he does seem to be partial to mutants... ugh, what nasty creatures they are..."

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 24, 2011 02:52

While still going, I think of what I'm going to do to the Tsar.

"This Passageway is really, really long..."

"Maybe you ought to go back. Are you sure that you haven't missed a turn or door? Are you sure that Massacrebot even went this way?"

"Of course not, ???-?!"

If I get to the range, I enter it.

written by Malkom on Apr 24, 2011 03:11

I also search for anything that looks like it might turn up the lights. If I find something, I press/activate it, in hopes that it does indeed turn up the lights, allowing us to see what we are fighting. I also ask everyone for a weapon to defend myself against the frowny things. If I get one, I use it against any frowny thing that even thinks about getting close. I also pick up any weapon that's available, unclaimed and my clearance. If I get a extra weapon, I stow it in my jumpsuit, in one of the plentiful pockets.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 24, 2011 11:21

"Someone back there should call the lift in the off chance we actually do survive the nuclear explosion."

I continue firing... I check how many shells I have left. Hopefully enough....

"Speed should have gotten to the range by now. I don't think it's very far away."

I back up further until I'm nearly with the group.

written by Jam on Apr 24, 2011 12:35

"Liar! There's always a disarm code! You really think you can hide it from me? Well, I'll tell you now, you already failed..."

I take my laser pistol and smash it hard against the Director's head, intending to knock him out.

Then I quickly turn, and press the bottom button on the lift panel...

"Grr! I can't reach Speed-Y! He's just out of range! Lift, we need to go down as fast as possible! It's an emergency, there's a bomb about to go off! I don't care about safety limits! If the bomb goes off, we're all dead anyway..."

I spend the rest of my time focusing on sending a message to Speed-Y.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 24, 2011 14:00⁴⁰⁸

"Hmm... I seem to have experienced some explosion-related injuries. Oh look! I'm down the ramp. I wonder if lunch has arrived."

I look around for lunch, and whether it has arrived. If I'm not near the others (particularly L4-O) I make my way over there, checking the ground for any lunch as I go.

written by 4616599 on Apr 24, 2011 14:39

I note the frownythings blowing uo, and quickly back away from 'my' frownythings.

"Citizenthings, if you don't answer, or blow up, I'll have to blow you up."

I toss an unpinned grenade at them.

Meanwhile, I throw a laser pistol, with a fresh barrel, in Malkom's direction.

written by Malkom on Apr 24, 2011 16:25

I grab the pistol out of the air and fire it in the direction of a nearby forwnything. "What are these things?" I also say thanks to Joris-O.

Cloning station (somewhere)

Receiving a request from somewhere, several cloning tanks run through their startup sequences. In one, a clone begins to form.

Armed Forces range

Speed-Y thinks. He knows what to do here...

He concentrates... is that Jam-O's voice he can hear?

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

Detecting more threats approaching from the north, the guardbot opens fire.

Tries to open fire.

⁴⁰⁸ CRYOBURNER: wonders if "as fast as possible" is faster than free fall.

"Error," it intones. "Ammunition depleted."

How long has it been down here, for it to run out of ammo? Malkom-R tries to get up, and discovers that he's broken both his legs.

Regardless, he pulls himself over to Cryo-R and tries to wake him before looking for somewhere away from the frowny things. Given that they're... wait, where are they coming from? Don't tell me they're teleporting in?!

Malkom-R then tries to look for a light switch, or a weapon of some sort. He even asks for one.

L4-O asks for someone to call the lift... they'll probably need it. In answer, the jackobot makes its way up the ramp, avoiding the crater caused by the earlier explosion. and presses the call button. It keeps on pressing it. Hard. Meanwhile, L4-O keeps firing. Right now, he has more than thirty shells left.

Cryo-R seems to regain his senses after the explosion. But he still wants his extremely early lunch. Did you know that early lunches require a Deviation from Meal Arrangements (Lunch) form to be submitted ████ daycycles in advance? I bet you didn't.

I doubt Cryo-R knows. He's still looking for his lunch, over near L4-O, who is himself moving back towards the rest of the team. Needless to say, there is no lunch to be found anywhere near here.

Lucas-R notices, and yells over, "Will you stop that? There must be another six hourcycles to go before lunch yet!" He's also firing at... things. He seems interested in the black powder the things are dropping (at least when he sees them do it. Did I mention there's not much light?)

Joris-O backs away from his stunned... things, and tosses an unpinned grenade at them.

He doesn't wait to see what happens, though. Instead, he notices Malkom-R looking for a weapon and throws him a laser pistol. He does make sure it has a fresh barrel, though. An ORANGE one, if you're interested.

He then realises that his grenade didn't go off. He has a brief moment to look at the pin before it explodes.

BOOM

He collapses to the ground.

Malkom-R catches the laser pistol, but ends up almost dropping it.

He recovers and shoots. It's a pretty decent shot, causing a frownything to fall back.

Southern Passageway

Now suffering even more from the relentless attacks of his assailants, Mango-R desperately tries to continue. The range is nowhere in sight.

A lift

Jam-O tells the ex-Director to not bother trying to hide the code form him, since he's failed.

Using his laser pistol as a club, he smacks the ex-Director upside the head. He slumps to the floor.

He hits the O button and pleads with the lift to go as fast as it can. He really needs to contact Speed-Y...

"Well," the lift says, "you asked for it. Express to O Sublevel -- going down!"

Jam-O suddenly feels weightless as the lift descends.

A moment later he starts to drift towards the ceiling.

He tries to concentrate...

"Ahhhhh!"

The explosion startles the heck out of me and I react by diving away.

I peek up and check myself for wounds, then look over and see Joris.

"Vatcrap! Defender down... someone check on him!"

"This just doesn't end, does it..."

"No, of course not. And without any sort of device to light things up, you probably have missed a turn. It's too late to turn back, anyhow."

I fire my slugthrower to reduce the numbers, and at the same time, be able to see partially where I'm going.

A lift

Jam-O gets freaked out about floating. Still, he tries to concentrate on sending the message.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

Malkom-R moans loudly. He sounds like some of those other not-frowny things. But only for a moment. He regains his voice, and loudly declares that his legs are hurting.

He frantically keeps shooting, killing another frownything.

Perhaps he doesn't notice that the barrel's down to two shots left.

L4-O picks himself up after diving away from the explosion. He checks himself over... no, nothing new broken. But Joris-O is down... seemingly still alive, but injured.

Malkom-R fires again. One more kill. He loudly demands medical attention.

Cryo-R pulls himself over to Joris-O. He's unconscious, and bleeding heavily.

But of course, Cryo-R seems more interested in his precious precious PRECIOUS lunch. Six-plus hourcycles early. He decides to loot Joris-O's stuff, looking for food. He finds a can of B3, one of AlgaePLUS, some Visomorpain, and two packets each of Soylent RED and ORANGE.

But all this moving of Joris-O around has had some... negative implications. Namely, that Joris-O... dies.

The jackobot appears behind Cryo-R. "Citizen, I detect that you have just terminated a citizen beyond your clearance. This incident will be reported. You can count on it."

But he comes to his senses quickly. He realises that if the Tsar just detonated, that means that Speed-Y and Massacrebot have perished...

Malkom-R looks around for a communicator, and finds his PDC. Down here, it only has a one-bar signal, but that's enough. He yells for medical assistance.

Sure enough, a mechanical voice answers, "Please state your full name and medical emergency."

Southern Passageway

Mango-R has yet another conversation with himself, and decides he needs medication. First, one of the ORANGE syringes, then a painkiller.

Much better.

Time to keep going... perhaps...

A lift

Jam-O is shocked as Speed-Y's mind ceases existing even as he's still linked. Now, I'm not a Psionic mutant, but I understand that that has to be disorienting...

And add to that the sound... and the feel... of the Tsar detonating...

He gets pretty unhappy. As in, emergency-Gelgernine-time unhappy.

But it passes, as he realises that the sector is still intact. That must be a partial success, at the very least.

He tells the lift to slow down. "Er... I did not want to mention, but... that titanic explosion which just rocked the domescraper might conceivably have caused some minor damage to my deceleration systems, which, and this is a hypothetical case, might have caused them to, well... stop working. "For the record nobody saw that. I hope."

I take Turbo up again, ready to blast away some more of the mutants. I glance in the direction of the lift, hoping it arrives soon.

If I get the chance, I check the structural integrity of the room we're in. Not too closely, of course. Closely examining things is treasonous.

Instead, I try to determine whether the room we're in will be actively trying to kill us or not, not including the things inside of it already trying to do so.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 25, 2011 21:09

I quickly pack away the medkit, and start walking again. I try to use the Com1 unit to light up the way as I go.

"I think the best course of action would be to assess the damage of the Tsar."

"Indeed, I would think the same."

"Oh, and I suppose you'd think that Speed-Y made some sort of meaningless sacrifice."

"Of course. He ordered you to be killed if I was to interfere again. I couldn't possibly care less if that Tsar was one hundred times stronger than what it was. As far as what he's concerned with, you're probably not even on the team at this stage. In the best interests of you at this stage, you might do well to avoid them. The whole lot."

"Fine then. Have it your way. In fact, feel free to take this body while you're at it, ???-?."

"Oh no. I can't do that. You, Mango-R, have to find out for yourself. There's no easy option. If I were to take over, it would become just me in another body. Nothing more."

written by Jam on Apr 25, 2011 21:48

I facepalm...

"Oh no... That's not good..."

I proceed to hold on to the Director, and then reach out for any handrails within reach, and pull us both towards it, making sure the Director is underneath me the whole time...

I prepare for the impact, and hold tightly to the rail...

⁴¹⁰ Megagun: (OOC: I wonder what the code was that Jam-O extracted from the Director. Was it the 'ID10T' code? If so,

Also, I appear to have been given 2 extra PP, but I can't trace them down from where/when I got them. An error perhaps, Gligar?)

written by Cryoburner on Apr 25, 2011 22:04

"Don't worry! You're going to be alright! I won't let them eat you!"

I continue dragging Joris up the ramp toward L4-O. Since I noticed a towel among his belongings, I tie it around the parts of Joris that seem to be leaking RED fluid the most. I then continue administering chest compressions / sleep massage therapy.

Cloning station (somewhere)

Speed-Y awakens, still connected to machinery inside the cloning tank. He's worked shifts fixing cloning tanks before, but this is the first time he's experienced the tank from the inside, from the perspective of a fresh clone. It's kind of weird. And actually quite amazing.

There's a small problem: you can't breathe tank goo.

Over in another tank, Mega-R (or, perhaps, "Mega-R") looks ready to decant. Yes, there he goes. He's ejected onto the floor of the cloning station, breathing heavily. But he seems happy.

He looks around. There doesn't seem to be anywhere to collect his belongings.

He does see a door leading to the chemical showers, though.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

L4-O looks around. Nobody saw that outburst. Understand?

That said, he gets ready to fight while idly looking around the room. It looks like it doesn't want to collapse any time soon.

He glances up at the lift.

Cryo-R continues dragging the corpse of Joris-O around. He's reached L4-O.

He again tries to revive Joris-O, using Joris-O's towel as a makeshift bandage, before pressing on parts of the body again.

Southern Passageway

Mango-R has had enough. He tries to use his Com 1 as a light, but learns that they don't emit any,

He has another conversation with himself. He offers to let "himself" take over his body, but "he" declines.

A lift

As the screeching continues, Jam-O grabs the ex-Director, as well as a handrail. He makes sure that the ex-Director is beneath him.

Not long later, the lift stops abruptly, with a loud crash. Jam-O is thrown to the floor.

The door opens, revealing the same blackness as before.

written by Malkom on Apr 26, 2011 02:40

I talk into the PDC. "I'm Malkom, RED clearance. I'm in O Sublevel, outside a lift. I've been attacked by some weird green frowny things and both my legs are broken. By the way, I'm on Troubleshooting team..." I struggle to remember what team I'm on. If I do remember, I say what it was. If not I say, "I forget which team." At the end of that I say, "Could I please receive some medical assistance?"

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 26, 2011 02:41

I look at my Com 1 unit in disappointment, and try to broadcast a message, doing each channel in turn.

"Well, I've never seen such horrible designs in my lifecycle. How is anyone supposed to be able to see in the dark, especially during an emergency?"

I stop broadcasting, and continue on my way, shooting any of the frowning things if there are any that try to approach me.

"Here's something interesting. Some clone's happiness level dropped below the mandatory requirements just some moments ago."

"What of it, ???-? ?"

"You heard it, several minutecycles ago."

"Can you not confuse me more than you already have? Also, can you not talk when I'm amongst any other clones? You were the one that nearly got me killed by John-R."

"..."

written by Speeder on Apr 26, 2011 03:49

When I realize I cannot breathe tank goo, I also realize why clones are NOT supposed to wake up inside the goo...

I hold my breath, hoping that the process will finish soon...

In fact, considering that I woke up inside the tank, I hope the process really finish, without missing things, or extra things... decanting related mutations suck, since they do not carry to other clones... well, or not, sometimes decanting related mutations are so crap that it is really great they do not get spread into other clones.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 26, 2011 07:38

"Sal, this citizen needs defibrillation... er... shock therapy immediately! You don't want to be responsible for his untimely demise, do you?! We must work together on this!"

I continue chest compressions on Joris, unless Sal approaches and looks like he's going to supply some shock therapy, in which case I back away a bit. (though not off any ledges. 😊)

written by 4616599 on Apr 26, 2011 11:04

Wait...Joris-O is decanting in a tank, but I can still make his old clone moan? This could be Fun 😊

"Mmf! Sal? Ugh! Get him off!"

Meanwhile, possibly simultaneously

(Joris-O-DNK-2? surveys his surroundings groggily)

I start coming to. Oh, so this is how tank slime feels. Slimy.

written by Jam on Apr 26, 2011 12:24

I check if any of my bones are broken...

"Ow.... You okay, lift? That was quite some ride... It was even kinda FUN..."

I look down at the Director...

"Well, maybe not for him..."

If I don't seem to injured, I try to get up, slowly. Then, I peer into the darkness...

"Wow... It's dark out there..."

I start dragging the Director (or what remains of the Director) out of the lift...

written by Lightning4 on Apr 26, 2011 12:25

I check again to see if the lift is there. I thought I heard something.

"Is it here? Hello? Anyone up there?"

I start moving towards it. And away from Cryo.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

Malkom-R explains who, and where he is to the mechanical voice. He explains that he needs medical assistance, though he doesn't know the team's name, since he wasn't there when the team was named.

"Acknowledged," the voice replies. "A docbot will be dispatched to your location. Have a nice daycycle, citizen."

The voice hangs up.

Cryo-R continues to try and revive Joris-O's corpse. He asks the jackobot for help, claiming that the bot would be responsible for Joris-O's death if it did not.

Instead, the jackobot lunges at Cryo-R with a manipulator. "Citizen, this. Clone. Is. Dead. Do you want to be responsible for creating a zombie?"

But it's already too late. Joris-O's corpse begins speaking. He asks the jackobot to get Cryo-R off him.

"...This is bad," the jackobot says.

Hearing something from above, L4-O looks at the lift, It's finally arrived. Jam-O is walking out of it, dragging the ex-Director with him as he does. Behind him, the lift comments, "Well, that was refreshing. It might have gone a little better. But we now know one important thing: my deceleration systems do, in fact, work. Good to know, that."

L4-O continues up the ramp.

Meanwhile, the frownythings keep coming. "Vat it!" Lucas-R says. "I'm out of ammo!"

Those with Com 1s receive a message on channel 1: "Well, I've never seen such horrible designs in my lifecycle. How is anyone supposed to be able to see in the dark, especially during an emergency?"

Southern Passageway

The message is from Mango-R. He finishes transmitting and keeps on going. He keeps shooting until his slugthrower runs out of ammo, talking to himself as he does. He thinks that Other!Mango-R is actually a mutant somewhere.

The frownyfaces keep on coming.

Cloning station (Somewhere)

Speed-Y holds his breath. He is concerned that he woke up while still in the tank. It shouldn't happen, but, as he knows all too well, it does.

In most cases, though, it doesn't last long. As in this case. His body shakes as equipment disconnects itself from him. Shortly, the tank drains and opens, depositing him on the floor.

Joris-O is still in his tank, though. He's just woken up, and seems to be thinking about the tank goo. He's still connected to machinery.

written by Speeder on Apr 26, 2011 16:09

I notice Joris also awake inside the tank.

I stand, and then I comment.

"If I was still RED, I would certainly check these things, we are not supposed to wake up during cloning... But since I think I am YELLOW, I will be a example citizen and do the normal procedure."

I look around for the showers, forms and jumpsuits.

Then I stretch my arms.

"OH VATCRAP, DIEING SUCK!!!!"

I mean, first, I do not feel like myself, I feel like if I was my twin brother but I stole his body... Kinda bizarre... I wonder if all clones that spent too much time with their number 1 clone feel that way... If I do not had the same mind I would swear I am not me. Oh, I think that saying that stuff aloud maybe is treason... Also, I want my stuff! I miss my spear, nut thrower, and the awesome ancient slugthrower..."

I walk toward the showers.

"So, I died, my friend Massacrebot died, maybe permanently, and all my custom equipment died, and my brevets got vaporized..."

FRIEND COMPUTER, WHAT IS MY CLEARANCE?"

I mutter... "I hope I have enough clearance to know my own clearance..."

written by Megagun on Apr 26, 2011 16:13

I enter the chemical shower and have a good chemical shower.

written by Lightning4 on Apr 26, 2011 16:21

I smile seeing the lift. And Jam. I hear Lucas mention he's out of ammo.

"Okay folks, looks like we're done here, we can't fight these things forever, especially since we're running out of ammo. The lift is here! Let's get out of this little slice of paradise."

I get up next to the lift. From the ledge, I try to assist in picking off any more of the mutants that might slow our retreat.

"Good to see you again, Jam. I take it the mutation registration went well... what do you have?"

written by Malkom on Apr 26, 2011 17:39

I wait for the docbot. If any frownythings come near, I try to shoot at them. Once I run out of ammo, I try to hit them with my fists or anything nearby. If I find something to throw at them, I do throw it at them.

written by Cryoburner on Apr 26, 2011 18:47

"I knew you could do it Sal! We make a great team!"

I drag Joris into the lift.

"Alright everyone, let's move out!"

written by Cryoburner on Apr 26, 2011 19:10

...

Once inside the lift, I quickly check it for any visible damage, as well as the condition of any occupants who might still be there.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 26, 2011 20:31

"Well, I'll be darned. Out of ammo."

I switch to my other slugthrower, and try to run. I do my best to conserve the shots that I have.

"Perhaps you could get some lighting in here."

"As good as your suggestion sounds, I have no idea where we could go to do that."

"Good point."

written by Jam on Apr 26, 2011 22:55

I twitch a bit as I hear the three most horrifying words I can imagine... Out. Of. Ammo.

"Noooo! Lucas-R! Here, catch!"

I throw a fresh laser pistol barrel towards him...

Then I notice L4-O walking towards me, and talking to me... I smile, and respond.

"Hello L4-O! Guess what? I've got the Mind Sense mutation! Fully registered and everything! I even found the Director and got the disarm code from his memories! I was sending the code to Speed-Y when the Tsar exploded... We were just a few secondcycles too late..."

I look sad for a few secondcycles, then notice Cryo-R walking this way, dragging a half-dead clone behind him...

"Is that... Joris-O! Oh no! Is he still alive? ... He's mumbling, he is still alive! We need to help him! Maybe we can still save him..."

I take out a medkit, and give it to Cry—ah, I mean, L4-O... (I don't trust Cryo-R with syringes, or pills... 😊)

"Here, we can use this..."

written by 4616599 on Apr 27, 2011 00:17

"Excellent idea." I mumble, trying to flop away from Cryo's grasp.

Meanwhile..

I wait for the tank to finish. Apparently Speed is talking but I can't hear him. Once done, I get to my feet and look for the showers.

written by Gligar on Apr 27, 2011 00:58

Cloning station (somewhere)

Speed-Y looks at Joris-O, still in the tank, and awake. He wonders if his brevets still apply, what with them being incinerated in a nuclear blast and all. If not, he'd take a look. If so, he'd better act like a model citizen.

He looks around for showers and things. The showers are right through that door over there. And there looks to be a rack of jumpsuits behind that row of cloning tanks (no, not that row, the other row). He can't see any forms in the vicinity, though.

He decides that getting recloned will take some getting used to. He's not sure if he's even him any more, and what's more, he lost all his awesome stuff... That feeling will pass, though. It's just too bad about the stuff.

But speaking of stuff... brevets!

He asks our mutual friend, walking over to the showers as he does. Behind him, a bot rolls towards the tanks. It seems to be holding something.

The Computer responds, "According to my records, you are breveted to YELLOW Clearance, citizen."

So I guess the brevets still apply.

Mega-R (no word yet on the double quotes) gets to the showers first.

Chemical showers

On seeing that the showers are the typical enclosed booths, Mega-R enters one and starts the cycle.

Cloning station (somewhere)

Looks like Joris-O's tank is disconnecting from him. Ah... there it goes. He is deposited on the floor. He also looks for the showers. Again, he sees that they're over there.

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

L4-O is pleased that the lift and Jam-O are here. He's less than pleased that Lucas-R has run out of ammo.

He decides that they're done here, and heads up to the ledge. From there, it's difficult to even see any mutants or frownythings...

...except for the frownything that seems to have dropped from nowhere, landing behind them. And Jam-O.

Since Jam-O is here, he assumes that his registration went through. He asks for details.

Jam-O initially ignores him. He's more concerned about Lucas-R running out of ammo. He throws him a fresh barrel.

Lucas-R catches it. "Thanks!" He changes his barrel while running for the ramp.

Jam-O then turns to L4-O. He fills him in on his mutation, and that he managed to get the disarm code, and tell Speed-Y... just a little too late.

Then he notices Cryo-R and Joris-O. The latter has... rather a lot of injuries. He's also mumbling and trying to shamle away from Cryo-R.

He produces one of his medkits, which he briefly considers giving to Cryo-R, before changing his mind and offers it to L4-O instead.

Southern passageway

Mango-R is unaware of all this. He's switched to his other slugthrower.

But in the time he takes to argue with himself, a frownything crept up on him. SSSSSS

written by Jam on Apr 27, 2011 01:48

I suddenly stiffen, and my expression changes to a confused look... I look at Joris-O, then look somewhere off into the distance, then back at Joris-O...

"What the... Why is Joris-O... in two places at once? Did he start recloning already? He's not dead yet! Though, he's barely alive... Hang on, Joris-O... We'll get you fixed up, then we'll sort all this out..."

I look at Cryo-R, then take my laser pistol out and aim it at his head.

"I've got a strange feeling you caused this somehow... Stay away from Joris-O, don't make this worse than it already is... And, yes, that's an order. If you disobey, you'll be the next one that comes out of a cloning tank..."

written by Lightning4 on Apr 27, 2011 04:24

I look towards Jam.

"Let's get on the lift, we can sort this out th-AH BEHIND YOU!"

I try to shoot the mutant before it has the chance to explode on us.

"Where are these things coming from!"

written by Cryoburner on Apr 27, 2011 06:10

"This one apparently decided to explode himself. I performed a glorious rescue though, while the others provided cover fire. He was quite thoroughly injured when I reached him, but Sal and I brought him back from the brink of death through the wonders of sleep massage therapy! It was an excellent display of teamwork! Both him, and the food he carries are now safe!"

I enter the lift if I'm not already inside, and do what I mentioned before, that is checking the interior for visible damage and checking on the condition of any other clones that might still be inside.

written by Mingamango181 on Apr 27, 2011 07:13

"Hmm... Sounds like someone's making TeaSir down here."

"Stop deluding yourself. What sort of clone makes TeaSir down here!?"

I turn to face the sound. I attempt to shoot at it twice, then start running.

I wonder why you haven't just given up yet. You're lost. And you're slowly bleeding to death.

Because I want to conserve clones. I've already died enough times as it is. Once is already too much. And, the last thing I need is a confrontation with Speed-Y...

written by Megagun on Apr 27, 2011 11:02

I get out of the chemical shower (if done) and look around to see where I can get my stuff from.

written by Speeder on Apr 27, 2011 13:02

I proceed to take a shower, taking my time to do everything correctly, although usually the phrase "CPU MANDATE" scares me to death or something like that, it is important to follow them correctly on the showers, they are known to be... not pleasing, when you do it wrong.

written by Gligar on Apr 27, 2011 16:51

Underplex Access Junction 85-08

Jam-O stiffens, and looks confused. Why is Joris-O in two places at once? Did he reclone... before this clone died? But he's barely alive... or...

He whirls on Cryo-R, laser pistol suddenly in his hand. He thinks Cryo-R did this... somehow. He orders Cryo-R to stay away from the not-quite-(un?)-dead Joris-O. If he disobeys... well, Cryo-R will see the inside of a cloning tank again.

L4-O looks at Jam-O... and the frownything.

He tells Jam-O to get down and shoots!

Hmm... crowd control shell... those are normally designed to deal with a whole room of traitors from a slight distance. Needless to say, against one enemy, it's the same as twenty normal slugshots. The frownything doesn't stand a chance.
